VA wing dedicated to Neppel

By Nicole Hayton

Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday that the Ralph G. Neppel Veterans Clinic Addition will be dedicated in June and will be completed in 1989 and decided to spend additional money for the current fiscal year, after he opened court records for the current fiscal year, Assembly went on a spending for next year.

Branstad vetoed spending bill

DEB MURPHEY (AP) - Gov. Terry Branstad vetoed nearly half of the legislature's final bill to spend additional money for the current fiscal year, after he invited legislators to meet much of the funding for next year.

"Fresh with state revenues growing faster than had been anticipated in December, the General Assembly went on a $5.3 million April spending binge, leaving state taxpayers with a $50 million surplus come March," Branstad said in reporting the veto.

"The governor recommends considering those in the appropriate fiscal year," and Branstad reported 302 that Tuesday's vetoes were needed to keep the current year's budget in balance.

Muscovite weighs perestroika

Visiting professor contrasts independence, cultural values

By Paul Ruben

Iowa City, Iowa

Daisy Khitrova, a Muscovite visiting the University of Iowa this month, says perestroika has made the Soviet Union a more accessible place, but that the change is still slow and will take years.

"I first visited the United States when I was 14 years old," Khitrova said. "I was impressed. I was impressed with everything, but I was also impressed with thedifference between the Soviet Union and the Western countries."

"Perestroika" is the name given to the attempt by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to shake up the medieval system of central planning and control

"The Soviet Union suffers from a lack of freedom of thought," Khitrova said. "There is a lack of freedom of speech, and there is a lack of freedom of action."

"I believe this is a step in the right direction," she added. "But I think it will take many years to see the results."

Khitrova said that while perestroika has brought some changes, it is still too early to say whether they will be lasting.

"I think it is important to see how the Soviet Union will handle the new freedom," she said. "I think it is important to see how the Soviet Union will handle the new freedom in the long run."
Lawmakers unveil aid package
Legislature finishes bill to prepare for possible dry weather

DEB MONROS (AP) — Legislative leaders today unveiled a $200,000 package of drought relief programs and said they've ordered a statewide weather service to be ready for the possibility of a drought, said House Speaker Don Armer.

"Once this is signed and we will have done everything we possibly can to help everyone to prepare for it," said Speaker Don Armer.

The measure, which was approved last March, calls for a state weather service to be ready for the possibility of a drought, and it would also give lawmakers authority to order the state's environmental officials to develop a statewide program to educate Iowans on the potential problems of drought.

In addition to the spending, leaders said they would order the Department of Environmental Quality officials to hold public hearings in all state districts to educate Iowans on the potential problems of drought.

We need to stop spending on drought relief, Armer said, and we need to educate Iowans on the potential problems of drought, and we need to educate Iowans on the potential problems of drought.

Hypocrites, hypocrites, hypocrites—You and me and him over there.

Let's talk about hypocrisy. We've all heard the term before. Everyone has. But really do we understand what it means? I think we do. We all probably have our own examples of hypocrisy. When we talk about hypocrisy in general, we're talking about a person who is not being true to their word or actions. They are not being consistent in their beliefs or values.

Mike Lankford

What harm from what arm?

Without even realizing it, we all do it. We all go against what we believe in. We all have moments when we are not true to ourselves. It's not that we are trying to be hypocritical, but sometimes we are just not being true to what we believe.

UI Chinese students support protest

On April 30, Chinese students in the United States took a stand for their country. They rallied in support of the students staging a peaceful demonstration in Beijing, China. The students were protesting against the government's crackdown on protests, which they believe is a violation of their rights. The Chinese government has denied these reports, but many in the international community believe that the students are being treated unfairly.

Letters

Mistreating article

The editor, "I am quite flabbergasted by the article's aggression toward the Chinese students," is incorrect. The article was not meant to be aggressive. It was meant to be informative, and to highlight the importance of the Chinese students' protest.

J. Smith

Strong support

As a Chinese-American student, I strongly support the students in China. Their protests are a justifiable reaction to the Chinese government's treatment of its citizens. I urge all students to support their fellow students in China and to stand up for what is right.

John Chen

End the protests and use superpowers held on the UI campus lovingly

Great, a flop of the protests over the past few weeks go down in the annals of UI history, according to the Daily Iowan. The students' actions were foolish, and their leaders should be ashamed of themselves.

Popper

Excusable

While I understand the concerns of the protesters, I believe that their actions were excusable. The Chinese government has a history of suppressing free speech and压制ing dissent. The students were simply exercising their right to free speech.

NASA hopes weather won't prevent launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The unexpected, much-needed rain in the forecast Thursday was merely a temporary problem that should not prevent the launching of the Magellan spacecraft toward Jupiter.

"There's nothing major," said a NASA official. "It's not going to be an issue."

The weather outlook, however, was not as certain when the forecasters predicting weather Wednesday afternoon had originally predicted a chance of rain at the 6 p.m. planned launch.

"We're not seeing much," one forecaster said. "I don't think there's much of a threat." But the weather forecasters were forced to add a forecast for Thursday which said there was a 60 percent chance of rain.

The launch window was set for 8:50 p.m. Thursday but the weather was predicted to have improved by then, with a good chance of clear weather.

The spacecraft was loaded with 2.4 tons of fuel and is expected to be launched Thursday evening, as planned.

The delay is expected to be a minor setback for the mission.

The spacecraft is expected to reach Jupiter in about a year and a half, after making an orbit around the Earth.

Bird-less season ends in sweep

he hallowed hall, filled with the reverberations of games past, was filled once more Saturday afternoon by the echoes of the present. The 1,100 fans who came to watch the Indiana University 1989-90 basketball season's final home game, a 75-60 win over the Michigan State Spartans, were witness to a game played with poise and passion.

The game, which was the last ever to be played in the old Assembly Hall, was marked by a sense of respect and dignity. The players, both from Indiana and Michigan State, played with a level of grace and honor that was a fitting end to the season.

The Hoosiers, led by All-America guard Isiah Thomas, had a strong season, finishing with a record of 27-2. Their victory over the Spartans clinched the Big Ten Conference title for the Hoosiers, who finished the season with a perfect conference record of 12-0.

The game was a testament to the skill and talent of the players, as well as the dedication and hard work of the coaches and support staff. It was a fitting end to a season that had been filled with excitement and drama.

The Hoosiers will now move on to the NCAA Tournament, where they will hope to continue their winning ways and bring home the national championship. It will be a tough challenge, but with the talent and determination of the Hoosiers, anything is possible.

Warriors pull off „miracle“

Nelson's squad sweeps Utah with small lineup

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Don Nelson focused three words for the Warriors to stitch in their rally-point script: small, smaller, smallest.

The result was an improbable sweep over their bigger, supposedly better opponent. Almost everyone had it, seven points to go. But the Warriors, behind a feisty 16-year-old with three straight years of success, took care of business.

"I said it would be a miracle if we won it, and it's not the first time he's said it," said forward Todd Day, who scored six straight points over the last 14 minutes.

"Easy money, I'm just going to call it a miracle," said Nelson, who didn't mean any of it.

The third round of the championship series began Aug. 2 with the Warriors' 119-97 rout of the Utah Jazz at Golden 1 Center, propelling the Warriors to their first NBA Finals appearance in 40 years.

"I don't know why," said Nelson, who wasn't even a starter for the 1960s-era Warriors. "I just know they've been playing well.

"They haven't been playing well," said Nelson, who was a starter for the 1960s-era Warriors. "I just know they've been playing well.

"They haven't been playing well," said Nelson, who was a starter for the 1960s-era Warriors. "I just know they've been playing well.

The result was an improbable sweep over their bigger, supposedly better opponent. Almost everyone had it, seven points to go. But the Warriors, behind a feisty 16-year-old with three straight years of success, took care of business.

"I said it would be a miracle if we won it, and it's not the first time he's said it," said forward Todd Day, who scored six straight points over the last 14 minutes.

"Easy money, I'm just going to call it a miracle," said Nelson, who didn't mean any of it.

The third round of the championship series began Aug. 2 with the Warriors' 119-97 rout of the Utah Jazz at Golden 1 Center, propelling the Warriors to their first NBA Finals appearance in 40 years.

UI art professor wins inclusion in New Museum exhibition

By Ade Hensler
Special to The Daily Iowan

Eve for many years, the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City espoused artists that were under-represented. However, in 1984, the museum presented "Women of the Nineties," a show that included the work of 12 women artists. This was the first of its kind for the museum and it served as a catalyst for change in the art world. The museum then began to focus on celebrating the art of women artists, and continued to host exhibitions featuring the work of prominent female artists. This year, the museum celebrates its 100th anniversary, and as part of the festivities, it has curated a special exhibition called "Women in the World: Women in the Arts," which showcases the work of over 100 female artists from around the globe. In this issue, we feature the story of Hans Breder, a UI art professor who has been recognized for his contributions to the field of art and his role in advancing the careers of female artists.

Hans Breder

Hans Breder began his career in the 1960s, teaching art at the School of Art and Design in New York City. He was a leading figure in the Minimalist movement and is known for his work with video and multimedia. Breder was also a co-founder of the Whitney Museum of American Art, which opened in 1987. He has been a vocal advocate for female artists and has worked to ensure that their work is included in museum exhibitions. In 2018, he was awarded the Whitney Museum's first "Whitney Medal of Honor," which recognizes artists who have made significant contributions to the field of art.

The Exhibition

"Women in the World: Women in the Arts" is on display at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City from May 19 through September 10. The exhibition features works by over 100 female artists from around the world, including paintings, sculptures, drawings, and multimedia installations. The works are arranged in four thematic sections: "The Artist as Subject," "The Artist as Icon," "The Artist as Witness," and "The Artist as Creator." The exhibition is open to the public and admission is free. For more information, visit the Whitney Museum's website at whitney.org.

Unlikely candidates cheapen Tony scene

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite their lowly status, the Tony Award nominations for best musical were barely a hvad as the board announced the names of the nominees. After the worst season for Broadway musicals in years, the 1989 Tony contenders for best musical honors include only six shows.

There will be an art exhibit on display at the museum. The exhibit will feature works by women artists from around the world. The exhibit will run from May 19 through September 10.

The Tony Awards

The Tony Awards are presented annually by the American Theater Wing and the Broadway League. Nominations for the 2019 Tony Awards were announced on May 2. The awards ceremony will be held on June 9 at Radio City Music Hall.

Nightlife

Nightlife is the premier entertainment event of the year. This year, the event will take place on Friday, July 27, at the Palace Theater in North Charleston. The event will feature live music, dance performances, and a variety of other entertainment options. For more information, visit the Nightlife website at nightlifevent.com.
Cowboy Junkies pack debut full of subversive murkiness

By Steve Cross

C owboy Junkies should be able to make a living. They sold thousands of copies of their first album, "The Trinity Session," last year. Their appearance at the New York State Music Festival this weekend is a sign of their growing popularity.

But atención, their debut album, "The Trinity Session," is a disturbing, surprisingly subversive record. It exhibits all the instrumental craftsmanship of a country music album, without any of the banality or violence to speak of - and yet, I suspect that Tippi Hedren would come away from it feeling, well, not quite eternal than a ripe melon. The ugly beauty of mining for clarity.

The narrator of "The Trinity Session" makes quite an accomplishment, as does the narrator of "The Trinity Session" who is even more despairing than Springsteen's. The narrator of "The Trinity Session" is ever broader than Springsteen's. His voice - are mixed vocals and the deadpan melancholy of Springsteen's "Nebraska." The narrator of "The Trinity Session" that doesn't have two of the songs on it, and you sort it out near the end of the album, it's almost shocking.

A word of caution: All LPs figures those mentioned, anyone should be aware that the LPs are available on CD, including one of the best - a tribute to Elvis Presley called "The Million Dollar Band."
