POLL SHOWS CHOICE POPULARITY RISING IN U.S.

Sixty-three percent in the new poll said they would want abortion to be legal in their state if the court overturned its 1973 decision that made such a state law make illegal abortion.

Representatives of the state made no abortion laws. That was up from 57 percent in March.

The results show the court approved the first abortion restrictions on July 3.

While the majority favored legal abortion generally, respondents said they would want abortion to be legal in their state if the court overturned its 1973 decision.

The result was within the poll's plus or minus margin of error of plus or minus three points.

Pollsters asked about 1,545 adults by phone in a random sample of telephone numbers selected to meet the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's national telephone directory.

The survey was conducted from July 4 to July 13 among 1,545 adults nationwide, with the margin of error of plus or minus three points.

Recipients of the survey, however, will not work in detail, and abortions state legislatures. In the survey, 30 percent said they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who was opposing abortion, compared with 21 percent who were more likely to vote for a candidate who supported abortion. 29 percent of respondents said they would be less likely to support abortion.

The result was within the poll's plus or minus margin of error of plus or minus three points.

The survey was conducted from July 8 to July 10 among 1,545 adults nationwide, with the margin of error of plus or minus four points, given the margin of error.

UI to request more research space

Gibson said. The design of the building, parking, utilities, construction, and building-a building site will all be part of the planning process. Gibson said, adding that finding the site and the location of the campus are difficult.

"Finding the site is a bit of a problem. The plan is getting builds of UI," he said. "We have to look at some perhaps not-obvious options." Already approved funds will be used to help create an 'environment where this would be a place to do a medical research center,' Gibson said.

Ag majors in high demand as supply falls short of increased career market

AMES (AP) — Now that agriculture has hit the major growth phase for the demand for ag graduates, managing a supply of graduates that is expanding each year, and new specializations are being added, the university is looking at ways to attract more students to the field.

The university, which has been promoting agriculture as a major, is working to attract students to the program. It has added several new majors, including a new degree in agribusiness and a new minor in ag engineering.

"We want to attract students to ag," said Dr. John Smith, director of the university's agriculture department. "We want to show them that there are many opportunities in ag, and that it's a good field."
Sioux City heroes

Although the horrific crash of United Flight 232 in Sioux City last Wednesday will be remembered as one of the most deadly air disasters in recent history, it was a rare instance where individuals demonstrated great humanism, courage, and selflessness.

Helpless infants and small children were separated from their parents by the sheer force of the crash. Several passengers who survived the crash have cited in interviews the bravery and sacrifice of the passengers and crew who died to save them.

Some of these passengers have received accolades for their brave actions, including Jonathan Earle of Des Moines, who played a key role in saving lives during the evacuation. Earle, who was a flight attendant on the doomed flight, utilized his training to help passengers escape the burning aircraft.

On the ground, localheroes like police officers and firefighters also played crucial roles in responding to the tragedy. Officers heroically led evacuation efforts and firefighters battled the flames, risking their own lives.

In Sioux City, the community is rallying around one another and honoring the lives lost. A memorial has been set up at a nearby park, where people have come to pay their respects and offer condolences to the families of the victims.

Pettie politics

Once again, members of the UI student government have allegedly resorted to scandalous and pettifogging behavior in their pursuit of petty politics.

On Wednesday, the Collaborative Associates Council released an internal audit designed to target areas of budget waste within the student government. The audit revealed that the Printing Services and a number of other inefficient and expensive departments which, if eliminated, could save the UI millions annually.

At that point, the CAC could have presented the UI administration with a clear mandate to cut these departments; instead, it will only trim a bit from the annual budget. More importantly, the audit could have given evidence that the CAC has overstepped the political boundaries that have been set. But, for the sake of another $300,000 and the organization's entrepreneurial spirit, this audit will likely go untouched.

Without a clear audit, the organization's potential to cut the budget and reduce administrative costs is null and void. It is important for American students to understand the importance of a proper audit and how it affects their financial future.

The U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled that an American citizen on death row in Texas could not seek habeas corpus relief. The Court's decision is a setback for justice, and this case is only one of many examples of America's flawed justice system.

One of the most pressing concerns is the treatment of prisoners. Many advocacy groups are calling for a complete overhaul of the prison system, and more needs to be done to ensure that everyone is treated fairly and justly. This case is yet another example of why we need to work towards a better future for all Americans.

Pathway confusion

To the Editor:

I would like to bring to your attention a speech by a young woman who self-identified as a member of the National Socialist Movement. In a statement she made to the crowd, she passionately advocated for the importance of preserving white heritage and tradition.

Without addressing her comments, I fear that her message could inspire others to follow her lead, potentially leading to a path of violence and destruction.

I urge you to consider the impact of this message and take action to prevent its spread.

Sincerely,

DC-10 explosion

To the Editor:

The DC-10 explosion in 1989 was a tragic event that claimed the lives of many innocent passengers and crew members. It was a reminder of the dangers of flying and the importance of safety measures in place.

Since then, the aviation industry has made significant strides in improving safety standards, and the tragic event serves as a stark reminder of the importance of vigilance and preparedness.

I urge all travelers to remain aware of their surroundings and take precautions to ensure their safety.

Sincerely,

Jane Smith

DC-10 survivors could take years to heal

JOHN WILSON, in Chicago

In the United States on Thursday night, the last of the surviving air crew of a DC-10 jumbo jet that crashed in Chicago last year were expected to leave hospital, though they still face many months of rehabilitation. About 100 people were killed when the DC-10 crashed near O'Hare International Airport.

The DC-10 was the largest civilian jet in the world when it crashed, killing 290 people. The crash was caused by an engine failure, and the surviving crew are expected to face months of rehabilitation.

While the survivors are expected to leave hospital, they will still face many months of rehabilitation. The crash was caused by an engine failure, and the surviving crew are expected to face months of rehabilitation.

A full citizenship in the US as an adult requires various legal steps and responsibilities.

Although many of the later opened colleges have attracted students who want to attend college in the US, some members of the community are concerned about the impact of these new colleges.

Iowa City, Iowa - The Upward Bound programs offered by the University of Iowa are designed to help low-income students attend college.

Local college officials say that the Upward Bound programs are designed to help low-income students attend college.

"Upward Bound is a program that provides academic support to low-income students who want to attend college," said Laura LeClair, director of the Upward Bound program at the University of Iowa.

Marlite signs with Atlanta

(AP) — First-round draft choice Ray Marlette of Iowa signed a $1.6 million, five-year pact worth more than $1 million, with Atlanta Braves on Friday at the start of the MLB team's new policy. Atlanta Braves general manager John Schuerholz said Marlette, who was a second-round draft choice in 1985 by the Minnesota Twins, was an "outstanding baseball player". Marlette is a left-handed pitcher who was expected to be a starting pitcher for the Atlanta Braves next season.

Doralyon and her friends give a new meaning to fiber-art

Jeff Kirke
The Daily Iowan

We may not realize it, but we're all wearing art. Right down to our underwear.

At least that's the conclusion we reached after the recent shadowbox at The Toast & Coffee Cafe. You see, we're bringing your laundry from the light fixtures, and a few of our customers have been caught sporting the latest fashion designs by Iowa City's own Doralyon.

Doralyon, an artist who's been making waves in the local art scene, is known for her unique approach to textile art. She creates intricate designs using a variety of materials, often incorporating elements such as lace, beads, and even natural fibers. Her latest project, a shadowbox featuring her work, has been a hit among customers of The Toast & Coffee Cafe.

"Art is an expression of life and lifestyles, just as laundry is an expression of life and lifestyles," she said. "Our pieces are not just shirts or pants, but wearable art."

The shadowbox, which features several of her latest designs, is a testament to her talent and creativity. It includes a variety of items, from a simple shirt to more complex pieces that incorporate a variety of materials and techniques.

Doralyon's work is not only visually stunning, but it also serves as a conversation starter. "People are always curious about what's going on in the shadowbox," she said. "It's a way to showcase our art and connect with our customers in a unique way."

The Daily Iowan's fashion editors have already taken notice of Doralyon's work and are planning a feature story on her in the next issue. "We think her approach to wearable art is a fresh and exciting new direction for the fashion industry," they said. "Doralyon's work is truly one of a kind and is sure to inspire others in the field."
Calcavecchia wins at Open
Norman blows opportunity for title

THOUSE, Florida (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia ended five years of American frustration and won the British Open in a three-way play-off. Calcavecchia was the only player to complete the 18-hole par 70, hitting a fairway wood for his approach shot on the 18th hole.

Byrnum comes from behind for 1st win

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Curt Byrnum joined his brother in the celebrity golf world. Byrnum shot a 4-under-par 68 on Sunday to win the 1989 celebrity golf tournament at Cawood Golf Club.

Twin's 8th grade promise keeps rivalry alive

Identical twins refuse to wrestle each other during competition at the U.S. Olympic Festival

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Identical twin brothers at 123 pounds refused to wrestle each other Sunday in the freestyle-minor event in the U.S. Olympic Festival, holding a pact they made in the eighth grade.

Troy Porter of Westville, Ill., was joined by his brother, Rich, because of the injury that kept him from competing. Rich can remember the pact.

"I participated in it in 1983 and I participated in it in 1987, but he was unable to make weight," Troy said. "And I think he was going to make weight this year, but he was unable to make weight."
