Government reports on economic growth

GNP up; no danger of recession evident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Wednesday the U.S. economy topped the $5 trillion mark for the first time last quarter, powered by a strong 5.5 percent growth rate that caused some analysts to express concern about rising inflation.

Even discounting for a statistical bounceback from the 1988 drought, a major factor in the overall increase, the gross national product grew at a solid 3-percent annual rate during the January-March period, the Commerce Department reported.

J. Antonio Villamil, chief economist for the Commerce Department, said the economy's performance in the first quarter "appears to be consistent with moderate, sustainable growth for the balance of the year" and contains no threat of a recession.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said the growth pattern, in which the pace of consumer spending slowed while exports and business investment rose, was "a desirable one for the sustainability of the economic expansion."

Private analysts cautioned, however, that the report offered some troubling indications that inflation was accelerating.

A GNP index that measures prices for a fixed marketbasket of goods and services rose at an annual rate of 5 percent in the first quarter, up from 4.2 percent during the previous three months.

While half of the increase was linked to a pay raise for government employees, "certainly it suggests we're in a period of accelerating inflation," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

Robert Dederick, chief economist for Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, said the economy's strong growth in the first quarter was "too much of a good thing."

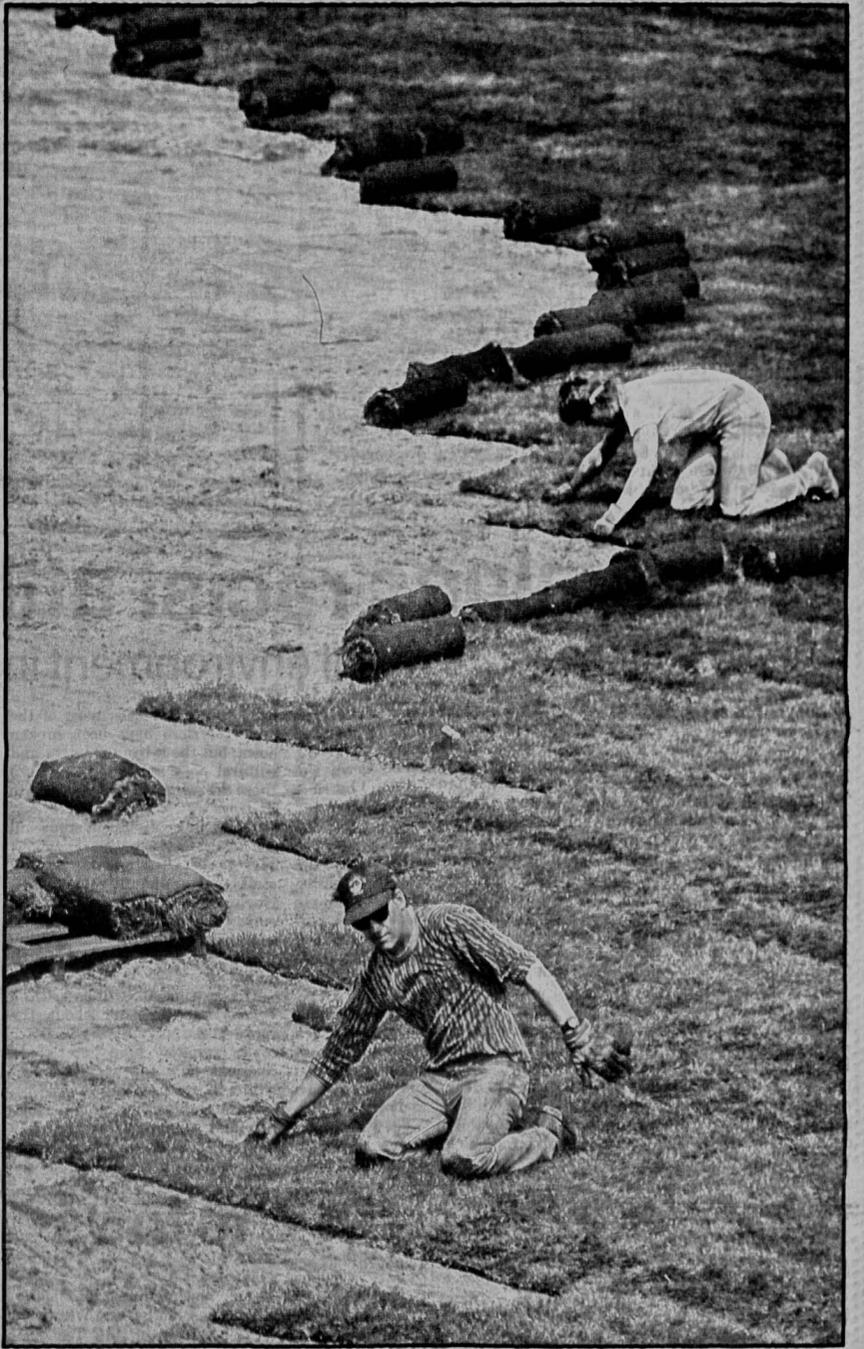

"The report suggested that the economy was still growing at a rate too fast for comfort, and the manifestation of this was in the inflation figure," Dederick said. "No matter what you look at, the inflation worry is there."

Villamil said that discounting the effects of the pay raise and recent food and energy price increases, the underlying inflation rate seems to be holding "at a stable, lower level of about 4 or 4 1/2 percent."

The nation's total output reached an annual rate of $5.117 trillion last quarter before adjusting for inflation, the first time it had exceeded $5 trillion. After adjusting for price increases, the GNP rose at an annual rate of $4.088 trillion last quarter, up $54.8 billion from the previous quarter.

The 5.5 percent annual rate of growth was the Abortion-rights activists anticipate court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion opponents led by the Bush administration urged the Supreme Court in a long-awaited courtroom showdown Wednesday to overturn its landmark 1973 ruling that women have a constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

Outside, police arrested 27 abortion-rights activists, among a noisy crowd of people demonstrating on both sides of one of the nation's most divisive issues. Those arrested were charged with crossing a police line.

In sharp contrast, the hourlong argument session took place in a packed but hushed courtroom.

"The United States asks this court to reconsider and overrule its decision in Roe v. Wade," said Harvard law professor Charles Fried, referring to the ruling that legalized abortion.

But Frank Susman, a St. Louis lawyer representing those who successfully challenged an abortion-limiting Missouri law in lower courts, argued, "There can be no ordered liberty for women without control over their ... childbearing."

Missouri Attorney General William Webster urged the court to restore the state's abortion regulations even if it does not reverse the broader 1973 decision, which was based on women's privacy rights.

Fried, a former Justice Department official called back to government duty for Wednesday's session, argued, "We are not asking the court to unravel the fabric of ... privacy rights which this court has woven. We are asking the court to pull this one string."

Susman responded, "It has always been my personal experience that when I pull a thread my sleeve falls off. There is no stopping. It is not a thread he is after."

Questioning by the justices was brisk but not as aggressive as it has been in many argument sessions of recent years.

Seven of the nine court members probed the positions of the three

Experts commend UI programs

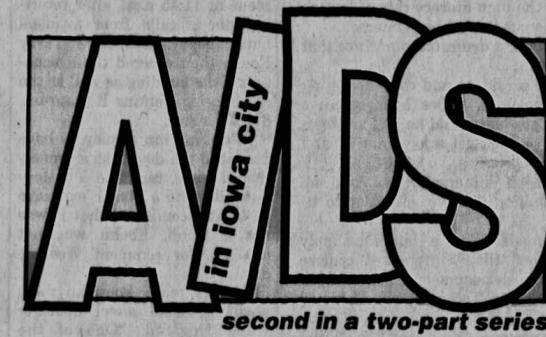

By Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

UI and community organizations see education, condoms, anonymous testing and support groups as the keys to coping with the AIDS problem in Iowa City.

AIDS education efforts on college campuses, which were poor in 1985, have improved in 1988 and 1989, said Richard Keeling, the president of the American Health Association and chairman of its AIDS task force.

UI education efforts have followed this trend.

In the 1986-87 academic year UI Student Health Service received one request for an educational AIDS program. The following year interest in AIDS peaked, and almost 50 AIDS-related programs were given. In 1988-89, student health conducted 29 programs, said Barbara Petroff, program associate for Student Health Service.

In 1987, the Student Health Service started offering optional

AIDS-related workshops to freshman rhetoric classes in an effort to educate students about AIDS and safe sex.

Foreign language instructors petition against space crunch

By Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Spring's warm weather finds UI teachers holding classes outside, but foreign language instructors and particularly Spanish and Portuguese TAs in Schaeffer Hall facing space shortages feel they shouldn't have to hit the grass of the Pentacrest in order to get a little elbow room.

Numbers fail to portray the situation, but for the sake of tabulation, Room 219 in Schaeffer Hall — one of the Spanish Department's Teaching Assistant offices — houses 28 TAs who share 18 desks. Provoked by the shortage of space in their offices, Spanish Department TAs formed a coalition to contest the stipulation that "Half-time employees are only entitled to half a desk."

The coalition's memorandum to William Cooper, liberal arts associate dean of research and development, states that limited space affects the quality of teaching in the classroom. TAs spend about 10 hours per week in the classroom, but this does not include preparation time, grading time or teacher-student conference time — and next year's addition of 20 TAs to the Department of Spanish and Portuguese will strain already bursting demands for office space, according to the memo.

"Often times, the UI administration overlooks the contribution that TAs make to the general education program," the memo said. "Our current situation is just one example of that form of neglect and disregard."

Disregard, the coalition said, comes in the form of poor planning on the part of the UI administration. The UI has increased its foreign language requirement for freshmen entering in the fall of 1990, but it hasn't yet taken the necessary steps to procure office space for the

Wage increase effects debated

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Economists and legislators in Iowa disagree about what effect proposed increases in the state and federal minimum wage will have on Iowans in the coming years.

This year, the Iowa Legislature passed a bill raising Iowa's minimum wage to $4.65 an hour over a three-year period.

In the federal arena, Congress is deliberating an increase in the federal minimum wage. But President George Bush recently declared his intentions to veto a minimum-wage proposal for more than $4.25 an hour. This prospect might leave Iowa with a minimum wage higher than the rest of the nation — a disadvantageous position — according to UI Professor of Economics George Neumann.

"An increased minimum wage sounds exactive," he said. "Because if you raise wages, everyone will be getting paid more. But what will really happen is more people will be out of jobs."

Neumann quoted the results of a 1981 study by the Federal Minimum Wage Study Commission, which showed that an increased minimum wage will result in a

UI examines racist attitudes

Survey will measure racial environment in community

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

Over the past year the UI has taken long strides in making cultural diversity and minority recruitment top administrative priorities — but are such ambitious projects doomed to fail because of racist attitudes that pervade the university community?

It's a touchy question and the subject of a newly initiated study by the UI Human Rights Committee.

Titled "Measuring the Racial Environment of the University of Iowa and Iowa City Community," the study emerged partly due to President Hunter Rawlings' outspoken interest in the area, as well as questions of the effectiveness of several minority-related programs on campus, such as Opportunity at Iowa.

While such programs have served their purpose in changing many of the institutional policies at the UI, they have not broken down the behavioral and attitudinal barriers so vital to achieving diversity, said Dennis Hoyle, a co-director of the project.

"It occurred to me that one of the most crucial factors to attaining and maintaining a culturally diverse environment are attitudinal barriers and interaction," Hoyle said. "Without interaction, you can have the numbers, but you can't have diversity."

Hoyle said the gap between policy changes and attitudes has widened because "racism is moving underground," making discrimination harder to detect and racist behavior more difficult to discern.

"Whatever you call it, there is still a huge amount of discrimination in the university community," he said. "Since the '60s, most of the racial barriers have been broken down; but the attitudinal ones and cultural ones are still there. And those are going to be the hardest to destroy."

The racial environment study will consist of four separate telephone surveys of UI students, faculty, staff and community members. Hoyle, a data coordinator and supervisor in the UI Social Science Institute, projects that roughly 1,200 people will respond to the survey.

The respondents will be asked a variety of questions about the racial atmosphere at the UI, with topics ranging from inter-group relations to a report card on UI efforts in the area.

Arthur Miller, director of the institute and a national leader in the field of public opinion research, will serve as a consultant for the project. Miller has recently completed similar work for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Dr. Classie Hoyle is co-director of the study and will handle the administrative end of the project.

Dennis Hoyle admits that changing people's attitudes about minorities is an arduous task at best, but it's one, he thinks, that can be done.

"Most racially-motivated behaviors stem from a position of ignorance, and that's one of the biggest pluses for increasing minority recruitment," he said, adding that the UI's atmosphere of learning and interaction could become an important factor in changing traditional prejudices.

The first phase of the study, surveying UI students, should be completed by the end of next week. The entire study will most likely be completed by the end of May.

New plant brings jobs to Iowa

WINTERSSET, Iowa (AP) — A high-school band played "Happy Days Are Here Again" as officials broke ground in a corn field Wednesday for a new plant that could provide up to 600 jobs within five years.

The $9.5 million project by EAC Technologies Inc. has been hailed because it is bringing jobs home to the United States from abroad.

Former executives of Motorola Corp. formed the company by purchasing that company's automotive and industrial electronics group. EAC Technologies stoves and vacuum cleaners.

Its customers include such giants as Maytag, General Electric, White Consolidated and Whirlpool, said Tom Phillips, the president of EAC Technologies.

Phillips told a crowd of about 150 people that Winterset was selected from among 35 cities in 10 states and that his initial preference was the South because of its climate and golf courses.

But he said he was swayed to Winterset because "nobody performed like this community."

In an interview later, he said his first image of Iowa had been "farming, flat and not high-tech." Since then, he said his view changed because of the research capabilities at Iowa State University, the technical assistance available from Des Moines Area Community College, the high literacy rate of Iowans and the work ethic demonstrated by Winterset.

"We need quality out of a dedicated workforce that stays with us," he said.

Jay Ramsey, a vice president and chief operating officer of EAC Technologies, a Des Moines native and ISU engineering graduate, said he had left Iowa in 1976 because he "couldn't get a job doing what I wanted to be doing."

He told the audience of Winterset school children, businessmen and families, "You've got a lot to be proud of."

John Reed, the president of a building-supply business and head of the Winterset Incentive Network — an economic development group that put in long hours to recruit EAC Technologies — beamed at the crowd.

"Wow. I'm so very proud of Winterset I could just pop," he said.

The Rev. John Shaull, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said in his invocation that it was a day for rejoicing.

And now that Winterset's economy has received a shot in the arm, he added a prayer for farmers who still have fears of a second straight year of drought, asking for "a gift of rain."

Fake bomb creates stir at Kings Inn

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

A small box-like device resembling a bomb was found at the Kings Inn Motel, 815 First Ave., Coralville, Wednesday morning. Police investigations later concluded that the contraption was a fake.

Coraville police arrived on the scene at 11:45 a.m., after receiving phone calls from a motel housekeeper. Detective Terry Koehn then ordered the evacuation of the building as well as the neighboring Perkins Restaurant, 819 First Ave.

Police and inn employees have described the device as a connection of wires, tape and a battery — similar to a plastic explosive — but all confirmed that it was not a bomb. Koehn was not available for comment Wednesday.

"I don't really know anything about it," said motel manager Budd Hoglend. "One of the housekeepers found it and thought it was ticking. I don't know if it was ticking or not. They got their special people here and decided it was not a bomb."

No one at this time knows what the device actually is or who is responsible for it.

Phillips told a crowd of about 150 people that Winterset was selected from among 35 cities in 10 states, and that his initial preference was the South because of its climate and golf courses. But he said he was swayed to Winterset because "nobody performed like this community."

said it is closing plants in Chungli, Taiwan, and in Seguin, Texas, to transfer operations to this community of 4,000 people in the rolling countryside 38 miles southwest of Des Moines.

It also will move its headquarters and research and development operations from Cary, Ill., to Winterset, where it will make microelectronic circuits used for the control panels on such appliances as microwave ovens, dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers,

Iowans take sides on abortion ruling

Issue may decide gubernatorial race

DES MOINES (AP) — Pro-choice forces on Wednesday declared "there is room for optimism" as the nation's highest court once again considered the abortion issue, while anti-abortion activists said they already have won a major part of the battle.

The pro-choice advocates waved signs, chanted slogans and listened to speeches on the state House steps on the day the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in Washington in a case viewed as a major challenge to the high court's 1973 decision legalizing abortions.

It's the second major demonstration they've held this month as part of an effort they've launched to heighten the issue's visibility.

"I'm here because I'm angry, I'm here because I'm scared," said Christine Manbeck, who said she obtained an illegal abortion in 1970. "I'm angry because we must speak of very private and personal decisions in public."

"We have already done our work, and that is why the U.S. Supreme Court voted to hear the Missouri case. We have achieved most of our goals to date, which has led this issue back to the United States Supreme Court for review." — Margaret Turk, head of Iowans for Life

In contrast, Margaret Turk, head of Iowans for Life, issued a statement saying the arguments before the Supreme Court showed that anti-abortion forces have achieved a political goal.

"We have already done our work, and that is why the U.S. Supreme Court voted to hear the Missouri case," Turk said. "We have achieved most of our goals to date, which has led this issue back to the United States Supreme Court for review."

The exchanges came as the high court heard oral arguments in a case in which the justices have been asked to overturn their landmark decision. It comes in the form of a challenge to a Missouri law restricting abortions.

Jill June, head of Planned Parenthood of Mid-Iowa, said she was "extremely encouraged" by questions key justices asked during the arguments.

"Looking at these questions in total, I do believe there is room for optimism today," said June.

The abortion issue is a top-drawer political question in Iowa, in part because the Democratic gubernatorial field is split over the issue.

In addition, if the court tampers with its earlier decision, it's virtually certain that there will be a pitched debate in the Legislature next year.

A series of lawmakers told the pro-choice rally Wednesday that the right of a woman to have an abortion won't be weakened.

"I'm a father of one by choice," said Rep. Ralph Rosenberg, D-Ames, whose wife gave birth earlier this month. "It's not up to the politicians, it's the woman's choice."

House Speaker Don Avenson, Lt. Gov. JoAnn Zimmerman and Des Moines banker John Chrystal attended the rally, and all three of those Democratic gubernatorial candidates spoke at a pro-choice rally earlier this month.

A fourth Democratic candidate, Attorney General Tom Miller, takes an anti-abortion position. Those tensions flared briefly to the surface Wednesday when the crowd began chanting "where's Tom Miller."

Turk said anti-abortion forces were disdaining public demonstrations.

"I have been repeatedly asked of late 'what are you and your pro-life supporters going to do to counter these pro-abortion rallies?' Turk said.

Sen. Tom Mann, D-Des Moines, told the rally that there's more at stake in the court case than simply a woman's right to have an abortion.

He said the court's earlier decision was rooted in a fundamental privacy rights, and a retreat from that stance was dangerous "not just for women, but for all of the citizens of this state."

Iowa Citizens kindle hopes for proposed Amtrak route

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Officials from Iowa and Illinois are supporting a proposed Amtrak route that would take passengers from Chicago to Omaha, with stops in the Quad Cities, Iowa City and Des Moines.

But Amtrak said those people may have gotten their hopes up for nothing.

"This issue has been percolating for years," said Patrick Jeffery, government and public affairs spokesperson at Amtrak corporate headquarters in Washington, D.C. "We're always keeping an eye out for improvements."

The Associated Press reported earlier this month that a state-established Illinois board representing Rock Island, Henry and Mercer counties was investigating the plan for the new route.

But city officials in Iowa City said they knew nothing of the Amtrak proposal.

"The reason Iowa City doesn't know anything is because the city hasn't been contacted by anyone yet," said Paul Victor, executive vice president of Iowa Interstate Railroad.

The Burlington Northern is currently the only passenger train that services Iowa. From Chicago, the train passes through Aurora and Galesburg in Illinois, and through Burlington and Mt. Pleasant in Iowa, en route to Omaha, Neb.

Jeffery said Amtrak is not actively looking to change the current route.

"It needs to make economic sense for (Amtrak) to make a move like that," he said.

If the plan were executed, Amtrak would likely have only one Iowa route, and it would be on the Iowa Interstate Railroad tracks, Victor said.

"The most support is for a route via Iowa Interstate," Victor said. "The proposed track would run through more densely populated areas in Iowa than the (Burlington Northern)."

The Iowa Interstate Railroad now carries freight and runs about 40 to 50 miles south of the Burlington Northern. It travels from Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa and the Quad Cities in Illinois, continuing through Iowa City, Grinnell, Newton and Des Moines in Iowa, en route to Council Bluffs.

The Iowa Interstate route is geographically appropriate for running a passenger train because it runs through densely populated areas, Victor said.

"The more people there are, the more who ride," he said.

Because Iowa Interstate now runs only freight trains, the tracks would allow a passenger train — which usually travels about 80 mph — to travel a maximum of only 60 mph.

UI senior Tracie Glasgow, from Joliet, Ill., said she would consider riding a train home from school.

House passes cleanup plan

DES MOINES (AP) — The House on Wednesday unanimously approved a compromise plan authorizing the state to borrow up to $100 million to clean thousands of leaky storage tanks buried around Iowa.

Critics worried that lawmakers were approving a massive spending package without having a clear handle on exactly how much eventually would be spent. Backers said the tanks are the environmental equivalent of a ticking time bomb buried beneath the state.

"The truth is, we don't have a very clear picture, in any event, of what this program costs," complained Rep. Lee Plasier, R-Sioux Center.

The House approved the complex package on a 96-0 vote, returning it to the Senate for expected easy approval. Gov. Terry Branstad's aides have been a key part of the lengthy bargaining over the measure, and he's expected to approve it.

The package was sparked by federal environmental officials who gave the state until later this year to come up with a plan for dealing with the tanks.

Estimates vary, but backers said there are up to 40,000 tanks containing gasoline, fertilizers and other chemicals buried around the state, and as many as a fourth of them are slowly leaking into groundwater supplies.

The package approved Wednesday slaps a $10 per-tank fee on owners, and a fee is assessed against "phantom gas," a rhetorical device used to get around a constitutional prohibition against using gasoline tax dollars for purposes other than highway projects.

In essence, lawmakers assess a fee equal to the amount of gasoline that evaporates or otherwise leaks out of wholesale storage.

In all, the measure will bring in $14 million in the first year it's in operation.

That money would be used to help pay tank owners to dig up and replace buried tanks. That cost can run to hundreds of thousands of dollars, because contaminated earth also must be removed and disposed of.

In addition, a separate portion of the measure would be used to set up an insurance fund to cover tank owners for future replacements.

Backers of the effort said the huge cost of replacing the tanks would hit hardest at gasoline station owners, particularly small "mom and pop" gas stations without access to the capital needed to replace tanks.

Early in the session this year, the leaking underground storage tank, or LUST, measure was one of the top environmental priorities for lawmakers.

Video supervisor gives games mixed review for violence, fun

By Dan Ryan
Special to The Daily Iowan

A few years ago, Blanca Bailey was concerned about her two children's preoccupation with video games. They would feed quarters into the noisy machines for a few minutes of video excitement, sometimes with her money.

But for the last three years, part of Bailey's take-home pay has come from supervising a room full of the same games that used to make her wary. She is the Union Recreation Room supervisor and now sees video games from a different perspective.

After receiving a master's degree in recreation education from the UI, Bailey became coordinator of the Arts, Craft and Recreation Center at the Union in 1983. When renovations brought the center and the Union Recreation Room together in 1986, Bailey was put in charge of both.

Her duties in the recreation room include managing student employees, keeping the room as dust-free as possible to protect the computers and dealing with the games distributor, Quad City Amusement.

But most importantly, she has to make sure things run smoothly. One constant headache comes from maintenance of the games, which "break down all the time." When this happens, Bailey said there is little the recreation room staff can do except refund lost quarters and wait for Quad City Amusement to repair the games.

"They're really good about coming over the next day," Bailey said.

Being around the games on a day-to-day basis has changed Bailey's opinion about them. She isn't as quick to criticize the games anymore but said she still has "two minds" about them.

"They serve some purpose," she said, allowing players to "clear their mind."

The games provide a unique getaway, Bailey said. "People seem to enter a world of their own when they play," she said. "I don't think it's a bad form of recreation."

But Bailey said some of the games, with depictions of graphic violence and female stereotypes, are displeasing to many women and probably contribute to the general lack of female interest in the games.

"Many games are directed at male-oriented stereotypes," she said, noting that the majority of the games tend to have combat, sports and adventure themes.

Bailey herself rarely tries her hand at any of the recreation room's games.

"I'm not very good at them at all," she said. She did play baseball for a short time on her family's Atari, but soon became frustrated because her son "would always beat me."

Research works.

The University of Iowa SUMMER SESSION 1989 COURSE CHANGES

Registration is now in progress. Students will register through the Registration Center, Room 17, Calvin Hall. New courses and closed courses are posted in this space. The closed list is in numerical order and indicates the department, course, and section numbers followed by a code (CD) indicating why the course is closed.

Code 1: the course or section is full
Code 2: the course or section has been cancelled
Code 3: the course or section is not available until the first day of classes
Code 4: the course or section is pending (undetermined)

These lists should be reviewed and adjustments made prior to entering the Registration Center. Registration information is printed in the Schedule of Courses.

Ted Fritschel of the Lutheran Campus Ministry talks on the conflict over Namibian independence in Africa during a human rights rally held on the Pentacrest Wednesday afternoon.

Human rights violations bring activists together

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

The sunshine and green grass of the Pentacrest, dotted with students relaxing between classes, contrasted with the topics addressed at a rally Wednesday afternoon.

Killing, famine and military oppression are human rights violations often committed in developing nations, speakers said at the rally for human rights.

Representatives from the Lutheran Campus Ministries, Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid and South African Azanian Student Association addressed the repressive situations within South Africa, Namibia and the Middle East.

About 100 students sitting on the Pentacrest lawn and Old Capitol steps listened as the four speakers discussed underdeveloped and war-torn nations.

"Human rights is a concern of everybody, not just those who live in conditions where there are violations of human rights," said Obed Norman, of the South African Azanian Student Association.

Apartheid in South Africa has stimulated a grassroots organization to fight the governmental segregation policy, Norman said.

"It is a system that cannot be reformed. It should be totally eradicated," he said.

Norman added that the number of atrocities and illegal activities carried on by the South African government continues and was recently displayed in Namibia.

Namibian borders have been riddled with conflict between South African-sponsored troops and guerrillas since the country gained independence April 1, following 74 years of South African rule.

At least 290 people died in the April clashes between the South-West African Peoples Organization and South African-supported troops. SWAPO has been fighting for Namibian independence since 1966.

The United Nations' peace-keeping forces lack the necessary manpower to contain the violence and supervise SWAPO's surrender, said Ted Fritschel, a Lutheran minister.

Fritschel and his wife were scheduled to travel to Namibia in 1977 to monitor elections, but war and the Reagan administration have delayed the process 10 years, Fritschel said.

"My whole point is that this whole process needs monitoring by us who live in a free country," he said.

The rally speakers said a worldwide coalition of oppression links South Africa, Israel and Namibia, and the free world should openly recognize and address this problem.

Massacres, famine and disease are often the results of military actions by repressive governments, said Mike Zmolek.

Zmolek, of the Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid, said 15 million people a year, or about 35,000 a day, die from famine. Numerous countries are guilty of perpetuating death through wars, massacres and imprisonments that victimize or force evacuation among the native population, he said.

Saed Abu Hijleh, of the General Union of Palestinian Students, said Israel has committed numerous atrocities that have gone unpunished.

"The United States-Israeli bloody coup does not end in the Middle East," Hijleh said. "It extends to South America and South Africa. Killing and oppression is the same, and we have to denounce it wherever it is."

decrease in jobs — especially for young people without college educations.

"The report said that on average, each 10 percent increase in the minimum wage results in a 1 percent decrease in jobs for teenagers between 16 and 19, and a one-half percent decrease in jobs for those between 19 and 21," Neumann said.

Iowa's $1.30-increase constitutes an increase of more than 30 percent over a three-year period. The schedule of increases is as follows: Jan. 1, 1990, the state minimum wage will increase from $3.35 an hour to $3.85 an hour. In 1991, it will increase to $4.25 an hour. In 1992, it will go up to $4.65.

Neumann predicted that the increase in minimum wage will only have a minor effect on the price of goods.

The major thing to watch will be what happens in Iowa if the federal minimum wage does not increase, he said.

Neumann said the state legislature was anticipating the federal increase, so they passed the state increase to avoid putting the state of Iowa at a disadvantage.

"The actions of the state legislature were conditioned on the belief that federal law would increase the minimum wage," Neumann said.

Instead, the state of Iowa may be stuck with a higher minimum wage than the rest of the nation — really putting it at a disadvantage, he added.

Potential employers will go elsewhere because of the higher cost of employing young people in the work force, he said.

"There is virtual unanimous agreement among economists that minimum-wage laws hurt young workers," he said.

It is not likely that the increased minimum wage will affect those with a college degree in Iowa, he said, but it will more than likely directly affect people who work to put themselves through college.

Tom Bullington, manager of Job Service of Iowa, 1810 Lower Muscatine Road, has a different opinion.

"I don't think (the increased minimum wage) is going to reduce the number of jobs in this area," Bullington said.

lawyers in front of them. Only Justices Thurgood Marshall, a strong supporter of abortion rights, and Harry Blackmun, author of the 1973 decision, remained silent.

The justices, who do not necessarily have to reconsider Roe v. Wade in resolving the Missouri dispute, gave little indication as to how broad their decision will be. They are expected to announce their ruling by July.

At one point, Justice Antonin Scalia — a potential "swing vote" along with Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony Kennedy — asked whether the court must consider the nature of a fetus.

"Can you derive (a fundamental right to abortion) without making a determination as to whether the fetus is human life or not?" Scalia asked.

"It is very hard to say... it must be a fundamental right unless you make a determination that the organism that is destroyed is not a human life," Scalia suggested.

increased number of teachers who will be hired to accommodate the increased number of foreign language students.

Shoggy Waryn, a French and Italian TA, said the outcome of the UI's improper planning was predictable, but the administration refused to accept the plain truth and turned its back on the space problem.

"Everybody knew it, but nobody wanted to do anything about it," he said. "It's difficult when you have to interview with students in an office where everyone's eating lunch. Privacy — that's the main problem."

The Spanish Department, as a measure against the existing overcrowding, circulated a petition to its undergraduates, and has thus far received 598 signatures from students who agree. "The severe overcrowding, noisiness and lack of privacy in the offices of the TAs ultimately affects us by affecting the performance of our TAs," the petition said. "The lack of privacy in the offices makes us very uncomfortable when trying to have conferences with our TAs over personal matters such as grades, and the noise level is so great that taking a makeup exam is a doubly stressful experience."

Waryn suggested creating more space for TAs by relocating departmental offices in the UI's forthcoming Center for Laser Science and Engineering because "There's a need for classes and not laser bullshit, and so we should move our offices over there," he said.

The Spanish Department's faculty, Waryn noted, has been especially helpful and supportive of the coalition's plight to acquire more room for its TAs, "Sending letters to the dean, the president, and even the Pope if necessary."

"It's a matter of awareness, and we're playing the game, but it's kind of stupid to have to give oral makeup exams in a room where you have to shout the questions at the student from across a desk," he said.

AIDS

doing what we can to educate all students about how important it is to reduce risk, because the virus is here, and the disease is preventable," said Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service.

Many instructors make the workshops mandatory, Petroff said.

The 50-minute workshops cover the biology, transmission and prevention of AIDS. They also stress communication between sexual partners, individual responsibility for sexual behavior and the effect of alcohol on sexual behavior, Petroff said.

A slide show demonstrates how to put on a condom.

Khowassah feels that the UI offers an excellent AIDS education program.

"Not that many (universities) have been successful in including (AIDS programs) in an academic unit," she said.

The thrust of student health's education efforts is to change student attitudes, especially towards condoms, Petroff said.

"For the longest time, attitudes were that condoms were sleazy or not held in high regard," Petroff said. "They were rather disrespectful. We need to change the image of the condom."

The installation of condom vending machines with accompanying brochures in the residence halls was one attempt to make condoms more acceptable.

Since the machines were installed in January, around 2,000 condoms have been sold, and around 3,000 pamphlets have been picked up, said Mary Carstens, the assistant director of student services.

"Condoms need to be a way of life in the '80s and '90s," said Ann Rhomberg, the HIV-antibody testing coordinator for the Free Medical Clinic, 120 N. Dubuque St.

"It's real important that they be (in the residence halls) so that people can go and get them in a private way," she said.

Rhomberg encourages people who come to the clinic for the HIV-antibody test to think of condoms in a positive way.

"Think of a way to eroticize condoms — make them more fun," Rhomberg said.

Student Health Service also talks individually to each student who is treated for a sexually transmitted disease about the importance of using condoms and the risks of contracting AIDS.

"We take every chance we get when we have a student who is willing to listen," Khowassah said.

Typically, however, students who are already sexually active do not change their sexual behavior to protect themselves from AIDS even if they are exposed to AIDS education, said Petroff.

"There is definitely a difference between knowledge and practice," she said.

Education efforts that focus on young children may influence sexual behavior before they become sexually active, said Pat Herring, co-chairman of the AIDS Coalition of Johnson County, said.

Efforts to meet the need for educational programs in the schools and the community are being met by the Johnson County Health Department, Iowa Department of Education and the AIDS Coalition of Johnson County.

In 1988, the JCHD started the first locally funded educational AIDS program in Iowa.

One goal of the JCHD's AIDS

Project is to incorporate AIDS education into existing curriculum dealing with sex education, health and science in grades four through 12 in Johnson County schools, said Ellen Van Laere, AIDS educator for the project.

"We have helped in training teachers so they'll be better equipped and more comfortable in the classroom setting talking about AIDS," Van Laere said.

Although AIDS education is a major part of preventing the spread of AIDS, it is not the whole solution, said Herring.

"I think that it's a start, but I don't really think (people) are going to walk away (from educational programs) and say, 'Oh my God, I'd better wear a condom,'" Herring said.

In addition to dealing with the preventative side of AIDS, university student health centers are beginning to recommend testing and social services as an alternative to students, according to the American College Health Association.

UI services are very aware of support services, Herring said.

UI Student Health Service provides confidential testing to students, but recommends that students consider anonymous testing at the Free Medical Clinic. The Johnson County Health Department also does anonymous testing, and the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women does anonymous testing for women.

Many people choose to be tested at "alternative test sites" such as the Free Medical Clinic, said Herring.

At an anonymous test site, the person gives a fake name. They are then assigned a four digit number to identify test results. This way the results of the test and the person's real name cannot be linked together, as opposed to confidential testing where, although the records are confidential, the person's real name and the test results are recorded together, said Rhomberg.

People requesting the HIV-antibody test are required by the state to undergo counseling about AIDS before and after the test. The counseling is highly individualized, Rhomberg said.

Issues such as what the HIV test means and ways of transmitting and preventing AIDS are discussed in the counseling session.

"You don't have to tell everything you've done sexually," Rhomberg said. "That's not the point. In a nutshell, we provide information to people so they can make the best decision they can."

But Rhomberg also thinks that giving people the facts rarely changes their behavior.

"Obviously, no discussion is complete," said Rhomberg. "How do you make changes in behavior that's taken 20-some years to form?"

Great attention is given to make the person feel comfortable with taking the test, Rhomberg said.

"People come here because they feel more comfortable than at university hospitals or other big facilities," she said.

People whose test results come back positive are referred to a physician and urged to seek counseling, but "it depends on the wants and needs of the individual," Herring said.

Individual counselors are available throughout Iowa City, Herring said.

Economy

highest since a 6.1 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1987.

It reflected an improvement in the trade deficit after two negative quarters, as exports rose 10.6 percent while imports advanced just 2.3 percent, and a strong 9.6 percent increase in business investment.

Some signs of a softening in economic growth were evident as well, in a 3.6 percent decline in housing construction and a slim 1.3 percent increase in consumer spending, the slowest growth in a year.

The drought-discounted figure for the overall economy — a growth rate of 3 percent — was down only slightly from the 3.5 percent pace at which the non-farm economy grew during the final three months of 1988. When the drought's effects are added in, the country's total output of goods and services grew at a 2.4 percent pace during the fourth quarter.

Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the spending patterns were of just the right mix to prolong the economic expansion without causing prices to surge.

While the overall GNP figure for the first quarter was a strong one, a series of government reports that chronicle monthly economic activity suggest that growth began to slow as the three-month period progressed.

Most analysts expect the economy to cool further as the year continues in response to a yearlong campaign by the Federal Reserve Board to restrain inflation by driving up interest rates and dampening demand.

less, Wise said. "There was nothing to indicate this would happen," Wise said. "The heart itself apparently was not involved in Miss Ball's sudden death."

In the 6½-hour surgery at Cedars-Sinai, doctors replaced her aorta and aortic valve. Although the replaced portion of Ball's aorta did not apparently fail, the entire artery was in poor condition when she was operated upon, said Dr. Robert Kass.

Kass, who performed the operation, said at the time the tearing in Ball's aorta "progressed all the way down into her abdomen."

Ball, with her fire-engine red hair and siren wail, was considered the queen of situation comedy and a pioneer of the sitcom format.

Clash follows Afghan parade

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soldiers accompanied by tanks, missiles and rockets paraded through Kabul on Wednesday to mark the 11th anniversary of the communist coup, but fears of guerrilla attacks kept celebrations to a minimum.

The parade was held a day early to avoid attacks. As it passed through central Eidgah Square, insurgents fired a rocket into the capital.

Later, as the parade was ending, Moslem guerrillas who had moved into an abandoned village about 15 miles from the capital fired on troops along the Salang Highway, which leads from the city to the Soviet border.

The two sides exchanged fire for nearly eight hours, with helicopter gunships attacking the village and soldiers firing artillery on the mud-and-stone compounds.

There were no reports of casualties.

The observance of the Saur (April) Revolution that installed a Marxist government was about one-fifth the size of last year's parade, military officials said.

"We did it for security reasons. We didn't want to take any chances," said one officer, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Hundreds of soldiers from the army, air force, special guard and commando units as well as military training schools paraded past the reviewing stand where President Najib and other political leaders stood.

The parade included dozens of freshly painted Soviet-made tanks, rocket launchers, howitzers, rockets and long-range Scud missiles.

Absent were diplomats from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Austria and Japan. Those countries shut down their missions in Kabul shortly before the Soviet pullout, citing concern about the military's ability to defend the capital.

The Moslem insurgency began soon after the April 1978 coup.

Soviet military forces entered Afghanistan in December 1979, replaced one Communist government with another and stayed to help fight the U.S.-

and Pakistani-backed guerrillas.

On May 15, 1988, the Red army began leaving Afghanistan under a U.N.-mediated accord. The Soviets completed their withdrawal Feb. 15.

Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil, returning from a visit to New York, said Wednesday he met with the chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., Armand Hammer, during his stay in the United States and that Hammer offered to act as a liaison between the U.S. and Afghan governments.

U.S.S.R. investigates tear gas use

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials have launched a criminal investigation into the use of tear gas by soldiers who rushed thousands of people demonstrating for independence in Soviet Georgia, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Wednesday.

But the spokesman, Vadim Perfiliev, denied that tear gas or any other chemical substance used by the soldiers killed anyone in the April 9 clash in the southern republic's capital of Tbilisi.

The denial contradicted reports by the Georgian minister of health, Irakli Managarishvili, that at least two of the 20 victims died from the gas and several others died from asphyxiation that may have been induced by the unidentified substance.

At least 1,100 people were injured in the melee, in which soldiers charged the rally with sharpened shovels.

Perfiliev told a news briefing that the investigation is being carried out by the chief military prosecutor. Due to the fact that tear gas was used on demonstrators in Tbilisi, "a criminal case has been opened," he said.

He said none of the victims had died from tear gas or other chemicals.

When autopsies were performed, the reasons for death were not the use of chemical gas or chemical substances, he said.

The announcement of the inquiry came one day after the United States denounced the use of poison gas on demonstrators and urged the Soviets to investigate fully and openly what happened on April 9.

Officials in Moscow have confirmed only that tear gas was used, but doctors treating injured protesters in Tbilisi said they were suffering from a paralysis of the central nervous system caused by an unidentified chemical substance.

One of the victims, Gilo Oniani, spoke with foreign correspondents in Tbilisi on Monday on a trip arranged by the Foreign Ministry.

Oniani, a 34-year-old mother and factory worker who was sprayed in the face with an aerosol, told reporters she was unable to sleep due to nervous agitation and unable to eat due to pain in her abdomen.

Manana Gamsakhurdia, wife of jailed protest organizer Zviad Gamsakhurdia, said in a telephone interview Wednesday night that two men came to Oniani's room late Monday and threatened her for speaking to reporters.

Perfiliev said a commission made up of top scientists from Moscow, Leningrad and other major cities had been formed and would join in the investigation of the clashes.

The experts will be able to make their conclusions, and the public and representatives of the mass media will be informed of them as soon as possible," Perfiliev said.

Perfiliev said the the inquiry would take some time. "There are contradictory versions around the events in Tbilisi," he said.

Gorbachev blames Soviet sloth for dearth of consumer goods

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail Gorbachev said in a speech released Wednesday that shortages of housing, food and consumer goods are growing despite his reforms, and he blamed runaway government spending and Soviets who "forgot how to work."

"The food problem is far from solved," Gorbachev said in one of his frankest admissions of the Soviet Union's problems. "The housing problem is acute. There is a dearth of consumer goods in the shops. The list of shortages is growing. The state's financial position is grave."

The Kremlin chief said citizens vented their anger about these problems in March 26 elections to a new parliament, in which at least three dozen senior Communist Party candidates were defeated.

In light of the voting, all levels of party and government must review their work "so that their activity meets the scale of the tasks being tackled by the country."

Gorbachev made the remarks Tuesday at a closed-door meeting of the Communist Party's policy-making Central Committee, but it was not released by the Tass news agency until Wednesday.

A main theme of the speech was that perestroika — his restructuring program launched four years ago — is the proper course, but he said it isn't being properly implemented, especially at the local level.

Gorbachev, however, also blamed the central leadership, of which he is a part.

"The activity of a series of party committees and Soviet organs in their attitudes, in style and work methods, in their understanding of the processes taking place, did not keep pace with life. This also relates to the party's Central Committee and to its Politburo," Gorbachev said.

He said individual workers also share the blame.

"Many forgot how to work. They got used to being paid often just for coming to work," Gorbachev said.

At the plenum that ended Tuesday, Gorbachev completed a purge of the party's Central Committee and installed his own men and women in a move expected to make it easier for him to wage his reform campaign.

Seventy-four of the committee's 301 full members retired, including former President Andrei Gromyko and many other holdovers from pre-Gorbachev days, and 24 people were promoted to full membership.

The committee also retired 24 of its non-voting members and 12 members of the Central Auditing Commission, which handles party finances.

Party ideology chief Vadim Medvedev told a news conference that all had volunteered to step down. He called it "a serious and important milestone in our course, perestroika, which shows that our party is realistically assessing its own work and is quite critical about its own activities."

The military lost a substantial voice in the Central Committee: at least nine senior officers were dropped and just one officer was promoted from candidate status to full membership.

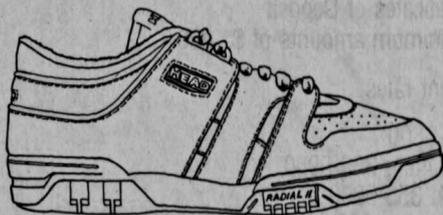

The changes left the Central Committee with 251 full members, party personnel chief Georgy Razumovsky told the news conference.

While the Politburo is the party and Soviet society's ruling body, it is the Central Committee in its several meetings a year that sets policy goals.

Among those promoted were Yevgeny Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and thought to be a close Gorbachev supporter, and the ambassador to West Germany, Yuli Kvitinsky, an arms control expert who negotiated on space weapons with U.S. officials in Geneva.

Gorbachev has complained that opposition to his social and economic reform program extends all the way to the Central Committee, which has included many officials who were seated long before he became party leader in March 1985.

Abortion review draws vocal crowd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Free speech took on new dimensions outside the Supreme Court building Wednesday as the explosive issue of abortion rights turned a normally placid scene into a "people's park."

The court's stately, marble edifice served as the backdrop for demonstrations that led to some arrests, a crush of reporters and television cameras recording both spontaneous and planned news conferences, and competing rallies that spilled over to the nearby U.S. Capitol grounds.

Inside the courtroom, lawyers discussed in measured tones the constitutional right to privacy and a Missouri law restricting abortions.

Outside the building, the arguments were less formal as more than 200 demonstrators and onlookers milled about.

"Not the church, not the state, women must decide our fate," chanted a group of abortion rights demonstrators. They later switched to: "One, two, three, four. Open up the clinic doors. Five, six, seven, eight. You can't make us procreate."

Far-outnumbered 'pro-life' forces responded in kind. A group unfurled a banner saying, "We pray for equal justice under the law for the babies."

A few feet away a cluster of black anti-abortion activists chanted, "Abortion is wrong. Slavery was wrong."

Some pro-choice protesters — including members of a group supporting the rights of AIDS victims — broke through police barricades on the building's front plaza. Twenty-seven were arrested on charges of unlawful entry for crossing police lines.

Their hands were bound behind them, and they were led off singly or in pairs. A few went limp and had to be dragged off.

Activists on both sides of the abortion fight circulated among reporters, offering their views on the potentially momentous legal battle taking place inside.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the Fund for the Feminist Majority, said, "I'm feeling very up." But she said her optimism is tempered by the current court makeup.

There are four new justices since the court legalized abortion nationwide in 1973, three of them appointed by former President Ronald Reagan.

"We're very concerned about the Reagan influence on the court," she said, adding that a ruling upholding the Missouri regulations, while not banning abortions, could "end access to abortions for the young and the poor."

A stream of speakers filed to a bank of microphones on the court plaza when the morning argument session ended.

James Bopp, general counsel to the National Right to Life Committee, said opponents of the Missouri law "are seeking to expand the right to abortion. The question is whether the court is ready to make that right more absolute."

Next in line was St. Louis lawyer Frank Susman, who had just completed his arguments opposing the Missouri regulations.

Richardson free after court rules 1968 trial was tainted

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — James Richardson tearfully thanked God, his attorneys and the governor Wednesday on his first full day of freedom after spending 21 years behind bars in the poisoning deaths of his seven children.

"Free at last, free at last. Thank God Almighty, I'm free at last," Richardson said, borrowing the phrases that were immortalized by civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

A judge ruled late Tuesday in Arcadia, the southwest Florida town where the children died, that the former orange picker's 1968 trial on a charge of murder was tainted by prosecutorial misconduct and perjured testimony.

Retired Circuit Judge Clifton Kelly, assigned to review the case by the state Supreme Court, released Richardson to the custody of Miami attorney Ellis Rubin.

Richardson, 53, started his day with a stroll on the beach near the state prison where he spent much of his confinement, which included a harrowing stay on death row.

"It's a pleasure to walk on the beach, see the sunlight, picking up sand and dirt, kicking my feet in the water. I've never felt that in 21 years," he said.

House quashes bill allotting $4.7 billion to domestic affairs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, in the first big battle over the budget in Congress this year, embarrassed its Democratic leaders on Wednesday by crushing a major amendment and forcing them to pull a $4.7 billion domestic spending bill off the floor.

Leaders wanted to pay for the domestic spending in the bill by slashing defense and other programs. But by a 252-172 vote, with minority Republicans being joined by enough Democrats seeking to protect their favorite programs, the House rejected a Democratic amendment that would have made $1.4 billion in cuts spread over most government programs.

The bill's backers then took the entire spending measure off the House floor. House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he believed the House Appropriations Committee would "perform certain corrective surgery" on the bill before the House considers it again.

House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who offered the spending-cut amendment, said the vote was a sign of the divisiveness of budget issues and not a signal that the Democratic leadership was weakened by the controversy surrounding Wright and his personal finances.

"I don't think it reflects on leadership problems," Foley said. "This is not a vote of confidence issue."

One of the 92 Democrats who voted against their leaders' plan was Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee. Roe said he opposed the across-the-board cuts because they would have sliced too deeply into the programs he oversees.

"From our point of view, we were battling the loss of about $100 million from science and space," he said.

Foley's proposal would have produced $1.4 billion in savings by shaving .57 percent off most government programs. The provision would have produced cuts this year of $1 billion in defense, $353 million in domestic programs and $43 million in foreign aid.

White House budget director Richard Darman had sent lawmakers a policy statement in which he said he would urge President George Bush to veto the "fiscally irresponsible" measure.

Panel favors Soviet Jew refugee bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel on Wednesday endorsed legislation that would ease the way for Soviet Jews and Pentecostals seeking refugee status in the United States.

The legislation seeks to undo a change in Justice Department policy last summer that substituted case-by-case review for the previous practice of allowing into the United States all Soviet Jews and evangelical Christians on the grounds they were suffering from religious persecution.

The bill's author, Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-Conn., said he hoped the Bush administration would act on its own to undo the action of then-Attorney General Edwin Meese.

But if Attorney General Dick Thornburgh doesn't act, Morrison said, "We'll push the bill through."

The legislation states that both Jews and Pentecostals have been persecuted by the Soviet government and should be granted refugee status automatically.

The bill, which would be valid for only 17 months to give time for a longer-term solution to be devised, would also grant automatic refugee status to residents of Laos, Vietnam and Cambodia wishing to enter the United States.

Meese restricted the refugee flow to deal with a growing flood of Soviet Jews, Armenians and Pentecostals taking advantage of the Kremlin's liberalized emigration policies.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

Symptom not cause

In response to the continuing upswing in reported racial incidents on college campuses, several institutions have taken forceful action to inhibit the spread of this disease. Unfortunately, these efforts have been focused at limiting bigoted expression — a symptom, not a cause, of racial discord.

Stanford University, Emory University in Atlanta and Michigan University have passed anti-harassment policies designed to prohibit the expression of hatred for persons on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, nationality or sexual orientation. Several other institutions are considering taking similar steps.

Canetta Ivy, a Stanford student leader, has said that our society doesn't "put as many restrictions on freedom of speech as we should. . . . We at Stanford are trying to set a standard different from what society at large is trying to accomplish."

As a collegiate leader, Ivy's words reveal the irony in this well-intentioned but misguided campaign, since our nation's campuses have traditionally served as forums for the unbridled discussion of complex issues.

Ultimately, unlimited expression is our greatest potential weapon against deep-rooted societal ills. Like any right, freedom of speech is a great responsibility and at times, a seeming burden, but we must resist the impulse to muzzle it.

Dr. U.S. to the rescue

There's a strange and dangerous sickness growing overseas. It started in the Soviet Union, spread to the Eastern Bloc, and is now threatening to infect Western Europe. But fear not, the U.S. government is determined to deliver the cure, even if it has to jam it down people's throats.

The disease? Terminal peace. The symptoms? Delusions that war is no longer inevitable, and an irrational desire to disarm. It all started with that birthmark-headed nut Mikhail Gorbachev, pledging to unilaterally decrease the Soviet military presence in Eastern Europe.

Now that the Soviets are beginning to come through on their promise by shipping tanks back to the Soviet Union, the disease seems to be spreading. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, in a fit of delusion, is now considering requesting negotiations aimed at decreasing NATO's stockpile of short-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

But the Bush administration is in the midst of an all out offensive to contain Kohl's virus by arm-twisting other European leaders into condemning the negotiation proposal. If successful, the administration may be able slow this disease and maintain the safety of our weaponry.

This is all reminiscent of an old M.A.S.H. episode, with the United States playing Colonel Flagg and Kohl and Gorbachev looking like Hawkeye and B.J. Complaining about a battle fatigue victim, Flagg says, "Well what if every man laid down his gun and stopped fighting? Then what would we have?" "Peace?" says B.J. Not if the United States has anything to say about it.

Petty personal politics

In yet another exercise in self-aggrandizement, self-promotion, and selfish pursuit of truth, justice and the American way, UI student government focused its attention upon personal, partisan politics all year long.

This year, the string of charges/counter-charges involving the Collegiate Associations Council and the Student Senate ran for miles. And something — no, someone — has been lost along the way — the students.

The current controversy over the election of Dave Elick and Vernon McKinley to top CAC offices is just one more petty problem involving only a handful of students on this campus. Since the election was certified by the Elections Board and held according to the CAC constitution, install 'em in their seats and get on to business. The petty bickering between friends of McKinley and Elick and friends of outgoing CAC president Gordon Fisher and vice-president Benita Dilley is wholly counterproductive.

Theoretically, both organizations are duty-bound to represent UI students in various political, academic and social forums. This is the mandate given the Student Senate by over 4,000 students in the last election.

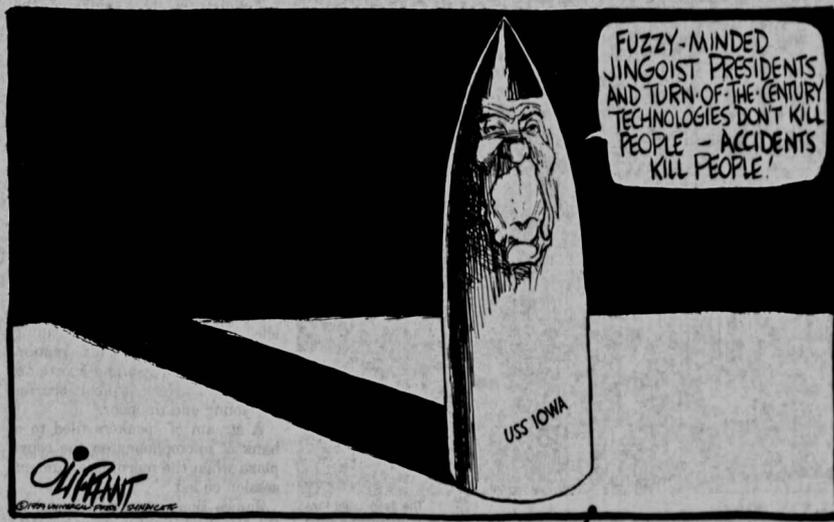

However, as so often witnessed over the last year, the personal, partisan bickering between government officers and the two government bodies has consumed the majority of their time. They get little, if anything, done at their meetings except for setting the agenda for the personal, partisan bickering to be done the next time they assemble.

Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona says he's "had enough of this whole thing," and, while he's willing to work with the incoming officers of the CAC, he "has no intention to work with the CAC as it now stands," reaffirming the status quo for the future.

Rojas-Cardona also said that the current controversy is "embarrassing for student government." No, Pepe, the controversy isn't embarrassing — it's normal. What's embarrassing is student government itself.

Psychology of a mass murder

Have you ever wondered what it's like to be an escaped murderer? Have you ever asked yourself in an idle moment what it would be like if you had gone on a rampage and killed five or six or seven people and then had to run from the police?

As our last installment in the series "Crimes of the Heart," I thought we could explore your typical cold-blooded murderer and get a sense of what it's like to have the police in six states conducting an all out manhunt for you.

Let's just imagine for a moment that your name is Ramon Salcido and you've just killed seven people.

"Wait a minute! That's not me! I couldn't kill seven people!" Already I can see folks bucking up and drawing back and saying they could never do such a thing. Well, of course you could. So I guess we should start with a little stretching exercise for the imagination.

Don't feel bad. Most people in predominantly white, middle-class communities who have never experienced war or profound desperation will say that they could never kill another human being. It's about like saying you could never fly a jet plane prior to actually taking the lessons. Believe me, you could do it. Ramon Salcido didn't have any practice and he pulled it off the first time he tried.

Let's get ourselves in the mood for a little carnage and lay down the events necessary for a rampage.

The first requirement is to feel your back up against the wall. You can achieve this in a number of ways. In Salcido's case, his method is fairly clear. We can safely assume his stress took three forms: cultural, economic and romantic. Cultural in that he was born and raised Mexican yet he was living in northern California. This was probably a secondary stress compared to his economic situation. As an illegal alien, he was subject at any moment day or night to being yanked up out of his job and sent back to Mexico. He was a forklift operator at a winery. He did not make large sums of money and could not afford to lose his job.

Mike Lankford

Let's say further that he was overdrawn. This would not be unusual. We know he was married (used to be married) and had three children (past tense). Given the daily struggle to get by, let's throw a little salt into the wound and harness him with a major financial setback. In his case, this setback came in the form of a court judgement to pay child support of $511 a month as well as $6,000 in back payments for a prior marriage. Let's also get the romantic element in here and say that he discovers his current wife having an affair with another man.

Have we got the stress level about right? Okay. Now let's work on getting things moved past the edge of ordinary restraint and into the realm of action. In this situation you know that you can't make those $511 a month payments and everything you own doesn't add up to $6,000. You've got three kids and your wife doesn't love you. What next? Let's add fuel to the fire.

Like a lot of people in this situation, he went out and got drunk. Only in his case we're not talking about a little extra Chablis after dinner. We're talking about getting blitzed in accordance with the caliber of his troubles. Unsolvable problems? Then get absolutely pulverized, electrified and hammered. Night after night. In the words of one of his colleagues, "He party, party, party all the time — run around all night. He drink everything — beer, wine, tequila." Add to that helpful quantities of cocaine. What we're trying to achieve here is sufficient and prolonged consumption to get him unmoored, to get him thinking in a new and different way. Break down those old restraints.

Let's figure also that he's still working his job through all this cocaine and drinking so as to deprive himself of sleep. Lack of sleep coupled with a prolonged binge is just the trick if you're fighting an insurmountable problem.

You see what's happening? He's trying to pound his troubles into dust by pounding himself. He got himself into this mess and, like the court told him and like his wife probably told him, he's responsible. Self hatred hath no man like him who screws up one time too many.

The methodology is one of getting yourself to the point where you have nothing to lose. If we've followed our model closely enough, we can see how to get ourselves thoroughly boxed in.

We're ready to go now. If we remember that man is essentially a problem solving animal, then the operative question becomes, "What next?"

Remember this, whatever he did, he thought it was the right thing to do. No one intentionally does the wrong thing. The world is a complex place and this is why. Once he started solving his immediate problems, it made sense to him each step of the way. Got a wife who's running around on you? Three little girls you can't support? Don't want to leave them destitute? You figure it.

Once you've bloodied your hands, is there anyone at work you might want to take out? How about that guy who's messing with your wife?

Sound crazy? It's because you're not walking in his shoes.

But where desperation turned into sustained panic was when he started running. Drinking and snorting and driving like a maniac. If you've ever seen a squirrel chased by a dog, imagine what it's like to be wired to the max while running from every police officer in six states. Can you run that fast? Is there any place to go?

The one place you would go is home. Especially if it were in another country. And do you know where he was caught? Just outside his home in Mexico.

Got a sense of it? See how it's done? Believe me, you too could do it.

Something wonderful is happening

It is devoutly to be hoped — here and among Alaska's caribou, if not in Saudi Arabia — that we are witnessing this week what historians 100 years hence will see as a lovely convergence of incongruities.

The Bush administration, casting caution to the wind, is contemplating intruding itself into the most intimate of relationships, that between the American and his automobile. As the cleanup of the Alaskan oil spill continues, Congress is making amends to all creatures great and small (although some bipeds may dissent) by preventing exploration for oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR).

George Will

And in a red picnic cooler at Stanford University, something is happening. A scientist says, laconically, this: "We're running excess heat above and beyond any chemical system."

He and others in hot pursuit of cold fusion could be on the verge of mankind's most life-transforming development since the discovery of electricity, or even since the great lighting-up recorded in Genesis.

Let's back up and take it from the top, beginning with the administration's reported intention to toughen CAFE (corporate automotive fuel economy) standards for automobiles.

It is, of course, true that if we burn less oil, we need to ship less of it across water. But this, too, is true: One of today's principal political skills is advancing pet projects by piggybacking them on passing crises. This requires the reflexes of a trout and the nimbleness of a mountain goat because crises come like lightning (remember the Chilean grapes? Chile, which lost 1.5 percent of its GNP, does) and do not linger (remember the Apple Terror?). Changes in CAFE should not be connected with all current crises.

Besides, better automobile mileage usually involves less automobile mass, and mass often is a correlate of safety. Some safety experts say higher CAFE standards will cost thousands of lives. It would be nice to be able to dodge such choices. It would be nice if the future were being incubated in that picnic cooler.

Fusion is the process of uniting two light atoms into one heavy atom in a way that releases energy. The dream has been for a way of doing the uniting cheaply and capturing the released energy for the production of electricity.

Hitherto, attempts at fusion have involved huge, complex, expensive devices heating particles to 50 million degrees. Cold fusion might involve relatively simple technologies operating at room temperature with fuel derived from seawater, fuel that would be inexpensive and virtually limitless.

If such fusion has practical future in, say, the next quarter century, then:

Saudi Arabia is so much sand covering a devalued asset. Oil expensive enough — perhaps $40 a barrel — to justify development in ANWR may not be as inevitable, or inevitable nearly as soon, as some people say. The greenhouse effect (the warming of the planet by trapped gases released from burning fossil fuels) and the inundations of coastal areas and other projected catastrophes may be postponed indefinitely.

A new source of abundant, inexpensive energy would range a wide range of public-private choices, involving transportation and agriculture and even the geopolitical status of nations.

There is a lesson in today's constellation of news stories, a lesson about how to read (and edit) a newspaper. Pay at least as much attention to science news as to political news. Political choices are made in contexts that politicians cannot choose, and the contexts are increasingly shaped by science.

George Will's syndicated column appears every Thursday on the Viewpoints page.

Letters

DI's misconceptions

To the Editor:

As members of the pro-life picket on Saturday (April 22), we would like to correct several of the errors which appeared in the articles in The Daily Iowan on Monday, April 24.

1. The city ordinance restricts Constitutional rights by limiting all pickets to 12 adults. The ordinance stipulates that children in strollers are not included in the count. To suggest, as Kim Painter did, that we believe our children do not count, that we ignored their presence is erroneous. We were not mandated to count the children in strollers or the two attending in utero.

2. The abortion supporters were actively involved in creating the disparity in numbers. They felt it necessary to call the police when our numbers exceeded 12. Evidently, outnumbering the pro-life picketers 5 to 1 (100 vs. 20) was not good enough. They preferred dealing with roughly 10 to 1 odds (100 vs. 12).

3. The abortion supporters also brought their children out to stand in the "Green Bay Packer weather." Actually, the weather would have been acceptable even to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. It was not even cold enough to see your breath. The temperature was nearly 60 degrees, not 30 degrees as Painter's column implied.

4. We were called "sommambulists" and "zombies." There is little that picketers can do except walk silently. Bystanders are given broad rights to file charges if they feel harassed by what picketers say or do because the ordinance is vague concerning what harassment is. We are picketing for the babies who have no say in their death sentence, for the women who are told they can not cope with life but can handle death, who are told they must kill the unborn to have a better life.

5. The music that Kim Painter characterized as "funny, profane, and barbed" was not innocent fun. It would have fit in beside the comments written in the residence hall stalls. It was violently anti-male. Carol deProse is the person who recently demanded that the UI put an end to all forms of sexual abuse. On Saturday, she was dancing with a boom box held over her head which blared, among other things, that men should "cut off their d--s and f--k themselves with it."

Hypocritical is the word that comes to our minds.

Joe Bob explained

To the Editor:

This letter is meant as an explanation to the readers of The Daily Iowan on what the Joe Bob Briggs column is all about. It's called SATIRE. Joe Bob is a fictional redneck, narrow-minded egotistical character created by John Bloom (notice the initials).

Bloom was the art critic for the Dallas Times Herald and created Joe Bob as a reviewer of drive-in movies and a commentator on life. His weekly attack on the baptists, "mezcins" and bimboes was a popular feature until the high sherriffs yanked it due to pressure. It seems that some folk could laugh at Joe Bob's commentaries on others, but when it dealt closer to home it was heresy.

Joe Bob does offend, as do a lot of individuals. He's meant to. Maybe now more readers will be able to understand what he is really saying about this mixed-up world and will not be so closed-minded themselves.

Iran reveals details of alleged CIA network

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran's information minister on Wednesday revealed details of what the Iranians say is a U.S. spy operation in Iran, alleging the agents included military officers, clergymen and civilians, official reports said.

In a televised news conference, Mohammad Mohammadi Reyshahri said the CIA had "carried out acts of terrorism and sabotage in Iran, including assassinations of high-ranking officials," the Islamic Republic News Agency reported. The dispatch was monitored in Nicosia.

"These spy networks were organized by the United States to infiltrate the Islamic Republic system and divert the revolution in the next decades," Reyshahri said.

IRNA quoted him as saying the Iranian agents had been recruited by the CIA "mainly from those Iranians calling at U.S. embassies abroad for various purposes such as obtaining visitors visas to the United States."

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said last week he had no information on the Iranian allegations. "They make similar claims every once in a while about American spies when they get a little attention," he said.

Police mug shots of Khashoggi published

BERN, Switzerland — Arms dealer and financier Adnan Khashoggi, once reputed as one of the world's wealthiest men, appeared as prisoner 67391 in police mug shots published Wednesday in Swiss newspapers.

The photos of Khashoggi were dated April 18, the day he was arrested in Bern on a U.S. warrant charging he helped hide assets that deposed President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines and his wife Imelda allegedly stole from their country.

The photos were apparently leaked to the press, and Swiss authorities have launched a judicial investigation to determine whether their publication was illegal, according to Bern's investigating judge, Alexander Tschapaett.

Markus Schneider, a Bern police spokesman, confirmed the photos were from police files but said they had not been officially published.

Khashoggi's attorneys say they plan to ask Switzerland's highest court this week for his immediate release.

Worm startles surgeons during operation

BOSTON — Doctors removing a young man's appendix were surprised when the real cause of his pain wriggled into view — a 2-inch-long red worm he had eaten with his homemade sushi.

When the patient came to the hospital in pain, doctors assumed he had appendicitis. But his appendix looked normal during surgery, and as they were about to sew him up, the worm slithered out of his abdominal cavity and onto the surgical drapes.

After he awoke, the man remembered eating raw fish the night before at a friend's home in New York City.

While worms have been a long-recognized hazard of eating raw fish, experts say most cases of worm infection occur when people prepare it at home. At restaurants, sharp-eyed sushi chefs are probably adept at keeping wormy fish from reaching customers.

In the latest case, described in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, doctors identified the culprit as a larval nematode known as eustrongylides.

PDA ban angers lip-locked students

NEDERLAND, Colo. — Officials have embraced a "Daylight Rule" to ban kissing and other affectionate displays between students, but the American Civil Liberties Union says the rule smacks of violating constitutional rights.

The daylight rule, which means daylight must be visible between students, was enacted at Nederland School last week. About 270 students, grades seven through 12, attend the rural mountain school west of Boulder, which offers many teen-agers their primary meeting place.

Students who violate the rule get a written warning; a second offense merits a letter to parents. A parent-student conference with school authorities is required for the third. Further discipline is not specified.

David Miller, regional legal director of the ACLU, said discipline beyond notification of parents could threaten constitutional rights of privacy and freedom of association.

Students said they resent the crackdown as a violation of basic human rights that will only drive them into surrounding forests.

Palestinian leaders reject Israeli election proposal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers reportedly shot and killed three Palestinians and wounded 44 during a general strike Wednesday, and an Arab accused of collaborating with Israel was gunned down by masked assailants.

Also Wednesday, more than 80 Palestinian leaders in the occupied lands rejected a government proposal for elections leading to an interim peace plan. The leaders, many of them pro-PLO, said the elections were a ploy "calculated to appeal to the media, to end the (Palestinian) uprising and to win time."

They said only an international peace conference with PLO participation can solve the Middle East conflict. Their signed statement was the first formal response by local Palestinians to Shamir's proposal.

The violence occurred mostly in the Gaza Strip, a stronghold of the Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas, which called the strike on the anniversary of the capture of Mecca in Saudi Arabia by the prophet Mohammed in 630.

The widespread clashes apparently were sparked by the death of Sharif el Khatib, 16, who was killed by troops during a confrontation in Gaza City's Sabra neighborhood, Arab reports said.

About 300 Sabra residents — some waving outlawed Palestinian flags and chanting "God is great!" — carried Khatib's body through the streets. Troops fired live ammunition to disperse the funeral march, wounding at least nine Palestinians, Arab reports said.

The violence spread, and 17-year-old Amal Mohammed Hussein, was fatally shot in the head by troops in the nearby Shati refugee camp.

Thirty-nine Palestinians, most of them teen-agers, were shot and wounded in stone-throwing clashes with troops in Gaza. They included a 2-year-old girl from Gaza City who was seriously injured by a plastic bullet in the head.

In the West Bank, 8-year-old Issam Omar Aniss was fatally shot in the chest when soldiers opened fire on stone-throwers on the Tul-karem refugee camp, Arab hospital officials said. At least five Palestinians were wounded in West Bank clashes, including a 9-year-old boy from Tul-karem camp who was reported in critical condition with a plastic bullet in the eye.

An army official confirmed 10 wounded in the occupied lands and said he was investigating the reports of the three deaths. He noted that in two cases bodies were taken by relatives for quick burial before army investigators arrived. The army usually lags hours behind hospitals in confirming casualties.

Masked assailants carrying automatic rifles gunned down the alleged collaborator, Fayek Erar, at his home in the northern West Bank village of Ras Atiya, Arab reports said. The 40-year-old property dealer became the sixth victim in a week targeted for cooperating with Israel.

The army confirmed the death and said police were investigating.

Reagan defends Bush's 100-day record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan, defending President George Bush against criticism he was moving too slowly in dealing with the Soviets, insisted Wednesday that Bush was "doing just fine" his first 100 days in office.

For his part, Bush said as he met with Reagan for the first time since taking office, he had "a lot more to learn" from the former president. About what, reporters wanted to know. "Life is its own self," Bush said.

"I learned a lot in eight years, learned a lot about principle, learned a lot about the world as it really is," Bush said.

In a gesture of respect, Bush went to Reagan's office, 34 stories high above Los Angeles, rather than have the former president come to him at a hotel suite. It was their first meeting since Bush's Jan. 20 inauguration.

Bush said he wanted to draw on Reagan's knowledge about "changes that are taking place abroad — Japan, NATO, Europe, all over the place — and get his advice."

Reagan, when asked about Bush's first months in office, told reporters, "I think he's doing just fine."

"He was a major part of everything that we did" during Reagan's eight years in office, the former president added.

When a reporter mentioned that Bush has been criticized for taking his time in returning to arms talks with the Soviets and opening contacts with President Mikhail Gorbachev, Reagan reiterated: "He's doing just fine."

Asked about Oliver North's trial, in which the former National Security Council aide said he believed he had Reagan's authorization for operating a clandestine scheme to arm the Nicaraguan Contras, Reagan said he and Bush both were "in the same boat," in that they could not comment on the case.

Reagan also refused to criticize his one-time vice president for cutting back funding for Reagan's once-prized Star Wars missile defense plan and for seeking humanitarian aid — not military assistance — for the Contra rebels.

"I think that I can rest assured that he means to maintain our national security," Reagan said.

Both Bush and Reagan said they hoped that arguments being heard Wednesday that the Supreme Court would set the stage for outlawing abortion.

Bush said he hopes to tap Reagan for some missions or assignments in the future. He said he had nothing specific in mind but added, "the respect for him (Reagan) around the world knows no bounds."

Nearing the end of a hectic four-day trip, Bush later flew to Austin to address the Texas Legislature, then he headed to Miami, where on Thursday he will participate in a series of events to highlight anti-drug efforts and also will dedicate an Alzheimer's disease center.

Addressing issues dear to the hearts of Texans, Bush called on Congress to pass a "responsible" savings and loan bill and said America was buying too much foreign oil.

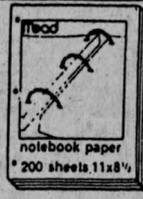

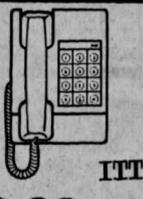

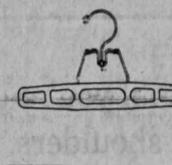

He told the lawmakers "there is no place on Earth like Texas." Bush claims Texas as his adopted home state.

"Now, I'm no cowboy," Bush said. "I pitch horseshoes, but I don't ride broncos."

Texas' oil industry has been battered for several years by low petroleum prices. Moreover, the state has more failed savings and loans than any other.

Apple® Makes Your Spring Sizzle

Even if you're up to your eyebrows in work, you needn't carry the world on your shoulders.

Not with a Macintosh® on your desk!

Think of a project that weighs heavily on your mind right now—say, a simple research paper. With Macintosh you can bring instant order to the jumble of notes, scribbles, quotes, and excerpts that'll go into your paper. You can quickly outline, change the order of topics, and jot down related ideas at will.

With Macintosh you can proofread your paper, illustrate your ideas, graph that equation, in less time than you might spend reviewing for a Monday morning quiz. Starting Sunday.

And here's the clincher: We have just made owning a Macintosh more affordable. Now you can save on the purchase of an Apple Macintosh Plus or selected models of Macintosh SE, with our new lower prices.

Come and see the new Apple Product Line on Thursday April 27, in the Lucas-Dodge room at the Iowa Memorial Union, at 9:00, 10:30, 12:00, 1:30 and 3:00. An Apple representative will be there to answer all of your questions.

A game with a language all its own

So tell us, Dr. Baseball, what is a balk?
 Oh, sure, we all know that with a runner on base, the pitcher must come to a stop — discernible or otherwise — or else an umpire will jump out, arms waving madly in the air, and the perpetrator will be charged with that most grievous of baseball misdemeanors, a balk.
 But why is this particular breach of baseball etiquette called a balk? What is a balk, really? Can you go into a hardware store and ask the clerk for one? Can you order one through the mail?
 Author Paul Dickson wondered the same thing and set out to research the question. The answer, and 5,000 or so others, are contained in his just-published "Baseball Dictionary," which offers a lexicon of the sport.
 "Baseball is unique," Dickson said. "It has a language all its own. There's nothing like it in sports. Maybe jazz, maybe the underworld, but not sports. Racing has a lingo that you could learn if you hang out at the track long enough. Basketball is coming on, but it doesn't have the history of baseball. Golf, but a lot of that has its origins in Scottish. Football, but that's a much tougher language."
 Who wants to talk in military terms like bombs and blitzes, when you can be discussing bleeps and batteries?
 "Baseball's image is less hard," Dickson said. Which may be why this week, in the interest of a kinder and gentler approach, President Bush discussed his first 100 days in office by referring to a "box score."
 That's one of the phrases that have crossed over from the language of baseball into every day usage.
 "There are a lot of them," Dickson said. "Back-to-back, boner, ground rules, hit and run. They all had their origins in baseball."
 "Baseball makes more sense for the average Joe or Jane, even if they don't go to games," he said. "The greatest hitters fail 70 percent of the time. That fact, the fact that you miss a lot, fits the rhythm of life."
 "Archers would go into combat with bows and arrows," he said. "If the string on their bow broke, they reached into their tunic for . . ."
 Of course. A second string. Then there is balk.
 "That comes from an old English term for a piece of wood used to force a door shut," Dickson said. "It was used to prevent criminals from gaining entry to the home."
 What does that have to do with a pitcher's motion, though? Simple.
 "It was something to stop the criminal, something to make him hesitate."
 Of course.
 Over and over, you look up a word's roots, snap your fingers and say that — "Of course, that's perfectly logical." Sometimes, though, logic doesn't work.
 One man's interpretation of "batter," a word to describe the pitcher and catcher, was that the action between them is where the game becomes energized. That would be logical, except that Dickson discovered the term being used as early as 1868, well before dry cells were invented.
 "It came from the Civil War, for the relationship between cannon and target," he said.
 Then, there is the matter of ace, as in your ace relief pitcher or starter.
 "I thought that came from a deck of cards, the MVP card in the deck," Dickson said. He learned instead that in 1869 the Cincinnati Red Stockings' best pitcher was Asa Brainard, who won 57 games. After that, any pitcher with a string of victories became known as an "Asa," and later, "Ace."
 Now, about bunt . . .

Kentucky keeps search open

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — P.J. Carlesimo left the University of Kentucky campus Wednesday without comment or an offer to become the school's head basketball coach.
 "I have absolutely no comment," Carlesimo said while touring Memorial Coliseum to look at the basketball facilities.
 Members of the media awaiting Carlesimo's arrival at the Georgetown University basketball banquet, where he was to be the guest speaker, were handed the following statement Wednesday night on Seton Hall letterhead.
 "I'm in Washington to appear at Georgetown University's basketball banquet as the guest speaker," the statement from Carlesimo read. "I do not wish to make any statement on any other subject that would detract from the recognition for the Georgetown team."

 Earlier Wednesday, Kentucky president David Roselle said, "No offer has been made to Carlesimo, at least yet."
 Two sources told The Associated Press that Carlesimo, who guided unheralded Seton Hall to the runner-up spot in the NCAA tournament this year, would accept the position at Kentucky which is awaiting NCAA penalties for irregularities in its basketball program.

 "I really ought to ask you to be patient because this to me is kind of an orderly process and this is phase of that process," Kentucky athletics director C.M. Newton told reporters after meeting with Carlesimo. "There's no job offers. There's been no job acceptance."
 Newton said he and Carlesimo met with Jim Host, president of Host Communications Co., which holds broadcast rights to Kentucky sporting events, in order to give Carlesimo a feeling for the job's public visibility.
 He said the three did not discuss money during the session that lasted about 75 minutes.

 "We're in the process of trying to match interests really," Newton said of the talks with Carlesimo. "Obviously there's an interest on part of the university in Coach Carlesimo and obviously there's an interest from his standpoint or we wouldn't have come here and talked."
 But Newton added: "Anything other than that read into this is very premature. There can't be anything else read into it."
 The sources told the AP that Carlesimo wanted to talk with

Hawks split on road

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jay Anderson received a bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the seventh inning to force in the winning run and give Minnesota a 3-2 victory over Iowa and a split in Wednesday's Big Ten doubleheader at the Metrodome.
 Iowa shut out the Gophers 2-0 in the first game.
 In the nightcap, Vince Palyan led off the Gopher seventh with a triple off the right field wall and Iowa promptly loaded the bases with two intentional walks. Anderson then faced reliever Tom Anderson, who missed the plate with four straight pitches to force in the winning run.
 Iowa shortstop Tim Costo hit his second two-run homer of the afternoon in the third inning of the second game, only to see Minnesota tie the score with two unearned runs in the fifth, setting up the game winner.
 Pitcher John DeJarald won a duel with Gopher leftlander Denny Neagle in the first game, giving up only two singles while walking three and striking out five.
 Neagle allowed just four hits while walking none and striking out 11. But he served up a two-run homer to Costo in the fourth inning for the only Iowa runs.
 Costo, a sophomore shortstop, has now hit 20 home runs this season.
 Iowa remains in first place in the Big Ten, at 12-4, and has an overall record of 31-10.

NBA PLAYOFF UPDATE

Lakers' chance for 3 straight begins with sub-.500 Portland

(AP) — After playing 1,025 games to eliminate only a third of its teams, the NBA begins its playoffs Thursday night with a team that finished four games under .500 playing the defending champion.
 The Portland Trail Blazers, who were 39-43 and lost all five regular season games to the Los Angeles Lakers, will open the series at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., as the Lakers advance their bid for a third straight title.
 "This is the year you can get beat in any round," Magic Johnson of the Lakers said. "We realize that. Whatever happens, we've just got to deal with it. We're ready."
 Rick Adelman, coach of the Trail Blazers, said the series is not the mismatch it appears to be.
 "We don't want to let them get a quick start on us," Adelman said. "We've played them even during the second half of most of the games but they've gotten a big jump on us in the first half."
 In other games Thursday night, Philadelphia is at New York, Milwaukee at Atlanta and Golden State at Utah.
 Four more series open Friday when Chicago is at Cleveland, Boston at Detroit, Houston at Seattle and Denver at Phoenix.
 Los Angeles was 57-25 during the season, the second-best record in the NBA behind the Pistons, who were 63-19.

 "We've accomplished everything we could this season, except for Detroit," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They've had a great year. We're getting ready now for what it's all about."
 In a series that's rated close, Charles Barkley of the 76ers said he would rather not have to play the New York Knicks.
 "If I had my choice, I'd start the playoffs against Miami, and then maybe take the Clippers in the second round," he said. "But we'll take the Knicks. I'm not saying we will beat them; I'm saying that we can beat them."
 New York won the Atlantic Division by six games over the second-place 76ers, but the Knicks struggled to a 5-5 record in April and in one stretch lost five of eight games at Madison Square Garden, including two losses to Philadelphia.
 "We've got to play the way we're capable of playing and we'll be fine," Mark Jackson of the Knicks said. "We're going into the playoffs very confident. But believe me, we won't take the Sixers lightly."
 "Every team goes through a period where they struggle," Knicks Coach Rick Pitino said. "We were up 90 percent of the season and down 10 percent."

Janvrin joins Jenner in Drake record book

DES MOINES (AP) — Kip Janvrin compiled his best score ever and joined some select company Wednesday in winning the Drake Relays decathlon for the third-straight year.
 The former Simpson College athlete, now a graduate assistant at Central Missouri, amassed 7,857 points and dominated the two days of competition, winning seven of the 10 events and tying for first in another.
 Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olympic gold medalist, is the only other athlete who has won three decathlon titles at Drake. Janvrin, whose best score previously was 7,668, is the first to do it three years running.
 "I'm still not where he is as far as points, but any time you're compared to Bruce Jenner in the same sentence, it's quite an honor," Janvrin said.
 Eddie Fye of Crete, Neb., was second with 7,022 points, followed by Nebraska's Rick Schwieger with 6,816 and Kurt Hasenstein of Naperville, Ill., with 6,665.
 Jill Lancaster, the women's track coach at Toledo, won the heptathlon for the fifth time in seven years with a score of 5,246 points.
 That tied her with shot putter Al

Thompson pleads guilty to federal drug charges

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Charles Thompson, Oklahoma's starting quarterback before being arrested on a federal drug charge, pleaded guilty Wednesday to conspiracy to distribute cocaine. He said he was ready to face the consequences.
 "What I did was wrong," the 20-year-old Thompson told reporters from the courthouse steps after his appearance before U.S. District Judge Ralph Thompson. He apologized to his family, the University of Oklahoma and to his supporters before quickly leaving with his attorney.
 The former Sooner was arrested Feb. 13 and accused of selling 17 grams of cocaine to an undercover FBI agent on Jan. 26.
 "He's just an athlete who got caught up in the fast lane and got himself in a regrettable situation," attorney Garvin Isaacs said before the court appearance.
 "It's in his best interest to plead guilty and get on with his life," Isaacs said.
 The judge delayed sentencing until he receives a report from the U.S. Probation Office, but asked Thompson if he realized he was almost certain to spend time in prison.
 "Yes, your honor," Thompson replied. He later said he was ready to face the consequences.
 The maximum punishment for the charge is 20 years in prison and a $2 million fine, plus a special assessment fine of $50,000.
 "Even under the most lenient conditions under the guidelines, a defendant would face some time," U.S. Attorney Bill Price said. "The more severe conduct involves huge amounts of prison time without parole. He (Thompson) definitely would fall within the lower range of this, but I cannot comment on the precise sentence he is likely to get."

Evans lifts Red Sox to 5-4 win

BOSTON (AP) — Dwight Evans' bases-loaded single off second baseman Steve Lyons' glove with one out in the 10th inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 5-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Marty Barrett opened the inning against Barry Jones, 1-2, with a single to shallow left. One out later, Mike Greenwell was hit by a pitch and Jim Rice beat out a slow grounded to third, loading the bases and setting up Evans.

Bob Stanley, 1-1, retired seven batters in a row for the victory. The loss was the ninth in 11 games for the White Sox.

Brewers 12, Twins 0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chris Bosio pitched a four-hitter and B.J. Surhoff hit a grand slam Wednesday as the Milwaukee Brewers routed the Minnesota Twins 12-0 and ended Allan Anderson's seven-game winning streak over two seasons.

Surhoff's grand slam in the seventh and a solo homer by Joey Meyer in the sixth gave the Brewers 10 home runs in their three-game sweep of the Twins and a league-leading 23 for the season.

Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn called the series "the three best games we've strung together since Cactus League and they came after two of our worst games."

Dodgers 3, Cubs 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Alfredo Griffin hit a three-run double as the Dodgers won for the sixth time in seven games.

Mike Morgan, 2-1, allowed five hits in seven innings and Alejandro Pena and Jay Howell finished the combined eight-hitter, with Howell getting his second save.

The Cubs have lost eight of their last nine games, scoring just 20 runs. Chicago also has lost nine straight to Los Angeles in Wrigley Field since July 11, 1987.

Cornell names replacement to Baughan

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Jack Fouts, the offensive line coach at Cornell, was named head coach at the Ivy League school Wednesday night, replacing Maxie Baughan, who resigned Tuesday amid published reports he was romantically involved with the wife of another assistant coach.

Fouts, the Big Red line coach since 1984, replaces Baughan, who last season led Cornell to a share of its first Ivy League championship since 1971.

Fouts compiled a 77-93-9 record in 20 year as head coach at Ohio Wesleyan University, leading the Battling Bishops to two Ohio Athletic Conference championships and winning NCAA College Division Coach of the Year in 1967.

Athletic Director Laing Kennedy cited Fouts' experience as a head coach and his knowledge of the Ivy League as the main factors in the university's decision to hire him.

"Jack is the right man to keep Cornell football moving forward," Kennedy said at a news conference.

"I was asked to be the head coach and I definitely feel we can continue the momentum that has been generated in the past," Fouts said.

Terms of his contract, including its length, were not disclosed in a prepared statement issued by the university.

Baughan cited "personal tensions" when he announced his resignation. The Ithaca Journal reported Baughan was linked romantically with the wife of assistant head coach Peter Noyes.

ASOIF postpones election

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Primo Nebiolo, who is being investigated by Italian prosecutors in a business scandal, failed to win re-election as president of the group of summer Olympic sports organizations Wednesday even though he was unopposed.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of Summer Olympic International Federations, concerned with Nebiolo's tarnished image, voted to postpone the election until a special meeting in October.

Seton Hall officials, specifically those who supported him during attempts to oust him two seasons ago, before making an official announcement.

"Kentucky has a new coach," one source said Tuesday night.

Roselle said Carlesimo's hiring would have to be approved by the school's athletics board, of which he is chairman. He said no board meeting had been scheduled.

"He's clearly a serious candidate," said Roselle, who had breakfast with Newton and Carlesimo Wednesday morning. "He's clearly a first-rate candidate, but there's not been any offer made to him yet."

Carlesimo just finished the first year of a five-year contract reportedly worth a total of $1.2 million. That average salary of $240,000 could probably be doubled by UK's overall package.

Carlesimo, a 39-year-old bachelor whose coaching record is under .500 despite last season's 31-7 mark, is the first candidate Newton had wanted who has been interested enough to visit the campus.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski and Los Angeles Laker coach Pat Riley immediately said they were not interested. Arizona coach Lute Olson flirted with UK briefly but canceled a visit to the campus.

Kentucky is seeking a replacement for Eddie Sutton, who resigned under pressure in March after directing the program for four years.

School officials went before the NCAA Committee on Infractions last weekend in Charleston, S.C., responding to 18 allegations of wrongdoing in the basketball program.

Any sanctions or penalties against the program by the NCAA are expected in the next two to four weeks.

The sources said that Carlesimo was the kind of coach UK wanted to hire before the possible sanctions were announced to lessen any blow the NCAA might administer.

Carlesimo, whose integrity has generally been unquestioned, took over Seton Hall's foundering program in 1982. The Big East Conference team limped to a 6-23 record the first year and has steadily improved.

Several student groups, however, called for his resignation two seasons ago before he took Seton Hall to its first NCAA tournament appearance in the school's history.

Feuerbach for second-place on the Drake Relays career victory list. The leader is Cindy Bremser, who has won six titles in distance events.

Although Lancaster's score was 101 points below her total last year, she still won easily. Lynne Frey of Nebraska was second with 4,905 points and Graceland's Wendi Simmons was third with 4,867.

The competition was held in near-perfect weather until the final event of the decathlon — the 1,500 meters. Dark clouds rolled in, the wind picked up and a tornado warning was posted for the area, but no funnel clouds were sighted and no rain fell.

Janvrin began the final round by winning the 110-meter hurdles in 15.28 seconds. He also won the discus (138-6) and 1,500 (4:29.69), was second in the pole vault and third in the javelin.

On Tuesday, Janvrin won the 100, long jump, shot put and 400 and tied for first in the high jump.

"I had a good meet," he said. "We had awesome weather until that last race, but nine out of 10 isn't bad. You noticed the wind on the backstretch, but you felt like you were floating on the front side so it didn't really matter."

Janvrin had personal bests in the discus and high jump and his 15-9 effort in the pole vault was his best for a decathlon, although he has topped 16 feet in open-vault competition.

Like Janvrin, Lancaster led her competition from start to finish. She won the 800 Wednesday with a time of 2:22.91 and finished second in the javelin and long jump. On Tuesday, Lancaster won the 100 and tied for first in the 200.

Lancaster said she was satisfied with her score, considering that her coaching duties have hindered her training.

"I wrote my goals on a piece of paper before I got here," she said. "Not what I would like to do, but what I thought I could realistically do, and I came close in all seven events."

Pelluer skips minicamp, may be traded

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Steve Pelluer, who doesn't have a contract, refused to show for the Dallas Cowboys' minicamp Wednesday and Coach Jimmy Johnson considered trading him.

"I want positive people who are willing to put it on the line 100 percent for the Cowboys," Johnson said. "If not, we'll have someone else in the position."

Troy Aikman, the former UCLA quarterback who recently signed a six-year contract for $11.037 million, was in camp and took a ribbing from some of the veteran players about his salary.

"I didn't mind the jokes," Aikman said. Pelluer said he didn't miss camp because of Aikman's salary.

"I don't want to be treated as a back-up the rest of my career," Pelluer said. "Maybe I'll have to ask to be traded."

Pelluer played out his five-year contract last season. He was making $600,000.

Former 49er Monroe dies of sudden heart attack

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Carl Monroe, a former reserve with the San Francisco 49ers who scored the first touchdown in the 1985 Super Bowl, died of a heart attack Wednesday. He was 29.

Monroe was taken to Santa Clara Valley Medical Center in full cardiac arrest at 7:30 a.m. after his girlfriend awoke to the sounds of him coughing and called paramedics. He was pronounced dead at 7:58 after efforts to revive him failed, said nursing supervisor Jordan Pavacich.

An autopsy showed nothing physically wrong with Monroe. Results of toxicology tests, which determine if drugs were involved, won't be released for another month, said a spokeswoman for the Santa Clara County coroner.

"There are no traces of anything yet," said the spokeswoman, who declined to give her name. "We won't know for four to six weeks."

Monroe had two drunk-driving arrests on his record, according to 49ers spokesman David Rahn, and underwent therapy for substance abuse paid for by the team following the 1984 season.

A coroner's investigator said Monroe's girlfriend, Starlette Williams, told him Monroe complained of an upset stomach before going to bed at 1:30 a.m. The woman told the investigator the pair had eaten a pizza and shared a marijuana cigarette at about 10 p.m. Tuesday, but neither had used any other drugs.

The investigator said when he and police arrived at the apartment it was filled with about 40 friends and relatives of Monroe.

Police investigated the death Wednesday morning but turned the case over to the coroner's office after finding no sign of foul play. Police Lt. Bill Erfurth said there were no drugs found in the apartment other than Valium.

The 5-foot-8, 180-pound Monroe played for the 49ers from 1983 to 1987. He had a career average of 22.1 yards and one touchdown on 71 kickoff returns, rushed 13 times for 36 yards and caught 28 passes for 323 yards and two touchdowns. He was the 49ers' seventh all-time leading kickoff returner.

Committee forces Valvano to pick a job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball Coach Jim Valvano should not also be the school's athletic director because there is a conflict of interest when he creates policies for himself, a committee has concluded.

Its recommendation was unanimously endorsed by the faculty senate after it was issued in a report by the group's Select Committee on Academic Integrity, which was formed to examine N.C. State's handling of student grades in the wake of allegations of improper grade changing on the basketball team.

"The singular nature of the varsity basketball challenge at N.C. State University has prompted the committee to further suggest that the two roles of director of athletics and basketball coach of the men's team may not be compatible," the committee said.

In an interview after the senate meeting, Dr. Edward P. Stahel II, a professor of chemical engineering who chaired the committee, said the committee had found that basketball players were not encouraged to achieve beyond a minimal level to keep them eligible to play.

"We were concerned about the basketball players' lack of progress toward a degree and the quality of the academic programs," he said.

Valvano, reached at his office for comment, hung up on a reporter asking for his reaction to the senate vote and the committee's report.

In the first four pages of the five-page report, the committee said it had found nothing amiss in the university's handling of student grades. On the final page, however, the committee wrote that it had found serious academic problems with the basketball team.

"While examining selected basketball players' academic records, the committee was struck by the lack of academic progress in case after case," the report said.

"While TV 'color' personnel talk of seniors' on the team, they are often referring to athletes in their fourth year of eligibility and the students' academic standing may place him years short of achieving a degree," the report says.

The committee wrote that it was encouraged that a report by the director of the academic skills program said that "essentially all our athletes were capable of successful academic work at N.C. State."

'The Greek' responds to special

NEW YORK (AP)—Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder is puzzled. Fifteen months ago, CBS fired Snyder after he told a Washington television station that blacks were bred to be better athletes than whites. On Tuesday night, NBC showed a one-hour special which cited studies indicating that blacks have a natural advantage in some sports. "I got fired for saying that and now they're doing specials on it," Snyder said Wednesday. "You figure it out."

NBC's "Black Athletes — Fact and Fiction" didn't generate as much controversy as Snyder's remarks. But the network did receive more than 300 phone calls about the program, and most were critical.

The show received an 11.1 rating, second in its time period behind ABC's "thirtysomething." It was the highest rating for an NBC News special since last July.

Snyder said he wanted to do a similar special at CBS. "They were afraid of it," he said in a telephone interview from Miami Beach, Fla.

CBS declined comment. Snyder, who was the oddsmaker on "The NFL Today" for 12 years, said he has talked to many doctors and scientists who believe there are physical differences between blacks and whites.

"It's something I've been studying for 10 years," Snyder said. "I didn't make this stuff up."

Despite the uproar over his remarks, Snyder said he's not afraid to speak out again. "All my life I've said exactly what I was thinking," he said. "What I said was right. Maybe I didn't say it the right way, but it was true."

In a way, the Snyder incident and a similar controversy involving Los Angeles Dodgers executive Al Campanis may have led to more open discussion about race and sports.

Canadian shot putter says he knew of steroid usage

TORONTO (AP)—A shot putter suspended for using banned drugs said Wednesday he was reinstated by the Canadian Track and Field Association after he threatened to expose steroid use by sprinter Ben Johnson and his teammates.

Peter Dajia, who attends the University of Texas, told a Canadian inquiry that the federally-funded track group acted quickly once it was told its biggest star was using a banned substance.

Dajia said that he had been on the muscle-building drugs for years but he testified that a June 1986 drug test indicated he and two teammates had taken drugs they had never heard of.

Dajia said his appeals were rejected and his 18-month suspension lingered for two years.

When his lawyer failed to gain his reinstatement early last summer, the shot putter said he decided to take matters into his own hands.

He told Mr. Justice Charles Dubin and the inquiry into drugs in sport that he then spoke with Steve Findlay, an athletes' representative at the track association in Ottawa.

"I asked him why I hadn't been reinstated yet. I threatened to turn in the world's fastest human being. I was going to go to the press. I had nothing to lose."

"I asked him why I hadn't been reinstated yet. I threatened to turn in the world's fastest human being. I was going to go to the press. I had nothing to lose." — Peter Dajia, Canadian shot putter

Dajia, 25, said Findlay tried to calm him and asked him not to "make any harsh decisions."

He quoted Findlay as saying in a subsequent conversation. "Think of your sport."

Several days later, the association began proceedings to reinstate Dajia and his teammates — Rob Gray and Mike Spiritoso.

Dajia finished second at the national championships a month later but an international ban by the federal government remained and he was not allowed to compete at the Olympics in Seoul.

He said he repeated his threats to the association's president, Paul Dupre, its chairman, Jean-Guy Ouellete, and the head of its doping control program, Bruce Savage at the nationals.

He said he mentioned he knew about Johnson's personal physician, Dr. Jamie Astaphan, "and some of the patients under his care."

"Did any of the people representing the Canadian Track and Field Association ask you what you were talking about?" Robert Armstrong, the commission's senior counsel, asked.

"No," replied Dajia, who testified he had been obtaining banned drugs from Astaphan since 1985.

"Did you have any sense of whether they understood what it was you were talking about?"

"I'm sure they did," said the shot putter. "It wasn't the first time that's happened."

Ouellete, Dupre and Savage were unavailable for comment Wednesday but Findlay said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that "we've agreed to co-operate with Mr. Justice Dubin and not comment on any evidence until the CTFAs gets a chance to comment at the inquiry."

Troupe enlivens Balinese culture

By Kathleen Hurley The Daily Iowan

The written word is weak to describe The Dancers and Musicians of Bali who performed at Hancher Auditorium Tuesday evening. Western vocabulary crumbles before the mystical aura of the ancient Indian dance. More than exotic, the Balinese dance-drama brought to the theater glimpses of intricate culture.

Once the curtain rose, the audience was drawn into a Bali village by overpowering music that was passion to the senses. On stage, cross-legged behind their ornate instruments, the musicians created a trance-like atmosphere. Music that reverberated from metallophones, gong-chimes, cymbals, drums and flutes reached not only the ear, but somewhere far beyond.

With complete fusion to this music, the dancers entered with "Pendet," a religious dance of offering. Seldom do Western performers acknowledge an audience as did these five beauties. Tossing cascades of flower petals to an awed audience, the women demonstrated movement so detailed that the slightest motion was a language in itself. What was so mesmerizing?

They danced with their eyes. In Balinese dance, the steps are secondary to the communication of mood and character; the facial articulation and precise hand gestures produced the expressive dance in which mouse-sized movement created elephant impact.

The most exciting piece in the program, "Kecek," revealed an original ritual dance used to purify a village during disasters. In traditional Bali, the dance would have often lasted 12 hours. The word "intense" is an understatement of the fierce energy of the horde of men as unrestrained torso movement added to punched chants in popcorn percussion. A volcano of energy, the circular group tossed rhythms and phrases through wildfire.

Other pieces in the show such as "Jauk" enticed the audience with a devilish intent. With a grotesquely haunting mask and extended fingernails, the dancer fanatically portrayed a wicked demon. Brilliant costumes of blinding gold nearly overpowered the soloist.

Art and life are not separate in the Bali culture; the program included dances of worship, welcome, war, legend and love. In addition, great religious significance accompanies each performance whether in the village or at an American theatre. Ceremonial offerings (banten, caru seghan) and a prayer for inspiration (sanggah taksu) precede every show. In fact, the scenery is adjusted so that the dancers always enter from the direction of their sacred mountain, Gunung Agung.

"Barong," the closing piece, related a complex myth incorporating many magical characters. The tale's spiderweb meanings entwined as a mythical monster of every child's nightmare battled the frenzied warrior, Barong. Presented with such a dramatic finale, the audience enthusiastically supported numerous curtain calls.

'Nightingales' vows less skin, sex, sin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bowing to audience complaints and advertiser defections, the executive producer of NBC's fleshy "Nightingales" said the series will show less skin and more nurses in uniform.

"We did some things we're not proud of," Aaron Spelling told reporters Tuesday. "Mostly, we want to add to the patient-nurse relationship."

The one-hour drama depicts the trials of five less-than-brilliant and lusty nursing students. Spelling said if NBC renews the show, it would return without lacy lingerie, bouncy aerobic workouts and locker-room gossip/drobing sessions.

Critics, including irate nurses, said it demeaned the nursing profession specifically and women generally.

"Nightingales" is one of several television programs criticized recently by advocacy groups.

Spelling, whose program "Charlie's Angels" brought bikinis and hot tubs to the world of TV private detectives, said the new "Nightingales" would have characters saying lines like, "All I want to do is be a good nurse and help."

The show's critics included American Nurses Association, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and several nursing schools.

"They're bimboes," Mary Ann Lewis, a president in the California Nurses Association, said of the "Nightingales" characters. "They're flighty females with few brain cells and they're not competent. The show doesn't depict the nursing practice as it is today."

Spelling said he will add a nursing adviser to the show's staff and deal more realistically with the profession. He said, though, that the nurses will continue to have personal lives.

"I'm not going to tell you there will never be a love scene in 'Nightingales,'" Spelling said. Suzanne Pleshette, one of the show's co-stars, said at the news conference that the actresses depicting the young nurses have been uncomfortable with some of the scenes they've been asked to play, finding them "repugnant."

Pleshette said the show had erred in its fascination with the nurses' shaving their legs and the "ridiculous underwear" some of the nurses were asked to step into.

Spelling said that in summer reruns, a much-discussed scene involving a nurse having sex in a linen closet will be excised from an episode.

Although "Nightingales" has won its Wednesday night time period in television ratings, its future is not certain. NBC's decision about renewing it is expected within three weeks.

Spelling and Pleshette said they were concerned that advocacy-group complaints might possibly cross the line into censorship. Said Spelling: "If you bow to every group of censors, there will be no television."

Previn bows out of Philharmonic post

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andre Previn's resignation as musical director forces the Los Angeles Philharmonic to hunt for a new conductor at a time when other major orchestras are trying to fill vacancies.

His decision to leave his $500,000-plus-a-year job was announced Tuesday amid reports of artistic disagreements with Music Center Executive Director Ernest Fleischmann. But Previn will continue as guest conductor with the orchestra for several more years. Previn's resignation is the latest change to unsettle the symphonic world, which on Monday learned that 81-year-old Herbert von Karajan was stepping down as director of the celebrated Berlin Philharmonic. Among the others searching is the New York Philharmonic. The Chicago Symphony recently appointed Daniel Barenboim to replace Sir Georg Solti.

"I have decided that, in the current structure of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, it has become obvious to me there is no room for a music director," the 60-year-old Previn told the board, according to a statement from the philharmonic Tuesday.

The resignation is effective at season's end.

Previn, who became music director in 1986, clashed with Fleischmann over guest conductors on recordings, how Previn edited musical works — even cutbacks on office supplies and coffee.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic said a search for a new music director would begin immediately. It took the San Diego Symphony 14 months before finding a replacement for David Atherton. On Tuesday, the orchestra announced the appointment of Israeli conductor Yoav Talmi as music director.

The Berlin orchestra is already searching for a conductor to replace Karajan, who is quitting for medical reasons. Zubin Mehta, who once headed the Los Angeles Philharmonic, has announced his resignation from the New York Philharmonic.

Gallows humor lends irony to amnesty program comics

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — No superheroes grace the pages of Javier Juarez's comic books, no archvillains with maniacal plots to control the world and not a single "Pow!" "Zap!" or "Bam!"

Even so, the black-and-white adventures of "Felipe" and his friends as they try to conquer a mountain of bureaucratic obstacles to become legal U.S. residents may be the most dog-eared literature in California.

Distributed free at employment offices, churches and social service agencies, the booklets are lessons in applying for residency under the complex 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, better known as the amnesty program.

"All this subject matter is deadly boring if you aren't affected by it. If you are affected by it, it's not deadly boring — it's terrifyingly boring," said Juarez, a former Mexican government economist, who got the idea after he married a U.S. citizen and moved from Mexico City to California.

So Juarez lightened it up, capitalizing on the gallows humor and love of storytelling he said is the heritage of Mexico, where political cartooning has enjoyed a long tradition and soap-opera-style novellas are popular.

"Lots of people say, 'Why a comic book? That's for a kid or the mentally retarded.' There's nothing comic about the situations portrayed in the comic books. Actually, it's a matter of life and death. It's going to determine where they live and work. But there's no reason to lose your sense of humor."

Juarez writes the scripts in Spanish, then translates them for English editions. A former student of dramatic arts, he gets help with illustrations from his media-wise family — his father works in advertising, his brother is in filmmaking, and his sister is a television director in Mexico.

He strives to write the scripts in the idioms of everyday Spanish, while accurately imparting information about the amnesty program — a task that can be a "nightmare" because experts frequently disagree on the complex law.

Emily Goldfarb, executive director of the San Francisco-based Coalition for Immigrant and Refugee Rights and Services which produced the books, believes that unlike with government brochures, people hang on to the comics and read them aloud to their families, reaching illiterate people who otherwise might be misinformed or exploited by swindlers.

"They're fun to read," she said. "The graphics and the conversations and the cultural aspects of it are things that people can identify with."

At the Bijou

"The Left-Handed Woman" (Peter Handke, 1978) — 6:45 p.m.
"Witness for the Prosecution" (Billy Wilder, 1957) — 9 p.m.

Television

The Channel 12 program guide is swathed in silence on the subject of its two nature programs today, and so we're left to guess at their contents — first, there's "Wild America — Antlered Kingdom," which is probably about the plight of the endangered condor (7 p.m.; IPTV 12). Next, there's "Wildside — Rhino Rescue," which more than likely deals with the rash of Sasquatch sightings in St. Busse, North Dakota (7:30 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Music

Mauricio Loureiro will hold a clarinet recital at 8 p.m. in Harper Hall. There will also be a Camerata concert at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall.

Theater

Tonight's entry into the UI's Playwrights' Festival is "3 A.M." by Heather McCutchen, at 6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building.

Iowa City Community Theatre's production of "Brigadoon" continues its run tonight at 8 in the Community Theatre on the Johnson County 4-H Fairgrounds, Old Highway 218 South.

Nightlife

Truthhawk and I-Ones play reggae at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St. Little Women Reggae will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Radio

You'd better walk softly, record company stranger — she's Krista Kapacinskas, or The Hitmaker as she's known in the Biz, and she can make or break a "New Release" without a twinge of remorse — or even breaking a sweat (8-11 p.m.; KRUI 89.7 FM).
