Thatcher, Kohl at stalemate

Kohl demands superpower talks on short-term missiles

DEIDESHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain failed Sunday to persuade Chancellor Helmut Kohl to drop his demand that the superpowers begin talks soon on cutting short-range nuclear missiles.

The two leaders, trying to reach a compromise on a stalemate that has split the NATO alliance, described their talks as frank and intensive. Both admitted they could not solve the crisis.

"We still have quite a lot of work to do," Kohl told reporters during a news conference with Thatcher after an afternoon of talks.

But Kohl said he was optimistic the disagreement could be resolved before a North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels on May 29-30.

Thatcher also expressed optimism, but stuck strongly to the U.S.-British position that rules out early talks with the Soviets on short-range nuclear weapons.

"Strength must continue not only in words; strength has to be translated into weaponry," she said.

Thatcher's visit to the Rhineland-Palatinate town of Deidesheim was aimed at persuading Kohl to drop his government's insistence on early talks, a demand that has placed him in a battle of wills with Thatcher and President George Bush.

The West Germans believe superpower arms talks should be attempted on a broad scale because of the current disarmament climate in Moscow.

Washington and London maintain talks on tactical nuclear arsenals should not begin as long as the Warsaw Pact alliance has a superiority in conventional forces.

The United States and Britain also argue that it would be hard to stop the talks from progressing to the point where they would address the total elimination of tactical nuclear weapons in Europe — a goal of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Under NATO's flexible response policy, the allies could respond to a Soviet bloc attack with either conventional or nuclear weapons.

"Short-range nuclear weapons are absolutely vital for flexible response," Thatcher said.

UI senate may back allocation

SCOPE looks to UI for funding next fall

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Despite being zero-funded by the UI student government, members of the UI Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment are confident the group will again gain financial support from the UI.

The controversy over SCOPE's funding began in the student government when a joint mandatory student fees committee denied SCOPE's $18,000 funding request. UI Collegiate Associations Councilors vocally objected to funding the group, but the UI Student Senate contended SCOPE deserved an allocation.

"The only reason the mandatory student fee proposal didn't work out was because the senate and Collegiate Associations Council didn't agree," said Kevin Taylor, Campus Programs director.

Taylor, who is SCOPE's staff adviser, said if the budget meeting had not been the same night as the Bon Jovi concert, SCOPE representatives would have fought the zero-funding action.

SCOPE is a volunteer student commission that brings bands and entertainers to Iowa City for performances in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, Hancher Auditorium and the Polo Club, 313 S. Dubuque St. SCOPE, organized in 1970, operated without mandatory student fees until last year when the student government allocated it about $13,000.

The SCOPE "diversity fund," that began last year with the mandatory student fees, keeps average ticket costs below $12.50, allows

Bush praises genius, vision of the 'other' George

NEW YORK (AP) — President George Bush on Sunday retraced the inaugural steps of another president named George who took the oath two centuries ago that cemented him in history as "the father of our country."

Participating in celebrations of the 200th anniversary of George Washington's inauguration as the first U.S. president, Bush said his forebear "established a precedent for 40 presidents to follow."

"It was Washington's vision, his balance, his integrity, that made the presidency possible," Bush told a gathering outside the historic Federal Hall where Washington was sworn in on April 30, 1789. The 41st president reflected on the "awesome prospect" that faced Washington on that day.

"How unlikely it must have seemed then, that we might become United States. How uncertain, that a republic could be hewn out of the wilderness of competing interests," Bush said. "But George Washington defined and shaped this office."

Bush said Washington "created a living, functioning government" based on the Constitution. "He brought together men of genius — a team of giants, with strong and competing views. He harnessed and directed their energies." On a day awash with historical symbolism, Bush sat in the church pew where Washington prayed on that first Inauguration Day, trod the steps of Federal Hall where the first president took his oath, and waved goodbye to an actor recreating the departure of a newly inaugurated President Washington.

The ceremony ended with a rain of brightly colored confetti and fresh carnations cascading from nearby office towers onto the crowd. Speaking to a crowd of several thousand people from behind a glass wall on the Federal Hall steps, Bush seemed not to notice a handful of protesters who waved signs reading "We demand health care."

Bush spoke of Washington's dedication to service and repeated his own often-stated call for Americans to follow that calling today.

"Today we seek a new engagement in the lives of others, believing that success is not measured by the sum of our possessions, our positions, or our professions, but by the good we do for others," he said.

Bush and his wife Barbara, joined by their daughter Doro LeBlond and Bush's brother Jonathan Bush, began their day in New York with church services at St. Paul's Chapel, where Washington attended services on his Inauguration Day.

The Episcopal service, which featured several hymns and readings and ended with the singing of "America the Beautiful," was attended by about 250 people.

At the corner of Wall and Broad streets, where Federal Hall is dwarfed by the financial district's skyscrapers, Bush was joined at the podium by New York Mayor Ed Koch and the state's U.S. senators — Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Alfonse D'Amato — and by former Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger.

May Day rally sparks labor riots in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students and workers fought riot police with firebombs and rocks in downtown Seoul Sunday after troopers blocked a rally called by labor and dissident groups to mark May Day. More than 1,300 people were arrested.

The clashes were the first major protests on Seoul's streets since late last year, and they sent terrified pedestrians running for cover.

In scattered clashes, bands of protesters battled the 20,000 riot police deployed to block the rally, called on the eve of the international labor holiday.

Police officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported dozens of injuries.

In Incheon, west of Seoul, and in southeastern Kwangju, protesters also fought police.

Police fired warning shots into the air in Sunnam on Seoul's southern outskirts when about 200 workers and students tried to firebomb a police station, police said. Five officers were injured.

Radical students, dissidents and workers are mounting violent protests to demand the overthrow of the government. They also want higher wages, better working conditions and a share in South Korea's growing economic prosperity. Most South Korean workers earn subsistence wages for long working weeks.

Disney, day care clash over Mickey and gang

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Mickey Mouse is up to his ears in contention, with his copyright owners suing and being sued over infringement and a children's center here being told to remove cartoon characters from its walls.

People from across the nation have expressed outrage that Walt Disney Productions ordered the daycare center to remove paintings of Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy from the outside walls of the school, but the company remains firm in its position.

Support for the daycare center has come from a Phoenix, Ariz., grandmother, a New York doctor, a Mississippi beauty shop owner and the creator of a Saturday morning cartoon television show, an official said.

"I've gotten so many telephone calls from people angry at Disney that I bet Walt Disney is turning over in his grave right now," said Erica Scotti, executive director of the Very Important Babies Daycare Center.

Disney officials said the school is violating copyright laws and they want the popular cartoons removed in one month. The company also has ordered the characters removed at two other Hallandale daycare centers, Good Godmother's Daycare and Temple Messianique.

U.S. politicians predict election fraud in Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before the first ballot was cast, political seers from President George Bush on down were predicting widespread fraud in this week's presidential elections in Panama.

At the same time, a bipartisan consensus, often rare in foreign policy issues, emerged saying the de facto ruler, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, had to go.

Relations between the United States and Panama have been on the skids since February 1988, when Noriega was indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami on drug trafficking charges. Then-president Eric Arturo Delvalle a few weeks later attempted to force Noriega out, only to be ousted himself by the general.

The United States recognizes Delvalle, who lives in Miami, as Panama's legitimate president, which has led to a political vacuum that has caused a host of problems, ranging from snags in Panama Canal treaty negotiations to incidents against American citizens.

Neither traditional diplomacy, nor the cutoff of economic and military aid nor economic sanctions have achieved the stated goal: Noriega's ouster.

The elections, scheduled for Sunday, pit Noriega's candidate, Carlos Alberto Duque, against Guillermo David Endara, running on an anti-government coalition ticket.

In the United States, Democrats and Republicans alike claim the general will stack the ballots in favor of Noriega.

Clinic could empower disabled

Proposed center may provide special adaptive services

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Last week the Johnson County Department of Human Services approached the Johnson County Board of Supervisors about the possibility of establishing a local clinic to provide adaptive services and technologies for disabled people.

If granted, the clinic would be the first of its kind, said Carol Thompson, director of the Department of Human Services.

Thompson said there is a need for the clinic because disabled people typically experience great difficulty trying to receive much-needed adaptive services.

The services of the clinic have not been specifically outlined yet, but Donna Chandler, coordinator of Services for Persons With Disabilities, said she would like to see the clinic serve two basic functions: evaluating the disabled person's need for an adaptive technology and helping them pay for the technology.

"Some of the equipment is already out there, but we don't have any money to buy it," Chandler said.

Thompson said if the clinic becomes a reality, it could possibly help create special equipment for disabled people.

Chandler said there is a lack of places to get the sort of services and technologies the clinic could provide.

The University Hospital School offers a limited amount of services by recommending the type of adaptive equipment an individual might need, she said.

Chandler said she once received a request from the UI Reading Lab for a page-turner for a disabled student who could not perform the function without assistance.

The university does not routinely provide this equipment for a disabled student's use. Only if the equipment can be used by a large number of people will any sort of specialized adaptive equipment be provided by the university, Chandler said.

The page-turner could not be provided because its use would be limited, she added.

Often, the adaptive equipment is very expensive and if the disabled student does not qualify for funding from Medicare — Social Security for disabled persons — or does not have a supplemental security income, they often "just go without," she said.

In addition, these financial-assistance programs will only help fund the adaptive technology if it is directly related to a medical condition. If the adaptive technology would only serve to make the recipient's life "easier," it would not be covered by Medicare, Chandler said.

"I think it would be a real plus to have that kind of facility in Iowa City," Chandler said. "There is a real lack of places to get those sorts of services."

Chandler said, the clinic could provide a rehabilitative engineer, so adaptive equipment could be built or other equipment could be adapted to meet the specific needs of a disabled person.

Thompson said she would like Iowa City to be a center for adaptive technology, like Rochester, Minn., is for medical technology. The Department of Human Services would be modeling the clinic on the Mayo Clinic located in Minneapolis.

"This is a large opportunity for Iowa City because it's not being done anywhere else," Thompson said.

"We've got the work force for it," Thompson said. "We've got educated people here who have the skills to do what it would take to make it a success."

Iowa City has a sizable population of persons with disabilities, she added.

At this stage — because they are primarily trying to educate the community about the need for a clinic of this type — the Department of Human Services has not decided how to fund the clinic.

Thompson said the clinic might attract a famous doctor, who could privately fund the establishment. They have also considered working in conjunction with the University Hospital School, but "we're not far enough along yet to say."

Thompson said the increase in the numbers of people with disabilities in the work force and the growing aging population create an increasing need for a clinic.

"It seems to me that more of a market exists than ever before," Thompson said.

House fails to block new lake

DES MOINES (AP) — The House on Friday refused to block construction of a controversial lake at Brushy Creek Valley near Fort Dodge.

The vote moves the state one step closer to construction of the lake, though more battling is likely in the waning days of this year's session.

Backers of the lake said the Legislature should not meddle in decisions by state officials as to where new lakes should go, but critics said opposition to the lake is solid. "If we are to decide what is good planning and what is bad planning, we're subverting that process," said Rep. David Schrader, D-Monroe.

"I have heard from literally hundreds of people about Brushy Creek Lake," said Rep. Dorothy Carpenter, R-West Des Moines. "The people of this state do not want the Brushy Creek Lake built."

A measure that would have blocked construction of the lake drew only 37 votes in the House, 14 short of the number needed for passage. It also would have blocked construction of Lost Grove Lake in Scott County. Earlier this session, the measure won overwhelming approval in the Senate.

The Brushy Creek issue has been fought for two decades, pitting environmentalists who do not want the pristine valley flooded against local officials who see a big potential for tourism and a new outdoor recreation area.

Over the years, the debate has polarized the two sides and the battle has been emotional.

Friday's vote in the House still leaves some questions surrounding the project. Department of Natural Resources officials already have the authority to build the lake, and it will take specific legislation to stop it.

Those officials do not, however, have the money for construction. Critics said they feared a last-minute move by legislative leaders would allow that money to be spent. Lawmakers are spending the final days of this year's session approving a series of nine spending bills to flesh out this year's $2.8 billion state budget.

House Speaker Don Avenson is one of the staunchest supporters of the project, and critics said they were worried about his role.

"I fear we are going to see Brushy Creek built," said Rep. David Osterberg, D-Mount Vernon. "I fear in the last hours of this session, something is going to happen."

But backers of the lake said it is a dangerous precedent to inject partisan politics into decisions about outdoor recreation sites.

Osterberg dismissed that worry, saying the lake has long been politicized.

"The Legislature has not brought politics into this issue," said Osterberg. "The people of Iowa have brought politics into this issue. That's proper and we ought to listen to them."

Other critics argued that the valley would be partially flooded is an irreplaceable outdoor asset.

Anachronists find niche in Iowa City

By Tasha Robinson
Special to The Daily Iowan

Two warriors meet in mortal combat on Union field, each dressed in chain mail and armor, each bearing a sword and shield.

The battle is brief and violent — one of the combatants quickly loses the use of both legs. Fighting on his knees, he manages to cripple his enemy before he perishes. Students pause as the scene stops and stare as the two fighters stand and leave the field together.

When members of the Society for Creative Anachronism clash during their twice weekly combat practices on Union field, their simulated skirmishes tend to provoke questions and curiosity.

The focus of the SCA is on life in the 12th to the 16th centuries. Members develop their own personae, medieval characters "based upon who you would have liked to have been if you had lived in the Middle Ages," said Sue Weinburg, a local member who goes by the name "Amarith Windrider."

The only necessity for participation in the group is a name for each character, but Weinburg said most group members develop complex personal histories, family coats of arms and carefully researched period costuming. Weinburg's own personae is a 12th-century half-English, half-Viking woman — "civilized English, but with wild blood."

The members of Shadowdale — the SCA chapter based in Iowa City — hold events together, often with other SCA chapters in their kingdom. Meetings are normally dedicated to business but, according to Mary Boulet, they often become educational programs as well.

The Iowa City chapter has hosted mini-workshops in period costume design, stained-glass working and medieval cooking. They hold court, feasts and quests. There are dance and instrumental music practices. And, of course, there is armed combat practice.

Brent Buszka travels 80 miles from Waterloo to attend fighting practices on Sundays. He made his own chain mail and weapons, and bought armor plating that fits over his hands, thighs, knees, elbows and shoulders. Although the Cedar Rapids SCA group is closer to him, he said the extra mileage is worth it because of the quality of the Iowa City fighter training.

"Shadowdale has five knights right now, and two of them have been king," Buszka said. "That's rare for a small chapter." Buszka is training as a squire to a local knight, and hopes to be knighted himself someday.

Many members have their own suits of armor, and most have some sort of weapon. Battle tournaments are held regularly, and a "king" is

Members develop their own personae "based upon who you would have liked to have been if you had lived in the Middle Ages." — local SCA member Sue Weinburg chosen every six months of the basis of these tournaments.

The newest rulers are Jim Downey of Iowa City and his wife Martha John — known to the group as Thomas Shaden Secarius and Alix Coeurbois. They were crowned in an ornate coronation ceremony held in Columbia, Missouri in early March. The ceremony was performed entirely in Middle English. As rulers of the Midwest Kingdom of Calontir, they are charged with the SCA's administrative work over the next six months.

"We do this because it's fun," Weinburg said. She joined the SCA a few years ago with several of her friends and now utilizes her calligraphy skills to make scrolls for other members.

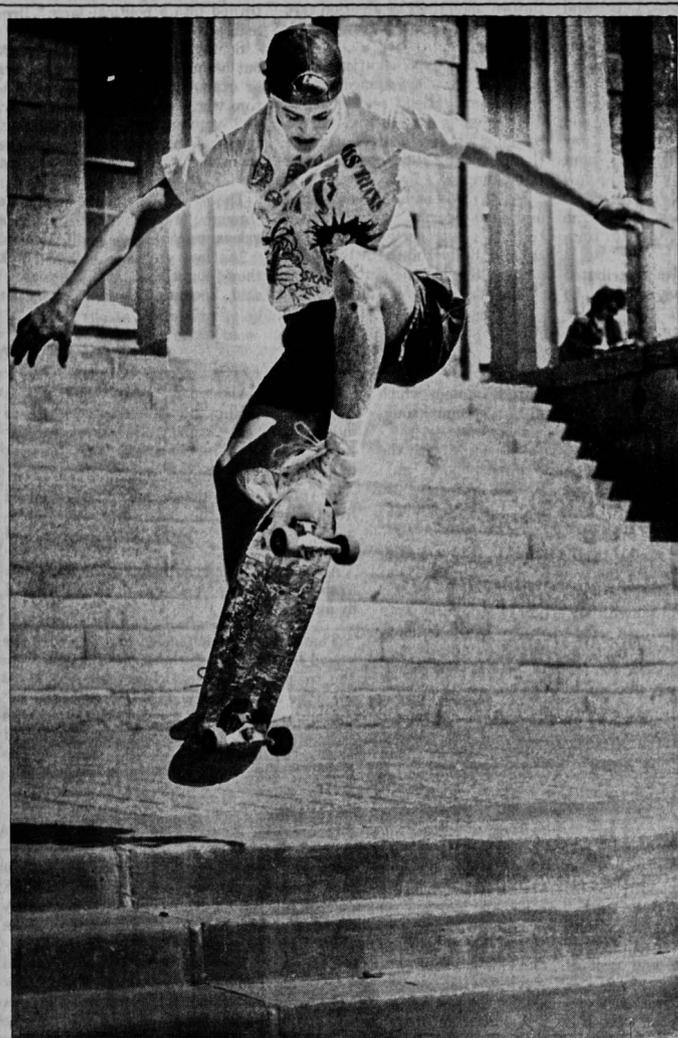

Weinburg said one of the big draws of the group is the courtesy and sense of family among the members. "Members try to live up to the high standard" of old chivalric codes, and the result is a gentle, polite community with shared interests and goals, she said.

Wayne Patton, herald of the local chapter, said he became involved in the group 10 years ago when Shadowdale was first formed. He heard about the chapter through his "Dungeons and Dragons" gaming connections and, after attending the first meeting, realized he knew most of the people and "liked the food."

Although Weinburg said the group's focus is mostly internal, they occasionally get involved in the community upon request. They have done demonstrations at local schools and for Boy Scout troops, and they recently performed a fighting and dancing display at West High School for history, English and physical education classes. They performed at Riverfest, and are usually involved in local events like the Downtown Pedestrian Mall art festival and the Fall Activities Fair.

There are 13 SCA "kingdoms" in the United States, each operating as an independent entity.

Other kingdoms can be found in Australia, Europe and Japan.

Branstad sets campaign tone

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Terry Branstad wanted to make one thing perfectly clear last week when he was questioned about how he would go about approving riverboat gambling.

"You're talking to somebody who is not a gambler," declared Branstad.

There are those who would point to the governor's track record in some confusion after that comment.

This is, after all, the same governor who has presided over the introduction and expansion of pari-mutuel betting, signed into law a state lottery, approved joining the multi-state Lotto America and now has signed on the dotted line for floating casinos.

It would be fair to ask what sort of betting might be legal if there really were a gambler in the governor's mansion, rather than a gambling opponent who only signs what they send him.

There is a larger logic at work, however, and when taken in that context Branstad's "not a gambler" comment makes perfect sense. The governor has never been known to gamble with his political future.

Riverboat gambling is intensely popular in vote-rich eastern Iowa, and its most prominent backers include the same economic development and chamber of commerce types that show up on Branstad's campaign finance reports.

They are the sort of folks who come up with primary opponents when local legislators won't go along, and snap their checkbooks shut when their governor gives them a "just say no" lecture.

The last doubt about where Branstad would come down on the casinos was erased by the character of the opposition. Liberal church groups fought out of fear of exploiting the poor, while conservatives opposed it on moral grounds.

Simply put, conservatives have nowhere else to go and liberals would never vote for Branstad, no matter what he did on riverboat gambling. He can safely ignore both and did so.

The first boat won't begin plying the waters until well after next year's gubernatorial election, so the risk of some kind of scandal is minimal.

Branstad got his lesson in gambling a few years back when he initially vetoed the state's lottery and cited deeply held moral objections about gambling as his reason.

His approval rating plummeted, boos were heard when he was introduced at sporting events and his explanations became increasingly tortured. Faced with that hostile political landscape, he did an about-face.

Unemployment rate drops to 4.5 percent

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's unemployment rate fell two-tenths of a percentage point in March, with the biggest year-to-year growth of the labor force in 10 years, state officials report.

Helped by a seasonal upturn in hiring and continued expansion of Iowa's industrial sector, the state unemployment rate dropped to 4.5 percent last month from a revised 4.7 percent in February and 5.5 percent in March 1988, according to the Department of Employment Services.

The number of working Iowans stood at 1,445,100, the highest level ever recorded for the month of March. That represented a gain of 1,300 from February and 55,700 from March 1988.

Dick Freeman, director of the labor agency, said the 2.7 percent increase in the labor force over the past year was the fastest March-to-March surge in 10 years.

Estimated unemployment stood at 67,800 in March, down from 70,500 in February and from 81,500 in March 1988.

Manufacturing employment reversed a sluggish performance of the past two months, with a gain of 1,100 jobs in March, Freeman said. Industrial employment totaled 1,173,800, compared with 1,165,500 in February and 1,129,000 in March 1988.

Unemployment rates ranged from a low of 1.3 percent in Johnson County and 1.8 percent in Story County to 10.0 percent at Monroe County. Johnson County includes Iowa City, home of the University of Iowa, and Story County includes Ames, home of Iowa State University and the state headquarters of the Iowa Department of Transportation.

Jobless rates at Iowa's large cities, compared with rates in February, are:

- Ames, 1.8 percent, down from 1.9 percent.
- Bettendorf, 3.6 percent, down from 3.9 percent.
- Burlington, 5.8 percent, unchanged.
- Cedar Falls, 3.9 percent, down from 4.0 percent.
- Cedar Rapids, 3.7 percent, unchanged.
- Clinton, 7.4 percent, down from

- 7.8 percent.
- Council Bluffs, 4.6 percent, unchanged.
- Davenport, 6.1 percent, down from 6.6 percent.
- Des Moines, 4.1 percent, down from 4.4 percent.
- Dubuque, 7.0 percent, down from 7.5 percent.
- Fort Dodge, 4.7 percent, up from 4.6 percent.

Boycott

something in the translation, or it is impossible to mention such historical incidents without giving the impression of promoting or condoning the sexist views they reflect."

On April 25, a letter distributed to "graduating seniors, staff and faculty of the UI College of Law," and signed by 11 female law professors said that they had found the quote "thoroughly sexist" and that it contributed to "an inhospitable climate for women at the law college." To protest, the women are boycotting this year's graduation ceremony, the letter said.

"This action is the best way we know of symbolizing the depth and intensity of our concern for the status of all women in the law college," the letter read.

UI clinical law professor Barbara Schwartz, the spokesperson for the 11 women, said the group would not comment to the press as they feel the incident should be kept within "the community of the law school."

Other professors who signed the protest letter also refused to comment.

On April 26, Hines distributed another letter apologizing to the students for the controversy thrown upon their graduation ceremonies, and soliciting any ideas to reconcile the situation.

"There are reconciliation efforts going on behind the scenes to reach an accommodation," said Hines.

Although most students do not condone Hines' choice of material, they feel the action of the boycotters is unfair.

"As strongly as I feel as a woman and as a woman law student, I think it is outrageous," said UI law student Kelly Hnatt. "All they are doing is hurting the students."

"I've waited a long time to get to this point in my life, just to see it turned into a political farce," Beeman said.

Some students are afraid to speak out because they still have papers or exams to be graded by professors who signed the protest letter, and without anonymous grading, they feel the professors might give them a poor grade, one student said.

The professors should have gone through an ombudsperson or a grievance committee, said Beeman.

"As law professors, you'd think they'd know that this is incorrect," said Beeman. "Graduation is for the graduating senior, and the focus should be on the students who are graduating, not whether or not the faculty are attending."

Hnatt agreed. "I don't think they should have accepted his apology, because that helps condone his behavior," said Hnatt. "Action should've been taken, but my big concern is with the form of action taken."

A petition to the "college of law women faculty" is currently being distributed in the law college urging the 11 professors to "reconsider and attend this year's commencement ceremony."

The petition, which has been in circulation since Friday, has been signed by at least 20 to 30 percent of the students, said Ajili Hodari, UI student and president of the Student Activities Board, who wrote the petition.

The undersigned give "full support to the cause for which you stand" but "we do not believe that the graduating senior's finest hour... should be used to demonstrate against the insensitivity you face," said the petition.

Hodari wrote the petition to gauge the students' feelings toward the boycott.

Thatcher said elimination of the weapons would mean that the "Soviet Union will have achieved its objective of getting land-based nuclear weapons out of Europe. This, I believe, would be disastrous for us."

Thatcher at one point appeared to question whether Kohl was in favor of an outright elimination of tactical nuclear weapons. "I'm sure Mr. Kohl will correct me if I have misunderstood him on this issue," she said.

Kohl responded by having his interpreter read a line from his speech to Parliament last week in which he rejected elimination of the tactical nuclear weapons under the present balance of military forces in Europe.

But Kohl also was adamant that the West German position on early talks be acknowledged.

Most of NATO's short-range nuclear weapons are based in West Germany and would be used exclusively on German soil in a war.

Kohl said he hoped a "joint document which takes our special situation into account" could be prepared at the Brussels summit.

"And that has nothing at all to do with the Germans having become unreliable or anything like that," Kohl said, referring to suggestions that West Germany is no longer following agreed-upon NATO doctrine.

"There can be no question of that," Kohl said. "We cannot be outshone by anyone in NATO in our reliability."

Kohl, faced with uncertain election prospects next year, also wants to delay until at least 1992 a decision on modernization and deployment of rockets to replace NATO's aging short-range nuclear arsenal.

Polls show most West Germans no longer believe that the Soviet Union is a military threat and favor eliminating nuclear weapons from Europe.

West European leaders are working to defuse the crisis. Italian and Dutch leaders are to meet with West German officials at separate talks with Thatcher, and West German authorities are going to France.

West Germany claims it has outright support from nearly half the NATO members: Denmark, Belgium, Norway, Italy, Greece and Spain.

About 1,000 people gathered in Deidesheim's town square to greet Thatcher as she arrived by motorcade.

Thatcher, accompanied by Kohl, waved at the crowd as she walked the short distance from the town hall to the Deidesheimerhof Hotel where the talks were held.

Many people waved miniature British flags as she passed by. A handful of protesters carried banners denouncing Thatcher's stand on the missile issue.

SCOPE

additional small shows at the Polo Club and supports the Riverfest Mainstage, according to the SCOPE proposal.

SCOPE selected a new commission last week, and incoming SCOPE Director Amy Weyburg said the commission will request $10,000 in supplemental funding for the diversity fund from the senate in the fall.

"I don't think people know the depth of how much we work with it — the depth of every step that goes on and is done by students," she said.

Students are responsible for booking talent, hiring ushers and leasing the concert area. Production, advertising, security, public relations and talent buyers are SCOPE departments staffed entirely by students.

"Iowa is unique in the fact that students are involved in every aspect of production and promotion," Taylor said.

Taylor said concert promoters are often surprised to hear that the SCOPE staff person they must talk to is unavailable because they are in class. Yet, performers such as Billy Joel, Bon Jovi and U2 are often pleasantly surprised at the students' professionalism, he said.

Billy Joel said Iowa City had been the favorite spot on his world tour two years ago. This, along with the fact that an unprecedented number of people, 97, interviewed for the 17 open commissioner seats and that ticket prices have been kept below the $25-$30 range, attest to SCOPE's success, Taylor said.

"Every show we do doesn't have to make money, but we try to have as much diversity as possible," Taylor said.

A portion of every student's tuition, about $16.81 per semester, is channeled to student groups as mandatory student fees. The senate and CAC are responsible for disbursing the funds to more than 250 student groups.

The Daily Iowan, UI Lecture Committee, UI Recreational Services and KRUI are among the major student mandatory fees recipients.

Senate members, including President Pepe Rojas-Cardona, said it would be possible to grant SCOPE the requested funding from money set aside or unused from the previous year.

The senate's 1989-90 formal budget allows about $27,000 for supplemental funding. Jennifer Fleck, assistant treasurer of the senate, said the additional funding was set aside in light of possible supplemental requests from Student Video Productions Inc., United Students of Iowa or SCOPE.

"To award $10,000 during supplemental funding is rare, but it wouldn't be out of the question. If the senate wanted to do that, the money is there," Fleck said.

take emergency steps to halt strikes, which have cost more than $3 billion in lost production this year. Government leaders are worried that labor unrest could cripple the economy and foment political unrest.

Police had no overall figures on the number of protesters in Seoul, but it appeared below 10,000. Rally organizers had claimed that 100,000 people would take part, but police blocked off outlying towns near Seoul and prevented workers from leaving for the capital.

Riot police guarded bus and train stations in Seoul to turn back people arriving for the rally. They also blocked off the meeting site.

The worst fighting raged for about four hours around Yonsei University, when about 2,000 students and workers tried to march past 5,000 riot police surrounding the campus.

Protesters, many armed with clubs and iron pipes, marched to the beat of drums and gongs.

"Knock down the dictatorship which suppresses the masses!" marchers chanted. "Down with the fascist regime!"

Police armored vans opened fire with multiple tear gas launchers before the marchers reached the main gate. Enraged students charged out of the campus and fired police with hundreds of petrol bombs and rocks.

The police vans fired volley after volley at the charging protesters and police repeatedly charged to drive the attackers back. Thick white clouds of choking gas cloaked the campus.

In the crowded main shopping district, hundreds of protesters briefly clashed with police blocking the rally site. They tore up paving stones to use as ammunition as passers-by ran for cover.

Police seized dozens of protesters in the downtown clashes, beating and kicking many as they were taken away.

Dissident leaders at Yonsei denounced the Roh government as a front for military dictatorship and called for an anti-government uprising.

"Let's fight and knock down the Roh Tae-woo regime... We cannot sit idly. We cannot live like this," said dissident leader Lee Suk-hyung.

The Panamanians charge the United States with interfering in their internal politics.

"In recent weeks, the Noriega regime has taken steps to commit systematic fraud," Bush said last week. "The people and the government of the United States will not recognize fraudulent election results engineered by Noriega."

The Panamanians claim the United States is pouring millions of dollars into the opposition campaigns. The National Endowment for Democracy, a non-profit, federally funded Washington group, provided $99,000 this year to an anti-Noriega coalition, Adelina Reyes-Gavilan, senior program director for Latin America, said.

The Bush administration, citing security, has refused to comment on reports published in April saying the president signed a secret directive to grant the opposition group $10 million.

The State Department recently issued a two-page statement outlining "the activities the Noriega regime is undertaking to control the results of... elections." The paper cited false voter lists, vote buying, fabricated polls, visas aimed at barring foreign observers, coercion, intimidation and detentions.

"The polls are so bad that he'd (Noriega) have to steal it big time," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo.

The liberal Council on Hemispheric Affairs has published several statements charging Noriega with pre-election fraud for financing his candidate with government funds and barring opposition media from operating.

On the conservative side, Michael Wilson, a political analyst with the Heritage Foundation, said rigging the elections was "certain."

Congress approved $100,000 for election observer missions and administration officials say Bush will appoint an official observer team that will include members of Congress, executive branch officials and private citizens.

The administration also is encouraging the efforts of private, watchdog groups and Ken Wollack, executive vice president of the National Democratic Institute, said a group of about 50 people, including 18 Americans, planned to leave Thursday for Panama.

Activists affirm pro-choice zone

By Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

About 50 people gathered in the Downtown Pedestrian Mall on Saturday to reaffirm their support of pro-choice rights for women — a timely issue, as the U.S. Supreme Court heard opening arguments last week in a case that could overturn the 1973 decision giving women a constitutional right to an abortion.

The rally was organized by the Iowa City Reproductive Rights Coalition and featured tables selling buttons and buttons and giving away pamphlets, a bake sale sponsored by men, music and speakers. Signs reading, "Reproductive Freedom — For all women of all classes, races, ages, religions, and sexual identities" and "Iowa City Operation Rescue Free Zone," decorated the plaza next to Godfather's Pizza.

Part of the reason for the rally was to counter the National Day of Action for Operation Rescue, said Anne Johnstone, a member of the coalition.

"The community has made Iowa City Rescue-free... but it's not the last of Operation Rescue, but I can promise them that this community will meet them on this turf," said Gayle Sand, director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women.

Sand said Operation Rescue protesters were not "peaceful demonstrators" and that the fight over abortion rights was "only part of what they call a holy war."

Due to the actions of Operation Rescue protesters in Atlanta, abortion clinics are under "direct siege," Sand said. One clinic had to be protected by barricades, crime tape, barbed wire, mounted police, a SWAT team and squad cars, she said.

Sand shared the feeling of a recent convention of abortion providers she attended that the Supreme Court cannot be "counted on" to save abortion rights.

With the Missouri case of Webster v. Reproductive Health Services presently in the Supreme Court, the fate of Roe v. Wade is questionable, Sand said. She told the audience to be prepared for a "long haul."

"Only with a grassroots response and a collective voice can we stop this intimidation," Sand said.

In the Missouri case, the pro-choice movement will be on the "offensive" trying to create a "safe environment for politicians to be up front about their pro-choice views," Sand said.

Several speakers commended the support of the Iowa City community towards the pro-choice efforts.

"Picketing is uplifting in Iowa City because so many people are pro-choice. You get a lot of support — it is one of the advantages of living in Iowa City," said Carol deProse, a member of the coalition.

Thousands of pamphlets discussing the issues surrounding the Webster v. Reproductive Health Services case have been handed out by weekly pickets on College Street, deProse said.

Active pro-choice efforts did not begin until this year, said Kristie Nelson, a member of the Iowa International Socialist Organization. Pro-choicers must take "militant" action toward the right wing, she said.

Rights for women should not be limited to abortion rights, said Nelson. They should include funding for abortions, and women's demand for better health care.

Businesswoman, mother champions school board

By Jenny Leutzinger
Special to The Daily Iowan

Connie Champion

Though she is part-owner of a local store and a mother of eight, Connie Champion still finds time to devote herself to being a school board president.

Champion has been the Iowa City School Board President since September. Having sent eight children through school, Champion is well aware of the problems and frustrations of the school system, and she is dedicated to solving these problems.

"My main reason for becoming president is that there was low teacher morale. The teachers feel they aren't respected by the top leaders of the district, and this concerns me," Champion said.

The Iowa City School Board is responsible for maintaining educational standards in local schools. It follows up on complaints and deals with other district issues, Champion said.

Educational standards as well as building and financial needs are frequently dealt with by the board.

"Money is the key issue that we've been dealing with the whole year. We are constantly making cuts because the amount the state gives us doesn't cover our expenses," Champion said. "More money is needed to solve morale problems as well as to help the school system meet the needs of each student."

"I'm responsible for organizing the board meetings, and I try to do this in a manner that's most efficient," she added. "I get many phone calls and letters from teachers and citizens. I have to sort these out, finding issues that I think the board should deal with."

Champion works with seven other board members. Together, they meet twice a month to deal with the school district's current concerns and problems.

"It's a wonderful board. We have been very prepared for each meeting," Champion said. "The board has also opened up communication between board members and the school staff. This was a healthy change."

Betsy Hawtrey, vice president for the school board, said Champion has adapted quickly to her leadership role.

"She has been working at learning the work of a president. She is very conscientious," Hawtrey said. "She shares the responsibilities and is not afraid of making mistakes."

By day, Champion is part-owner and manager of Potpourri, a housewares store in the Old Capitol Center.

"I really like working with people. It adds another dimension to what I am doing," Champion said. "I also hope that the business will help my kids through college."

Kerstin VanGilder, Potpourri's other owner, says she is happy to have Champion as a friend as well as partner.

"You cannot find a person more honest or concerned about people than Connie. The kids of the community are very lucky to have her as the school board president," VanGilder said. "She doesn't do anything half-hearted. I am very fortunate to have Connie as my partner," VanGilder said.

Champion and her husband, who is a physician with a private practice, have eight children aged 11 to 24.

"I really think it's neat to have eight children. I absolutely adore them," Champion said. "I really didn't plan to have eight children; I always pictured myself with two children living in the penthouse."

"Teen-agers are a real joy to have around the house. They are really funny. You have to be able to laugh at them and get them to laugh at themselves," Champion said. "They are easily embarrassed by anything. My children get embarrassed when my name is in the paper or I'm on television."

In addition to the already large household, the Champion family has hosted foster children.

"We have had many foster children, but we don't have any now, because the state now makes you take a course, and I'm not willing to because I don't think I need it. The state makes it difficult to take care of other children," Champion said.

"We have had some children on an emergency basis. I'll always take children in on an emergency basis," Champion said.

Champion says that although she sometimes has a hard time managing everything in her life, she feels as though she is living in a dream.

"I have to be very flexible and organized, taking things one day at the time," Champion said. "Most of the time I can get it all together. I have a great life and great kids, a good husband and a good business," Champion said.

Vice president search continues

The Daily Iowan

Four more candidates are interviewing for the vice president for research position at the UI this week and next, according to John F. Kennedy, professor of civil and environmental engineering, and search committee chair.

They are Gordon R. Hopkins, dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences at Florida International University; Benjamin Franklin Hammond, associate dean of academic affairs, University of Pennsylvania School of Dental Medicine; Frederick A. Rossini, director, Office of Interdisciplinary Programs, Georgia Institute of Technology; and Peter E. Nathan, senior program officer, Health Program, MacArthur Foundation.

Hopkins was on campus April 24-25; Hammond April 27-28; Rossini will be on campus May 1-2; and Nathan May 4-5.

Last week the committee interviewed Marla P. Peterson, who has served as a faculty member in the Department of Educational and Counseling Psychology at the University of Tennessee since 1985 and before that as dean of research at the university from 1981-1985.

FSX with or without U.S.

The Bush administration should be congratulated on an agreement it concluded with Japan on Friday. Under the plan, the United States and Japan will collaborate to build the FSX — a more technologically advanced version of the F-16 fighter jet.

But the administration faces some strong opposition from members of Congress who say the plan involves sharing too much U.S. technology. By giving it away, Congressional gurus argue, we establish a relationship that almost solely benefits the Japanese civilian aircraft industry.

But two key provisions to the agreement — added at Bush's insistence — will protect U.S. military and commercial interests. One guarantees the U.S. firm, General Dynamics, 40 percent of the $5 billion production cost of putting out the 130 planes. The other restricts the use of U.S. flight control and weaponry software so that Japan would only be able to access certain basic computer codes.

Japan's technological sophistication in other arenas is fact. It is only a matter of time before their military technology reflects the success that country has achieved in its industrial sector.

Congress should support the project primarily because it halts Japanese plans to develop a new aircraft on its own.

By entering into this agreement, the United States stands to gain more than Japan in that — at least in this endeavor — we know what to expect and when.

Better with us than without us.

Ignorance no excuse

In yet another lawsuit based not on reason but on a lack of common sense, a Seattle, Wash., woman is suing Jim Beam Brands Co.

Candance Thorp, an admitted alcoholic, brought a lawsuit against the company charging the company with negligence after her son was born with Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. FAS is marked by severe birth defects. In this case, Thorp's son will require lifetime care — care she contends Jim Beam Brands is liable for.

She admits to drinking with her husband in the morning before he left for work, drinking alone while doing housework during the day, and drinking at night. She admits to drinking half a fifth of Jim Beam per day during her pregnancy. She also admitted to drinking herself unconscious "at times" during her pregnancy.

Add to this evidence the fact that she had participated in numerous alcohol treatment programs prior to her pregnancy.

The question facing the jury is, of course, who is to blame for Thorp's ignorance of alcohol-induced birth defects.

No one held Thorp down and forced her to slam Jim Beam all day long. She chose to drink, she therefore chose to force her unborn child to ingest massive amounts of alcohol. It seems unlikely, given the evidence, that Thorp would have been able to quit drinking no matter who warned her.

Thorp is sick. She suffers from a disease as do millions of Americans — a disease that impairs mental faculties, and in this case robbed the victim of all common sense. A sympathetic jury may side with Thorp, but a rational one will acquit the liquor company.

Ethics at gunpoint

Last week in Chicago, a man walked into the hospital room where his 16-month-old brain-damaged and comatose son was connected to a life-support system. The man pulled out a gun, unhooked his son's life support, and held hospital workers at bay until his son had died. The father was later charged with murder.

Emotions run high on both sides when such an incident takes place. Doubtless, the father had been devastated by what had happened to his son, which certainly affected his judgment and actions. Our society's reactions include sympathy for the parties involved, both the suffering parents and especially the infant. In addition to our emotional response, the tragedy in Chicago demands a reasoned analysis.

Here was a situation where life was being artificially sustained while the quality of life had all disappeared and there was no hope for a better existence. The fact remains, however, that the father ended his son's life without the medical or legal authority to do so.

The boy's family had been planning to meet with an attorney to discuss their legal options in the case when the incident occurred. This would have been the proper way to proceed, with action being taken by people with the proper authority to do so.

Many similar such cases exist where life continues in a hopeless state. A day may come when our society will allow the painless and humane termination of life for people such as the comatose baby, or those suffering from terminal illness or the last stages of Alzheimer's disease. If this ever happens, it should and will be carried out via a process of laws, not men with guns.

Even in such a tragic case, actions should not be allowed where people take the law — and the lives of others — into their own hands.

It's a twister; it's a twister

If I meet my Maker during tornado season, it will be with a glass of beer in one hand and the building which houses the Yacht Club caved in on my head. You see, my building has almost no basement. Last Wednesday, I fled my second story apartment for the only storm cellar I know. The woman tending bar recognized me immediately.

"Hey, I haven't seen you since the last tornado we had. Is it getting that bad outside?"

The "last time" she spoke of was what I now call the 1988 Mother's Day tornado. At the moment my sister, who had gone home for the day like a decent daughter, was trying to decide whether to leap from her car and dive face-down into the ditch off westbound I-80, I was standing on Linn St. looking up at the sky like Auntie Em, wondering where the hell I was supposed to go.

Pickings were slim. There was the laundry room, but I had no desire to mix it up in close quarters with four Maytags on the way to over-the-rainbow. There was the Senior Citizens' Center, but even at 31 I refuse to die playing shuffleboard.

Consideration of alternatives was broken up by whining emergency sirens, followed by the sound of the children thumping downstairs. Not my children, exactly, but I am one of those women a bit old for the apartment building she inhabits. I remain because I play my stereo as loud as the pups, and I like the cosmopolitan style of life. After all, it leaves me to choose whether I wish to die from a tornado in a used clothing store, the Jefferson Building, or bathrooms at Great Midwestern or Mickey's.

"Hey! Where you gonna go?" one of them asked. We gathered in the laundry room to discuss options. "I'm not too keen on the Senior Citizens' Center, but it is right across the street," I said.

"Wow. I can't believe this," a young woman offered. She tousled her hair, which occupied most of the room as well as her intellectual focus.

"Man, it's bad out there," someone whispered. A fellow on the outer boundary of the huddle bolted back upstairs. "Whitney! I forgot Whitney!" I raised one eyebrow. When he returned, it was as bad as I'd feared. "Hey — don't laugh," he told us. "She autographed this for me herself." Whitney Houston... God," he sighed, kissing the framed photo fervently. That decided me.

"I'm going to the Yacht Club. I don't know if they're open yet, but there's room in the basement even if it's closed." By then the depth of darkness had activated street lights. No air moved, birds flew in soundless circles and sirens continued to wail. It was an eerie walk. We humans share a tendency to believe we possess our environment. "My street," I say. That sense of smug proprietorship evaporated when destruction's hot breath hit my neck. Succumbing to cliché, I thought of death, of what my family was doing. How would they feel if I was scooped up that instant and hurled against the Senior Citizens' Center to die?

I remembered childhood, how tornado warnings on television threw the family into an uproar. Leading the charge was my mother, who always argued for heading to the basement. She brushed us all along exactly as if we were a brood of chicks under her wing. Somehow she included my father, who stands 6'6" to her 5'3".

In what remains a mystery, one child managed to escape sitting in the musty basement listening to transistor reports of funnel cloud sightings in Henry County until the all-clear was given. My oldest sister was a sort of family goddess who always managed to do exactly as she pleased, even when mother was wiggling out over storm warnings. If she was having a nap, she just stayed in bed. Mom would send one of us up to fetch her.

"Wake up! There's a tornado warning! Come down to the basement!" She wiggled under the covers as if brushing a fly away. "I mean it! It's really bad outside! Do you want to get blown away?"

She rolled over to confront her disturber, who always hoped for some cussing. She cussed in front of mom; the only one old enough to do so. She was good at it, too. We idolized and feared her. "Jesus Christ," (she stretched this out over many disgusted syllables, filling us with awe) — "if I'm gonna get blown away, I'm gonna get blown away. Leave me the hell alone."

My sister was legendary among us for at least two things: her appetite for sleep, and her ferocity upon being awakened from it. On tornadoless days, we delighted in waking her by sneaking into her room to giggle. Our aim was to make her angry enough to throw books at us. She was a voracious reader — books were stacked under her bed. We found it the height of hilarity when, from under the pile of blankets, books and cusswords rained like snow from a blower as we ran down the stairs to safety. We screeched with special joy when she was mad enough to throw hardbacks. "Heavy artillery! Strategic retreat!"

Each of us enjoyed taking our turn telling mom. "I tried, but she won't get out of bed." Mom was always put out by this. "Oh, go try again. She could be killed," she'd say, forgetting the risk of death faced by any child going back up. Dad, who always tried to inject some common sense into these proceedings, grumbled at her in an immense voice, "Oh, Lord, Mary. Let her sleep. Not a damned thing's gonna happen."

Not a damned thing ever did, either. One thing to remember during the next storm warning: "Oh, Auntie Em! Uncle Henry! There's no place like home!"

Crappy article

To the Editor:

Andy Brownstein offers a good example of subjective journalism in "Activists occupy ROTC office." (The Daily Iowan, Apr. 21). Instead of focusing on the issue of U.S. military aid to El Salvador, Brownstein shifts the focus of his article to the issue of Student Senate funding of New Wave.

Brownstein deliberately attempts to discredit New Wave's cause — to end U.S. military aid to El Salvador — through his use of highly subjective language. He characterizes New Wave's position as an "extreme stance," labels the group a "radical leftist" group, and quotes Sgt. Maj. Jackson's opinion that members of New Wave ought to "bathe once and a while." It is obvious that Brownstein, abandoning the principle of objective journalism commonly accepted by professionals, is making a thinly veiled attempt to undermine New Wave's position.

In addition to his use of subjective language, Brownstein avoids the issue of U.S. military aid to El Salvador by questioning the Student Senate's funding of New Wave. He points out that New receives $3,000 a year and adds Jackson's enlightened, educated remark, "That's a bunch of crap. They don't need my tax dollars to do stuff like that."

If tax money is so important to Brownstein and Jackson, they may be interested to know that much more U.S. tax money is used to bomb Salvadoran villages and to fund right-wing death squads than to fund New Wave. The Salvadoran government receives about $300 million in military aid each year from the United States. Since 1981, the year military aid to El Salvador was reinstated, right-wing death squads — reported to be directly linked to the Salvadoran military — have slaughtered an estimated 70,000 people.

I think it is clear that what is at issue is not New Wave funding or how often New Wave members bathe, but the U.S.-funded massacre of thousands of innocent people. Frankly, I don't believe they need our tax money to do crap like that.

The only thing I can figure out is the people that put on these shows never have been to western Pennsylvania or eastern Kentucky or North Texas or East Wendover, Utah, and so they never have figured out how boring most of these people are. It's kinda like when you go to London, and ever single person you meet is interesting just cause of the way they talk. And that lasts about one day, and then you find out they're even more boring than the people back home. So the novelty wears off.

I think that's probly it. These people play a little Beethoven, make themselves feel better, and then they say "Here's a person I'd probly never even say howdy to if I saw em in the dirt, but come on, it'll be fun to listen to em for five minutes." And then all those people waitin' on the Monteverdi Retrospective to come on can think to themselves, "Yeah, boy that was real America, wasn't it? I'm glad we've got that in America. I'm glad we've got zoos, and I'm glad we've got those people. Very good." And then they put on some more of the "Symphonic Interlude for Tuba and Oboe."

Yeah, I think that's probly what it is.

Cheney predicts perestroika will end with Gorbachev's rule

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush does not share Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's view that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev will fail in his efforts to reform the Soviet Union, a senior White House aide said Sunday.

"I think the president and Secretary (of State James) Baker... are hoping that Gorbachev's movement towards reform and restructuring the Soviet Union does succeed," White House chief of staff John Sununu said on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press."

"It is an opportunity to establish a relationship, continue the relationship that has begun," he said. Referring to Cheney's prediction that Gorbachev will fail, Sununu said, "I don't think that is the president's view."

Bush, en route to New York, declined to comment directly on Cheney's comments, saying "I never comment until I know exactly what he said."

Pressed for views on Gorbachev, Bush said, "We want perestroika to succeed."

Cheney predicted in an interview broadcast Saturday that Gorbachev ultimately will fail and be replaced by a leader less friendly to the West, and he argued against major unilateral arms control concessions.

The conflicting administration assessments of Gorbachev's chances for success come amid a debate within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization over whether to modernize short-range U.S. Lance nuclear missiles stationed in West Germany.

German chancellor Helmut Kohl has called for immediate negotiations with the Soviets on eliminating short-range nuclear missiles, a step the Bush administration opposes on grounds it will leave

Mikhail Gorbachev

NATO ground forces exposed to larger Warsaw Pact armies.

Gorbachev tightened his grip on power last week by forcing the retirement of 74 aging members of the 301-member Communist Party Central Committee. But the party newspaper Pravda subsequently published speeches by local party leaders saying Gorbachev's reforms were in trouble and had worsened rather than improved the economy.

Against this turbulent backdrop, the Bush administration has been conducting a strategic review embracing U.S.-Soviet relations, and plans to resume negotiations in earnest with a planned trip to Moscow on May 10 by Secretary of State James Baker.

"I think it would undo basic commitments to the alliance and, until we know that Gorbachev is for real and that the changes he wants to bring about are irreversible, it's a terrible mistake for us to withdraw from Europe," Cheney said.

"I think you really have to distinguish between what he is trying to do and whether or not he's actually going to be able to do it," Cheney said.

"And I think the bottom line is that if I had to guess today, I would guess that he would ultimately fail; that is to say, that he would not be able to reform the Soviet economy to turn it into an efficient, modern society," said Cheney.

"And when that happens, he's likely to be replaced by somebody who will be far more hostile than he has been in terms of his attitude toward the West," he said.

Afghan rebels claim attack on Kabul destroyed 4 planes

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas claimed Sunday that they destroyed four airplanes and a helicopter in a rocket attack on an air force base 30 miles outside Afghanistan's capital, Kabul.

It brings to eight the number of aircraft the insurgents claim to have destroyed at the Bagram base since April 21.

The guerrilla-run Afghan News Agency said the latest attack occurred Thursday, the 11th anniversary of the coup that brought the Communists to power in Afghanistan. Guerrillas have been fighting since then to topple the Communists.

There was no independent confirmation of their claims.

Rebel sources reported heavy fighting north of Kabul in addition to the eastern provinces of Nangarhar, Paktia and Kandahar.

Al-Bunyan, a news service of fundamentalist guerrilla leader Abdul Rasul Sayyaf, said guerrillas have killed 40 government troops, destroyed four tanks and shot down one jet in Kandahar since April 15.

Twenty-five guerrillas died and 32 were wounded during the same period, Al-Bunyan said.

The guerrillas, who are based in Pakistan, have said Kandahar will be their second major offensive. Their first offensive, on the city of Jalalabad, is at a stalemate after several weeks of fighting.

The Daily Iowan/Michael R. Eacott

The Jalalabad assault began three weeks after the last Soviet forces left Afghanistan.

The Afghan News Agency said government forces at Jalalabad have begun shifting their families to Kabul, 70 miles to the west, to escape the rebel onslaught.

The capture of Jalalabad would give the rebels a badly needed victory in their struggle to establish an Islamic republic and a crucial urban foothold for an assault on Kabul.

Teen-ager faces trial for stoning

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A 15-year-old Palestinian-American pleaded innocent Sunday to charges of stone-throwing, three months after he was arrested and held without bail.

Puerto Rico-born Mansour Abed Al-Samad stood before a three-man military tribunal and denied charges that on Jan. 23 he helped erect roadblocks and threw stones at an Israeli army patrol in the West Bank village of Surda, 13 miles north of Jerusalem.

The troops shot in the air and chased after the youth. No one was wounded in the incident and only Samad was caught by the soldiers.

Since the beginning of the 14-month-old Palestinian uprising, more than 20,000 Palestinians, many of them youths like Samad, have been detained and have faced military trials for throwing stones or similar crimes.

The violence has killed 456 Palestinians and 18 Israelis.

Sunday's hearing was the first time Samad appeared in court since his arrest three months ago. He received two trial dates in March but the army failed to bring him to the court, giving no explanation.

Samad's attorney, Ahmed Sayyad, said he wanted to request bail but could not because he had to bring his client, who was not permitted to leave prison.

Sayyad said he does not expect his client will receive special treatment because of his U.S. citizenship.

A representative from the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem visited Samad while he was imprisoned and a consular official was present at the trial.

Samad, wearing faded blue jeans and a dusty denim jacket, walked into the courthouse Sunday morning, handcuffed and flanked by two Israeli soldiers carrying Uzi submachine guns.

As the soldiers removed Samad's steel handcuffs, his mother burst into tears and his 6-year-old brother ran toward him to hug him. The soldiers stood aside for a few minutes before escorting Samad to the prisoner's dock.

Samad pleaded not guilty to the charges against him. He said he was walking to the market when the incident occurred and was arrested by soldiers who mistakenly thought he was involved in the stone-throwing.

The verdict and sentencing are both expected this Thursday. Samad faces three to 10 months if convicted.

3 short-range nuclear weapons slated for discarding by Navy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has decided to retire three short-range nuclear weapons that account for 5 percent of the total stockpile of U.S. warheads, Navy officials said Sunday.

By 1991, the Navy will retire the ASROC nuclear depth charge, the SUBROC missile and the Terrier missile — a total of 1,100 warheads, according to Navy officers and documents released under the Freedom of Information Act.

The weapons originally were intended to provide a nuclear deterrent against attacks on surface ships by Soviet warships and submarines. But Navy strategists now believe they can protect U.S. ships from other ships by other means and see a greater threat from Backfire and Badger bombers based on the Soviet mainland.

The decision to unilaterally discard the weapons was contained in documents obtained by an independent analyst, William Arkin, was first reported in Sunday editions of The New York Times, and confirmed Sunday by Navy officers who spoke on condition they not be further identified.

It was not clear why the Bush administration chose to take such a major step without public announcement and apparently has not sought to include the weapons in negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The decision was prompted by the realization that the United States has more aircraft carriers and large surface vessels than the Soviet Union, and that such ships are vulnerable to nuclear attack, said Navy officers.

"There is a recognition that if there is a nuclear war at sea, we have got more to lose than the Russians," the Times quoted Vice Admiral Henry Mustin, who retired last year after serving as deputy chief of Naval Operations.

"The concept of a nuclear war at sea is a concept whose time has passed. It is in the interest of the country to persuade that the time has passed," Mustin said in the published report.

Arkin said another reason for the decision appears to be a shift in emphasis by the Navy from short-range weapons to nuclear-tipped Tomahawk cruise missiles. The Tomahawk can fly below enemy radar and strike targets, such as bomber airfields on the Soviet mainland, at ranges up to 1,300 miles.

Inquiry into baby food scare continues

LONDON — A supermarket chain said Sunday it will resume selling canned baby food of the two leading brands because it found no tampering in a check of its stock following a contamination scare.

However, the Tesco company's 375 stores will keep glass jars of baby food made by H.J. Heinz Co. and Cow and Gate Ltd. off their shelves while police continue investigating more than 300 reports of contamination, the retailer said.

Boots, a drugstore chain with more than 1,000 stores, and the Asda food chain also have stopped selling glass jars of the two brands of baby food.

Reports of taintings with glass shards, pieces of razor blades and caustic soda first surfaced April 7. Most reports involved Heinz or Cow and Gate baby food, but several were in other brands.

Police said most of the reports of contamination were mistakes, hoaxes, or copycat crimes. Scotland Yard, which is coordinating the national inquiry, said several arrests have been made.

Four killed in Georgia plane crash

DAHLONEGA, Ga. — Four people, including an infant, were killed when their small plane crashed and burst into flames in a rural, mountainous region, authorities said Sunday.

One passenger, a young girl, survived the crash, said Richard Coughlin, chief investigator for the Lumpkin County Sheriff's Department. She was listed in stable condition Sunday at St. Joseph's Hospital in Dahlonega, Coughlin said.

The names of the victims were being withheld pending notification of their families.

The plane, a single-engine Beechcraft, was en route to Lumpkin County from Griffin when it crashed on Gooch Mountain about 9 a.m. Saturday, Coughlin said.

Coughlin said county authorities, along with the Civil Air Patrol and the U.S. Forest Service, were not able to reach the crash site until 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

"We know that the weather conditions on yesterday morning were poor, but we cannot attribute the crash to the weather," he said.

Middle school lifts ban on rock T-shirts

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Middle-school students can go back to wearing their rock band T-shirts Monday, but their principal says lifting a prohibition on the shirts isn't a victory for those who protested the ban.

The school last week banned students from wearing T-shirts with the insignias of the rock bands Guns N' Roses and Black Sabbath because the two bands' music was tied to recent cult murders in Matamoros, Mexico.

"It is not a matter of winning or losing, it's a matter of educating youngsters so that we have caring and understanding and educated young people," said J.T. Landes, principal at Washington Middle School.

The ban was enacted because of concerns raised by parents, he said.

About 150 students protested Thursday, saying the ban violated their constitutional right to free speech. About 60 pupils served one-day suspensions Friday for defying the ban.

"Just because we're little doesn't mean we don't know about the Constitution," said one eighth-grader, Kanong Yank, 14.

Man on rampage shoots 15 in England

WHITLEY BAY, England (AP) — A man dressed all in black and armed with a shotgun went on a 15-minute shooting spree Sunday in a northeastern coastal town, killing one man and injuring 14 people before being arrested, officials said.

Police were questioning the man to determine the motive for his rampage in Monkseaton, about a mile from the Whitley Bay seaside resort and 250 miles northeast of London.

The gunman, who was not identified, roamed the streets shooting at anyone he saw, including one person in a car, another on a bicycle, one in a garden and one outside a church, said a spokesman for a local ambulance service.

"There must have been about 12 different locations given where this man had gone round," said Ken Heads, superintendent of the Northumbria ambulance service. "He was having a go at any person he met."

Witnesses said the gunman was dressed all in black, with dark sunglasses and his hair in a pony tail. They said he wore an ammunition belt around his waist and prowled the streets for 15 minutes, pausing only to shoot.

Ten-year-old Ryan Boyd told the British Broadcasting Corp. TV News: "He was just running around with his gun from side to side shooting people."

Police later said the man they arrested was a 22-year-old from Whitley Bay. They did not give his name.

After the shooting spree, he drove to a pub, where authorities seized him without any gunfire, police said. Detective Superintendent Bob Benton said the suspect's vehicle contained a loaded shotgun, cartridges, and a hunting knife.

Speaking at a news conference, Benton said the arrested man was not believed to have known personally any of the people he shot.

The first emergency call came at 12:01 p.m., Heads said. Two shots were fired at the ambulance as it arrived, and the crew had to dive for cover, he said.

Shuttle launch delayed by fuel pump

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The launch of Atlantis was scrubbed Friday less than a minute before its planned liftoff when controllers detected a sudden electrical surge in a main engine fuel pump. On board were five astronauts, as well as a robot probe that NASA is sending to Venus.

The astronauts returned to crew quarters as NASA managers met to discuss the failure and determine whether they could make a second launch attempt on Saturday.

The postponement set back NASA's plan to eject its robot Magellan spacecraft out of the shuttle, toward Venus. The $550 million Magellan mission would revitalize NASA's unmanned space science program.

Among tens of thousands who gathered for the rare afternoon liftoff were some of the country's most renowned planetary scientists. They have been waiting to resume solar system exploration since 1978, when Pioneer-Venus was launched.

"That's just the way it is," shrugged James Head, a geologist from Brown University. "We've got a nice, long launch window," he said, noting that NASA has until May 28 to get Magellan on its way.

Atlantis' astronauts were strapped in and the countdown was advancing toward a launch, with less than a minute to go, when a controller detected something wrong on a monitor and informed launch director Bob Sieck: "Possible problem with an Engine 1 recirculation pump . . . recommend hold at T-31 seconds."

Cavs even series with Chicago

RICHMOND, Ohio (AP) — Ron Harper outscored Michael Jordan 31-30, and Larry Nance scored eight points during a 13-6 third-quarter flurry as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Chicago Bulls 96-88 Sunday to even their NBA playoff series. The best-of-five series, tied 1-1, moves to Chicago for two games beginning Wednesday, with the fifth game, if needed, to be played at Cleveland on Sunday.

Harper scored 21 points in the first half, a team playoff record, and put the Cavaliers ahead 49-47 at half-time on a driving layup with two seconds left.

Chicago, which was 0-6 against Cleveland during the regular season before winning Friday's playoff opener, got two Jordan baskets and a Craig Hodges 3-pointer to go up 62-59 with five minutes left in the third quarter.

Pistons 102, Celtics 95

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Isaiah Thomas, celebrating his 28th birthday, scored 14 of his 26 points in the third quarter Sunday and the Detroit Pistons overcame a nine-point deficit to beat the Boston Celtics 102-95 to take a 2-0 lead in their first-round NBA playoff series.

The best-of-5 series resumes Tuesday at Boston Garden.

Boston, which led by as many as nine points in the third quarter, started the fourth quarter with an 82-81 lead. But a 3-pointer by Mark Aguirre gave Detroit an 88-86 lead with 9:50 remaining and the Pistons never relinquished it.

Kevin Gamble, who averaged 22.8 points subbing for injured Dennis Johnson in the Celtics final six regular-season games, suffered a groin pull in the opener, leaving Boston with only 10 players for Game 2. Larry Bird, who missed the final 76 Boston games after foot surgery Nov. 19, is the 12th man on the Celtics' roster but didn't make the trip. Bird may see action in Game 3.

Lakers 113, Trail Blazers 105

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson scored 35 points, 20 as Los Angeles took control in the first half, and had 12 assists as the two-time defending NBA champion Lakers beat Portland 113-105 Sunday in their opening playoff series.

The Lakers led the best-of-five 2-0 and can advance to the second round with a victory Wednesday night at Portland.

Clyde Drexler led the Trail Blazers with 28 points despite missing most of the first quarter after he quickly drew his third personal foul. Terry Porter and Jerome Kersey had 21 points each.

Ahead 14-11 midway through the opening quarter, Los Angeles outscored the Trail Blazers 19-12 to open a 12-point lead at the end of the period.

Portland played most of the opening quarter without Drexler, who picked up his third foul just 3:20 into the game and was quickly replaced by Sam Bowie.

The Trail Blazers pulled within 69-62 at 6:42 of the third period, but the Lakers went on to take an 86-76 advantage into the final period.

The Lakers quickly stretched their lead in the first three minutes of the fourth quarter, moving ahead 98-78, then coasting to the win.

SuperSonics 109, Rockets 97

SEATTLE (AP) — Alton Lister and Xavier McDaniel each scored 20 points and the Seattle SuperSonics broke open a close game in the final quarter to beat the Houston Rockets 109-97 Sunday and take a 2-0 lead in their NBA first-round playoff series.

The Sonics can clinch the best-of-5 series Wednesday night in Houston.

With Lister scoring eight points in the last quarter, Seattle broke away after leading 75-73 going into the period.

The Sonics' win came despite a 30-point, 12-rebound, 10-dunk performance by the Rockets' Akeem Olajuwon.

Sedale Threatt came off the bench in relief of Nate McMillan to spark the Sonics at point guard in the fourth quarter. Threatt had four free throws and three assists in the period and finished with 16 points.

Michael Cage, benched in the last 10 games of the regular season when the Sonics went to McDaniel as a starting forward, added 16 points on 7-for-8 shooting.

Iowa breaks ice at Drake Relays

Kruckeberg named meet's top athlete

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

After a 13-year drought, the Iowa women's track team found Drake Relays gold — twice.

Jeanne Kruckeberg won the 1,500-meter run in 4 minutes, 25 seconds and the Iowa team of Tami Hoskins, Bev Powell, Kim Schneckloth and Kruckeberg won the first distance medley to ever be run in the history of the meet in 11:22.18.

"It's very important for our program to break the ice," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said of the wins. "It's especially important in a big meet like this. Once a team experiences victory, they get a taste for it. I hope that happens to us."

In addition to the individual crowns, Kruckeberg was named the outstanding women's athlete of the meet. The Claremont, Minn., native also anchored the 3,200-meter relay team to a second-place finish.

"It's kind of exciting," Kruckeberg said. "I just don't try to worry about these kinds of things, but it's good recognition for the school."

The Hawkeye 3,200 team cut the tape in 8:49.38, less than two seconds behind Louisiana State at 8:47.49. Schneckloth, Rachelle Roberts and Tami Hoskins also ran in the relay.

"(Kruckeberg) had a deficit of 20 meters when she took over," Hassard said. "She cut it close, got the crowd going and nearly caught them at the end."

The distance medley win might have held a bit more importance for one member of the Iowa team. In the 3,200-meter relay two years ago at Drake, Schneckloth lost a sizeable lead in her first year running for the Hawkeyes.

"I did want to redeem myself at this meet," Schneckloth said. "I had a lot of people watching me and plus it's an important meet all by itself."

The distance medley is segmented into legs of 800, 400, 1,200 and 1,600 meters. Schneckloth turned in a time of 3:30.4 in the third leg of the relay.

"I thought Kim ran a super race," Hassard said. "It was particularly satisfying for her and I to see her on a winning relay team."

Kruckeberg ran the 3,200 just an hour before taking the 1,500 title.

"My first two laps didn't really go as well as I liked," Kruckeberg said. "They were really slow. I didn't mind (racing so soon). If I wait too long between races I get dead."

Kruckeberg had run a sub-2:20.00 time in the 1,500 earlier this year, but the Iowa coach said the win was strong under the conditions.

"It wasn't a particularly fast time," Hassard said, "but under the circumstances, it was a good race. It was a chilly, bracing wind and she had run earlier."

"She ran conservatively in the beginning and kicked it in."

The Iowa sprint medley team was the only other upper-level finish of the weekend. Out of 31 squads initially in the event, the Hawkeyes made the finals, coming in eighth. Karen Chevalleau, Peggy McGuire, Karen Layne and Powell finished in 1:46.45.

"There were a lot of teams in that event and to come in eighth was pretty good," Hassard said. "That event had a particularly strong field. It was good to make the finals."

Hawks lose grip on Big Ten lead

By Brad Sparesus
The Daily Iowan

It was nice while it lasted.

The Iowa baseball team tumbled out of first place in the Big Ten after losing three games to Michigan State in a four-game series at East Lansing, Mich.

The Hawkeyes won the first game of Friday's doubleheader 7-5 before losing the final three games of the series, 3-2, 9-1 and 6-4.

Michigan took over the lead in the Big Ten with a 13-4 league mark after winning 3-of-4 from Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes are 13-7 in the conference and 32-13 overall.

The Michigan State series capped a 10-game week for Iowa.

"The week caught up with us," Iowa Coach Duane Banks said. "I was proud of the way we came back, and never stopped playing hard."

Spartan Alexi Gagin hit a three-run home run in the bottom of the seventh inning of Saturday's nightcap to give Michigan State the series win.

The Hawkeyes took a 4-2 lead into the bottom of the seventh inning of the series finale, before the Spartans rallied for four runs, three on Gagin's first collegiate homer.

The loss was charged to Brian Kennedy, 3-2. Michigan State's Eric Darkowski, 5-0, pitched a six-hit complete game for the Spartans.

In Saturday's first game, Spartan pitcher Eric Methner fired a four-hitter and three teammates homered in Michigan State's win.

Methner, 3-3, got offensive help from Scott Makarewicz. His three-run homer in the sixth inning was the 27th of his career, tying the school record.

Michigan State's Dan Masteller and Rich Juday hit solo homers against Hawkeye starter John DeJarld, 6-3 on the season.

DeJarld was coming off a two-hit performance in a win over Minnesota, making his third start of the week. The junior set a new Iowa season record for complete games with eight.

"The record is great but I wasn't ready to pitch Saturday," DeJarld said. "I may have been tired, but during the Big Ten season you have to have the strength to pitch the long innings."

MLB investigators trace check to Rose

CINCINNATI (AP) — Investigators for major league baseball have traced a $10,000 check drawn on Pete Rose's trust account to Paul Janszen, an FBI informant who has accused Rose of betting on baseball games, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The money was used to pay Janszen's lawyer, Merlyn D. Shiverdecker, for representing the former bodybuilder in a federal tax evasion case, The Cleveland Plain Dealer quoted unidentified sources as saying.

Janszen, 31, has claimed he was the middleman between the Cincinnati Reds manager and Franklin, Ohio, restaurateur Ron Peters, who federal authorities claim handled $1 million in bets from Rose, baseball's all-time hits leader.

The check, signed by Rose's lawyer and agent, Reuven Katz of Cincinnati, was deposited in the bank account of Shiverdecker on March 22, 1988, The Plain Dealer said.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified Hamilton County Bar Association official as saying Janszen used the check to pay Shiverdecker.

Shiverdecker on Sunday said he considers amounts he is paid by clients a private matter and declined to comment further.

Rose was in Philadelphia Sunday where the Reds played the Phillies. In the lower left-hand corner of the check was the notation "loan," but investigators said they could find no documents verifying a loan agreement between Janszen and Rose, The Plain Dealer said.

Rose associates on Saturday also characterized the $10,000 check as a loan, but investigators say they can find no written agreement that spells out terms for repayment.

"The thing that's interesting about this $10,000 is that if Pete made a loan to Janszen, why isn't there anything to show how it's got to be paid back?" the newspaper quoted a lawyer involved in the case as saying.

Ryan stops Rangers with 3-hitter in first battle of Texas fastballers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan won the first battle between the best fastball pitchers in Texas, leading the Rangers past Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox 2-1 Sunday on Rafael Palmeiro's two-run homer in the eighth inning.

The 42-year-old Ryan, who lives in Alvin, Texas, allowed three hits in eight innings and struck out 11, the 184th time in his career he struck out 10 or more. His 49 strikeouts in 35 innings lead the American League.

Ryan, 3-1, took a no-hitter into the ninth inning against Toronto last Sunday before Nelson Liriano broke it up with a one-out triple. This time, Ryan didn't allow a hit until Danny Heep's two-out single in the fifth. Ryan threw 136 pitches before Jeff Russell relieved to start the ninth and struck out two of the three batters he faced for his fifth save.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Al Newman's run-scoring single snapped a seventh-inning tie and Roy Smith and Jeff Reardon combined on a five-hitter Sunday as Minnesota stopped a seven-game losing streak.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs reinstated catcher Damon Berryhill to their 24-man roster Sunday and recalled outfielder Dwight Smith from Iowa.

They also optioned catcher Joe Girardi and infielder-outfielder Phil Stephenson to Iowa.

Berryhill was placed on the 15-day disabled list April 3 with tendinitis in his right shoulder. He began an injury rehabilitation assignment at Iowa last Monday. He worked in six games and threw out four of six runners attempting to steal.

Smith, 25, will be taking his first trip to the major leagues. He was batting .321 at Iowa.

Russians dump U.S. gym team

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Valeri Belenky upset teammate Vladimir Artemov for the all-around title Sunday and the Soviet Union captured the team championship at the McDonald's Challenge: U.S.-U.S.S.R. men's gymnastics meet.

It was the first gymnastics competition between the countries since the Seoul Olympics.

Belenky, ranked 10th in the Soviet Union, won the first event at Ohio State's St. John Arena — the floor exercises — and never trailed in totaling 59.35 points.

Artemov, who won four gold medals at the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, finished second with 58.650 points.

Artemov trailed Belenky by just .250 points going into the final event, the horizontal bar. But Belenky posted a 9.8, while Artemov fell once and finished with a 9.35.

Belenky scored a 9.9 in the floor exercises and followed up with a perfect 10 on the pommel horse, a 9.95 in the still rings, and a 9.8 in the vault, winning the first four individual events.

The Soviets displayed little difficulty in the team event, taking the top four individual places in all-around to total 293.550 points. The United States was a distant 5.85 points back with 287.700 points.

Third in the all-around was Guennadi Zadorozny with 58.5 points, followed by Vladislav Galimov with 58.25 points.

The top American was Tom Schlesinger, who attends the University of Nebraska, with 57.650 points. He tied for fifth with Vladimir Shchepochkin.

Iowa's troubles started Friday. The Spartans' Scott Makarewicz's RBI single off Iowa starter Robert Driscoll in the bottom of the seventh inning gave Michigan State a 3-2 victory.

Driscoll dropped from the unbeaten ranks with Friday's loss, moving the lefthander's season record to 6-1.

Iowa third baseman Keith Noreen said the Hawkeyes were tired, but wouldn't offer excuses.

"We've got to keep doing the things we did in the past to remain successful," Noreen said.

The Hawkeyes only victory came in the series' first game. Freshman Tom Anderson's two-run home run highlighted a five-run sixth inning in the victory.

Iowa righthander Allen Rath went the distance to maintain his unblemished record at seven.

The Hawkeyes have a week off before returning to conference play. Purdue visits Iowa Field Sunday and Monday for a four-game series.

"We've got some rest now at a great time," Banks said. "We're a tough team in Iowa City, and with the rest we'll be ready for Purdue."

Cardinals 4, Dodgers 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joe Magrane came off the disabled list Sunday and allowed six hits over six innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 to complete a three-game sweep of the World Champions.

Vince Coleman hit an RBI triple, singled and scored twice for St. Louis, which handed Los Angeles its fourth straight loss. The Cardinals, while ending their longest home stand since 1968 with an 11-5 record, scored three times after two were out en route to their fifth straight victory.

Cubs 7, Padres 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Curt Wilkerson doubled and tripled, scored two runs and drove in another, leading Scott Sanderson and Chicago past

San Diego 7-3.

Wilkerson doubled to spark a two-run first inning against Eric Show, 4-2. He tripled in a run in the fourth and scored on a wild pitch by Show.

Sanderson, 2-2, allowed two runs in the first inning and then retired 18 of the next 19 batters before Mark Parent hit a home run with two outs in the seventh.

Reds 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eric Davis hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning to give Cincinnati a 5-3 victory over Philadelphia.

Pinch-hitter Dave Collins led off the inning with a walk off Larry McWilliams, 1-1. Steve Bedrosian replaced McWilliams and retired Bo Diaz on a fly to left field. After Ron Oester flied out, Collins stole second.

Pirates 11, Giants 1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steve Carter's first major-league home run sparked Pittsburgh's four-run first inning and Bobby Bonilla hit two run-scoring doubles to pace a 16-hit attack as the Pirates beat San Francisco 11-1.

Bob Walk, 2-2, allowed four hits in going the distance to beat former teammate Don Robinson, who lasted just two-plus innings in his first career start against the team he played for from 1978-87.

Upping its record to 13-7 in the Big Ten, the Iowa softball team split a four-game series with Michigan Friday and Saturday in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Hawkeyes won the first game Friday 3-2 and the second game Saturday 5-4, while the Wolverines took the other two games 1-0 and 3-2.

"It was a tough series," Blevins said. "It's always hard to win at Michigan. They had a lot of vocal support. It was a real roller coaster series, lots of highs and lows. But there was not a clear, decisive winner in any game."

"We have problems with our offense," freshman Pam Palmore said. "But we should have won at least three out of the four games. Coach doesn't want us to be satisfied with two out of four."

The first game, which Iowa won 3-2 in eight innings, was highlighted by a double steal by Palmore and senior Cara Coughenour for the Hawkeyes.

Palmore began the play, singling, stealing second, and getting to third on a sacrifice by sophomore Amy Johnson.

That was all followed by Coughenour's walk to first base.

With sophomore Diana Repp at the plate, Coughenour started to steal second and was caught in a run-down until Michigan's first baseman noticed Palmore creeping off third.

Palmore then faked back to third, and when the ball was thrown to

Iowa relay teams place at Penn meet

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team placed in three events at the 95th annual Penn Relays.

The shuttle hurdle relay team of James Armstrong, Gary Falls, Paul Steele and Pat McGhee took third in 57.9 seconds. The 1,600-meter relay team of Curtis Chung, Steele, Bernard Heard and McGhee was fourth in 3 minutes 9.14 seconds. The 3,200 relay team of Sean Corrigan, D'Juan Strozler, Rodney Chambers and St. Clair Blackman was seventh in 7:29.0.

Iowa traditionally competes in the Drake relays but Coach Ted Wheeler said the Penn meet is just as prestigious and also offers the shuttle hurdle relay. The Drake meet, celebrating its 80th year, was originally modeled after the older Penn Relays.

Though Iowa made a strong finish in the hurdle relay behind teams from Pittsburgh and Tennessee, inexperience could have cost the team a first-place finish. The Hawkeyes carried consistent leads into each handoff but always lost by the time their runners left the passing zone.

"It's a real problem (inexperience), because the other schools have run it several times," Wheeler said. "In the passes out of the zones the other schools cheated a little bit and we were very conservative."

In other events for the Hawkeyes, K.P. Lansing went 6 feet 10 1/4 inches in the high jump for a fifth-place finish. Gordon Finch missed the finals for the triple jump. His jump of 47 feet, 11 inches was two inches short of the qualifying mark.

Paul Jones, who has qualified for the NCAA Championships in the long jump, injured himself on his first jump and didn't was unable to compete.

McGhee, who has qualified for the NCAA meet in the 400 meter intermediate hurdles and the 110 high hurdles, was slated to compete in the 110 hurdles at Penn. "Patrick did something I've never seen him do before — jump the gun," Wheeler said.

The Iowa coach said the Penn meet, with nearly 20,000 fans in attendance and some of the top teams in the country, was sobering for the Big Ten teams at the meet.

"It brings out reality and a sense of what the real world is," he said. "It gives us a sense of what we have to do. The Big Ten schools, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Ohio State, didn't look that good."

Injury sidelines Brett for minimum 4 weeks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Brett tore a ligament in his right knee Saturday night and will be sidelined at least a month.

"I would say he will be out a minimum of four weeks and probably a maximum of six weeks," said Dr. Charles Rhoades, a Kansas City Royals team physician. "The rehabilitation period will start in about two weeks."

Doctors will put the knee in a light splint for a couple of weeks.

"He has a tear of the medial collateral ligament of his right knee," Rhoades said. "These are graded in grades one, two and three, and this is a grade three. A grade three tear is considered a complete tear. It will not require surgical intervention."

Brett, an 11-time All-Star, was put on the 21-day disabled list after suffering the injury in the first inning Saturday night against Milwaukee. After fielding a single in shallow right field, he turned to throw back to the infield and caught a spike in the artificial turf.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," the 35-year-old Brett said in a statement. "I work hard every day to keep in shape and then I tear up a knee because I catch a spike in the turf. At least the club is playing well. It's difficult for me but I'm trying to be a little more philosophical about it. All I can do is get ready for when I come back."

A two-time American League batting champion, his .390 average in 1980 is the highest in the major leagues since Ted Williams hit .407 in 1941. He was hitting .253 this year.

To replace Brett, the Royals recalled Luis de los Santos from Omaha, where he was batting .342 with 14 RBIs.

Ironically, it was against Milwaukee on May 15, 1987 in Kansas City when Brett suffered what was described as a slight ligament tear in the same knee, and missed 24 games.

Brett's injury comes at the end of the best April in team history. A 10-inning, 4-3 victory over Milwaukee Saturday gave the Royals a team-record 15 April victories.

"This is not to say we're not going to miss him, but everybody feels we're a stronger ballclub and we can make do til he gets back," Wathan said. "In the old days when he got hurt everybody's shoulders would droop and we'd think, 'How are we going to win?'"

"He's like a time bomb," said outfielder Danny Tartabull, who drove in the tying and winning run Saturday night. "He's always ready to break out. He might have erupted today, got five hits, and carried this club for the next month."

Foreman challenges Tyson

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — George Foreman stopped J.B. Williamson with a flurry of punches in the fifth round Sunday to remain undefeated in his comeback bid, and the 40-year-old immediately challenged heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

Foreman, former heavyweight world champion, improved his overall record to 61-2. He is 17-0 since coming out of retirement two years ago.

Foreman, 255 1/2 pounds, used a considerable size advantage to keep pressure on his opponent. Williamson, 23-5, had weighed in for the heavyweight bout at 200 1/2.

"He was concentrating on moving. They are still running from me like jackrabbits," Foreman said. "I'm going to keep fighting like this until I get to 265 pounds. That's the reason he ran from me, because I am a big man."

Referee Chris Jordan stopped the fight at 1:57 of the fifth round, with Foreman pounding Williamson with combinations.

Iowa places eighth at Big Tens after 1st-round win over Purdue

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team went into the Big Ten Championships in Bloomington, Ind., this weekend seeded 10th. When it was over the Hawkeyes found themselves two notches higher in the final standings.

The Hawkeyes opened the tournament with a 5-4 victory over Purdue which guaranteed they wouldn't finish ninth or 10th. Iowa then lost its next three matches to Northwestern, Michigan State and Illinois to finish eighth in the conference.

Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said she was happy with the results despite the three consecutive losses.

"It was better than what was expected of us, and everybody came out fired up to play," Schillig said. "We didn't want to lose that first one. I'm happy with the way things went."

Women's Tennis

The Iowa-Purdue battle could have gone either way, as it went down to the third set of the No. 3 doubles bout. Iowa's Karen Muldowney and Colleen Nichols pulled out the final set, 6-4, to advance the Hawkeyes.

"After our first match it was obviously a great feeling," Nichols said. "We were the obvious underdogs and we fought to the very end. The Purdue match was probably the best Karen and I have played together all year. We just settled down and played hard."

Defeating the Boilermakers meant the Hawkeyes had to play a fresh Northwestern squad Friday afternoon. Fatigue caught up to Iowa and the Wildcats swept them 5-0. No doubles matches were played due to the weather and also the fact that Iowa would have been unable to make up the 5-0 deficit. "We knew Northwestern would be tough, and they were fresh since they didn't have to play earlier," Schillig said.

Iowa lost to Michigan State Saturday, 5-2, in a match that may have epitomized the entire season. Liz Canzoneri, Iowa's No. 2 singles player, was sick with the flu but still played and lost.

"I was feeling really bad and if I would have come out (of the lineup), it would have changed the lineup and messed things up," Canzoneri said. "It was still a close match and it's just like the adversity we've had to overcome all season with a number of injuries."

Iowa played Illinois Sunday to decide the seventh and eighth places in the Big Ten, and the Fighting Illini prevailed 5-1, with the Hawkeyes only win coming from Canzoneri.

Television

Once in a while Cinemax's service to the common good goes above and beyond the call of cable duty. Such is the case tonight at 10:30 p.m. as they unearth "Cherry 2000," about a runaway robot tracker who "helps a man find enough parts to rebuild a sexy robot that 'died' during love-making!" Best of all, this cinematic foray into artificial insemination — so to speak — stars that Oscar-nominated, Johnson-impregnated working girl, Melanie Griffith! (Sigh, ... some days it's like shooting fish in a barrel. So to speak.)
But following that, there's a genuinely marvelous flick on Max at 12:15. "Evil Dead 2: Dead by Dawn" — everything you could possibly want in a modern gore-fest: chainsaws, zombies, severed limbs attacking their former owners, flying eyeballs and of course the ever-present nameless dread/subjective camera angle cruising the woods like a demonic motorcross racer. Perfectly stylish, gut-wrenchingly funny and so far over the top director Sam Rami had nosebleeds for weeks, this isn't for the faint of heart or weak of stomach, but non-wimps will have a ball. So to speak.

"Studio III" features the UI's Stradivari Quartet (8 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Films profit from Academy Award glory

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The outlaw Snow White has disappeared and the copyright lawsuits have been shelved, but the real impact of the 61st Academy Awards has not diminished in the month since the curtain fell on the glitzy ceremony.

"Rain Man," winner of five major trophies, including Best Picture, has enjoyed a record-breaking post-Oscar surge, and a number of lesser victors have profited handsomely from their awards.

"A year ago, when we planned the release of this picture, we felt with the cast and the director and the story structure, that we had a major chance for Academy nominations and awards," said Jack Gordon, president of MGM International.

"So we planned the foreign release so that we would be breaking on the screens around the world at the time the nominations were announced and the awards were given. So the strategy worked perfectly, and the picture has just bombarded the marketplace."

Meanwhile, Best Foreign Film winner "Pelle the Conqueror" is selling tickets at a brisk pace across the country, and sales for best original song "Let the River Run" from "Working Girl" have skyrocketed. "A Fish Called Wanda," which won an Oscar for best supporting actor, is No. 1 on the home video-rental charts.

Plays show off student talents

Fog, narcissism strangle pieces

By Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

With memories of past drek-fests blaring in my mind, I reminded myself that the Iowa Playwrights Festival is a student affair. Students in the Workshop put on their plays, students direct them and students act in them, I repeated to myself.

I needn't have bothered to prepare for the worst. In other words, the future of theater in America is safe if this year's festival is any indication.

Which isn't to say things were all wine and cream-cheese dip.

Hello, self-adulation?
Hello, self-reference?
Hello, shameless in-joking?

Monday night's show was "Metamorphosis" — not Kafka and not Ovid, but Ezzat Goushegir — the story of a woman lost in a memory-fog of images and fragments, haltingly telling her story to a burned-out journalist who then narrates it to us.

Her story is told in an incantatory style that — to put it gently — borders half the time on being incomprehensible. In its writing, "Metamorphosis" typifies so much of modern theater's disdain for structure, plot or connection with an audience.

The script swung wildly between clichés — "Most mysteries are wrapped in secrets," or "Was it the end, or was it just the beginning," — and, well, obscurist gobbledeygook — "the grass rises from beneath its ice, like a snake that grows," and so on.

Still, in both Monday and Tuesday night's shows, the acting alone was worth the price of admission. Elizabeth Simeon was at times extremely evocative as the anonymous woman, and Dean Schmitt as her husband added considerable meat and charisma to lean and predictable part.

The other end of the spectrum entirely was represented Tuesday night by Branko Dimitrijevic's "The Grand Allusions," a densely packed and entirely conventional play. Characters spoke in sentences, not color-coded expositions, and a story unfolded that was firmly rooted in the visible.

The play revolved around a group of theater students — hello, self-adulation? — in 1970's Yugoslavia who find themselves dealing with an erratic faculty and a repressive government. In the process, much gets said about repression, dissipation and playwrighting. Actually, that is the process, and as a result, the play's too wordy to let its own dramatic content surface. Branko is a humorist, but his humor Tuesday night was almost strangled under its own verbiage.

The 'almost' there is essential. Although the writing was breathlessly freighted and stilted, it was fairly clever all the while and had the makings of some truly funny stuff.

As on Monday night, the acting in "The Grand Allusions" was the strongest part of the show. Mark Allen Petrak as "Zoran, the playwright from Hell" — hello, self-reference? Hello, shameless in-joking? — was consistently convincing, and Anne Marie Luthro turned in her usual crisply and impeccably timed job.

But the scene-stealers — so to speak — were the faculty; Greg Armknecht as the decrepit Greek tragedy teacher nicknamed Agamemnon was hilariously true to life as an overly anecdotal student favorite, and Jeffrey Parsons as the Professor of Directing rendered prissy nervousness with delightful accuracy.

Between "Metamorphosis" and "The Grand Allusions," a festival-goer witnessed two of the most distasteful tendencies of student productions — intentional plot-dodging incoherence in the former and embarrassing narcissism in the latter. But along with it, there was some truly fine acting and some positively virtuoso scene and lighting design. So things even out, for another year.

Plots bring fear into brutal focus

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Playwrights Festival's goal is to provide young, developing playwrights with a forum to explore the possibilities of theatrical form and, hopefully, human experience. In this regard it succeeded mightily with "Bobby, Can You Hear Me?" by Judy GeBauer on Wednesday and "3 A.M.," by Heather McCutcheon on Thursday.

Besides the black box settings of Theatres A and B, "Bobby," dealing with the struggle of 27-year-old imprisoned Irish hunger-striker Bobby Sands, and "3 A.M.," a portrayal of fear and its destructive effect in three generations of women, bear striking similarities. The primary similarity is the employment of deconstructionist, non-realistic storytelling. Dream sequences, the interacting of real and imagined characters, and discontinuous chronology were effectively used to explore the haunted fear-filled worlds of the confused inhabitants.

A heightened risk is created, though, namely the potential of sacrificing clarity, when a playwright departs from simple storytelling and conventional staging. This was the case with both plays.

"Bobby" — which originated in the docudrama class that in the past has spawned the excellent plays "Nijinsky" and "Walt" (i.e. Whitman) that both went on to compete at the American College Theatre Festival in Washington, D.C. — was not sufficiently focused on the motivations and aspirations that drove Bobby Sands. The reasons were present but, because of the continual comings and goings of family members, prison guards, priests, etc., not entirely clear.

In a related consideration of pacing, Bobby, passionately played by Scott B. Smith, was lacking in dramatic progression. His initial mood was climactically weary and frustrated, leaving himself little room for the growth so necessary for the final death scene.

What was striking about both plays was the finished production qualities of the shows.

"3 A.M." also sacrificed clarity due to whirlwind unconventional staging. Characters remained on stage when not involved in the action. Scenes, many comprising as little as one sentence, occurred at an increasingly quick pace. Also confusing was the use of four doors, signifying not only entrances/exits to locations but to an "outside world."

What did work in "3 A.M." was its cast. The play was largely focused through the eyes of the daughter Anna, serving as witness, alternating between "childish" and teenaged. Ruth Margraff pulled off the performance admirably, exercising appropriate restraint, yet allowing herself enough embellishment to portray the youthful character. Stanton Dosssett and Cheryl Graeff, as the father and mother, and Michael Wells as "the lonely man," rounded out a strong ensemble effort.

At times the language in "Bobby" allowed the play to soar, enabling the oppressed and abused poet/criminal, the disenfranchised Bobby, to rise above the brutal bludgeoning of both his mind and his will.

What was striking about both plays was the finished production qualities of the shows. While the festival serves as a showcase for the playwrights, it also entails a coordinated effort involving actors, costume and lighting designers, technicians and many others.

Schizophrenia splits theaters

By Bonnie Gordon
The Daily Iowan

Lisa Schlesinger's "they ate honey from the lion's heart" and Steve Feffer's "Marilyn and Marc" are about as divergent in ambition, style and execution as two plays written in the same place could possibly be. Taken together, they could be seen as a case study of the schizophrenia that has split American theater since film became the meat of American entertainment.

The personality problem has its roots in the function of live theater: Since movies and television are now the recorders of the history of our times, what makes the stage special?

One answer is its ability to create, through the speech of living actors, an imaginative reality beyond the literalness of the screen. Another lies with the intimacy and intensity of a closely-knit group of people participating together in a slice of human interaction.

You can almost tell from the titles of the plays which is which. "They ate honey from the lion's heart" is experimental, rooted in biblical imagery and ancient Greek theatrical techniques; "Marilyn and Marc" is a long scene from a really good Woody Allen movie.

Schlesinger's reach exceeds her grasp, but she has grandeur in mind. "They ate honey" is a retelling of Samson and Delilah in the story of a young American tourist who falls in love with a Greek motorcycle boy in a village on the island of Crete. Schlesinger uses the myth to explore themes of betrayal and alienation (Delilah, remember, was non-Jewish) as well as the violence inherent in love and sexuality.

She does this by interposing beautifully formulated narratives, told in the third person by the villagers, with mimed action and dance. There is a chorus of Greek virgins who chant and sing, evocative folk instrumental music in view of the audience and, once in a while, a recognizable scene.

In spite of a liberal dose of humor in the person of an old grandmother (crustily played by Kate Burke), the experiment falls mostly flat because the central characters simply do not generate sympathy. The emotional sadomasochism of their relationship is tiresome because Schlesinger presents it as a given, without asking why they hurt each other so much. She needs to be absolutely clear about human interaction if she wants to be stylistically flamboyant.

By contrast, Feffer's "Marilyn and Marc" is a very successful portrayal of the inner complexity of seemingly "stock" characters: the dorky NYU graduate student from a Jewish neighborhood in Chicago and the neurotic Jewish American Princess from Long Island.

"Marilyn and Marc," which will be Iowa's entry in next season's American College Theatre Festival, is helped by terrifically comic and touching performances by Erin Quinn Purcell and Bruce Vieira. It is long on talk about being short on action.

Marc and Marilyn, fresh from a trip to Cape Cod last weekend, are discussing what they want to do this weekend; this evolves into a study of what is missing from their lives.

Feffer has a truthful ear and an eye for absurdity. He is much better at understanding the couple's problems than at resolving them. After the climax of tension between them, compulsive Marc's fall into temporary withdrawal from reality is dishonest — for lack of an ending, Feffer pushed him down.

Feffer could use a little of Schlesinger's passion for the metaphors inherent in character, just as she could learn from his vision of behavior; her approach would expand his work and his might focus hers.
