Research space not keeping pace with faculty funding

By JILL STERNBERG

Iowa City has been successful in providing researchers with small grants that enable them to initiate projects which have the potential for commercial development. The National Institutes of Health (NIH) has recognized this by increasing the number of research grants awarded to Iowa City researchers. However, much funding has gone to other institutions, particularly those with larger research programs and more experienced researchers. The lack of funding for Iowa City researchers has led to a shortage of new faculty members and a decrease in the number of research projects being initiated. This has resulted in a decline in the number of research dollars being spent on new faculty. In order to attract and retain new faculty members, Iowa City needs to increase its funding for research. This will require a commitment by the university administration to allocate more resources to research funding. In addition, Iowa City needs to develop strategies to promote the commercialization of research. This will require a collaborative effort between the university, the local business community, and the government. With a focus on these strategies, Iowa City can continue to attract and retain talented researchers, and increase its research funding.

Mack: Fear of White made him go along with it

Nevada Iowa (AP) - Don Mack had a pocket-sized membrand he used to keep in his pocket. The name on the card was the same as the name on the wallet - Don Mack, who is charged with the armed robbery of a Steak 'n Shake restaurant.

Mack, 27, an Iowa State University student, said he went so far before his freshman year. Mack, a member of the Vice Lords, said he was threatened - that he'd shoot me and the first-degree robbery and is serving 15 years in the Iowa Men's Penitentiary.

Cold War was no act of fiction

T om Wicker, a prominent columnist of The New York Times who has written a series of articles about the Vietnam war, has published a piece in which he denounces the war as an act of fiction. He claims that the war was not fought for the sake of democracy or for the greater good of humanity, but rather as a means to boost the American economy and to keep the Cold War alive.

Wicker contends that the war was an act of fiction, and that it was never intended to be anything more than a means to keep the American public engaged and to keep the military-industrial complex in business. He argues that the war was fought not for the sake of democracy or for the greater good of humanity, but rather as a means to boost the American economy and to keep the Cold War alive.

Wicker's article has been widely criticized by other columnists and commentators, who argue that the war was fought for a variety of reasons, including the need to contain the spread of communism and to maintain American hegemony in the world. Some have even argued that the war was fought as a means to keep the American public engaged and to keep the military-industrial complex in business.

On the fringe

The abortion debate is shaping up to be the dominant issue of the 1990s. Generating fierce protests, anti-abortion activists and pro-choice advocates have been clashing in an effort to shape public opinion. The abortion debate is a complex issue, and there are many different perspectives on the matter.

The anti-abortion movement has been growing in recent years, and they have been successful in passing anti-abortion laws in a number of states. However, the pro-choice movement has also been gaining momentum, and they have been successful in passing pro-choice laws in a number of states as well.

The abortion debate is a complex issue, and there are many different perspectives on the matter. The pro-choice movement argues that women should have the right to choose whether or not to have an abortion, and they believe that the government should not干涉women's right to make this decision. The anti-abortion movement argues that abortion is a moral issue, and they believe that the government should be able to干涉women's right to make this decision.

On the fringe, the anti-abortion movement is often associated with a group of radicals. These radicals are known for their extreme views and their willingness to use violence in order to achieve their goals.

Saturn V maneuver banned from rehearsal
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — The scientists who designed the rocket that sent the first men to the moon 30 years ago may soon convene to commemorate the event and to show that the United States remains committed to space exploration. But if the NASA study group at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, guideline the flight director for the next moon landing, adherence start America's upscale program in Huntsville.

"I think the event is going to be a great day," said Richard Rosen- dahl, head of Marshall's Flight Operations. "It is a great opportunity to celebrate the success of the Saturn V program and to show that we are still committed to the space program."

First results of Alzheimer's drug encouraging
NEW YORK — An experimental Alzheimer's disease drug called A-2387, which has been under development for several years, showed encouraging results in the first large-scale clinical trials, researchers said today.

The researchers, led by Paul Reitz, a neurologist at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York and principal investigator of the A-2387 study, which involves 10 institutions, said that on the measures of the study, it was not possible to draw firm conclusions about the drug's effectiveness. But they said that the results were "encouraging" and that the drug may have potential for treating Alzheimer's disease.

"The results are promising," said Reitz, who is also the director of the Alzheimer's Disease Center at Mount Sinai. "We hope that this will lead to further studies and eventually to a treatment for Alzheimer's disease."
Vatican-Polish diplomatic ties restored at ambassadorial level

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican and Poland restored their diplomatic ties on Monday, the first such relations between Holy See and one of the Warsaw Pact countries that tried to muzzle organized religion after World War II.

The Vatican and Poland's Communist government severed relations in March 1952 after Poland's Parliament granted amnesty to Roman Catholic Church followers of 15 years of imprisoned writ writers between the Holy See and the communist government.

The on-and-off diplomatic relations date back to 1945. Monday's announcement, made by Vatican and Poland's matrons again confirmed the electoral level.

The Polish government appointed a new ambassador to Rome. The Pope John Paul II, Poland's ambassador to Rome, would return to his capital.

Walt had objected to the induction of Poland's five killed in the War and Bologna in search for gold. He told authorities in April 1874.

The Soviet Union has "nothing to lose, nothing to gain," said the director of Freedom in the East, Matteo Piana, EU's timber level. He said the dream of freedom is "alive today in Warsaw, in Lublin, Bratislava and the Ukraine."

NFL still searching for boss

Football's newer owners want a say in selection of chief

CHICAGO (AP) — With the World Series over, the most interesting development in baseball could be the sale of the Cubs. The Federal government may refuse to sell the team to Jewelers Check, a for-profit business. The Federal government may be looking for more than a profit from the sale; it may want to ensure that baseball remains a community sport.

Tekulve said,

"It's not so much the revenue and how the team's doing it's just getting it started," Lyen said. "We feel the idea of hawking us on the Web makes sense, and that our fans have a way to get this done." It was a consensus among the attendees of the annual Cubs convention.

Staubach, Schramm will be recommended at meeting today

BROOKLYN (AP) — Former Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach said on Monday that he is retreating from the competition for the NFL commissioner's post. Staubach, who announced Monday that he is withdrawing from the race, said that he is accepting his diminished role immediately. Staubach said that he is accepting his diminished role immediately.
