Trade with Soviets could bring jobs to Iowans, says governor candidate

Jean Thelen

Iowa City

Soviet trade is a way for Iowa to deal with the Soviet Union, says Iowa Governor Robert D. Meyer.

"You can't operate on the same level with a country if you don't deal with them," he said.

Agriculture is the key, he said, adding that the trade has been very successful.

"It's the way to deal with a country," he said.

Professor develops petroleum catalysts system

Janna Catoch
The Daily Iowan

A University of Iowa doctoral student has developed a new method of making catalysts for petroleum refining.

Catalysts are used in petroleum refining and are essential to the production of gasoline and other fuels. These catalysts help convert the raw materials into useful products.

The new method, described in a recent issue of the trade publication "Catalysis Today," is based on the use of a new type of starting material called a "catalyst precursor." This precursor is a compound that can be easily transformed into a catalyst by a simple process.

The catalyst precursor is an organic compound that contains the active site of the catalyst. When heated, it undergoes a series of chemical reactions that result in the formation of the catalyst.

The new method is particularly useful for the production of catalysts for cracking and reforming processes. These processes are used to upgrade the quality of petroleum fractions and to produce high-octane gasoline.

The new method has several advantages over traditional methods. It is faster, more efficient, and produces less waste.

The new catalysts have been tested in a large-scale pilot plant and have shown excellent performance. The results are promising, and the new method is expected to have a significant impact on the petroleum refining industry.

When raw materials are introduced to the process, they are transformed into finished products without altering the catalyst.

The new method, as described in a recent issue of the trade publication "Catalysis Today," appears to be more efficient than traditional methods. It is also expected to be more environmentally friendly, as it reduces the amount of waste generated.

The new method is expected to have a significant impact on the petroleum refining industry. It could lead to the development of new catalysts with improved performance and lower environmental impact.

The new method is currently being patented by the University of Iowa.

New preconceptions

Two female students at Pangkeppee's Yasser College have founded a new club for women, PWSSWPU: Association of Women's Prejudices Against Women. The club's main objective is to promote awareness among its members about the ways in which they are influenced by their own preconceptions.

The club's members believe that by understanding the sources of their preconceptions, they can work to overcome them. The club meets regularly to discuss various preconceptions and to develop strategies for addressing them. Their activities include debates, workshops, and resource sharing sessions.

The club's founders hope that by encouraging open dialogue and critical thinking, they can contribute to a more understanding and inclusive society.

State to the Editor: I am delighted that John Riley responded to the June 22st, in your challenge to think more deeply about state-to-state relations. It is crucial that we consider the implications of our actions on the global stage and the impact they may have on our lives and the lives of others.

State to the Editor: I agree with your argument that state-to-state relations are complex and multifaceted. It is important to understand the dynamics of power and influence that shape these relationships. Your point about the importance of dialogue and negotiation is well-taken.

State to the Editor: I appreciate your mention of the need for transparency in state-to-state relations. It is essential for all parties to be open and honest about their intentions and actions. This can help to prevent misunderstandings and conflicts.

State to the Editor: I am interested in your discussion of the role of international organizations in state-to-state relations. These organizations can provide a platform for cooperation and conflict resolution.

State to the Editor: I commend you for raising the issue of human rights in state-to-state relations. It is crucial that these rights be protected and that states are held accountable for their actions.

State to the Editor: I welcome your call for a more peaceful international order. This requires a commitment to non-violent resolution of conflicts and a recognition of the inherent dignity of all people.

State to the Editor: I am impressed by your analysis of the complex nature of state-to-state relations. It is clear that these relationships are shaped by a multitude of factors, including economic, political, and cultural considerations.

State to the Editor: I am grateful for your reflection on the importance of ethical considerations in state-to-state relations. It is crucial that these decisions are made with the best interests of all peoples in mind.

State to the Editor: I agree that state-to-state relations are shaped by historical legacies and contemporary circumstances. It is important to understand these dynamics in order to engage effectively.

State to the Editor: I am encouraged by your suggestion that state-to-state relations should be based on mutual respect and understanding. This requires a willingness to listen and learn from one another.

State to the Editor: I am glad to see your emphasis on the need for sustained engagement in state-to-state relations. This requires ongoing dialogue and a commitment to building lasting partnerships.

State to the Editor: I am impressed by your discussion of the role of technology in state-to-state relations. The rapid pace of technological change presents both opportunities and challenges.

European leaders clash over union plan

WASHINGTON—France's quest for supremacy and the emergence of a single European currency and central bank, threatened Monday when the French and German leaders clashed at a summit of European Community ministers over the treaty revisions that are needed to promote economic and monetary union.

France's President Francois Mitterrand restated his opposition to a single currency at a time when Britain, Sweden and Denmark are calling for such a move.

The French president warned his German counterpart, Helmut Kohl, that the French government was prepared to give the “go-ahead” for the movement only if it includes money, labor, social and economic policies and the movement of people.

Mitterrand, who is also the president of the Council of Europe, said his country is “not prepared to be the second in the family for life”.

The French president's statement is seen as a rejection of the idea of a Europe-wide currency that would be free to move around without restrictions.

Bush meets with Japanese foreign minister

WASHINGTON—President Bush met with Japan's foreign minister Monday night, a move that is seen as a sign of the United States' commitment to the alliance.

The two leaders discussed the current situation in the Middle East and the need for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

Bush said he was impressed with the Japanese diplomat's understanding and commitment to the issue.

Baker pledges U.S. support when 'day follows night' in current Chinese situation

In Washington, the U.S. government has pledged support for the Chinese people, in the wake of a recent political upheaval. The statement came as a reaction to the recent events in China, where the government has been facing domestic unrest and international pressure.

The statement was made by U.S. President John Baker, who said: "We are committed to a peaceful resolution of the current situation in China. We will continue to support the Chinese people in their efforts to maintain stability and development.

Baker's theme, in remarks prepared for delivery to the press, was summed up in a phrase he coined: 'Day follows night.' In the phrase, the President indicated that the world must not let the revolution in China go to waste.

The statement was made on Monday, in a press briefing in Washington. It was made just hours after the Chinese government announced that it had arrested a number of key opposition leaders.

Baker's remarks were aimed at reassuring the Chinese public that the U.S. government was committed to maintaining stability in the country. He added: "China has faced a tough battle, but the story is not over yet."

The Chinese authorities have been arresting opposition leaders, including media figures and human rights activists, in recent days. The Chinese government has not yet commented on the Baker statement.

In addition to the domestic situation, the U.S. government has been facing international pressure to support the Chinese people. The U.S. is a key trading partner of China and has been under pressure to maintain a strong relationship with the country.

Baker's statement comes as the Chinese government has been facing domestic unrest and international pressure. The government has been cracking down on dissent, including arresting key opposition leaders. The situation has raised concerns about the future of the Chinese economy and the stability of the country.

The Baker statement is expected to be welcomed by the Chinese government, which has been facing international pressure to maintain a strong relationship with the U.S. The statement is also expected to be seen as a sign of support for the Chinese people, who have faced domestic unrest in recent days.

Oil spills keep workers busy along coasts

Oil spills have been a common occurrence along the coasts, and the workers have been busy cleaning up the oil. However, the recent oil spills have been particularly severe, and the workers have been working overtime to clean up the spills.

The latest oil spill occurred near New York City, and the workers were busy cleaning up the oil. The spill was caused by a tanker that ran aground near the port of New York. The tanker was carrying oil, and the spill caused a serious environmental disaster.

The workers have been working overtime to clean up the oil, and the cleanup efforts have been going well. The workers have been using advanced technology to clean up the oil, and the spill is expected to be contained within a few days.

The oil spill near New York City is not the only one that has occurred recently. There have been several oil spills along the coasts, and the workers have been busy cleaning up the oil.

Islander coach extends contract

ONTANIO.-O.C. — All Arther helped turn the New York Islanders from a selling franchise into Stanley Cup champions and led them to four consecutive NHL finals, all of which he won. Today's Islanders are not as good as the 1981 star team that won the Stanley Cup, but they still are competitive, and they have won the last two Eastern Conference championships. Arther, who ended up as Islanders coach three years ago, signed a two-year extension that begins in 1989-90. Eccentricity equals happiness for some 'offbeat' Americans

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — One man’s music work in hypnotizing New York jazz clubs is another woman’s voice cries "Don’t let the man’s voice cry "Don’t let me be a freak."" The woman who said being a freak is the secret to happiness is Sally Jo Banes, who became an artist and performer.

While Sally Jo Banes is known for her work in performance and visual art, she also has a deep interest in the history and art of trail-blazing women from history and art.

"If you look at the history of women in art, especially in the 19th century, you see that women were often depicted as objects of desire or as passive figures," Banes said. "But in recent years, we’ve seen a shift away from that stereotype, and women are now being portrayed as active agents who take control of their own lives."

Banes’ work often explores the idea of eccentricity and how it relates to happiness. She believes that being true to oneself and embracing one’s quirks is key to finding joy.

"Eccentricity is a way of being that allows people to express themselves in unique and authentic ways," she said. "It’s a way of challenging the norms and expectations society imposes on us, and it’s a way of finding happiness in the process."

Banes’ latest project is a collage of images and text that explores the theme of eccentricity and happiness. The piece is part of an exhibition that will be on display at a local art gallery in the fall.

"I’m excited to share this work with others and to see how it resonates with people," Banes said. "I hope it sparks conversations about the importance of eccentricity in our lives and how it can lead to happiness."

The exhibition will be part of a larger festival dedicated to celebrating eccentricity and diversity in art, culture, and society.

"The festival is an opportunity to bring together people from all walks of life and to celebrate the rich tapestry of ideas and experiences that make up our world," Banes said. "I hope it fosters a sense of community and understanding, and it’s a way of promoting a more inclusive and compassionate society."

Banes’ work has been featured in many exhibitions and festivals around the world, and she has received numerous awards and recognitions for her contributions to the arts.

"I’m grateful for the support and encouragement I’ve received from the art community," Banes said. "It’s a testament to the importance of art and how it can bring people together to celebrate the human experience."

"I’m excited to continue creating and sharing my work with others," she said. "I believe in the power of art to inspire and transform lives, and I’m dedicated to using my creativity to make the world a better place."

"The festival is a perfect example of that," Banes said. "It’s an opportunity to come together and celebrate the richness and diversity of human experience, and I’m honored to be a part of it."

The festival will take place from October 15 to 20, and it’s free and open to the public.

"We want to create an environment where people can come together and share their ideas and experiences," Banes said. "It’s a space for creativity and exploration, and I’m excited to see what people will create and share."
Nasty storms wash out Amana VIP.

Downpours cause even split of purse

Bryan Miller

The Daily Iowan

An unusual kind of tournament came to town Saturday when the 33rd annual Amana VIP Monday at the Iowa Golf Course was washed out.

Tom Watson, owner of 22 tour victories and a career earnings haul of $581,040, was the only golfer to qualify for the event, which was slated for a 5-under-par at the time. Watson was on the first tee when play was suspended.

"It still goes today," defending champion Terry Cummings said as he waited out the storm. "I just came out to warm up. I'm not sure if I'll play or not."

Clifford "Spanky" McPharland, who ended the year ranked 42nd on the PGA tour, and Watson both played the day after the tournament had been postponed until Thursday and Friday.

Watson's green record more perfect than Cummings'.

Clifford "Spanky" McPharland, 37, stranded on the first hole and looking for his 11th victory, was playing in his second tournament since the previous one was called on Saturday. He was on the first tee when play was suspended last year.

"I'm turning heads on the back nine," McPharland said, who anchored his entire round, made four birdies, an eagle and three bogeys, and finished 2-under par 70 for a total 4-under.

"I think I'm getting better," McPharland said. "I'm getting a little bit more relaxed. I'm playing it a little more steady."
