Bush praises changes in Poland and Hungary

One in, one out?

The Iowa athletic department Tuesday named Ruth Nelson the head volleyball coach, replacing seven-year coach Sandy Stewart, while womens' assistant basketball coach Marianna Freeman could be headed for the top spot at San Diego State. See Sports, page 10.

Kemps says HUD cleanup underway

HUD Secretary Jack Kemp said Tuesday that housing scandals at his department could cost the government $2 billion but also said he has begun steps to repair the damage. Kemp has suspended three programs as part of his investigation into allegations of mismanagement and fraud at HUD. See Nation/World, page 8.

Jagger and Co. to play Iowa State

WEATHER

Warm and humid today with a good chance of showers and thunderstorms.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — President George Bush, sped on his way by thousands of cheering Poles, on Tuesday hailed the democratic "reforms and changes" taking root in Hungary as he pursued an extraordinary journey to nourish freedom in communist lands.

"We want to work with Hungary to continue the changes and reforms you are going forward with in your great country," the president told several thousand people who braved the rain to hear his arrival remarks. More thousands lined the streets as Bush's motorcade made its way into the city, just minutes after a storm with hurricane-force winds blew through.

Air Force One brought Bush and the presidential party to Hungary — where Soviet troops once brutally crushed democratic yearnings — after a tumultuous scene in Poland at the birthplace of the Solidarity trade union movement.

"For those who say that freedom can never be denied, I say let them look at Poland," he told a cheering crowd estimated at 25,000 at a Solidarity monument outside the giant Lenin shipyards.

He said the struggles by Poland against the Nazis four decades ago and more recently against suppression of Solidarity had produced "a time when dreams can live again."

"We have sown new seeds," Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski told Bush before the president left on his 90-minute flight from one Iron Curtain country to another.

For Bush it was an altogether remarkable day, and one that took him from one Eastern bloc country where recent elections placed hundreds of opposition members in the parliament to a second where reformers and hardline communists now share power. Bush's trip served as a counterpoint to Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev's recent visits to West Germany and France.

Like Gorbachev, Bush looked ahead to an opportunity to surmount the 45-year Cold War and "end the division in Europe."

In Budapest, Bush noted the torrential rains that had eased just minutes before his arrival and told the thousands in Lajos Kossuth Square he was scrapping his planned speech to speak briefly "from the heart."

Referring to the address he will deliver Wednesday at Karl Marx University, Bush told the audience, "You'll have to listen to me tomorrow, I'm sure, at some drier time and some drier place."

He added to cheers that "long after this rain is gone, I am going to remember the warmth of the welcome from the people of Hungary."

Later, at a state dinner, Bush toasted his Hungarian hosts and told them, "Your nation is involved in an unprecedented experiment — a Communist system seeking to evolve towards a more open economy, towards a more open and pluralistic political system."

In turn, the chairman of the Communist Party, Rezső Nyers, told Bush that "the process of democratization has started. . . . We want to make use of all of the experience gained in the building of the American democracy."

Political science doctoral program ranked 6th best

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

A new study suggests that UI's doctoral program in political science is the sixth best in the nation, ranked above 88 other programs in the country, including Princeton, Stanford, the University of Michigan, the University of California at Berkeley and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The ranking is due to the fact that a greater proportion of graduates of the UI political science doctoral program are being cited by other professionals in the field than are graduates of a majority of other doctoral programs, according to the results of a five-year study published in a current issue of PS: Political Science and Politics, a professional political science publication.

Yale, Harvard, Northwestern University, the University of Rochester, Syracuse University and the University of Chicago ranked higher than the UI, respectively. The University of Rochester and Syracuse University tied for fourth place.

The study, conducted between 1981 and 1985, evaluated each university by counting how many doctoral recipients from the university were cited in political science journals. The number of citations was weighed in proportion to the size of the university's program population, so smaller programs were not harmed by their size.

Doug Madsen, chairman of the UI's political science department, said the department is much smaller than departments at many of the universities it was competing with in the study.

Madsen said the University of Michigan's department has 55 faculty members, the University of Ohio has about 45 and University of California at Los Angeles — which he said is comparable in size to the UI — has about 50, he said.

Iowa's political science department has 20 faculty members. See Poll Sci, Page 6

Olivier leaves acting world rich legacy

LONDON (AP) — Laurence Olivier, the foremost actor of a distinguished generation and the man whose Hamlet and Henry V defined Shakespeare for modern mass audiences, died Tuesday at 82.

A rare fusion of superb classical and extraordinary contemporary actor, Olivier was at home in the plays of Shakespeare, Shaw and Chekhov, as well as the movie thriller "Marathon Man" or the TV mimiseries "Brideshead Revisited."

Knighthood and ennobled, he was Lord Olivier when he died but still plain Laurence Olivier on his stage and screen credits. He also led a distinguished roll call of actor-knights and dames who made British stage and screen history.

The founding father of Britain's National Theater and two-time Academy Award winner was mourned throughout the acting world as the greatest of his time.

"It isn't too much to say that Olivier was perhaps the greatest man of the theater ever," said Sir Peter Hall, who succeeded him as artistic director of the National Theater.

Flags were lowered to half-staff outside the National Theater, and theaters from London's West End to Stratford — the birthplace of Shakespeare — were ordered to dim their exterior lights for an hour Tuesday night in respect.

Queen Elizabeth II sent condolences, and tributes came from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and former President Ronald Reagan.

"His last few days were very peaceful. He died in his sleep at noon. All the family were at his side," said Richard Olivier, the 27-year-old son of his third marriage, to Joan Plowright.

Death came at his home near Ashurst, a village near Steyning in West Sussex about 50 miles south of London.

A private funeral is planned, with a public memorial service in London later.

Olivier was the hero of his own life, fighting cancer, pleurisy and a muscle disease that made even handshakes agony. He endured two miserable marriages and years of paralyzing stage fright, contemplated murder and suicide, and battled his own rages, guilt and drinking.

He was renowned for his daring. "However many times you'd seen him, it was probably the most dangerously thrilling moment you'd seen on any stage," actor Jeremy Brett said Tuesday.

In Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey into Night," Olivier brought nightly gasps of alarm from the audience by leaping backward off a table and crashing to the floor. He was then 64.

Cheney describes plan to overhaul purchasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, predicting he can save taxpayers $30 billion by fiscal year 1993, outlined a complex plan Tuesday to overhaul the Pentagon's bureaucracy and tighten control over its massive arms-purchasing systems.

His proposals include paring the number of people involved in purchasing decisions by thousands and giving more authority to the undersecretary of defense in that area, thereby trimming some powers of the individual military services.

Cheney was quick to say he had no magic solution for ridding the Pentagon and the defense establishment of fraud and abuse, or making it more efficient. Nor will he be able to make his program work on his own, he said.

"There's no silver bullet here. . . . We have a blueprint that we plan to pursue . . . to try to significantly improve the way we do business," Cheney said of his plan at a Pentagon press conference.

"If we're going to be successful, it will be because we got Congress to cooperate," he said.

His report was requested by President George Bush five months ago as part of a major review spurred by the weapons-procurement scandals that rocked the defense establishment.

Weapons purchases account for more than $60 billion of this year's $305 billion military budget and involve more than a half-million civilian and uniformed employees of the Defense Department.

Cheney acted Tuesday to put some of the changes in place, in particular the realignment of his top-level Pentagon management team. Other steps require congressional approval, while still others will need work "throughout my tenure at the department," the secretary said.

Even before its official release, the package stirred opposition on Capitol Hill, where some said it doesn't go into enough detail.

Ecumenical committee will install 7-foot peace pole in downtown I.C.

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council gave approval Tuesday night to what may appear to be a simple pole being erected on the Iowa City Downtown Pedestrian Mall.

But the council's decision actually gave approval to include Iowa City in a worldwide peace movement that has erected similar "peace poles" in over 2,000 cities.

The seven-foot-long pole bears the inscription "May Peace Prevail on Earth" in four languages — English, Japanese, Chinese and Russian.

The Iowa City Ecumenical Peace Committee — a representative body of 20 Iowa City churches that promotes peace issues — requested permission to erect the pole downtown to serve as a focal point for future peace gatherings such as Hiroshima and Martin Luther King Jr. remembrances, according to member LaVonn Horton.

"We think the pole is a symbol of what our community wishes to say about the world in terms of peace making," said Horton. "The peace our veterans fought for needs to be nurtured, and that's what we're doing."

Horton said the pole was also appropriate for Iowa City because of its large number of foreign visitors.

The peace pole was donated by Byron and Martie Olson of North Liberty. The Olsons received the pole after organizing the Iowa segment of the Great Peace March in 1986.

"We were trying to decide what to do with it," said Byron Olson. "We thought (donating the pole) would be the best — more people could see it that way."

An Iowan returns as new president of Mercy Hospital

Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Richard Breon will be coming home to Iowa for more than just a visit when he returns on July 31 to fill the positions of president and chief executive officer of Mercy Hospital.

In assuming this post, which is presently held by Sister Mary Venarda, Breon will be leaving his jobs as associate administrator and chief operating officer of Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, Texas, where he has been since 1986.

"This is a great opportunity for me and my entire family," Breon said. "I love Iowa City — the whole university-based atmosphere is both challenging and exciting, and I welcome the chance to work with Mercy's staff and the rest of the community."

A native of Storm Lake, Iowa, and a graduate of Muscatine High School in Muscatine, Breon said his decision to head Mercy Hospital had a lot to do with coming back home to Iowa.

"My wife is from Iowa originally, too, so we have relatives all over the area," he said.

As equally enthused about Breon's new appointment as he is are the individuals who appointed him.

"He's a very well-prepared, articulate young man with strong leadership qualities," said Sister Joan Marie Hoffman, chairwoman of the Mercy Hospital Board of Directors.

"With good experience in Iowa as well as elsewhere, Mr. Breon understands the rural setting here and the relationship Mercy has with the University and the Veteran's Hospital," she said.

Maintaining and strengthening the link between Mercy, the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the Veteran's Hospital is high on the list of Breon's priorities.

"It's important to continue to cement the relationships between these three (hospitals)," Breon said. "There have been many cooperative ventures started with all three facilities, and there will be many more to come — I think the physicians themselves would

Kinsella to read from work at Union

W.P. "Bill" Kinsella, author of "Shoeless Joe," on which the current hit film "Field of Dreams" was based, will read excerpts from his work at 8 p.m. Tuesday, July 18, in the Union Ballroom.

Kinsella is teaching two one-week courses on short fiction writing from July 9 to 22 at the UI as part of the Iowa Summer Writing Program sponsored by the UI Division of Continuing Education. The program, now in its third year, features a series of one- and two-week workshops on creative writing.

Kinsella's course on short fiction focuses on analyzing and critiquing works submitted by the participants, and on understanding current literary trends in the nation's leading literary magazines.

Kinsella, a 1978 graduate of the Iowa Writers' Workshop, has published 14 books. His novel "Shoeless Joe" won him a Houghton Mifflin Literary Fellowship. "Field of Dreams," starring Kevin Costner, Burt Lancaster and James Earl Jones, is currently showing in theaters nationwide.

Kinsella's awards include the Books in Canada "First Novel Award," the Canadian Authors' Association "Prize for Fiction" and the Writer's Guild of Alberta "O'Hagan Novel Medal."

Parks commission to hold meeting

The Iowa City Parks and Recreation Commission will meet at 5:30 p.m. today at the Robert A. Lee Community Center, 220 S. Gilbert St.

Items to be discussed include the possibility of acquiring land at 510 Reno St.; the three-year Community Development Plan; reports from the Parks and Recreation Foundation; and ice rink and public relations committee.

The commission will review its annual report and discuss the "Guide to Historic Iowa City."

City workers given special recognition

Six city employees received special recognition Tuesday during the Iowa City Council meeting. The six saved the life of a heart attack victim June 13 at City Park.

Those honored include Department of Parks and Recreation employees Andy Christiansen, pool manager, Janet Ellerbrock, program supervisor, Trevor Nebel, lifeguard, and Melissa Summers, lesson coordinator; and Iowa City police officers Daniel Dreckman and Charles Singleman.

WRAC to hold talk on Indonesia

The Women's Resource and Action Center will hold a talk on "Marriage Laws — Women in Indonesia," a look at the impact of marriage laws on the lives of women in Indonesia at 12:10 p.m. today at the center, 130 N. Madison St.

Harnawa Davfril, a practicing attorney in Indonesia, will facilitate the discussion and talk about her work at the Institute for Consultation and Legal Aid for Women and Families.

Administrative transitions require nominal changes

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Making the transition from David Vernon, acting vice president for student services and academic affairs, to Peter Nathan, newly appointed vice president, will require some nominal changes but little administrative restructuring, UI officials said.

With the retirement of Duane Spriestersbach, vice president for research, and the phased retirement of Philip Hubbard, vice president for student services, the UI will be reorganizing its structure to accommodate the loss of two of its top administrators while molding a new staff for the incoming Nathan.

On June 21, the state Board of Regents approved the appointment of Nathan as vice president in the newly created Office of Student Services and Academic Affairs and dean of faculties. Because of prior commitments to Rutgers University and the MacArthur Foundation, Nathan will be unable to start at the UI until late in December of 1989.

As a result of both retirements and Nathan's belated appointment, the UI has taken measures to ensure a smooth transition from Vernon's office to Nathan's. Those measures were outlined in a memo from Vernon.

"In light of the retirement of Vice President Spriestersbach and the phased retirement of Vice President Hubbard, President Rawlings has decided to shift some assignments within the central administration," the memo said. "As of July 1, Hubbard will continue over the year to assure a smooth transition as the various cultural affairs units he has supervised are transferred to Associate Vice President Fred Woodard."

Hubbard will work with Woodard to oversee the Iowa Center for the Arts, Hancher Auditorium, the Museum of Art and the Old Capitol Museum. Administrative units that once reported to Hubbard's Office of Student Services will now report to the Office of Student Services and Academic Affairs.

Hubbard said he will be retained as a consultant for student services during the transition period, diminishing his responsibilities and enabling him to focus on areas of concern while facilitating Nathan's administrative needs.

"My principal responsibility will be the Opportunity at Iowa program — designed to increase the number of minority students who receive a degree and the number of minorities on the faculty," he said. "The purpose for the changes is to be sure he (Nathan) has the freedom to appoint the people that would be most effective in working with him."

Other changes within the administrative hierarchy include naming Leo Davis, acting associate vice president for planning and budget, the acting dean of the Graduate College. To decrease the amount of paper traffic in the new office, all budgetary matters will move to Vernon's office through Davis.

Phillip Jones, dean of student services, will continue at his position in addition to assuming the responsibilities of associate vice president for student support services. With student support services, Jones will coordinate the administration and also oversee student discipline.

The ongoing administrative hopscotch that precedes Nathan's arrival seems extensive, but it will allow the future vice president a greater amount of lateral mobility, Vernon said.

"He already understands how the office works, but when he comes in he'll have to take a look at the organization," Vernon said. "If he gets here and feels he needs to shift some things around, then he will."

The Rolling Stones prepare to rock the Cyclone Stadium

AMES (AP) — The Rolling Stones announced Tuesday their 1989 North American tour will include a stop at Iowa State University.

On their first tour since 1981, the band is scheduled to stop Oct. 8 at Cyclone Stadium at ISU.

Mick Jagger was joined by bandmates Keith Richards, Ron Wood, Bill Wyman and Charlie Watts in the news conference at Grand Central Terminal in New York City. The tour, which will begin Sept. 1, will coincide with the release of their album "Steel Wheels."

Concert organizers said tickets for the tour will go on sale July 29, but they said ticket prices for the Ames show have not been set. The Rolling Stones last played in Iowa at the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls on Nov. 20, 1981. Organizers estimated 50,000 seats would be available for the Ames concert.

The band's most recent album was 1986's "Dirty Work."

The Stones, whose hits include "I Can't Get No Satisfaction," "Jumpin' Jack Flash" and "Honky Tonk Women," become the latest veteran rock act to take to the road this summer.

The first leg of the tour includes these dates:

Buffalo, N.Y., Rich Stadium, Sept. 1; Toronto, Exhibition Stadium, Sept. 3; Pittsburgh, Three Rivers Stadium, Sept. 6; East Troy, Wis., Alpine Valley, Sept. 9 and 11;

Cincinnati, Riverfront Stadium, Sept. 14; Raleigh, N.C., Carter-Finley Stadium, Sept. 16; St. Louis, Busch Stadium, Sept. 17; Philadelphia, John F. Kennedy Stadium, Sept. 21; Washington, Robert F. Kennedy Stadium, Sept. 25; and Cleveland, Municipal Stadium, Sept. 27.

Additional dates will be announced later for shows in New York; Los Angeles; Vancouver, British Columbia; Atlanta; Tampa, Fla.; Foxboro, Mass.; Detroit; Montreal; Indianapolis; Minneapolis; Jacksonville, Fla.; Houston; Birmingham, Ala.; Dallas; Denver; Kansas City, Mo.; New Orleans; and Miami.

An Iowa City woman reported her residence at 120 Evans St. was burglarized Monday around 7:15 p.m., according to Iowa City police reports.

The woman stated that her screen was cut at the point of entry, and several unspecified items were taken, according to police reports.

Some of the items were subsequently found in a neighbor's yard, according to police reports.

The matter is currently under investigation, according to reports.

• An Iowa City woman reported her camera and her purse and its contents were stolen sometime Monday night at The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., according to police reports.

The woman allegedly left the items on a table while she used the phone, according to police reports.

• Two vehicles parked at 504 S. Johnson St. were ransacked around 1:50 a.m., according to police reports.

Items taken include a tennis racket. Police have no suspects in the case, according to police reports.

• A 1984 maroon Oldsmobile Cutlass was reportedly vandalized Tuesday around 1:40 a.m., according to police reports.

The car was parked at 2203 Hickory Court. Damages were not specified, according to police reports.

• Cassette tapes and cash were stolen Monday around 6:50 p.m. from a car parked at the Hawkeye Court parking lot, according to police reports.

Approximate value of the items is around $13, according to police reports.

• A car was reportedly damaged Monday around 11:30 p.m. while parked on South Grand Avenue, according to UI Campus Security reports.

Damage is estimated around $475, according to reports.

UI needs $26 million in repairs

Physical Plant director: $4 million could be saved annually

Kathryn Stevens
The Daily Iowan

The UI is the second-largest consumer of energy in the Big Ten because so little money is funneled from the Iowa Legislature into building repairs, James Christenson, director of the UI Physical Plant, said.

Because the UI was denied money for building repairs over the last 10 years, it now needs $26 million to repair leaking window panes, deteriorating rooftops and outdated equipment, Christenson said.

Spending the $26 million could cut UI energy use by 30 percent and ultimately save $4 million a year, he added.

"It pays for us to find a way to permanently save," he said. "Energy conservation is the best way to save money for (the UI) because then we don't have to import all that stuff. It means that much less money for fuel goes out (of the university)."

Last year, Christenson proposed spending $56 million over 10 years on UI building maintenance. This would allow $2.6 million to be spent yearly on the backlog of maintenance needs and $3 million to be spent yearly on present building maintenance needs, he said. The Iowa Legislature approved spending $1.3 million — one-fourth of what he requested.

The legislature may not have appropriated the funds because the present terminology may not have explained where the money is being spent, Christenson said. A 10-minute video tape will be presented during the state Board of Regents July 26 meeting to help show where building repairs funds go.

For example, the $1.3 million budgeted for building repairs is used to cover both new laboratories and building repairs, Christenson said. Last year, $500,000 was spent for new laboratories and $800,000 was spent on building repairs, he said.

Ohio State University spent $14 million on building maintenance needs during the same year. Comparatively, that amount would equal the $5.6 million per year Christenson requested, he said.

"We use 57 percent more (energy) than Ohio State did, which is partially due to building maintenance. They take care of their buildings," Christenson said. "They use the least (amount of energy) of all, which, I think, says something."

But limited available funds have meant that the Iowa Legislature needed to make choices on what to spend money on, said both Christenson and Cindy Eisenhower, director of business and finance at the Board of Regents office.

The two disagreed on why state-delegated money was scarce for building maintenance.

"Whenever there's any money at all, it goes into new buildings because that's where the glamour is," Christenson said. "I'm not saying we don't need these, but I'm saying that as stewards of the taxpayers' money for buildings, we're supposed to be maintaining those."

Eisenhower agreed that addressing the huge backlog of building maintenance need was "critical," but said giving money for new academic programs was a priority last year.

"It was the first year time in years the university received any new programs," Eisenhower said.

She added that this year the backlog of building maintenance needs may be addressed.

Dick Gibson, director of planning and administrative service said energy conservation is an investment.

"If we can keep the savings, it's like pulling ourselves up by the bootstraps," he said. "The savings continue forever as long as the system is in use."

One way to obtain money may be a bond proposal which will be introduced at the next state Board of Regents meeting, Christenson said. It would require a $12.7 million investment but would pay for itself in 5.4 years.

Council votes 5-2 to accept renovation bid

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council awarded the contract for the renovation of the Iowa City Civic Center to the 5-2 bidder Tuesday night by a 5-2 vote, despite the bid being $84,100 more than the city architect's estimate of $865,000.

The $949,093 project is part of a three-phase, $2.2 million plan to renovate the center, located at 410 E. Washington St., over the next six years. The first two phases of the project will result in the remodeling of the police and fire departments.

While several council members expressed disappointment at receiving only one bid — from McComas-Lacina Construction Co. Inc. of Iowa City — a majority of the council rejected the idea of rebidding the project, citing the excessive delay in construction and cost of the process of rebidding.

"We would have preferred to see more bids come in, but the project is badly needed," Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said. "It has been shelved many times, and we need to proceed now."

Construction on the project is now slated to begin in August. Rebidding the project could have meant a delay of as much as nine months, according to Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins.

McComas-Lacina originally submitted a bid which was $121,700 over the architect's estimate, but after negotiations with the city the bid was trimmed by $37,600.

Councilors Randy Larson and Karen Kubby both voted against the contract. Larson said he didn't think rebidding the project would have caused that much of a delay, and added he was "opposed to a process that only produces one bid."

"You don't get the best possible price if you only ask one person," Larson said.

Larson also said the delay in renovating the civic center would not have an effect on public safety, but that paying the extra $84,100 would have a negative impact on taxpayers.

In light of the fact that only one bid was received on the project, Larson suggested the city's bidding process needed to be re-examined.

"We need to send a message that we can't keep doing this," Larson said.

Water supply diminishes, I.C. consumption increases

Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

As Iowa City's water supply diminishes, its water consumption figures are skyrocketing, according to Edward Brinton, superintendent of the Iowa City Water Treatment Plant.

Iowa City's water plant pumped a near record 10.2 million gallons of water a day last weekend, surpassing last summer's highest figures by about .2 million gallons, Brinton said.

"We've had maybe two or three days in the last five years that we've pumped that much water," he said.

But Brinton said there are no plans yet for water rationing. "Right now, we're doing OK. Somehow everything clicked this weekend," he said. "Right now, we've got all our machines and processors tuned and operating as well as we can."

In spite of the 100-degree temperatures, Iowa City actually gained water in its inventory over the weekend, in part due to the use of a new experimental chemical, chlorine dioxide, Brinton said.

But he added that as long as three-digit temperatures continue, the risk of a pump motor failing is high — and one machine could mean water rationing.

"This is severe — you've got 100 degrees outside, and if you run that way for days you'll have a machine failing that would do just fine in 70-degree weather," Brinton said.

A water rationing plan in Cedar Rapids became effective Monday, according to Tom Preston of the Cedar Rapids Department of Water.

Cedar Rapids residents will have specific days and times that they can water their yards, and those who disregard the plan could be fined, Preston said.

"There's just not enough water to sustain the demand," he said. Brinton offered some suggestions for Iowa City residents to help avoid a water shortage, including watering lawns at night.

"If you do water your lawn, water at night because the water doesn't evaporate as much, and soak it really good once or twice a week," he said. "I always say, take a bath with a friend — or with your dog or something."

Iowa City is already being asked to be frugal with electricity, with Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. declaring a peak alert Monday and Tuesday.

"We're asking our customers to avoid using high wattage appliances (for example, dishwashers and electric clothes dryers) during daylight hours," said Iowa-Illinois District Manager Tom Hoogerwerf.

If Iowa City continues to push the electricity supply to its limits, he said, the company will eventually have to build new power plants, which would send electricity rates soaring.

Polish overture

As if to counteract the public lethargy among Poles, President George Bush used words calculated to bring them from their torpor.

On Monday Bush told the Sejm, Poland's parliament, that he will ask Congress for a Polish-aid package including $100 million for Poland's private business and industry and $15 million for environmental improvements. He also proffered a five-year grace period in the repayment of Poland's $1 billion debt to the United States, adding that he will encourage Poland's other creditors to do likewise.

Termed "modest" by the Wall Street Journal, these measures affirm U.S. support of a liberalized Polish economy pulling away from the Soviet Union — though $100 million is just a drop in the U.S. budget bucket. The offer of environmental aid comes none too soon (but perhaps rather late) in rectifying heavy industry's abuses, mostly of Krakow's air and water.

But Bush's offer to reschedule Poland's loan payments is overly generous. The United States has loaned billions of dollars to various governments, and in many cases has yet to see the first penny of the loans — or very much of the interest — repaid. And Poland, with a remaining debt to the United States of $1 billion, does not have the highest or most troublesome debt to repay.

Certainly Poland can maintain its economy (especially with U.S. economic aid) and repay its debts, or the interest upon them, according to previous agreements.

It appears that this part of Bush's overture, however well-intended, is an attempt to release Europe from its Gorbachev-induced thrall — and increase the United States' sphere of influence in a Europe that, envisioning continental unity, increasingly does not want it there at all.

Forced charity?

It is difficult for many to picture lawyers as "Good Samaritans," but that is the role envisioned by a report issued Tuesday by a New York panel. If implemented, the proposal of a mandatory pro bono system requiring 20 hours of public legal service a year would be a substantial effort toward justice.

The panel's suggestion responds to Reagan administration cutbacks and the inability of voluntary efforts and state funds to meet the growing need for legal counsel. Reports have estimated that the typical low-income family experiences from one to seven or more serious civil legal problems each year. Unfortunately, the high cost of assistance prevents many wrongs from being redressed.

Opponents of compulsory pro bono legal aid argue that forced charity is unconstitutional — it amounts to "involuntary servitude" and an unlawful taking of lawyers' property rights.

The fact remains that in repeated challenges, the courts have refused to find mandatory pro bono programs unconstitutional. "Involuntary servitude" in the 13th Amendment has generally been limited to racial slavery, and references to "property rights" in the 5th and 14th amendments have not been found to include personal services.

All citizens are entitled to their days in court. But many lack the means to assert their fundamental rights to basic human services, and do not have the legal knowledge necessary to represent themselves adequately. Nor should they have to. Attorneys, with their strict monopoly on the skills necessary to redress injustices, have a moral obligation to provide this vital service.

Attorneys in New York and elsewhere should welcome the opportunity to raise public opinion of the legal profession.

CIA defection

In Sunday's New York Times Victor Gundarev, a former Soviet spy who defected to the United States three years ago, claimed he is being ill-treated by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The CIA yesterday vehemently denied the allegation, but both Gundarev's and the CIA's credibilities may be permanently ruined in light of the flap.

There are a number of possible reasons for Gundarev's allegations. He may be a KGB agent planted in this country to inform would-be defectors the CIA will greet them with less than open arms. Or, he may be looking for a way to redefect with ease.

But the CIA does not deny Gundarev's charges that the agency tapped his phone, opened his mail and cheated him out of $10,000.

Ironically, even before Gundarev had spoken out, congressional officials disclosed that the House and Senate Intelligence Committees decided several weeks ago to re-examine the CIA's handling of defectors in light of several "deficiencies." Coincidence? CIA officials say yes.

It is possible Gundarev is taking advantage of the timing of the U.S. Senate investigation to further his own causes. But regardless of his allegations, the initial Senate report raises serious questions about CIA handling of defectors. The full committee investigation should remove some of the secrecy.

The CIA has never had to comment on its policy toward defectors but, in light of the Gundarev allegations, it must change soon, especially in light of potential Chinese defectors who may soon be arriving.

Anger comes as no surprise

Those who reasonably call for calm heads and rational voices in the coming battles over abortion are missing the point. The U.S. Supreme Court, specifically packed for the purpose, has started to strip Roe v. Wade from the Constitution. It has declared abortion a free fire zone, up to the will of circuslike state legislatures.

There are two distinct sides to this issue, but each is speaking a completely different language. Compromise and balance, the lubricants of representational democracy, just won't work here.

Jackie Fordice, director of Iowa City's "Defenders for Life," told The Daily Iowan on Tuesday that she was "surprised" by the number of pro-choice supporters that showed up at last Monday's Pentacrest rally. I think she was sincere in her surprise; after all, she thinks abortion is murder, and how could anyone support murder? Indeed, the exploited foot soldiers of the anti-abortion crusade believe that women who have abortions are either duped or simply don't realize what they're doing. It's one of the tactics of Operation Rescue, and other fronts of the "Right to Life" movement, to call women seeking abortions "victims." According to the demonology of the fundamentalists behind these groups, it is the health-care providers who should be publicly vilified for preying on innocent and gullible women. (Of course, however "victimized" they may be, these women are still terrorized outside of clinics by anti-abortionists.)

So, of course Jackie Fordice is surprised. She can't believe women and men are standing up, demanding, screaming, marching, fighting, crying for choice, almost as if their very lives depended on it. The Citizens for Decency of Cedar Rapids who marched with the Reverend Larry Johnson in January's Operation Rescue attack on Westlawn were equally surprised by the large numbers of vocal pro-choice supporters who met them in the early morning cold.

We must not forget that behind the pinstripes, the token spokeswomen and the medical rhetoric, anti-abortionists are maneuvered by right-wing fundamentalists — who are what used to be called, back when the country really was kinder and gentler, the "lunatic fringe." There is no arguing, no debating, no compromising with people who think they own the Truth (just ask Salman Rushdie). They wish to force their morality on all of us, regardless of the constitutionally prescribed separation of church and state, regardless of civil and equal rights, regardless of the 13th Amendment (which prohibits involuntary servitude), regardless of the rights of privacy.

What Ronald Reagan, Edwin Meese and the intellectual storm-troopers of the Heritage Foundation could not push through Congress — the counterrevolution against civil rights for minorities, New Deal liberalism, the Warren court and women in general — they have achieved through packing the federal courts. Don't fool yourself about Reagan — he was a little slow, but his allies were brilliant, stacking the courts with young conservative white men who will be wielding the power of last legal resort for decades. They viciously attack judicial activism while practicing their own version of it relentlessly. In them, the legacy of Reagan will be here long after he's gone, and all of us will be nearby for it.

Still, Jackie Fordice is surprised that some people are not going to take it lying down. I keep coming back to the naiveté of Jackie Fordice and the innocence, yes the innocence, behind the fanatical faith I saw burning in the eyes of the Operation Rescue people. This religiously possessed innocence, in unholy alliance with powerful right-wing money, is as potent and frightening as any combination of power and zealotry can be.

Those who support choice will do so until the very end, because they are struggling to control their own bodies. Choice means keeping the figurative and literal hands of the state, the church, any man or woman, off our bodies. That's right, our bodies — because fundamentalists aren't going to be satisfied with colonizing women's bodies alone. After prohibition of abortion comes prohibition against birth control, and then...

My God, who could be surprised at the pro-choice turnout? The small-town religious lunatics are marching with their crosses held high, ready to crucify the unbelievers, the heretics, the ungodly. Thomas Jefferson's "firebell in the night" is again ringing out its warning.

BLAD OLDESLOE, West Germany — Blank stares, smiles and tears of frustration. That pretty much sums up my first week of work in West Germany, at Hako-Werke, a company that manufactures sweepers and cleaning machines.

The clock said 7:42 a.m. when I punched in for work the first day, and I was nervous, wishing I knew even a little German. I was slightly early, as most of my co-workers arrived around 8, but I wanted to make sure I found the office. It wasn't easy.

Verkaufsabteilungen — that was where I was supposed to go. I passed Finanzbuchhaltung, Verkaufplanung, Einkauf, Personalverwaltung, Geschäftsführung. All seemed to be meaningless words.

I'd had two months to prepare to spend the summer in Germany, but jogging to German tapes and watching "Das Boot" were hardly adequate.

It was the beginning of a long day of frustration, of feeling helpless, useless, and left out. German words and conversations flew all around me, and I felt secluded in my own world. I'd had two months to prepare for a summer in Germany, but jogging to German tapes and watching "Das Boot" were hardly adequate. I was a foreigner who didn't know the language, and that made me suddenly 10 years old, instead of 22. The first morning passed slowly. I didn't dare answer the phone, and I couldn't tell if the people in the office were asking me to answer it. I tried to read up on the company, but all the literature was in — what else — German. Then I moved to the computer. Settling down behind the familiar-looking IBM-compatible keyboard, I quickly realized nothing would be easy for the next three months, not even this — the "y" and "z" keys were reversed, and every time I typed "you," I got "zou." I couldn't find the enter key because it said AUSF, and to delete something I needed to hit a key named Loesch. User friendly? Not to me.

Just as I was trying to decode the einrück, dezi tab, misch and hilfe buttons, the entire office stopped working.

Someone tried to explain Frustuck to me. I figured out that it was a breakfast break when everyone pulled yogurt, apples and freshly sliced bread out of their desks. It lasted for 15 minutes, and at 9:30 work continued.

That was when I learned the word ubersetzung, or translate. "OK, Julie," a co-worker told me in German. "Translate this letter to English, and then fax it to the office in Korea. Be sure to make a copy when you're done."

I stared back blankly, not fully understanding what she had asked me, but trying to look intelligent. She explained three more times, then pointed to my German-English dictionary. Fine, I thought, no problem. I looked over the colorful brochure she'd handed me to translate, a technical description of a sweeper called the "Hamster 1050." That's when I found that none of the words the brochure used, like Kleintraktionszellen or Netzspannungsabhangiger, were in the dictionary.

I was still at it at when lunch rolled around at 12:30. We ate in a small cafeteria and returned to the office promptly at 1. Four hours later I was nearly ready to fax the five paragraph letter, but the office was deserted — most Germans only work to 4 or 4:30. I decided to try to fax it on my own, since I had used fax machines all the time in the States. No luck. The screen used words like Ausdruck, Geahert Waehlet and Uebertragungsfehler.

Moments later, the phone buzzed, and a fax slowly came across from the United States. It was, ironically enough, a note of encouragement from my father. I placed the memo on my desk and rode home happily through the cobblestone streets of the tiny town.

It's almost as if I'm regressing, yet growing older at the same time. Maybe tomorrow I'll have a birthday or two.

Cheney also seeks relief from some congressional oversight requests, complaining that Congress requires a "staggering" amount of reports, inquiries and testimony from the military.

To emphasize that point, Cheney and his deputy Donald Atwood stood beside two five-foot high stacks of reports that Congress had requested from the Pentagon during the past year. One of the reports cost $1.9 million to produce, the secretary said.

"I'm convinced nobody ever reads these reports," Cheney quipped, evoking laughter from his audience, "It's make-work." Before taking the top Pentagon job this year, Cheney was a Republican leader in the House.

Cheney also is suggesting that Congress implement fully a two-year defense budget process and establish select committees in both houses to review and rewrite the maze of federal procurement laws.

Asked how many jobs would be cut due to the paring down of the system, neither Cheney nor Atwood provided a specific answer.

Cheney said that while more than 580,000 military and civilian personnel are involved in the acquisition process, much work is being done because of the oversight requirements imposed by Congress, and savings "will depend a lot upon the kind of support and cooperation we get on Capitol Hill."

Quered about possible resistance to the reforms on the part of the military officers who may lose some clout over weapons programs, Cheney said that he'd taken care to bring the military service heads into planning his report and that he believed "most people in the department will, in fact, support it."

Many of the ideas included in the reform package were first proposed in the 1986 Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management, also known as the Packard Commission.

The secretary's goal is to eliminate some layers in the military's top management and establish "a clear chain of command" in the arms procurement process, said one Defense Department official familiar with Cheney's thinking.

The proposals include:

- Establishing an executive panel to make all the major decisions for the department.

The board would be composed of the secretary, the deputy secretary, the undersecretary, the deputies for procurement and acquisitions, the heads of the various services and the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

The panel would be smaller than the current Defense Resources

Board, which advises Cheney on major weapons and budgetary decisions.

- Allowing the deputy secretary of defense to oversee the Pentagon's system for planning, programming and devising its budget.

He would oversee the Defense Planning and Resources Board, which also will be asked to come up with a 20-year "road map" on the long-term needs and investment plans for the department.

- Enhancing the powers of the undersecretary of defense for acquisition — dubbed the "acquisition czar." The undersecretary would have "full authority for major acquisition programs," which would trim some of the services' powers.

- Paring down and consolidating overlapping structures in the acquisition system, eliminating "layers and functions that have no value."

The report notes that some 580,000 civilian and military personnel around the world are involved in the procurement process. The report suggests trimming the organizations on a phased basis "by at least 15 percent" by 1993.

- Establishing a Defense Contract Management Agency to consolidate contract administration activities and ride herd on the contracts after they have been awarded.

Madsen said he thinks the study will improve the UI's program by recruiting more "first class" faculty and graduate students here.

"(The study) does two things for our program," he said. "One is it will make it easier to recruit first-class people to our faculty because each potential recruit to the faculty will want to know they're joining a program that has excellent features, and this study tells them that this program is first-class."

Madsen said the study will also help generate an excellent pool of graduate student applicants to the program.

"It will reinforce and enhance trends that are already present," he added.

Madsen, a graduate of UCLA, said he came to the UI program in 1971 and has seen increases in the student population which have not been matched by any faculty increases.

"The undergraduate program is much larger (than it was in 1971)," he said. "Enrollment in the last 10 years has doubled, but the faculty is exactly the same size as it was when I came."

The UI political science department — with 20 professors — is the smallest in the Big Ten.

"There are 22 graduate students who are worked to death by the large number of undergraduate students," Madsen said. "Counting the pre-law group, we have 700 people assigned to our department as majors."

Political science graduate students at the UI act largely as teaching assistants, Madsen said, adding that the department supports a successful UI tradition of integrating research projects into teaching.

"Graduate students discover, approve of and get involved in this tradition very quickly," Madsen said. "And I think it helps them in their future careers."

In other studies of a similar nature, Madsen said the UI political science department has also ranked very high.

One other study asked what proportion of students coming out of doctoral programs were working in research universities as opposed to going elsewhere.

"Iowa ranked very high in that study," Madsen said. "Even higher than it ranked in this study, I think."

He attributed part of the UI program's success to this tradition of bringing the interest and excitement about research projects into the classroom, and the rest to "hard work."

Bush

The thrust of Bush's two-day visit to Hungary was largely similar to that of his trip to Poland — showcasing American support for the economic and political change sweeping a nation where Soviet troops once brutally suppressed democratic yearnings, proposing improved trade opportunities with the United States and strengthening cultural and business ties.

In Hungary, as in Poland, Bush's goal was to nudge a Soviet bloc country toward private enterprise, and the target of his attention was a willing pupil.

Hungary already encourages private entrepreneurs, has a small but energetic stock market, and permits the sort of free speech that the Bush administration sees as going hand-in-glove with capitalism.

Also like Poland, the Hungarians have Soviet troops stationed on their territory. And, like Poland, the president would like to see the forces removed but has not made a big point of it.

Bush goes to Paris on Thursday for an economic summit meeting, then to the Netherlands on Monday and Tuesday before returning to the United States.

In his final hours in Poland, Bush made a pilgrimage to the birthplace of the Solidarity union movement in Gdansk, where he was cheered by thousands.

"Today to those who think that hopes can be forever suppressed, I say let them look at Poland. To those who think that freedom can be forever denied, I say let them look at Poland. And to those who think that dreams can be forever repressed, I say let them look at Poland, for here, in Poland, the dream is alive," he said.

"Poland is not alone. America stands with you," he said, renewing his pledge to help the Poles redeem their shattered economy and seek greater political freedoms. "America stands shoulder to shoulder with the Polish people in solidarity."

"Long live Bush!" responded the crowd of 25,000 people. Another 25,000 lined the streets of this seaport to cheer Bush's motorcade, and some threw flower petals at his limousine.

"It is here, in Poland, where we can work to end the division of Europe," he said. "It is in your power to help end the division of Europe."

The peace pole on the pedestrian mall will be the second one erected in Iowa City, joining a pole at the First Mennonite Church, 405 Myrtle Ave. In the state there are also peace poles erected at the Iowa Peace Institute in Grinnell and in the town of Amana.

The pole will be dedicated on Aug. 6 in conjunction with a Hiroshima commemoration service. The service will include a variety of speakers, according to Horton.

"We're holding the commemoration simply to remember so it won't happen again," said Horton. "We have to nurture peace because if another bomb goes off, it's the end of the world."

The council approved the resolution on the condition the peace committee will work for funding to erect a more permanent, stable pole that cannot be vandalized and destroyed as easily.

have that to say, too." In the position he currently holds at Brackenridge Hospital, Breon has been involved with many facets of hospital administration, including financial and strategic planning, outreach development, and the construction of an 82-bed children's hospital.

Hoffman believes this experience has helped create the type of individual Mercy was looking for to fill its top administration spot. "We were searching for someone who would have good standing and a good reputation with the community — someone who has similar qualities as Sister Venarda's — and we found that person in Richard Breon," she said.

"The job Mr. Breon will have basically consists of seeing what the health needs of Iowa City are and filling them. We have faith he will do a good job of this in the future," she said.

Breon is a graduate of Iowa State University and received his master's degree in hospital and health administration from the UI in 1980. Prior to his position in Austin, Breon held administrative positions at Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines from 1980 to 1986.

Robinson may resign

BALTIMORE (AP) — Orioles manager Frank Robinson is refusing to dismiss the possibility that he will resign as a result of his frustration with American League umpires.

Robinson said he has set no timetable for deciding whether he will return as manager of the East Division leaders when the season resumes on Thursday.

"It doesn't have to be decided before then," he said. "It'll sit." An unnamed club source indicated it is highly doubtful Robinson will quit, but said Robinson's anger is genuine, The (Baltimore) Evening Sun reported Tuesday.

"If I can't bring some attention to it, it'll continue to go on and on," Robinson said from his home in Los Angeles. "All I'm asking is to be able to do my job without being harassed, without being threatened, without being lied to. All I want to do is be treated like all other managers when I have something to say."

"I want to manage the ballclub. If I can't manage the way I'm trying to, I might have to let someone else do it. It's not fair to the ballclub, I'm not going to sit on my hands. Every time I say something to umpires, there's a chance I will get thrown out of a ballgame."

Celtics sign Gamble

BOSTON (AP) — Former Iowa basketball player Kevin Gamble, who emerged as a strong scorer late last season after spending much of it on the Boston bench, has signed with the Celtics for the coming season.

The NBA team announced the signing Tuesday. Gamble, 23, was leading the Continental Basketball Association in scoring when he joined the Celtics last Dec. 15. But he rarely played in key situations for Boston until the last few weeks of the season.

He started the last six games of the regular season and averaged 22.8 points, 4.7 rebounds and 4.8 assists and made 65.5 percent of his shots. That brought his average for his 44 regular-season games to 4.3 points.

Two Eagles hold out

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles could be without two of their best players, wide receiver Mike Quick and defensive end Reggie White, when training camp opens July 24.

Both are in protracted contract negotiations, which appear to be going nowhere.

Quick, who missed eight games last year with a broken left leg, said he doesn't think he will show up for camp because of the history of Eagles negotiations.

White, who led the league in sacks, 18, for the second straight year and made 133 tackles, hasn't joined Buddy Ryan's pre-camp camp. The coach says White has been excused for a few days for personal reasons.

But his objective is clear. He said he's the best defensive end in the league and wants to be paid in kind.

This Day in Baseball

July 12

1901 — Cy Young of the Boston Red Sox won his 300th game with a 5-3 victory over the Philadelphia A's.

1945 — Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves went hitless in end his consecutive-game hitting streak at 37 games, a National League record that stood until Pete Rose broke it in 1978.

1949 — Larry Doby of the Cleveland Indians and Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Don Newcombe of the host Brooklyn Dodgers became the first black players to appear in an All-Star Game as the American League took advantage of five National League errors to win 11-7 at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn.

1955 — Stan Musial hit Frank Sullivan's first pitch of the 12th inning for a home run to give the National League All-Star team a 6-5 victory over the American League at Milwaukee's County Stadium. The AL had led 5-0 after six innings.

1979 — In the most ill-fated promotion in baseball history, thousands of fans overran the Comiskey Park field during "Disco Demolition Night" and caused the Chicago White Sox to forfeit the second game of a doubleheader after losing to Detroit 4-1 in the first.

Nelson

continuing in that capacity, Iowa Public Television has used her as a color analyst for its college volleyball telecasts.

"Ruth Nelson has impeccable credentials," Murphy said. "She has had outstanding success and we are confident that she will fit into the Iowa philosophy."

"Nelson was one of 23 applicants from across the country, and Murphy said that of the three or four finalists, Nelson was "obviously the best choice."

In addition to four years at LSU, Nelson spent seven seasons at Houston and two years at George Williams College, compiling a 619-180-3 career mark.

During the four-season hiatus Murphy had from college coaching, she coached the Dallas Belles, a professional volleyball team, in 1987 and has continued to direct the Baton Rouge Volleyball Club since 1981.

Although Nelson hasn't coached a college team recently, she said she isn't rusty.

"That's probably been one of the biggest questions everybody asks me," Nelson said, "and I have to really think that I haven't been out of coaching."

Nelson inherits a team that went 24-10 in 1988, tying for second in the Big Ten with Minnesota and Northwestern at 11-7. That finish was best in school history.

"I think that Iowa has all the aspects of having a nationally competitive program," Nelson said. "It is a great academic university, it has a college campus that has a strong support system within a small community."

Besides her college credentials, Nelson was the United States Olympic assistant coach in 1980 and the team's technical expert in 1984. A year later, she became the Director of Volleyball for International Special Olympics.

"We looked for recommendations across the country and Ruth is well respected," Murphy said.

Nelson said she wasn't concerned that Stewart recruits Patty Griffith of Sturgis, Mich., and Littleton, Colo., native Niki Ihanfeldt might felt left behind after Stewart's resignation.

"I think initially that athletes go to a college because of a coach," Nelson said. "But if a school is successful, they will stay."

Now that the selection process is over, Nelson will begin to concentrate on assembling a staff, but said that there is one pressing matter.

"(Today) we start interviewing, but first I have to find a house," Nelson said.

North appeals Iran-Contra conviction

WASHINGTON — Oliver North said Tuesday he is appealing his conviction in the Iran-Contra scandal and the judge who sentenced him agreed to delay payment of a $150,000 fine until the final outcome of the case.

North didn't request any delay in the community service portion of his sentence, saying he intends to begin assisting an inner-city youth program promptly.

The former White House aide's action came after U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell last Wednesday sentenced North to two years' probation and ordered him to perform 1,200 hours of community service, in addition to the fine.

Gesell, who could have sentenced North to 10 years in prison and $750,000 in fines, gave the former National Security Council aide no jail time. The judge said time behind bars would only "harden your misconceptions" about public service and increase his feelings of martyrdom.

Radio: W. Mandela linked to teen's death

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police have given prosecutors a report linking black activist Winnie Mandela to the death of a teen-ager allegedly killed by her bodyguards, state radio said Tuesday.

Eight of her bodyguards have been charged with the murder of 14-year-old activist Moeketsi "Stompie" Seipei who was beaten to death last December in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

Mandela, wife of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, denies involvement in the case and says it is a government smear campaign.

The attorney general of Witwatersrand region is to examine the police report and decide whether additional charges should be filed, the South African Broadcasting Corp. reported.

It quoted an unidentified spokesman for the attorney general as saying the report linked Mandela to Seipei's death. It did not say how Mandela allegedly was involved or if the police report included any new information.

Some NRA members want to oust Bush

WASHINGTON — Some members of the National Rifle Association want to oust President George Bush from the organization because of his ban on the import of semiautomatic assault weapons, an NRA official said Tuesday.

"It's not something the NRA is pushing . . . but there is an awful lot of disillusionment around the country," said Wayne LaPierre, executive director of the NRA Institute for Legislative Action.

"President Bush ran on a 'no more federal gun control' pledge. . . I can't describe how deeply and seriously people in a lot of states took that campaign pledge," he said.

White House spokesman B. Jay Cooper said Bush, a lifetime member of the NRA, had no intention of resigning from the group.

Yangtze flooding kills hundreds

BEIJING — Heavy rain set off landslides and flooded cities in southwestern China, killing 221 people, destroying thousands of homes and inundating crops, official reports said Tuesday.

State television showed riverside cliffs collapsing and floodwaters up to the eaves of homes in Chongqing, 900 miles southwest of the capital.

More than 13,450 houses were damaged by rainfall that totaled 16 inches in the hardest-hit areas in recent days, according to the official Xinhua News Agency.

Xinhua said 221 people died in Sichuan province, including 137 in flooding around Chongqing on Sunday and Monday. At least 432 people were injured and 10 others were missing.

About 2.1 million acres of crops have been submerged, it said. Official reports said hundreds of thousands of people were reinforcing dikes along the lower reaches of the Yangtze, which has risen above danger marks in many locations because of heavy rains this month.

Favoritism comes to a close as Kemp tries to regroup HUD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Jack Kemp on Tuesday denounced a system under which highly paid consultants helped developers try to win federal housing contracts.

He also told a congressional panel he was taking steps to correct "fundamental flaws" and "lax accounting and management procedures" at his department.

Kemp, who took over the Department of Housing and Urban Development six months ago, said he had told agency employees in a memo that their jobs would depend on putting an end to favoritism.

And he said outsiders discovered to be abusing department programs will be barred "from doing business with HUD and all other federal agencies."

Kemp commented in remarks prepared for delivery to the House Employment and Housing Subcommittee, which is looking into allegations of fraud and mismanagement at the agency.

"Some of our most serious problems have come in programs where substantial subsidies are given to developers," Kemp said.

"That extra money goes for excess profits for the developer and, clearly, to cover consultant fees," he said. "We give the developer a reason to hire a consultant, and we give the successful bidder the money to pay consultants' fees."

The department's moderate-rehabilitation program was criticized in an April audit by the HUD inspector general, who alleged influence peddling and favoritism in contract awards to developers who hired former HUD and other government employees as consultants.

The audit estimated HUD could lose as much as $413 million in excess subsidies over the life of the contracts.

Several Reagan administration insiders, including former Interior

Jack Kemp

Secretary James Watt, has been questioned at House hearings as to what they did for their consulting fees and what the fee-payers expected in return.

Kemp said Tuesday, "HUD programs shall operate without favoritism," and awards will be made on the basis of need and merit.

The housing secretary said that in a memo to HUD employees last month he warned, "Performance evaluations and job security will depend on how these reforms are promptly implemented and enforced."

"The Department of Housing and Urban Development will maintain a policy of zero tolerance for violations of our standards of conduct," said Kemp, pledging "the highest" ethical standards at the department.

Kemp has testified several times before Congress in recent months, a sharp contrast to his predecessor, Samuel Pierce, who members of Congress say was generally unavailable during his eight-year tenure during the Reagan administration.

Hecht as Bahamas ambassador disapproved by Senate critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate critics of former colleague Chic Hecht mounted an uphill battle Tuesday to block his confirmation as ambassador to the Bahamas while one supporter said "journalistic pygmies" had distorted Hecht's record.

"He does not deserve, nor does our nation deserve, to be represented by him in the Bahamas," Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said about Hecht, the Nevada Republican who lost a re-election bid last November.

Graham and other senators said the Bahamas had become too important in the war against drugs to entrust the post to less than a fully competent and professional ambassador.

Early homers fuel AL All-Stars

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bo Jackson, and so the American League goes.

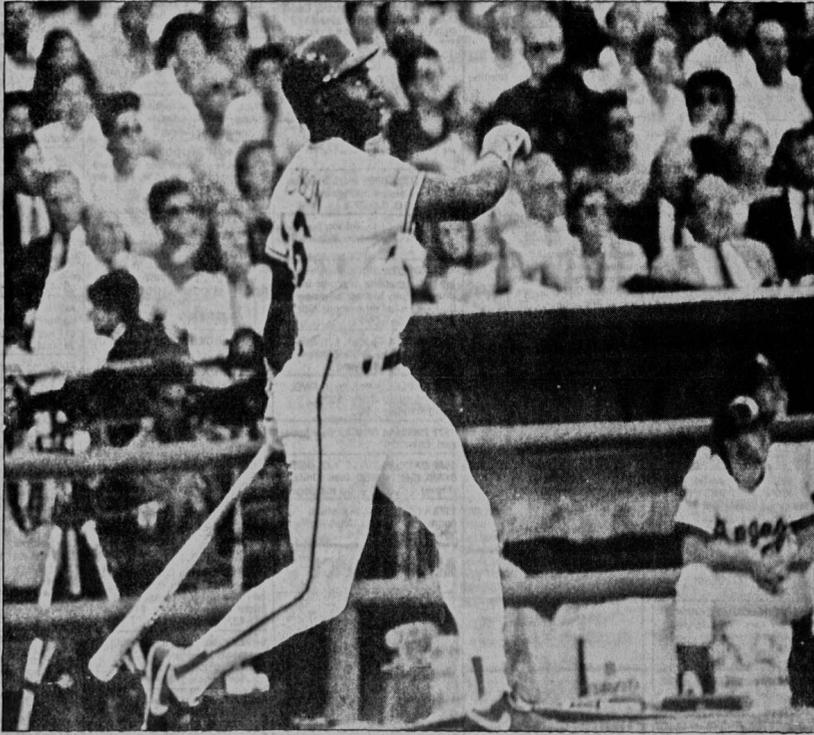

Bo Jackson, the brightest of baseball's new breed, made winners of the AL and believers of everybody else Tuesday night. He did it all and when he was done, the Americans won 5-3 and had consecutive All-Star Game victories for the first time since 1958.

It was Bo's show. He led off with a monstrous home run. He stole a base, and took two others. He drove in two runs, scored twice, saved two more with a running catch and was named the game's most valuable player.

On the night when Jackson's multi-sport Nike commercial debuted on national television, Bo showed he knows baseball best of all.

He dominated a game that was supposed to be ruled by the pitchers at twilight. Instead, in the twilight zone, Jackson joined Willie Mays as the only players to homer and steal in the same All-Star Game.

Jackson, who has never led off for Kansas City, made Manager Tony La Russa's gamble pay off. He and Wade Boggs hit consecutive home runs in the bottom of the first inning off Rick Reuschel. Jackson became the fifth player to lead off an All-Star Game with a home run and the ninth to homer in his first All-Star appearance.

"He's a sinkerball pitcher and I think he left a sinker out over the plate a little bit, and I was able to golf swing and get a piece of it," Jackson said.

A nice piece, too. Jackson's homer traveled an estimated 448 feet, one of the longest ever hit to dead center field at Anaheim Stadium.

"I thought I made a good pitch.

He just went down and got it," Reuschel said. "I heard about his power and strength and I saw it first-hand tonight."

Jackson drove in the tiebreaking run in the second, singled in the fourth and left after the sixth. By then, Nolan Ryan was on the way to being the winning pitcher and AL narrowed its All-Star gap to 37-22-1.

Ryan, at 42 the second-oldest pitcher in All-Star history and the oldest to win a game, pitched two scoreless innings in relief of starter Dave Stewart, who gave up two runs in the first. Ryan allowed one hit and, even without his best fastball, struck out three.

"To be honest with you, that first inning was just the opposite of what I was expecting. And I thought, 'Hmmm, I don't know if I want to go out there.' Evidently, they're not having any problem with the twilight," he said.

Iowa coaches on the move

Nelson new volleyball coach

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Ruth Nelson was named the head volleyball coach at Iowa Tuesday, ending "a nationwide search," assistant athletic director Dianne Murphy said.

Nelson, a 13-year collegiate coaching veteran, was introduced to area media at the University Athletic Club.

The position was made vacant by the May resignation of seven-year coach Sandy Stewart. Stewart left to pursue other career interests after a 138-99 record at Iowa.

Stewart was a graduate assistant under Nelson at Houston and Louisiana State. Nelson also coached former Iowa assistant coach Claudia Lee while at Houston.

"I think probably the most exciting thing (is that) I'm very familiar with Iowa," Nelson said.

A year after leaving LSU in 1984,

Freeman looks into Aztec job

The Daily Iowan

Iowa assistant women's basketball coach Marianna Freeman is one of three finalists for the head coaching position at San Diego State University, sources said Tuesday.

San Diego State will introduce its new coach at an 8 a.m. press conference in San Diego this morning. San Diego State officials wouldn't confirm or deny that Freeman will be hired, but Freeman was out of town Tuesday.

Iowa officials did establish that Freeman was interested in the job but had no idea who the Aztecs would hire.

Freeman has been at Iowa since Stringer turned the Hawkeye program around seven years ago. Before that Freeman held the head coaching spot at Delaware State University.

Freeman's departure from Iowa would be the third assistant to leave head coach Vivian Stringer's program for head coaching duties in the past two years.

Lookingbill sparks U.S. over Soviets

PARNU, Soviet Union (AP) — Wade Lookingbill scored 17 of his 27 points in the second half, igniting the Iowa AAU select basketball team to a 103-100 exhibition basketball victory over the Estonian junior nationals Tuesday night.

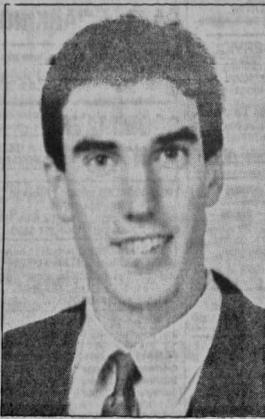

The Iowa team defeated the Estonians 106-104 in the opener at nearby Haapsalu in the Soviet Union on Monday night.

Lookingbill helped spark a 19-11 run to open the second half. Iowa trailed 57-53 at halftime but regained momentum to build a 7-point lead in the second half.

Troy Skinner scored 19 points, Chris Street and Mike Bergman chipped in 18 and 14 points respectively and Cam Johnson added 10.

Estonia, which is considered one of the best teams in the Soviet Union, was led by Gert Kullamae's 32. With the game in the balance, Johnson hit a basket with 3:03 remaining, to put Iowa ahead 99-97. Iowa held the lead after that.

QC Angels lose their shirts over bill

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The Quad City Angels trudged into their lockerroom after dropping a four-game series to discover they had literally lost their shirts.

Local police seized the Class A baseball team's equipment after Monday night's game in a dispute over a hotel bill.

"I can't believe this is happening," said manager Eddie Rodriguez.

Hotel owner T. Brooks Brademas said the team, a farm club of the California Angels organization, had failed to pay a bill from last year. The equipment — including uniforms, bats and helmets — was seized as part of a default judgment awarded The Works Hotel.

"This was the only way we could get it taken care of," said Brademas. "We don't intend to set up our own ball team. We'll be delighted to return the equipment as soon as they pay the bill."

In Davenport, Iowa, general manager Mike Tatoian said the seized equipment belongs to the California Angels, not the Quad City team.

"If they felt they had to seize something, they can come here and get a popcorn cart," he said.

"Our owner told me I wasn't supposed to leave the park until this thing is settled," Tatoian said Tuesday. "I hope I don't wind up watching the All-Star game on TV here."

Police sealed exits to the visiting team's clubhouse at Stanley Coveleski Regional Stadium and searched Quad City players as they left.

"I've never seen anything like it, the cops taking stuff and going through our bags," said pitcher Mark Holzemer, the loser in an 8-2 game against the South Bend White Sox.

The imbroglia has been brewing for more than a year, with the two sides arguing over the suitability of the hotel and then over legal technicalities.

Quad City had agreed to rent rooms three days for $2,700 during a series with the White Sox.

Family endures trials of Pete

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Rose can hear the customers snigger when they spot the promotional picture of big brother Pete hanging over the counter at the Gold Star Chili shop.

"They don't connect me with him," says Dave, lading out Cincinnati's special brand of sweet, sharp chili from a counter at a suburban shopping mall. "They say some pretty nasty things right here, while I'm fixing their food. Everybody's got him guilty."

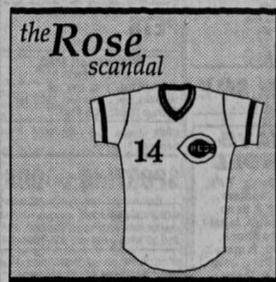

There is pain for others in Pete Rose's family, too. Son Pete Jr., a minor league third baseman, has been heckled by fans waving dollar bills. Ex-wife Carolyn has come close to throwing a punch because of comments. And his mother mostly avoids watching TV.

"I get to the point I turn it off," she says. "I'm tired of listening to it."

After years of living in the glare of Pete Rose's celebrity, the family now finds itself in the shadow of his notoriety.

Since March 20, when the baseball commissioner's office acknowledged that the Cincinnati Reds manager was being investigated, his family has watched the allegations mount: associations with convicted felons, tax troubles and gambling on baseball, including his own team.

They hear the voices on radio call-in shows demanding that baseball banish its all-time hit leader. Now they just want it to end.

"The longer it goes on, the more crap people are going to pull out." — Dave Rose, brother of Reds manager Pete Rose

"The longer it goes on, the more crap people are going to pull out," Dave says.

Pete's problems have affected more than his brother's pride. Early this year, Dave left a job at one of Pete's other businesses to go in with him on a Gold Star franchise.

But questions raised about Pete's gambling appear to have put the deal on hold.

"I think they're just holding up the deal to see what happens," says Dave, who is a mirror of his brother's pugnacious, bulldog features and fireplug physique. "I guess I understand because of the image point, but it's got me in a bind."

But Bill Stock, chief executive officer of Gold Star Chili Inc., said it was the Roses' decision to postpone the deal.

"They came back to us and said that at this time, we would like to put it on hold," he said. "Whatever happens with this business with Pete, it has nothing to do with whether they get a franchise from us."

Once a promising ballplayer himself, Dave was signed out of high school to the Reds' farm system where he played the outfield for two years.

Another kind of draft sent him to Vietnam. He survived a tour of duty as a helicopter machine gunner. Two weeks after he returned home, Dave injured his knees in a motorcycle accident, which ended any hope of a big league career.

There is no doubt he admires his brother. And he has no doubt his brother is innocent.

He talks about "mental toughness" and says it was instilled in the family by late father, Harry, a onetime prizefighter and club football player.

"Pete can tough it out," Dave says. "Believe me from February to October all he's thinking about is

Sports metaphors drive professor up the wall

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — If you've ever been thrown a curve, driven up the wall or played the field, you can chalk it up to the world of sports.

"Sports metaphors are everywhere; they permeate all walks of life," said Robert Palmatier, a linguistics professor at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo and co-author of a just-released dictionary of 1,700 sports metaphors.

The idea for "Sports Talk: A Dictionary of Sports Metaphors" came to Palmatier when he found himself behind the eight ball — literally — during a game of pool in 1981.

"That got me thinking about other pool metaphors — like being 'on the spot' — and then I moved to other games," he said Tuesday.

"I was finding them in newspaper,

(AP) — The following are examples of how terms from various sports have become a part of everyday conversation:

"That's par for the course" comes from golf.

To "strike out" or "touch base" is from baseball.

To "have a run-in" comes from rugby.

A "full-court press" comes from basketball.

To "take the ball and run with it" comes from football.

To "come in under the wire" comes from horse racing. The wire is above the finish line and is used by those taking pictures of a "photo finish."

"Red Herring" comes from a trick used to train fox-hunting hounds. A smoked herring was dragged along a different trail to make sure the dogs didn't follow the wrong trail.

To "take the wind out of someone's sails" comes from sailing. If you sail too closely to someone, you deprive them of the wind they need to sail.

"Up to scratch" comes from boxing in ancient Greece. There was a line scratched in the dirt, and if a fallen boxer couldn't return to the line, the match was over.

A "showdown" comes from poker. When the betting is over, the players still in the game must lay down their cards.

The "flip side" comes from flipping coins, but it's commonly used by disc jockeys to describe the less popular side of a record.

To "be stumped" comes from the British game of cricket, when a pitcher throws a ball and knocks over the wicket.

Just yesterday, we saw President

Bush playing baseball with Pollis youngsters. I'm sure he used sports metaphor there somewhere — if he takes after his predecessor," Ray said. "And with all the playing horseshoes, I'm sure it's just a matter of time before we hear about a ringer."

President Harry S. Truman made famous the slogan "The buck stops here." That too has its origin in sports. Specifically, poker.

The term "to pass the buck," or responsibility, came from the practice of passing a buck knife to remind a poker player that the next turn to deal was his, Palmatier said.

The sport with the most metaphors is boxing, which can be traced to classical Greece, Palmatier said.

Harold Ray, a sports historian and physical education professor at Western.

"They've always been used because sports are common to all cultures," Ray said. "They just make communication easier."

Ray said he was most intrigued with the term "to have a lot of moxie."

"I always thought of it as having courage when I was growing up. I never realized it was also the name of a soft drink sold at baseball stadiums on the East Coast from the late 1800s to the 1920s," Ray said.

Other sports metaphors are better known.

"When someone asked you how you made out — in the old-fashioned sense — you'd either say that you struck out or you couldn't get to first base — or you scored," Palmatier said.

Teen-age boys aren't the only ones who abuse sports metaphors.

"You can't listen to a politician for more than 10 minutes without hearing a sports metaphor," Ray
