UI staff member named as nominee

Susanne Rapaport, administrative assistant at the UI College of Medicine's Cardiovascular Center, has been named a nominee for the American College of Healthcare Executives.

The Chicago-based international professional society represents more than 21,000 health-care executives and works to bring excellence to health-care management. The nomineeship will be formally conferred at a ceremony on July 30 in Chicago. Rapaport has managed the numerous interdisciplinary research programs of the Cardiovascular Center since 1985. In 1988-89, more than $11 million in research grants was awarded through Cardiovascular Center programs.

Over 100 UI faculty from the colleges of medicine and liberal arts have grants funded through the center.

She was previously the administrative director of the National Association of Women Business Owners in Chicago, as well as the manager of program services and conference coordinator of the Illinois and Midwest podiatry societies.

The American College of Healthcare Executives, formerly the American College of Hospital Administrators, provides an advancement program leading from nominee status to membership and finally fellowship, the highest level of professional achievement.

Open burning banned in county

Open burning was banned Friday in Johnson County at the request of fire chiefs of Johnson County and the Johnson County Mutual Aid Association.

Officials of the state fire marshal's office said conditions in the county were so dry that open burning was dangerous to people and property.

The ban means that open burning is prohibited except in outdoor fireplaces, barbecue grills or properly supervised dumping grounds. Burning may be done in incinerators or trash burners made of metal, concrete, masonry or heavy, 1-inch wire mesh with no openings larger than 1 square inch.

The ban will continue until the Mutual Aid Association notifies the fire marshal that dry conditions are over. Violation of the ban is a simple misdemeanor.

Clinton Street closed to traffic

Clinton Street will be closed this week to cars and pedestrians at the railroad crossing just south of LaFayette Street, Iowa City officials announced.

The CRANDIC Railroad is installing a railroad sidetrack. If weather permits, the work will be done by Friday.

Crisis Center now accepting fans

The Iowa City Crisis Intervention Center is now accepting fans for elderly, handicapped and sick people.

People can bring fans to the center at 321 E. First St. Hours for the center are 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week. The center distributes the fans to people who call in and ask for them.

Distributed Registration lets students avoid Calvin's wait

Administration and CAC create new system

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

This spring a faster and easier registration procedure will be instituted at the UI — ending the traditionally long lines in front of Calvin Hall.

The decentralized, computerized self-registration system, called Distributed Registration, was developed by the UI administration and the Collegiate Associations Council to provide students with a faster, easier way to register.

Distributed Registration will allow each student to register for their courses on any one of 424 computers located in 21 different areas on campus, CAC Vice President William Kalman said.

The new registration areas will be called Instructional Technology Centers, or ITCs, and will be located in such places as the Main Library, Quadrangle and Burge Residence Halls, MacLean Hall, Health Sciences Library, Seashore Hall and the Music Building.

In addition to providing an increase in the number of computers being used to register students, the new process will extend the hours of registration.

Hours for registration will be expanded to the hours of the ITCs, Kalman said.

For example, students using the Main Library ITC will be able to register from 7:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. — instead of the old Calvin Hall hours of 8:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 4:30.

"We definitely think the new system will be an advantage," Marion Hansen, associate registrar, said. "It will give students direct control over their registration."

The new system will also give students more immediate access to course information, she said.

Students will no longer have to call the registrar's office for a list of closed courses or for information regarding a student's inability to register because of unpaid fees or academic standing.

These things are updated continuously on the computers, so students won't have to wait through a long Calvin Hall line only to find they can't register for one reason or another, Hansen said.

"We will also have a printout published in The Daily Iowan as we do now," she added.

Students can get a printout of their registration schedules at ITCs with printing capabilities or at the registration center, she said.

UI administrators are not anticipating any problems — such as long lines at the ITC terminals — with the new system, Hansen said.

"We are not anticipating any lines (at the computers), simply because there are so many terminals," she said. "In the library alone there are over 100 terminals. We have been operating with only 24 terminals at the registration center."

The system itself is designed to be user friendly with a variety of accessible information, Kalman said.

In addition to allowing a student to see if a class is open, closed, cancelled or pending, the ITCs will hold information about the student's college, major, advisor and eligibility to register, he said.

A student must still undergo mandatory advising in the new system. The academic advisor will assign each student a unique registration number which will give the student access to the registration computers.

Drops and adds can be done on the computer before classes begin, but must be done at Calvin Hall after classes start.

Kalman said the system has great capabilities for future expansion.

Information on work-study positions and scholarships, as well as on-line application procedures for transcript and address change requests, can be expected from the system in the future, Kalman said.

UI chemistry department receives $235,000 grant for energy research

Federal money targets nuclear spectrometer

Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Selected as one of the 22 recipients nationwide of a grant given by the U.S. Department of Energy, the UI Department of Chemistry will be awarded $234,180 with which to conduct energy-related research, Sen. Charles Grassley (D-Iowa) announced last week.

"The grant money will be used for a specific purpose," said Jo Hegstrom, assistant press secretary to Grassley. "The purchase of a scientific instrument called a stopped-flow nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer will be made."

Used to develop models of catalytic reactions which occur on the surface of catalysts, the spectrometer will help researchers study energy-intensive reactions that would otherwise be difficult to read and monitor, said Louis Messle, UI chemistry professor.

"The models for those reactions help make the real thing easier to study and comprehend," he said.

Reactions to be studied may seem foreign to those unfamiliar with scientific vocabulary, Messle said, but effect individuals in their everyday lives more often than realized.

"Take for instance the polymerization of ethylene," he said. "It's used to make polyethylene, which is used in many major plastic products like plastic bags and wrap."

The spectrometer will also be used to study energy conservation and certain fuels such as coal, the temperature of which prevents certain aspects of it to be studied in its entirety.

Given through the federal government's University Research Instrumentation Program, the grant money will be awarded to the UI in August, Hegstrom said. Messle will head the research along with Richard Jordan, a chemistry professor at the UI, who joined him in writing the actual application for the grant.

"It was a very competitive program and a real big plus for the chemistry department to win an award of this sort," Messle said. "The members of our department have always been very active in research, but something like this will help them do even better work."

21 other grants of greater than $100,000 a piece were awarded to other universities and combine to make a total of $4.7 million, Hegstrom said.

Police

An Iowa City man was arrested and charged with second degree burglary Saturday after being observed prowling through cars in the area of Eastwood Drive, according to Iowa City police reports.

Danny W. Moyer, 21, 1700 Scott Blvd., was apprehended by police while rummaging through a car parked in the 200 block of Eastwood Drive at about 2 a.m. Saturday, according to police reports.

Several other cars in the four block area where Moyer was apprehended were found to have been broken into as well, according to the report.

Moyer is the third person arrested by Iowa City police in the past week for car theft. On Wednesday, two persons from Cedar Rapids were also arrested for theft from area cars, according to police reports. Their names were not made public by Iowa City police.

A rash of car thefts, including 19 on Tuesday and Wednesday, have occurred in Iowa City recently. They remain under investigation by Iowa City police.

• A radar detector was reportedly stolen Sunday between midnight and 1:30 a.m. from a Yamaha motorcycle parked at 100 S. Clinton St., according to police reports.

Estimated value of the radar detector is $135, according to police reports.

• Several parking meters were reportedly damaged Saturday around 1:30 p.m. in the 200 block of N. Linn St., according to police reports.

The incident is currently under investigation, according to reports.

Courts

A former nurse at UI Hospitals and Clinics received a suspended sentence in Johnson County District Court Friday and was placed on probation for three years for selling cocaine in the hospital lobby.

Marilyn Smith, 35, was also fined $1,950 in connection with the sale, which she allegedly made last November. She could have received 10 years in prison for the crime.

Smith was not charged with making the sale until April 21. She pleaded guilty that day. She resigned from her job as a licensed practical nurse at the hospital in February.

• • • An Iowa City man was charged with homicide by vehicle after an incident in which his daughter was killed, according to Johnson County District court reports.

Paul G. Stillmonkes, 32, 127 Hill-top Mobile Home Park, was allegedly operating his car under the influence of alcohol on July 4 at the time of the incident, according to court reports.

The passenger, Lilian Stillmonkes, died as a result of the crash, according to court reports.

The incident is currently under investigation, according to reports.

• • • An Iowa City man was accused of domestic abuse Friday after an incident which occurred at his residence, according to court reports.

Herman E. Good, 78, 530 E. Church St., allegedly struck the victim several times with a baby chair tray, cutting her arm and back, according to court reports.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for August 2, according to court reports.

• • • An Iowa City man was accused of second degree arson Thursday in connection with an incident which occurred on July 7 after he allegedly put a lighted roman candle in a vehicle, according to court reports.

Michael Ward, 22, 603 S. Dubuque St., allegedly placed a lighted Roman candle in a car parked on South Dubuque Street, according to court reports.

The vehicle caught fire and sustained damage in excess of $500, according to court reports.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for August 2, according to court reports.

Summit

well with French President Francois Mitterrand, Thatcher said, "I have not had anything that could even remotely be termed a slight."

Mitterrand, who lost in a bid to get agreement for a North-South summit between rich and poor nations, said in a final statement that the leaders of the summit countries were "women and men of good will. We want to put ourselves at the service of all of humanity."

The summit gave all the leaders, not just Bush, a chance to take some victories back to the voters.

Japanese Prime Minister Souzuke Uno, under fire for alleged flings with geisha girls and badly in need of a political uplift, termed the meetings "splendid" and said they had given him the opportunity to explain a $35 billion new aid program for developing countries.

During the traditional reading of the final communiqué, Bush gave West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl a thumbs up signal as the section on the environment was read; Thatcher and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney nodded approvingly.

A third of the 22-page final document addressed environmental problems, the first time in the 15-year history of the summits that a non-economic issue figured so prominently in the joint statement.

"Decisive action is urgently needed to understand and protect the earth's ecological balance," the leaders declared. "We will work together to achieve the common goals of preserving a healthy and balanced global economy."

The communiqué called for concerted action to deal with the depletion of the ozone layer, global warming, loss of forests and ocean pollution, but it offered few specific proposals on how to accomplish these goals.

Environmental groups said they were pleased with the high profile the summit gave these issues but disappointed that nothing more concrete was offered.

"The heads of state have failed to propose the decisive actions necessary to confront the deteriorating trends," said Rafe Pomerance, senior associate at the World Resources Institute, a Washington policy group.

But Bush took issue with that view, calling the environmental language in the summit document a "watershed" event.

In the document, the summit leaders urged an acceleration of research into anti-pollution technologies and said the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, made up of the major industrial countries, should be asked to pursue the development of objective measurements of environmental pollution.

Bush, at an outdoor news conference at the U.S. ambassador's residence, said the summit leaders were intrigued by Gorbachev's letter addressed to the summit gathering requesting closer links between the Western countries' economies and that of his country.

"We would welcome any movement by the Soviet Union towards market-oriented, Western economies. There is no question about that," Bush said. He said Gorbachev would receive a "very courteous and thoughtful" reply from Mitterrand.

Gorbachev

can't say that that never occurred to us."

But he emphasized that the summit partners decided the letter had good intentions and engendered hope for a continued warming trend between East and West.

Gorbachev has long contended that the success of his reform movement known as perestroika, or restructuring, depends in part on the willingness of Western nations to cooperate with credits, joint ventures and other projects that could earn the Soviets hard currency.

"Our perestroika is inseparable from the policy tending toward full and entire participation in the world economy," Gorbachev wrote French President Francois Mitterrand, the summit chairman.

The Kremlin chief deemed it "obvious that the rest of the world can only gain by the opening to the world economy of a market such as that of the Soviet Union."

Gorbachev's letter caused a stir among the democratic leaders, but it broke no new ground in Soviet policy, and some doubts were expressed over the chances for closer economic ties.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she wished the Soviets every success in their reforms, "But I don't see the time she (the Soviet Union) will join us because of her (having become) a great free-market economic success."

Gorbachev often addresses international gatherings to wish them well in their undertakings and to offer his own views of how global relations can be improved.

Tipping the scales

A recent decision by the UI Educational Policy Committee makes it clear that UI administrators are striving for a more appropriate balance of athletics and academics in their curricular priorities.

The committee said that starting this semester, only physical education majors will be allowed to take physical education skills courses for a grade, leaving the majority of students to settle for a pass-fail grade in these courses.

Unfortunately, this decision doesn't go far enough. A good way for the UI to demonstrate an increased emphasis on academics would be to eliminate the P.E. skills requirements that every liberal arts major must meet in order to graduate.

Peg Burke, associate professor of physical education, said, "I don't know why a person who's athletically talented shouldn't be able to express their talents for a grade the same way a music major would."

But the real issue is not whether the students should receive a letter grade or a pass-fail mark. A large number of people are systematically being forced to take P.E. skills courses in order to get a liberal arts degree from this university — and these people are majoring in a variety of fields, ranging from music, art and English to economics, biology and journalism.

Physical education majors don't have to take courses in music, economics or journalism in order to get their degrees.

The recent action by the committee is a good starting point. However, more significant steps will be required to prove that the real goal of the UI is academic excellence.

D.C. opportunity

Jesse Jackson hasn't officially thrown his hat into next year's Washington, D.C., mayoral race, but his potential opponents are already scrambling to derail a Jackson juggernaut.

Last week, scandal-plagued Mayor Marion Barry announced his candidacy with thick reminders of Jackson's earlier pledge never to run against the incumbent mayor. Another declared candidate, councilmember John Ray, introduced a bill aimed at pricing Jackson (and his reported six-figure annual speaking fee) out of the race by limiting the honoraria high city officials may receive.

Amid enthusiastic speculation, large leads in early polls and panicked city officials, Jackson is hedging. In a long string of failed presidential campaigns, Jackson has fought unsuccessfully to bring his anti-drug crusade to our nation's capital.

Now, he has an opportunity. It may not be exactly the opportunity Jackson had in mind, but the possibility of "Mayor Jackson" offers an intriguing match of political expedience and a crisis in need of real leadership.

While some of Jackson's politics remain unpalatable to many Americans, his status as the nation's preeminent anti-drug crusader demands a realistic arena for Jackson to prove his leadership capabilities.

Under Barry's regime, Washington has become a deadly haven for brutal crack gangs and earned the embarrassing reputation as the United States' "murder capital." Barry's political demise has become a virtual prerequisite for eradicating Washington's ugly situation, and Jackson is one of few men with the power to orchestrate that demise.

Perhaps the best way for Jackson to demonstrate sufficient executive leadership to legitimize himself as a future contender for the White House is to meet the challenge of cleaning up the squalid neighborhoods only blocks away.

Fusion delusion

Last week, an Energy Department panel sounded the death knell for cold fusion.

Physicists at the University of Utah have claimed for months that they isolated a set of nuclear reactions that could be harnessed and turned into a new source of energy. Under this decidedly optimistic scenario, the United States would no longer be beholden to fossil fuel industries for its energy (only seawater would be required to create electricity), and skyrocketing consumption would be of no consequence.

The decision on cold fusion, which has yet to be finalized, came down after the DOE panel sided with an obdurate group of doubting Thomases who had repeatedly denied reports of low-temperature nuclear fusion as a viable energy source.

The University of Utah disagrees. Top dogs there still plan to continue development of a large cold-fusion research center, and have hopes of talking the state legislature into releasing the $5 million it set aside earlier for further laboratory study.

Feuding between skeptics and the Utah contingent has gone on long enough. The DOE decision indicates that the federal government has decided — at least at some level — that the burgeoning cold-fusion industry should not progress beyond the neophyte stage.

The finding, made after scientists have spent countless hours and dollars in quest of an abundant, cheap and disappointingly elusive energy source, is a solid one.

The money of Utah taxpayers and the time of her finest minds would be better spent working to provide cleaner-burning fossil fuels.

The University of Utah would do well to take to heart the DOE's suggestion.

Webster decision robs women of rights to privacy and choice

On July 3, the U.S. Supreme Court took away women's fundamental right to privacy, the right to decide whether to continue or terminate a pregnancy, and handed it to 7,641 state politicians. No longer is a woman's right to privacy guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution; it's now been left to a handful of state politicians, primarily male, to make decisions about what is "best" for women in their states.

Controlling women's autonomy is the right wing's underlying agenda.

The recent decision is an ominous precedent. Never in the 200-year history of the Supreme Court has a constitutionally guaranteed right been given back to the states to debate. Can you imagine, for example, constitutional rights such as freedom of the press being decided on a state-by-state basis? The idea is ludicrous.

Ripping away a people's constitutionally guaranteed right is unacceptable; equally objectionable is the disdain the court has shown for a woman's ability to make competent, moral decisions. Obviously, the recent court ruling declares that state politicians are more capable of deciding what happens to my body than I am. The idea that Gov. Terry Branstad or Atty. Gen. Tom Miller has the right to say whether or not I can have an abortion would be ridiculous if it weren't so chilling.

The right wing has no intention of stopping with the Webster case. As Chief Justice William Rehnquist — a stong proponent of overturning the Roe v. Wade decision — stated, "There is no reason why the state's compelling interest in protecting life should not extend throughout pregnancy, rather than coming into existence only at the point of viability." This is not about the right to abortion; it's about a woman's basic right to life, our right to our bodies and our sexualities. Controlling women's autonomy — economically, reproductively and sexually — is the right wing's underlying agenda. Any woman that does not feel the whip of the slavemaster telling her to get back in "her place" is grossly denying current political realities. We are only beginning to see what those realities might be.

Guest Opinion

In Massachusetts, right-wing forces are attempting to pass legislation that would condemn a woman to the electric chair for self-induced abortion. Here in Iowa, a bill was submitted to the Senate that would charge women with second-degree murder under the same circumstances. In other states, courts are taking physical custody of pregnant women and prosecuting them for "fetal neglect and abuse." In San Diego County, women are being charged with failure to obtain prenatal care, despite the fact that 4,800 women were denied access to prenatal care at San Diego County clinics. Courts in 11 states have forced women to undergo Caesarian sections in 21 instances.

We are seeing occupational safety regulations regulating women in the workplace because of pregnancy or of potential pregnancy. In a recent case that came before Occupational Safety and Health Administration, five women in Virginia were sterilized against their wills as a condition of continued employment at American Cyanimid Co.

It is obvious that women's rights to self-determination are on a collision course with the state's attempt to control our lives. The abortion argument must be restated in terms of women's rights to privacy, equality, bodily integrity and religious freedom. In Justice Harry Blackmun's words, "For today, the women of this nation will retain the liberty to control their destinies. But the signs are evident and very ominous, and a chill wind blows." I concur.

Privacy and choice cease where unborn are concerned

Since the U.S. Supreme Court's Webster decision, editorials and articles on abortion have appeared everywhere. Many have said that the decision is an attack on a woman's constitutional right to have an abortion. The claim that abortion is a constitutional right is misleading. The Constitution says nothing about abortion. The right to privacy that the Constitution does guarantee (which is used to justify the interpretation that abortion is a "right") is not an absolute right. The court refused to deal with the real issue: Does the unborn child have the right to live?

The Constitution says nothing about abortion.

Pro-choice advocates err in arguing that abortion only involves the woman's body and therefore it is her decision. That argument ignores the basic scientific fact that the unborn child is genetically different from the mother and as such is not part of the woman's body; it is only contained within the mother's womb until it has developed sufficiently to survive outside.

The right to privacy ceases when circumstances involve the life of another human being, in this case, a developing child. And not only does abortion include the death of the child, it also includes the possibility of sterility and post-abortion trauma for the mother — although we don't know what degree of possibility, because abortionists are afraid to provide any sort of truly meaningful statistics.

Justice Harry Blackmun in Roe v. Wade set up an arbitrary trimester system for determining when the state could regulate abortions. However, the only clear, definitive, recognizable junctures during a pregnancy are conception and birth. There is no point during pregnancy when a child is any less human than it is at birth.

Many on the left protest quite vehemently and, I believe, correctly against such things as violence to women, the destruction of the ecology, and the abuse of laboratory animals, yet these same people ignore the fact that abortion is a violent attack on the developing child, inflicting pain on a defenseless being. It is also violence perpetrated against the bodies of women, a disruption of a perfectly natural process.

Guest Opinion

Some pro-choice advocates acknowledge that abortion is an evil, albeit a "necessary" one. The danger here is that necessary evils have a strange way of becoming mandatory. According to some, China has a wonderful population control program — yet Chinese women are sometimes forced to have abortions. The young in our country are not only taught that abortion is OK (it's just "another option"), but even necessary in some cases. How quickly could they be convinced that abortion is necessary for certain groups? The very real possibility exists that our society could conclude that a person is considered a person only if they are "wanted." Who decided who is expendable? Whose moral beliefs are being forced upon an unborn child during an abortion?

The vast majority of pregnancies occur because men and women choose to have sex. The child created has no choice, no say in the matter. Abortion exacerbates those situations in which a woman's choice is restricted. Far from discouraging forced sex, abortion encourages male irresponsibility and even date rape. Abortion provides an easy out for the man; after all, what does he have to lose? And even if the man does want to become involved in the decision to abort, he has no legal standing, though the unborn child is as much his as hers.

Abortion is wrong, its consequences disturbing (if not terrifying), and it should be restricted. We can't stop abortion completely, any more than we can stop murder or rape, but as a society we should try to eliminate some of the excuses.

Who are these guys? NRA up to old tricks

You have to wonder. Does the National Rifle Association require an IQ test for membership? And if so, just how low must one score in order to be accepted? Are double figures all right? Or do you have to score below 10?

Following the Bush administration's recent ban on the importation of 43 types of foreign-made semiautomatic assault weapons, NRA members began circulating petitions to kick George Bush out of the organization. Bush, you may recall, reached out often in last fall's presidential campaign to hunters, gun collectors, drug dealers, psychopathic mass murderers and others interested in maintaining the free flow of weapons in this country by boasting of his lifetime membership in the NRA. (If his membership in the NRA is "lifetime," does that mean his parents signed him up at birth?)

Bush promised that if elected there would be "no more federal gun control." NRA members, hearing the only line they need hear from a politician, applauded wildly and voted for Bush with a vengeance. Now they feel betrayed. They also worry that if Bush is so willing to ban foreign-made assault weapons from their arsenals, what's to keep him from banning American-built assault weapons? And then, who knows? There'd be no stopping government's encroachment on their constitutionally protected right to own whatever caliber weapon they choose to blast a pheasant from the sky or a deer from the forest.

That's always one of the more curiously idiotic arguments dragged out by the NRA in their sanctimonious fits against any legislation that would ban or restrict or even require the licensing of weapons. According to NRA dogma, the Second Amendment to the Constitution secures the absolute right of citizens to bear arms. But you will never hear the NRA cite that amendment complete and verbatim.

While its syntax may not win the approval of contemporary grammarians, the Second Amendment (one of the shortest in the Bill of Rights), still seems fairly precise in its intent: "A well-regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

The thrust of the Second Amendment is not on "the right of the people to keep and bear Arms," but rather on the need of "a well-regulated Militia," commanded not by the federal government but by the governors of the separate states in order to keep secure each state's constituted freedoms from possible infringement by foreign or federal forces — a very real concern back in 1789 when the Bill of Rights was proposed. Granted, that threat seems somewhat remote 200 years later. But then, so does the threat of soldiers knocking on your door and commanding you to let them watch your TV, eat your Cheetos and sleep in your bed for the night, though you're protected from that unlikely event by the seldom-heralded Third Amendment, next door neighbor to the celebrated Second.

I've never met a real, live NRA member, but I've always wanted to, if only to ask one question: Given your group's claim that all citizens have a constitutionally protected right to possess whatever weapon he or (I guess occasionally) she deems necessary for sport or self-defense or whatever — given that, does it follow that said right includes the possession of not only semiautomatic assault rifles with collapsible stocks, cartridges holding dozens of bullets and grenade-launching attachments (features of the guns in the recent government ban), but also bazookas, flame throwers, mortars, ground-to-air missiles and any thermonuclear device on the market and priced to sell?

That's a rhetorical question that should be familiar to any real, live, NRA member, if only because it's the mirror question to their "If government can deny a citizen's right to own an AK-47 assault rifle, what's to stop government from denying a citizen's right to own a simple hunting rifle or antique pistol?" question.

But they can't have it both ways. If the right to "bear arms" is absolute, then it cannot be affected by technology that allows for, whatever degree of carnage possible. However, if the right is not absolute, then the debate is not about the "right to bear arms" but rather the more thorny issue of where the line that limits that right should be drawn.

And I strongly suspect that shifting the debate from absolute right to reasonable limitation is a shift that those with a skewed understanding of the Constitution and IQs commensurate with their shoe sizes don't really care to make.

Irony rehash

To the Editor:
 I found James Cahoy's article "The Age of Irony Descends" (June 23) reprehensible for a number of reasons. Since when does citing the name of a magazine (in this case, Spy) give credence to intellectual theft? Copying the thesis to Paul Rudnick and Kurt Anderson's article (March Spy) is bad enough, but passing it off as your own is below contempt. I'm sure there are enough students willing to pen opinion editorials that are far more

"newsworthy," or at least avoids rehashing articles with headlines such as: "Trump — The Man Behind Tuition Hikes" or "The Spectre of Koch Looms Over the Ped. Mall." Might as well go all the way with a weekly "Split at Birth."

Dangerous diversion

To the Editor:
 The recent argument among pro-choice supporters over the flag-burning that took place at the July 3 pro-choice rally is not only unfortunate, it is dangerous. Unlike the "pro-life" groups, the pro-choice movement is not a single-minded drive toward a single goal. The pro-choice movement is dedicated to maintaining and expanding women's autonomy, our rights, and our freedom. This project must, according to its own terms, take place on many levels and according to the individual choices of those involved. The potential exists for this movement to be a giant and powerful coalition of people all working to maintain basic human rights, and specifically, the rights of women to determine their reproductive lives. If we allow the movement to become divided over a single individual's choice of expression, we play directly into the hands of anti-choice groups. However, if we refuse to waste our energy this way, if we are vigilant in our goal to unite and work together for our right to live and reproduce as we choose, we cannot lose.

3rd Soviet sub catches on fire

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Soviet nuclear-powered submarine caught fire off Norway on Sunday, but a Soviet tugboat quickly came to its assistance and began towing it to a Soviet port, Norwegian officials said.

It was the third time in less than four months a Soviet nuclear-powered submarine has run into trouble off Norway's coast. Norwegian officials said that as in the previous incidents, the Soviets did not alert them Sunday.

It was not immediately known whether the submarine's nuclear reactors were damaged or whether the ship carried nuclear weapons. The Norwegian Supreme Command did not say whether any sailors aboard the sub had been injured.

The distressed ship was identified as an Alfa-class submarine, which is powered by two nuclear reactors and capable of carrying nuclear-tipped torpedoes and anti-submarine missiles.

A Norwegian research vessel reported that smoke was coming from the sub's conning tower about 5 p.m. local time and that the vessel was being helped by a Soviet tugboat, according to a Defense

"I hope this is the last time something like this happens without us being warned." — Norwegian Defense Ministry spokesman Erik Senstad.

Ministry spokesman, Erik Senstad. Other Soviet naval vessels were in the area, and the submarine did not appear to be in serious danger, the Norwegian Supreme Command said.

The ship was spotted in the Barents Sea about 75 miles east of the Norwegian town of Vardoe and north of the Kola Peninsula. The ship was in international waters, 30 miles north of Soviet territorial waters.

Senstad said it was "regrettable" the Soviets had not issued a warning to Norwegian authorities. "I hope this is the last time something like this happens without us being warned," he said in a television interview.

Foreign Minister Thorvald Stoltenberg summoned the Soviet ambassador for a meeting late Sunday, the national NTB news agency reported.

A ministry spokesman said the Soviet Embassy was contacted to find out if there was any danger of radiation.

On June 26, a fire broke out aboard a Soviet Echo II class vessel that was sailing 70 miles off Norway's coast in the Norwegian Sea.

Norwegian scientists later said small amounts of radiation leaked from the vessel and that its reactor may have come close to a meltdown.

The Soviet news agency Tass first said four sailors from that sub were hospitalized and were being examined for possible radiation poisoning. But the news agency later said the four "were healthy and have no excess radiation."

Another accident involving a Soviet sub occurred April 7 when a MIKE class nuclear sub sank in the Norwegian Sea, killing 42 Soviet sailors.

Cessna pilot embarrassed by attention

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — One of Thomas Root's first questions for his relatives was whether his unconscious 800-mile flight, crash and rescue at sea had made the news.

Indeed, it was all over the news, but now the news is all over the fast-track lifestyle of a Washington lawyer whose legal and financial affairs are under minute scrutiny.

"He's miffed by a lot of what's been said about him. It's all just made him cringe," said W. Todd Root, his brother. "He's deeply embarrassed by all this attention."

Thomas Root, 36, was resting in stable condition Sunday at Hollywood's Memorial Hospital, recovering from the crash and a gunshot wound to the abdomen that he apparently suffered during the flight, said hospital spokeswoman Becky Caschette.

"We're having a quiet Sunday," she said. "The family didn't want to do anything with the press today."

Root talked Saturday with a National Transportation Safety Board air safety investigator and an FBI agent. NTSB investigator Andrew Alston said he didn't have reason to dispute Root's version of events, but that investigators in several places will try to determine whether evidence matches Root's story.

Alston said investigators were questioning Root's claim he doesn't remember the gunshot, which initial tests indicate was at very close range.

Root has suggested that a .32-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver he kept loaded in the glove compartment fell out and fired when his single-engine Cessna ditched near the Bahamas while on autopilot.

The plausibility of that will be checked in further tests and discussions with firearms experts and the gun's manufacturer, Alston said.

11 dead in Abkhazian flare-up

MOSCOW (AP) — A dispute over university enrollment flared into an ethnic riot that killed 11 people and injured 127 in an enclave in the Soviet republic of Georgia, the official Tass news agency reported Sunday.

Fighting broke out Saturday night and lasted into the early morning hours Sunday in the Black Sea city of Sukhumi, capital of the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic, Tass said.

Said Tarkil, ideological secretary for Abkhazia, said Abkhazians protested a decision by the Georgia government to restrict the number of Abkhazians at the city's branch of Tbilisi State University.

Abkhazians, outnumbered by both Georgians and Russians in their homeland, have protested in the past, alleging discrimination.

Georgia also decided to separate the Sukhumi branch from the other campuses, Tarkil said in a telephone interview from Sukhumi, 900 miles south of Moscow.

"The Abkhazian side is against this. It is inadmissible to divide a university according to nationalities," Tarkil said, adding that a commission from the national parliament also opposed the division of the university.

Tarkil said that the fighting raged over a large part of the city and involved not only students, "but all segments of the population."

The Tass report, also broadcast on the main evening television news program Vremya, said "measures are being taken to render help to those wounded, to restore public order and tranquility. The situation is now being controlled by police and troops of the Interior Ministry," which runs the national police force.

It did not specify the nationalities of the victims, nor give their names.

"In the clashes, stones, sticks, firearms and cold steel were used," said a joint report by Tass and its Georgian affiliate Grunzinform.

The senior official in Georgia, Communist Party First Secretary Givi Gumaridze, rushed to Abkhazia along with law enforcement officials seeking to restore order. Party and government officials "appealed to the population to be rational and responsible and assist law enforcement authorities in stabilizing the situation," the report said.

IRA bomb threats disrupt railways

KILNASAGGART, Northern Ireland (AP) — Just when it seemed safe to ride the rails again, Irish Republican Army bombs have made train service between Dublin and Belfast a day-to-day proposition.

Service between the two capitals was disrupted again over the weekend as the British Army gingerly removed a van abandoned beneath a bridge at Meigh, about four miles north of the border of Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic.

"It was just a hoax," a spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary said Sunday afternoon, but it was one that took two days to clear.

IRA bombs often arrive in stolen vans, and the railroad has been a prime target since the first explosion at the Kilnasaggart Bridge Dec. 16.

Explosions and threats along the Northern Ireland side of the border disrupted service for 53 days between Dec. 16 and mid-April, and passenger traffic dropped 30 percent, according to Northern Ireland Railways.

Two months of peace ended June 17 when a bomb exploded near the station at Garriagh in suburban Belfast. There was another explosion June 20 at another commuter station and a flurry of false reports that briefly closed the line.

No one has been killed or injured in these incidents, though there was a close call March 2 when a bomb exploded without warning on a bridge four minutes before a passenger train was due.

The recent problems have dented the railroad's hopes of rebuilding traffic on the Dublin-Belfast line, a joint venture with Irish Rail that normally carries 1,300 passengers a day on the one-hour, 55-minute express journey. There is no scheduled bus or air service between the cities.

"We always get passengers to their destinations," an executive of Northern Ireland Railways said, though often that includes a bus ride part of the way.

Southbound trains from Belfast were stopped over the weekend at Newry, and passengers were put aboard buses for a 12-mile ride to Dundalk, in the Irish Republic, to resume their rail journey.

The IRA, in a statement reported March 11 in The Belfast Telegraph, said the bombings were "part of a military strategy aimed at forcing the British army out of fixed positions and border bunkers."

The mostly Roman Catholic IRA, outlawed both by the British and Irish governments, has waged a 20-year guerrilla campaign to drive the British out of the Protestant-dominated province of Northern Ireland and unite it with the Irish Republic.

An explosion is often the bait to lure British soldiers near other booby-trapped devices. One such trap, involving four explosive devices, was planted in February at the Kilnasaggart bridge, which is within 1,000 yards of the border.

The area is known as "bandit country," where narrow roads twist and turn through pastures and thickets of trees, past walls emblazoned with pro-IRA graffiti.

The British army operates from hilltop forts, watching the countryside from steel towers.

Aldrin said that National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Freedom space station, to be assembled in orbit in the mid-1990s, should serve as a stepping stone to a manned lunar base and human flights to Mars.

He called President John F. Kennedy's commitment to the moon landing goal 28 years ago "a starter's gun for our pioneering giant leap for mankind."

"We're not yet ready for that go again. But perhaps we are at the starting line, prepared to take our marks and get set," Aldrin said.

He called on citizens "to form a consensus, and perhaps on the 30th anniversary of Kennedy's speech ... the world can know where we are going and when we will venture out again."

Following the ceremony, the astronauts rode in a 20-mile motorcade from the space center to Cocoa Beach, where they attended a luncheon in their honor. An estimated 10,000 people lined the motorcade route to cheer the spacemen and to take pictures.

Quayle mistakes Buzz Aldrin for Lukens

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vice President Dan Quayle mistakenly credited a moon landing to a congressman convicted of a sex charge, amusing a crowd of Young Republicans at the group's national convention Saturday.

"This next Thursday, July 20th, will be an historic date for America as America celebrates the 20th anniversary of Neil Armstrong and Buzz Lukens walking on the moon," Quayle said.

He meant to say Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, who followed Armstrong to become the second person to walk on the moon on the Apollo 11 mission.

Donald "Buz" Lukens, a Republican congressman from Ohio, was convicted in May of having sex with a 16-year-old girl.

Quayle, who spoke from index cards during remarks at the Nashville Convention Center, appeared to realize his mistake after the crowd began laughing at the reference to Lukens.

Floyd concert triples Venice population

VENICE, Italy — Fans of the rock group Pink Floyd, including Woody Allen and Tom Cruise, more than doubled the population of this canal city to see the band perform on a floating stage near St. Mark's Square.

But the square lay awash in trash Sunday after the concert the day before, and residents were complaining about violence, drug use and littering during the show that drew an estimated 200,000 people to this city of 83,000.

"Venice has been desecrated. Excrement on the streets, filth everywhere, violence, and drugs. Venetians can take no more of this," said Augusto Salvadori, president of the Committee for the Defense of Venice.

But fans complained about the lack of services, saying the city provided no special facilities such as toilets or special emergency vehicles at the concert. A 24-hour transport strike exacerbated problems, causing chaos for inhabitants and tourists alike. Many concertgoers slept in the streets.

Police said 80 people suffered minor injuries in a scuffle in the square shortly before the concert began, when a group of fans broke through a barrier. Scattered cases of vandalism also were reported.

Man breaks into Sweden's royal castle

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A man fed money to ducks outside Sweden's royal palace Sunday and then broke into the castle, smashing antique Chinese urns and breaking down doors before he was arrested, Swedish media reported.

King Carl XVI Gustaf, Queen Silvia and their three children were in southeastern Sweden on vacation at the time.

"What is most serious is that the man was able to move all over the castle, even into the apartment of the royal family," police spokesman Ulf Magnetorp told the national news agency TT.

The intruder was not identified.

Swedish radio and TV said the 36-year-old man was incoherent when arrested at the 17th-century Drottningholm Royal Palace, about 10 miles west of Stockholm.

The reports said he had been released from a mental institution six months ago. TT said police took him to the institution following his arrest.

Following standing orders, guards at the palace called police instead of intervening when the intruder burst in a main entrance, Magnetorp said. He said those orders should be changed.

Investigators link drug cult, Chicago mob

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Federal agents are investigating suspected links between syndicated crime bosses in Chicago and a cult-influenced drug ring blamed for 15 slayings near Matamoros, Mexico, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Charles Harrison, agent in charge of the U.S. Customs regional office in Houston, confirmed his agency is investigating a relationship between Chicago mobsters and suspects in the Matamoros drug and killings case, The Brownsville Herald reported.

"We can acknowledge we are looking into a relationship, but I really can't go into any details," Harrison said. "It's an ongoing investigation."

Agents are looking into a possible narcotics and money laundering enterprise involving the cult figures, the Chicago-based syndicate and Manuel "Poncho" Jaramillo, who lives in Mission, Texas, the newspaper reported, citing court transcripts, indictments, affidavits and police records filed in drug and racketeering cases from south Texas to Illinois.

Jaramillo's associates include Albert Caesar Tocco, a reputed Chicago mob boss arrested in January by FBI agents and charged in a 48-count federal racketeering indictment, the Herald reported.

Other Jaramillo associates include members of the Matamoros-based Hernandez family, which Mexican and U.S. agents believe was central to a gruesome cult accused of slaying 15 people, according to federal investigators. Some of the victims were sacrificed in rituals intended to protect a narcotics ring, police said.

McEnroe to miss Davis Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — An injured shoulder will prevent John McEnroe from playing in next weekend's Davis Cup semifinal matchup against West Germany at Munich.

McEnroe will be replaced on the U.S. team by Brad Gilbert in the five-match meeting, U.S. Tennis Association spokesman Ed Fabricius said Sunday from Munich.

Fabricius said McEnroe, who was hampered by shoulder problems in his Wimbledon semifinal loss to Stefan Edberg, dropped out after visiting Dr. Irving Glick, the head physician at the U.S. Open, on Friday.

McEnroe was diagnosed as having rotator cuff tendinitis in his left shoulder. Glick told McEnroe that continued pain and stiffness in the shoulder would prevent him from playing in the matches next Friday through Sunday.

Fabricius said team captain Tom Gorman talked to Tim Mayotte and French Open champion Michael Chang about taking McEnroe's place, but both were unavailable for next weekend.

Gilbert, who has a 3-1 career record against Wimbledon champion and West German star Boris Becker, will join Andre Agassi to play the four singles matches. Ken Flach and Robert Seguso will play doubles for the United States.

Anheuser-Busch Classic suspended

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Mike Donald and Tim Simpson survived but Hal Sutton was eliminated in Sunday night's darkness-suspended playoff at the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

After Sutton dropped out with a double bogey on the third extra hole, PGA Tour officials decided at 7:25 p.m. that it was too dark to continue play. The playoff between Donald and Simpson was to resume today at 9 a.m. on the 16th hole at Kingsmill Golf Club.

The three had finished four tours of Kingsmill's 6,776-yard, par-71 layout in 268, 16 shots under par. Donald closed with a 6-under 65, Simpson a 67 and Sutton a 68.

King wins first U.S. Open

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — Betsy King shook off her late third-round collapse with birdies on three of the first four holes Sunday and won her first U.S. Women's Open championship by four strokes over Nancy Lopez.

King, who blew a three-shot lead on the final two holes Saturday to fall into a tie with Patty Sheehan, rebounded with a 3-under-par 68 on the 6,109-yard Old Course at the Indianwood Golf and Country Club and finished at 6-under-par 278.

The victory was the first Open championship and second major title for King, 33, the leading player on the LPGA circuit this season with five victories and $503,794 in earnings.

The $80,000 winner's share of the $450,000 purse made King the first LPGA player ever to top $500,000 in official earnings in one season.

King did not win a tournament in her first seven years on the Tour but has won 19 in the last six years — more than any other player on either the men's or women's tours.

Lopez, a Hall of Famer who has 40 career victories — but has never won the open — started the day 1-over and shot a 68 to finish at 2-under 282 for her third second-place showing in the lone major she has never won.

Expos' Owen put on disabled list

CINCINNATI (AP) — Montreal shortstop Spike Owen severely sprained his ankle Sunday in a game against the Cincinnati Reds and was placed on the 15-day disabled list.

Owen hurt his ankle while sliding into third base in the fourth inning and had to be helped off the field. He was taken to a local hospital for x-rays that found no fracture.

The Expos called up infielder Jeff Huson from their Indianapolis of the Class AAA American Association to take Owen's place on the roster. Huson, 24, hit .310 with 3 homers and 35 RBIs this season. Last year, Huson hit .310 in 20 games for the Expos in his first major league call-up.

Owen has started 87 games at shortstop for Montreal, batting .242 with four homers and 27 RBIs. He entered the game third in the National League with 57 walks.

The Expos, the leaders in the NL East, won the game 6-3 in 12 innings.

25-miles from Gap to Orcieres-Merlette. The last five miles were straight up hill.

"I felt good. I probably could have pushed it harder the last hill," LeMond said. "I have to say that hill time trials are not my specialty."

Marino Lejaretta of Spain was second in 1:11:06 while defending champion Pedro Delgado was fourth in 1:11:31, gaining just a handful of seconds on LeMond, who was clocked in 1:11:39.

"I knew I was going to do a good race. I was afraid of losing more than a minute to Delgado but I just lost eight seconds," LeMond said.

Delgado is now in fourth place overall, 2:48 back, with four more stages in the Alps to go following a rest day Monday. Then there is a relatively flat stage on Saturday with a closing time trial from Versailles to Paris on July 23.

Fignon and LeMond, the only American to have won the race, have alternated the lead since July 6. First LeMond held it for five days through last Tuesday. Then Fignon took over with a burst up the mountain in the second stage in the Pyrenees.

It stayed that way over the flat sections through southern France. Sunday's climb from 2,400 feet to 6,003 feet had two slopes rated first category in steepness and difficulty. The first lasted most of the first six miles of the stage.

Thousands of cycling fans parked overnight to crowd the mountain passes and curves to cheer the riders on. The riders arrived in the dual resort of Orcieres-Merlette, situated between Gap and Briançon near Grenoble.

LeMond won the last time trial to Rennes on July 6 that put him in the lead but he wasn't expecting to do so well here.

"I was afraid of pushing it to my limit but I was afraid of exploding," LeMond said. Exploding is a term racers use to describe the sensation when they run out of power.

LeMond feared the mountains since he exploded in the steep sections of the Tour of Italy a month ago. But he held up well in the Pyrenees last week and held up better in the first mountain stage.

secutive home runs in the fifth. Athletics 6, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Terry Steinbach hit his second career grand slam and Mike Moore, 12-5, won his fourth straight start, allowing six hits in six innings.

John Cerutti, 5-5, gave up four hits and two runs in six-plus innings. Leading 1-0, he walked Carney Lansford and Jose Canseco to open the seventh and Duane Ward relieved.

Mark McGwire singled to lead the bases and Dave Henderson's grounder forced Lansford at home. Steinbach, whose previous grand slam was against Toronto last year, then hit his fifth home run of the season.

Yankees 10, Royals 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Cadaret pitched a six-hitter in his second career start in a game shortened to 6 1/2 innings by rain following a 38-minute delay.

Cadaret, 2-1, struck out a career-high six and walked two in his first complete game.

New York scored in each of the first four innings off Terry Leach, 2-3, and added five runs in the sixth off relievers Bobby Buchanan and Steve Crawford.

Indians 11, Rangers 5

CLEVELAND — Brad Kommsink drew a bases-loaded walk in Cleveland's six-run first inning and hit a three-run homer that capped a five-run sixth.

The Indians batted around in both the first and sixth innings. They got three run-scoring singles, two bases-loaded walks and an RBI foreout in the first against Kevin Brown, 7-6, and rookie Joey Belle hit a two-run single before Kommsink homered in the sixth.

Twins 4, Red Sox 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Tim Laudner hit a two-run single in the 11th after Mike Greenwell's home run off Jeff Reardon with two outs in the ninth sent the game into extra innings.

Ed Romero's RBI single off Randy St. Claire had given Boston the lead in the top of the 11th. Gary Gaetti and Carmen Castillo singled off Rob Murphy, 1-4, to open the bottom of the inning and Gene Larkin sacrificed. Launder then grounded a single between shortstop and third and into left field.

St. Claire, 1-0, got his first American League victory. Reardon blew his eighth save in 23 opportunities, including four of his last six.

Orioles 3, Angels 2

BALTIMORE — Mickey Tettleton's 11th-inning double scored Cal Ripken with the winning run.

Mike Smith, 2-0, who faced two batters in the top of the 11th, got the victory in his second major-league decision. Willie Fraser, 2-5, pitched one inning and was the loser.

California manager Doug Rader was ejected before the start of the game when he continued arguing a disputed home run that gave Baltimore an 11-9 victory Saturday night.

White Sox 2, Brewers 0

CHICAGO — Rich Dotson didn't allow a hit for five innings and won for the first time since returning to Chicago.

Dotson, 3-6, allowed only Robin Yount's sixth-inning single, struck out four and walked three in 7 1/2 innings. Don Pall gave up a hit to B.J. Surhoff in the ninth and Bobby Thigpen got the last two outs of the combined two-hitter for the 17th save.

Visit to the Field didn't fit the dreams of a tourist

When I was 11 years old my parents took me to the Ponderosa Ranch where the TV show "Bonanza" was supposedly filmed. While the tour guide was informing us about how great everything about the TV show was, an intoxicated man shouted, "This isn't where 'Bonanza' was filmed. You can see a lake from here. You couldn't see a lake on TV!" The man was loudly persistent in his claim, and finally the tour guide admitted that the set had been moved from its original site in order to make it more accessible to tourists. The guide wasn't so much upset by the fact that this small fact had been revealed, but rather that it was revealed by some obnoxious drunk who spoke the truth. From that moment on I wanted to be like that man, and most people who have met me agree that I have achieved everything except the truth.

Recently I went looking for the truth in Dyersville, Iowa, "The Farm Toy Capitol of the World." Only I was looking for a farm toy of a larger size, the so-called "Field of Dreams."

I kept telling myself I didn't have any expectations, but I must have, because I was disappointed when I saw the field. I thought the field would be conspicuous in the rural landscape, but it wasn't. Perhaps this was due to its size; I knew I wasn't visiting Yankee Stadium, but the field was almost table-sized. The base-paths weren't even natural soil, but red cinders, which stained my white Chuck Taylor's a disgusting pink. There was only one base, first, and the home plate area resembled a grenade crater, no doubt made from too many would-be Sultans of Swat trying to land one of farmer Don Lansing's balls into the next county. I thought that there would be no truths made evident here. But I was wrong.

Soon a van pulled in with a father and his two sons. The father video-taped his sons getting out of the van and climbing onto the small bleachers. The youngest son exclaimed, "Take a shot of me; I'm sitting where Kevin Costner sat!" I started to leave and the father said, "Stick around and we'll try to get a game going."

I started looking through the registration book while the father told me that they had just come from Iowa City. They had been to the auction at Kinnick Stadium, and he pulled out a piece of AstroTurf to prove it. As if I doubted him. Meanwhile his sons were on the field. The youngest stepped up to the worn plate and announced, "I'm Joe Jackson." And by golly if he didn't send the ball flying off the end of his aluminum bat — just

An air of philosophical blather saturated by youths' questions

Jeff Killion
The Daily Iowan

You may be wondering what the deal is lately with these multitudes of young people strolling the streets of Iowa City, pointing and questioning everyone and everything. These are groups of incoming freshmen, and they are breezing around town so they can get an idea of what it's all about. A few of them dropped by The Toast & Coffee Cafe, and saturated the air of philosophical blather and burnt toast with a thousand different questions.

Deb, from Charles City, asked if we were aware of the mission of this university. A pretty good question, and as luck would have it, the UT's boss, Hunter Rawlings, was seated to my right, heaping gobs of grape jelly on his toast. "Don't look at me," he said, "I've got this jelly to worry about." Our stares persistent, he knew he'd have to address the question. "OK. Uh... the mission of the University of Iowa is to seek out new life and new ways to raise tuition. To boldly go where no tenured professor has gone before. Do you follow me?"

"As far as I'd like to," she said. Sydney, from Red Oak, asked if she would ever get a date. We assured her the chances were good that she would go out sometime in the four or five years she was here. However, her fortunes would improve exponentially if she, as my philosopher-friend Lou put it, "would lose that ridiculous Spuds MacKenzie T-shirt."

Allen, from Dubuque, wanted information on obtaining a fake ID. Apparently, he wasn't alone because the moment he spoke the notebooks flew open and Bics stood poised. I took the liberty of answering this one and prefaced my lecture with the obvious; find someone who looks like you and then memorize everything on their ID. But finding a twin is some-like the one Shoeless Joe used, I bet — deep into the corn. It was a drive that would have been caught by any minor league shortstop, but here at the "Field of Dreams" it was an old-fashioned four-bagger. The brothers had some time to celebrate the shot as they spent the next 20 minutes tramping through the corn hunting for the ball.

As I finished writing down some of the more memorable comments from the register, Mr. Lansing, the "Keeper of the Dreamfield," arrived, and the young boy had him autograph a ball for him. Farmer Lansing then held out some buttons for us all to take — modest souvenirs inscribed "I was in the 'Last Shot' of 'Shoeless Joe' 1988." It was a nice touch — we had all played on the damn field, so we could tacitly announce that we were actually in the film merely by wearing the button.

If there was one thing I learned from my search it was that people actually do mistake theme parks for cathedrals. And it is usually to create a Church of the Self. Instead of saying, "This is where Kevin Costner sat," the son said, "I'm sitting where Kevin Costner sat." Or, as some woman from France wrote in the register, "If you make a 'Part II' just call me," confusing Lansing for the director of the film.

Still others claim the field is responsible for people's good fortune. "I'm so glad you let this become a reality — because of this dream other dreams are being fulfilled. A guy in our school now has glasses because it took a dream to get it done — the money wasn't there — but should that be a problem if something is necessary?" wrote a woman from Missouri. And to think that if some sobbuster hadn't let a movie crew spread his acreage across the big screen, some poor kid might be walking around in blindness.

In the final analysis, I'm still searching for the truth — I'm not as lucky as most who trekked to the field. So soon I will be traveling to "Sal's Famous Pizzeria" in Bed-Stuy, New York, to get a "Do the Right Thing" T-shirt to show that I know about the ghetto because I visited a movie set.

A weekly account of the goings-on at Iowa City's mythical meeting place.

times difficult, so I offered a trouble-shooting guide for those possessing less than convincing fakes.

With a passion paralleling Armstrong's account of the moon landing, I narrated what to say when undergoing intense questioning by a bouncer or a cop. For instance, if they ask "When's your birthday?" or "What's your sign?", just say "Well, I wasn't born yesterday" and flash them a peace sign.

The final query from these fine young cannibals of knowledge was of a philosophical nature and it was, appropriately, answered by The Toast & Coffee's manager, Doralyn. The question posed was "Why?", and she replied in her typically cryptic manner, "Because."

The person who asked this question took this as a cue to enroll at Iowa State. Hunter Rawlings took it as an invitation to go black-birding in the South Moluccas. I took it as a suggestion to purchase as many Lotto America tickets as possible.

With answers like Doralyn's, that's really the only orientation one needs.

LeMond climbs back into lead

ORCIERES-MERLETTE, France (AP) — American Greg LeMond, saying he feels stronger than in his winning year of 1986, climbed back into the lead of the Tour de France on Sunday with an impressive performance in an individual time trial in the Alps.

High amid the picture-postcard mountains, LeMond took fifth place in the race against-the-clock and regained the leader's yellow jersey. Laurent Fignon of France, the winner in 1983 and 1984, fell back into second place, 40 seconds behind LeMond.

"It's nice to have the yellow jersey again but the most important is to take it as it goes," LeMond said, knowing there is still a week to go before the cycling classic ends in Paris.

"But I feel as fresh as I ever felt in the Tour de France, which is quite unusual," he said. "In '86 I had a lot more mental stress than I do now."

Since his victory, however, he has suffered various misfortunes. A hunting accident, an emergency appendectomy and leg problems made him miss the last two years of the Tour de France.

"I feel I am getting stronger and I haven't had any bad days," LeMond said. "I'd say I am feeling probably as good as I have been since. I'm probably not climbing as well but I am making great improvement."

Fignon, who held a seven-second margin going into the 15th stage, cracked a little and finished 10th Sunday, 47 seconds behind LeMond.

Andy Hampsten, the other American challenger, faltered in Sunday's climb and finished in 1:13:30. He dropped to seventh overall, more than seven minutes back of LeMond.

Steven Rooks of the Netherlands won the stage in 1 hour, 10 minutes, 42 seconds over the Soviets dump Iowans, flu sidelines Skinner

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa AAU Select basketball team fell victim to 72 percent shooting in the second half by a Soviet team Sunday and lost 115-84 in Vilnius, Lithuania.

The Iowa team, composed mostly of high school players, trailed the Soviet team by 44-42 at halftime. But then the Soviet squad, whose players ranged in age from 18-24, broke away in the second half.

Iowa AAU outrebounded the Soviets, 37-36, but shot only 38 percent from the field for the game. The team's record is now 3-2 on its Soviet tour.

Mike Bergman of Waverly-Shell Rock, who will be a freshman at Iowa State next season, led the Iowans with 25 points. Iowa Hawk-eye sophomore-to-be Wade Lookingbill scored 11. Chris Street, Jon Dietz and Cam Johnson each had 10.

Troy Skinner, Lookingbill's teammate at Iowa, scored 24 points in the team's previous game. But he was bothered by the flu and was held to only three points Sunday.

Walden says he'll punish bike thieves

AMES (AP) — The four Iowa State University football players accused of stealing bicycles will get a "family" type of punishment and won't be kicked off the team, according to coach Jim Walden.

"Why would I want to deprive myself the chance to kill them," the coach laughed. "I've talked with several of their mothers and they say that would suit them just fine."

— Iowa State coach Jim Walden.

Starting defensive linemen Randy Bern of Spencer and second-team players Lance Henkel of Des Moines, Mathew Rehberg of Omaha and Larry Ratigan of Council Bluffs were arrested earlier this month. Bern and Rehberg were charged with second-degree theft, and Henkel and Ratigan were charged with third-degree theft.

Ames police say the arrests came after five stolen bicycles were discovered at the apartment the players shared.

Walden wouldn't be specific on the sort of discipline he has in mind but hinted it would include extra workouts.

"Kicking them off the team would only mean that they wouldn't have to face the responsibility of embarrassing themselves and the team. That doesn't do any good," he said.

"These guys did a stupid thing and they got caught. Now we, as their family, will have to impose the penalties we think are correct. They will pay for it Aug. 17," the first day of fall practice.

Stringer brings USA to Carver

The Daily Iowan

The United States' national women's basketball team will make an appearance at Iowa's Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Saturday, July 28 against the Canadian national team.

The USA team is coached by Iowa coach Vivian Stringer and features Hawkeye senior Franthea Price.

Stringer's squad also includes two Olympians and five players who competed in the NCAA or AIAW final four. The Canadian roster includes seven players on the 1988 Canada team that ranked as high as No. 3 in the world, but failed to qualify for Olympic competition.

Vicky Bullett, a 6-3 forward who led Maryland to the 1989 NCAA Final Four, is the only 1989 national team member to have competed on the 1988 U.S. team.

Garrelts returns to Giants' lineup with two hitter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scott Garrelts came off the disabled list to pitch six innings of two-hit ball as the San Francisco Giants downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-1.

Garrelts, who went on the DL with a hamstring pull on June 29 and was reactivated Saturday, allowed an unearned run in the first inning and blanked the Pirates until he was relieved after allowing a leadoff single to Bobby Bonilla in the seventh.

Jeff Brantley pitched two hitless innings and Steve Bedrosian got the final three outs for his 13th save and seventh in eight opportunities since being acquired from Philadelphia on June 18.

Dodgers 3, Cardinals 2

LOS ANGELES — Tim Belcher, making his first start since June 20, pitched seven innings and Jeff Hamilton hit a two-run triple to key a three-run second as the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the St. Louis Cardinals.

Belcher, 6-8, allowed two runs on eight hits while striking out seven and walking none. Jay Howell pitched the final two innings for his 17th save in 18 opportunities.

Braves 6, Mets 2

ATLANTA — Darrell Evans hit the 408th and 409th home runs of his career, breaking out of a tie for 21st place all-time, to lead the Atlanta Braves over the New York Mets in a rain-plagued game.

The game was delayed by rain three times for a total of 2½ hours.

Evans, at 42 the oldest player in the National League, hit his first homer of the game and fifth of the year in the second inning off Bob Ojeda and came back with another off reliever Kevin Tapani in the fifth.

Evans broke out of his tie for 21st place with Duke Snider, but remains well behind Billy Williams, 20th all-time with 426.

Padres 4, Cubs 3

SAN DIEGO — Tim Flannery's pinch-hit sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the sixth inning climaxed a two-run rally as the San Diego Padres handed the Chicago Cubs their third consecutive defeat.

American League

Tigers 8, Mariners 5

Charles Hudson was wondering when he would win again.

"It's always in the back of your mind," Hudson said. "You keep saying to yourself 'When is it going to end?' When I first came here, I felt I wasn't contributing."

Hudson won for the first time in a year as Detroit got three home runs Sunday and beat the Seattle Mariners 8-5 to end a 10-game losing streak, the Tigers' longest since June 1982.

Hudson, 1-4, had lost seven consecutive decisions since beating Texas on July 4, 1988. He allowed six hits in 6 1-3 innings, becoming the first Detroit starter to win in 22 games since Frank Tanana defeated Oakland on June 19. Edwin Nunez finished for his first save.

Tracy Jones hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell hit consecutive

California Police Chiefs warn Canseco to grow up

PLEASANTON, Calif. (AP) — The head of the California Police Chiefs Association, angry over what he calls Jose Canseco's "immature" behavior, has written an open letter to the Oakland Athletics star telling him to "grow up."

Pleasanton Police Chief Bill Eastman blasted Canseco for not taking responsibility for his actions, including recent speeding tickets and an arrest for allegedly having a loaded handgun in his car.

"You have blamed your cars, the police and even your celebrity status. You are apparently a victim in your own mind," Eastman wrote.

The letter, dated Friday, was sent to Canseco, team and league officials.

"I don't know where (Eastman) is coming from," Canseco said Saturday night in Toronto, where the A's are playing a series with the Blue Jays.

"If that's all the police have to do with their time, worrying about major league ballplayers..."

Canseco, who last year was named the American League's Most Valuable Player and became the first to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in a season, was slapped with his latest speeding ticket on Tuesday.

The outfielder was driving alone in his new white Porsche to his San Ramon home to watch the All-Star game when a California Highway Patrol officer pulled him over and ticketed him for driving 51 miles per hour in a 35 mph zone. The CHP believed he was actually going over 65 mph but couldn't get a radar reading.

Canseco said Saturday he is still annoyed by the attitude of the officer who gave him his ticket. He complained at the time about CHP officer Melody Hielman, saying "that lady policeman has an attitude problem."

But Eastman said Saturday that it is Canseco who has the attitude problem and said police officers should not be criticized for doing their jobs.

"To castigate law enforcement efforts is ludicrous and immature," Eastman said.

Eastman also said Canseco's expectation that he should be treated differently from others because he is a major league ballplayer is the real problem.

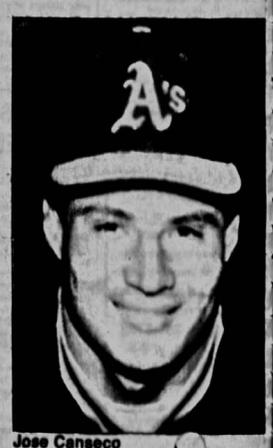

"Some sports stars have an expectation of a double standard, and that's really getting old," he said.

Canseco's ticket, on winding Crow Canyon Road near Castro Valley, was his fourth since last season.

In February, he was ticketed in Florida for driving 125 mph in his $75,000, cherry-red Jaguar, which had license plates reading "Mr. 40-40." He said later he was doing only 120 mph.

While in Arizona for spring training in March, Canseco got another speeding ticket in the same car.

In April, Canseco was arrested for investigation of having a loaded gun in the Jaguar while parked at the Laurel Heights campus of the University of California at San Francisco. He was visiting a doctor there for treatment of a wrist injury that kept him out of the A's lineup for the first half of the season and the All-Star Game.
