Abusive parents imprison children

Rape and beating patterns revealed

NEW YORK (AP)—Nine children lived as virtual prisoners in a dark, filthy apartment where they were sexually or physically assaulted by their parents, authorities said Tuesday. There may have been three other children who did not survive their first month and were secretly buried.

disclosed a pattern of rape, sodomy and beatings in three gloomy rooms from which the six boys and three girls never emerged. The children were taken from their parents three months ago. "The oldest children suffered most from the sexual abuse, and the younger children from physical abuse," DeMartino said.

disposed of the bodies." The last of the missing children may have been stillborn, DeMartino said. Police and city welfare officials went to the McMillan's one-bedroom apartment in the New York City borough of The Bronx on May 25 in response to neighbors' complaints that the children were being neglected. "When the people went into the apartment, they found it to be extremely dark," DeMartino said.

Herman McMillan, left, told police in the Bronx Monday that he buried two children near their 48th precinct headquarters.

Iowa City's child-abuse reports rise

Public has greater awareness, interest

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Reports of local child abuse have increased 28 percent in 1988 and have continued to increase by 21 percent for the first four months of 1989, according to David Schutt, supervisor of the Iowa City district staff for the protective services investigation division of the Department of Human Services for Johnson, Washington, and Iowa counties. "This trend mirrors the national increase," said Dr. Randell Alexander, assistant professor of pediatrics for University Hospitals and Clinics and chairman of its panel on child abuse.

Leaders agree Poland needs communists

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Poland's Communist Party chief conferred Tuesday and agreed that solving Poland's problems is impossible without the Communist Party, a party spokesman said. The conversation came as Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the Solidarity prime minister-designate, held talks on forming the East bloc's first government led by non-communists. Gorbachev, the head of the Soviet Union's Communist Party, held a 40-minute telephone conversation with Mieczyslaw Rakowski, head of Poland's Communist Party, said party spokesman Jan Bisztyga. "Gorbachev expressed confidence that the Polish party would successfully solve the social and economic problems in the interest of socialism and voice the conviction that solving these problems is impossible without" the Communist Party, Bisztyga said. Poland's Communist Party is pressing for maximum representation in the new Cabinet. Mazowiecki met with leaders of Poland's political factions and said he hopes to form his government within a week.

Huey Newton slain in Oakland neighborhood

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Huey Newton was shot to death Thursday in the same troubled neighborhood where he co-founded the militant Black Panther Party 23 years ago to protect blacks from police violence. He was 47. Newton was found lying in a pool of blood in a rundown section of Oakland where residents fear they are losing the war against drug dealing and poverty. Newton, along with Bobby Seale, founded the Black Panthers to protect black neighborhoods against what they perceived as a pattern of police violence against blacks. The group was itself frequently associated with violence, although it also helped organize daycare centers, free breakfast programs, health clinics and a school in Oakland. Newton, the party's minister of defense, was recalled as "a person who rebelled against the status quo in all forms" by Chicago Alderman Bobby Rush, who once headed the Panthers' Chicago chapter. "The Huey that I remember was a student of the world and... made a contribution to the advancement of the ideals of freedom, justice and equality for all Americans," Rush said. Newton was shot several times, including at least once in the head, according to Officer Terry Foley. The shooting was reported to police at 5:29 a.m., and Newton was pronounced dead at Highland Hospital at 6:12 a.m., said Sgt. Dan Mercado. Investigators swarmed the crime scene early Tuesday but declined to describe details of the shooting, including whether there were any suspects. Audrey DePalm, 29, who lives across the street from the site of the shooting, said she heard one shot about 5:15 a.m., followed seconds later by three more shots. Shooting is not uncommon in the neighborhood, DePalm said, but usually it is followed by yelling, screaming tires or other signs of a dispute. This time, she said, there was silence. Longtime residents recalled that Newton began his work with the Colombian drug lord arrested for multiple murder charges

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—Extradition to the United States began Tuesday for an alleged manager of drug money caught in a dragnet cast after cocaine barons killed a judge, police colonel and the leading presidential candidate. Eduardo Martinez Romero, said to manage funds for the notorious Medellin cartel, faces conspiracy charges in the United States for his alleged role in a billion-dollar money laundering scheme. Columnist Francisco Santos expressed the public's outrage at the murder of Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, an outspoken foe of the drug lords who was shot down at a rally Friday. "The killing of Galan has to be the drop that makes the cup overflow" and end the systematic terror that has cowed the Colombian establishment, he wrote Tuesday in the daily El Tiempo. Authorities said the nationwide crackdown on the drug underworld moved forward in its fourth day with more raids and seizures. The country's judges planned to return to their duties, ending a strike called after the judge and police official were killed Thursday. Extradition of Martinez was seen as a test of the government's new procedure for sending traffickers to the United States for trial, and of its resolve in taking on the cartels. Drug dealers have been able to halt effective prosecution in Colombia through bribery, threats and assassination. They fear extradition to other countries, where they do not have such power of intimidation. Santos wrote in El Tiempo: "Don't let the battle decrees against narcotics trafficking remain only on paper, as has happened so many

Boat gambling ahoy! Bill granted passage

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP)—Riverboat gambling referendums passed in Des Moines and Lee counties Tuesday. In Des Moines County, the vote was 5,719 in favor and 4,366 opposed, or a margin of 57 percent to 43 percent. The vote was much closer in Lee County, where the final tally was 4,504 in favor and 4,119 opposed, for a 52 percent to 48 percent margin. The votes mean casino boats can begin operating on the Mississippi River along the counties in 1991, if the state approves a casino license for an operator in the area. Voter turnout for the special election was heavy in both counties. With nearly 45 percent of eligible voters going to the polls in Des Moines County. Riverboat gambling supporters said floating casinos would enhance economic development, but opponents said it only cheapened the region. Lee Young, who heads an anti-riverboat gambling group in Lee County, said supporters of the issue put out false information which duped many going to the polls.

Task force recommends a tuition cap

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan
This coming session of the Iowa Legislature may find the Senate warming up to halting rising tuition costs. A draft report issued by the Iowa Legislature's higher education task force last week says tuition has been rising too fast at Iowa public universities and community colleges. The task force found that Iowa community college fees are 15th highest in the nation. Also, Iowa residents pay 30 percent of their in-state tuition costs. The task force suggested that Iowans attending state universities should not have to bear more than 30 percent of the cost to educate them, in effect, placing a cap on

Hancher receives $75,000 in grants

Hancher Auditorium has been awarded a total of $75,450 by federal, regional, state and local public funding organizations to support its 1989-90 season of performing arts events.

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) awarded Hancher $59,800 for a variety of events.

The NEA Inter-Arts Presenters program awarded $24,000 for the support of artists' fees throughout the season and a grant of $15,000 from the NEA Inter-Arts Partnerships in Commissioning and Touring will support Hancher's commissioning of "Power Failure," by Paul Drescher and Rinde Eckert.

The $14,800 granted to Hancher by the NEA Dance Presenters program will support the artists' fees for the performances by Pilobolus Dance Theatre, LaLaLa Human Steps and American Indian Dance Theatre, and the commissioning of "Simply So" by David Parsons, which will be performed by the David Parsons Company.

Hancher also received $6,000 from the NEA Multi-Music Presenters program, to support the fees of American musicians, the Young Concert Artists Series, the development of chamber music and concert series, and the programming of a jazz series.

Arts Midwest, a regional funding agency that supports the arts in several midwestern states, awarded Hancher $13,650 to aid in the presentation of the Kronos Quartet, the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, the National Theatre of the Deaf, the David Parsons Company and Pilobolus Dance Theatre.

Hancher also received $1,000 grants from the Grassroots Partnership Incentives Program of the Iowa Arts Council and the Iowa City and Coralville Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Hancher receives no direct programming subsidy from the UI. The grants from public funding agencies are combined with ticket revenues and contributions from individuals and businesses to offset the auditorium's programming costs.

UI concert groups hold auditions

Open auditions in music, theater and dance for positions in a variety of choral and instrumental ensembles at the UI will be held August 21-31.

Places are also available in major productions of University Theatres and the Dance Gala presented by the Dance Department.

Auditions for four choral groups — Kantorei, University Choir, Camerata Singers and the Women's Chorus — will be held August 21-25 in the Music Building.

In addition, students may audition for conducting class choruses, which present four concerts each year but do not participate in the major choral works with orchestra.

For all choral auditions, a prepared song or aria is helpful but not required. An accompanist will be provided. Interested students should sign up for an audition in Room 1033 of the UI Music Building or call 335-1677.

This year's freshmen plunge into unfamiliar food, activities

Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

During the first couple days of classes, they're blatantly set apart from other students as they try to navigate across campus with jumbled maps and schedules, talking in continuous loops about the most recent Burge party and who's doing what with whom.

They're freshmen. And they're out in large numbers, usually traveling in groups, making a valiant attempt to soak in all at once everything college has to offer.

"Today we were searching for the buildings our classes are in — everyone was running around looking for different rooms with maps in our hands," said Misty Dibadj, a freshman from Peoria, Ill. "We were in a large enough group, so I didn't feel that stupid. Still, though, you could definitely peg us as freshmen!"

Dibadj said, though, that while she realizes many of her actions are shared by other freshmen, she doesn't feel alienated from the upperclassmen on campus.

"The campus is so big, you just fit right in — no one sits there and stares at you like they're thinking, 'you're a freshman,'" she said. "I've been out walking around campus and downtown, and it's neat to see all of the new faces."

Excitement, anxiety, tension, and both anticipation and fear of the unknown — all of these have been experienced by almost everyone at one time or another. And for many, these feelings culminate during one's freshman year at college.

After all, many freshmen are, for the first time in their lives, experiencing freedom in the sense that they no longer have curfews or the watchful eye of a parent looming over their shoulders.

Shannon McCartan, a freshman from Lisle, Ill., is excited about her new-found freedom away from home and the idea of living with people her own age.

"It's a great opportunity," McCartan said. "There will always be someone around to share ideas with and just talk to."

"At the same time, though, I know it will probably get boring sometimes," she added. "I mean, you eat with everyone, you're continuously sharing a room with the same people, and when you walk out of your room, you don't step into some other room like when you're at home — there's just a boring white hall."

There's no doubt about it, freshman year is definitely a transition period.

But in no time at all, these same college newcomers will begin to assimilate into the UI community, find their own niches and branch out on their own. They won't need campus maps anymore and will avoid — at all costs — registering for 7:30 a.m. and 8:00 a.m. classes.

"They'll probably even have important bits of Iowa City trivia branded in their memories — things like who serves the best burger baskets and whether or not the campus ducks prefer popcorn over bread."

Until then, they will continue to learn more about college life, bit by bit, day by day. And many times, it will be through trial and error.

Take food for example. Cafeteria food is a new adventure for incoming freshmen. Many of them enter the cafeteria dining rooms with a mental checklist, including questions whose answers give them clues as to what foods they deem safe to eat.

Actually, most students are content with dorm food, but for a lot of freshmen, well, they often wonder what they got themselves in to.

"I actually got sick off the food when I first tried it," McCartan said. "We were all sitting there, and then my stomach just started churning. Overall, I guess the food's all right, but it's sure not like my mom's cooking!"

Freshmen living in Mayflower have the option of preparing their own meals using kitchenettes in their suites, but many profess to having somewhat shabby culinary skills and have opted to subscribe to a UI meal plan.

"Macaroni and cheese, that's about all that's been cooking around here," said Jason Villines, a freshman from Des Moines. "But I didn't make it, my neighbor, Jen, did, and my roommate had some. Actually, I didn't even get any."

Anticipation of upcoming classes usually remains unspoken. That's what everyone goes to college for, right?

"I didn't do a lot of reading in high school; it was mostly just lectures and reviews I had to deal with," McCartan said. "Now I'm trying to gear up for different study habits."

By this time next year many present-day freshmen will have changed their study habits — among other things — and will be proud sophomores, no longer easy targets or scapegoats for anyone.

Meanwhile, the freshmen cycle will have already been set in motion once again by the waves of freshmen orientation groups roaming about the UI campus.

A Wellman, Iowa, woman was charged with fourth-degree theft Monday after allegedly stealing $70.12 worth of items from Jack's Discount Store, 1101 S. Riverside Drive in Iowa City, according to Johnson County District court reports.

Shirley R. Patterson, 509 8th Ave., Box 249, Wellman, Iowa, was observed by a store security employee to be concealing and switching price tags and then attempting to leave the store with two cassette tapes, makeup items, sheets and a skirt, according to court reports.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for Sept. 7, according to the reports.

Two Iowa City men were charged with second-degree attempted burglary Tuesday after allegedly attempting to enter a sorority house, according to Johnson County District court reports. Eric P. Meinders and Scott W. Gossett, both of 711 E. Burlington St., were allegedly seen by witnesses climbing a fire escape to the third-floor balcony. The defendants admitted to Iowa City police officers that they were attempting to steal a composite photograph from the sorority, according to court reports.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for Sept. 7, according to court reports.

Customers rush for new banks

CHEROKEE, Iowa (AP) — Hundreds of northwest Iowans lined up to get their money out of a closed savings and loan Tuesday as representatives of other institutions courted them as potential customers.

"When we opened at 9 a.m., there were probably 50 people outside in line," said Stanley Gish, the federal regulator overseeing the closing of the insolvent Sioux Valley Savings and Loan Association.

"He said a steady stream of depositors filled the lobby of the thrift's main office in Cherokee throughout the day, keeping all six tellers working nonstop. It was the customers' first chance to get at their money since the thrift was shut down Friday.

Officials had ice water and chairs outside and were helping the handicapped to the front of the line, Gish said. Inside, customers waited their turns.

Checks totaling about $92 million were available to some 12,000 depositors, said Gish, the closing manager for the newly created federal Resolution Trust Corp.

"We have pretty good lines here at the main office. Everyone's calm, though," he said.

Representatives of at least one institution greeted Sioux Valley depositors, "encouraging them to open accounts," Gish said.

A van from the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Storm Lake was parked outside the Sioux Valley main office.

Ray Erlandson, president of the Cherokee State Bank, said he noticed that a good number of checks paid to the former Sioux Valley customers were being deposited in his institution, even without soliciting new business from the lines around the failed thrift.

IC school board considers info line

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District's Board of Directors got a 30-minute sales pitch at their regular meeting Tuesday.

City Line, a talking telephone information service promoted by The Cedar Rapids Gazette, approached the board with a proposal to put school information — such as athletic practice and game schedules, lunch menus and board meeting dates — at the fingertips of district students and parents.

"It's just one more way for students and parents to find out what's going on at school, where and when," City Line representative Jim Debth told the board.

Board member Fran Malloy said the taped information system — which would require frequent updating by either students, teachers or staff — might be too easily accessible to the wrong people.

Board member Jay Christensen-Szalanski voiced a similar concern that the system — which would require three community sponsors, each contributing $2,500 per year — might be plagued by the wrong sponsor.

"We don't want Gilley's Tap and Grill advertising on our lines," Christensen-Szalanski said.

Debth said the system would only be accessible for updating by individuals with a special password and that City Line was also concerned about the type of advertisers on their system.

"We're very cognizant that we want very high-caliber people advertising on City Line," Debth said. "We want institutions that are reputable for their family-type atmosphere or business."

"If it's not current and up-to-date, it's not going to be effective for us," Al Azinger, acting superintendent, said.

But Debth countered by saying City Line employees regularly check systems to insure that they have been updated.

None injured as building front cracks

KNOXVILLE, Iowa (AP) — The decorative facing crumbled off the top of a three-story building on the downtown square and crashed to the ground Tuesday, crushing three cars and a bicycle but causing no injuries.

Firefighters cordoned off the southwest corner of the square after a demolition expert warned the building could collapse. The building housed a drug store and a variety store on the first floor and apartments on the top two floors.

Twenty to 30 people were in the building when the facing fell, said Duane Schmaltz, the owner. Three cars and a bicycle parked in front of the building were crushed by the rubble, but no one was in the vehicles, Schmaltz said.

Authorities speculated that water and moisture seeping in between the bricks had dissolved the mortar and loosened the bricks in the facing. A 20-foot crack was found in the ceiling of the top floor.

Allen Beyer, a demolition expert from Monroe, said the building was in danger of collapsing and would have to be demolished. Knoxville Fire Chief Dave Brooks said pedestrians and motorists were being routed a block from the building.

Immigrants relocate to Midwest region

5,000 immigrated to area in 10 months

SIoux CITY (AP) — An influx of new immigrants into a tri-state area has produced a "totally unexpected" surge in Spanish-speaking population that is straining services and schools, officials warned Tuesday.

They told the governors of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota that the number of Spanish-speaking residents in the area where the three states come together has increased 200 percent in the last year alone, and asked for $563,000 to fund programs to help that segment of the population.

Many in that influx are candidates for citizenship under a new immigration amnesty program. Because of that status, they are not eligible for welfare and other social assistance programs, said Elba Cera, who runs a non-profit agency that helps Spanish-speaking people.

The increased population has caused a host of problems, ranging from housing to schools to health care, all aggravated because many moving into the region speak no English, Cera said.

"The language barrier affects all the other needs," she said. "Housing has become a crisis situation. Affordable, adequate housing is almost impossible to find."

"Even the hotels are full, and there are people we know of who are sleeping in their cars."

She gave the governors a detailed survey of the sharp population shifts, noting that 105 new Spanish-speaking residents arrive each week, lured by the prospect of better jobs as the economy improves.

"We have found 23 people living in one home, and this was not an isolated predicament," Cera said.

Cera gave a bleak report, in sharp contrast to the rosy economic development picture cast for the region by local business leaders and Gov. Terry Branstad, Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr and South Dakota Gov. George Mickelson.

"Many of these people are being granted citizenship under the federal amnesty program," Cera said. "These people rarely seek out assistance on their own. They are fearful that this might jeopardize their citizenship process. They are low profile within the community."

The $563,000 being sought would be coupled with $100,000 in contributions from local businesses to provide a host of emergency services and translators, Cera said.

The language barriers frequently interfere with basic medical care and education because few offering those services are fluent in both English and Spanish.

Language classes throughout the region are jammed to capacity and need to expand, Cera said, adding that the situation will have a major impact on the schools because the overwhelming majority of those coming to the region have children.

"This will necessitate a long-term commitment on behalf of the school system," she said. "Local clinics, doctors and hospitals don't have bilingual staffs."

That leads many to put off medical care until illnesses are severe and far more expensive to treat, Cera said.

She estimated the Spanish-speaking population in the region at 7,500, including more than 5,000 who have moved into the community over the past 10 months. While other officials used the response to last month's crash of United Airlines Flight 232 to illustrate the region's capabilities, Cera said the accident should be a call for more action.

Terry Branstad

The increased population has caused a host of problems, ranging from housing to schools to health care.

"Just as state and community resources rallied to provide assistance to those involved in the recent DC-10 air tragedy, so must we provide basic life-support assistance to people who are trying to readjust lives as productive citizens," she said.

There was no commitment from the governors for funding, but Branstad said his staffers had met within the past two months with Cera to explore various options.

"We have been and will continue to work with them," Branstad said.

Giant Andre arrested after C.R. 'bash'

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Andrae Rene Roussimoff is more than a handful in the wrestling ring, but when police hauled him to jail on an assault charge they didn't even have to use handcuffs.

Good thing, too, because none of them fit.

Roussimoff, who is 7 feet, 4 inches tall and weighs 540 pounds, is better known as Andre the Giant. He was charged with assault and criminal mischief Monday night for allegedly putting a television cameraman in a headlock and damaging his equipment.

"The police knew they were going to arrest him when they went over there, and they felt they better try to get cuffs and leg irons," said John Hromidko, Linn County Jail supervisor. "I tell ya, they don't even come close to fitting this guy. He came in here without cuffs."

Fortunately for police, Roussimoff went along quietly.

"Thank God he was cooperative in the arrest," Assistant Police Chief Jim Barnes said. "A guy that big, he could cause some damage."

"He's some kind of huge," Hromidko said. "It's a damn good thing he's good-natured."

Roussimoff was released from police custody after his manager posted $1,200 bond late Monday.

"We never had him in a cell or anything," Hromidko said. "We stood him over at the booking counter. He made our guy, who probably weighs about 220, look like a midget."

Barnes said Roussimoff, 43, was upset when Ben Hildebrandt, a cameraman for Cedar Rapids television station KCRG, was videotaping a match between Roussimoff and the Ultimate Warrior at the Five Seasons Center in downtown Cedar Rapids. The Ultimate Warrior won in 30 seconds.

Marinade wins pork recipe prize for Osceola woman at state fair

DES MOINES (AP) — Gail Goehring, the first woman to win the Iowa State Fair cookout championship, says it's a lot harder raising pork than cooking it.

"In a way, it's frustrating," the 30-year-old Osceola woman said after winning the competition Tuesday. "I work hard to raise good pigs, but I wouldn't have near the publicity if I won with the sows and I work 10 times harder on them."

It was her marinated pork loins that won the blue ribbon in the annual Iowa Farm Bureau contest, although it was gender more than recipe that got the recognition. Until recently, the Farm Bureau offered its contest only to men, with the winner being crowned the cookout king.

But Goehring, entering the contest for the first time, said she had no ambitions of being a trailblazer and didn't even know about the controversy that caused the Farm Bureau to change its rules.

"The president of our local Farm Bureau asked me to enter our county contest," she said. "And I said, 'I don't know, I'm awful busy.' But he said I had to, since he only had one other contestant, so I did."

She won that event and decided to enter the state contest on a lark. "The recipe is something I just came up with out of the clear blue sky," Goehring said. "I always marinate turkey breasts when I cook them, and I thought I'd try something for pork."

"There are certain things that go well with pork, like rosemary, garlic and pepper. I suppose rosemary is what you taste the most."

In addition to those ingredients, Goehring's marinade includes a bit of vegetable oil, tarragon, paprika, hot pepper sauce, salt, lemon juice and water. She allows the meat to soak in the marinade overnight, then simply pops it on the grill.

Tuition

wide, students enrolled at state universities pay 23 percent of their educational costs while Iowans pay 30 percent.

Currently, California and Nevada are among the states with free tuition for residents. Arizona and Hawaii each charge less than $500 per semester for their in-state fees. Sen. Richard Varn (D-I.C.), a task force member, said the higher tuition figures for Iowa residents must be considered alongside comparatively lower incomes and lower tuition rates.

Varn said most task force members believe the state legislature should not control tuition rates and that the state Board of Regents should continue to hold that power.

"I've never been real crazy about the legislature setting tuition policy," Varn said. "It's possible that if they had been setting it the last eight years it may have been higher."

He said the legislature could introduce legislation requiring the regents to set some sort of standard tuition policy that would enable universities and students to plan for future spending.

There is more interest in higher education this year than before, Varn said.

Task force recommendations for adequate regent funding and increased student aid programs. Several proposals aim at helping students.

Improving career training programs and to provide more opportunities for older Iowans to return to college.

Reducing community college tuition.

Establishing a higher-education service corps that would provide financial aid to students in exchange for their work in prisons, child-care centers, nursing homes and other social service agencies.

Increasing diversity among students by setting 30 percent as a goal for out-of-state students as compared to the current 22 percent figure.

The task force also supports the regent's efforts to root out academic programs that are "truly superfluous."

"Hopefully this report will serve as a model for the state Legislature and Board of Regents in terms of the future of higher education," Miller said.

The 11-member panel investigation is chaired by Des Moines attorneys Edgar Bittle and Roxanne Conlin. Varn and an Iowa State University student are among other panel members.

The panel will hold public meetings in October around the state to gather opinions about the recommendations. Iowa City's public hearing will be October 6 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at a place to be announced.

Varn will chair the Iowa City hearing. A final task force report incorporating opinions gathered around the state will be issued in November.

Abuse

number of suspected child abuse cases reported increased 28 percent to 453 cases.

In Johnson County alone, the number of cases investigated jumped from 250 to 316 from 1987 to 1988.

At the state level, reports of child abuse have increased by 600 in the fiscal year 1989.

"The best explanation for the increase is the increase in media awareness," Alexander said.

Schutt also cited greater public awareness as the primary reason for the increase in reported cases.

"Several cases in the media and more TV movies depicting child abuse have led to better public awareness that translates into more reports of suspected child abuse," Schutt said.

Due to several local cases of child abuse that were well publicized, awareness of child abuse is even greater in the Iowa City area, Schutt said.

"The population here is more informed," Schutt said. "Having University Hospital in our midst may also help public awareness."

Last year 140 cases of child abuse were reported to the hospital, Alexander said. This year, he expects 180 to 200 cases to be reported.

Alexander attributes the increase in reports to the hospital's "aggressive training" program that teaches professionals such as teachers, doctors, and day care providers who come into contact with children to detect child abuse.

A law requiring these professionals to undergo two hours of child abuse detection training every five years has been in effect several years and the training offered has improved over time.

"The mandatory reporters have been out there for a long time, but now they are better informed," Schutt said.

The high concentration of professionals in the Iowa City area who have to undergo mandatory training may also contribute to the increase in the general public's awareness in this area, Alexander said.

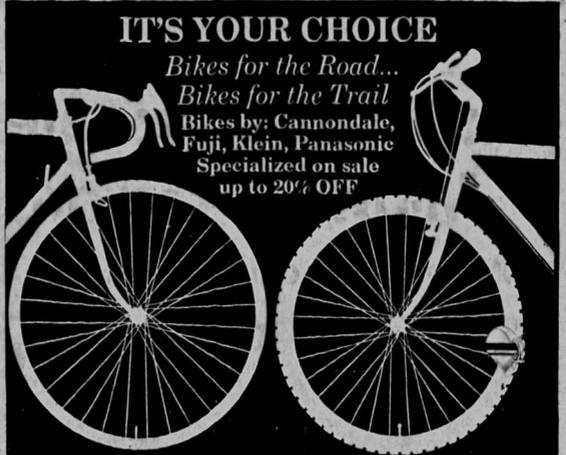

Preventive sexual abuse programs at the elementary school level are also responsible for more children reporting child abuse, Alexander said.

An increase in drug and alcohol abuse may be responsible for the increase in the actual incidents of child abuse, Schutt said.

In general, however, the increase does not mean child abuse is occurring more often, he said.

People in their 60s are reporting as much physical abuse as people in their 20s, Alexander said. This means that incidents of abuse have not increased.

Black Panthers in the same neighborhood, working with local churches to serve free breakfasts to youngsters.

Newton and Seale founded the Black Panther Party for Self-Defense when a new militancy was taking hold among black youths impatient with the slow progress of the civil-rights movement.

Influenced by Malcolm X, Newton and Seale helped define the Black Power movement with their strident criticisms of police and the political establishment. They epitomized a new image for black youth, with their Afro haircuts, black leather jackets, black berets, pressed shirts, law books — and guns.

The Panthers frequently clashed with police. Newton, like other Panther leaders, accumulated a long criminal record that included five counts of murder.

He was convicted of manslaughter for the shooting death of an Oakland policeman on Oct. 28, 1967, and was sentenced to two to 15 years. But that conviction was overturned on appeal after he served two years in prison. The charge was dropped after two retrials ended in hung juries. Newton, convicted of assault with a deadly weapon in 1964, was convicted of being a felon in possession of weapons after a 1974 incident in which he allegedly pistol-whipped his tailor and police found two guns in his apartment.

He then fled the country and lived for three years in Cuba. He was acquitted of a charge of assault in connection with the incident.

Tom Orloff, deputy district attorney for Alameda County, who prosecuted Newton in the 1974 case, called him "a man who lived by violence and outside the law" and "nothing but a gangster."

But others saw a different person. "To us, Huey Newton was a hero," said Audrey DePalm's brother, Fred, who was awakened by the gunshots Tuesday morning.

Mazowiecki met Jan Janowski, the floor leader of the Democratic Party, outgoing Prime Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak and Marian Orzechowski, the parliamentary leader of the Communist Party.

The long, one-on-one meeting with Kiszczak at an undisclosed location was "serious and interesting," Mazowiecki said afterward at the offices of the Solidarity weekly he edits.

Later at the National Assembly, Mazowiecki said he had "a very intensive conversation about problems which interest us" with Orzechowski. He also met with the speakers of the Sejm and Senate, the two chambers of the National Assembly.

Officials said Martinez was being held under strict security at the headquarters of the national police department's judicial investigations division.

The alleged finance manager of the Medellin cartel was captured in a weekend raid on a rural estate at Tolu, on the Caribbean coast 550 miles north of Bogota. Police said he offered no resistance.

In an interview with a local reporter, Martinez said: "At no time have I had links to the Medellin cartel and I don't know any of its members."

Bodies of Leland, other Americans on mission sent home

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The bodies of Rep. Mickey Leland and eight other Americans were flown home in flag-draped coffins Tuesday, two weeks after they died in a plane crash while on a humanitarian mission.

The coffins were loaded onto a C-141 transport after a two-hour airport ceremony and left Addis Ababa shortly after noon. Officials said the aircraft was expected in Washington about 3:15 p.m. Wednesday, after an overnight stop in Frankfurt, West Germany.

In Washington, the State Department said it planned a memorial service Wednesday at the Lincoln Memorial. Leland's family plans a private service in Houston.

Leland, the other Americans and seven Ethiopians were killed Aug. 7 when their chartered plane crashed into a mountain en route to the Fugnido refugee camp near the Sudanese border.

Searchers found the crash site a week later. Retrieval of the bodies from the mountainside, and identification, took nearly another week.

At the memorial service in Addis Ababa, Leland was eulogized by U.S., U.N. and Ethiopian officials as a man of compassion.

"The fact that he met his tragic death while on a humanitarian mission is ample testimony of his dedication to the well-being of people," said Tesfaye Wolde-Selassie, Ethiopia's interior minister.

Work at the airport stopped and employees joined Ethiopian officials, U.S. Embassy staff and relatives of Ethiopian victims for the ceremony. The Ethiopians wailed in grief and sympathy.

Albert-Alain Peters, representative in Addis Ababa of the U.N. refugee agency, said Leland had died for a "noble cause." It was the congressman's fifth visit to Africa and his second this year.

The other Americans killed were:

- Patrice Johnson, 35, a Leland aide.
- Hugh Johnson, 34, of the House Select Committee on Hunger.
- Ivan Lee Tillem, 33, a New York City lawyer and friend of Leland who was investigating prospects for food-relief projects he had proposed for Ethiopia.
- Joyce Francine Williams, 39, an aide to Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., and an expert on child health and nutrition issues.
- Robert Woods, age unavailable, a political and economic officer with the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa.
- Gladys Gilbert, 43, special projects officer of the Agency for International Development in Addis Ababa.
- Thomas Worrick, 48, deputy AID representative in Addis Ababa.
- Roberta Worrick, 48, wife of Thomas Worrick and a contract employee of the AID mission.

War rages between Moslems, Christians

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four people were killed and 50 wounded in a night of shelling that followed the Christian commander's offer to talk peace with Moslem adversaries, police said Tuesday.

Syria had not replied by Tuesday to Gen. Michel Aoun's proposal, but its militia allies rejected the offer.

France dispatched two more warships to the eastern Mediterranean, bringing the number to eight, including an aircraft carrier. The French, who governed Lebanon by mandate until 1943, have said their purpose is to evacuate the 7,000 French nationals in the country if necessary.

Police said artillery and rocket exchanges tailed off at dawn and settled into a pattern of intermittent mortar fire across the line that divides Moslem west Beirut from the Christian eastern sector.

By police count, 789 people have been killed and 2,190 wounded in the artillery war that began March 8 between a Moslem alliance led by Syria, which has 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon, and the 20,000 men of Aoun's Christian army command. Nearly all the casualties have been civilians.

Acting Premier Salim Hoss, a Sunni Moslem leading a Syrian-backed Moslem cabinet, issued a statement calling the Maronite Catholic general's offer "a minefield. Any response to it is highly unlikely."

Since a political crisis a year ago, the Hoss government has competed with one led by Aoun.

On Monday, Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt described the general's offer as "a trick to allow Aoun a breathing spell to rearm and marshal his forces."

A spokesman for Aoun said privately the Syrians were "under Arab and international pressure to stop their involvement in Lebanon" and were "issuing fake statements on behalf of their allies to give the impression that Lebanese parties are involved in the conflict, not them."

In an interview published Monday, Aoun expressed willingness to discuss Lebanon's future with leaders of the other side. He did not make his customary demand that talks could not begin until Syrian forces withdrew.

Syrian troops are in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate issued in 1976, the year after the beginning of the sectarian civil war, in which more than 150,000 people have been killed.

Aoun calls them an occupation army and has declared a "war of liberation" to drive them out.

U.S. Ambassador John McCarthy met with Aoun and told reporters: "There's obviously no military solution to the problem for Lebanon."

McCarthy said he met with Aoun to "emphasize that the military confrontation is not taking us anywhere," and added: "We are delivering the same messages to Damascus."

Sheik Mohammed Rashid Kabani, acting religious adviser of Lebanon's Sunni Moslems, said "violence cannot produce solutions." He cautioned France to use its naval force "with great wisdom."

Defense Ministry sources in Paris said the anti-submarine destroyer Jean de Vienne and oil supply ship Meuse would join the six other vessels already sent to the area. They include two other destroyers and a frigate in addition to the aircraft carrier Foch.

Syria's militia allies describe the naval buildup as an attempt by France to reassert dominance over the region.

Iranian newspapers printed warnings to the West that any interference in Lebanon would further aggravate the situation.

Iran backs Moslem extremists believed to hold most of the 16 Western hostages in Lebanon, who include eight Americans, and has about 2,000 Revolutionary Guards in Syrian-controlled east Lebanon.

Man killed as East German refugees flee to W. Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP)—An East German trying to escape to the West was shot to death in a struggle with Hungarian border guards, officials said Tuesday. The shooting intensified a diplomatic crisis created by thousands of East Germans fleeing their rigid Communist regime.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl repeated an offer to meet with East German leader Erich Honecker to resolve the refugee problem, but warned that only reforms will halt the westward flow.

West Germany said it was closing its embassy in Prague because it was overwhelmed by East German refugees. Government sources said more than 100 East Germans had packed the embassy to demand emigration help.

Bonn closed its embassy in Budapest and its mission in East Berlin this month because of the crush of East Germans trying to get to West Germany.

The Hungarian news agency MTI reported the first death resulting from the wave of escapes. It said Kurt-Werner Schulz was shot while trying to flee with his wife and 6-year-old daughter across the border between Hungary and Austria.

MTI described the shooting as an accident during a confrontation between Schulz and border troops who intercepted the family.

Bonn's Foreign Ministry said it was "disturbed over the death of a fellow German," and demanded a detailed explanation from Budapest, as well as Hungarian assurances that armed force would not be used to halt East German escapes.

The rate of escapes and emigration to West Germany this year is the largest migration from East Germany since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961 and promises to exceed 100,000 by the end of the year.

"The pressure for change is not coming from the West, but from Poland and the Soviet Union and Hungary." — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

More than 65,000 East Germans have arrived in West Germany in 1989, including more than 2,000 who escaped illegally in recent weeks by sneaking through recently relaxed borders between Hungary and Austria.

Refugees flooding the main West German transit camp in Giessen have said they left after losing hope that Honecker's leadership would ever ease restrictions on travel, emigration and expression.

Kohl has corresponded with Honecker about the crisis, and he said he was prepared to meet with the East German leader "if that could bring broad and durable relief for the populace."

"East Germany can no longer shut out these developments," Kohl said, referring to public pressure for democratic reforms. "They can no longer avoid dealing with the symptoms" driving East Germans abroad.

Applications for legal emigration can take years to be processed by East Berlin authorities, who often reject specialists and younger workers because of the nation's widespread labor shortage.

But travel visas to Hungary are relatively easy for East Germans to obtain, and some of the estimated 200,000 traveling in Hungary this month have taken their chances with what appeared to be a new escape route to the West.

Hungary began dismantling its barbed-wire barrier with Austria in May. Until the incident Monday night, there had been no serious injuries reported in the illegal exodus. However, hundreds have been caught and detained for short periods.

Schulz was shot Monday night a few yards inside Austrian territory near Lake Neusiedler.

His wife and daughter were in Hungarian custody. MTI said Schulz' family already had been stopped once in an earlier escape attempt.

The 171 East Germans holed up at the West German Embassy in Budapest are mostly others caught in escape attempts. Despite East German assurances they won't be punished if they return voluntarily, the refugees refuse to leave the protection of the mission.

West Germany has shut down its embassy in Budapest and its mission in East Berlin, where another 116 East Germans are being sheltered, contending its diplomats are overwhelmed. But Bonn envoys have been issuing passports outside the embassy grounds to other East Germans seeking to emigrate, many of whom then sneak across the Hungary-Austria border and proceed on to West Germany.

Under the West German constitution, East Germans are entitled to immediate citizenship in West Germany.

Baltic's lost independence mourned by 1.5 million people

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP)—Baltic residents Tuesday mourned the loss of their independence a half-century ago as an "international crime" that must be swept aside by a tide of reform, and they vilified Hitler and Stalin as "monsters of the 20th century."

About 50,000 people gathered in Vilnius, the capital of Lithuania, on the eve of the 50th anniversary of a treaty between Adolf Hitler's Germany and Josef Stalin's Soviet Union that brought Soviet tanks rolling into Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Baltic residents plan to mark the anniversary of the 1939 agreement on Wednesday with a human chain stretching 370 miles from Tallinn, Estonia, on the Gulf of Finland, to the Polish-Lithuanian border. Activists predict 1.5 million people will join it.

A Lithuanian legislative commission in a report published Tuesday declared that "the realization of the illegal German-Soviet agreements of 1939-41 constitute an international crime." Grassroots activists issued a statement in Riga, Latvia, demanding the absorption of the republics be recognized both inside the Soviet Union and internationally as an act of aggression.

Commemoration of the anniversary in the Baltics, as well as other regions such as the Western Ukraine and Moldavia, illustrated the Kremlin's dilemma dealing with ethnic minorities clamoring for greater freedom. Soviets now more than ever are free to criticize Stalin, but an official finding that annexation of the Baltics was illegal would raise the question of total independence.

Showing the power that independence movements have accumulated in the Baltic governments, the commission of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet declared that approving annexation was beyond the powers of the Lithuanian parliament of the time and "absolutely against the will of the citizens of Lithuania."

The report will be forwarded to the full Supreme Soviet in Lithuania and a spokesman for Sajudis, the People's Front organization of Lithuania, said it may eventually form the basis for a republic-wide referendum on future relations with the Soviet Union.

A representative of a Russian cultural organization in Vilnius told the rally that Hitler and Stalin, "two monsters of the 20th century, personally ruined the fate of millions of people."

Vytautas Landsbergis, leader of the Lithuanian Sajudis, or People's Front movement, told the Vilnius rally that annulment of the pact is "not only a historic and political question but a moral one of the liquidation of Stalinism."

Landsbergis spoke as several dozen yellow, red and green Lithuanian national flags fluttered. Youths climbed light towers to get a better view of the stage and children were hoisted on their parents' shoulders.

Afghanistan people grow weary of war

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—President Najib said Tuesday the Afghan people are tired of the 11-year-old civil war, and his Marxist government "is prepared to accept any suggestion" that will end it.

In outlining a new peace plan, he called for an international peace conference attended by Afghanistan, Iran, Pakistan, India and China, with the United States and Soviet Union as guarantors of an agreement.

His plan, which includes elections six months after a cease-fire, does not meet demands by Moslem guerrillas that the 42-year-old former intelligence chief step down.

"Our people are fed up with the continuation of this war of attrition... in which innocent people are dying. The government of Afghanistan is prepared to accept any suggestion toward a peaceful settlement," Najib told reporters at the Gulkhana presidential palace.

Western experts had predicted the U.S.-supported guerrillas would oust Najib's government soon after Soviet military forces withdrew on February 15. Six months later, they have failed twice to capture Jalalabad, 75 miles east of Kabul, and are squabbling among themselves.

Tried and true

Last August, Hunter Rawlings became the UI's 17th president. After enduring more than a year under interim leadership and an extended search process, the UI community gave their new top man an especially warm and anxious welcome. Rawlings made an outstanding first impression, and the frenzy of adulation from regents, faculty members and administrators that greeted the new president was a testament to his charisma and vigor.

Without a doubt, Rawlings said all the right things from the very beginning. But now, just over a year later, Rawlings has proven that he can live up to the adjectives and his own rhetoric.

By most accounts, Rawlings enjoyed a long honeymoon with the UI community and the Iowa press. But when the honeymoon ended, it ended with a bang. In April, when Rawlings announced his plan to make UI freshmen ineligible for athletic competition within the next three years, he touched off a firestorm of controversy that became the first acid test of his tenure.

At home and across the state, Rawlings was pounded for the proposal, which critics claimed would cause the demise of powerhouse athletics at the university. But while fans raged and coaches paraded to press conferences, threatening mutiny, Rawlings stood firm and weathered the storm.

Now, with the benefit of months of hindsight, the wisdom and practicality of Rawlings' plan can be dissected more accurately. But, regardless of how Iowans evaluate the merits of the plan, Rawlings has proven that he is absolutely committed to improving the academic reputation of the UI.

And that commitment has gone well beyond protecting the UI's academic reputation in the sphere of college athletics. Last year, Rawlings made a concerted effort to improve the quality of undergraduate education at the UI. The progress will undoubtedly continue. His short list of priorities for the new academic year includes measures to assuage the faculty shortage and make faculty salaries more competitive, tackle massive renovation projects and fire safety improvements, and increase minority recruitment and retention at the UI.

Rawlings' commitment at the helm of the university provides the kind of leadership the UI has yearned for during a lengthy, relatively uninspired interim. His agenda for the university's development is detailed and long, and achieving all the goals he has set for the UI will be a difficult — if not impossible — feat. But if his first year as president is any indication of what the UI community can expect from Rawlings in the future, this university has found a leader that will put it on track for excellence once again.

As a woman's constitutional right to a safe, legal abortion dangles dangerously close to extinction in the United States, and while no form of birth control — short of celibacy — can lay claim to being 100-percent effective, U.S. officials have made a grave error banning the importation of the French "abortion" pill, RU486, from distribution here.

RU486, taken in several doses within 72 hours after intercourse, makes it impossible for the fertilized egg to attach itself to the ovary wall by stopping the production of progesterone.

French researchers in Paris, having tested RU486 on pregnant women for several years, claim the treatment is safe and effective.

Though some women have experienced cramps, doctors say there have been no serious side effects linked to RU486 use. A similar pill, called the "morning after" pill, is now available in Iowa City, and has been — in some form — since the early 1970s.

This type of pill stops the pregnancy before the egg implants on the wall of the woman's uterus.

According to a UI gynecologist, only about six out of 10 eggs implant anyway, so in four out of 10 cases, use of the morning after pill can not be considered an abortion.

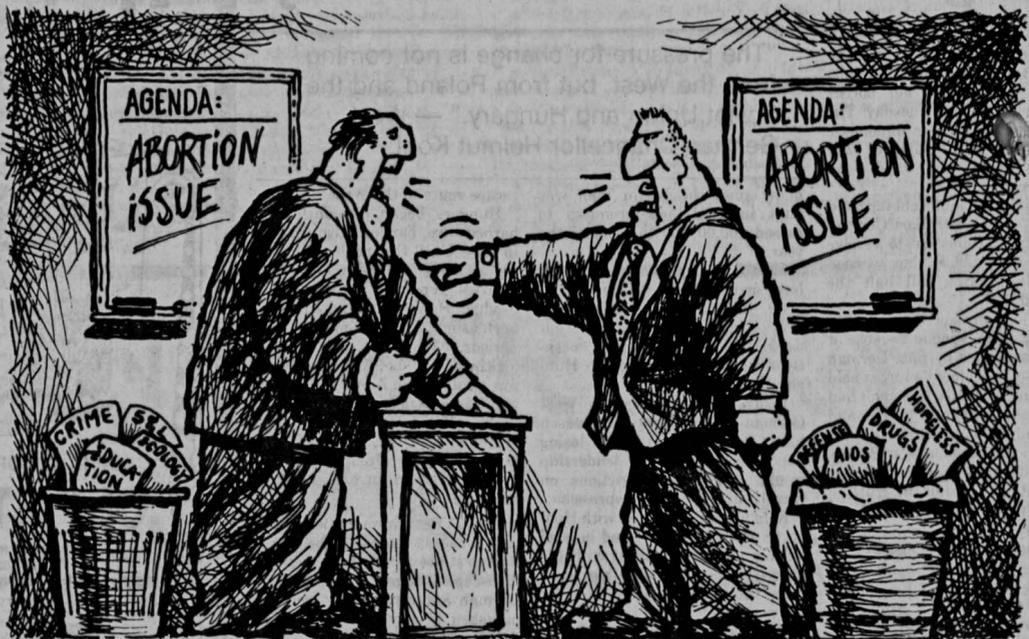

Like RU486, the morning after pill faces an unfortunate demise in light of the July 3 U.S. Supreme Court decision which shows not only a staggering lack of faith in a previous judgement, but also a distinct lack of respect for a woman's decision regarding her own body.

Women deserve the right to make that choice. The decision whether or not to carry a fetus to term cannot be mandated by the Supreme Court, the state legislature, Terry Branstad or the pro-lifer next door. The decision is private. The only thing that can be mandated, and should be mandated, is the existence of choice.

Without choice, all Americans are prisoners of the minority who rule in this country, for when the ballots come in, the majority who vote may not be women, nor may they be individuals who acknowledge a woman's ability to make a morally, ethically and conscientiously correct choice regarding her own flesh.

Without RU486 and pills like it, that choice may tragically become "antiquated" and "irrelevant" like the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision which preceded it.

Everything freshmen need - for now

Ah, fall. A new school year dawns, draping the campus in enthusiasm and energy, and even the oldest grad student feels the excitement of life in academia bloom again. Of course, a lot of this has to do with the fact that one-fourth of the undergrad population is, in fact, new at this game. Freshmen we call them, and they're all over the place — milling around the mall, buying desk-top calendars and daily planners by the bushel.

So let us raise a toast to these young students — with their impressionable minds hungry for knowledge — before they turn 19 and get in our way at the bars. To the '89 Freshmen of Iowa, here are The 20 Questions You're Dying to Know the Answers To:

What should I do first?
 Tell Mom and Dad you've got things under control and they can go home now. And take off that ridiculous Black and Gold sweat-shirt.

What's this shiny gold "Iowa" card for?

Until your first U-bill arrives, it's good for charging every Union meal, book, poster, Walkman and piece of clothing your little heart desires. After your first six-digit U-bill arrives, it's only good for opening deadbolt locks.

While in college do I have to wear tie-dye, watch Bergman films, write poetry and listen to R.E.M. religiously?

Of course not, silly — experiment away! College is all about the freedom to be whoever you want to be! You may find yourself to be a maverick who wants to wear tie-dye, watch Fellini films, write haiku and listen to 10,000 Maniacs religiously! But it's OK! That's the kind of rebellious spirit that makes college life so exciting!

What's the biggest difference between high school and college?

In high school, MTV was a really cool cable channel that you could veg out on three hours a day. In college, MTV has become a tele-communicational textbook, effectively mapping out road signs of the rapidly accelerated deterioration of the morals and cultural tastes of our society that you can veg out on eight hours a day.

Now that I'm in college does it mean I'm a more valuable member of society than those people from my high school who work at Hard-ee's and drive around in pickups wearing seed caps and muscle shirts?

No, you're just a better dressed one.

Who is Hunter Rawlings III?

A really tall guy who it's rumored lived with Chevy Chase in college. He came to UI last year with the silly notion that universities are here to provide higher education, when we all know they're here to provide parking for football games.

Who is Hayden Fry?

Heh, heh. I like the use of my limbs.

Who is Dan Cable?

Yeah, I like the use of my lungs,

What is a college liberal?
 Someone who drinks a lot of beer, listens to U2 and protests Young Americans for Freedom.

What is a college conservative?
 Someone who drinks a lot of beer, listens to U2 and protests New Wave.

What is that high-pitched, rodent-like squealing I hear every time I walk through the ground level of the Union?

Don't be afraid, it's only the Student Government offices/holding pens. As they are by nature cannibalistic creatures, the average student has little to fear from them until election time — at which time it's well-advised to stay in your room and pull the shades.

What is The Daily Iowan?

It's where you check to see if any of your friends got arrested over the weekend for public urination and find out how the Cubs are doing.

Who is James Cahoy, and is he contagious?

1. He is an occasionally entertaining, Hobbit-like DI columnist and law student. 2. Only if you scratch him in the wrong place.

If this is the University of Iowa, why is everyone from Illinois?

Because the University of Illinois and Northwestern have academic standards.

How do I "go greek"?

Take an ice pick, sterilize it, shove it into your temple and rotate it slowly until you get the urge to put golf caps and/or bows on your head. If you join a sorority, stand on the house lawn from dawn to dusk with 60 of your very best girlfriends and makes noises like the Von Trapp Family being boiled in lead. If you join a fraternity watch the "actives" throw a football around on the house lawn while you wash and wax their cars and motorcycles. Once a semester raise some money for sick kids and throw a party to celebrate your altruism. Vomit all over yourself and your date, making sure Joe Photo captures the moment.

Why aren't there enough seats in my classroom?

They've been moved into Kinnick Stadium, Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the new Psychology Hospital and the new UI Laser Science and Research Facility.

As an undergraduate how will I benefit from the new UI Laser Science and Research Facility?

It will make possible really cool light shows during halftime at Carver-Hawkeye Arena — kind of like a $40 million Pink Floyd concert.

Will four years of college turn me into a filthy, atheist, socialist, flag-burning, pro-choice, homosexual member of Greenpeace?

No — if you bathe regularly you'll be a clean, atheist, socialist, flag-burning, pro-choice, homosexual member of Greenpeace.

If Jesus Christ and Superman fought, who would win?

Mike Tyson, Donald Trump and the nation's pay-per-view cable operators.

What is law school?

It's a place to hang out after college if you still have strong ideals and would like to cash them in for a lot of money.

Awareness helps prevent ills of body, soul

Can you catch AIDS from looking at somebody? From touching them? How about injecting their blood?

For freshmen and those of you who spent the summer on Mars, the answers are no, not really and yes.

Just the opposite holds true for what may be the number one sexually transmitted disease: heartbreak. There is no cure. Time and travel are said to help, but some particularly susceptible individuals have dragged around a case for years.

Some of the worst cases of heartbreak have been caused by the mere sight of a stranger across a crowded room. On the other hand, no reported cases of heartbreak have ever been traced to blood transfusion, or even to shooting up drugs with a needle that was previously used by a heartbroken addict.

The "touching" question is once again the tough one. Heartbreak shows a remarkable pattern of contagion. It is unlike most contagious diseases, which as the Latin etymology of con and tangere indicates, require bodily contact. Actually, lack of desired bodily contact is in itself sufficient to cause heartbreak in one person longing to touch another. On the other hand, of course, achieving bodily contact also raises your odds of succumbing to heartbreak to — oh, I'd say two-to-one. In this, the phenomenon of heartbreak resembles many Latin words, which have the unnerving habit of meaning both one thing and the exact opposite. You're damned if you do, and you're damned if you don't.

The symptoms in both cases are the same. You wake up crying, you don't want to eat, and your work seems supremely pointless — especially studying for your Latin class. In fact, though reliable studies have yet to be undertaken, I'd guess that heartbreak accounts for more missed classes than all sexually transmitted diseases put together.

How can you protect yourself?
 Know your partner. That's what every STD campaign advises. But I must confess, I don't know exactly what this amounts to. I'm afraid I don't know many people who have never had a sexually transmissible disease. Some of the most devastatingly seductive men I know are bisexual. And if you think no one in Iowa City uses drugs, then why did a friend of mine recently have to sweep hypodermic needles out of his new apartment?

So what next?
 Remember when you were little, and you'd drop your food on the floor in your excitement over one thing or another, and your mother would kiss it up to God? How about that?

As a first line of defense, it's pretty poor. Nevertheless, it seems that many people prefer to kiss away their fears.

Let me recommend two things to you. The first is condoms. You can buy them in your dorm, and there are instructions near the dispenser.

The second is the phrase, "No, thank you." This is effective both against AIDS and against a particularly late Eighties form of heartbreak that I would like to see eradicated in the decade ahead. This emotional epidemic is well documented in "Lust and Other Stories," by Susan Minot (Houghton Mifflon/Seymour Lawrence, 1989).

The young women of "Lust," one by one, kill their capacity to love. They start out wanting a life, wanting a family, very much wanting some particular guy. The man wants what they currently have: a carefully-delineated sexual arrangement.

Each woman accomodates.

They are not stupid, these characters, and certainly not naive. Susan Minot does a remarkable job of simply laying out the terms. She has written the sexual plot of a novel.

What's the matter with you? Don't any of you have a big sister? Now that we can treat even incipient AIDS with the new drug AZT, are we going to watch the world go down in heartbreak?

Whale killed during Sea World performance

SAN DIEGO — Kandu, the giant killer whale that gave birth before thousands of people last fall, was killed when she collided with another killer whale during a performance at Sea World Monday, park officials said.

Kandu, who weighed about 6,000 pounds, and Corky, who weighs about 8,000 pounds, were starting their 4 p.m. show in the performing tank at Shamu Stadium when the accident occurred, Sea World officials said.

The show was canceled and several thousand visitors who witnessed the bloody accident were escorted out of the stadium. Park officials said it's uncertain when the popular whale shows would resume.

Park veterinarians and animal-care staff were preparing to perform an autopsy on Kandu, who gave birth to Baby Shamu in the same stadium last September.

Corky is about 25 years old and 20 feet long. Kandu was about 14 years old and measured 17½ feet, said a Sea World spokeswoman, who asked that her name not be used.

Report: One arrested in Adamson murder

NAIROBI, Kenya — One person was arrested in the slaying of George Adamson, a source at the conservationist's remote camp said Tuesday, but officials could not confirm the report.

An army officer at the camp in Kora National Reserve said a Somali shopkeeper from the nearby town of Mbalambala was arrested Monday, one day after Adamson died in an encounter with armed robbers.

The officer, who declined to be identified by name or rank, said the suspect had been taken to the police station in the provincial capital of Garissa for questioning. The army and police are searching for the killers.

Officers at the national police headquarters in the capital, Nairobi, were not immediately available to comment on the report. Wildlife Director Richard Leakey, who was helping direct the hunt for Adamson's killers, said he could not confirm an arrest.

61 killed in escalating Sri Lankan violence

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — An escalating Sinhalese uprising took at least 61 more lives, and the government arrested 100 suspected radicals, officials and independent sources said Tuesday.

At least 18 bodies were found Monday in the central village of Mahawehera, where ethnic Sinhalese radicals ambushed a military convoy the previous day, said sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bodies were dumped in a roadside ditch formed by buried explosives that were detonated under the passing convoy, the sources said. The attack killed at least six soldiers and a civilian driver.

The sources said the bodies were of suspected radicals killed by government forces in revenge for Sunday's attack. They said the suspects had been shot.

However, senior government officials have in the past acknowledged privately that members of the security forces sometimes commit abuses in trying to halt the radicals' campaign of killing and terror.

Flight 103 relatives visit scene of crash

LOCKERBIE, Scotland — Relatives of those killed on Pan Am Flight 103 met Tuesday with police officers investigating the bombing of the New York-bound flight and said they were confident the killers would soon be found.

Bert Ammerman, U.S. president of the Victims of Pan Am Flight 103, called it "the most positive meeting we have had so far."

Asked why he thought police would soon identify the bombers, Ammerman replied: "You are not naive enough and I am not naive enough to think that they (the police) are going to give us information about the criminal investigation."

Ammerman stayed Monday night with the Rev. Patrick Keegans, a Roman Catholic priest whose Lockerbie house was destroyed when parts of the jumbo jet crashed on the southern Scottish town on Dec. 21, 1988. All 259 people aboard were killed along with 11 people on the ground.

Federal agency accuses 11 states of asbestos violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency accused demolition contractors in 11 states Tuesday of violating asbestos-removal safeguards in schools, restaurants and other buildings.

Civil lawsuits seeking unspecified damages were filed by the government against 45 companies and individuals plus the New York City Board of Education.

Officials said the cases represent only a small number of the hundreds of construction projects where asbestos is being removed without proper safeguards.

The agency estimated that as many as half the asbestos-connected demolitions and renovations conducted nationwide may not be in accordance with procedures required by federal air pollution laws.

Those laws require, for example, that asbestos be removed before demolition begins, that it be wetted down and enclosed in bags and that it be transported in covered trucks to approved disposal areas so that microscopic fibers are not spread through the air.

The inhalation of asbestos fibers is known to cause lung cancer; asbestosis, a scarring of the lung; and mesothelioma, a cancer of the chest and abdomen. Asbestos was used before the mid-'70s as insulation in many buildings. Today more than 730,000 buildings still contain some of the cancer-causing material, according to the government.

At the request of the EPA, the Justice Department filed 13 civil suits Tuesday in U.S. district courts in 11 cities, accusing the defendants of violating asbestos-removal requirements, according to the agency.

"Today's coast-to-coast effort to punish violators is a message to those who ignore the law," said Henry Habicht, EPA deputy administrator. "Asbestos is a known cause of cancer in humans, and it can be a killer. Companies which think 'business as usual' means ignoring the laws which protect public health will be prosecuted."

Assistant Attorney General Richard Stewart, head of the Justice Department's Land and Natural Resources Division, said, "EPA's regulations are designed to prevent serious risks to public health. Their enforcement is a top priority."

Penalties for violating asbestos-removal requirements could range up to $25,000 per day of work for each violation. EPA officials said more than $250,000 in civil fines may be sought in some of the cases, although specific damages to be sought have not been determined.

The suits involved renovation or demolition projects on buildings in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Florida, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, California, Nevada and Washington.

The defendants included the New York City Board of Education, cited for allegedly failing to report asbestos removal work in 80 or more school buildings. It was not immediately clear whether removal requirements were violated at the schools.

Among the projects cited in the suits were renovation projects at public schools in Woodville and Kent, Wash.; a high school in Kansas City, Mo.; a junior high school in Holywood, Kan.; and colleges in Pittsburg, Kan., and Berea, Ohio.

Complete ring of debris found as Voyager 2 inspects Neptune

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 2 spacecraft found at least one complete ring of debris orbiting Neptune, surprising scientists who discovered it while trying to relocate a partial ring dubbed the "lost arc," NASA said Tuesday.

Two partial rings — called ring arcs — appeared in pictures Voyager made Aug. 11 as it approached the solar system's fourth largest planet, but the arc that orbits 17,000 miles above Neptune's cloudtops couldn't be found in subsequent images, prompting researchers to dub it the lost arc or "ghost arc."

When scientists rediscovered it in a series of 16 photographs sent back Tuesday, "It seemed reasonable that this was indeed the lost arc our imaging team raiders were looking for," team leader Bradford Smith said.

"But instead of being an arc, it turns out to be a complete circle, a complete ring. . . . It goes all the way around — Neptune's first complete ring," Smith said during a news conference at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The new photos also show the second and larger arc, which orbits 23,300 miles above Neptune's cloudtops, extends farther around Neptune than previously believed, suggesting that it also may be a complete ring, but with "regions of greater and lesser amounts of material in it," Smith said.

He said the answer may not come until Neptune's ring system is photographed while backlit by distant sunlight. That will happen after Voyager makes its closest approach to Neptune by passing 3,000 miles over the planet's north pole cloudtops at 8:55 p.m. PDT Thursday.

Author wants bowl boycott until players get pay

Hawks among athletes contacted by DeVenzio

Michael Trilk
The Daily Iowan

Ever since Dick DeVenzio played basketball at Duke University he has held a grudge. DeVenzio feels NCAA Division I football and men's basketball players are being exploited by their schools and the NCAA.

"Major college sports have become an exploitive money-making system that benefits everyone except those who generate the revenue," DeVenzio said. "Athletes are controlled by rules that unfairly deprive the athletes of their market value and do not accomplish academic objectives."

DeVenzio, the author of Rip-Off U, a condemnation of the NCAA's

"Major college sports have become an exploitive money-making system that benefits everyone except those who generate the revenue."

— Author Dick DeVenzio

running of sports, isn't the first person to speak out against the system. But he is the first one prepared to do something about it.

DeVenzio has contacted football players from every school in the Big Ten and Pac Ten attempting to get them to stand up for what he believes are their rights, by boycotting the 1990 Rose Bowl.

"Players should share the benefits of a $16 million event," DeVenzio said. "I've been doing this for over five years and I'm tired of being just some one out there talking. I really want to do something and I think we are focused on something doable."

DeVenzio said that paying the players, or sharing the gate receipts with the players is only fair since they are the ones bringing in the money. And apparently some players are listening.

The former athlete turned author met with at least four starters from last year's Iowa football team and he said they reacted with some degree of interest for his plan. He would not confirm any names but he did say in an interview with The Daily Iowan Monday night that one of the players is a starter on this year's Iowa team.

Monday, Iowa associate athletic director Larry Bruner said that he had no knowledge of DeVenzio's scheme to disrupt college's richest bowl game.

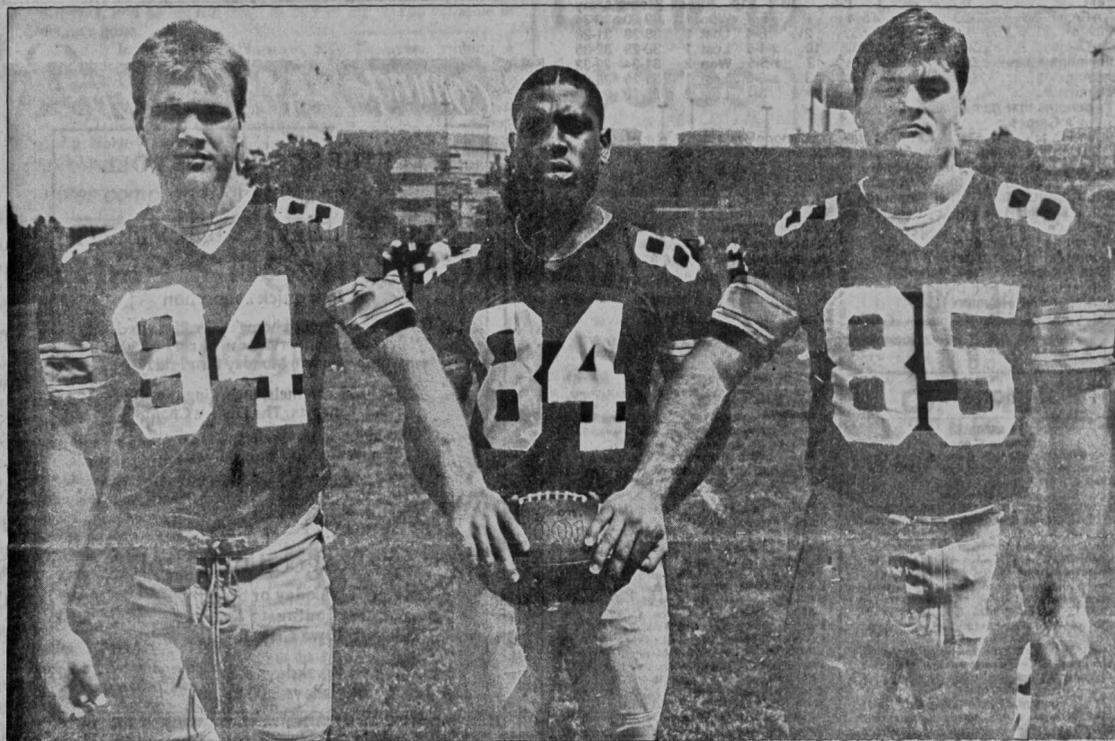

"This is the first I've heard of it,"

See Ripoff, Page 3B

The DeVenzio Plan

1. Immediate eligibility of transfer students.
2. Financial aid for remedial studies.
3. Scholarships for as long as it takes athlete to graduate.
4. Number of scholarships at school based on number of athletes who graduate.
5. Spending money as part of a typical scholarship.
6. Plane tickets for before, during and after school year.
7. Travel and lodging for parents.
8. Use of courtesy cars.
9. Cash incentives for academic progress.
10. Insurance and special emergency funds.
11. Rules permitting players to benefit from commercial opportunities, shoe deals, camps and other perks now only available to coaches.
12. Trust funds and other benefits available to Olympic and other "amateur" athletes.
13. Total deregulation permitting athletes to receive any money freely offered.

The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan/Scott Norris

Iowa sophomore Ron Ryan, right, junior Michael Tittley, and senior John Palmer all hope to get their hands on the ball at the tight end position this year. The three will try to fill the void left by All-American Marv Cook.

Cook's departure leaves Fry cold

Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football general Hayden Fry shivers everytime he glances at his 1989 casualty list:

- All-Big Ten quarterback Chuck Hartlieb — went south.
- All-Big Ten wide receiver Deven Harberts — went north.
- All-Big Ten offensive tackle Bob Kratch — went east.
- All-Big Ten noseguard Dave Haight — went home.

The shivers subside eventually, however, because Fry realizes that at least shades of experience will be replacing the old soldiers at each position.

But for Fry, All-American tight end Marv Cook is one old soldier that just won't seem to fade away.

"How do you replace a Marv Cook?" Fry asks.

You can't, according to first-year tight end coach Dave Triplett.

"Marv was a great player and no one can replace him," he said, "but the greatest thing about college football is that the faces change every year."

Iowa fans might have difficulty recognizing this year's fresh group of faces. Nine tight ends, including several walk-ons, are vying for the job Cook left vacant.

Three names have surfaced under the watchful eye of the coaching staff. Fifth-year senior John Palmer, sophomore Ron Ryan and junior transfer Michael Tittley all have several years of college football under their belts, but only four total receptions wearing the black and gold.

The 6-foot-4, 240-pound Palmer is expected to be the starter. That's where he was listed on the Iowa two-deep chart last week.

"I don't know if Iowa will ever overcome the loss of Marv Cook," Palmer said. "He's the best tight end in the nation. I just tried to learn all the things he taught me. Our goal is to just try to make the position solid like last year, contribute every game and go out and do our best."

The Arnold, Mo., native has spent the better part of his career behind two of the best tight ends in Iowa history, Cook and Mike Flagg.

"Palmer's paid his dues over the last four years," Triplett said, "and he's a very capable football player."

Ryan fans A's Henderson for 'unreachable' milestone

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan struck out his 5,000th batter Tuesday night, becoming the first, and perhaps the last, to reach that milestone when he fanned Oakland's Rickey Henderson in the fifth inning.

Ryan went into the game needing six strikeouts, and got them quickly. Facing the Athletics for the first time since 1979, he struck out Jose Canseco in the first inning, Dave Henderson and Tony Phillips in the second, Rickey Henderson and Ron Hassey in the third and finally got Rickey swinging on a 3-2 fastball leading off the fifth.

Ryan tipped his hat to a thundering standing ovation while rookie catcher Chad Kreuter ran the historic ball out to the mound. Ryan's teammates on the field surged to congratulate him and the scoreboard flashed "5,000" as hundreds of flash bulbs popped in the stands.

As per Ryan's request, the game was not stopped and the Rangers in the dugout did not come onto the field. Ryan returned to business and Carney Lansford followed with a single.

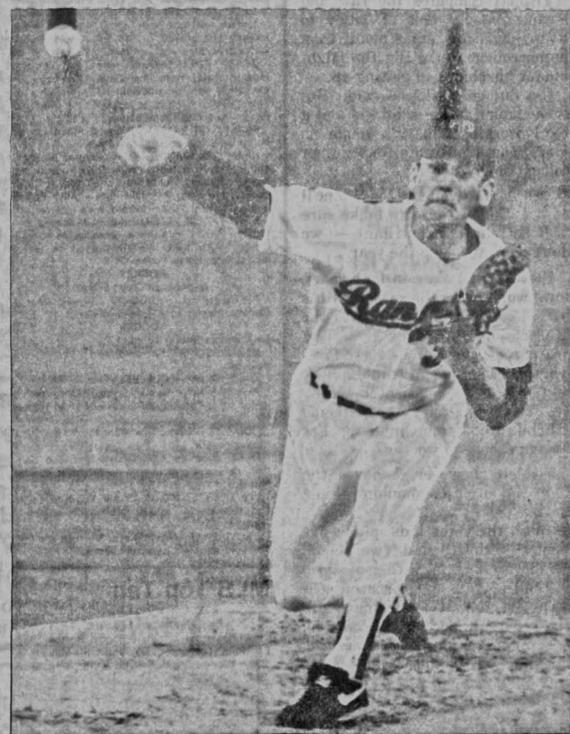

Henderson struck out after fouling off two 3-2 pitches and fanned on a 96 mph fastball, matching his fastest of the night.

A sellout crowd of 43,000, including Commissioner Bart Giamatti and Rangers owner George Bush, son of the president, gave Ryan three standing ovations before the game even started. The fans cheered loudly every time he got two strikes on a batter, and Ryan rarely disappointed them.

Ryan's 5,000th strikeout put him 22 percent ahead of the runnerup, Steve Carlton, who had 4,136. That is the largest margin between two leaders in any lifetime category. Bert Blyleven is second among active pitchers with 3,536.

Ryan began the game with seven straight fastballs, but quickly shifted to changeups and curves. He struck out three in the first two innings, all swinging, and his fastest fastball was 96 mph.

Former Hawk given boot by Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Paul Glonek, a junior defensive tackle who has been charged for an alleged assault in Iowa, has been dismissed from the Arizona team, coach Dick Tomey said Tuesday.

Glonek, 21, had been suspended from the team last week after coaches learned that officials in Iowa City had accused Glonek of hitting an Iowa student in the face during an argument on a street in downtown Iowa City on July 30.

Glonek, a 6-foot-5, 272-pounder from Chicago, began preseason practice as Arizona's No. 1 nose guard. He has transferred to Arizona from the University of Iowa.

Tomey had put him on probation last spring after an altercation in a Tucson restaurant resulted in charges being filed that were dropped after Glonek and another student paid for damages.

Chris Evert

Open slated as final chapter in Evert's story

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert, who burst onto the tennis scene at the U.S. Open in 1971 when she reached the semifinals as a 16-year-old, says she will retire from serious competition after this year's Open.

"No more 'maybes.' No more 'probablys.' ... My mind is made up. The 1989 U.S. Open will be my final tournament," Evert writes in the Aug. 28 issue of Sports Illustrated.

Evert, 34, will still represent the United States in the Federation Cup in Tokyo in October. She and Martina Navratilova will play exhibition matches this fall and winter, and she may make a cameo appearance at a tournament in Boca Raton, Fla., where she lives.

"But as for Chris Evert, serious competitor, yes, I guess I really am outta here," she writes.

"I don't feel the same intensity. ... I know I've lost some confidence, and I just don't want to pay the price any more."

A native of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Evert has won more matches and more tournaments than any other player, male or female. She has won the U.S. Open six times, Wimbledon three times, the Australian Open twice and the French Open a record seven times.

For 13 consecutive years, 1974-86, she won at least one Grand Slam tournament. And she holds the best record on clay of any player for any single surface with a 125-match win streak set from August 1973 to May 1979.

"Physically, I've never felt better," Evert writes. "I'm in better shape than I was five years ago."

"The mental strain is the difference. I used to cruise through the early rounds of tournaments. Now I'm exhausted after three matches, and then comes Zina (Garrison) or Lori McNeil or one of the younger girls, say Monica Seles, and I can see they're not scared or intimidated."

Evert says she has found her post-tennis niche as "Mrs. Andy Mill, full-time housewife." It is her second marriage, and she says she is looking forward to having a baby.

"No, I am not pregnant yet," she writes in the magazine.

Valvano's AD position in jeopardy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The outgoing chancellor of North Carolina State said Tuesday that the alleged basketball improprieties that forced his resignation may also force Coach Jim Valvano to resign as athletic director.

The allegations were made in Peter Golenbock's book "Personal Fouls," which claimed basketball players used drugs and that their grades were changed to keep them eligible.

Bruce Poulton, who stepped down Monday, said the university's image has been tarnished by publicity surrounding the book. He noted that one newspaper headline used the word "scandal."

"There simply is no scandal at North Carolina State University, but there has been a tapestry woven of events ...," Poulton said. "I'm concerned that there are a lot of people in North Carolina that are beginning to wonder, seriously wonder, if indeed there was a scandal in the university."

Fallout from the book may also overtake Valvano, who offered his resignation as athletic director as early as two months ago, Poulton said.

"I felt it would be most desirable for him to remain in that post until the NCAA investigation that we requested jointly ... has been able to run its course," he said. "We're only a month or two away from that."

Poulton said he still believes Valvano should remain as coach.

"My sense is that there are a lot of people who feel ... that it's inappropriate for him to have both roles," he said.

Valvano was in his office Tuesday, but declined to meet with reporters or comment.

Poulton said he hoped to defuse some of the controversy when he resigned.

Iowa assistant transfers to ISU

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Mike Henrich, an assistant men's tennis coach at the University of Iowa the last three years, has been named the head coach at Iowa State.

Henrich will oversee both the men's and women's programs at Iowa State. He replaces Jay Louderback, who resigned to become women's tennis coach at Notre Dame. Louderback had been in charge of both programs at Iowa State.

A native of Missouri Valley, Henrich joined the Iowa staff as a graduate assistant in the fall of 1986. He played and coached in Germany on the European circuit in the summer of 1988.

Henrich lettered at Iowa in 1986 after spending his first three years of college at Northeast Missouri State, where he was a top 30 singles player in NCAA Division II. He won two Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association singles titles and was on a conference championship doubles team.

Johnson's keeper feared for his safety

TORONTO (AP) — The man responsible for making sure top Canadian athletes weren't taking steroids said Tuesday that he was afraid Ben Johnson's coach would beat him up if he tried to catch the sprinter with surprise drug tests.

"There were times that I physically feared for my safety," Tom MacWilliam said in an interview after testifying before the federal inquiry into drugs in amateur sports.

The inquiry was touched off when Johnson tested positive for steroids at the Seoul Olympics last summer and was stripped of his gold medal and a world record in the 100 meters.

As Johnson's image as the world's fastest man continued to grow, coach Charlie Francis and other teammates became too powerful for the association to control, he said.

"I was afraid of Charlie. He would go off the deep end in just a flash," said MacWilliam, who developed the anti-doping program for the Canadian Track and Field Association in the early 1980s but severed his relationship with the organization in 1987.

"I think he would have hit me, yeah. I was certainly afraid that he was going to."

O'Connell leads U.S. Amateur Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Eoghan O'Connell of Ireland, fresh from helping the Britain-Ireland Walker Cup team beat the United States, shot a 3-under-par 68 Tuesday to lead after the first of two qualifying rounds at the 89th annual U.S. Amateur Golf Championship.

O'Connell, a 21-year-old Wake Forest senior from Cork, Ireland, carded a 34-34 over the par-71, 6,807-yard Waynesborough Country Club course, one of two sites for the two-day medal-play qualifying test for 312 starters.

On Thursday, the surviving 64 qualifiers start four days of match play at the par-70, 6,523-yard Merion Golf Club for the national amateur title.

Steinbrenner pleads innocent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — George Steinbrenner insisted Tuesday that Dallas Green fired himself as manager of the New York Yankees and the owner also criticized General Manager Syd Thrift.

Steinbrenner said Green tried to provoke his own ouster and that he doesn't understand why Green would say the owner is impossible to work for.

"It's never Dallas' fault. Whenever something goes wrong, it's always someone else's fault. He's having this problem over and over again," Steinbrenner said in Tuesday's Tampa Tribune.

"He absolutely (tried to provoke the firing) because he couldn't win with this club. He didn't get any better from the All-Star break on," said Steinbrenner, who replaced Green with Bucky Dent last Friday. "You look at Milwaukee. They had a lot of injuries, but they're right there. Look at Toronto. They improved. We were dead in the water."

Tight end

He can do the same things that Cook and Flagg used to do so well. He's strong, fast and hard working."

And even though he's only caught four passes as a Hawkeye, Triplett isn't concerned.

"(John Palmer) didn't get to play much (over the last four years), but he played behind the best that there was and he knows the position," Triplett said. "He learned from Marv and everything I told Marv he heard and profited from."

"He's a very experienced football player from a knowledge standpoint. He simply needs the game experience."

Ryan, a 6-foot-4, 227-pound specimen has the least experience in the college ranks, but might be the best natural athlete.

The young man from Jefferson City, Mo., was one of only three Hawkeyes to play as a first-year freshman, displaying his talents on the kick coverage and special teams.

"Ron Ryan is a very physical player," Triplett said. "He's a little young, but he has great tools. He's took some nice strides this spring."

Nice enough to reward him with the back-up job according to Fry, although nothing is certain.

"Hopefully," Ryan said, "John and I can make the fans forget about Cook."

A welcome addition to the tight end battle is Titley, a 1988 first-team junior college All-American from Nassau Community College in New York.

"We don't know exactly what kind of player he is," Fry said before fall practices began, "but by looking at his films, he's an outstanding player."

Triplett compares the raw and inexperienced talent of Titley to Ryan, but the adjustment from junior college to the Big Ten might hinder his chance of suiting up.

"So far, so good," he said. "But even though he's a solid kid and a hard working kid, it's tough to make the transition from junior college to Division I."

"We want to wait and see how he'll adjust. But we want to make sure he'll be ready to contribute — we don't want to waste the year."

For the first time in four years, Iowa won't begin the season with a bona fide tight end. And with the loss of back-up tight end Tom Ward, receivers Harberts and Sean Smith (academically ineligible); and with both experienced receivers Jon Fillion and Peter Marciano rehabilitating from injuries, Fry has an excuse to worry.

Triplett, however, believes the tight end situation shouldn't skip a beat.

"With the three kids, plus some others," Triplett said, "we should be able to come up with some good football players as the season goes along. The offensive scheme is still the same. They might not have all the publicity that Cook received, but they will do a good job."

Bruner said. "I don't think that something like that would work right now. I was under the impression that they were students first and athletes second."

That's where DeVenzio has a problem.

"It would be great if that was the way it is but it isn't," DeVenzio said. "That may be the way it is at a Coe College but not at an Iowa. Last fall I talked with (Iowa Athletic Director) Bump Elliott. I remember seeing the black and gold brochures for each sport. They don't need those."

"Give the athlete a choice. Give him a share of the gate receipts and let him pay for his own education," DeVenzio said.

But Division I schools aren't ready to start paying their players. Not just yet anyway.

"That may be the way it is 15 years down the road," Bruner said. "But if we start paying our football and basketball players we won't have enough money to fund our other sports."

DeVenzio doesn't buy that excuse either.

"Three years ago at SMU, whose basketball program was not creating much revenue, would have said the same thing," he said. "But when there football program was not taking in one single dollar they still had money to pay for scholarships and (head coach) Forest Gregg's salary."

"Ohio State said they don't have enough money but they had $400,000 to buy out Earl Bruce's contract. North Carolina had $800,000 to buy out Dick Crum's contract."

DeVenzio's plan comes just a few months after several Iowa football players insisted, to a room jam packed full of reporters, that they were not being exploited.

"Just because someone says that, doesn't mean it's true," DeVenzio said. "Back in 1840 there were blacks on plantations that said they didn't want their freedom."

"I understand what (college athletes) are saying. They are not stupid. They are in a situation and they have to make the best of it that they can."

So DeVenzio wants to get just one

Iowa Notebook

Dumbfounded dean — James Schwartz, the dean of physical education and athletics at El Camino junior college in California, was shocked when he heard the news that wide receiver Sean Smith had been declared academically ineligible. "I was really surprised when I heard the news that Sean was suspended for academic reasons," Schwartz said, "because he was always in good shape when he went to school here. He had about a 2.5 gpa. We never had any problems with him. I saw Sean this summer and he didn't say anything about it to me. It's a real big surprise."

Hawkeye hopefuls — Former Iowa football players Deven Harberts and Rick Bayless both saw action in Minnesota's exhibition game against the Washington Redskins. Harberts caught a pass for 28 yards, while Bayless scored a fourth-quarter touchdown from one yard out. Bayless also led the Vikings rushing attack with 56 yards in five carries.

Oops! — In yesterday's Iowa Notebook, we incorrectly stated that the UI Sailing Club lost its "club sport" status with the university. The UI Rowing Club, instead, is the club which has lost its status with the university. The Sailing Club will hold teaching sessions the first two weekends of September at Lake McBride. For more information contact Steve Woodward at 353-0400 or Chris Schultes at 335-3181.

Quotable — Football coach Hayden Fry on the loss of linebacker Jim Reilly: "He was the most unheralded player on our football team. He was our quarterback, he called all the defensive signals and adjustments, and he led the team in tackles. He was so valuable to us, but he's gone."

Q Iowa basketball forward Ray Thompson ribbing a losing team at the Field House consisting of Iowa guards Brian Garner and James Moses: "I won't let my team lose. I just won't let it happen." If his words live true during the upcoming season without B.J. Armstrong, Ed Horton and Roy Marble, Thompson could be the next Iowa All-American.

Lemieux scores big raise

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux today became hockey's second $2 million man, signing a five-year contract worth nearly $12 million.

"This is much too much to be paying Mario, but we will live with it," Pittsburgh Penguins owner Edward J. DeBartolo said at a news conference where Mario signed his new contract.

"This is the greatest day of my life," said Lemieux. "Hopefully I can play for the Penguins for another five to 10 years."

Lemieux's salary is rivaled in the NHL by only Wayne Gretzky's, worth $20 million over eight years. Gretzky signed last year after being traded from the Edmonton Oilers to the Los Angeles Kings.

Lemieux's salary will be only somewhat lower than the $2.5 million a year Gretzky earns, according to a source close to the Lemieux negotiations who spoke on condition he not be named.

Until Gretzky signed his contract last summer, no NHL player had earned as much as $1 million per season. Lemieux then renegotiated his contract for the 1988-89 season, winning a $1-million raise over his scheduled $600,000 salary for a total of $1.6 million.

Penguins owner Edward J. DeBartolo also agreed to negotiate a new contract before the 1989-90 season.

Lemieux's agent, Tom Reich, said Monday he had made steady progress with Penguins negotiator Carmen Policy.

Lemieux, who at 23 is already the Penguins' all-time scoring leader, has scored at least 100 points in each of his five NHL seasons. He was the league's leading scorer the last two seasons and was named the league's Most Valuable Player in 1987-88. Gretzky recaptured the award last season.

Eagles should soar over lethargic East

(AP) — Say this for Buddy Ryan. He's come through on most of his predictions, like winning the NFC East last season when the pundits believed Washington and the New York Giants were far superior.

But say this, too. The Eagles could as easily have been 6-10 as 10-6. As quarterback Randall Cunningham, the NFC's best imitation of a one-man offense, puts it: "God was on our side."

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES
 The Eagles got two wins when Roy Green and Mark Bavaro, two of the surest-handed receivers in the league, dropped touchdown passes; another on a play in which their own blocked field goal attempt in overtime was picked up and run in for the winning touchdown; a fourth when Dallas Coach Tom Landry misjudged the position of the ball.

But they remain a mild favorite in a division that seems to have slipped into mediocrity.

An argument also can be made for New York and Washington, although the Giants are in transition and the Redskins are aging. Phoenix is competitive but thin and Dallas should be better than 3-13 under Jimmy Johnson.

Philadelphia is probably the only team on the rise.

NEW YORK GIANTS
 The Giants' Bill Parcells knows about Super Bowls, too. He won one in 1986 but hasn't been back to the playoffs since — the Giants blew their final game to the Jets to tie the Eagles at 10-6 and find themselves left out on tiebreakers.

This year they're rebuilding while trying to stay competitive.

Only center Bart Oates of the offensive linemen has more than three years experience and the Giants must replace the retired Harry Carson, Jim Burt and George Martin, whose leadership will be missed on a basically young defense.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS

The Redskins took the customary post-Super Bowl plunge, slipping to 7-9 and leading Coach Joe Gibbs to try and recreate the dominant running game that's the key to his one-back offense. He did it by persuading general manager Bobby Beathard, since resigned, to obtain Gerald Riggs from Atlanta and Earnest Byner from Cleveland for the usual draft choices that the Redskins disdain.

But that added to the team's age — 17 seasons in the last 20 without a No. 1 draft choice will do that.

DALLAS COWBOYS
 The Cowboys aren't thinking about division titles.

Johnson, brought in by Arkansas pal Jerry Jones to run the team after Jones bought the team and fired Landry, will rebuild from the top with one of two rookies at quarterback — Troy Aikman, first choice in the regular draft or Steve Walsh, first in the supplemental.

Herschel Walker provides a scoring threat from anywhere on the field, but the Cowboys need help on the offensive and defensive lines, at linebacker and at wide receiver.

PHOENIX CARDINALS
 Phoenix, playing its second year in the desert, has one serious problem that Plan B may rectify — the state of quarterback Neil Lomax' arthritic hip. It had him talking retirement in the preseason and how long he stays may depend on how well the offensive line keeps the likes of White, Taylor and Mann away from him — one thing this division has is pass rushers.

PREDICTION: 1, Eagles; 2, Giants (wild-card); 3, Redskins; 4, Cowboys; 5, Cardinals.

On the Scene

Greetings and good tidings! I'm here to help sort out just what in God's Name is going on musically — rock musically, that is — in the UI area each week. This first week we'll take things slowly and ease into the semester with a list of places and things to become familiar with if being "up" on alternative music and live shows is key to your collegiate existence:

KRUI (89.7 FM) — OK, as the college alternative radio station's music director I may be a bit partial here. Sporting a "No Top 40 From Within the Last 10 Years" format policy, KRUI is the station to pay attention to once you've finally gotten sick of old, '70s rock 'n' mold being billed as "Classic Rock 'n' Roll" and getting played into the ground. Does KRUI sound, as the general manager of one local commercial station noted, "...like a bunch of kids playing radio"? Hell, yes! With a volunteer staff of about 150 students, KRUI provides you with a non-commercial alternative to the George Michaels, Richard Marx and Debbie Gibsons. KRUI also promotes live shows in the area, making it a good source of information of this sort. Watch the Entertainment Today section of the DI each day for listings of specialty shows focusing on jazz, blues, avant-garde, heavy metal, soul and dance music.

Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. — At the moment this is the one club in Iowa City that features both touring and local alternative artists. Gabe's weekly schedule is posted on the front door, and daily shows are listed in E.T. The cover charge is almost always cheap and the music's cool.

Tonight Voodoo Gearshift, a local band, and winners of this year's Riverfest Battle of the Bands, will be headlining at Gabe's. They've just finished recording their first LP on Link Records. A metal band that's not too modest to choreograph hair-swinging routines, these guys should make it big inside two years' time. Opening for Voodoo Gearshift will be Peterbuilt and a new garage-pop trio who call themselves Blank Expressions. Blank Expressions are a pretty tight combo, and they deserve more attention than they've received so far. (Alas, again I must admit to being a bit partial as they played our last party for their weight in beer...)

And on Friday night the current champs of the Iowa City rock scene return to Gabe's. Full Fathom Five has achieved local and national success this past year with their college charting album "5 a.m." Also on the bill look for the Des Moines-based Hollowmen, a tight, hard-hitting group with a good-sized following. And as if all this weren't enough, opening for these two acts will be the Twin Tone Records' recording artists Skunk. Touring in the Midwest to support their first LP, these guys know how to play. (It's also an adventurous $8 well-spent on a copy of their first release "Last American Virgin.")

Swell Record Stores — The Record Collector, 4½ S. Linn St., specializes in new and used alternative recordings. B.J. Records, 6½ S. Dubuque St., has a wide selection of commercial and non-commercial releases and merchandise. Real! Compact Discs & Records, 308 E. Washington St., specializes, as the name suggests, in compact discs, in particular jazz and blues releases.

NEO Magazine — A free publication available at Gabe's Oasis, as well as the Record Collector, B.J.'s and wherever else they decide to leave it. This monthly magazine reviews new releases, does interviews, spotlights local bands and reviews concerts. NEO also carries the monthly schedule for Gabe's and for The Laughing Iguana in Des Moines.

Another easy way to keep abreast of the music situation in I.C. is to take a stroll through the Iowa City Downtown Pedestrian Mall. Bills for shows are usually posted all over and sometimes these fliers are the sole extent of promoters' PR work for smaller shows.

And that's about it for this week's gentle introduction. In coming weeks things'll get faster, uglier and messier as I review the previous weekend's shows, preview upcoming events and wander aimlessly through interviews. See you then.

Ringo: No go on album release

ATLANTA (AP) — A recording by Ringo Starr debuted in court Tuesday, blaring from a boom box as a judge weighed whether the song would be a $3.5 million hit or is an alcohol-marred embarrassment, as the ex-Beatle claims.

Music industry executives have said the record would be a "guaranteed No. 1 hit," an attorney for Memphis, Tenn., producer Chips Moman said as he played the tape for Fulton County Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper.

The song, "I Can Help," is one of 14 Starr recorded with Moman in 1987. Moman wants to release an album to coincide with Starr's current smash U.S. concert tour, but Starr says he is unhappy with his performance, and the album would hurt his reputation.

Cooper did not rule immediately on whether to extend a 30-day order blocking the record's release. The restraining order expires Thursday.

The judge, after telling attorney

Thomas Washburn to "turn it down," listened patiently to Starr's upbeat rendition of Billy Swan's 1975 hit.

Starr, who recently completed a much-publicized treatment for alcoholism, also objects to "Whiskey and Soda," a part of the collection, his attorney, Robert Fleming Jr., said Tuesday.

"That is not a song Mr. Starr is eager to have released on an album with his name and his picture on the cover," Fleming said.

Alcoholism "is an addiction he was suffering from when this music was recorded," Fleming said of his client.

Neither Starr nor Moman attended Tuesday's hearing.

Though Starr continued to enjoy high recognition, his recording career had stagnated when he came to Moman in 1987, Washburn said. Moman, whose work includes producing Elvis Presley in the late 1960s, has a reputation for reviving careers, he said. "The point is this: Two people came together for the purpose of resurrecting a career," Washburn said. "This album would do this for Ringo Starr. Ringo Starr hasn't had a hit since 1975."

Washburn said the album, if released now while Starr is on tour, could make $3.5 million.

Fleming claimed, however, that the album would hurt Starr at a time when his career has been boosted by his tour with his "All-Star Band." Fleming said that while the record features Starr singing, he does not play drums on it.

"All an artist has is his style, his name, his professional reputation and his image," Fleming said. "Here, we've got an album with one of the most famous drummers in music history and he's not playing drums. He doesn't want that."

Moman has contended he invested $146,239 in the Starr project, and said he rejected an offer by Starr of $100,000 to kill the album.

Hancher Auditorium will launch the performing arts season at the UI with an acrobatic celebration of human movement when it presents Pilobolus Dance Theatre at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

Before the performance the UI women's gymnastics team will demonstrate the interrelationship of dance and gymnastics at 7:15 p.m. in the Hancher lobby.

Pilobolus will also perform at the UI Freshman Convocation, today at 3:30 p.m. in Hancher, illustrating for the new students that creativity and the arts are integral parts of life and learning at the UI. Today's performance is free to the public.

Tomorrow night's performance will feature a mixture of long-time Pilobolus favorites and two new works choreographed since the company's last visit to Hancher in 1985. The new works are:

- the erotic romp, "Debut C," choreographed last year by Moses Pendleton in collaboration with the company's six dancers to music by Debussy.

- and "Land's End" choreographed in 1986 by Robby Barnett, Alison Chase and Jonathan Wolken.

Works on the program that have long been part of the Pilobolus repertoire are the collaborative "Walklyndon" from 1971, Pendleton's "Bonsai" and Chase's "Moonblind," featuring the music of saxophonist Jane Ira Bloom.

Pilobolus was founded in 1971 by Moses Pendleton and Jonathan Wolken as an outgrowth of dance classes with Alison Chase at Dartmouth College and was named after a fungus that grows on horse manure. Almost immediately the gymnastic interlocking of bodies in impossible-looking constructions — often with humorous effect — became the trademark of Pilobolus.

Not only did Pilobolus dances look unlike anything seen before, but the company operated like no other. Shunning New York, the nation's dance mecca, choosing instead a home base in Connecticut and using a process of collective choreography, Pilobolus established a reputation for adventurous and irreverent originality.

The company still defies conventions of movement and organization, with five artistic directors who work, together and separately, with six dancers.

Works that seemed to defy gravity and the limits of human strength made Pilobolus one of the most popular, and most discussed, companies in contemporary dance. The company's TV appearances have ranged from "The Tonight Show" to PBS' "Dance in America," "Great Performances" and "Sesame Street."

"We had the kind of sensational impact of a rock group — way beyond the dance world," Pendleton recalls.

Although the personnel has undergone many changes, and relationships between the members have not always been harmonious, the commitment to collaboration and collective creativity has remained. The new generations of Pilobolus dancers have made their own contributions, keeping the company's work fresh and unpredictable as it has grown more sophisticated and theatrical.

The company's new works prove that Pilobolus is still provocative, retaining the power to surprise, entertain and shock its audiences.

In the sexy "Debut C," the dancers cavort behind a scrim, which also serves as a screen for projections of Pendleton's photographs. Burt Supree of The Village Voice described this sometimes serious but mostly tongue-in-cheek dance as "a beatific vision of buttocks and breasts."

Jennifer Dunning of The New York Times called it "a typically Pilobolian exploration of and play with shape," with parodies of the overwrought passion of Nijinsky's "Afternoon of a Faun."

"Land's End" expresses the growing narrative emphasis of Pilobolus, laced with the bizarre humor that has been a Pilobolus trait from the beginning. This piece follows the funny and cruel reactions of a very odd group of people when an apparently dead body washes up on the shore. Deborah Jowitz of The Village Voice commented that "Land's End" begins "with the haunted and ominous delicacy of a Poe tale" and has an ending "that hovers between shock and joke."

Tickets for the tomorrow night's performance of Pilobolus Dance Theatre are $20 and $18. Tickets are available to UI students, senior citizens and young people 18 and under at the discounted price of $12 and $10.80. Tickets may be purchased in advance from the Hancher Auditorium box office.

This event is supported, in part, by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts.

nce upon a time, just after the turn of the century, there lived a young sign writer with an idea. He approached his peers with a new, unique type of ink pen — a pen, he said, that would do a better job of painting small signs than the widely used brush.

From this tiny seed of an idea, planted by an energetic Midwestern chap with the unlikely name of Dick Blick, sprang the beginnings of what eventually became a widely respected mail order firm, serving artists, teachers and sign painters all over the world. Now, Dick Blick Company has come to Iowa City, proudly offering a bright new retail store to serve the Eastern Iowa area.

Regardless of whether you are a hobbyist, teacher, graphic designer, display artist — or just curious — please accept our invitation to stop in soon and look us over.

We think you'll like what you see.

Chet Baker

'Let's Get Lost' tells end of trumpeter Chet Baker

William Palk
Special to The Daily Iowan

He sits there, haggard visage perfectly framed by the camera, squeezing slow words almost painfully from his bruised lips. You know the type — you've seen him sitting outside the bus depot in any city, the lined, lean face speaking not of formal education but of advanced degrees in the school of hard experience.

This wizened figure might seem an anomalous subject for filmmaker Bruce Weber, fashion photographer and celebrity hound extraordinaire, except that he is the shell of a man Weber has idolized since the age of 16. "Let's Get Lost" is the long-awaited, award-winning documentary about the self-destructive, charismatic, legendary jazz trumpeter/singer Chet Baker, who died last year in a mysterious fall from a Skid Row hotel balcony in Amsterdam.

A labor of love (Weber reportedly spent over $1 million of his own making it), "Let's Get Lost" is shot in lush, glamorous, high-contrast black and white, and is a free-form meditation on the smoky midnight world of '50s Cool Jazz, of which Baker was a prime exponent. A lethal combination of classic good looks and tragic introspection, Baker seduced fans and lovers alike with his reticent demeanor and softly sinuous renditions of current jazz numbers as well as popular classics by Gershwin, Kern and others.

Not strictly speaking a "documentary" about Chet Baker's life, "Let's Get Lost" might more accurately be termed "Anatomy of an Obsession," for Weber's true subject is Chet Baker the irresistible fetish, the object of countless infatuations. Leaping back and forth in time, the film employs Baker and his music as both foreground and background as Weber alternates recent interviews with the musician and his cohorts with archival footage of Baker playing and singing — in '50s and '60s TV clips, in William Claxton's iconic photographs, or in the cheap Italian quickies Baker appeared in during his years of exile in Europe. This free approach allows for digressions into Weber's own Baker fixation, with weird set pieces in which Baker is ensconced amid a bevy of Weber's Baker surrogates (among them boxer/model Andy Minsker, subject of Weber's first documentary, "Broken Noses").

Baker's was a productive yet fractured career. Although he left behind over 100 albums and made over $200,000 even in his last year, Baker's life still bears the scars of squandered opportunity and waste. Born in Yale, Okla., in 1929, he was enlisted in the Army by his parents when he was only 16; he first achieved acclaim in the early 1950s as a sideman in ensembles featuring Charlie Parker, Gerry Mulligan and other jazz luminaries. He tied Nat "King" Cole as top male vocalist in a Down Beat poll, and in 1959 Baker was slated to costar with Natalie Wood in MGM's "All the Fine Young Cannibals," loosely based on his own rise to fame. But, already heavily involved in the drug scene and its attendant legal imbroglios, he fled to Europe, and Robert Wagner impersonated him in the finished film, a clip from which in "Let's Get Lost" shows Miss Wood excitedly flaring her nostrils in response to Wagner's dubbed-in trumpet virtuosity.

The power of the artist to manipulate and deceive is the main subtext of "Let's Get

At the Bijou

While Chet Baker's musical soul remained relatively unscathed by his turbulent excesses, his face aged horribly, reflecting every degree of his descent.

Lost." Even at his most wan, Baker could attract fans and lovers into the Stygian darkness of his blues world with his swooning, impeccably phrased incantations of romantic ballads. The uniquely unified texture of "Let's Get Lost" promotes bitterly amusing ironies in this connection: The young, impossibly photogenic Baker croons "You Don't Know What Love Is" while singer Ruth Young contradicts old Chet's account of how thugs knocked his teeth out in 1968; Weber pans through a throng of celebrities at the Cannes Film Festival while Chet sings "Just Friends" in the background; and as Weber's camera slowly sweeps across the haunted, vacantly beautiful faces of his wife and three deserted children, now stranded in Stillwater, Okla., we hear Baker sing "Blame It On My Youth."

The unresolved tensions between Baker's adolescent lifestyle — fast cars, girls, drugs — and his elegant music make "Let's Get Lost" a troubling yet strangely exalting viewing experience. Baker, who at one point in the film recites the lyrics of "Lost in a Dream of You" with such easy conviction that it sounds like real poetry, himself recounts the story of a drugged-out friend who turned literally blue from lack of oxygen; after working on him for the better part of an hour, Baker revived him, only to hear the rebuke, "Man, you messed up my high!" Baker's rueful chuckle shows him to be fully aware of the black humor of this scene, yet he was apparently unable to see how it might apply to his own situation. He never wanted this kind of help; whatever the causes of his painful instability, Baker always preferred escaping into a romantic dream world.

There is an inverted "Picture of Dorian Gray" in Bruce Weber's portrait of Chet Baker's blithely hedonistic life. While the jazz artist's languidly perfect art, his musical soul, remained relatively unscathed by his turbulent excesses, his face aged horribly, reflecting in its gaunt lines every degree of his descent into corruption and empty dissoluteness. It is thus very intriguing to note that when Baker was found in the Amsterdam street, trumpet clutched in his hand, the police reported the discovery of "the body of a 30-year-old man." If some last-second transformation was indeed accomplished, no one has yet found the hard evidence. As Bruce Weber's hauntingly beautiful ode to the world of 1950s jazz demonstrates, long before his death Chet Baker had perfected the art of getting "lost," in the widest and deepest senses of that heavily freighted word.

"Let's Get Lost" is showing at the Bijou in the Union Thursday and Friday nights.

Television

"FM" (NBC, 8:30 p.m.) is a new series starring Robert Hayes, who this week is making eyes at a girl he used to babysit. It's almost a comedy, and it's almost the story of Joe Piscopo. Elsewhere it's money-grubbing time. On ESPN (8:30 p.m.) senior citizens battle it out in the alleys, rolling the rock in hopes of winning $15,000 in cash at the Ebonite Senior Championship. It's almost live in Canton, Ohio, and it's almost a sport.

"Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow" (NBC, 9 p.m.) continues its hard-hitting journalism with a report on America's $100 billion home-remodeling industry, which is approximately the annual income of Maria Shriver's oversized husband.

And what price faded Hollywood stardom? On "Tales from the Crypt" (HBO, 9:30 p.m.) Lea Thompson — now banished to cableland — portrays a prostitute who trades her beauty for $10,000. If she was going to make a deal with the devil one would think it would include the striking of "Howard the Duck" and "Casual Sex?" from her filmography.
