Shiites report hanging of U.S. Marine

Higgins' pro-Iranian captors claim killing was retaliation

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Kidnappers said they hanged Lt. Col. William Higgins on Monday to retaliate for Israel's abduction of a Moslem cleric, and holders of other hostages threatened to kill another American.

Higgins' pro-Iranian captors, who call themselves the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, released a 30-second videotape of very poor quality showing a man hanging from a gallows. There was no indication when it was made, and no body had been reported found by midnight Monday.

Rope bound the bare feet and hands of the man said to be the Marine colonel who commanded a group of United Nations truce observers in south Lebanon when he was seized Feb. 17, 1988.

The new threat was from the Revolutionary Justice Organization, which said it would kill Joseph James Cicippio unless Israel freed Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid by 6 p.m. (11 a.m. EDT) Tuesday. It was handwritten in Arabic and delivered to the newspaper An-Nahar with a photograph of Cicippio smiling.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli army said Obeid had confessed personal involvement in "planning and guiding and aiding" the abduction of Higgins and had revealed the names of his captors.

President George Bush, facing his first foreign policy crisis, cut short a trip to Chicago and summoned his national security advisers.

"It is a most troubling and disturbing matter that has shocked the American people right to the core," Bush declared, while cautioning he had no confirmation Higgins had in fact been hanged. "There is no way that I can properly express the outrage that I feel," he said.

He did not comment on an Israeli proposal to trade Obeid and other Shiite prisoners for Israeli and Western hostages in Lebanon but had said after Obeid's abduction: "I don't think kidnapping and violence helps the cause of peace."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Monday: "Perhaps a little more responsibility on the part of the Israelis one of these days would be refreshing."

White House officials carefully avoided direct criticism of Israel, but press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: "It is fair to say that many people do share the senator's concerns." He would not elaborate. State Department officials in Washington, speaking privately, said they found reports that the man in the videotape was Higgins to be credible, but they could not say whether it was made Monday or earlier. There have been reports Higgins was killed last year.

Bush expresses shock, anger

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush condemned the reported hanging Monday of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins and hurried back to Washington where he met with advisers about a response to "this brutal murder" by pro-Iranian kidnappers.

"It is a most troubling and disturbing matter that has shocked the American people right to the core," Bush declared, though he cautioned that he had no confirmation Higgins had in fact been hanged. "There is no way that I can properly express the outrage that I feel," he said.

Bush monitored reports through the afternoon after returning from Chicago, then met into the evening in the Cabinet room with top advisers, including Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger and other Cabinet members.

Congressional leaders were summoned for a later meeting Monday night.

Bush telephoned Secretary of State James Baker as Baker landed in Shannon, Ireland, before his return to Washington late Monday night.

National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft also was expected back in Washington Monday night after a trip to Colorado to provide a routine briefing to former President Gerald Ford.

Higgins' reported killing triggered an instant debate in Congress over Israel's role in the events. Israeli commandos kidnapped a Shiite Moslem cleric last week, and the announcement of Higgins' hanging said he was killed in retaliation.

"Perhaps a little more responsibility on behalf of the Israelis would be refreshing," said Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole. But Rep. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) countered that blaming Israel would be "turning the world on its head."

At the White House, officials carefully avoided direct criticism of Israel, but Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "It is fair to say that many people do share the senator's concerns." He would not elaborate.

Committee declares UI needs fewer students and more staff

Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

The UI should limit enrollment to the current 29,000 students and add an additional 165 tenure-track faculty members, according to a UI report released Monday.

Edward Lawler, a sociology professor and chairman of the university's Strategic Planning Committee, said in the report the 29,000 "cap" was necessary because the faculty is understaffed, and the university buildings are overcrowded.

The planning committee was created to study ways in which the UI could better concentrate its resources. The preliminary report of their findings was circulated to "provide a basis for discussion, comment and dialogue by members of the university community."

Lawler said the committee's goal was to outline ways for the UI to become one of the top five public universities in the nation. The report outlined six goals to be carried out by 1990.

- Gaining a comprehensive strength in undergraduate programs
- Premier graduate and professional programs in a number of areas
- A faculty of national and international distinction
- An academic community diverse in gender, race, ethnicity and nationality
- Strong ties between the UI and external constituencies
- A high-quality university life both intellectually and socially

The report said the additional 165 faculty positions would help meet the above goals and cost approximately $9 million in salaries and fringe benefits.

The university could enroll 2,500 out-of-state students "as in-state students decline naturally due to the incipient reduction in high school graduations," the report said. This would bring more tuition money to the UI.

The report said that to recruit new UI professors the UI should establish 50 new "distinguished professorships" which would include supplemental salaries. The UI should take other measures to recruit the best faculty possible such as "a more creative benefits package."

The planning committee also recommended recruiting 30 to 50 world-class faculty members to improve the quality of UI education.

"These faculty members should crystallize a current or emerging strength, be a magnet for attracting faculty and students to the UI and contribute to graduate and undergraduate programs," the report said.

Cambodian peace talks yield dissent

PARIS (AP)—Bitter accusations against the Khmer Rouge-dominated Cambodian peace talks Monday, with Vietnam calling the communist group "the most barbarous regime ever known" and demanding it be destroyed like the Nazis.

Despite open antagonism at the international peace conference, some delegates expressed hope for progress in upcoming closed-door sessions.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach demanded the "perpetual eradication" of the Khmer Rouge.

Khmer Rouge leader Kieu Samphan charged in turn that Hanoi plans to "exterminate" the Cambodian people and nation and has no intention of withdrawing its troops from Cambodia in September as promised.

Diplomats from 20 countries joined in calling for a comprehensive peace plan, but none of their speeches Sunday and Monday offered new proposals to end the nation's two decades of conflict.

Emerging as a seemingly irreconcilable difference was the future role of the Khmer Rouge, the strongest of three resistance groups fighting the Vietnamese and the pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia. The resistance is armed by China and led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, a non-communist who believes having the Khmer Rouge in Phnom Penh during an interim period leading to elections would be better than fighting them in the jungles.

Almost all delegates at the conference reviled the Khmer Rouge, which was routed in a Vietnamese invasion in early 1979 after its fighters killed hundreds of thousands of civilians in a revolution to reform the country into an agrarian commune.

"The genocidal Pol Pot regime is the most barbarous regime ever known in human history," Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach of Vietnam said.

Cross-country walker earns funds for AIDS education

James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

In the past few years, AIDS activists have tried a number of ways to get more funding for research on the disease, ranging from lobbying the U.S. Congress to holding rallies in cities across the country.

But Richard Carper has taken a novel approach to the problem with his "Walk and Roll For Life '89."

The "Walk and Roll For Life '89" is what Carper calls his fundraising walkathon from Portland, Ore., to Washington D.C. His purpose is walking across the country — besides raising money — is to "educate the population" about AIDS, in the process gaining public support for future funding to care for those who have contracted AIDS or AIDS-related viruses.

Carper told a gathering of press and about 25 supporters on the UI Pentacrest Monday that his goal was to try to "break the silence" on AIDS funding.

"We want to create an awareness across the nation for increased AIDS funding," Carper said. "We need to educate our population on what this disease means and bring attention to it. Right now, there are zero dollars for direct care of people who already have AIDS virus."

Carper said he also wanted to try to raise money through people sponsoring his walk across America.

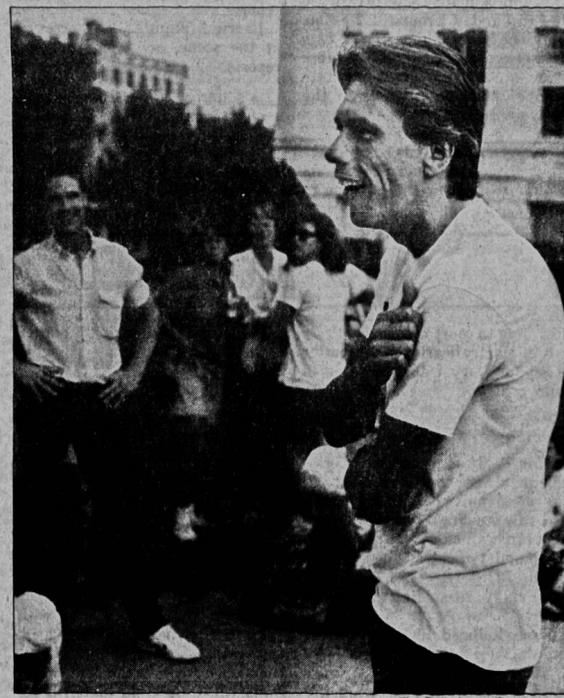

"We want to try to raise a million dollars for direct care facilities from people sponsoring the walk," Carper said. "If I get 50,000 people to sponsor me at one, two or three cents for every mile, that would be over $1.6 million in funding."

Carper has a personal interest in increasing AIDS awareness, because he is a victim of the disease. An admitted former drug user who is now "totally clean," Carper is infected with an AIDS-related virus and is currently taking drugs to control it.

Carper first conceived the walk as a way to bring attention to people who are already infected with the AIDS virus. He had previously engaged in a hunger strike to bring attention to the need for more funding for AIDS research. The hunger strike resulted in a personal letter to Carper from President George Bush promising a "wholehearted" fight against AIDS. Bush also increased funding for AIDS research 35 percent.

Carper said his new cause is no less important.

"We are talking about people's lives here," he said. "The United States and South Africa are the only two countries without a comprehensive health-care system.

Personally, I don't know about you, but I don't like to be put in the same category as South Africa. We need to correct this."

Carper plans to continue his journey — either walking or being pushed in a wheelchair depending on his state of health — until he reaches Washington.

"My dream is to have lunch with George and Barbara (Bush)," Carper said.

Regulation of potential toxins is still uncertain

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

The state may not be able to regulate or reduce the amount of a possibly carcinogenic chemical emitting from the Iowa City Sheller-Globe plant, according to statements made by an official of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources at a public forum in the Iowa City Public Library Monday.

A recent report based on Environmental Protection Agency findings ranked the local automotive part-producing plant as the 89th largest emitter of toxic pollution in the nation.

According to the report, the Sheller-Globe plant emitted 535,912 pounds of methylene chloride — an unregulated, probable human carcinogen used as a metal degreaser, as paint remover and in aerosols — into the air in 1987.

About 50 citizens, environmental experts and local legislators attended the forum, sponsored by the local chapter of Environmental Advocates, to express their concerns that the emissions might pose possible health risks to the community.

But IDNR spokesman Allan Stokes said he could not relieve their concerns — yet.

"There is still disagreement over what potential risks are placed by these emissions," Stokes said.

"I know there are a great deal of things perceived and believed about what effects toxins have," Stokes said. "But there is no real consensus in the scientific and medical communities on what the effects mean."

There is also little consensus among environmental and industry experts as to what should be done about the emissions, he said.

"We're finding out every day how much we don't know about the situation," Stokes said.

What the IDNR lacks, he said, is knowledge about how toxic the chemical emissions are and how stringent the emission regulations should be.

Currently, the IDNR is seeking approval from the Environmental Protection Commission to impose "highest risk level" standards for carcinogenic and non-carcinogenic ground-level emissions statewide, he said.

Sometime within the last 60 days, Sheller-Globe has applied for a permit to modify or expand their Iowa City facility, Stokes said.

Before this permit will be approved, the plant will have to submit detailed air-dispersion modelling values — giving some clue to the amount of toxic chemical emission by the plant — to the IDNR.

The permit application process may last up to six months, Stokes said, so Sheller-Globe may have to meet the air-emission standards if they are approved before that date.

"Until we get more detailed information from the air-dispersion modelling about the ground-level exposure to citizens and what that means in health terms, we don't

Safety Net sponsors benefit concert

A benefit concert for the Iowa City homeless will be held Thursday, August 3, at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., at 9 p.m. The concert will be sponsored by Safety Net Foundation, a private, non-profit organization brought together to address and help solve the homeless crisis in eastern Iowa.

Several local bands will be featured at the concert including The Deadbeats, The Mellow Rebels, and Bernie Lowe and his Orchestra.

Iowa Lakeside Lab hosts adult program

The UI Museum of Natural History is sponsoring an Adult Nature Weekend, August 26 through 28, at Iowa Lakeside Laboratory in Lake Okoboji, Iowa. The program is intended for the education and enjoyment of adults who are interested in nature.

Five courses will be offered in a field trip/lecture format and participants may choose three of these classes. Classes will include:

- The study of birds of the prairies and marshes.
- The study of past history of a marsh by the collection of and microscopic examination of fossil seeds from core samples.
- The study of native American rock carvings and significant local geological and botanical features.
- The study of photography, including field techniques and animal behavior.
- The study of plant communities and species of the prairie.

The Iowa Lakeside Laboratory is located on the western shore of the West Lake Okoboji in northwest Iowa. Area habitats include prairies, lakes, kettle holes, marshes, alkaline fens and wooded ravines.

The cost of the Adult Nature Weekend is $95, which includes two nights lodging and six meals. Participants are responsible for their own transportation.

For more information contact Karole Fuller, program coordinator at The UI Museum of Natural History in Macbride Hall, 356-0482.

Clerk of Court office changes location

The Johnson County Clerk of Court's Office was open for limited business Monday as the office staff moved into newly remodeled office space at the Johnson County Courthouse.

Clerk of Court Ed Steinbrech said the staff hoped to cut down traffic in and out of the office in the courthouse to avoid as much confusion as possible.

The clerk's office on the second floor of the courthouse has been gutted and refurbished. Several walls were removed, giving the office a more open, spacious look. A new front desk area has been added, so the public will not have to go from room to room to find services.

Some office materials and files already have been moved to the new office from temporary offices throughout the courthouse.

Court services were held Monday as scheduled, and no one who needed services at the clerk's office was turned down.

Messy tenants beware: Lease terminations may cost money

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

That hole in your wall giving you a good view of the hallway, the bacteria that have lived behind your cottage cheese and the nameless growth in the bottom of your shower may be more than just unattractive. They may also cost you money.

Landlords have the right to withhold security deposits for unpaid rent, property damage and expenses incurred to the landlord — including any extra cleaning the landlord deems necessary.

Even though the landlord must prove that the tenant is responsible for the damage or expense, Martin Diauz, an Iowa City attorney, said the landlord still has the advantage in disputes that arise over the amount of the deposit that was withheld.

"This has always been a problem," Diauz said. "The landlord has the advantage because he has the money. He could make it all up. Most students don't want to go through the hassle of getting their money back."

But there are avenues of recourse for students who think a landlord has been unfair in their evaluation of the condition of their rental unit.

Landlords are granted 30 days after a lease is terminated to return deposits to a tenant or else provide a written explanation of the reasons for holding the deposit partially or in full if the tenant leaves a forwarding address, according to Cheryl Lees, coordinator of the Protective Association for Tenants.

If a landlord does not fulfill this responsibility, the landlord forfeits the right to withhold the deposit.

If a student does receive a statement from their landlord but disagrees with the assessment, Lees recommends discussing the discrepancy with the landlord as the first step in negotiation.

"Most landlords are very reasonable people," Lees said. "There are two sides to every story."

If an agreement cannot be reached, a tenant can file a claim against the landlord in small claims court.

To prevent any misunderstandings about the deposit, Lees recommends keeping communication open between tenant and landlord.

"Communication is the key," Lees said. "The tenant and the landlord both have mutual interests to protect. If something breaks or is needed talk to them."

She also suggests tenants make a checklist or take pictures of all damage to the apartment when they move in.

"Go over everything with a fine-tooth comb," Lees said. "That gives you a base to go from to compare in the end. After a whole year it's difficult to remember exactly the condition of the apartment, and you can't argue with a picture or a list as well as a memory."

Lees said it is important to read and understand all the terms in the lease of the apartment and to put any promises made by the landlord in the lease.

"There's too many things verbally said, and no one can prove anyone said it," she said.

Connie Stellinga, Van Buren Village manager, said 98 percent of the deposits she collects are returned in full. Appliances, fixtures and the carpet must be cleaned and the walls should be in the same condition as when the tenant moved in for the deposit to be returned in full, she said.

"Things should look like they're brand new because that is the condition they're in when they move in," Stellinga said.

Iowa bikers take a comfortable trip back in time on recumbent bicycles

GUTTENBERG, Iowa (AP)—Troy gets some funny looks from motorists when he rides his bike to work.

They're not sure if it's the extraordinary look of his bicycle, or because he's able to keep up with traffic at speeds of 50 mph.

They ride a Linear recumbent bicycle, made by Kann Manufacturing of Guttenberg. Kann also makes aluminum semi-trailers, commercial work boats and grain bodies for trucks.

"People right here in town still look at me funny. They say, 'What's that? Where did you get that?' They don't even realize we make them here," said Thein, one of three workers who help build the bikes. "The other day I was coming down the River Road hill and was going 52 miles per hour."

The Linear recumbent bike is vastly different from a conventional bicycle. On a recumbent, a rider leans back and pedals with legs extended forward instead of down.

Instead of a bicycle seat, it has a cushioned chair that supports a rider's back, making it easier to generate pedal power. The upright position of a rider also puts less pressure on the diaphragm for easier breathing, and the position allows for an unrestricted view without neck cramping.

The Linear bike, which has an aluminum frame, has under-the-seat steering so that a rider's arms hang down in their natural position. Its 18 gears are shifted by a flick of the thumb. Pull-back style handlebars also are offered by Kann.

The Linear, designed by company president Dirk Kann, is the only recumbent on the market that can be folded. That enables the 7-foot bike to fit in a car trunk, Hansel said.

The Linear comes in three frame sizes and has SunTour derailleurs, thumbshifts and freewheel, Sedisport chain and Sakae rattrap pedals. A customer has the option of ordering the frame and equipping the bike with different components.

"You have to get used to it, but once you do, it's extremely comfortable. It's much more efficient than the traditional 10-speed or 12-speed," said Steve Hansel, director of production and marketing at Kann.

Recumbent bicycles have been around since the 1920s, Hansel said, and Kann has been making them for five years.

A Coralville man was charged with indecent contact with a child, sexual exploitation of children and third-degree sexual abuse after incidents which occurred at his Coralville residence, according to Johnson County District court reports.

Arthur R. Loomis, 64, 302 Fifth St., allegedly photographed a juvenile female after coercing her to disrobe. He also allegedly fondled a 14-year-old girl's genitals and allegedly caressed a 12-year-old girl's body repeatedly after being told to stop, according to court reports.

The incidents were reportedly ongoing from May to July of 1989, according to court reports. Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for August 18, according to court reports.

An Iowa City man and two Coralville men were charged with third-degree theft Monday after allegedly stealing 13 bags of aluminum cans valued around $200 from the laundry room at the Mar-kee Motel, 707 First Ave., Coralville, on Friday according to court reports.

James R. Baird, 19, 331 N. Gilbert St., Matthew S. Isles, 24, and Jerry E. Warnock, 20, both of 114 Kings Inn, Coralville, allegedly attempted to cash the cans at several Coralville businesses.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for August 9, according to court reports.

An Iowa City man was charged with third-degree theft after stealing a moped, valued around $200, from a residence at 601 S. Gilbert St., according to court reports.

Scott R. Kaeser, 27, 521 S. Van Buren St., admitted to stealing the moped sometime in late June of this year, according to court reports.

Kaeser was also charged with possession of marijuana and driving with a revoked license in connection with the incident. Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for August 17, according to court reports.

Nathan Shepherd, a member of Environmental Advocates, said representatives from Sheller-Globe were invited to the forum and had originally agreed to attend, but bowed out Thursday evening because a corporation representative from their Detroit, Mich., offices would be unable to attend due to a plant closing elsewhere. According to Shepherd, no one in the Iowa City plant could make public appearances.

Sheller-Globe was one of three Iowa corporations listed among the top 25 emitters of individual cancer-causing pollutants nationwide by the National Resources Defense Council, a private group citing federal EPA figures.

Also cited in the report:

- The Aluminum Co. of America in Riverdale, Ia., ranked as the eighth largest toxic polluter in the nation for emitting 2.33 million pounds of perchloroethylene into the air in 1987.
- The Monsanto Co. plant in Muscatine ranked 49th in the nation after releasing 739,800 pounds of acrylonitrile — used in the production of acrylic fibers — into the atmosphere in 1987.
- The Rockwell International Corporation in Coralville released 4,151 pounds of 1,1,1-trichloroethane — which effects the central nervous system and can be a severe eye irritant — into the air in 1987.
- Home Town Dairies of Iowa City

was cited in the EPA inventory for releasing 25,603 pounds of sodium hydroxide solution and 14,377 pounds of phosphoric acid into publicly owned sewage-treatment systems in 1987.

• James River Corporation of Iowa City was cited for emissions of toluene and xylene — skin irritants — from air stacks.

• Procter & Gamble of Iowa City was also cited for emitting over 4,100 pounds of zinc compounds into the sewage-treatment systems and over 3,300 pounds of hydrochloric acid — acutely toxic by inhalation — into the air in 1987.

A copy of the report which details the exact quantities of chemical emissions is available in the documents section of the UI Main Library, Shepherd said.

University

A separate report prepared by the committee on the UI environment suggested that the UI has been underfunded in the past few years. From 1978 to 1988, state funding actually declined while tuition and fees increased, the report said.

"The library budget has not kept pace with inflation over the 10-year period and has been quite volatile in recent years. The repairs, replacements and alterations budget also has not kept pace with inflation and has experienced reductions (or no increase) between 1986 and 1988. Finally, the supplies and services budget has not increased for eight years," the report said.

The report also suggested that there have been several crises in funding at the UI over the past few years which have only narrowly been averted.

"At the beginning of 1988-89, the funding allocated to the Physical Plant Department was $3.2 million less than needed for the operation of academic facilities, and only through stringent energy conservation, cutbacks in needed services, a delay in the opening of part of the Human Biology Research Facility and some temporary funds was a crisis averted," the report said.

In addition, the report criticized the UI for the lack of space for classroom and research purposes. It stated the UI is at or near the bottom in square feet of space for classroom laboratories and also for research in the Big Ten.

"We should mention that in total laboratory and research space per student, the University of Iowa ranks second-to-last (in the Big Ten)," the report said. "Such a ranking can make it difficult for faculty to provide students adequate laboratory experience and to compete for external funds."

Typewritten statement in Arabic said Higgins, 44, was hanged at 3 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT). It and the tape were delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut an hour later.

Ciccipio, 58, of Valley Forge, Pa., was acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped from the campus Sept. 12, 1986.

In the picture delivered Monday, he wore a brown and pink wool sweater over a blue pullover, indicating it may have been taken in cooler weather.

"The organization announces its quick resolve to execute the death sentence against the American-Israeli spy Joseph Ciccipio if the struggling sheik is not released by 6 p.m. Tuesday," the statement said. "Then the deadline will be set for the execution, which will be broadcast on all screens in the world."

Revolutionary Justice, believed like other groups of kidnapers to be made up of Shiite Moslem zealots loyal to Iran, did not mention Edward Tracy, 58, of Burlington, Vt., another American hostage it claims to hold. Tracy disappeared in October 1986.

Its statement was delivered to An Nahar, an independent paper, five hours after the statement and videotape about Higgins arrived at the news agency.

Mary Fischer, Higgins' sister, said in Okolona, Ky., she was "in a state of shock" over the news.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general, expressed "outrage and revulsion."

In a statement issued Sunday, Higgins' captors had said they would hang him at 3 p.m. Monday unless Israel freed Obeid, a fundamentalist Shiite Moslem cleric, and two associates. Obeid and the others were abducted Friday in south Lebanon.

On Monday, the captors said: "Since criminal America and the Zionist enemy did not take our decision to execute American spy Higgins seriously, and since Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid and his two brethren were not freed by the specified deadline . . . the execution of American spy Higgins was carried out by hanging exactly at 3 p.m."

Obeid is a spiritual leader of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, believed to be an umbrella group for kidnapers holding Higgins and the 16 other Westerners missing in Lebanon. Eight of the 16 are Americans.

The videotape delivered with the statement was in color and apparently was made in 15-second sequences.

In one, the victim dangled from a scaffold attached to a ceiling, his head tilted to the left and his body turning slowly. He wore a white blindfold.

He appeared without a blindfold in the other, eyes bulging. The body was dressed in a dark jacket and light trousers.

Warning of worse action ahead, the statement said: "What is coming is greater and America and Israel will bear full responsibility for it."

Reaction

Terry Anderson, Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Bush said, "Somehow there has got to be a return to decency and honor, even in matters of this nature." He commented briefly on the White House lawn after returning from Chicago where he had addressed the National Governors' Association.

He also said he had spoken by telephone with Higgins' wife, "a wonderfully stoic individual who is going through sheer hell."

He had been scheduled to proceed from Chicago to Las Vegas for a speech to the Disabled American Veterans, and then on to Oklahoma City for a Tuesday address to the Fraternal Order of Police convention.

But he said in Chicago, "This matter is of such concern to me and to all of you and to the American people that I think it's appropriate that I go back to Washington."

He learned of reports of the execution as he landed in Chicago.

"It is incumbent on all of us to try to rectify this situation if at all possible," he said. He said he intended to "convene our top national security people and first establish to the best of our ability if the report is true, and then figure out what might conceivably be done."

When reporters pressed Bush about whether he would retaliate in some way, he replied, "I'm not going to discuss it prematurely. This is a matter of grave concern to the American people." He said that discussing what might be done "is not the way to conduct foreign policy."

"Is is a period of assessment. We are not trying to engender any sense of drama beyond that," said Fitzwater of the goings-on at the White House.

Higgins, 44, was serving as part of an international peacekeeping force in Lebanon when he was taken captive in February 1988. Pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem captors said they hanged him Monday in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of a Moslem cleric. The group released a videotape purporting to show the execution.

Israel offered earlier in the day to swap the cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, and other Shiite Moslem captives for all captured Israeli soldiers and foreign hostages held by Shiite groups in Lebanon.

Bush had no comment on the Israeli proposal, although he said last week, "I don't think kidnapping and violence helps the cause of peace."

One of Bush's top advisers, Baker, was en route to Washington from Paris as previously scheduled after a weekend of meetings focusing on U.S.-Soviet relations and the future of Cambodia.

Before leaving Paris, he called the execution claims "outrageous and uncivilized."

Asked about the Israelis, Baker said, "I think that kidnapping and violence is not something that the United States agrees with."

Senate Republican Leader Dole said in Washington, "I would hope the Israelis would take another look at some of their actions that they must know in advance would endanger American lives."

But Schumer said, "Israel is among the few countries seeking to fight terrorism. The blame has to fall on the terrorists themselves."

Dole also said that if the reports of Higgins' killing were true, he hoped the administration would have "an appropriate response. I'm not certain what an appropriate response would be, but I'm certain there should be a response."

Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-N.Y.) was circulating a letter asking colleagues to support a resolution calling for the extradition of Sheik Obeid to stand trial in the United States for the kidnapping of Higgins.

The White House said Sunday that kidnapers of American hostages were "fully responsible for their safety. We expect those who have influence with the hostage-holders to do everything possible to ensure that no harm comes to those hostages or other Americans."

Cambodia

nam told the conference.

But China's Foreign Minister Qian Qichen cautioned that excluding any party from an interim government would be "dangerous."

"The reality in Cambodia today is the simultaneous presence of four political parties, each possessing its own armed forces," he said.

Qian called for the Vietnamese troop withdrawal under international supervision to be followed by a four-party interim government headed by Sihanouk and including the Khmer Rouge.

Japan, the West and non-communist Southeast Asian countries agree on that approach. Vietnam, the Soviet Union and Cambodia's pro-Hanoi government reject inclusion of the Khmer Rouge.

The conference now goes into closed-door committee sessions which may last several weeks before the foreign ministers return to Paris at the end of August or early September. Three of four committees will focus on specific aspects of the complex peace process.

"The atmosphere in the conference room is one of optimism. There is a strong trend toward a solution," Sihanouk told reporters.

On Sunday, Secretary of State James Baker said: "We know the path to Cambodian internal reconciliation is likely to be long and arduous. But today we take the first steps."

His words reflected the measured optimism expressed by all speakers at the huge rectangular table at the International Conference Hall, a block from the Arc de Triomphe.

Sihanouk singled out China as the linchpin.

"China can do a lot. China can choose to stick with Khmer Rouge. It is for China to decide," he said.

Reflecting his fragile alliance with the Khmer Rouge, Sihanouk pointed to the communist ultras as a major stumbling block to peace and reminded journalists that they killed five of his children and 14 grandchildren during their reign of terror.

Western conference sources said that while it may be impossible to reconcile the Cambodian parties in Paris, progress could be achieved on forming an international body to monitor the Vietnamese pullout.

Several ministers, including those of China, Australia and Japan, backed a recommendation by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to dispatch a "reconnaissance mission" to Cambodia immediately to lay the groundwork for an "international control mechanism."

Japanese Foreign Minister Hiroshi Mitsuzuka reiterated that his country is prepared to help finance such a mission, dispatch personnel and provide non-military materials to Cambodia.

Most nations favor U.N. leadership of such a group. But the Phnom Penh government and Vietnam oppose it, saying the United Nations is impartial since it gave the country's seat at the world body to Sihanouk's coalition.

However, diplomats at the conference said they expect to find flexibility on the issue.

Ministers of Thailand, Malaysia and the Philippines cautioned the conference should not be stampered into hasty decisions as the Vietnamese troop withdrawal draws near. Malaysia noted that Afghanistan's civil war continues despite a Soviet troop withdrawal that ended February 15.

"Malaysia must not be another Afghanistan," said Malaysian Foreign Minister Abu Hassan Omar.

Losing high ground

It is not known at this writing if the pro-Iranian group holding Lt. Col. William Higgins has murdered their captive, as they vowed to do Sunday if Israel did not free Sheik Abdul Kareem Obeid, taken in a Friday raid into southern Lebanon.

As of Monday afternoon, Reuters News Agency had received a videotape from the Organization of the Oppressed Peoples of the World, the group holding Higgins, showing a man being hanged. He was not immediately identifiable as Higgins, but to think otherwise would be optimistic and naive — he is, or was, in the hands of a terrorist organization capable of extraordinary barbarism.

The death of Higgins warrants our revulsion, but stern criticism should also be directed at Israel for inviting it by taking a hostage of their own.

The principle of captivity in war differs fundamentally from hostage taking, which is an act of terrorism. Whereas an act of war applies force — killing force or captive force — against a declared enemy of national security to further a military goal, an act of terrorism uses force, often against civilians and foreign nationals, to manipulate global attention. Its object is to confuse, and it uses captivity for leverage, bargaining lives for political concessions, or simply for media coverage. Terrorism takes hostages, not prisoners.

Without excusing war's clumsiness or brutality, it is very often defensible as the last resort for a nation under siege. Terrorism offends more profoundly, if only because it tends to perpetuate itself, and involve the innocent.

But in the Mideast, terrorism and war have inextricably woven together, and the Israeli raid into Lebanon to seize one man dramatically illustrates this.

There is little doubt that Obeid, leading one of the many groups sworn to the destruction of Israel, presented a threat to Israeli security.

But Israel did not take him to remove that threat, as one does when taking a prisoner of war. They intended, and may still intend, to use him as part of a hostage-swapping deal, involving as many as 250 Palestinians, three Israelis, and all the foreign nationals held captive in Lebanon — Higgins included.

Israel has demonstrated little concern for world opinion since the invasion of Lebanon, but in taking Obeid they have conceded yet another patch of the moral high ground. At best, their action is a cynical concession to the way terrorists do business.

More than that, it was just plain foolish. After so many years of strife, it is hard to believe Israel could so thoroughly underestimate their adversaries. And as of Monday afternoon, it looks as if the first man to pay the price for their foolishness is William Higgins.

Tangled web

A recent study by the National Institute of Justice shows more than half of all men arrested in major U.S. cities are under the influence of illegal drugs. That, says the Justice Department, indicates that crime is in large part caused by drugs.

"There should be no longer any question as to how much of a catalyst for crime the lust for illegal drugs has become in America," Atty. Gen. Dick Thornburgh explained. "Drug users and traffickers will beat, rob and kill anyone for drugs and profits."

But while the presence of the drug trade may provide a vehicle for criminal behavior, there is not necessarily a cause and effect relationship between the two.

Thornburgh's comments were aimed primarily at the underclass of society — the poor. Apparently Thornburgh believes if we could keep drugs away from these people we could drastically cut the crime rate.

That conclusion has a questionable basis. It assumes that those who commit non-drug-related crimes are somehow driven to do so because they are drug users or sellers. In other words, the presence and use of drugs causes criminal behavior.

It's true that a large percentage of criminals share the characteristic of being drug users. But more importantly, they also share the characteristic of being raised in an environment of poverty. While Thornburgh believes drugs cause crime, it may be better to say poverty causes drugs and crime.

These may seem like subtle and inconsequential distinctions, but in fact, how the criminal justice system views the interplay between those three factors will determine how it attacks crime in America.

Because Thornburgh believes drugs cause crime, the obvious approach is to stop drug trafficking and use. But if policy makers would instead realize that crime, drugs and poverty are part of a web that traps the underclass, the approach would be different. While drug interdiction and other crime prevention efforts would still be appropriate, they will never be effective without an attack on poverty.

Arguably, people who are poor have an economic incentive to engage in criminal behavior, including employment in the drug trade. And assuming that their lives are more difficult than the lives of those in the middle- or upper-income segments of America, they also have an emotional or psychological incentive to gain pleasure through drugs. If those things are true, America can only win the war on crime and drugs by also engaging poverty in battle.

Look beyond the squabbles

The best feature of the UI's extracurricular opportunities is its bicameral system of student government. One of the UI's best kept secrets is the existence of two independent branches of student government. To the untrained eye, this may appear duplicative, and, heaven knows, it has led to some years when the keenly honed competition between typical college student leaders has made the bicameral system look like the Union vs. the Confederacy — complete with all the war torn strife it caused this country.

In 1971, the UI Student Senate, then the only student government body, fell into complete and total disarray. All the executives resigned, and the body ceased to meet.

The leadership of the Graduate Student Senate, which had been concerned mainly with academic affairs related to the Graduate College, worked for two years to re-invigorate the Student Senate, but failed to do so. Finally, a small group of graduate students got together and drafted a new constitution to represent the interests of the UI students. They were very concerned that never again should students completely lose their voice because of the bickering that all organizations sometimes go through.

The writers of the UI Student Associations Constitution drafted a structure which called for two equal bodies, each headed by a president, entitled to carry the joint title President of the Student Body. The Collegiate Associations Council was created to represent the academic and educational interests of the university and was to be composed of elected representatives from each of the university's 10 colleges. These representatives were to meet in a parliamentary-style body that then elected its own president and vice president. During the 1960s and '70s, students had been unable to gain much success in getting student opinions voiced on academic concerns such as the quality of teaching, student evaluations of instruction, changes in graduation requirements, degrees that were more market-oriented, or the development of courses in areas like African-American or women's studies.

The founders of the bicameral system knew that by creating a body which dealt exclusively with educational and academic affairs, those issues would get more attention than they did under the old unicameral system here and on other campuses.

Since its creation, the CAC has had a number of two-term student body presidents who were also renowned for their academic credentials, with at least 10 former CAC executives during the last 16 years having received the university's top honor for academic excellence for students — the Hancher-Finkbine Medallion.

The CAC established the CAC Book Co-op, University Lecture Service, and it annually funds over 110 student organizations. The CAC authored a number of landmark pieces of pro-student legislation and shepherded them through the Iowa General Assembly. CAC's sister body, the UI Student Senate, was created to cover social, partisan and non-academic affairs. It is popularly elected and holds its annual elections in the spring. Over the years, Student Senate has provided students a strong voice on issues such as international affairs, issues of national policy, civil rights, and social and cultural organizations. It also works with all of the entertainment groups.

Although the UI has two student body presidents, the Collegiate Associations Council and Student Senate are not duplicative. The CAC and the Student Senate have different areas of responsibility. By having two independent branches, students at the UI have a double chance of having at least one effective body. Twice as many students on the UI campus can be involved, take responsibility and perfect their leadership skills for the "real life" that is still ahead of them.

Student government is not the U.S. Senate, and it is not as important as the degree we all hope to receive at the end of our time here. But it is vital to the proper governance of this institution.

The CAC has a long history of success and tradition. The Student Senate serves a vital community need. The bicameral system has been copied throughout the United States because of its reputation for productivity.

UI Student Government is covered heavily by The Daily Iowan when it squabbles. The Washington Post covers the fights between the Congress and the president. Quiet, progressive good government, whether by students or folks in D.C., is not considered newsworthy by today's journalistic standards. But, take my word for it, try to see through the headlines — your student leaders are doing their best to make this campus a better place to get an education.

Daniel Shanes is president of the Collegiate Associations Council.

Mars: It may be there but what isn't?

People get annoyed when you use words that do not come trippingly off the tongue of Oprah Winfrey, but how else than to designate it as a "velocity" would you describe President George Bush's fair-weather call for landing some people on Mars? It isn't quite like the old axiom that the reason you struggle to climb that peak is because it is "there." Mars is certainly there, and one cannot question the integrity of the exploratory imperative. But whereas climbing Mount Everest requires harnessing the energies of a few dozen men and donkeys, reaching Mars is roughly the equivalent of hiring 300,000 men and paying them $1 million each to give us their time and effort to reach Mars.

Nor is it appropriate to say: Mars, so what? For all we know, Mars has on it the greatest of mysteries, the key to political duplicity. Perhaps our astronauts could stuff some of it into a canister, release it in Washington, and cause every political hypocrite to flee its noxious fumes, causing Washington to empty.

And then there is the way station moon. The moon is wonderfully glamorous, and there are those of us who, 20 years ago, paid no attention even to such sideshows as Chappaquiddick, so enthralled were we by Neil Armstrong's spectacular achievement. But the moon — like Mount Everest — is, well, deja vu.

Which leads us to wonder why Bush is planting his romantic garden so far out in space. There are particularities in near-space that are undercultivated. We need more satellites, more (unmanned) space stations to monitor the weather, give us geophysical information, exploit ethereal territory. Why focus on Mars, when well short of it might lie the key to the weather of the Earth?

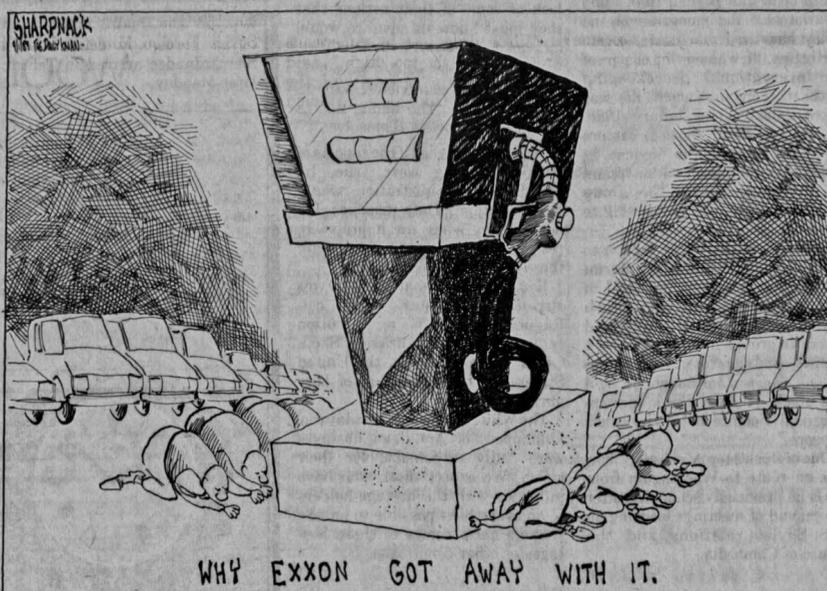

But other bypasses are of primary concern. It is reaching a point not only of economic scandal but of intellectual scandal that we have all but aborted our effort toward nuclear power. They speak of Sen. Joseph McCarthy paralyzing the Foreign Service: Will history give us any analogue more indicative of the power of superstition than that of the anti-nuclear lobbyists over the development of nuclear power?

In 1979 President Jimmy Carter proclaimed that no higher percentage of foreign fuel would ever enter the United States. Foreign oil now serves about 50 percent of our current consumption. Meanwhile, France's electrical needs are 62 percent served by its nuclear generators, which thrum along, no sweat, no Jane Fonda to say it nay. In France, if Jane were to appear in front of a nuclear generator to demand action, the reaction would be not "Down with the generator," but "Down in front."

It is, really, a pity that Bush should feel that presidential trajectories require him to find one planet farther away from the last planet toward which to aim our undeployed astronauts. These gentlemen (and ladies) are genuine heroes, but their obsession with space isn't, or rather shouldn't be, communicable. It isn't a sign of provincialism to say that it makes more sense to spend excess dollars on developing domestic fuel options than on inquiring into the flora and fauna of Mars. It is the kind of common sense that guided Armstrong to proceed as he did on July 20, 1969. Giant steps for mankind sometimes suggest a backward attention on the back yard.

Republican silliness

To the Editor:

The constant accusations from out-of-touch reactionaries that Tom Harkin is "too liberal" were at first mildly amusing, but they are now becoming downright absurd. This absurdity has sunk to banality with the editorial by Jay Casini ["Hollow boast," the DI, July 31].

Tom Harkin has constantly stayed in touch with Iowa during his service in Washington, D.C. His mobile office, started in the 1970s, has been just one of the ways that he keeps his fingers on Iowa's pulse. On issue after issue, from supporting Social Security to cracking down on drug smugglers to defending student aid, Harkin has been a leader in making sure that Iowa has a loud, clear voice in the Capitol.

Maybe instead of talking about the L-word, the other L-word should be discussed — lies. We saw too many lies in the past few years, from HUD, from Oliver North and the White House, and from the last, nasty campaign led by Lee Atwater.

Tauke is the candidate who has become out of touch with Iowa. Voting to cut cost of living increases for Social Security, opposing student aid, using taxpayer money to send anti-abortion propaganda across the state, he has continually gone against Iowans' wills. In 1984, he even said that it was preferable to put Iowa farmers out of work rather than to provide a helping hand during the farm crisis.

The reactionary right are the ones who are out of touch. Real Iowans are dismissing the early negative campaigning as just another stage in Republican silliness.

Grammar lesson

To the Editor:

I disagree with Linda Tevepaugh's claim that DI coverage is slanted toward Israel ["Media bias," Letters, the DI, July 11]. She cites a DI article about Palestinian anti-Israel violence ["Bus forced into ravine in Israel by Palestinian," the DI, July 7]. Instead I notice an opposite bias in the DI and Linda's letter.

When I read the headline for the article I was outraged. The [verb construction of the] DI headline is passive, not active. In everyday print Israelis are the actors of the violence they perform. The sway is not toward Israel; it is protective of the Palestinian. Only naively could I believe the headline is simply poorly written. Like the act it describes, it is anti-Semitic.

Downright false

To the Editor:

Jay Casini's editorial about the stealth bomber ["House infringement," the DI, July 27] is full of misleading, downright false assumptions. According to his view, the Senate action was proper; the House action was improper. In my opinion, they should have killed the Stealth bomber outright. Such an enormous waste of our tax dollars and natural resources on a plane I imagine is worthless. How preposterous to say it can avoid detection by radar. It appears to be a cumbersome vehicle with doubtful maneuverability. There are many worthy needs and uses for our tax dollars. Defense has been oversubscribed for too long.

Bush invites state governors to national education summit

CHICAGO (AP) — President George Bush, declaring that "together we can raise the level of learning in the classrooms of America," on Monday summoned the nation's governors to a September summit on education.

The September 27 to 28 meeting, at an unselected site, will be only the third time in U.S. history that a president has convened the governors to help meet a pressing national problem.

Bush, in a speech overshadowed by the reported hanging of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins by Shiite Moslem kidnappers in Lebanon, also enlisted the governors' aid to combat drugs and crime, and he encouraged them to pursue trade with Poland and Hungary.

Afterward, Bush returned immediately to the White House. He canceled the rest of a two-day Western trip to address conventions of Disabled American Veterans in Las Vegas, Nev., and the Fraternal Order of Police in Oklahoma City.

Bush told the 50 state chief executives: "To cure our nation of illiteracy, drug abuse and crime, we must act in tandem, president with governor, and governor with mayor, up and down the line. In short, we must find our collective will as a nation."

"Today we do not meet in a spirit of immediate crisis. The nation is sound," declared Bush. "But the decline of our educational system, the threat of crime and drugs, the economic dependency of so many — these problems threaten to endanger the very leadership position of America in the next century. "A nation in which a half of our youth is ignorant of geography, in which drugs are rampant, in which a substantial proportion of the population knows little hope — such a nation will not long remain competitive," he said.

These problems, he said, "are issues of our national well-being, even our national security."

"Only twice before have the governors met with the president on an issue of vital national importance. Now there will be a third such conference, an historic meeting on education," said Bush.

The first time was when Teddy Roosevelt brought the governors to the White House "to call for conservation, for an end to the reckless denuding of our forests," Bush said. The second was when Franklin Roosevelt sought the governors' help on how to "stem the financial crisis of the Great Depression."

"Working together, we can find ways to strengthen our schools, to enlarge opportunities and to improve our nation's educational performance," said the president. "Together we can raise the level of learning in the classrooms of America," he said.

Iranian leader plans to follow former policies

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati indicated Monday there will be no dramatic change in foreign policy when President-elect Hashemi Rafsanjani takes over, including in Iran's attitude toward the United States.

Velayati told a news conference Iran would like to resume relations "with all countries with which there is no hurdle in re-establishing ties."

"But the United States is another matter," he said. "The Americans adopted a hostile policy towards us from the very beginning, and they have continued this policy."

Rafsanjani, 54, emerged as Iran's new strongman after the June 3 death of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and won an overwhelming 94.5 percent of votes in Friday's presidential election.

He will become the country's most powerful leader under constitutional changes supported by Iranians in a referendum also held Friday.

Velayati said Rafsanjani "has said many times before that when the United States abandons hostility toward us and returns our confiscated properties, it will have shown its good will."

Rafsanjani, speaker of the 270-member parliament or Majlis, has said U.S. expressions of "good will" would lead to better ties and allow Iran to use its influence to free U.S. hostages believed held by pro-Iranian extremists in Lebanon.

Iran's assets in the United States were frozen, and Washington severed diplomatic ties after Iranian militants stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in September 1981 and held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days.

Most of the frozen assets, Iran claims, are in the form of weapons ordered from the United States and paid for but never delivered after the 1979 ouster of the Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Tehran claims they total $11 billion.

Velayati said bilateral relations will be the main topic when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived in Tehran later Monday.

Despite its official non-aligned policy of "neither East nor West," which Velayati said will continue, Iran's recent confrontations with the West have moved it closer to its northern neighbor, the Soviet Union.

Improved ties between Tehran and Moscow were highlighted by Rafsanjani's trip to Moscow last month, where he signed agreements worth $6 billion, including an arms deal to replenish Iran's depleted military hardware.

U.S administration indicates Israel not to blame for killing

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — The Bush administration indicated Monday it did not hold Israel responsible for the reported execution of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems.

Higgins' captors said they executed him Monday in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of a Moslem cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid.

In Washington, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole suggested Israel should indeed share the blame because of that connection, but Rep. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) said, "The blame has to fall on the terrorists themselves."

Meanwhile, a senior administration official, speaking to reporters aboard the U.S. Air Force jet that was carrying Secretary of State James Baker back to Washington from a conference in Paris, said, "Violence and kidnapping are not the route to peace" in the Middle East.

But when asked if statements both President George Bush and Baker had made deploring kidnapping were intended as criticism of Israel, the official said, "I am not criticizing Israel for what it did. That's not the interpretation."

In any event, the official said, Bush and Baker did not want to "deflect attention from what is the real problem here — the outrageous and uncivilized behavior of the people who have taken these hostages, held them, and now by an unconfirmed report at least, have killed a young American colonel who was engaged in a peacekeeping mission."

"I don't think we ought to divert attention from what is the central issue, which is that, by speculating about something else," said the official, who spoke only on condition that reporters not identify him.

Israel had offered to trade the cleric and other Shiite prisoners for Israelis and Westerners held in Lebanon. But Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, said U.S. Ambassador William Brown on Monday morning underscored to the Israelis the U.S. position on hostage situations — that the government will not negotiate with terrorists.

That communication took place

James Baker

before the Israelis announced their proposal, said Deputy National Security Adviser Robert Gates.

At the White House, Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of Dole's criticism of Israel, "It is fair to say that many people do share the senator's concerns," but he would not elaborate. "We would not make any direct comment" on the Israeli actions, he said.

Dole, speaking on the Senate floor in Washington, bitterly denounced Israel for its kidnapping of the Islamic cleric.

"I hope the Israelis would take another look at their actions, which they must know in advance will endanger American lives," Dole said. "Perhaps a little more responsibility on the part of the Israelis one of these days would be refreshing."

He said the Bush administration "better have some understanding with the Israelis about future conduct that ... endangers the lives of Americans."

While Israel's motives to curb terrorism may be good, their actions have consequences for Americans because terrorists know "the leverage is with the United States," Dole said.

An Israeli official said Obeid, under interrogation, had given names of Higgins' kidnappers as well as details about Hezbollah's other operations and its links to Iran.

Nuclear plants to begin 5-year cleanup plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department proposes to spend as much as $17.2 billion over the next five years to begin cleaning up the nation's nuclear weapons production plants so they meet environmental concerns, department sources said Monday.

Energy Secretary James Watkins is expected to provide a blueprint of the five-year cleanup program in a speech before the National Press Club on Tuesday, including the expected cost estimates for the first five years.

The five-year program, details of which will be announced later this month, is the center of a long-term plan to restore confidence in the weapons plants and their operation.

The department has said in the past that the overall cleanup bill for the 17 plants in a dozen states likely will exceed $90 billion.

Since Watkins became head of the department last March, he has had a team of senior aides develop a plan aimed at correcting decades of environmental and safety neglect at the weapons plants.

Initial cleanup cost estimates over the next five years submitted to Watkins are about $2.4 billion during the first year and as much as $3.7 billion a year during the subsequent four years, according to department sources.

The sources spoke on the condition they not be identified by name. Watkins' estimates were initially reported Monday by The Washington Post based on an interview with the secretary.

A series of incidents at some of the weapons plants has raised serious health and safety questions. Watkins has said past operation of the plants has failed to ensure the protection of the environment and public health and that public confidence in the program has eroded badly.

Meanwhile, the department announced Monday that it has reached agreement with Westinghouse Electric Corp. on a joint approach in setting a schedule for restarting production reactors at Savannah River, the country's largest nuclear weapons plant.

Westinghouse operates the facility in South Carolina.

The site's three reactors have been shut down for more than a year because of environmental and safety concerns. The reactors produce tritium, a radioactive form of hydrogen used in atomic warheads.

Department officials declined comment on a report in The New York Times that Westinghouse had estimated the cost of repairing and restarting the three reactors would be as much as $1.66 billion, or more than four times what had been previously estimated.

Survey: 'Casual' drug use in U.S. has dropped by 37%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials said Monday a new drug-abuse survey shows that efforts to reduce demand have cut sharply the number of casual users, but cocaine and crack addiction is growing.

The 1988 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse found a 37-percent drop from a 1985 survey in the number of people who said they had used marijuana, cocaine or other illicit drugs in the previous month.

The survey also showed the number of people who said they had used an illegal drug during the previous year fell by 25 percent over the three years.

"We are making some real progress in this war," said William Bennett, director of federal drug control policy. "People who have been saying all is lost, we can't win, let's legalize (drugs), have never been more wrong."

"Drugs are cheap and they are available almost everywhere, yet millions of Americans who once used them regularly appear now to have given them up altogether. This is primarily a triumph of changed attitudes," he said.

However, the survey also found that the number of heavy cocaine users, including those using the highly addictive form of the drug known as crack, rose sharply between 1985 and 1988 — by 33 percent for those using it once a week or more and by 19 percent for daily and almost-daily users.

Though casual cocaine use dropped sharply overall — by 50 percent for previous-month use — the survey found that among blacks and Hispanics the numbers did not change significantly.

According to the survey, 72 million Americans — 37 percent of the population — had tried at least one illicit drug in their lifetimes.

"We are making some real progress in this war." — William Bennett

"Illicit drug use by Americans remains much too high," said Louis Sullivan, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services. But, he added, "attitudes are changing."

Casual users are "the ones who serve as a base for cocaine and crack addicts," he said. "So if we can reduce the number of casual users, in time we will also influence the number of addicts."

Sullivan and Bennett both said more resources will be needed to continue current drug awareness efforts as well as bolster drug treatment programs, though they declined to say how much money should be directed to these areas.

The survey covers the population age 12 and older living in households in the 48 contiguous states. The results are based on personal interviews and written questions answered by 8,814 people — half of whom were white, while the other half was evenly split between blacks and Hispanics.

The survey does not include homeless people, people living in military installations, dormitories and institutions such as hospitals and prisons and does not cover heroin use.

The survey, conducted last fall, is the ninth in a series that began in 1971. It is sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, an HHS agency.

Hurricane Chantal bears down on coast

MIAMI — Chantal became the first hurricane of the Atlantic season Monday as it bore down on Texas and Louisiana, hampering efforts to rescue the crew of a capsized oil rig and forcing evacuation of a coastal island.

The storm had strengthened rapidly after growing early Monday from a tropical depression to a tropical storm. It had a maximum sustained wind speed of 65 mph in early afternoon and increased to 75 mph, one mph over the threshold for reclassifying a tropical storm a hurricane, by 6 p.m. EDT.

Hurricane warnings were posted from Freeport, Texas, to Morgan City, La.

"It's not going to be a major hurricane, but there will be beach erosion, tides 10 feet above normal in some places and 10 to 15 inches of rain over Mississippi, Louisiana and eastern Texas," said Todd Kimberlain of the National Hurricane Center.

The same area was deluged in late June by Tropical Storm Allison.

Investigators suggest Pierce aide lied

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators suggested on Monday that a former top federal housing official, who now refuses to testify, lied to Congress under oath two years ago.

Reps. Tom Lantos (D-Calif.) and Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) both brought up the August 1987 testimony of Deborah Gore Dean, who held wide but unofficial authority as executive assistant to former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr.

She told a Senate panel — including then Sen. William Proxmire, who testified before Lantos' House subcommittee on Monday — that she did not approve projects on her own, using a mechanical device to sign her boss' name.

Japanese fail to declare billions in income

TOKYO — Independent businesses did not report $5.17 billion in income in fiscal 1987, Japan's National Tax Administration Agency reported Monday.

The agency investigated 168,926 people, including doctors, lawyers and other independent business owners, and discovered 95.8 percent had reported their incomes incorrectly, either by mistake or to try to evade paying taxes, the report said.

The undeclared earnings discovered by the agency were 13.7 percent larger than in fiscal 1986, the agency said. Fiscal 1987 ended on March 31, 1988.

It said the agency levied a record $1.36 billion in penalty fines, up 18.4 percent from 1986.

Owners of pinball parlors topped the 1987 list of tax evaders with an average $270,000 in unreported income, followed by hospital owners, with an average $115,000, and real estate businesses, with $93,000, the agency said.

Couple gives birth in blue Subaru — again

MERRIMACK, N.H. — Maybe it's the color or the make, but two of Athena and Tom Chisholm's three children have been born in blue Subarus.

Sunday morning Athena Chisholm told her husband it was time to go to the hospital in Manchester.

But the drive from Merrimack was interrupted two miles from home with an urgent stop by the road in Bedford and the arrival of a 7-pound, 10-ounce daughter in the front seat of their blue 1987 Subaru.

"The baby was sliding out. All I could do was catch her," Chisholm said.

It was deja vu for the couple, who 2½ years ago delivered a son in the back of their old blue Subaru.

Their daughter, yet to be named, has two older brothers, Christopher, 6, and Paul, the first Subaru arrival.

Senate approves military budget, considers change in NATO ratio

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate weighed amendments Monday requiring President George Bush to negotiate with Japan on shouldering a larger share of the defense burden while the House approved an $8.7 billion military construction budget.

"There can be no free lunches and no free rides," said Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in introducing the measures as the chamber resumed consideration of the defense budget for the fiscal year beginning October 1.

Under the first amendment, prompted by reports that U.S. allies plan significant cuts in their forces, a ceiling would be placed on the ratio of U.S. forces stationed in Europe to other NATO forces in Europe.

The measure, according to Nunn, would strengthen the NATO position in conventional arms reduction talks with the Warsaw Pact nations and dissuade U.S. allies from unilateral reductions before an agreement is reached.

Nunn did not say immediately what numerical ratio he thought appropriate.

The amendment dealing with Japan calls on the Asian nation to increase its security and foreign aid program and requires Bush to negotiate an agreement "providing for complete offset by Japan of the costs of deploying U.S. forces in defense of Japan."

Japan currently spends a little more than 1 percent of its gross national product on defense, while the United States spends about 6 percent. Japan contributes about $2 billion — 40 percent of the total U.S. cost — for American troops stationed there, Nunn said.

Votes on the measures were expected on Tuesday. In the House, the Democratic-controlled chamber approved a bill providing $8.7 billion for military construction projects and for maintenance and construction of housing for service personnel. The vote was 382-29.

The bill was approved without controversy after a group of lawmakers backed away from their plan to exempt some military bases scheduled to be closed under the government's overall base consolidation plan.

Although several argued that some base closings would cost, rather than save the government money, the White House had threatened to veto the bill if it contained such provisions.

"We are willing to wait until we get the full figures from the General Accounting Office," said Rep. John Murtha (D-Pa.), chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee.

The section of the bill which required General Accounting Office review of certain projects before they could be closed was eliminated from the bill by a point of order.

Although $262.7 million below the level approved for the current fiscal year, the bill contains $500 million toward implementing the recommendations of the base closing commission in the year beginning October 1.

The closings, which promise long-term savings, are expected to cost more than $4 billion over the next few years.

The Senate also considered a non-binding resolution urging the United States and South Korea to discuss the possibility of some reductions of U.S. forces from South Korea and asking the president to prepare a five-year plan on U.S. military presence in the Asian nation.

Kiszczak named as Polish prime minister

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party on Monday named Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, the police minister who negotiated Solidarity's legalization, as its candidate to lead the next government as prime minister.

Shoppers braced for soaring food costs scheduled to begin today under a plan to end price controls that the independent trade union has warned could cause social tensions.

Communist legislators Monday accepted the recommendation of the party Central Committee and endorsed Kiszczak after he answered questions from them on his plans for the government, the state news agency reported.

Newly appointed party First Secretary Mieczyslaw Rakowski, the outgoing prime minister, attended the caucus and recommended Kiszczak.

Interior minister since 1981, Kiszczak is known as a loyalist to President Wojciech Jaruzelski and as the co-chairman with Lech Walesa of this year's talks that resulted in legalizing Solidarity after a seven-year ban and the holding of Poland's freest elections since World War II.

The Sejm, or parliament, was to discuss the topic of prime minister today. Kiszczak's nomination must be formally submitted by Jaruzelski.

Smiling and looking confident,

Czeslaw Kiszczak

Wojciech Jaruzelski

Kiszczak told The Associated Press that if approved, he is not sure how long it would take to form a government.

"It is not an easy task," he said. "You have to satisfy many sides. It may be a week or two."

Deputy Bronislaw Geremek, leader of the Solidarity lawmakers in parliament, said the opposition would vote against Kiszczak or abstain.

Solidarity lawmakers came under sharp criticism from followers for allowing Jaruzelski, Rakowski's predecessor as party leader, to become president by only the bare majority of National Assembly votes needed July 19.

"We cannot vote for him," Geremek said of Kiszczak. But he added the communist coalition would have enough votes to elect him without Solidarity.

The coalition has a 299-161 advantage over Solidarity in the 460-member Sejm. Under a new political arrangement in Poland, the Communist Party with 173 deputies lacks enough votes to elect Kiszczak by itself and needs at least some of the 76 votes of its main coalition partner, the United Peasant Party.

Kiszczak met with Peasant Party lawmakers Monday and said afterward he was "satisfied." There was no immediate announcement that the increasingly independent party had endorsed his candidacy.

Nervous consumers lined up for hours Monday to buy meat, sugar and other basic goods before price controls are lifted today and costs soar.

"It's such a mess that one is really afraid to think what will happen next," said a Wroclaw shopper interviewed by state television.

The controversial "marketization" program, pushed by Rakowski and endorsed by the party, is designed to fight widespread food shortages by introducing free-market mechanisms.

Poland's mainly private farmers, who have cut back on profitless meat and grain sales to the state, are to be freed to sell their produce to whomever they want at whatever prices they can negotiate, as an incentive to increase production.

Government food subsidies are to remain stable, however, and state-owned stores and food processors are supposed to pass their added purchasing costs on to consumers.

Politburo member Wladyslaw Baka, a critic of the plan, said the plan could raise food prices 300 percent to 400 percent and turn the public against needed reforms.

Forest fires force visitors to evacuate

The Associated Press

The Army was called out Monday to help battle fires raging out of control on thousands of acres in the West, and crews set a 1,000-acre backfire in an attempt to halt a California blaze that destroyed seven homes.

National Guardsmen already were on duty in Idaho and Oregon.

Residents were allowed to return to Lowman, Idaho, a small resort town that was largely destroyed by a firestorm that had charred 10,000 acres.

"My husband left in shorts and no shirt," said 70-year-old Daisy Oliver, whose mobile home at Lowman was reduced to blackened metal scrap. "We didn't get anything, just what we had on our backs. . . I don't know where we'll go from here."

Hundreds of fires, most started by lightning last week, had blackened more than 110,000 acres in five states since Wednesday.

The weather improved in Oregon with lower wind and temperatures and a forecast of scattered showers, but firefighters in hard-hit Idaho faced temperatures in the 90s, low humidity and wind gusting to 30 mph.

"We're in for a long haul," said Dave Olson of the Payette National Forest where more than 200 fires burned in central Idaho. "It's getting serious, and it's getting tough to deal with these fires."

More than 9,700 firefighters manned the lines on the two-dozen biggest blazes in Idaho, California and Oregon. Washington state had an 850-acre fire, and Montana had several small fires.

That meant staffpower in the West was almost completely mobilized, and managers at the Boise (Idaho) Interagency Fire Center, the nation's fire command post, called on the Army and crews from other regions for help.

Hundreds of firefighters were being flown to the command center from Alaska, the East, Southeast and Southwest, spokesman Ron Smith said. And soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., were sent to Boise for training before being sent to the fire lines.

Firefighters set off a 1,000-acre backfire Monday near Auberry, Calif., in an effort to tame the last section of an arson fire that burned seven homes in the central Sierra Nevada and forced evacuation of 2,500 people.

There were nearly 2,000 personnel at the 11,350-acre blaze, dubbed the Powerhouse fire, said U.S. Forest spokeswoman Margie Clack.

Residents of Auberry, some 30 miles east of Fresno, were allowed to return home Sunday, but people who live closer to active parts of the fire were told to remain away at least one more day.

"We're not letting folks back in homes in those areas due to the intense buildup of smoke in the area and for public safety since there is lots of firefighting equipment moving on those roads," Clack said.

Residents began to return Monday to Lowman, Idaho, about 70 miles northeast of Boise.

Twenty-five structures in the town, which has a year-round population of about 15 but which attracts summer visitors from Boise, were destroyed.

Raveling hires former Iowa aide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scott Howard, who served as an assistant coach under George Raveling at Iowa, has been named as an assistant to Raveling at Southern Cal, the school announced Monday.

Howard, 28, rejoins Raveling after one-year assignments at Southern Illinois (1987-88) and Drake (1988-89).

Howard spent four seasons at Iowa as a graduate assistant (1983-85) and a volunteer assistant (1985-87). He served under both Raveling and current Iowa coach Tom Davis.

Expos complete Langston deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Seattle sent right-hander Mike Campbell to Montreal on Monday, completing the May 25 trade for Mark Langston. The Expos optioned the 25-year-old Campbell to Indianapolis of the Class AAA American Association.

In the original trade, Seattle sent Langston to the Expos for pitchers Randy Johnson, Gene Harris and Brian Holman and were promised a player to be named later.

Campbell began the season with the Mariners and was optioned to Class AAA Calgary on April 27 after going 1-2 in five starts. He was 6-5 with a 4.13 earned-run average in 16 starts with Calgary.

He made his major-league debut in July 1987 and is 8-16 with a 5.74 ERA in 34 major-league appearances. He was Seattle's first-round selection and the seventh overall pick in the June 1985 amateur draft.

Brown reduces Bell's suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays had his suspension reduced from three to two games after a meeting Monday with American League president Bobby Brown.

The outfielder was originally suspended for three games for making contact with umpire Tim Welke during a game with Oakland on June 24. The suspension takes effect for tonight's game against the New York Yankees.

"It's no big deal," Bell said before the Blue Jays played the Yankees Monday night. "It's two games; that's OK."

Leonard, Duran settle on sight

NEW YORK (AP) — The Mirage became a reality Monday as the site for the third Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran fight because of the showman in Leonard.

The new $630 million hotel-casino on the Las Vegas Strip, which is nearing completion, beat out Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, N.J., for the Dec. 7 bout.

Leonard's attorney, Mike Trainer, confirmed the decision in a telephone interview from his office in Bethesda, Md.

"Both properties offered in excess of $8 million," said Trainer, who discussed the offers with Leonard Monday morning. "The money was about the same."

"It came down to intangibles. I'm sure, in part, Ray liked the idea of opening this new hotel. ... I understand they have been negotiating with Michael Jackson to get him to open."

Trainer's Victory Promotions will co-promote with Bob Arum's Top Rank, Inc.

Hockey prospect dies

MONTREAL (AP) — Neil Carnes, one of the Montreal Canadiens' top junior prospects, died Sunday in a motorcycle accident in Plymouth, Mich., the team said Monday.

Carnes, 19, died from injuries sustained in the accident on Saturday night. The club gave no details of the accident.

The Farmington, Mich., native had 33 points in 31 games last season for the champion Laval Titans of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League. He was also selected to the all-star team at the Memorial Cup tournament last May in Saskatoon.

Carnes had spent the previous two seasons with Verdun of the Quebec League, but walked out on the last-place team before being dealt to Laval.

The 5-foot-9, 184-pound center was Montreal's third pick, 46th overall, in the 1988 Entry Draft.

The Supreme Court, in a case involving Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian and NCAA attempts to suspend him, ruled in December that courts should not interfere with discipline in private associations. Some legal experts have suggested that Nadel made the decision to improve his chances for re-election in 1990.

Holschuh is an appointed judge with a life term.

Baseball's lawyers accused Rose of talking at having his case decided in any court "other than one which is most subject to the influence of local pressures produced by his fame, notoriety and close identification with the city of Cincinnati."

Rose's lawyers accused baseball of trying to get a more favorable court by going to a federal judge.

The Reds have remained officially neutral. But the team's standing in the lawsuit will be one of the main determining factors in Holschuh's decision.

NFL

Cincinnati Bengals
 Brian Blados is making the most of his chance to win a starting job at right tackle.
 Blados got the opening when starter Joe Walter went down at the end of last season and is making the Bengals' coaching staff reconsider his status as a fill-in.
 "I anticipate that he will be our right tackle all year," said Jim McNally, the Bengals' offensive line coach. "When Joe comes back, we'll just have to deal with that at that time. I think Brian is good enough to be a starter, even with Joe back."
Detroit Lions
 Linebacker Jimmy Williams is still a Lion — for the time being.
 Williams, an eight-year veteran, reported to training camp Monday after missing the first two weeks of camp while the Lions tried to accommodate his desire to be traded. But a deal couldn't be worked out and Williams obeyed coach Wayne Fontes' order Williams to report.
Chicago Bears
 The Bears settled two of their contract hassles. William Perry, who signed what he said was a three-year contract Sunday night, began workouts Monday. Safety Shaun Gayle, another holdout, agreed to terms and is expected to be in uniform on Tuesday.

 Defensive tackle Steve McMichael reported to camp Thursday, but left Saturday after failing to convince management to renegotiate his deal. Cornerback Donnell Woolford and defensive end Trace Armstrong, the team's two first-round draft picks, were still talking.
Buffalo Bills
 Center Kent Hull, linebacker Darryl Talley and cornerback Derrick Burroughs are still unsigned and haven't reported. Hull reportedly is close to a settlement, but Talley and Burroughs still are not close to signing, though Talley said he's optimistic an agreement will be reached soon.
Cleveland Browns
 Offensive tackle Cody Risien had some small bone chips removed from his left elbow in arthroscopic surgery at the Cleveland Clinic. He stayed behind while the Browns left for London to play Philadelphia in the American Bowl on Sunday and will miss two or three preseason games because of the injury.

Kansas City Chiefs
 Nose tackle Mike Stensrud, an 11-year veteran, signed a one-year contract Monday. To make room, the Chiefs waived Jerome Sally, a veteran nose tackle who was cut by Indianapolis last year and played in the final three games for Kansas City.
Denver Broncos
 Cornerback Jeremiah Castille contacted the Broncos Monday and said he wants to come back. Castille, apparently upset at being left unprotected in February, did not participate in the team's mini-camp in May or in off-season workouts. He also refused to return phone calls from team officials inquiring of his whereabouts and intentions.
 Coach Dan Reeves said he would welcome Castille but could not promise him a starting job.
Phoenix Cardinals
 Guard Joe Bostic, who reinjured his left knee in a training camp drill, will undergo surgery Tuesday and could be out for the entire season. The 11-year veteran missed the final six games last season with a knee injury and was hurt again in a pass-blocking drill Sunday. If the Cardinals put Bostic on injured reserve prior to the start of the season, he could not be activated.

Indianapolis Colts
 Indianapolis is looking for offensive linemen. The Colts have only nine in camp and coach Ron Meyer said the Colts are checking the waiver wire and may try to make some trades. Two veterans, Ben Utt and Brian Baldinger, are without contracts and another starter, tackle Kevin Call, left camp last Friday and said he may retire.
New York Giants
 The Giants are also playing musical linemen, and the odd man out is Eric Moore, last year's No. 1 draft pick. Moore was demoted to backup left tackle Monday behind Jumbo Elliott, the man picked behind him in 1988. Under the new setup, Elliott and Doug Riesenbreg are the tackles, William Roberts and Damian Johnson are the guards and Bart Oates will start at center if and when he signs a contract.

Bon Jovi discusses his views on Iowa, obsessed admirers

Brian Jones
The Daily Iowan

When the phone rang, I knew it was... HIM. I knew, too, what he'd be saying. "Lay your hands on me," he'd say "Huh?" I'd reply "I'll be there for you," he'd say. Yessir, those five words he'd swear to me. He didn't mean to miss my birthday (baby). And I thought he was never gonna say good-bye.

OK, it was nothing like that. This, then, is what it was:

On Omaha, where the man they call Bon Jovi was calling from: "It's hot." I told him that in fact Iowa City was rather cool this day, for a day in late July, that is. "Oh yeah, man, it's hot here," was his reply.

Bon Jovi on playing Russia. The story behind the story: "We're going to Russia, unbelievably. We're going to Russia next week to headline the "Moscow Music Peace Festival," as they're calling it. The Russian band Gorky Park came over to Jersey, they're looking for help, they call us, and we offer to help. And in the meantime they ask if we'd like to come to Russia and of course we said, 'Yeah!', winking at them the whole time, thinking 'Yeah, right, sure,' not ever thinking that we actually would go there."

Bon Jovi did not mention whether he viewed this musical exchange program as a possible prelude to a diplomatic career.

Bon Jovi on releasing "New Jersey" in Russia: "If there's one thing when this is over, said and done, then I can look back and say that I did something that the Beatles and the Stones and the Zeppelins never did. This is it."

Bon Jovi on playing Iowa twice in four months: "Hey, I dig Iowa, man. There's nothing wrong with Iowa. It's cool."

Bon Jovi on the "Letter to Jon About a Dead Adolescent, Victim of an Auto Crash, Clutching a Bon Jovi Tape To His Now-Silent Chest" hoax perpetrated on him in Iowa City, prompting Jon to dedicate "Never Say Goodbye" to the departed figment of some twisted individual's imagination (also, the man Bon Jovi on fan obsession): "It was a hoax? That's a real sin. I think it's sick, because to me, being inside it looking out, it's very much 'Hey, I'm an entertainer, I enjoy my work, end of story.' I can go home and sleep at night. I don't think that I walk on water. But folks who don't know anything about entertainment, they think that you're on TV, and if they shut you off, you still live inside the TV. And then it can become obsession, because all they see is you with TV lights on you and they don't realize that you go home and go to sleep at night and you eat your dinner and you get a cold and you're miserable like anyone else. It's really unfortunate that I played a song for somebody and maybe said a prayer at the end of the night for this kid and then found out it's a hoax... geez, that's too bad 'cause maybe next time and it really happens, I might think twice about doing something for the family."

"You've got to know what Bon Jovi's about or you've been under a rock. Compared to Sheena Easton, I'm as heavy as you get. Compared to Metallica, maybe it is a little light. But I never wanted to be Metallica or Sheena Easton."

Bon Jovi on being bigger than God: "I'm sure that when those guys in Sonic Youth write their songs, those are the best songs they think they've ever written. Well so do I. I write my songs and I say the same thing. It just happens that I grew up listening to a radio, and so my tastes are on the radio. But that doesn't mean that I write a song because I think it's gonna be a number one hit single."

Bon Jovi on being called "Metal Lite": "If this was 1984, when our first record came out and you said 'Bon Jovi is "fill in the blank" 'cause you wouldn't know if we were Twisted Sister or the Thompson Twins that's one thing. Now five years down the road and 25 million records later, we're just us already. You've got to know what we're about or you've been under a rock. Compared to Sheena Easton, I'm as heavy as you get. Compared to Metallica, maybe it is a little light. But I never wanted to be Metallica or Sheena Easton."

Bon Jovi on middle-aged-and-beyond men coveting before an admiring public for obscene monetary compensation: "I'm buying a Stones ticket as soon as I can. If I have the opportunity, I'll see the Stones. I think that the Who and the Stones are still gonna kick serious ass. I don't doubt for a moment that Jagger is makin' sure that he kicks my ass, and that's just fine, because all I ever wanted to be was Mick Jagger. He must be somewhat aware that we exist, and he's saying 'I've gotta be better than all those young kids out there,' and I'm sure that he will be."

Bon Jovi on the fact that he will someday be middle-aged-and-beyond: "I wouldn't do it if I didn't just live for that rush of getting out there. I have a hard time understanding how guys went from headlining stadiums to going back to clubs. Now going back to a club 'cause you want to and going back 'cause you have to are two different stories, and I don't think that I want to drag the band's name into the mud and be playing clubs 'cause I gotta pay the rent. I'd rather get a day job."

The underlying philosophy of Jon Bon Jovi: "Why bitch and moan about fulfilling the dream that you set out to accomplish as a kid? There couldn't be anything better than that."

The Bon Jovi Experience will be kicking some serious ass Wednesday night at Cedar Rapids' Five Seasons Center. The dreadful Skid Row will also appear.

Enchantress firmly yours - and mine

Jennifer Weglar
The Daily Iowan

Summer is, we all know, the best time to read some really good books. But, alas, summer is almost over and NAL — that's New American Library library to you, mister — hasn't sent us any really good books. But they have sent us some books, and aren't some books better than none? One of these literary endeavors to be anticipated (already in major bookstore chains near you) is:

Books

"Enchantress Mine" — Bertrice Small — Signet Novel

However unfortunate her first name, Bertrice Small has carved quite a niche for herself in the genre of historical romance — or was it romantic history? — with such titles as "Love Wild and Fair" and "Skye O'Malley." Her newest mass-market publication was first published as a trade paperback in 1987. It's sure to sell quite well; the cover artwork, with its depiction of the beautiful enchantress (billowing red — nay, russet hair) and her various lovers, is sure to lure quite a few takers. There is an especially tasteful representation of our enchantress draped in a lush pelt. Unfortunately, only the book's title is embossed.

"Enchantress Mine" is a rather convoluted tale, focusing on beautiful, sweet, loving and virginal Mairin. Early in life, she is scarred by the thoughtless words of her stepmother: "You are not your father's heiress, you brat! ... You are nothing but his bastard! His get upon the filthy body of some savage Irish whore!" It is perhaps this trauma that prevents Mairin from conversing in anything but the most stilted language. Of course, this is 1056, and Mairin is a dead baron's daughter, and nothing can make a pre-Norman-conquest-era tale more authentic than lots of "thee" and "nay" and "You are doomed, madame."

Banished from her lands by the stepmother, Mairin first is sold to a slave merchant: "You, Ivo, take the wench to the slaver!" Taken from Brittany to London, she is purchased by a good Saxon lord (as opposed to an evil Norman duke, I suppose) who takes her to his home, the unpronounceable Aelfleah, which is not much better than, say, Alewife and is always italicized, though God knows why. There, the good Saxons Aldwine and Eada take her in as their own child.

Life starts spicing up for Mairin, and before you know it, she is in Constantinople to marry Prince Basil. But before the marriage is truly consummated — darn the luck! — Basil is killed by his former lover, a man. Mairin later explains this to her true love: "The people of Byzantium are different from us in some of their manners and ways" — it's amazing the places one can find social commentary relevant even to our own times!

But this does not tear down the resolute spirit or the high, firm breasts of our enchantress. She is soon wooed by "the Viking whose tragic love for her would never be fulfilled," one Eric Longsword, who most rakishly tells her: "You ride like a Valkyrie and 'I will have you, or no man will! You are mine!" It is grudgingly admitted that, for whatever her flaws as a writer of come-on lines, Small does have a flair for naming her characters in a most, ah, fitting manner. For her part, Mairin's having none of his long sword. And yes, the word "sheath" is used quite freely.

With all the lustings, betrayals and enchantings going on, one would think that historical happenings would take a back seat. Not so, unbeliever! Haley's Comet plays a large role at the bottom of page 174 and the top of 175. There are some references to the Danelaw and Gryffydd, the King of Cymru. But most important is the Norman Conquest of England, which precipitates the arrival of Josselin de Combourg — Mairin's own true love! — a man given to exclaiming, in the heights of passion, "Ride me, enchantress mine!" (Trumpets aloft, footmen!)

But, ho! To say such more would spoil the romance, and perhaps even dissuade you from reading "Enchantress Mine." And we wouldn't want to spoil it for you. We were enchanted; now you get to be enchanted.

'Obscene' art could lose federal funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Directors of two arts centers are protesting the potential loss of $250,000 in annual federal grants if a Senate-passed measure banning government aid for works judged obscene becomes law.

The Institute for Contemporary Art in Philadelphia said it could lose about $175,000 for each of the next five years because it organized a controversial exhibit by Robert Mapplethorpe, who died of AIDS earlier this year.

Spokeswoman Nancy Burd said a $500,000 federal grant to aid in the institute's move to a new building next year at the University of Pennsylvania may also be threatened.

Last week's Senate action also places in jeopardy a $75,000 annual National Endowment for the Arts grant that helps support an artist fellowship program at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem, N.C.

The center was targeted by the measure's sponsor, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., because it used federal funds to sponsor a photo exhibition by Andres Serrano that included a picture of a crucifix submerged in a container of the artist's urine.

Both centers are seeking to muster support against the proposed federal-funding ban which would last five years.

"Both these institutions are really being called for punishment for doing our job, doing exactly what we're supposed to do," Ted Potter, director of the North Carolina center, said in an interview.

He described the centers' mandate as "challenging people's way of looking and seeing and thinking about critical issues of art, culture and society."

The funding-ban amendment was tacked on to a $171 million NEA appropriation approved by the Senate on Wednesday. It would bar NEA support for "obscene and indecent materials, including but not limited to depictions of sadomasochism, homoeroticism, the exploitation of children or individuals engaged in sex acts..."

It will be up to a House-Senate conference committee to determine whether the amendment should remain in the final bill passed by Congress.

Helms said cutting off grants to the Pennsylvania and North Carolina centers would "certainly prevent them missing federal funds for the next five years."

But supporters of the Philadelphia institute argued that it had followed NEA guidelines.

"Obolomov" (Nikita Mikhalkov, 1980) — 6:45 p.m.
"Double Indemnity" (Billy Wilder, 1944) — 9:15 p.m.

Television

Just when you thought there was nothing that could break the depression of the humidity, finals, cleaning and moving, along comes a night of cable viewing that can only be described as UPLIFTING:

First let your heart soar with joy as you watch Ralph Macchio strapped into a hospital bed, his forever prepubescent body covered in first-degree burns in Coppola's "The Outsiders" (7 p.m., WGN). Though thick with such beef by-products as Patrick Swayze, Rob "Mr. F-Stop" Lowe, Tom Cruise and Matt Dillon (the surly youth-actor, not the Dodge City lawman), the film is actually quite good.

Meanwhile, over in Turner-ville, current headlines meet TV-movie hambones as William Shatner, Eddie Albert and Adrienne Barbeau convey the horror of commercial air-flight in the blunt-but-effectively-titled "Crash" (7:05 p.m., WTBS). The hope of seeing just two of these three actors sucked through a broken portal by sudden decompression is probably enough to guarantee strong ratings.

Finally there comes the true jewel of the evening. Those Bruce Willis-haters (and they are no doubt legion) who stayed away from "Die Hard" in the theaters and video shops just on general principles can now catch it on cable (8 p.m., HBO). No fooling — it is flat out the most intensely perfect, stunningly effective action film in many years. Really.

Charlie Hustle can't outrun federal courts

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Pete Rose lost his home-court advantage Monday in his battle against gambling allegations with baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh refused to return Rose's case to Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, which had blocked Giamatti from deciding whether the Cincinnati manager had bet on baseball.

Lawyers for Rose have argued that Giamatti has pre-judged their client and have asked that the courts, not the commissioner, decide if Rose bet on baseball.

Baseball wanted the case heard in federal court, where judges have upheld the commissioner's broad powers in previous legal challenges. Rose asked that the matter be kept in the local court, where Judge Norbert A. Nadel has shown a willingness to go into what he termed "uncharted waters" in making his decisions.

Holschuh certified the case for an immediate appeal, which is expected from Rose's lawyers.

"It's certainly a victory that puts the case in the right court," said

Louis L. Hoynes Jr., baseball's primary lawyer. "One hopes that we can dispose of the case now."

Giamatti issued a statement in New York saying, "I am gratified by this decision and I look forward to the next steps."

There was no immediate comment from Rose's lawyers.

Holschuh's decision takes the case away from Nadel and out of Rose's hometown of Cincinnati.

Nadel has agreed with Rose that Giamatti has pre-judged him as guilty. The judge issued a temporary restraining order on June 25 preventing Giamatti from holding a hearing on allegations that Rose bet on his team, an offense that could get him banned from baseball for life.

Baseball agreed that while appealing the case it would not take action against the Reds manager.

In his ruling on Monday, Holschuh extended until Aug. 14 Rose's protection against firing or suspension over the gambling allegations. The protection against firing has become more of an issue recently as the Reds have fallen from first to fifth place in the National League West.

Holschuh's decision may be appealed to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. Unless the appeals court intervenes, Holschuh will hold a hearing Aug. 14 for a preliminary injunction that could extend Rose's protections indefinitely.

The key issue in the case before Holschuh was whether the dispute is between Rose and the Reds or between Rose and baseball. If he had found that it was between Rose and the Reds — two Ohio based entities — the case would have remained in a state court.

In his decision, Holschuh concluded that the major dispute was between Giamatti — who lives in another state — and Rose. The judge said the Reds "are at best nominal parties in this controversy."

A dispute between residents of different states is heard in federal court. Nadel was criticized by some legal scholars for his unprecedented decision, which prevented the commissioner from doing anything with Rose's case.

Bird ends one-day hiatus

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Larry Bird, who was expected to miss from four to six weeks after fracturing a bone in his lower back over the weekend, made a stiff, gingerly return to the basketball court Monday, defying the injury and even surprising his former coach.

K.C. Jones, the Celtics' coach from 1984-88 and the team's current vice president of basketball operations, said he was watching the scrimmage at Brandeis University, when the 32-year-old Bird, the three-time NBA most valuable player, came walking down the court.

"I did a double-take," Jones said after practice at the Celtics' summer camp. "I see Larry come up in a shirt and a shorts. I was very curious. (Coach) Jimmy (Rodgers) was surprised. He was out there, fooling around with the shooting and he mentioned he would like to try. He's got some pain on the bruise area."

On Saturday night, Bird was under the basket when he fell hard in a freak collision with teammate Kelvin Upshaw that stunned teammates and spectators. He was just five minutes into the first workout for rookies, free agents and five veterans.

The diagnosis was a tiny fractured bone in his lower back. The estimate then was that Bird wouldn't see action again for four to six weeks.

But Jones said the decision whether to rest or play was Bird's along with the team trainer and coaching staff.

"If he wants to go, it's that simple," Jones said. "It's not like we're trying to put anything over on the press..."

Bird played in all seven games, seeing action for about half of each.

"He moved rather gingerly," Jones said. "He shot below average, he's just testing..."

"It's just something we have an eye on. He knows how he feels, and that's the coaching staff's approach. If he feels good enough to get out there, then he can go."

After surgery on both heels last Nov. 19, Bird saw action in just six games last season.

With Bird, the Celtics won the NBA title in 1986, reached the finals in 1987 and made it to the Eastern Conference finals in 1988. Without him, they clinched a play-off berth on the last day of last season, finished with their worst record in 10 years and were swept in three games by Detroit in the first round of the playoffs.

The Celtics' regular season begins Nov. 3.

Cleveland Browns running back Kevin Mack, above, and Chicago Bears lineman William "Refrigerator" Perry do light drills during NFL workouts Monday. Mack, recently arrested on a drug-related charge was in London for the Browns exhibition game with the Philadelphia Eagles, while Perry entered his first practice in Plateville, Wis., since signing a new contract.

Preseason NFL rosters solidify for exhibitions

(AP) — The New Orleans Saints don't play their first exhibition game until August 12. If their practices are any indication, they're ready to play now.

Coach Jim Mora had to ask his veterans to ease up a bit Monday to avoid getting someone hurt.

"I noticed during practice Sunday and then we looked at the tape last night, where it seemed like guys were almost too intense. There were some close calls from an injury standpoint," Mora said. "They were really too eager, which is sometimes the case."

"We talked to them today about toning things down a bit. It was really a good practice. The intensity level was fine. They never started dragging. The intensity level was good, but not too much."

The Saints play their exhibition opener a week from Saturday against Indianapolis at the Superdome.

Former Louisiana State tight end Mitch Andrews signed as a free agent and will practice Tuesday. First-round draft choice Wayne Martin and veterans Morten Andersen, Jumpy Geathers, Joel Hilgenberg and Pat Swilling are still unsigned.

Atlanta Falcons

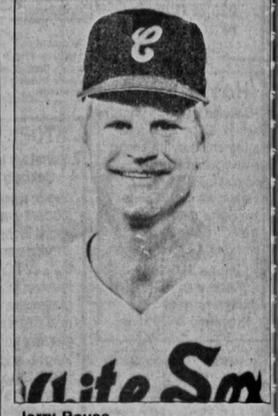

Opponents are going to see a bigger, tougher Aundray Bruce this year.

Bruce, the No. 1 pick overall in the 1988 draft, says he's lifted more weights in the last six months than he ever did at Auburn.

"I worked out hard. I wanted it to be real tough for me to get injured," he said after reporting with other veterans over the weekend.

"I noticed when I saw those big offensive linemen and how much bigger their arms were than mine," said Bruce, who had six sacks as a rookie but was sometimes overpowered by offensive linemen. "A little bit of difference would have been OK. But it was that obvious. It was night and day. It was time for a change."

Jerry Reuss

Late trades mark surge for pennant

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, seeking pitching help to keep them in the National League East race, and the Chicago White Sox made moves Monday to solidify lineups before last night's midnight deadline.

The Mets acquired Toronto left-hander Jeff Musselman and minor leaguer Mike Brady from the Blue Jays for a player to be named later. The Sox dished veteran hurler Jerry Reuss for a minor-league prospect.

The Mets, who trail the first-place Montreal Expos by six games, are without ace Dwight Gooden, sidelined with a shoulder injury. They have been trying to acquire Minnesota's Frank Viola, last year's American League Cy Young winner.

Reuss was traded from the White Sox to the Milwaukee Brewers on Monday night for minor-league pitcher Brian Drahman.

The 40-year-old Reuss was 8-5 with a 5.06 earned-run average in 23 games with Chicago. In 19 starts, he had one complete game, beating Milwaukee 6-0 on May 1. He is 219-187 in his 21-year career. Drahman, 22, split the season between El Paso of the Class AA Texas League and Stockton of the Class A California League. He was 6-6 in the Brewers system with a 5.37 ERA and six saves in 31 appearances.

Musselman, 26, was 0-1 with a 10.64 earned-run average for the Blue Jays this season and 5-2 with a 3.77 ERA in 10 starts with Class AAA Syracuse of the International League.

He was recalled from Syracuse on July 23 after completing a rehabilitation assignment for an admitted alcohol problem. Musselman, who will join the Mets in St. Louis on Tuesday, gave up 10 hits and five runs in four innings since his recall.

"They're in a pennant race, just like we are," Musselman said. "From what I saw of them on TV, I liked their attitude, all the high-fiving and stuff. If there's anything this team might have been missing, it was the exuberance."

On March 18, Musselman started a brawl in an exhibition game against the Mets when he hit Darryl Strawberry with a pitch and the outfielder charged the mound. Musselman was ejected by home plate umpire Larry Young.

Musselman, who lives in Lanoka Harbor, N.J., said he's looking forward to playing in New York. "I talked to Jesse Barfield about playing in New York and he said it wasn't that bad," Musselman said. Musselman's father was at Yankee Stadium but the pitcher said he hadn't had the time to talk to him before Monday's game.

Brady, a 20-year-old right-hander, was 2-0 with a 1.04 ERA and 12 saves for Class A Myrtle Beach of the South Atlantic League.

Authors of book say death threats are beginning

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Golenbock and the publishers of "Personal Fouls" said Monday there had been threats against them and against John Simonds, one of the sources cited in the book.

"Personal Fouls" alleges that members of North Carolina State's 1986-87 basketball team received cars, money and other gifts. It also alleges that some players falsified drug tests to avoid detection and portrays Jim Valvano as a self-centered coach who alienated many of his players.

Golenbock said at a news conference that he had received a threatening phone call, but was not sure how to deal with it.

"On one hand, you think they're trying to call you off and rattle you," he said. "On the other hand, you sort of take it seriously, too."

Golenbock did not say when he received the call.

John Sawyer, a spokesman for the publisher, Carroll & Graf, said "threats were made on the publishing house and some of the people in it," Sawyer said he felt the publisher had been threatened because "we're easier to get to."

Simonds, a former N.C. State basketball manager and one of the few sources quoted by name in the book, also received a threat last week, Golenbock said.

The author said only two of the sources cited in the book were paid, with each receiving $200 "for their time, not their information," Golenbock said the sources got the money "because they asked for it," but he would not say if Simonds was one of those paid.

The book was published by Carroll

& Graf after Simon & Schuster dropped it due to potential legal action by state officials in North Carolina. But Golenbock said neither the North Carolina state attorney's office nor Valvano intend to sue.

"Our attorneys have spoken to the North Carolina Attorney General's office and there's no indication of a suit," Golenbock said. He said Valvano's attorney, Art Kaminsky, had been in touch "only through the papers."

"My suspicion is that they didn't think they could win," Golenbock said. "It also could have been ugly, with coaches forced to testify against players."

Golenbock said college sports "is a rough business. It's really a business; the word 'college' is irrelevant for a lot of kids. The only difference between them and the pros is that these kids don't get paid. But they're not part of the university; education is irrelevant to them."

One problem at North Carolina State, Golenbock said, is that Valvano also serves as the athletic director.

"There's no check on the coach by the athletic director, as there is at most colleges, because the AD is also the coach. Apparently at North Carolina State, the chancellor has given the coach-athletic director carte blanche to do whatever he wants."

"After doing the book, I discovered that the academicians, the educators, are not running the institution any more. The people in charge of running the academic side have handed over a lot of decisions, at least with respect to the athletes, to the athletic department."

Golenbock, who said he knew only that N.C. State "had a good basketball team" when he started
