Court may give word on abortion rights

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S Supreme Court is poised to give its latest word on abortion rights, which may take the form of a momentous ruling or a brief announcement that more time is needed to ponder the fate of legal abortions.

The court's 1988-89 term ends Monday, and the justices must say something about their most closely watched controversy of the 1980s. They are being asked in a Missouri case to reverse the court's 1973 decision legalizing

Many, including some court employees, had expected the term to end Thursday, but scores of partisans who had gathered at the court's Capitol Hill building left disappointed. "Chinese water torture," is what Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, called the anxiety-filled wait.

Three cases in which decisions are pending stand between the court and its three-month

In each, the court must announce a decision or order the case reargued. If it chooses the latter course, a new round of arguments would be held in the court term that begins in October, with announcement of a decision likely in

Abortion-rights advocates fear the court will order the Missouri case, called Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, reargued next term and simultaneously grant review to up to three other abortion disputes pending before

That likely would be read as a signal that the justices are contemplating a major retreat from the 1973 ruling in Roe v. Wade, which said women have a constitutional right to

The court has yet to take any action in the three cases - from Illinois, Ohio and Minnesota — that involve state regulations making abortions harder to get.

Roe v. Wade itself was a case that had to be argued twice before a decision was announced. The court hears arguments in about 150 cases each term, and since 1977 has held over at least one case each year for reargument the

Area celebrates Independence Day

Parade, fireworks highlight festivities

Kathryn Stevens The Daily Iowan

About 3,000 people are expected to line Coralville's streets tomorrow to watch bands, buggies and floats in the "old-fashioned" Independence Day parade slated to begin at 10 a.m., Margaret Morgan, volunteer chairwoman of the parade committee, said.

"We just like to have an oldfashioned Fourth of July parade, like when we were kids, like when I was kid," Morgan said of the event she initiated seven years

But the parade isn't Coralville's only event. Dunk tanks, bingo tables, food booths and a tractor pull for kids will be held at Morrison Park on Fifth Street, Morgan said. At dusk, fireworks will be the Iowa City's City Park at dusk, around 9 p.m., Mike Moran, supervisor of Iowa City Parks and

> "I always do some crazy, fun thing to get with it," Morgan said.

All parade entries will be judged by Coralville Police Chief Barry Bedford, Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake and Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter.

Coralville police officers will direct parade traffic, though little trouble is anticipated, Dale Schnoebelen, Coralville Parks and Recreation director, said.

"It's really nice. People are pretty laid back," he said.

After 25 years, civil rights still need progress

The Daily Iowan

Twenty-five years ago Sunday, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was signed into law to "eliminate the last vestiges of injustice in America," in the words of then-President Lyndon Johnson.

Local officials leave to take new jobs

Two Johnson County officials and one Iowa City official have announced their resignations, two effective at the end of July, the other at the beginning of September.

Glen Meisner, Johnson County engineer, announced his resignation to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors effective July 30. Meisner has been county engineer since April 1988.

Meisner is resigning to join the Iowa City civil engineer-ing consultiing firm of MMS Consultants Inc., 465 Hwy 1

Also submitting her resignation was Johnson County Planner JoAnne Lilledahl, who is leaving her position on Sept. 8 to begin law school at the UI.

Lilledahl, who began working for the supervisors in September, 1986, will remain on the county payroll part time as project manager for the county's ad hoc study committee looking into enhanced 911 telephone service and joint communications for law enforcement and emergency agencies.

Frank Farmer, Iowa City engineer, also resigned on Friday to become director of public works and city engineer in Fort Dodge, Iowa. His resignation becomes effective July 21.

Farmer started working full time for the city in 1966 as a technician in the public works department. He has been city engineer since October 1981.

UI Press publishes book on lost city

The site of Tula, Mexico, has been the center of controversy since scholars first proposed that it comprised the ruins of Tollan, legen-dary capital of the Toltec empire that once dominated Central Mexico and other parts of Mesoamerica.

"Tula of the Toltecs: Excavations and Survey," the long-awaited UI Press release detailing the University of Missouri Tula Archaeological Project, presents data on the site's chronology, excavations and settlement patterns that entitle Tula to take its place alongside such principal pre-Columbian cities as Teotihuacan and Tenochtitlan.

The data presented in the volume, edited by Dan Healan - associate professor of anthropology at Tulane University - provides a convincing argument that Tula was indeed the Tollan of legend and comprised the capital city of a major Central Mexican empire.

The book presents two major innovations not previously seen in archaelogical publications. Its arrangement of the stratigraphic profiles in multidimensional form is completely compact and manageable. Secondly, the volume includes the entire urban survey data base and computer programs for analysis on a computer diskette.

This comprehensive report clarifies Tula's chronology through relative and chronometric data techniques; determines its size, extent and organization, and residential patterns; investigates its agriculture, manufacturing, commerce and markets; defines its social groups and subgroups; and examines its political and religious institutions and the role of foreign influences.

"Contamination of Iowa's ground water and well water by agricultural chemicals has long been a problem," said Jerald Schnoor, professor and chairman of the department of civil and environmental engineering. "The University of Iowa now has the resources to begin to alleviate the problem."

Ground water is the water that is captured deep in the soil and is extracted by drilling drinking wells. If the water has seeped through soil laden with pesticides, the contaminants may be present in drinking water.

Kross said the process produces a chemical normally made with the help of lightning, but in the UI laboratory, chemists duplicate the process using ultraviolet rays.

Ammonia tank leak causes evacuation

The Daily Iowan

A three-block area was evacuated around 5 p.m. Saturday following a leak from an ammonia tank located at Home Town Dairy, 1109 N. Dodge St.

At 5:03 p.m., a report of an ammonia smell was called in by a resident who lives near the dairy. Upon arrival at the scene, the fire department ordered the evacuation of a three-block area around the dairy due to the presence of a vapor cloud and the smell of ammonia in the area, according to a report issued by Capt. R. J. Whittaker of the Iowa City Fire Department.

The fire department was still completing its evacuation when dairy workers managed to shut off the valve of a 1,000 gallon ammonia tank from which the leak was coming from. This occured approximately 20 minutes after the fire department arrived on the scene, according to the report.

The valve had been recently installed and had operated properly but had failed to reset correctly, producing a small amount of vapor, according to the report.

Although the evacuation was cancelled after the leak was prought under control, fire lepartment units remained on the scene until a new valve was installed. The Iowa Department of Transportation was also notified, according to the report.

The incident lasted a total of approximately two hours, and there were no damages or injuries, according to the report.

Comma-like tick may spread Lyme disease, rangers warn

The Daily Iowan

As families head for the great outdoors this Independence Day, local park rangers warn that the watchword in the woods this weekend a word at all — it's a autious mark of punctuation.

That mark of punctuation moving across your skin — a small, black dot the size of a period or comma might be a deer tick carrying Lyme disease, local conservation-

"It looks like a period or a omma," Coralville Reservoir Park Manager Tom Brown said. "The ticks are so small that sometimes you don't even see them."

Lyme disease, caused by the tick Ixodes Dammini, has been rapidly gaining national attention as more than 5,000 cases were reported in 43 states in 1988. The disease is spread by infected deer ticks living in grassy and wooded areas.

The ticks spread the disease when they feed on the blood of deer, mice and humans. And, although in most cases Lyme disease is not fatal, it does manifest itself in humans in a number of unsettling an irregular heartbeat.

Brown reccomended protective clothing as the best defense against the ticks. He also suggested inspecting for the ticks after coming in from the outdoors.

"Big hats and jeans are good protection," he said. "That and running a comb or brush through your hair to remove any that might be hiding also helps."

Insect repellents offer another form of defense against ticks, Brown said. A widely-available commercial spray like "Off" should be good enough to ward off ticks, but if sprays fail to work he recommended prompt removal of

"Ice will kill a tick right away," he said. "Just take an ice cube and freeze the tick, and it'll come right

Pets can also be affected by a tick with Lyme disease, and Brown suggested taking the same precautionary measures with dogs and cats as with humans. He added that quick removal of the tick which must feed on a person's skin for at least 12 hours before communicating the disease - will minimize the possibility of contracting the disease.

Acording to a study conducted at Iowa State University, the deer ticks that spread the disease are increasing in number and may spread throughout the state. Brown said local deer are no exception to the population explo-

"We've got a lot of deer here," Brown said. "Many more than we want, but most of the sightings of Lyme have happened in the northeast part of the state."

The ISU study concurs that most of the reports of Lyme infections have happened in the eastern third of the state, but added that the total number of Lyme disease cases in Iowa has increased to 38 this

Wayne Rowley, ISU entomologist, said a rash occurs in 60 percent of those who are bitten and recommended medical attention if the more serious symptoms of headache, fever and chills ensue.

"Getting medical help during the first stage, when the disease responds to medical treatment, is the best option," Rowley said. "An obvious precaution is to avoid tick-infested areas whenever possi-

"The incidences in Iowa are so low that we haven't posted any information on it yet," he said. "We have lots of people ask us about it, but we only have one handout on it because it isn't that big of a problem around here.'

In April, the Democrat from East out. Moline set out to bring economic opportunity to the Quad Cities by proposing that Illinois compete with Iowa for riverboat gambling on the Mississippi River.

But late Friday night, Jacobs' vision of gambling on the river which had been tampered with against his will — became a lost cause. The louse overwhelmingly killed the plan in the waning hours of the legislative session.

"I don't know what happened (in the House)," he said early Saturay, shortly after the defeat. "They had 63 votes when I left the floor it was on the (vote) board at 63.

"That's when I turned around and walked out and figured, hell, with House Speaker Michael) Madigan costuming," he said. in the chair, we got it.'

At stake in the Illinois House was a revised riverboat package sponsored by Rep. E.J. "Zeke" Giorgi, a that he had the Senate Democratic Rockford Democrat, that would ply the Mississippi River and part of the Illinois River. Jacobs had only planned to have the boats in the Quad Cities area.

Giorgi's bill provided for subsequent expansion so that up to 20 boats would be running outside of Cook County. Jacobs thought that too much expansion would cost his area tourist dollars.

Gov. James Thompson supported the plan, but not even his presence on the House floor while the bill was being heard carried enough weight to pass the package.

Giorgi, who had been handling the bill since it initially passed the Senate in late May, said his failure to get House Republican support for the plan is what ultimately did

"We needed cooperation from the Republican side of the aisle and that cooperation was never forthcoming, we could never count on it," he said. "They just put up a wall, like a Berlin Wall, and wouldn't climb over it."

Smoke screen?

President George Bush on Friday capitalized on extensive press coverage as he stood at the Iwo Jima Memorial in Arlington, Va., to continue his attempts to whip up nationwide patriotic fervor over the treatment of Old Glory.

The furor surrounding Bush's proposed flag-burning amendment to the Constitution, and the alacrity with which onlookers received his message, all too clearly indicate a mentality prevalent in the United States.

Bush's attempt to ban flag-burning is galling for two reasons. Most obviously, it impinges on the rights of U.S. citizens to voice legitimate concerns about American policies. But perhaps more importantly, focusing so much time and publicity upon the theoretical treatment of an icon threatens to turn heads from more crucial, non-symbolic issues.

In short, the flag-burning flap is the biggest non-issue since Bush's farcical pledge of allegiance controversy in the last

While Bush and his colleagues in Congress continue to bleat their mindless rallying cry ("Flag-burning is wrong, dead wrong."), the NATO alliance falters, the trade deficit spirals, and the administration continues to grapple with departments that have yet to be fully or competently staffed.

Flags will continue to be burned in protest of governmental policies — with or without George Bush's rubber stamp. The president may be able to muster enough bipartisan political support to force a vote on the issue.

The only question remaining is how many heads will be turned form the real issues in the meantime.

Wish list

Last week, President George Bush joined Republican colleagues on Capitol Hill in their battle to chip away at the Democratic advantage in Congress. That fight, which began without subtlety months ago with ethics charges that purged several Democrats from top leadership positions, was extended Thursday in an unabashed assualt on Democratic incumbency advantages.

Bush's proposal, offered in the guise of an extensive campaign reform package (and alongside a promised Congressional pay raise), basically amounts to a GOP wish list. Besides calling for the elimination of most PACs, it included:

• Provisions for halving the per-candidate limit on campaign contributions from the remaining PACs.

• Demanding the full disclosure of "soft money" - campaign funding from labor groups and corporate supporters that, although technically barred from federal candidates, often drifts into campaign stockpiles via political parties.

Sharply restricting Congressional franking privileges.

Confining gerrymandering to geographic or community

· Banning carry-over campaign funds from use in later

• Doubling the amount of money candidates can receive from their parties.

Anything else, Mr. President?

The partisan motivation behind Bush's proposal would be almost comical if the goal behind it was not so crucial. Bush and his colleagues are right; the continued Democratic lock on Congress presents a serious obstacle to the proper functioning of a representative, democratic government. But this heavyhanded presidential effort - essentially doomed to failure on the Hill - caters so obviously to the needs of Republican candidates that it can only hinder the GOP's cause.

Speak now, or . . .

Thursday, the U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling giving public officials more power to selectively interpret the constitutional clause protecting the right of free speech.

The ruling was specifically intended to discourage advertising and sales pitches on college campuses. But the means do not justify the ends, as Justice Antonin Scalia suggests in his written summary of the Court's decision. Government restrictions on commercial speech may be valid even if they "go beyond the least restrictive means to achieve the desired end," Scalia wrote. Just what is the desired end of such censorship?

Product marketing is essential to any country's economy. Advertising in this country sells products, stereotypes and -God forbid — lifestyles, simultaneously creating the morals and tastes of the American people. Advertising also raises the funds to create more efficient products and to develop safer technology.

It is an important part of the American socialization process, not to mention the economy, and should not be excerpted from the grounds of U.S. institutions of higher learning - or anywhere else.

Any abridgement of freedom of speech, no matter how offensive the subject, is a direct infringement of a constitution-

Lest the government become any more restrictive of the right to express one's concerns, anyone smelling the stench of this unsound decision should voice those concerns before it's too late — because this is just the beginning.

he decision last week to deny to suspect criminals the right to use suspect-money to pay ingenious lawyers to spring them suggests the lengths to which the government is driven in its progressively futile war against crime (crime rises; for every 200 crimes committed, one person ends up in iail), which has us now fretting as much about the question of homes for the criminals as we do about homes for the homeless.

In New York state there is considerable frustration over the failure of the legislature to re-impose capital punishment. Gov. Mario Cuomo believes that the U.S. Supreme Court has a right to legalize killing unborn children, but he does not appear to believe that the court has a right to legalize killing full-grown murderers. And frustration mounts.

One-hundred thirteen people have been executed since the decision of the court in 1976 (Gregg v. Georgia) that decreed the standards capital punishment legislation would need to meet if it wanted to escape death at the hands of the Eighth Amendment (which forbids cruel and unusual punishment).

Now the word "unusual" demands special examination. It would be "unusual" to sentence a convicted man to be tossed into a cobra pit. It is also unusual to force a convicted man to expose his arm to a lethal injection - yet we are unaware of any legal arguments against the needle, especially when it is the execution mode of choice (some states do precisely that, grant the criminal his choice of two or more means of dying).

In order to be unusual in the sense of unconstitutional, the punishment needs to be archaic in the sense that it is thought to be cruelly archaic. And then in Coker Georgia (1977) the court, with a heavy 7-2 majority, declared that punishment was "cruel" in the constitutionally prohibited sense if it imposed a penalty on a criminal disproportionate to the crime he had committed. In Coker, the court banned execution for rapists, the logic being that the victim in due course rises and continues to live, whereas the rapist, if executed, will not rise again, at least not in

I would myself the rhetorical gravity with which endorse such a penalty for drug merchants who sell the stuff to minors. Every now and then you could satisfy the standards of Coker v. Georgia by pointing to a human corpse who had died of an overdose of drugs. Would the court prohibit the execution of drug merchants who had pandered to

It is not an easy call. We are all waiting to see what it is that William Bennett, our current drug czar, is going to come up with in September when he discloses his new drug prevention program. Since it is pre-decided that the Bush administration will not advocate the legalization of drugs, the Bennett basket is going to have to be chock-full of ferula with which to beat offenders. More prosecutions, more jails - fewer drugs?

It does not, of course, follow. But it is worth pondering: Should the Eighth Amendment deny to a government of the people by the people and for the people the right to decree the ultimate sentence as appropriate to a crime that deeply threatens that society? A few years ago, there was no such thing as "crack" even as, a few years ago, there was no such thing as AIDS.

Flag-burning only sears symbol's sanctity

Given the paroxysms of patriotic pique in the aftermath of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision that flag-burning as a form of political protest is protected by the First Amendment, you'd think the court had decreed that American flags must be burned.

And given the agitated urgency of President George Bush's call for an amendment to amend the First Amendment to excuse flag-burning from free speech, you'd think the air of this country was thick with the black smoke of burning flags. Of course, neither is true. In the court's majority opinion, Justice William Brennan summarized the thinking behind the decision: "If there is a bedrock principle underlying the First Amendment, it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable." Concurring, Justice Anthony Kennedy, a conservative Reagan appointee, added: "The hard fact is that sometimes we must make decisions we do not like. We make them because they are right, right in the sense that the law and the Constitution, as we see them, compel the result." Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in his poignant but logically flawed dissent, countered: "Surely one of the high purposes of a democratic society is to legislate against conduct that is regarded as evil and profoundly offensive to the majority of people — whether it be murder, embezzlement, pollution or flag-burning."

Of course, the typically apolitical acts of murder, embezzlement and pollution are not just "profoundly offensive"; they also happen to tangibly affect the lives and welfare of others. Burning a flag in political protest only sears the sanctity of our most revered national symbol.

Seared himself by the court's decision, Bush has called for a constitutional amendment that would prohibit the desecration of the flag, insisting that the flag is "a unique national symbol." Indeed, the flag of the United States is unique, not simply because it's the most visible and hallowed of our national symbols but because, unlike the Lincoln memorial or Washington Monument or Statue of Liberty, the flag is pure symbol, having no physical existence except in its various representations, be those representations on cloth, paper, plastic, video or whatever.

As Justice John Paul Stevens pointed out in his curiously reasoned dissent, the flag "is a symbol of freedom, of equal opportunity, of religious tolerance and of good will for other peoples who share our aspirations." That is, the flag is not a thing, but an idea. And as idea, any incorporation of it whether waving it merrily on the floor of a Republican convention or burning it angrily on the streets outside the convention - is an expression of the waver's or burner's particular relationship to that idea. As pure symbol, the flag cannot ever be invoked without implicitly making some comment in reference to the idea it repre-

And contrary to Justice Stevens's conclusion, such expression, however offensive the majority may find it, must be protected as a fundamental right of freedom. Are we as a nation so insecure, so fearful, that our democratic ideals, rticulated in the Constitution and Bill of Rights and embodied in the flag, cannot tolerate and survive even the most offensive political

What is shameful in the Court's 5-4 decision is not that a majority of the justices upheld the right to burn the American flag as a form of political speech, but that the decision was not unanimous.

A note needs to be added about Bush's political grandstanding and patriotic claptrap amid this flagburning brouhaha.

Recall the many television commercials employed by Bush during his presidential campaign last year? Recall among the images of happy grandchildren and fur-loughed black rapists all the American flags? There was not one Bush advertisement exhorting us to buy him as president that wasn't awash in the red, white and blue.

It so happens that all of those commercials were against the law. Specifically, they were in violation of Section 15(i) of Public Law 94-344, the federal law codifying, the rules and customs pertaining to the flag, the law Bush ays he so much loves. That law E tes succinctly and emphatically: "The flag should never be used for advertising purposes in any manner whatsoever." Never. Not even by Republicans trying to smear their political opponents and avoid the more thorny issues of the day.

Yes, George Bush, staunch defender of Old Glory and all it stands for, turns out to be an habitual flag desecrator himself. Not to mention a hypocrite.

The court could use the Missouri case to reaffirm Roe v. Wade, but pro-choice and anti-abortion forces do not view that alternative as a ing to give states more regulatory dated.

Both sides believe there may be five votes among the court's nine members to give states more leeway in regulating abortion.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Byron White, dissenters from the 1973 ruling, have opposed it in each subsequent case. Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy are considered to be willing to reverse or significantly curtail the ruling as well.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the only woman on the high court, could provide the key fifth vote.

Fourth victim of office fire identified

ATLANTA — Authorities worked Sunday to locate relatives of the last victim to be identified among the four people killed when an explosion and fire tore through the midsection of a 10-story

Investigators said Sunday that the woman, in her early 30s, was identified Saturday night by her boss as a secretary for D.A.M.S. Inc., a construction consulting company. Her name was withheld until her family could be notified.

A total of 23 people were injured in Friday's blaze. As of Sunday, nine remained hospitalized with two in serious condition, including a woman who leapt from a sixth-floor window and broke her legs and an ankle whose condition earlier had been critical.

A series of powerful electrical explosions apparently set off when an electrical worker was changing a fuse triggered the blaze Friday. Much of the building was evacuated quickly, but a number of workers were trapped and broke out windows to escape choking plumes of smoke.

Allison leaves but flooding continues

NEW ORLEANS - Rivers continued to rise Sunday in the aftermath of record rainfall from the remnants of Tropical Storm Allison, and meteorologists said flooding could continue for weeks.

At least 700 homes and numerous roads remained flooded Sunday, with scattered storms and showers replacing the unremitting rain of the previous five days. One town got nearly 29 inches of rain in less than a week.

An earthen dam in a largely rural area was reported near collapse, and most residents near it had evacuated.

Sheriff's deputies in the southwestern part of the state found the body of the only person known to have died because of the storm in Louisiana. Four deaths were blamed on the storm in Texas.

During the night, Allison's leftover rain and thunderstorms moved slowly eastward and shifted the heavy rain pattern into the Tennessee and Ohio valleys.

The National Weather Service said fields and timberland were likely to stay flooded for weeks because there was nowhere for all the water to go.

Greenpeace acts against U.S. battleship

STOCKHOLM, Sweden - Four Greenpeace activists jumped into the Baltic Sea on Sunday to block the way of the U.S. cruiser Ticonderoga, which the environmental organization said might be carrying nuclear weapons.

The warship steamed past the activists and sailed into the Stockholm harbor.

The cruiser signaled with its horns, and police in small boats tried to pick our people up from the water, but didn't succeed," Greenpeace spokesman Magnus Furugard said.

Two hours earlier, police boarded and confiscated the Greenpeace vessel Moby Dick and arrested the eight activists on board on charges of planning a sabotage action, Furugard said.

We did not plan anything criminal. We carried out a demonstration," Furugard said. "It's a crime to bring in nuclear weapons and a crime to spread nuclear weapons."

The Swedish government forbids foreign ships to bring nuclear weapons into its waters, but it assumes that the prohibition will be respected and does not question visitors.

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) President George Bush worshipped at an oceanside church Sunday, jogged and planned to play tennis and fish as he continued to enjoy "fun stuff" during a five-day Fourth of July vacation.

He also planned to treat neighbors to a gala fireworks display from his family compound on Monday.

Although the focus remained on relaxation, aides said that Bush also was studying briefing materials for next week's trip to Poland, Hungary and the seven-nation economic summit in Paris.

And the vacation White House, like many others in the country, was eagerly awaiting Monday's expected U.S. Supreme Court abortion decision.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said that the White House would react to the decision whichever way it goes - early Monday afternoon.

Bush, who supported a woman's right to chose an abortion when he first ran for president in 1980, more recently has favored a constitutional amendment to outlaw the

2,200 receive crack charges in Florida bust

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) An unprecedented statewide crackdown by 1,000 officers ended early Sunday with nearly 2,200 people arrested on charges of using or dealing crack. Many suspects were back on the street within Operation Rock Pile also seized more than 3,000 "rocks" of the purified form of cocaine, generally sold in pea-sized amounts that are smoked in a pipe.

Many suspects were arrested by officers posing as dealers. Others were captured in raids and dramatic foot chases.

"It's gone way above our expecta-tions," said Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro, coordinator of the

At some points Saturday night, authorities took in suspects at a rate of 100 an hour, with more than a third of the arrests in urban southern Florida. More than 400 arrests took place in the mostly rural western Panhandle.

"It shows that crack is not just an urban problem," said Broward sheriff's spokesman Al Gordon. "We arrested people ranging from inner cities to the country, from kids to very mature adults.'

Among those arrested were Bessie Hardin, 59, and her son, O.T. Nelson, both of Kissimmee. "She had 11 grams of cocaine in her underwear," said Osceola County Sheriff's Lt. Rick Drew. "Her son had 3 grams on him."

The 48-hour effort, described as the largest single anti-drug campaign in the nation, targeted street-level users and dealers, the people who keep the big distribu-tors in business, said George Cro-lius, a Broward sheriff's spokesman.

Many of the suspects were charged with cocaine possession or sale, and then used bail bondsmen to post $5,000 to $10,000 bail.

"I'm just walking one out right after another," said an Orlandoarea bondsman who spoke on condition he not be identified. "For me, (the drug bust) is great."

Fittipaldi scores racing hat-trick

CLEVELAND (AP) - Emerson Fittipaldi ran off to his third straight victory, capturing the Cleveland Grand Prix Indy-car race Sunday under a blanket of heat and humidity almost as hot as the streaking Brazilian.

Fittipaldi, who now has won four of his last five starts, including the Indianapolis 500, earned his second triumph in three years on the rough Burke Lakefront Airport road circuit.

The 42-year-old driver, a two-time Formula One champion, avoided every problem on the bumpy 2.48-mile, 12-turn circuit laid on concrete runways and taxiways. He drove his Chevet-powered Penske PC18 across the finish line 16.95 seconds ahead of the Lola-Chevrolet of second-place Mario Andretti Fittipaldi, who also won two weeks ago at Detroit, took the lead from pole-winner Michael Andretti Sunday when the two made their first scheduled pit stops at the end of lap 26. While Fittipaldi got in and out cleanly, the younger Andretti bumped into the rear of the car driven by his father and teammate as Mario pitted just in front of him.

The winner earned $45,160 as he averaged 128.072 mph in a race run without any full-course caution flags and with no serious accidents or injuries. That speed was just shy of Fittipaldi's own race record of 128.421 set in 1987.

NCAA to announce Final Four site

Groups representing Indianapolis, Seattle, Charlotte, N.C., and East Rutherford, N.J., traveled to Traverse City, Mich., on Sunday to make 45-minute presentations to the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, chaired by new Big Ten Commisincentive for me to work harder. That would be quite a scene,

Getting to the semifinals won't be easy for Chang or McEnroe, who was the target of an anonymous death threat on Saturday. Police are investigating the telephone calls made to the All England Club and a national newspaper, which prompted extra security for McEnroe's match against Pugh on Centre Court.

McEnroe's next opponent is Australian John Fitzgerald, a doubles specialist who is making his third final-16 appearance at Wimbledon. If McEnroe wins, he would probably play fourthseeded Mats Wilander in the quarterfinals. Wilander, who hasn't dropped a set in his first three matches, plays unseeded Christo Van Rensburg of South Africa in the fourth round.

Chang faces an ever rockier road to the semis. First he must get past eighth-seeded Tim Mayotte, an excellent grass-court player who has reached the quarterfinals here five of the past eight years. The survivor faces the winner of the match between defending champion Stefan Edberg and 16th-seeded Amos Mansdorf of Israel.

group with countries such as Australia and New Zealand because of resistance from neighboring Arab nations. Israel also has been ostracized for its continuing sports links with South Africa.

All these factors have helped encourage Israelis to concentrate on local contests instead of international sports.

"When the Israeli media start covering worldwide sports," Mansdorf said, "that's when sports will get big in Israel."

A Mansdorf upset of Edberg might jolt some of his compatriots to attention, but the 23-year-old Israeli will have to play exceptionally well to defeat the Swede.

"He has a much better serve than I thought," said Greg Holmes, an American who lost in straight sets to Mansdorf in the third round. "He's a really good player. It's a question of whether he has a big enough game to beat a guy like Edberg."

Mansdorf, ranked 23rd in the world, lost his only previous forced to play in the Oceania encounter with Edberg and will be facing one of the best serveand-volley players in tennis.

Though Mansdorf has excellent side-to-side quickness, he is not always comfortable coming to the net for volleys, and the 5-foot-8, 140-pound right-hander cannot expect to overpower opponents.

Against Edberg, he will have to rely on his solid service return, especially from his backhand, and keep the Swede off balance with good service placement.

A dozen years ago, Jimmy Connors played a demonstration match in Israel against Mansdorf and other local junior players, and said, "I don't want to be around in 10 years when they are on the pro tour."

Connors lost last week in the second round at Wimbledon, while Mansdorf will be seeking his first Grand Slam quarterfi-

Johnson's sacrifice fly gave the Mets the lead in the first and an RBI single by Fernandez made it 2-0 in the second. Fernandez is 7-for-31 at the plate this season.

New York broke open the game with three runs in the third as Kevin McReynolds hit a sacrifice fly and Gregg Jefferies hit an RBI single. Third baseman Luis Qui-nones' fielding error allowed Mookie Wilson to score for a 5-0 lead.

Padres 5, Cardinals 2 ST.LOUIS—Bruce Hurst's second major-league hit triggered a fourrun third inning Sunday and led the San Diego Padres past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-2.

"What's the old saying, every squirrel finds an acorn once in a while?" San Diego manager Jack

McKeon said. Hurst was 1-for-35 at the plate

"I didn't think he was going to go through the whole season without another hit," McKeon said.

Hurst, who scored his first bigleague run, singled to lead off the third. Guerrero then booted Bip Roberts' grounder for an error and, one out later, Tony Gwynn walked to load the bases. Marvell Wynne hit a three-run double and scored Scott Scudder, 2-2, allowed five on Garry Templeton's double.

Move by U.S. military, civilians will hurt Panamanian economy

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) -Thousands of American servicemen and civilians finished moving over the weekend onto U.S. bases, widening the rift with the regime of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The U.S. military's Southern Command says the move is intended to "maintain a low military profile in the face of harassment by the Panamanian Defense Forces in recent

It also seems designed to increase pressure on Noriega to step down as chief of the defense forces and Panama's de facto leader.

It will deprive the country's already battered economy of about $60 million a year the Americans were spending. They will now make purchases in stores and other facilities within the Southern Command.

A total of 6,400 Americans, including dependents, were involved in the move, which was ordered in May by the Defense Department when violence broke out after the May 7 presidential election.

Government opponents and international observers said opposition candidates won the vote by 3-1. But Noriega voided the results, alleging interference in the campaign by the U.S. government, which has been trying to oust him since his indictment in Miami last year on drug trafficking charges.

The move to military bases involved not only servicemen, but also civilian employees of the Southern Command and its various branches.

All had been living in houses and apartments off base. On the base, unmarried personnel are assigned to regular barracks, while married people and families live in military housing. The biggest complaint is lack of privacy.

Civilians especially were reluctant to move. One civilian employee of the

However, there were 55 reports of harassment by Panamanian authorities in May and six in June. They included the detention of U.S. military personnel who were questioned by police in Panama City for alleged petty offenses and then released.

The mass move also disappointed some Panamanians who profited from the American presence off-base.
"It is going to be hard to rent those apartments again soon," said a superintendent of one 34-unit apartment building. It was leased early this year by the Southern Command for its servicemen and employees.

A real estate agent, who like the superintendent spoke on condition of anonymity, said the building owners went into debt to finance improvements - special water tanks, air conditioning, security - as conditions for a contract with the U.S. military. "They thought they were looking at long-term contracts," the agent said. The Americans were paying $15 million a year in rents alone in Panama. Their rent and the other money they spent helped keep this country's economy barely afloat after more than a year of U.S. economic sanctions imposed following Noriega's indict-

Braklaagte citizens earlier lost a legal appeal, and in March, police there were accused of beating people who refused to declare themselves citizens of Bophuthatswana.

There were conflicting accounts of Saturday's riot, with some reports quoting police as saying it broke out after officers tried to break up the meeting on grounds it was an "alleged illegal gathering."

In a later police statement, Col. D. George said law officers were the victims of an "unprovoked attack."

Residents claimed they did not know the whereabouts of the 2,000 reportedly taken into police custody, but other reports said they apparently were being kept under guard

The South African Press Association quoted her as saying some of those held were "gathered into an open space and stoned and beaten by the police.

She also said South African police had been called in to help restore order, but the Press Association quoted a police spokesman, Lt. R. Olivier, as saying South African officers "are not involved" in Bophuthatswana.

self-promotion. More than 15,000 people from 180 countries are in Pyongyang for the 13th World Festival of Youth and Students, the biggest international gathering ever staged by the communist government.

The banners were seized at the opening ceremonies Saturday. The Danish banner read "Human rights in North Korea too," while Finland's banner protested North Korea's refusal to allow the humanrights group Amnesty International to attend the one-week event.

The Finn delegation had decided to drop out of the festival to protest the confiscation but reversed its decision Sunday, after North Korea apologized and said two Amnesty International representatives would be given visas to attend

Matti Tohianen of the Finnish delegation said police hit the hands of the four students carrying the banner, and grabbed it during opening ceremonies. North Korea apparently balked at allowing Amnesty representation

because the group has criticized North Korea's human-rights record. The Danish delegation also was considering pulling out of the festival after police briefly detained three of its members for unfurling the human-rights banner during a speech by President Kim Il Sung. The Union of Nordic Center Youth issued a statement saying the confiscation of banners was "not within the spirit of the festival." Other delegates said they had received letters from the North Koreans warning they would be held

personally responsible for any actions at the opening ceremony that were critical of the host country or other participants. A Norwegian delegate said her group smuggled in a banner expressing solidarity with the suppressed Chinese pro-democracy movement. The Finnish delegates also circulated a statement calling for the Chinese government to "respect the freedom of expression and stop the ongoing arrests and executions. North Korea has supported China's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in that country. Twentyseven people have been executed since the movement was crushed by the flag-burning. Legislative bodies in at least 10 other states have approved resolutions criticizing the ruling or calling for an amendment to reverse it. And dozens of legislative leaders elsewhere said such sentiment ran strong in their states.

Rachel Kyte, a representative of the European National Youth Council, said her group was "not happy" about the staging of the festival in North Korea, one of the world's most closed and tightly controlled nations.

"As majority leader, I'll tell you this: If there are two or resolutions supporting a constitutional amendment against three votes against it, I would be honestly surprised," said Republican Rep. Craig Moody of Utah. The legislature there, as in many other states, is in summer recess. President George Bush on Friday proposed a 20-word constitutional amendment that would give states the right to prohibit desecration of the flag. It requires approval by two-thirds of the House and Senate and ratification by 38

military last month.

In Alaska, "it would pass within 30 days," declared Senate President Tim Kelly. "You're going to have a few liberals whining in the House, but they'll be overwhelmed by the majority of legislators and public opinion." The last constitutional amendment to gain the required 38

The Equal Rights Amendment died in 1982 after it got support from just 35 states within the time limit prescribed All states but Alaska and Wyoming have laws banning flag-burning, and lawmakers there have said their lack of states was the one allowing 18-year-olds to vote, in 1971.

such a law was an oversight. The Supreme Court ruling nullified state flag-protection laws. Most legislative leaders contacted by The Associated Press last week supported an amendment to overturn the court's ruling. Others were troubled by the idea.

"I am not a bleeding heart," said state Sen. Denny Jacobs, D-Ill., "but I don't support meddling with the Constitution." "I don't believe you honor the flag by dishonoring the basic rights contained in the Constitution and Bill of Rights," said Democratic House Speaker Joe King of Washington state. "Our current Constitution has worked well in protecting everything the flag stands for."

da Silva takes lead at Tour de France

Defending champ Delgado falls off pace to 12th place

LUXEMBOURG (AP) - Acacio da Silva of Portugal, who grew up in Luxembourg, grabbed the overall lead in the 76th Tour de France bicycle race Sunday after winning the 84-mile first stage through the

In Sunday's second stage, a team time trial in the afternoon, da Silva's Carrera team placed 12th, but he still held on to the overall leader's yellow jersey. The Super U team was the winner of the time trial in 53 minutes, 48 seconds over the 281/2 miles.

Defending champion Pedro Delgado of Spain fell far behind after a disastrous weekend of racing, including turning up late for the start of Saturday's prologue.

The competition, a 2,020-mile race that ends July 23 in Paris, opened with a victory by Eric Breukink of the Netherlands in the prologue. Breukink, however, finished far back in the pack in the first leg Sunday and dropped to ninth place by the end of the day.

Da Silva, whose family moved to Luxembourg when he was 8 years old, has the overall lead, 26 seconds ahead Denmark's Soren Lilholt. France's Laurent Fignon, the 1983 and 1984 winner, is third, 2:37 behind.

Delgado was one of the favorites this year after winning in 1988 by more than seven minutes. He encoutered problems both Saturday and Sunday and was buried in the standings.

In the prologue he arrived at the starting line late and lost nearly three minutes, being placed last. Then in the team event Sunday, he faltered in the final three miles, causing his Reynolds teammates to five minutes behind.

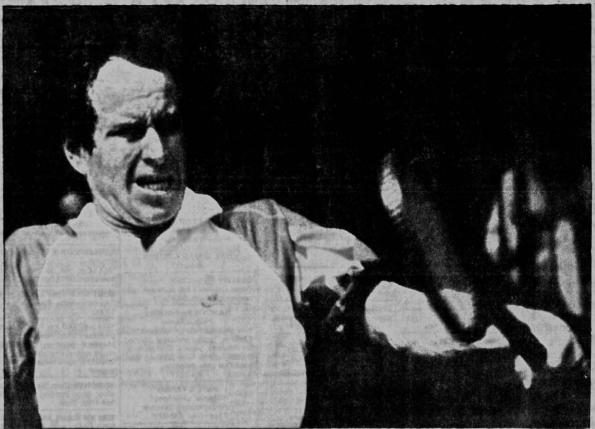

his hotel and was not available for

"He doesn't have anything wrong with him physically," said Francis LaFarge, the manager of Delgado's team. "We think it was more of a mental problem after what happened on Saturday.'

In Sunday's first stage, Da Silva, Lilholt and Roland Leclerc of France made an early breakaway that eventually built up to more than 11 minutes ahead of the pack at the 62.6-mile mark.

The gap narrowed to four minutes slow down and finish 22nd, almost at the end. The race was decided in the last hill as da Silva moved

"Sports in Israel, it's not the most important thing," he said. "News is more important. Within two hours the world can change, there can be a war."

Part of the reason for Israel's insularity is the isolation it has suffered in international sports. It has been the target of protests and boycotts, including India's decision to forfeit last year rather than play a Davis Cup match in Israel.

McEnroe has more than pride to lose

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)-With John McEnroe and Michael Chang heading toward a possible semifinal meeting at Wimbledon, the burning question is: Which would McEnroe drop if he lost, his promise or his pants?

After Chang won the French Open last month, McEnroe said he would drop his shorts on Centre Court if the 17-year-old Californian reached the final at Wimbledon.

At the time, McEnroe had little reason to worry. Although Chang had just become the youngest man to win a Grand Slam singles title, he was considered a claycourt phenomenon with little chance of winning on the grass at the All England Club.

But Chang has surprised the experts by winning his first three matches and moving within two victories of a possible confrontation with McEnroe, who improved with every match last week and appears to be a serious threat to win his fourth Wimbledon title.

So what will McEnroe do if he plays Chang in the semifinals and loses?

"I'm not holding my breath about dropping my pants yet," McEnroe said Saturday after his straight-set victory over Jim Pugh. "I'll be worried on Friday if he's in the semis.'

Chang, who rallied from a set down to eliminate Michiel Schapers in the third round, isn't concerned about McEnroe's man-

"That's his business, not mine," Chang said. "In a way, maybe it's See Chang, Page 7
