Comments on Quayle offend Bush

Former Angel shot to death

Former California Angels pitcher Donnie Moore was found shot to death Tuesday after police were called to investigate an apparent domestic dispute. See Sports, page 12.

Gingrich to mount legal defense

GOP sources said Tuesday that House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich is seeking help from a former House colleague to start a legal defense for the expected ethics committee investigation of his conduct. See Nation/World, page 6.

WEATHER

Mostly cloudy today with a chance of showers. High in the lower 70s. Rain chances, 30 percent. Tonight, partly cloudy with a low in the middle to upper 50s.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush said Tuesday he was offended by Republican advisers who portrayed Dan Quayle as a campaign disaster who had to be protected from his own political ineptitude.

In a new book by Jules Witcover and Jack Germond, several consultants to last year's Bush-Quayle election campaign depict the vice-presidential candidate as a lightweight who was not ready for the national political scene.

One of the "handlers" employed by the Bush team to manage Quayle's campaign travels, Joseph Canzeri, said the former Indiana senator was tough to work with because he had a limited attention span, the "impatience of youth."

"He's a fairly quick study, but about what he wants to hear," Canzeri was quoted as saying in the book, "Whose Broad Stripes and Bright Stars? The Trivial Pursuit of the Presidency 1988."

"If he doesn't like it, he goes away from it. . . . He was like a kid. Ask him to turn off a light, and by the time he gets to the switch, he's forgotten what he went for."

Canzeri said the handlers "knew we were going to have to script him."

The book also indicates that James Lake, the former Reagan campaign press secretary who advised Quayle, was dismayed at some of Quayle's remarks on television as controversy about his Vietnam-era National Guard service heightened.

At one point, when the campaign wanted Quayle to refrain from answering questions so as not to overshadow Bush's convention acceptance speech, Lake said Quayle "wanted to answer those questions. I just pushed him aside."

Bush, asked about the comments of Canzeri and other former campaign operatives, said Tuesday that he found them "personally offensive."

"That's the ugly side of politics," he said.

He told reporters flying home from the Netherlands with him aboard Air Force One that Quayle has been an effective vice president.

Quayle, traveling in California, said Tuesday he found it "rather a cruel hoax that some of your top advisers would speak like that behind your back. It's most unfortunate. That probably explains a lot of the problems we had on the campaign. But that's behind us."

Quayle made his comments during an impromptu news conference at San Diego's Miramar Naval Air Station.

He told reporters in Los Angeles on Monday that it was a "critical mistake" to rely on the advice of his handlers. "If I had it to do over again, I'd do it differently. I would have been a lot more accessible to the press from the outset. I wouldn't have allowed myself to be in that controlled situation. I share the blame. I could have told them to go to hell, but I didn't," press secretary David Beckwith quoted his boss as saying.

Cedar Rapids invites Quayle to fund-raiser

The Daily Iowan

Vice President Dan Quayle will be in Cedar Rapids today for a fund-raiser for GOP legislative efforts, Republican party officials said.

Quayle has scheduled an 8 p.m. speech at Collins Plaza, 1200 Collins Road in Cedar Rapids.

Though the state party has a debt of about $225,000, proceeds from the dinner will go to legislative candidates and programs as part of an effort to seize control of the Iowa General Assembly, where Democrats control both the House and Senate.

Iowa Republican Chairman Richard Schwarm said the Quayle trip is evidence that the Bush administration has not written off Iowa, and he said he's certain the president will campaign in the state prior to next year's election. That visit could come before the end of this year, he added.

Iowa was one of the few states where the Bush-Quayle ticket lost in last year's election, after Bush finished third in Iowa's precinct caucuses. Quayle campaigned in the state only once during the general election campaign.

Dan Quayle holds up a model rocket Tuesday morning during his visit to the General Dynamics plant in San Diego, Calif.

Bush administration reduces short-term economic forecast

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Bush administration lowered its forecast for the economy on Tuesday and warned Congress to abide by its budget blueprint or risk bursting the $110 billion legal limit for the fiscal 1990 federal deficit.

But an uproar developed on Capitol Hill over an administration plan to save $2.9 billion in fiscal 1990, opening Oct. 1, simply by shifting a military payday from Oct. 1 to Sept. 29, the next-to-last day of fiscal 1989.

Congressional budget-writers complained that the Pentagon's shift was encouraging House and Senate committees to claim deficit reduction by bumping paydays of other agencies from 1990 into 1989.

"This is the surest way to undermine our ability to achieve the targets" of the budget, Leon Panetta, D-Calif., House budget committee chairman, told White House budget director Richard Darman at a hearing.

At an earlier news briefing, administration officials revealed that they have lowered their expectations for economic performance in the immediate future.

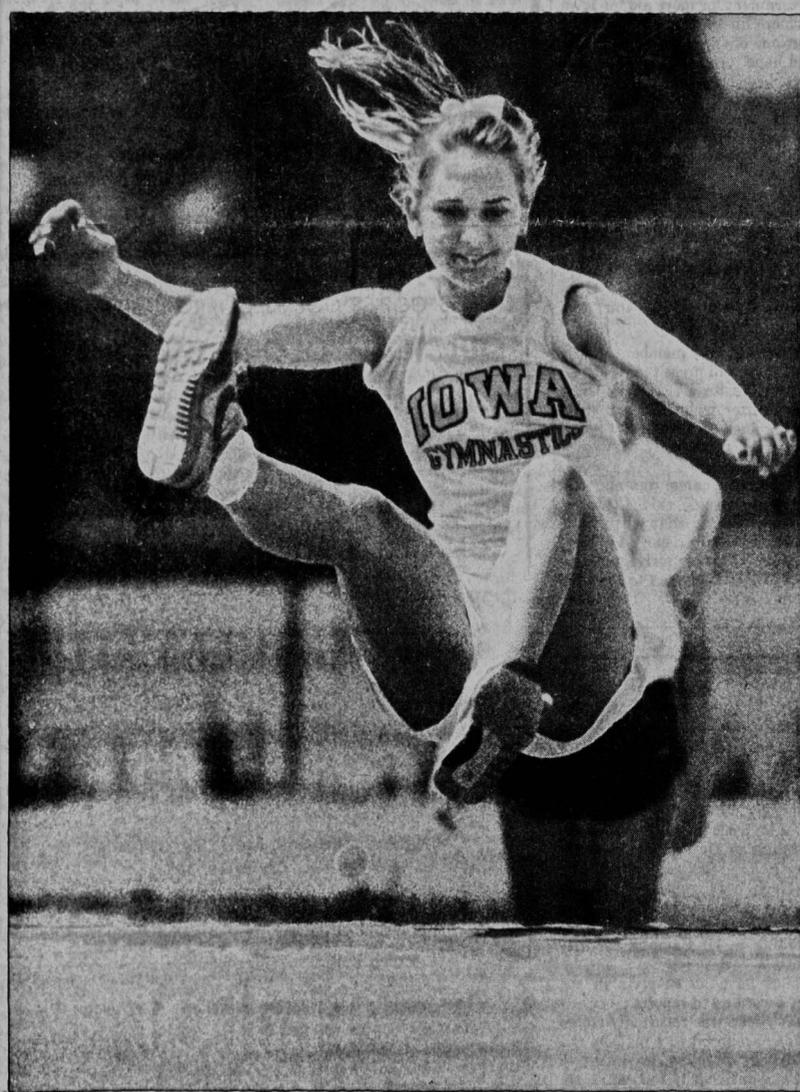

They estimated that short-term interest rates would average 8 percent this year and drop to 6.7 percent next year, that the economy would grow by 2.7 percent this year and 2.6 percent next year, and that inflation would rise by 4.9 percent in 1989 and 4.1 percent in 1990.

"The administration remains confident of the future course of the U.S. economy," said Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Each figure was more pessimistic than the administration had forecast in February. Estimates that at the time were called overly rosy by

School board monitors volunteer contributions

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

Concerned with equal educational opportunities between Iowa City schools, the Iowa City School Board discussed regulations outlining the implementation of a volunteer contributions policy Tuesday night.

The policy cites the need to monitor voluntary contributions in order to maintain equitable distribution of facilities and equipment throughout the district, and sets the criteria by which volunteer contributions will be monitored.

Contributions must be monitored because certain schools have more volunteer participation, which could lead to their receiving better equipment, materials, and services than other schools, according to board president Connie Champion.

"We don't care who has the best playground equipment," Champion said. "We're interested in maintaining equal educational opportunities. We can't see inequalities at a building level that make one educational opportunity better than another."

The administrative regulations "are an attempt to define the fine line that exists between individual school initiative and equitable educational opportunities," according to an administrative report.

The regulations would establish a volunteer contribution committee to regulate which contributions are appropriate.

If the policy and regulations are adopted, any project or fund-raising activity which will contribute more than $500 in voluntary support must be submitted to the committee. The project will then be evaluated using guidelines provided by the regulations to determine if it will disrupt the balance required among schools.

While the committee's purpose is to encourage volunteerism, the guidelines limit the amount of volunteer contributions that can be made towards facilities, equipment, materials and capital improvements.

Jaruzelski will enter race for 1st presidency

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Communist leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski reversed course Tuesday and announced he would be a candidate for the new post of president of Poland.

The president will be picked Wednesday by the National Assembly, Poland's two-chambered legislature.

Solidarity lawmakers decided overwhelmingly Tuesday night to permit union legislators to follow their consciences when they vote for or against Jaruzelski.

"I think it was a good decision," said Deputy Bronislaw Geremek, chairman of the Solidarity parliamentary group. After a long, emotional debate on Jaruzelski's candidacy, only 38 union lawmakers wanted to require party discipline in the vote.

The Solidarity-backed delegation makes up 46 percent of the assembly, and most seemed likely to vote against Jaruzelski, who imposed a martial-law crackdown on the independent trade union in 1981.

But Geremek indicated Jaruzelski would win even without Solidarity support.

"I can say Gen. Jaruzelski should be elected, by the votes of the coalition," he said.

The communist coalition has 300 of the 560 votes in the National Assembly, and Solidarity has 259. One seat was left open by the death of a Solidarity legislator.

Jerzy Stepień, a Solidarity senator from Kielce, said during the debate: "Let's not be afraid of confrontation. It is bound to happen."

Jaruzelski said a "sense of duty" drove him to change his mind after announcing June 30 that he

Koreans get experimental research chance at UI

Cathy Johnson
The Daily Iowan

Twelve of Korea's top undergraduate science students are working with UI researchers this summer in a program that gives them a chance to do their first experimental research.

The students, all juniors from the Korea Institute of Technology, are completing research projects this month under the guidance of faculty researchers. The six-week program is a part of the UI Undergraduate Scholars Research Participation program.

The program was established last summer as one of 50 student visitation programs conducted by the UI in conjunction with universities abroad. This year's session ends August 4.

Before the students leave Iowa City, they will present their research results to faculty advisors and to two KIT administrators, who are coming the UI at the end of this month specifically to attend the presentations, according to program advisor and Kwan Rim, UI biomedical engineering chairman and professor.

"These students really don't have research-laboratory experience, particularly in an international setting," Rim said. "They're trying very hard to learn."

Doil Chang, a participant who is doing dental research using holograms, said most of his training up to this point has been theoretical.

"In Korea, usually the learning is theoretical," he said. "In Korea, the experimental devices are not good. Korean people don't have much money, so undergraduate students study very theoretical parts."

Rim said the participants — who are conducting scientific and technological research projects in the departments of physics, mathematics, computer science, biology, and biomedical, mechanical, electrical, industrial and chemical engineering — are the best in their respective departments at KIT.

"This is a premier institute in Korea, and these students will occupy very important positions in Korea," Rim said.

KIT was established in 1985 at Taedok Science Town, South Korea, with the primary purpose of educating gifted students in close cooperation with the graduate-level national university, Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology.

Rim served as president of the university from 1982 to 1984.

Along with their academic experience, the student participants have been encouraged to explore American culture and before returning to Korea will tour other cities, including Chicago; New York; Washington, D.C. and Detroit.

The groups' advisers also arranged a field trip to the Hoover Library in West Branch, and each student received a free membership to New Life Fitness World in Iowa City. "The appealing part of this program is that it's an entirely different cultural setting, and they gain a different perspective from studying here," Rim said.

Former local broker sentenced to prison

A former Iowa City investment broker was sentenced Monday to 25 years in prison in Florida.

Byron Beeler, who at one time operated the Continental Mortgage Investment Co. in Iowa City, he was convicted May 19 of 41 counts of securities violations, including racketeering.

The judge set appeal bond at $839,000. A hearing on possible fines will be held in three weeks.

Beeler sold his Continental Mortgage operation in Iowa City in 1971. Three years later, the firm went into bankruptcy. About 1,100 investors, mostly from eastern Iowa, lost almost $6 million.

Board member files for re-election

Iowa City School Board member Orville Townsend filed for re-election to the Iowa City School Board on Monday, becoming the second incumbent member of the board to file for re-election.

Townsend, a supervisor of a local vocational rehabilitation office, was first elected to the board in 1986. He joins board member Ellen Widiss in running in the September school board election.

Author to read from his works

P. H. Liotta, author of "Learning to Fly, a Season with the Peregrine Falcon," will read from his recently published work Saturday, July 22, at 7:30 p.m. at Prairie Lights Bookstore, 15 South Dubuque St.

The author, a major in the Air Force who teaches creative writing at the Air Force Academy, has worked with falcons for more than 12 years and is an acknowledged expert in their breeding, care and training.

The reading by Liotta is free and open to the public. A discussion and book-signing will follow the reading.

Organizations in need of volunteers

The United Way of Johnson County reports that the following organizations need volunteers:

The Willowcreek Neighborhood Center, 2530 Bartelt Road, needs volunteers to provide ongoing clerical services and to assist with the center's after-school recreational programs. Hours are flexible between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays. For more information, call Joan or Michelle at 354-2886.

The Johnson County 4-H Society needs volunteers to work with youths ages 9 to 19 in Johnson County 4-H clubs. Leaders share hobbies or skills with youths in group settings. Training in youth development and teaching methods is provided. Contact Janet Martin at 337-2145.

The Cedowa Convention Club of the Deaf and the Iowa Association of the Deaf need volunteers to assist with their 43rd Biennial Convention being held in Iowa City Aug. 10-13 at the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St.

Volunteers are needed to contact area businesses to seek support for the event.

Board of Supervisors follows DOT advice: Close 5 bridges

3-ton capacity necessary; 2 bridges were deemed repairable

Kathryn Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Unsafe bridges and new regulations by the Iowa Department of Transportation will force the Johnson County Board of Supervisors to close five Johnson County bridges, the supervisors said Tuesday.

"Any bridge under three tons, according to the Department of Transportation, should be closed," Supervisor Patricia Meade said.

That DOT regulation and a report by consulting engineer Noel Willis and county engineer Glen Meisner declared the five bridges unsafe and recommended they be closed.

"I tell you I'm not for voting to leave any bridges open that the experts told us to close," Supervisor Chairman Robert Burns said.

Board members said possible liability suits could be a problem if the bridges were not closed.

Of the five bridges declared unsafe, two will be repaired and one permanently closed. The fate of the two other bridges is yet to be determined, Meade said.

The five which are to be closed:

- A bridge which crosses over Deer Creek in Washington Township, scheduled to be repaired by county workers this fall. The repairs will cost approximately $15,000, county engineer Glen Meisner said.

- The Pete Walters Bridge in Union Township, immediately south of Windham. The bridge may or may not be repaired, depending upon the amount of use and cost of repairs, Meade said.

- A bridge in Byerton, located on an unused dirt road. The bridge will probably be abandoned, Meade said.

- A bridge running over Otter Creek in Pleasant Valley Township. It is scheduled to be repaired this fall with a boxed culvert. Later, bids will be taken to repair this bridge.

- Crooked Bridge in Lincoln Township, north of Lone Tree and off of County Road X-14. The bridge may or may not be abandoned.

Board members will have to find out more about this bridge before determining its fate, Meade said.

The Crooked Bridge, originally designed to hold four tons, could now safely hold only 600 pounds, according to the engineers' report submitted to the board. Supervisor Dick Myers said the bridge would probably be closed.

The Washington Township bridge will be made more narrow and be allowed one lane of traffic after the $15,000 in repairs are completed, Meisner said.

Supervisors did not consider spending the $150,000 Meisner said it would cost to rebuild the bridge.

"My choice is the $15,000, because it would repair it for a period of time," Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said. "Then we can go fix some other bridges and then go back."

Meisner suggested abandoning the bridge in Byerton because it is seldom used.

"Because that's a dirt road, I don't think we can justify rebuilding that bridge, and out-of-distance travel is not so bad if people have to go around it," he said.

In other business, Mary Martinez of the Iowa City Crisis Center, 321 E. First Street, requested that the Johnson County Board of Supervisors write a letter of support for a Gannett grant.

The grant would allow Martinez to hire one full-time person and one quarter-time person who would develop full services in the prevention, intervention and post-vention of suicide.

The supervisors will approve or deny the request at their Thursday meeting.

'Water watch' asks I.C. to conserve city water

James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

While this year's drought hasn't caused as many problems locally as last year's, officials of both Iowa City and Coralville are urging residents to conserve water as much as possible.

Coralville residents have been asked to take specific steps to conserve water, particularly during the next couple of months.

"Basically, we're just asking for voluntary contributions," Coralville City Manager Kelly Hayworth said. "We're not at a severe state yet in terms of our water supply, but we are running at about 85-percent capacity. Until we get a significant amount of rainfall, we are asking residents to make a special effort to conserve."

Coralville's pumping capacity is about 2.1 million gallons per day. Among the actions Coralville residents are being asked to take to conserve water:

- Avoid watering lawns between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., when the water used will evaporate more easily.
- Wash cars at commercial car washes instead of washing cars at home.
- Avoid using water to wash down sidewalks, parking lots, and driveways.

Hayworth said he expected the need to conserve water could last into the fall, but would probably end some time before winter begins.

"The summer generally raises water usage because of watering lawns and things of that nature," Hayworth said. "As the weather gets cooler, people need to use less water for those purposes."

The city of Coralville is also taking steps to cut its own use of water. Workers at Coralville parks will cut back on the amount of watering and will not water the parks between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., and the city's police officers are taking police cars to commercial car washes.

Iowa City, while not asking residents to take any specific measures to cut back their use of water, is engaged in a "water watch," according to Ed Moreno, Iowa City assistant water superintendent.

"We have developed an Iowa City drought plan which has three phases, and right now we are in the water watch phase," Moreno said. "As part of the watch we are monitoring water levels at the plant, optimizing usage of water, and educating citizens about conserving water."

"What we are requesting is that citizens be aware of their water usage and engage in conservation whenever possible," Moreno said.

Task force seeks federal farm aid to offset drought

DES MOINES (AP) — A special task force Tuesday unanimously voted to pressure the federal government for more aid for Iowa farmers hit by drought, declaring portions of the state's crops "beyond hope" despite rain which has drenched many fields.

Proposals for aid range from direct payments to farmers to expanded crop insurance to low-interest loans to build water systems.

The proposed aid goes beyond last year's drought relief that funneled $312 million to Iowa farmers.

"It's there as a safety net," said Agriculture Secretary Dale Cochran, who heads the task force.

Cochran said members of the task force will press their view on U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Youtter when Youtter visits Des Moines on Monday to speak to a soybean group.

"I can see change coming, attitudes changing," said Cochran. "I would predict that when Congress recesses in early August, they will have a fairly good bill that will be beneficial to Iowa on the president's desk."

An Iowa City man lost a black leather wallet containing an identification card and around $900 in cash Tuesday morning, according to Iowa City police reports.

William McTaggart reported that the wallet was missing from World of Bikes, 723 S. Gilbert St., according to the reports.

- An Iowa City woman reported an attempted burglary at her residence Tuesday around 11:30 a.m., according to police reports.

The woman stated she saw a white male, approximately 20 years old, with thin dark hair, wearing a white t-shirt and jeans prowling near her residence at 812 E. Davenport St., according to police reports.

The matter is currently under investigation, according to reports.

- An Iowa City resident was charged with trespassing Tuesday around 10:30 a.m. after entering a house at 221 N. Linn St. which was cordoned off due to fire, according to police reports.

The person was arrested at the scene, according to reports.

- An Iowa City woman reported her red Schwinn 10-speed bicycle was stolen Monday around 3:10 p.m., according to UI Campus Security reports.

The bicycle was taken from the Union. The matter is currently under investigation, according to reports.

- A 1980 blue Honda moped was reportedly stolen Tuesday around 2:27 a.m. from the UI Field House, according to UI Campus Security reports.

- Cash was reportedly stolen Tuesday around 3:50 p.m. from C123 Hillcrest residence hall, according to UI Campus Security reports.

Police have no suspects in the case, according to reports.

- A phone was reportedly stolen Monday around 8:40 a.m. from the UI Biology Building, according to UI Campus Security reports.

Estimated value of the phone is $65, according to reports.

Poland

would not run because he was linked more with martial law than with current democratic changes.

The Communist Party leadership asked Jaruzelski to reconsider and he said he was swayed by support from the two allied parties of the communist coalition and other groups.

An announcement by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa that he would cooperate with Jaruzelski as president, and words of praise from President George Bush during his visit last week also appear to have helped persuade him.

Jaruzelski said the decision was difficult, but many emphasized to him the need for continuity and stability in Poland's government and international position.

"It was commonly stressed that avoidance of responsibility in such a special moment would be in contradiction to the duties of a politician and a soldier, and to the logic of my public service in the recent years," Jaruzelski said.

The president will appoint the next government, which must deal with a disintegrating food market and a skyrocketing inflation that a new report shows is headed for an annual rate of 160 percent.

The Solidarity lawmakers said Jaruzelski did little to help his cause during a six-hour questioning Monday by their delegation, failing to repudiate the martial law that imprisoned some among them.

"I feel he is responsible for all of the mistakes. He is responsible, so I cannot support him," said Zofia Kuratowska, a deputy speaker of the Senate.

Jan Litynski, a deputy for Walbrzych, said the caucus was divided between those who simply wanted to block Jaruzelski from becoming president and those who see him as the lesser evil among other possible candidates.

Solidarity lawmakers could vote against Jaruzelski or vote to abstain. They could also simply not participate, which would help Jaruzelski by reducing the votes he needs to win.

Ten to 15 Solidarity lawmakers will take that option, Litynski predicted.

A simple majority of those present will elect the president, who can serve up to two six-year terms and control Poland's military and foreign relations.

Jaruzelski said opposition to him is "understandable, inseparably linked with openness and democratization of political life," and acknowledged he could lose the vote.

Jaruzelski's success appeared to depend on how well the communist coalition could maintain internal discipline.

Wednesday's vote was to be an open roll call, which should make it easier for the communists and allied Peasant and Democratic parties to insist that each lawmaker vote for Jaruzelski.

Some members of the Communist and Peasant parties were elected with Solidarity support, and it was not clear if they could support a Jaruzelski candidacy.

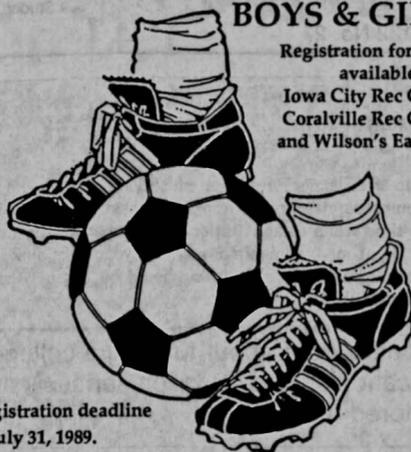

Jaruzelski moved to restore Solidarity's legal status this year after a seven-year ban. He argued that dialogue must be carried on with all social forces in order to help Poland out of its economic crisis.

Those guidelines include:

- Volunteer efforts to obtain educational supplies necessary for basic instruction — such as textbooks and workbooks — cannot be approved by the committee.

- Volunteer labor and donated materials must be included in the estimated dollar value of the contribution.

- All money necessary to complete a project must be acquired before construction begins.

- All projects must meet district construction standards and conform to projected as well as present site uses.

These guidelines do not involve any major changes in current contribution monitoring, but they constitute the board's first attempt at putting the procedures in writing, according to interim superintendent Al Azinger.

Champion said monitoring volunteer contributions is an important but controversial issue.

"We're limiting what people are allowed to do, and that always irritates people," said Champion. "But we're not going to let parents buy computers for the kids in their neighborhood and leave other neighborhoods without computers."

Budget

congressional and many outside economists.

Darman told the budget committee that the new projections were "still a little on the optimistic side but achievable."

A slowing economy generally boosts the federal deficit because government revenues drop, and its expenses increase from higher interest payments and benefits paid to unemployed and poor people.

But the administration forecast that if Congress enacts all the savings included in the budget lawmakers passed in May, the deficit would be $99.2 billion. That's even lower than the $99.4 billion deficit forecast earlier this year.

The gloomier economic assumptions were more than compensated for by a $15 billion increase in 1990 tax collections over what was expected in February, and $4.3 billion less in defense spending than February's estimate, largely due to the payday shift.

But the administration officials warned that Congress had little room to avoid surpassing the $110 billion shortfall ceiling. If the target is breached, the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law would trigger spending slashes in domestic and defense programs.

"There is very little room for slippage," Darman said.

Congressional committees are still working on the spending, tax and savings bills needed to actually implement the $1.17 trillion budget for 1990.

The administration also revised downward its projection for the 1989 deficit to $148.3 billion from $164.1 billion predicted in February, mainly due to revenues running $13.2 billion higher than anticipated.

And the officials said that enactment of the savings in the 1990 budget would leave lawmakers facing an $88 billion deficit for fiscal 1991 — within $24 billion of the $64 billion Gramm-Rudman target for that year.

A storm brewed, however, over the Pentagon's pay-date shift.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney ordered the pay shift in May, arguing that Oct. 1 will fall on a Sunday. He said moving the payday for the monthly checks to the previous Friday would avoid inconveniencing troops.

Under a 1965 law that Darman said has been invoked seven times, the defense secretary has the authority to move the payday.

But lawmakers grumbled that the payday shift enabled Cheney to claim a solution to a dispute between the administration and Congress over the Pentagon's budget, in which congressional budget officials were claiming that the military would spend too much money next year.

James Sasser, D-Tenn, senate budget committee chairman, told reporters that the administration "can't foster the use of gimmicks on the Department of Defense side of the ledger and not expect similar treatment from Congress on the domestic side of the ledger."

The House Appropriations Committee on Monday approved a spending bill in which $316 million in 1990 savings were claimed by shifting a payday for NASA, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Veterans Affairs from October to September.

Congressional budget officials estimate that if lawmakers would shift the paydays for all agencies, $5.5 billion would be claimed in savings. Another $4.8 billion would be claimed as savings if federal pension payments were bumped into September.

Congressional leaders worked Monday and Tuesday to try to stem the tide of committees shifting the paydays.

At the budget panel hearing, Darman would not back down from the Pentagon shift, but promised to oppose payday slippages by other agencies.

Quayle

Bush cited the vice president's two diplomatic trips to Latin America for the new administration as examples of his merit, along with his chairmanship of the national Space Council and his contributions to Bush's morning briefings.

"He's a good man, and he deserves something better than a post-mortem kick in the... ankles," the president said.

"My judgment has been vindicated. He is serious. He is doing a first-class job," Bush said.

The Germond-Witcover book, which concerns the entire presidential campaign, not just Quay-le's part, deals with Quayle as a candidate rather than as vice president.

Political pros quoted as belittling his abilities included Stuart Spencer, former adviser to Republican presidential candidates and a California-based political consultant.

Canzeri asked Spencer why he let a rebellious Quayle scrap his text and deliver his own rambling speech on defense at one Chicago appearance.

Spencer used an obscene metaphor to state that he wanted Quayle to foul up in public, and "then we'll own him again." After his debate with Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, Quayle was widely criticized for comparing himself to the late President Kennedy as a young man who won national office.

Canzeri quoted Quayle adviser Mitch Daniels, a former White House political director, as moaning, "We told him not to get into that."

Daniels, in a telephone interview Tuesday, acknowledged campaign advisers had agreed it would be inadvisable to bring up such a comparison.

Pay now, learn later

A group of 18 leaders in higher education has backed a plan for tuition prepayment on a nationwide basis. It's a risky idea, but at a time when college tuitions are outpacing the rate of inflation by about 2 percentage points a year, any new ideas about funding a college education should be taken seriously and explored fully.

Any new ideas about funding a college education should be taken seriously and explored fully.

The proposed plan would require cash payments based on current tuition and the number of years until the child would attend the college. The college, or its trust, would invest the money, and by the time the child attends, full tuition coverage is guaranteed. Currently, prepaid tuition plans are offered statewide in Michigan and Florida and at various single institutions elsewhere.

Critics of the plan say that it isn't financially feasible, that colleges will lose money because of poor investments. Duquesne University, in Pittsburgh, already has abandoned its tuition plan for just that reason. But colleges are already losing money and stand to lose much more if prospective students cannot afford to attend.

Another roadblock is the IRS, which in the case of Michigan has ruled that the trust handling the funds can be taxed on the earnings and that the students (or their parents) can be taxed on the difference between the original payment and the tuition at the time they attend school.

Yet these are not permanent barriers to easing the financial load of a higher education. How about a committee in the U.S. Department of Education to address the tuition-increase dilemma?

Family redefined

Should a gay couple be granted legal rights as a family? The New York State Court of Appeals found last week that a gay couple who had lived together for ten years could be considered a family under city rent-control regulations. The court was the first of a state's highest court to rule for the inclusive definition.

Socially, the court has shown its awareness of the New York environment. The legal concept of family must adapt to the reality that a growing number of homosexuals are cohabitating as families. The law must show its flexibility and adjust archaic definitions used to restrict gays' access to fundamental rights such as housing.

Linguistically, the court is also correct. It is not necessary for a family to include individuals who are married, can have children, or are different sexes. The important criteria determining a family is a long-term emotional and financial commitment, characterized by interdependence. Any couple with a ten-year relationship behind them certainly possesses the stability to constitute a family.

Although sharply restricted to New York's rent control act, the ruling represents a step toward legal recognition of homosexual relationships. Protection from unwarranted eviction is a right which should not be denied to couples merely because of their sexual preferences.

Summit soft spot

Sure, there's a drought out there, but take heart. Iowa is not the only place in the world experiencing erratic weather patterns. Both Moscow and Stockholm had unusually warm winters. Monsoons reached down to Australia last spring, and 1988 was the warmest year in central England since 1669.

These weather extremes are "not inconsistent with greenhouse ideas," according to Philip Jones, a researcher at the Climate Research Unit in Norwich, England.

Not inconsistent? The weather changes here exactly mirror those predicted to happen due to global pollution. Coincidence, maybe, but probably not. The situation bears looking into.

On the face of it, the situation is being looked into. This week's Paris summit ended with the bigwigs calling for focused attention on increased world pollution and global warming. Summit leaders said a set of guidelines to address the problem is urgently needed, but they chose not to call for specifics.

The greenhouse effect is a reality, but world leaders only give lip service to the issue by continually vowing to work for environmental change. They allow scientist after mealy-mouthed scientist to utter phrases like "not-inconsistent."

The problem has been publicly acknowledged internationally; now it's time for some definitive research on the causes and effects of global warming. It's time for world leaders to agree to reduce harmful emissions of carbon dioxide by specific amounts.

What we need is an art czar

Guest Opinion

Marlena Corcoran

"There's no disputing taste."

Is a crucifix in a jar of urine art? How about homoerotic photographs of men in leather and chains? Suppose a prestigious museum mounts an exhibition that spreads the national flag on the floor, inviting visitors to step on it. Should taxpayers pay the bill?

The separation of art and state has been a hot topic in Washington these days. "We have in the Constitution a direct prohibition of established religion," asserted Senator Slade Gordon (R-WA), who found the crucifix photo anti-Christian. "By immediate inference this means that we cannot diminish one religion lest another, the one unburdened, rise out of proportion."

Immediacy and clarity are the hallmarks of judgments made by the vanguard of congressional art critics, such as Representative Dick Army (R-TX): "I clearly know offensive art when I see it. And there ought to be a way for the [National Endowment for the Arts] to establish procedures where they can clearly deny funding for art like that."

Representative Army was thinking of the Robert Mapplethorpe retrospective, scheduled to open July 1 at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington D.C. Mapplethorpe's early work includes documentary portraits of male homosexuals from the bike-and-leather scene of the early '70s. A disconcerting serenity pervades the portraits: It is the exquisitely superficial, high-gloss vacuity of fashion photography. A similar self-composure marks the display of male genitals in other photographs that also ask to be read as "portraits."

Conspicuously absent is the one erotic exercise to which most viewers have long been inured: the loving depiction of the headless female torso. I can see why certain congressmen were disappointed.

Not to worry: the Corcoran cancelled the show.

Self-censorship is the last step of a certain recent tendency in the United States in which government institutions refer political problems to smaller and smaller units of government for their resolution. Local definitions of offensiveness have increased vastly in importance after recent Supreme Court decisions which ruled on other distasteful activities related to the art exhibitions in question. The Supreme Court ruled on the use of religious symbols in holiday displays, and on permissible uses of the flag. Congress' line of reasoning on the art controversy resembles the one employed last month by the Supreme Court in adjudicating a case of alleged pornography, involving sexually explicit phone-call services. The court called for a distinction to be drawn between simple indecency and criminal obscenity. But by deferring to community-defined standards of decency, the Supreme Court avoided setting uniform federal standards, and referred the matter to the judgment of individual local communities.

For the bottom line in community standards, I spoke with a former president of the government-supported State Arts Council of a certain state in the geographical and spiritual heartland of America. How did he think the recent furor might effect decisions made by the State Arts Council, in allocating funds from the National Endowment for the Arts to art projects in local midwestern communities?

He explained that community standards have always, to some extent, governed local projects: "Let's face it: You're not going to show a nude at the Iowa State Fair."

Another story makes the point that, as the Roman poet Horace wrote, "There's no disputing taste." Currently hanging in the home of the devoted servant of the arts I spoke with is a painting he bought and took home from the local Recreation Center. He got tired of hanging it back up every time the meeting room had been used by a committee of local ladies who would take it down and turn it to the wall.

What was on the canvas? "It's called 'The Trojan Cow,'" he explained. "It's a bisected view of a cow; inside, there's a baby wearing a Trojan war helmet." What did the ladies find objectionable about the painting? Hard to say. It had something to do with the baby being inside the cow.

Who is going to adjudicate cases involving such delicate aesthetic sensibilities? With all due respect to President Bush and his proposal to criminalize flag-burning by altering the constitution, one cannot have a constitutional amendment to cover every sacred cow. The Supreme Court has referred such matters back for local and legislative solutions. The legislature, in its first vote on art, huffed and puffed and strutted its stuff, but in the end settled for an ominous slap on the wrist amounting to a call for self-censorship.

The United States has now shifted the ground rules for art appreciation in a remarkably democratic way. No longer does one need special training to judge art; everyone, after all, has the capacity to be offended. But the American way may be too democratic here.

Perhaps what the United States needs in this situation is an Art Czar. Like the Drug Czar, the new overlord would coordinate the activities of different branches of the U.S. government, each of which has uttered its share of pious platitudes on symbolic activities lately. What with the Supreme Court counting reindeer in Christmas displays, the president yammering for a constitutional amendment against flag-burning, and Congress hotly debating art exhibitions, government service right now requires advanced training in both art and morality. If we had an Art Czar, his taste and character would have to be impeccable, and his word the last resort.

Only one question would remain: On the day that the Art Czar is offended, can he, like certain Middle Eastern leaders, call for the death penalty?

Health decoys lure sloths vitalize nation

The Centers for Disease Control has done it again. They've set fitness goals for our nation that we as individuals just can't seem to meet. If hiking the hill on Washington Street leaves you a little short of breath, cheer up. You're not alone. The 1990 fitness goals set for our country a decade ago are still as far from our collective grasp as life on Neptune.

The CDC released a new batch of figures just last week, and the big news is this: Only 8 percent of adults exercise a dedicated 20 minutes three times a week. You may be scratching your head saying, "Only 8 percent? Gee, my stock in Adidas and workout suits has tripled. What's happening?"

If you're suspicious, you have reason to be. The aforementioned statistic lays bare what most of us have already secretly suspected for a long time: those joggers, bikers, and health spa regulars are part of a secret governmental decoy system designed to entice the sluggish onto the streets.

Guest Opinion

Barbara Olson

What has happened is that the CDC has been watching a hustling America slowly give way to Beenee Weenees and MTV. They've been shocked at how many boot-camp recruits cave in and beg for a Pudding Pop. So the CDC got to thinking and has designed a plan to invigorate our nation by inspiring the lazy, which is, as we now know, just about everyone.

Here's the scheme. Scantly clad joggers have been planted in every city on all the major thoroughfares to sweat and pant their way up and down the sidewalks. You've probably been suspicious about those joggers anyway. Ever notice that it's the same person every day? Who'd freeze in the winter and sweat in the summer so consistently unless they were getting paid for it? And just who do you think is paying them? That's right, the CDC.

They've hired bikers, too, and sent them out peddling right about the time everybody gets off work. Dodging bicyclists, hot and tired motorists can have one more opportunity to raise their blood pressures before getting home to their La-Z-Boys.

And what about those health spas? You see people going in. Did you ever see anybody come out? Sure, on occasion you'll see someone wrapped in muscle striding through the parking lot. He's just another decoy. You're supposed to think maybe with a little exercise, even you could be a toned-up version of Jabba the Hut.

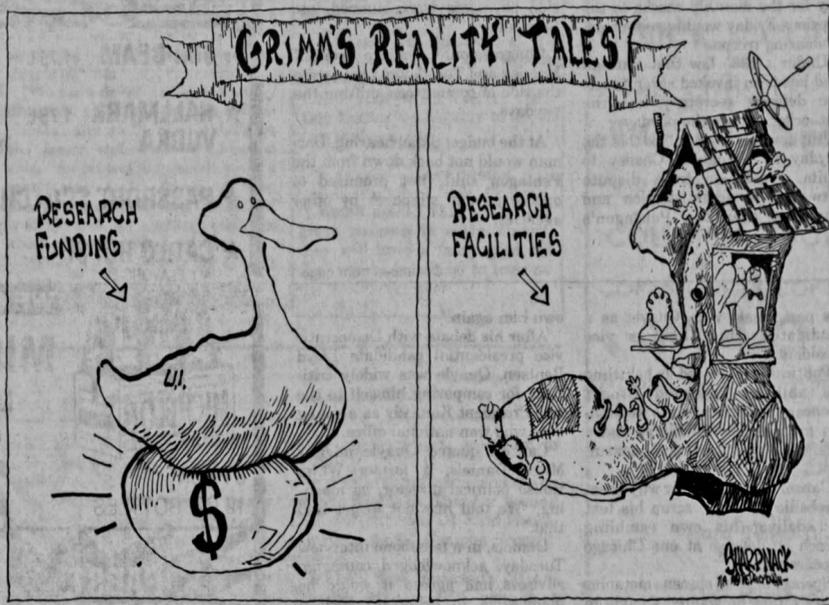

And what about this statistic: Only 36 percent of kids ages 10-17 actually participate in gym class. So where are the other 64 percent? Doesn't somebody miss them? Two-thirds of the class is gone every day. If 64 percent of the kids in gym class are regularly missing in action, where do they all go? Secret youth meetings planning insurrection? To the movies? Maybe they're the ones out jogging and biking and raking in paychecks from the CDC. Beats standing in a sweaty gym waiting for your turn to bat in whiffle ball.

What the CDC needs to do is plant as decoys some of the less ambitious 92 percent of the folks who get in the car to drive anywhere further than their own mailbox. The CDC could pass out free Nikes or something.

Instead of all these people who look great in shorts and sweatbands we could see some out-of-shapers panting up and down a few city blocks. Sure, there'll be comments: "Get a load of those thighs," and "Ever seen a man move so slowly?"

But, sweating and wheezing, they'll be our inspirations. Maybe more people will come out of the closet and give exercise a try. And if enough people get out there and mingle with the decoys, perhaps the CDC will get confused and start handing out the paychecks to everyone.

Barbara Olson is an Iowa City resident.

Letters

No in-betweens

To the Editor:

An open letter to President Bush: I am compelled to write as a concerned citizen regarding the recent Supreme Court decision affecting Roe v. Wade.

At the heart of the abortion issue is a woman's right to privacy, a woman's right to decide what to do with her own body. It appears that you feel a fertilized ovum deserves more protection and more rights than a living, breathing human being; a woman. In light of your stand on Roe v. Wade, it is little wonder you would uphold a patriarchal mentality that denies women equal protection under the Constitution.

How sadly ironic it is that you, as president, can support a constitutional amendment to protect the "rights" of a fetus and a constitutional amendment to protect the American flag, but you will not support a constitutional amendment to protect the rights of 51 percent of this nation's population — I am, of course, speaking of the Equal Rights Amendment. Did you know that one of the first acts of Hitler in Nazi Germany was to ban abortion, that the same happened under Stalin's Soviet regime? The act of limiting women's reproductive rights is consistently linked with fascist governments, and is that much more repugnant when it occurs under a democratic form of government. When you won the election, I was hopeful that a Bush administration would undo some of the injustices of the Reagan years, that you would be willing to abandon his policies of indifference toward the American worker, his lack of compassion for the poor, and specifically his lack of respect for the rights of the women in this society. The issue of abortion is a human-rights issue, and the question, which is as pertinent today as when it was raised by Susan B. Anthony nearly 100 years ago, is: "Are women persons?" And being such, why do you not merit the protection of the law and the rights of men?

I appeal to your conscience. At one time you were in favor of the ERA and a woman's right to privacy — think back to those days, and rethink your wish for a "kinder, gentler nation." Were you sincere, or was that sentiment simply a hollow political slogan? There is no shade of gray here — either you are for women's rights as citizens or you are against them. There is no in-between.

Soviet Georgia troubled with battles

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of armed men roamed an ethnically troubled Black Sea region Tuesday where at least 16 people have been killed and 239 injured in three days of gunfights, kidnappings and beatings, officials reported.

A national Interior Ministry official said some of the 3,000 ministry soldiers patrolling the Abkhazia region in Soviet Georgia formed a human barrier between Georgians and Abkhazians who earlier fought two battles along the Galidze River.

"The situation is very serious because so many people have guns," said Vladislav Ardzinba, a national legislator from Sukhumi, capital of Abkhazia, where both Georgians and Abkhazians claim discrimination by the other.

Many people in the region have shotguns or hunting rifles, and several reports said mobs looted firearms, including automatic weapons, from police stations and jails.

A high official in Sukhumi said snipers fired at the local Communist Party and Interior Ministry buildings, and other armed men cut road and rail transport and some communications with the area 870 miles south of Moscow.

"In effect, they are spreading terror," he said by telephone.

Deputy Interior Minister Ivan Shilov said on the national television news show Vremya that 16 people had been killed and 239 injured, 188 of whom were hospitalized.

He said the most volatile situation Tuesday was near Ochamchira, on the coast south of Sukhumi, where the soldiers were acting as a barrier between Georgians and Abkhazians.

Zarya Vostoka, a Georgian newspaper, said 5,000 people were armed in the Sukhumi area on Sunday night, and there were exchanges of gunfire.

Violence was reported in Tkvarcheli, Gulripsh, Gali, and Gudauta in Abkhazia, and in Zugdide in western Georgia. The official news agency Tass said authorities had confiscated more than 300 weapons.

Prisoners freed by a mob from a jail in Zugdide may be among the armed marauders. Tass said only 14 of the 180 prisoners had been recaptured.

Ardzinba, the national legislator from Sukhumi, said the riots started Saturday with the beating of an Abkhazian. The Georgian Foreign Ministry said earlier the violence began when Abkhazians attacked Georgians.

The legislator said many Abkhazians want the 3,320-square-mile region, where Georgians outnumber them 240,000 to 94,000, to become a 16th Soviet republic.

Tass said there were no riots Monday, but the official in Sukhumi gave a different picture.

On the border with western Georgia, "masses of people are moving against the Interior Ministry troops," said the official, who refused to give his name for fear of attack. "They are armed, with shotguns and automatic weapons."

V. Arseniev, a correspondent for the government daily Izvestia, reported seeing "agitated young people with hunting rifles and sawed-off shotguns" Monday night as he drove into Abkhazia from Tbilisi, capital of Georgia.

"In the Gali region, pickets shot at a car which seemed suspicious to them right before our eyes," he wrote.

At least 400 Abkhazians and Georgians shot at each other along the Gumista River near Sukhumi, said Gizo Grzeledze of the Georgian Foreign Ministry, reading from Tuesday's Zarya Vostoka over the telephone.

"Large groups of armed people moved in the direction of Ochamchira" but were stopped by soldiers at the Galidze River, the newspaper said, without giving the date of the incident.

The official in Sukhumi said, "Abkhazians stood alone on the river for 10 hours, defending the border against Georgians, until the arrival of Interior Ministry troops."

On Monday night, "a group of 300 to 500 Georgians crossed the river and attacked the village of Merkula," he said. Two people were wounded, one critically, he said.

Rioters ripped up railroad tracks and halted road and rail traffic into the area, Zarya Vostoka reported. The Sukhumi official said boats took women and children out of the city.

Soviet coal miners continue a hampering 8-day-old strike

MOSCOW (AP) — Coal miners feel the government is making empty promises and will continue an 8-day-old strike that has hampered operations at scores of Soviet factories, a spokesman for Siberian miners said Tuesday.

The Soviet Union's worst labor trouble since the turmoil of the '20s spread "like a chain reaction" to two more mines in the Donetsk Coal Basin in the Ukraine, a strike leader said. The official news agency Tass said 39 mines in region were closed.

No new figures were available on the total number of strikers in Donetsk and western Siberia's Kuznetsk Basin, the nation's main coal-producing regions, but earlier reports put the figure at more than 112,000.

Tass said the strike had affected more than 160 coal, machinery, electronics and light industrial businesses in western Siberia alone, and that lack of coal could cause "a catastrophe" at steel and power plants.

Government officials appealed on radio for Kuznetsk miners to return to their jobs, but Tass acknowledged the effort might be futile.

Bush returns from 10-day Europe trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush, home after a 10-day trip to Europe, said Tuesday he sensed the dawning of an age behind the Iron Curtain in which freedom and democracy will flourish.

Returning to the White House, the president was cheered by thousands, including members of his Cabinet and tourists pulled from lines waiting to see the Executive Mansion.

Visibly tired by his whirlwind trip — four countries in 10 days — Bush said he had found "an enormous amount of excitement" in Poland and Hungary.

He recounted some of the memories he will take from the trip:

"The open arms of the people of Poland. American flags waving in the square at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk. The faces of the people who lined the streets greeting us with such joy. The thousands who endured a driving downpour in Budapest to welcome us to Hungary. . . ."

"The warmth that Barbara and I felt as a reflection of the warmth the people of Poland and Hungary feel for America and for our ideals."

Gingrich seeks legal defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich is seeking help from a former House colleague in mounting a legal defense to the expected ethics committee investigation of his conduct, GOP sources said Tuesday.

The Georgia congressman has approached former Rep. Ed Bethune, an Arkansas Republican with a law practice in Washington, the sources said, speaking only on condition of anonymity. Bethune would not say whether or not he had spoken with Gingrich.

Gingrich, the second-ranking House Republican, answered "yes" when asked if he expected an investigation to cost him a lot of money. But he declined further comment until the ethics committee meets Thursday to decide whether to begin a preliminary investigation.

Gingrich, whose complaint helped lead to the committee investigation that drove former Speaker Jim Wright from the House, was himself accused last April of possibly violating House rules on gifts and outside income as well as campaign-finance laws.

The complaint, by Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., focused on an investment partnership formed by Gingrich and run by his wife to promote a book they wrote along with a third writer.

House Republican leader Bob Michel, of Illinois, said when asked about Gingrich's plans on Tuesday, "I heard he's thinking of contacting

The complaint . . . focused on an investment partnership formed by Gingrich and run by his wife to promote a book they wrote along with a third writer.

former members. It gets to be a pretty expensive thing."

If the ethics panel, officially the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, begins a probe, it could hire an outside counsel as it did in the case of Wright, who resigned as speaker and as a member last June after the panel charged him with 69 rules violations.

The Chicago lawyer who conducted the Wright investigation didn't dispute that he has discussed with the panel playing a similar role in the Gingrich probe.

"I hear those rumors," Richard Phelan said. "I wouldn't deny the rumors."

He added, "There's been a lot of discussion in Congress about whether I would do it or not. We will have to leave that up to the chairman (Julian Dixon, D-Calif.) or ranking member (John Myers, R-Ind.)."

Ethics committee member Vic Fazio, D-Calif., when asked about the hiring of an outside counsel, said, "There's obviously a lot of inclination to go that route. There are people who think any time you are dealing with a leadership position, outside counsel is appropriate. On a personal level, I think an outside counsel is appropriate, if it's determined there's a reason to investigate."

Rep. Alexander's complaint said Gingrich may have violated House rules when 21 investors contributed $5,000 each to the "COS Limited Partnership," which was formed by Gingrich in 1984 to promote his book, "Window of Opportunity."

The complaint contends: • The investors' money could be construed as income to Gingrich, in violation of limitations on House members' outside earnings.

• The $105,000 raised could constitute a gift to Gingrich from those with a direct interest in legislation. House rules prohibit members from keeping gifts of more than $100 from anyone with such an interest.

• The money could be considered campaign contributions, subject to reporting obligations and restrictions under campaign financing laws. If so, Alexander said, the investment money may have exceeded contribution limits and may not have been properly reported.

Celebrate the 10th Anniversary of the Nicaraguan Revolution

On July 19, 1979, the Nicaraguan people won their independence by overthrowing the Somoza dynasty, a brutal regime which had ruled for 45 years with United States support. Despite eight years of Contra war, trade embargoes, and natural disasters, the revolution continues and Nicaragua's people are celebrating ten years of democracy and self-determination.

Vote forbids presidential fund solicitation.

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled Senate, reflecting lingering political fallout from the Iran-Contra affair, voted Tuesday to forbid a president from soliciting foreign or private funds to carry out foreign policy activities prohibited by Congress.

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., passed 57 to 42. Moynihan said the aim was to bar government officials from bending to pressure from superiors to conduct activities outlawed by Congress.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., voting on the losing side, protested that the amendment "is a clear, bald effort to usurp the foreign policy prerogatives of the president of the United States in a manner not allowed by the Constitution." He predicted that President George Bush will veto it.

The provision, attached to pending legislation authorizing $4.6 billion in spending for the State Department and allied agencies, would make violators subject to fines and jail terms of up to five years.

Group threatens Japanese "collaborators"

BEIJING — A group calling itself the "Blood-Bright Dare to Die Squad" says it will kill two Japanese each month because their nation collaborates with China's government, the Japanese Embassy said Tuesday.

A letter in Chinese mailed to the Japan Airlines office in Beijing also said citizens of other countries would be killed if they collaborated with the regime.

Police continued rounding up participants in pro-democracy protests that ended with the army crackdown June 3-4. Reports Tuesday said journalist Dai Qing, along with Yang Wei, a recently freed dissident linked to a Chinese group in New York, was arrested.

Dai, a reporter for the Guangming Daily, was a leader in a democracy movement among intellectuals last fall. After students took to the streets in April demanding reforms, she signed several petitions to the government.

Her husband, reached by telephone, said plainclothes police arrived at their home during dinner Thursday and led her away. He said he had not heard from her since.

Hurricane forecast to pass close to Hawaii

HONOLULU — Hawaii Island beach parks were closed Tuesday in anticipation of heavy surf from Hurricane Dalilia, and residents were urged to stock up on emergency supplies.

At 2 a.m. HST Tuesday, the hurricane was 500 miles southeast of Hilo, on Hawaii Island, moving west at 14 mph, the National Weather Service said. Its maximum sustained wind speed was 75 mph; a storm is classified a hurricane when that speed reaches 74 mph. Wind gusts up to 90 mph.

The storm's westward movement had slowed from 20 mph over a 24-hour period, and Dalilia's course changed slightly away from Hawaii to a track that would take it 200 miles south of Hawaii Island early Wednesday, said Clarence Lee, director of the Central Pacific Hurricane Center here.

A tropical-storm watch remained in effect for Hawaii Island, meaning wind up to 73 mph and heavy rain were possible if Dalilia moved farther north than expected.

Hawaii Island residents were urged to stock up on batteries, canned goods and other emergency supplies in case the storm veered northward.

Warner confiscates Batman rip-offs

NEW YORK — Warner Bros. has confiscated more than 40,000 bogus Batman items in nationwide legal actions against people taking advantage of its movie "Batman," Warner said Tuesday.

"We don't license schlock," said J. Joseph Bainton, counsel for Warner Communication companies. "My mother raised me to believe that stealing's wrong."

U.S. marshals helped seize T-shirts, hats, shorts, medallions and other rip-offs under a series of nationwide federal lawsuits since the first week in June, before the movie's June 23 opening.

Senators, scholars debate flag-burning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators and legal scholars argued Tuesday over whether a constitutional amendment was political "patronizing" or the best American way to overcome a U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing flag-burning.

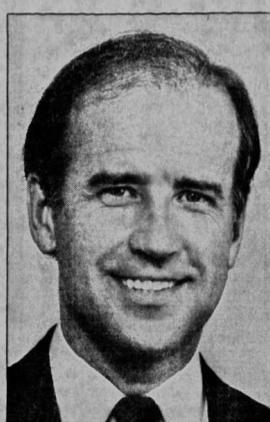

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., introduced the constitutional amendment supported by President George Bush, and belittled an idea, championed by Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., that the way to overcome the decision was a simple statute satisfying the court's concerns about free-speech rights.

"There is no guarantee that the Biden bill will 'constitutionalize' the federal flag desecration statute. . . . We will have to wait perhaps three to five years for the courts to put their stamp of approval or rejection on the statute. That's simply too long for the American people to wait," Dole said.

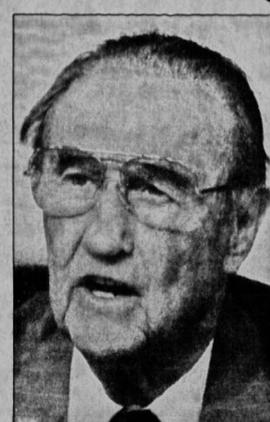

Sen. Strom Thurmond, S.C., ranking Republican on the Judiciary committee, said he thought a constitutional amendment was "the only sound and safe way" to protect the flag.

But Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., a Vietnam veteran and Medal of Honor winner, said lawmakers were jumping too quickly to push flag-protection legislation in order to gain political capital.

Kerrey said that while he was

Joseph Biden

Strom Thurmond

"outraged by the decision," he has come to believe there was no necessity to pass new legislation. Reading the decision, "I was surprised to discover . . . (it was) reasonable, understandable and consistent with those values which I believe have made America so wonderful."

And the dissenting opinion of Chief Justice William Rehnquist, he said, might impose a "functional litmus test of loyalty before expression is permitted."

"Today, I declare that I don't support any of the constitutional amendments which are being offered by my colleagues," he said, adding that even passage of new anti-flag-burning statutes might be "more patronizing than necessary."

Kerrey said the constitutional amendments "create problems rather than solving them, and Harvard University law professor Laurence Tribe delivered a similar message to the House subcommittee on constitutional law.

"There are many patriotic Americans who believe that the toughest but best way to show respect for the flag — to show why we are so different from those in Beijing who massacre protesters — is to protect even the freedom of those who would desecrate this symbol of our freedom," he said.

Tribe said that could be accomplished through a statute like Biden's, which would make it a federal crime, punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 and a year's imprisonment — or both — for someone to knowingly deface the flag.

The statute would remove all references in the existing federal flag-burning statute to "ideas communicated" in the process of flag desecration and would punish only the physical act itself.

The Supreme Court held in its 5-4 ruling in the Texas case that desecrating the flag was protected under the Constitution's First Amendment guarantee of free speech insofar as the act of destroying the flag amounted to communicating a political point of view.

Tribe urged the lawmakers to "count votes" on the Supreme Court like they do in Congress, assuring them that changing a properly drafted statute would win over a majority of the Court and as many as seven justices.

"I submit that's the response that best protects the flag," he said, without running the risk that an amendment could "rip the heart out of the First Amendment."

Probert pleads guilty

DETROIT (AP) — A dejected Bob Probert, who fought his way to prominence with the Detroit Red Wings despite alcohol and drugs problems, pleaded guilty Tuesday to importing cocaine.

"This is my bottom. It took a lot of pain and misery to get here. Sometimes that's what it takes, to face something like this. Hopefully, now I can get on with my life," Probert said at the U.S. District Court.

The conviction carries a maximum sentence of 20 years, but will likely be reduced under a plea agreement.

Federal prosecutors noted that the half-ounce of cocaine Probert brought into the United States from Canada was for his personal use, meaning he likely faces up to a year in prison at his Sept. 26 sentencing.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Duggan accepted the plea from Probert, arrested March 2 when U.S. Customs agents found the cocaine in his underwear during a search outside the tunnel that connects Detroit with Windsor, Ontario.

Customs agents said they searched Probert after spotting beer containers in his vehicle and discovering his driver's license was suspended.

The right wing, an intense competitor, was kicked off the team and out of the NHL days after his arrest.

Probert, who has long-standing problems with alcohol, has been in treatment programs at least five times. He has been receiving substance-abuse treatment at Holly Gardens in Holly since shortly after his arrest.

"He's making very good progress," Probert's attorney, Harold Fried, said last month.

Probert was the fourth NHL player to be expelled from the league and the first kicked out for drugs.

NFL commissioner search continues

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — The impasse over the election of a new NFL commissioner continued Tuesday with few signs that the man to replace the retiring Pete Rozelle will be selected soon.

In fact, if anything, the picture became more muddled as a meeting was called off between members of the dissident owners group that two weeks ago blocked the election of New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks and three members of the screening committee that chose him.

Instead, five dissident owners — Jerry Jones of Dallas, Ken Behring of Seattle, Patrick Bowlen of Denver, Hugh Culverhouse Jr. of Tampa Bay and Victor Kiam of New England — met with Rozelle while one of their leaders, Edward DeBartolo Jr. of San Francisco, left early, saying he had business elsewhere.

When the session broke up — it is to resume Wednesday — the most anyone would say was to repeat that "there are ongoing discussions."

Finks remains the favorite, although Jones said it was possible that the three would recommend new names.

Jones was less than specific about the results of Tuesday's meeting.

"We're being involved in the process," he said continually. Asked if there was any plan to work out a compromise, he replied:

"There is no plan, just a real good effort to get a new commissioner. I'm confident we'll get one."

Zedlitz wins 200-meter at Olympic Festival

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The 1989 U.S. Olympic Festival began with a local flavor Tuesday night as swimmer Trip Zedlitz, an Oklahoma City resident, won the 200-meter individual medley.

The festival doesn't begin, officially, until Friday night's opening ceremonies. But with the U.S. national championships beginning at the end of the month, the swimmers were given a head start.

Zedlitz, 18, got off to the quickest start, winning in 2:06.84 to take the first gold medal of the ninth festival.

west coast of Scotland, from northwest to southeast. Par is 72, but the last time the Open was played here — in the more normal rain and chill of 1982 — Watson took a third-round 74 before winning by one stroke over Peter Oosterhuis and Nick Price.

Watson is back this year, trying again for a record-breaking sixth Open championship and his first tournament title since 1986. He sees a vastly different, but still very tough course.

"There are going to be some unusual shots out there," Watson said after a practice round. "If you hit the ball at the fairway or beyond the greens, it's liable to run 50-60 yards."

Greg Norman, the 1986 Open champion and one of the game's longest hitters, said the fairways were a driver's dream.

"If you get the right bounce on a downslope, you'll get an extra 120 yards," he said.

Strange, who came back from an opening-round 79 at windblown Royal Lytham and St. Annes to finish 13th last year, said the fairways were the part of the course he noticed most at Troon.

"Because of the dryness, there's not much rough out there," the American said. "That will mean a lot of bump-and-run this week."

Defending champion Seve Ballesteros agreed.

"There is no rough out there to speak of and what there is is inconsistent in its growth," the Spaniard said. "You can't blame anybody. There's been no growth because the summer has been so dry."

It's been the driest, hottest summer in Britain since 1976, and the golf courses up and down the country are brown from lack of rain.

But the summer heat may not be the main reason for the lack of rough. David Begg, the Open's press officer, said groundskeepers also feel that abnormally mild temperatures last January and February may have contributed even more to the short, sparse grass.

Whatever the reason, top golfers said the wider, faster course meant anyone from a big group of players could walk away with the silver Claret Jug on Sunday.

"I know when there is more rough, then less players have a chance to win," Ballesteros said. "Now it's wide open, and the wind is going to be the biggest factor."

The weather forecast calls for sunny skies through the weekend, but winds could pick up as the tournament approaches and Strange said that would be a major factor.

"It's hard to practice in conditions like these, because you know it's going to change," Strange said. "And when you play Troon, you can actually feel as if you're playing four or five different golf courses, depending on the wind."

Money would be based on the talent pool.

"We would create a pool of A, B and B-minus fighters and pay accordingly," Abraham said said.

The A fighters would be those ranked Nos. 1, 2 and 3. B fighters would be Nos. 4, 5 and 6, while B-minus fighters would be those ranked 7 through 10.

The deal would not be dependent on Tyson continuing undefeated.

"If Mike loses, he's not about to retire," Abraham said. "The deal would be different, but we wouldn't want it to end."

Should Tyson lose, Abraham can envision him fighting a non-title bout, then trying to regain the championship.

If Tyson regained the title, it would be financial business as usual between him and HBO.

Tyson is a 12½-1 favorite to beat Williams.

"I know that you, like myself, would like to see him closed down," Williams told members of the media Tuesday.

"Tyson hasn't asserted himself as heavyweight champion. He hasn't given people the respect due them. A champion has to conduct himself like a champion. I feel that he doesn't and I'm sure you do to."

"He's not your ideal heavyweight champion."

Tyson also met with the media briefly after a closed workout.

"Williams is talking all that garbage," Tyson said. "We'll see how he looks after he's been bashed around a little bit."

Bijou shows forgotten cowboy classic

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

One of a handful of great films to actually win the Oscar for Best Picture, John Schlesinger's 1969 "Midnight Cowboy" makes an appearance at the Bijou this week (Thursday 7 p.m., Friday 9 p.m.).

A somewhat forgotten classic, "Midnight Cowboy" is the only X-rated film to win the Oscar, and when one considers the movies that have taken the prize ("The Greatest Show on Earth," "Rocky," "The Sting") it's remarkable that a film as anti-establishment, progressive and provocative as "Midnight Cowboy" was even nominated. Today, in an era of ubiquitous sex and violence, "Midnight Cowboy" would barely garner an R rating. But the gut-wrenching quality of this film is derived from its emotions, not its explicitness.

Joe Buck (Jon Voight, in an auspicious debut) is a hard-luck, dead-end Texan who hits New York to escape a mysterious past, make his fortune and find freedom as a high-priced stud to lonely women. When things don't pan out, Joe begins to frequent the seedier parts of town and meets harder-luck cripple Ratso Rizzo (Dustin Hoffman) in a heartbreaking and ultimately triumphant performance. The film centers on the two men as they turn to one another for friendship and compassion in an environment bent on their destruction.

Waldo Salt's Oscar-winning screenplay, based on James Leo Herlihy's novel, is top-notch economy, forming the skeleton over which Voight and Hoffman flesh out Joe and Ratso. It's peppered with such repeatable dialogue as, "No, ma'am, I ain't a for-real cowboy; but I am one hell of a stud," as well as this entire conversation:

"No, ma'am, I ain't a for-real cowboy; but I am one hell of a stud."

"Provolone."
"Faggot."
"Provolone."
"Faggot!"
"Provolone."
"FAGGOT!"

Schlesinger (who also won an Oscar) is simply in peak form, portraying New York as a modern nightmare world in which desperation attempts to take control of every individual, and those not afflicted dexterously look the other way. In one of the most indelible images in all of cinema, Joe, fresh off the bus, is the only person who stops to look at a well-dressed man lying face-down on a busy sidewalk. There's also a well-aimed shot at the Warhol crowd when Joe and Ratso are to be filmed and exploited at a multi-media-art-drug-love-in; the decadence of which is fully exploited by Schlesinger when one of the hosts finds Ratso — his health rapidly degenerating — stuffing buffet salami into his pockets.

"You don't have to steal it," she says. "It's free."
"If it's free," he replies, "I ain't stealing it."

As with every great film, "Midnight Cowboy" gets better with repeated viewings. And if you've seen it edited for television, you haven't seen it.

CBS classics: lame, miss dimwit market

Every so often, marketing genius strikes with the full force of a well-flung steel hanky, eventually radically and forever altering the way Americans see the rest of the world and, heck, even ourselves.

In the proud tradition of adhesive automotive Garfield toys (a brief aside: if President Bush were really worried about this country, he'd be braying for a constitutional amendment mandating the immediate, on-highway sterilization of all drivers found in possession of that particular lovable cartoon likeness on the grounds that they pose a real and present danger to what's left of the gene pool), collectible Elvis plates and junk bonds, CBS Records has recently introduced "CBS Masterworks Dinner Classics." Says a CBS brochure, these are "unique collections of classical music designed specifically around the concept of entertaining."

Designed around the concept of entertaining? Perhaps a more apt description might be "terminally boring classical music designed specifically around the concept of pimping off something resembling a lifestyle to those who'll never escape the trailer park."

CBS is positioning the Direr Classics series — which includes the Viennese Album, the Italian Album, the French Album, the Japanese Album and the Sunday Brunch Album (Sunday Brunch is an emerging African nation) — as an entertaining "accessory," apparently under the impression that people who actually eat food from plates will find the genteel wafting of a carefully chosen selection of classical music infinitely more palatable than a television in the background blaring "Hee Haw" reruns. Available only on cassette and compact disc, each dining "accessory" includes a suggested menu and three recipes, "consistent with the concept of the album," which I suppose pretty much rules out "the beer left in the bottom of the bottles and an armful of Twinkies, followed by a gently steaming turkey dog and some smokes" as a menu consistent with the Sunday Brunch Album.

So, you're no doubt wondering, who's responsible for this little travesty of culinary justice? Sharp-toothed and drooling Keebler eyes, damn sick and tired of counting the chips? The bastard offspring of a grotesque kitchen tryst between Julia Childs and Zubin Mehta? Nope, it's a completely different entity — although one just as horrible — named Martha Stewart, whom Time, recognized far and wide as the last word on urbane wit and sophistication, dubbed "the guru of good taste in American entertaining."

According to the brochure, Stewart's visibility is at an all-time high, since she's just been appointed as HOME ENTERTAINING/LIFESTYLE CONSULTANT FOR A MAJOR NATIONAL RETAIL CHAIN, which means that her name is "now as identifiable to the masses as it has long been (sic) to an upscale audience." In this era of American business acumen, when consulting often is just a euphemism for stealing, let's hope that Stewart's name is so identifiable to federal corrections officers as it is to the upscale audience seemingly so anxious to hump her figurative leg.

While I have no doubt that the idea of eating definitely raw, possibly spoiled fish while listening to a thundering Wagner thing (an idea that the Japanese album curiously fails to explore) appeals to a large, if dangerously imbalanced, cross-section of America, it seems to me that CBS is missing the boat by its failure to pander to a slightly different demographic: the American dimwit.

For instance, CBS might reap boundless millions by releasing "Truck Stop Classics," featuring Polly Holiday's (Flo on "Alice") staggering recreation of the ambience surrounding an interstate gas 'n' grub joint where long-haul truckers stop to "refuel and slug down a couple pounds of dead cow." Or why not "Trailer Park Classics," featuring the lulling sounds of snot-nosed carpet bunnies pulling broken Big Wheels around asphalt yards while drunken mothers burn the macaroni & cheese and toss vodka-filled "Ghostbusters" cups at soap opera hunks on TV? And what's wrong with "Drive-Thru Classics," wherein no matter how large your order is, some 17-year-old who's inserting digits into every face-off while dreaming dreams of someday living the high life and partyin' down with Guns, man (cretin-speak for rock band/young spokesmen Guns 'n' Roses) replies, "So, uh, you want any fries with that or anything?"

Former Angel shot to death

Murder-suicide suspected between Moore and wife

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Former California Angels pitcher Donnie Moore was found shot to death Tuesday and his wife suffered multiple gunshot wounds at a home here in an apparent suicide and murder attempt, police told the Anaheim Bulletin.

Anaheim Police Sgt. David Severson identified the body as Moore's after police were called to investigate an apparent domestic dispute.

Police said Moore's wife Tonya drove herself to Kaiser Permanente Foundation hospital.

She was listed in critical condition, said hospital spokeswoman Donna Donan-Drasner.

Moore, 35, was released from the Angels in 1988, two years after he carried California to within one strike of the 1986 World Series.

But he gave up a two-run home run to Boston's Dave Henderson in the top of the ninth inning of Game 5 of the American League Championship Series that gave the Red Sox a 6-5 lead. The Angels sent the game into extra innings, and once again Henderson victimized Moore, with a sacrifice fly in the top of the 11th that lifted the Red Sox to a 7-6 victory.

The Red Sox won the next two games in Boston and moved into the World Series, which they lost to the New York Mets.

Donnie Moore

Moore set team records in 1985 by recording 31 saves and finishing 57 games.

He also played for the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals, Milwaukee Brewers and Atlanta Braves.

Moore, a native of Lubbock, Texas, had pitched for the Kansas City Royals' minor league team in Omaha this season, but was released by the organization on June 12.

Greg Norman watches his drive Tuesday during a practice round for among competitors getting a preview of the course in Troon, the British Open that begins Thursday. The 1986 champion was Scotland.

Balmy weather, lack of wind could simplify British Open

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Picture a British golf course. The vision includes a seaside vista, deep rough full of thistles bordering pencil-thin fairways and greens so lush that an approach shot sticks like a stone tossed into a mudhole.

Now, picture this: Fairways the color of the neighboring beach and just about as wide. Rough that's thinner than the hair on an old duffer's head. And greens so hard that an iron shot a bit too stiff sends the ball skittering through the gallery. Welcome to sunny Scotland, basking in the most summerlike British summer in more than a decade, and offering players at this week's British Open a different look at links golf.

"This is perfect. You'd better enjoy it while it lasts," U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange said Tuesday as temperatures closed in on 80 degrees and the wind that usually blows strong and cold off the Firth of Clyde seemed to be on a Caribbean holiday.

"It's so easy out there," said Tom Weiskopf, who won the 1973 Open here in torrential rain. "If we have four days like this, they're going to shoot 12 to 15 under par."

That would be a 276-273 for four rounds and — with a little luck — could challenge the Open-record 268 by Tom Watson in 1977. That summer was also a scorcher, with the normally rugged Turnberry course left defenseless by calm winds and wide fairways.

Gooden given green light

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden was examined Tuesday by orthopedic specialists and given the green light to begin throwing next week.

Dr. Fiske Warren and Dr. Russell Warren reported that the right-hander had made good progress from a tear in his right shoulder muscle and could begin to throw lightly next week and "proceed as tolerated thereafter."

Mets General Manager Frank

Cashen and team physician Dr. James Parkes said there was no timetable for Gooden's return.

"We will not rush him in," Cashen said. "He will be given all the time needed for a complete recovery."

Gooden left his July 1 start in Cincinnati after working two innings and was placed on the 21-day disabled list the following day.

In 17 starts, Gooden is 9-4 with a 2.99 ERA.

LeMond extends lead in Tour de France

BRIANCON, France (AP) — Greg LeMond, with another strong performance in the mountains, extended his overall lead Tuesday as the Tour de France entered its final week.

LeMond, making a comeback after two seasons of injuries and misfortune since winning in 1986, extended his lead by 13 seconds on Laurent Fignon of France. LeMond, who finished fourth in Tuesday's 16th stage, now has a 53-second advantage with five stages left.

Pedro Delgado of Spain, last year's champion and fast becoming LeMond's major worry, finished alongside LeMond and stayed 2:48 behind.

"It was a good day for me," LeMond said. "I did my best to stay with Delgado in the mountains."

Going into the Tour de France,

LeMond was worried about his ability to compete in the mountain stages. That's where he faltered in the Tour of Italy.

"I've got my confidence back since the Pyrenees, because I saw I was riding as well as the others," LeMond said.

Delgado tried to make up distance by breaking away from a group containing LeMond and Fignon after Pascal Richard of Switzerland moved away to take a large lead. The 16th leg started from Gap and had two steep climbs before a rapid descent to Briancon. The distance was 108 miles.

Richard, far behind in the overall standings, won the stage in 4 hours, 46 minutes, 45 seconds, with Bruno Cornillet of France second.

LeMond, Fignon, Delgado and Charly Mottet of France are waging their own battle.

Each took turns trying to gain distance on the others up and down the mountain passes. But each time the group swallowed up the margin.

On the final descent, just before Briancon, with speeds going close to 62 mph, LeMond moved out to a 20-second advantage over the other contenders.

But as they entered into town, LeMond was caught and Mottet sprinted at the finish to gain third, just ahead of LeMond and Delgado in a group about five minutes behind Richard.

Fignon trailed the LeMond group and lost precious seconds in the overall standings.

"I had a lot of problems in the hills and I can't afford to lose anything, not even 14 seconds," Fignon, the 1983 and 1984 champion, said.

Andrew Hampsten of the United States, a strong climber expected to make his move in the Alps, did well on the first incline, but fell back later. He finished in 20th place for the day, 7:24 behind Richard.

The disappointing performance dropped Hampsten to 10th place overall, 9:35 behind LeMond. It effectively ended his hopes for a place in the top three at next Sunday's finish in Paris.

Greg LeMond, the overall leader of the Tour de France, relaxes Tuesday near his hotel in Orcieres, France. The American has a 53-second advantage over the Laurent Fignon of France with five stages left.

Dodgers trade pitching to Reds for extra bats

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, struggling in fifth place in the National League West, traded pitching for hitting Tuesday in a swap that sent Tim Lary to Cincinnati for Kal Daniels and Lenny Harris.

In addition to Lary, a right-hander who recently moved to the bullpen, the Dodgers also dealt utility infielder Mariano Duncan for the two left-handed hitters.

"They told me something was going to happen within a week, but they didn't know who (would be traded), and that I might be back a week and start Sunday in Pittsburgh," Lary said. "I don't like the bullpen, so if I don't start, it's far better to move on, assuming I start in Cincinnati."

Lary, 17-11 with a 2.91 ERA in 1988, said he felt "maybe a little bitterness, just in the fact that I came back last year and pitched effectively, and this year I felt I pitched effectively, too... Maybe they just gave up on me. Who knows? "Maybe it's better I get out of here, because I don't understand some of their moves. You figure going to the bullpen is usually a demotion, but this year that's not the case because things have been topsy-turvy."

While the Dodgers are looking for hitting to bolster the NL's weakest offense, they are getting a player with chronic knee problems.

The 25-year-old Daniels underwent arthroscopic surgery May 16 to remove a bone spur from his right knee and has had two operations on each knee during his career.

Daniels came off the disabled list June 20 is hitting .218 with two homers, nine RBIs and six stolen bases in 44 games.

"I don't feel like I got the publicity I deserved," said Daniels, booed frequently by Cincinnati fans, "but what can you expect when you're playing with Eric Davis and Dave Parker one year and Eric Davis the

Tyson may sign lifetime package with cable TV

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Home Box Office is so fond of Mike Tyson that the cable television network would like sign him for his entire boxing career.

The 23-year-old heavyweight champion apparently is agreeable to such an arrangement.

"It was Mike who suggested it," said Seth Abraham, a vice-president of HBO, which in half-way through an eight-fight, $26.5 million deal with Tyson.

Tyson's defense against Carl "The Truth" Williams Friday night at the Convention Center will be the fifth fight in that package.

A suggested format has "been sketched out as to what we have in mind," Abraham said Tuesday from his New York office.

Abraham said he has not discussed money with Tyson, estranged manager Bill Cayton or promoter Don King.

Abraham said the idea of a lifetime deal with Tyson was first suggested last Oct. 26 at Las Vegas.

He and Tyson attended a meeting at which an unsuccessful effort was made to settle the dispute on-going between Tyson and King, on one hand, and Cayton. Tyson is trying to break Cayton's managerial contract.

"Mike was talking about loyalty," Abraham recalled. "He said HBO had been loyal to him and said, 'I don't care if I fight anybody other than HBO. Let's do a lifetime deal.'"

Tyson has been criticized in the media for disloyalty to Cayton.

To reach an agreement, two sets of negotiations must be held, Abraham said — one with Tyson and King and one with Cayton.

"The promoter has Mike's mind, body and spirit," Abraham said. "The manager has a contract."

Under the suggested lifetime agreement, Abraham said: "Mike would fight three times a year on HBO. Every 18 months he would be able to do a pay-per-view fight."
