Iowa could draw NCAA investigation

Dealings with recruit Thomas start fingers pointing

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

A Chicago Sun-Times article reported Tuesday that Iowa assistant basketball coach Bruce Pearl taped a phone conversation with Deon Thomas and visited the Illinois Player of the Year during a non-contact period.

But that report contains factual inaccuracies, a source close to Iowa basketball told The Daily Iowan Wednesday.

The article said that during the taped conversation, Pearl and Thomas discussed the University of Illinois' recruitment of the Chicago Simeon standout and Thomas' motivation to attend Illinois.

According to the article, Thomas contends he had no knowledge that the conversation was being taped and said he could not elaborate on the details of the phone call.

Pearl could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

The situation stems from efforts by both schools to land Thomas, regarded by many as one of the nation's top recruiting prospects. Since the two schools clashed over Thomas last spring, rumors have flared that both Illinois and Iowa may have violated NCAA statutes in the process.

"I have no knowledge (that the NCAA is looking into Iowa)," Iowa

Associate Athletic Director Fred Mims said Wednesday. "We have great faith in our coaches that they abide by the rules and conduct themselves in a way that the university would want."

Mims said although the NCAA would first contact Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott, the news would have to get to him "in due time."

Elliott was out of town and unavailable for comment Wednesday.

"I just think we're better off not getting into it," Iowa coach Tom Davis said of possible NCAA involvement. "The reasons are obvious. We're just not even commenting."

NCAA Director of Enforcement David Berst would not discuss the Thomas situation at all Wednesday. Berst said his office only addresses situations publicly when the investigated institution makes the announcement itself.

Berst did say Illinois is under investigation by the NCAA, because the school has made the issue public.

Berst said taping a conversation with a recruit is not a violation of NCAA rules. He was less specific on how the content of a conversation, such as verbal commitments to attend a school, would bear on rules violations.

Contacting a player during a non-contact period is "generally handled by correspondence," Berst said. "If we have reasonably reliable information, we write and ask the school."

He said that "the most serious violation would end in an athlete being declared ineligible at that particular school," but said that conclusion is a rarity. He also said it is seldom considered more than a minor infraction.

The article stated that Pearl met Thomas when Simeon played in an international tournament in Amsterdam. It also said Pearl claimed he was vacationing in the area when he ran into Thomas.

However, the source told the DI that nothing new has developed on the Thomas case since it originally surfaced in the spring.

Thomas signed to play with the Illini in April.

Simeon coach Bob Hambric has lambasted Iowa's recruitment of Thomas. Hambric, known for cautious treatment of his players and potential schools, has pointedly expressed his displeasure with Iowa.

"It is a classic example of what See Thomas, Page 5A

Dogs can beat summer heat with new treat

Dennis Forke
 Special to The Daily Iowan

When the temperature rises and humidity is high, everyone suffers, and that includes dogs.

Dogs need to head to a local grocery store for a cool and refreshing treat during this type of weather just as everyone else does.

That's right, if Spot isn't home much in the summer, chances are the family hound has padded to the store for a new frosty treat.

Frosty Paws, an ice cream treat for dogs, was introduced to the grocery market nationwide last April and is available in some Iowa City grocery stores. This is yet another unique product bidding to get a piece of the dog-food market, a market which has been enjoying a steady increase in sales since the early 1980s.

The idea for Frosty Paws came from William Tyznik, a professor of animal science and an animal nutritionist at the University of Ohio State.

Tyznik got the idea for Frosty Paws one day while he was standing in line at an ice cream stand. Two elderly ladies had just purchased ice cream in front of him and were feeding it to their dogs. Tyznik knew ice cream isn't good for dogs because they aren't able to digest the lactose in it. Eventually, Tyznik came up with something that dogs really enjoyed and that had a high nutritional value.

In fact, according to promotional literature, "Your dog could actually live on Frosty Paws and water."

But they don't advise it. The ingredients include protein, minerals and vitamins. But there isn't any of the high calories, salt and sugar normally found in ice cream.

Frosty Paws lacks sugar because the doggie dessert is made from whey, the thin watery part of milk.

One of the best things about the product is that it can be eaten by humans with no harmful effects, although the taste is terrible and resembles unsweetened pancake batter.

But the taste doesn't dissuade dogs at all. Apparently, dogs are attracted not by the taste, but by the coldness and wetness of ice cream products.

Linn Nabs, a product manager with Associated Ice Creams, the company that is distributing Frosty Paws, said Tyznik has been developing this product for around 10 years. He had been involved previ-

UI committee says to dance department: 'Choreograph a grand move'

Brian Dick
 The Daily Iowan

The UI Executive Committee, in an academic progress review of the UI Dance Department earlier this year, suggested establishing dance as a "fully autonomous department" outside of the physical education division.

The UI Physical Education Division, created three years ago, became home to the UI Dance Department at that time.

Now, members of the executive committee and the dance department are considering aspects of the program's present arrangement in the physical education division and its proposed position as a separate program.

According to the UI Executive Committee report, the committee considered the alternatives of combining the dance department with another fine arts department, such as theatre arts or music, or establishing it as an independent department within a proposed UI College of Fine Arts.

The committee report said the dance program is physically separate from the Department of Physical Education's three other units of exercise science, leisure studies, and physical education and sports studies. The dance program has long had its own teaching and support staff and has been competing for funds independently.

Gerhard Loewenberg, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said in the committee's report that in general he believed "the college (of liberal arts) should grant departmental status to a program only if there were sufficient resources available to ensure that the new department could become strong, viable and nationally recognized."

Loewenberg, paraphrasing a review response he sent to the dance department, said, "I realize dance wants to be a separate department, and now the decision is up to the department to make."

Rudolf Schulz, dean of the UI Graduate College, said the dance department's degree program's are too new to offer information on students who have been or will be served.

"The program is quite new — apparently two or three years old," Schulz said.

According to the report, most committee members believed the Liberal Arts College should recognize the dance department's emergence as one of the fine arts. Committee members also thought it inappropriate to keep dance within the division of physical education.

Poisonous gas leak leads to Chem-Botany evacuation

Jay Casini
 The Daily Iowan
 and Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

Between 300 and 500 people were evacuated from the Chemistry-Botany Building Wednesday night after a poisonous pesticide fumigating a 5th floor greenhouse began to filter through the building's ventilation system.

Iowa City Fire Department officials said they responded to a report of smoke on the third floor of the building just before 9 p.m. Wednesday night. When firefighters arrived on the scene, they were told that some type of gas — probably a pesticide — was coming out of the building's ventilation system.

Iowa City Fire Marshall Larry Kinney said several canisters of pesticide had been left open to fumigate the greenhouse, and the pesticide somehow leaked into the building's ventilation system.

Kinney would not release the name of the pesticide involved, but said the immediate danger involved absorption of the chemical through the skin.

"It is a type of poison involved," Kinney said.

Kinney said the police department was attempting to contact people who had complained of discomfort after being evacuated from the building but left the scene before fire officials arrived.

As a precautionary measure, Kinney said two firemen who may have come into contact with the pesticide without protective face gear when they were evacuating the building were sent to UI Hospitals.

In addition, Dave Sealey of the Johnson County Hazardous Materials Response Team said students who had been in the

Helmsley convicted on 33 of 41 counts

NEW YORK (AP) — Leona Helmsley, the persnickety hotel queen quoted as saying "only the little people pay taxes," was convicted Wednesday of evading $1.2 million in income tax by charging personal expenses to her business empire.

The federal jury acquitted Helmsley, 69, of the most serious charge against her — conspiring to extort payoffs from vendors.

Pictured as a regal perfectionist in ads for Helmsley luxury hotels, Helmsley was portrayed in court as an abusive, penny-pinching tyrant — part of a defense strategy of arguing she was the victim of spiteful ex-employees.

In opening arguments, her own lawyer labeled her "a tough bitch."

Helmsley shook her head while listening to the litany of guilty verdicts on 33 of 41 counts. Former aides Frank Turco and Joseph Licari were convicted of assisting in the tax-evasion scheme.

She walked past hundreds of reporters, photographers and bystanders on the courthouse steps, got into a limousine and departed without comment.

"Of course, we'll appeal," said Joseph Benfante, lawyer for Licari.

Helmsley remains free pending sentencing November 14. Each of the 33 counts carries three to five years in prison. She also faces fines up to $8 million.

The jury found Helmsley evaded federal taxes from 1983 through 1985, most of it by billing $3.1 million in expenses from the Helmsleys' Greenwich, Conn., mansion, Dunnellen Hall, to their hotel and real estate business.

Among the expenses were more than $1 million for a pool enclosure with a marble dance floor; jade figures worth $500,000; a $130,000 indoor-outdoor sound system similar to one Helmsley had admired at Disney World, and thousands of dollars in landscaping.

"Today's verdicts should widely See Helmsley, Page 6A

Conference fails to settle Cambodian conflict

PARIS (AP) — An international conference on Cambodia failed to produce an agreement and suspended its work Wednesday until warring factions are ready for a compromise to end a generation of violence.

"We need time so the spirit of reconciliation can overcome the spirit of confrontation, but for Cambodia the hour of peace will come," Roland Dumas, the French foreign minister, told the conference just before adjourning the final session.

Some delegates said the failure increased the likelihood of full-scale civil war when Vietnam withdraws its military forces Sept. 27 after nearly 11 years of occupation.

Last-minute negotiations delayed a final statement by seven hours. It fell far short of the comprehensive settlement delegates from 19 nations hoped to achieve when the conference opened in late July.

The statement said the meeting "achieved progress in elaborating a wide variety of elements necessary for the reaching of a comprehensive settlement to the tragic conflict in Cambodia," but added: "It is not yet possible to achieve a comprehensive settlement. It was therefore decided to suspend the conference."

France and Indonesia, co-chairs of the conference, offered to assist in mediating between the Vietnam-sponsored government of Prime Minister Hun Sen and the three-faction rebel alliance led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Delegates set up the possibility of using a committee left open under conference auspices as a forum for future talks.

College of medicine mirrors trends

Of the 172 students in this fall's freshman class at the UI College of Medicine, 35.5 percent are women, continuing a four-year upward trend.

"This is the highest percentage of women we've had since 1980, when women made up 41.7 percent of the class," said Thomas Taylor, admissions coordinator at the UI College of Medicine.

Not only are more women entering medical school, many new students are coming into medicine with a non-science background. This year's new class includes students with undergraduate degrees in accounting, anthropology, engineering, foreign languages and music, Taylor said.

Nineteen students are in the Educational Opportunities Program, which is targeted at academically qualified individuals from the four ethnic groups underrepresented in American medicine.

Six students are enrolled in the Medical Scientist Training Program. These students will spend six or seven years in an integrated program leading to both M.D. and Ph.D. in biomedical science. This combined program trains physician-scientists who will be the researchers and medical school teachers of tomorrow, said Carol Aschenbrenner, senior associate dean of the UI College of Medicine.

Consistent with a national decline in the number of applicants to U.S. medical schools, applications for this year also fell slightly at the UI.

Aschenbrenner says factors that have been identified as contributing to the decline in the national and Iowa applicant pool include: dissatisfaction with the lengthy training period, increased interest in business and computer science, concern about malpractice, increasing government regulation of medical practice, rising educational costs and negative comments from practicing physicians who are disillusioned with changes in medical practice.

Court upholds 'child victim exception'

DES MOINES (AP) — A lower court judge acted properly in permitting a young sex abuse victim to testify via closed-circuit television, the Iowa Supreme Court said.

In approving the setup, the court said there is "a child victim exception" to the right of a criminal defendant to face his accuser.

"The procedure formulated by the district court was clearly the result of the evidence presented concerning child victim fear," the court said.

The court upheld two Cerro Gordo County sex abuse convictions of Allen Duane LaBayre. LeBayre had been charged with abusing two young boys, age three and eight.

One of the victims testified at the trial and court records said the youngster "promised to run out the door if the defendant were present when the child entered the courtroom."

Because of that fear, a lower court arranged an electronic hookup. Under that system, the youngster, a judge and lawyers for both sides were in one courtroom, and the testimony was televised.

The Daily Iowan

A Coralville photographer charged with 14 counts of sexual assault pleaded not guilty this week, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Arthur R. Loomis, 64, 302 Fifth St., remains in the Johnson County Jail after his application to modify his $100,000 bond was denied.

Loomis was arrested on July 28 for allegedly sexually abusing a 10-, a 12- and a 14-year-old girl, according to court records.

He was released with supervision on July 29 under the pretrial condition that he would not come in contact with anyone under 18 years of age in conjunction with his profession or at his residence, according to court records.

On August 10, Loomis was arrested for violating this condition after children were seen playing in his back yard, according to court records.

Trial is set for October 23, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man pleaded not guilty last Wednesday to the charge of homicide by vehicle, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Paul George Stillmunkes, 127 Hilltop Mobile Home Park, allegedly lost control of his vehicle July 4 while under the influence of alcohol. The accident killed his son, Lucian Stillmunkes, according to court records.

The trial is set for October 16, according to court records.

• A UI Campus Security Officer was charged with non-felonious misconduct Friday after he allegedly forced a citizen out of the Burge Residence Hall vending area without permission from a UI department head, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Gene E. Overton, 1710 California Ave., assumed that the vending machines in Burge Residence Hall were not for citizen use and acted without the express consent of a UI department head and without an order from an administrative law judge, in accordance with the Iowa Administrative Law Code, according to court records.

• A Coralville man was charged with third-degree theft Monday for allegedly writing a check for $263.10 from a closed account, according to Johnson County court records.

The defendant, Jay Thomas Widmer, 21, 949 Boston Way, allegedly presented the check on July 25, which was later found to be from a closed account. He is being held in the Johnson County Jail on $1,000 bond, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for September 14, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man was charged with assault causing injury Tuesday after allegedly striking a woman living in his home, according to Johnson County court records.

The defendant, Melvin Gibson Jr., 43, allegedly hit the victim, who required four stitches on her elbow, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for September 14, according to court records.

Chief-executive Hanson retires from Deere & Co.

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — Robert Hanson, the chairman of Deere & Co. who directed it through its darkest days and into an era of record sales and profits, Wednesday gave up his title as chief executive officer.

Hanson, 64, relinquished the company's reins to Hans Becherer, currently president of Deere, the world leader in tractor and agricultural-implement manufacturing.

"The action... is reflective of the commitment by Deere & Co.'s board of directors to an orderly and effective management succession plan," Hanson said in a news release.

"This new appointment indicates the board's confidence in his ability to continue to exercise the kind of effective leadership that will help ensure Deere & Co.'s progress in the years ahead," said Hanson, who retains his title as chairman.

Deere spokesman Robert Combs said no firm date has been established for Hanson's retirement, although company policy mandates he step down before his 66th birthday in December 1990.

"Mr. Hanson will remain very active in leading the company up until his retirement," Combs said.

The choice of Becherer as heir-apparent signals the end of a remarkable tenure which saw Hanson take control in 1982 as the company stood on the brink of economic collapse.

Deere accumulated $328 million in losses in two years, and its operating losses totaled $637 million in the six-year period of 1982-87.

Becherer, 54, joined Deere in 1962 and followed a course to the top similar to Hanson's in marketing and extensive overseas work. He joined the board of directors in 1986 and was elected president and chief operating officer in 1987.

Graduate English conference attracts nationwide students

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

On October 12 through 14, between 250 and 300 graduate students from across the nation will gather at the UI for the third annual Graduate Student Conference in English Studies.

The students will present their literary papers to their peers during the conference, which is titled "Representing Culture: Text, Society and Discourse."

The conference is being held to give English graduate students a forum to present their works, said Bruce Mills, chairman of the event.

"It will provide an opportunity for graduate students to get together and see what's going on in other regions of the nation," Mills said.

Students from 60 schools around the country will be attending the conference.

"We at the University of Iowa are glad to get the chance to have other graduate students come to Iowa," Mills said. "We will have the opportunity to showcase the quality of students we have here."

Anyone who is interested in the conference material may attend, Mills said. It will begin with an opening session at 7 p.m. on October 12 in the Union Triangle Ballroom. The speaker for the opening ceremonies will be James Raymond, a professor from Alabama University.

The conference will continue with 48 sessions of three to four speakers presenting their works and leading round-table discussions and panels. Presentations will be controlled by moderators who will provide introductions, keep things moving and make sure there are questions after the readings.

Debra Hartley, who is in charge of finding moderators for the event, said, "I think (the conference) is a great opportunity to get involved in something that we'll be involved in for our careers."

The sessions will run from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The conference will end with a potluck dinner at 7 p.m. Saturday evening.

Students arriving in Iowa City for the conference will be staying either at the Iowa House or with UI English graduate students, Mills said.

Arrangements for the conference are being made by Mills and his steering committee of Anne Bartlett, James Peltz, Mary Uhl, Tom Dean and David Rhoads.

The conference has been formerly held at Ohio State University and University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee. It originally began as a Big Ten event, but quickly grew to include other colleges. It is being funded by the UI Department of English, the UI communication studies department, the UI Graduate College and the Collegiate Associations Council.

Baby left in dumpster; Iowa woman charged

DAVENPORT (AP) — A Davenport woman pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges of neglect and child abandonment in the dumping of a newborn baby in a garbage bin 12 days ago.

Amy Jo Snell, 19, was arraigned in Scott County District Court and freed on $10,000 bond. She was ordered to undergo a psychiatric evaluation before her trial.

If convicted of the charge, Snell could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison.

The baby was found in a dumpster behind a Davenport store. It had a fractured skull and bruises but was reported to be doing well Wednesday at St. Luke's Hospital in Davenport.

Snell is a 1989 graduate of Davenport West High School. She plans to go to college this year.

She spoke only once during a 10-minute court appearance, saying "yes," she understood her rights.

She was accompanied by her father, Joe, and her attorney, Doug Scovil. Court documents say Snell "gave birth and did knowingly or recklessly expose said child to a hazard or danger."

Scott County Dist. Atty. Bill Davis said a woman checked into Mercy Hospital "with definite signs that she had given birth" shortly after the baby was thrown in the dumpster.

Authorities had been trying to get the woman to surrender voluntarily. "If she hadn't come forward we'd be waiting another 30 days," Davis said.

Blood samples of both Snell and the baby have been sent to a laboratory for analysis, he said.

Beverly Tauke treks Iowa campaign trail

Loves 'grassroots' discussions on issues

Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Who says political campaigning is boring and dry? — certainly not Beverly Tauke.

During her travels across Iowa she has met diverse groups of people, has been given the opportunity to delve into and explain issues she feels are relevant to Iowans and has grown to love the "grassroots" aspect of her work.

She's even taken an adventurous ride in a turn-of-the-century pickup truck enroute to a local Republican meeting, only to find the elderly driver of the vehicle had vision in just one eye.

"When I stepped out of the car, everyone looked at me like they were extremely surprised," Tauke said. "Then someone asked me, 'Did you know he (the driver) only had one eye?' I certainly got a kick out of that — and the man. He had a very colorful personality and now when I see him at other Republican gatherings across the state, there's a certain connection there."

Tauke is currently campaigning for her husband, Rep. Tom Tauke (R-Iowa), in his race against incumbent Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) for a seat in the U.S. Senate.

This isn't the first campaign trail she's been on, though.

After working for Sen. Charles Grassley from 1980-86 as his communications director and for presidential candidate Bob Dole as a communications consultant, Tauke said she feels at home in the political sphere.

"Some would think it's real drudgery, but with years of campaigning behind me, it's a comfortable challenge, and I enjoy it," she said. "A lot of what I'm doing now for Tom is similar to what I've done before during the Grassley and Dole campaigns."

Investing hours of her time into her husband's campaign, Tauke said her daily schedule on the road varies and there is no such thing as a "typical day."

Usually, Tauke's schedule keeps her moving from 8 in the morning to 8 at night, with one event spilling into another. During an exceptionally busy day, she has attended as many as ten meetings.

"It requires that I be able to shift gears a lot," she said. "One minute I'll be delivering a speech to a group of women, and 30 minutes later I'll be speaking to a mixed group of people in terms of gender and/or party affiliation."

Tauke speaks mainly to women's groups about political and social trends and said the focus of many of her speeches and discussion is oriented toward issues that "hold high stakes" for women.

One of these issues revolves around the controversial Catastrophic Health Care Act, she said.

According to Rep. Tauke, this act unfairly burdens senior citizens with the cost of disabled Americans and allows corporations to drop health coverage promised to retirees.

Tauke said this coverage act has become "a major focus of Iowa's U.S. Senate campaign, because Tom Harkin voted 'yes' for this huge senior tax hike, and Tom Tauke voted 'no.'"

She continued, saying that because women compose the greater part of the senior citizen population in the country, this act should be a real concern for them.

"Many of the issues that are being debated have to do with seniors, but women should realize that any issue that is viewed as a 'senior issue' is ultimately a woman's issue," Tauke said.

As she travels, Tauke stops to give updates to reporters and editors working for the media in an attempt to establish a strong two-way flow of communication.

"Communities across Iowa should not have to depend on the major gatekeepers for political information — they should have access to non-biased information," she said.

Tauke said it is also important to make a concerted effort in dealing effectively with different interest groups.

"Many times, it becomes too easy to get caught in the same niche of people," she said. "Then your ideas become distorted about what people in general really care about."

"By visiting the smaller towns I'm able to put my finger on the pulse of what people are talking about and think is important," Tauke said. "I've been able to mix with every slice of the Iowa population this way."

School board candidates to support district's commitment to fine arts

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Two of the four Iowa City residents vying for seats on the Iowa City Community School District Board of Directors this fall supported a stronger commitment to fine arts in the district's schools at a public forum Wednesday in the Iowa City Public Library, 123 N. Linn St.

About 20 people attended the forum sponsored by the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce Fine Arts Council to hear the candidates' views on fine arts in the district's curriculum.

Ellen Widiss, a member of the board since 1983 now running for her third term, and Craig Willis, an Iowa City lawyer also vying for a position on the board, were present for questions. Two other candidates — current board Vice President Orville Townsend and rural Iowa Citian Patrick Duffner — were unable to attend the 4:30 p.m. forum due to employment conflicts.

Widiss and Willis fielded several questions from the audience regarding the role fine arts will play in the board's future budget appropriations since the approval of the school enrichment tax.

Donneta Knarr, a general music instructor at Penn Elementary School, asked the candidates to consider increasing the district's materials fund for music instruction at the elementary level.

Knarr said a minimal budget allowance has forced her to use a teacher's manual published in 1981 to teach students whose own books were published in 1974 or 1978.

Because the books were published so far apart, some of the songs and other materials in the teacher's manual are different from those in the student's books, she said.

In each of the last eight years, the district's elementary schools have received about $2,300 from the district to purchase new materials.

Each school receives a portion of the $2,300 each year, and Knarr's requests for a new, complete set of books shipped simultaneously could not be granted in one year. Only 10 or 15 books could be purchased for that department those years — explaining the difference in the books' content.

Increased funding is necessary to ensure the teacher's manual matches the student's textbooks, Knarr said.

Both candidates said they were shocked at the facts Knarr presented.

"During the budget process, we should take a look at this and ask, 'How can we address this problem?' Willis said. "After we avoid budget-cutting and reduce fees, we should address situations like this. I think that's what the community wants us to do with the enrichment tax — to distribute it throughout the district."

Widiss also cited the music books as a possible target for enrichment tax revenues in the future.

"I had no idea you were dealing with a situation where the teacher's manual does not match about half of the students' (manuals)," she said. "I would strongly support using enrichment tax revenues to improve the situation."

The 90-minute forum will be aired in September on Channel 26.

Distribution of memo boards still under way despite policy snags

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Whoever said nothing is free in this world must not have been around the UI Student Associations Office recently.

AT&T representatives have been handing out sunglasses, highlighters, phone cords, answering machines and cordless telephones as part of a sponsorship agreement for an upcoming leadership conference.

And now the UI Student Senate is giving free memo boards to students. The dry-wipe memo boards include a directory for UI services, shopping and carry-out restaurants.

Distribution of the "Phone Zones" began Wednesday afternoon in the residence halls. About 5,000 boards are available and will be distributed first to new students and freshmen.

Rodney Hill, a UI marketing student, approached the Senate with the idea this summer and proceeded to market the project.

"This is a product for students who don't know about the area businesses," Hill said.

Hill spent his summer selling Phone Zone sponsorships to businesses and told them the memo boards would be placed in residence hall rooms, as Pepe Rojas-Cardona, UI Student Senate president, stated in a letter.

But last week, residence hall services informed Hill that solicitation policies prevented the boards being left in rooms. The Senate did not offer a contingent distribution plan, Hill said.

The UI Collegiate Associations Council agreed to hand out the boards and began distribution Wednesday.

"It's very ironic because (the Senate's) name is on the front of it and they didn't do anything for it," Hill said.

He added, "My biggest gripe now is that the businesses didn't get what they were promised and CAC did not get proper credit."

Both Rojas-Cardona and CAC President Dan Shanes said that which branch of student government distributes the Phone Zones is secondary to the fact the information reaches new students.

"The whole idea about why we're doing this is because it's a service for the students, and it's kind of neat to put by the phone," Rojas-Cardona said. "We're not going to make any money off this, or very little, and that will be given to ARH (Associated Residence Halls)."

More than 50 businesses are listed in the guide under restaurant, entertainment and fast-food delivery entries.

The project was first done at Duke University, Chapel Hill, South Carolina, last year and about 40 universities began their own versions this year.

"We'll see how it works," Rojas-Cardona said. "We'll see what kind of response those businesses get in terms of whether it's working and what kinds of response we get in terms of exposure for us, for student government, and if it seems to work next year we might expand on it."

Why you should be a socialist

Today's society is one filled with poverty, hunger and oppression. War has become a constant feature of life, and we face the real possibility of nuclear holocaust.

It's hard to imagine that the ideas of socialism - genuine democracy, a society not divided by arbitrary boundaries, an end to racism and oppression - could become a reality.

But socialism can be won. And what you do today can make a difference in the struggles that lie ahead.

Come and hear Sharon Smith of the Chicago International Socialist Organization explain how.

Developers sought for casinos

Licensing not expected to be completed until next year

DES MOINES (AP) — Riverboat gambling backers Wednesday sought developers "clean as a hound's tooth" to launch floating casinos now that voters in seven of 10 Mississippi River counties in Iowa have approved.

"The governor's primary concern is protecting the integrity of the state," said Richard Vohs, a spokesman for Gov. Terry Branstad.

More counties voted in favor of the floating casinos Tuesday, bringing to seven the number approving the gambling. Two counties rejected a proposal to allow the boats to land, and there was no vote in the other.

The Mississippi River is where most expect the first gambling boats to sail and where the first proposals for the betting boats were made.

"I think that was a pretty predictable outcome," said House Majority Leader Bob Arnould (D-Davenport) one of the authors of the gambling measure.

Arnould said backers are taking a closer look at developments which have been proposed so that they can present a united front to the state's Racing and Gaming Commission. The commission must issue licenses for operations that can begin April 1, 1991.

"Developers are expressing a lot of interest," said Arnould. "The next hurdle will be communities working through the proposals and attempting to align community support behind one particular concept."

That involves convincing gambling opponents that organized crime won't be involved, he said.

"The message I'm talking to people about is the importance of listening to both the 'yes' voters and those who voted 'no' and making them understand that if we do this, it needs to be a quality operation and a clean operation, clean as a hound's tooth," said Arnould.

Developers and local officials now find themselves in a second round of competition, faced with convincing the Racing and Gaming Commission to issue a license for their operation.

Mick Lura, a commission spokesman, said regulations on applying for licenses could be approved next month, but decisions on licenses probably won't come until next year.

Vohs said Branstad was satisfied the licensing procedures were strict enough.

"The procedure is designed to make sure that the people involved are reputable," he said. "We'll keep the crime element out."

Branstad renewed his call for a regional authority to govern the riverboat gambling if other states get into the business.

The Illinois Legislature has debated that, and Wisconsin officials have also discussed it.

"If other states pass riverboat gambling, it makes sense to coordinate enforcement to make sure it's consistent," Vohs said.

Support for the gambling was strongest in the more urban counties along the Mississippi.

Delays in processing claims hinder workers injured on job

DES MOINES (AP) — Money is needed to ease a backlog of claims by injured workers that can delay help for years, the Legislature was told Wednesday.

The delays usually favor businesses because they put pressure on injured workers to settle claims for whatever amount is offered, an interim legislative committee was told.

"The system currently in operation squeezes them to settle," said Robert Kinsey, a Mason City lawyer who heads the Iowa Bar Association's panel on worker compensation issues. "There are terrific pressures to settle. They simply cannot wait for the process to proceed."

Kinsey urged the committee to authorize money to hire more hearing officers who decide worker compensation cases.

He said some cases take more than two years to resolve. And he said injured workers can't wait that long without income.

"There is a backlog which is substantial and serious," he said.

He talked to a House-Senate interim committee reviewing Iowa's worker compensation system.

Worker compensation laws are designed to allow people injured on the job to collect for medical costs without being forced to go to court. An elaborate hearing system operated by the state's industrial commissioner decides injury cases, and a large body of case law has developed for the area.

Police and fire depts. in midst of remodeling

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

After years of working with five to six people in a room and using jail cells for offices, working conditions at the Iowa City police and fire departments are finally being improved.

But even after bulldozers surrounded the Iowa City Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St., August 4, some officers couldn't believe that the long-awaited remodeling of the police and fire departments was taking place, said Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

"Some officers told me that they had been waiting 15 to 16 years for the construction and that it would never take place," Winkelhake, who has been with the department three months, said.

For years, the Iowa City Council had delayed the construction, he said.

The project was "put on the back burner" for so long because of "budgetary reasons," said councilor Randy Larson.

"The situation over the years was that there was never any agreement on how extensive the project should be," councilor John Balmer said. "Once we determined the need and the nature of the problem with space, the project was finally moved forward."

The police department was built in 1962 to house 28 people, but the police force has expanded to 55 people with no additional space, said Iowa City Police Detective Mike Goldberg.

"Whenever we needed an office we put up a wall," Winkelhake said.

The new construction, estimated at $949,093, will include additions to both the fire and police departments as well as remodeling and is scheduled to be finished in one year, Winkelhake said. The second phase of construction will improve the downstairs and other city offices, he added.

Additions to the police department will include a redesigned lobby, office areas for investigations, an area to fill out reports, conference rooms, interview rooms, storage space, a break room and a common meeting area for fire and police officers.

A second story will be added to the fire department which will include a dormitory, exercise room, kitchen and a locker room, said Iowa City Fire Marshal Larry Kinney.

The new addition will consequently free the first floor for more office space, he said.

The improvement in working conditions for city officials will manifest itself in better service to citizens, Winkelhake said.

"If the officers feel better about their work area they will perform better," he said.

The needs of citizens will also be better met by physical changes in the building.

Currently, citizens requesting police records must go through two or three people to get the documents they need, Winkelhake said.

After the remodeling, citizens will be able to deal with the records clerks directly through an open window to the records room, Winkelhake said.

The current centralized dispatch system for both the police and fire departments will also be "upgraded immensely" and a public entrance will be added to the north side of the fire department, Kinney said.

Swine disease found in piglets, stillborn

WASHINGTON (AP) — An infectious swine disease previously found only in Europe has been confirmed in stillborn and weak baby pigs in the United States, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

The disease is a type of leptospirosis, which is caused by corkscrew-shaped bacteria called leptospirae. About 180 types of leptospirae cause disease in livestock, said Carole Bolin, veterinary medical officer with USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Ames.

Bolin said in a report released in Washington that the disease, caused by an organism called bratislava, was found in an Iowa herd. The name resulted after the bacterium was first isolated in 1953 from a hedgehog in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

Leptospirosis is transmitted primarily by infected urine, but the leptospirae also can pass through the pregnant female's placenta to the fetus. Another probable cause of infection is thought to be venereal transmission from infected boars.

Humans in contact with infected animals or urine can develop leptospirosis, the report said.

Bratislava is being studied as a possible contributor to a "mystery" syndrome that began causing stillbirths, abortions and deaths of nursing baby pigs about a year ago in the Midwest.

The study was undertaken five months ago at the agency's animal disease center in Ames under a "technology transfer" agreement with Norden Laboratories of Lincoln, Neb.

Bolin said the next step is to inoculate pregnant sows with bratislava to "establish absolute proof" that the U.S. version causes reproductive disease. Also, laboratory tests need to be conducted to determine the effectiveness of vaccines in pregnant sows.

Norden is marketing two vaccines under conditional USDA licenses and is applying for permanent licensing, she said.

A company scientist, Joseph Frantz, said vaccination with the conditionally licensed vaccine protects the animal against "clinical signs caused by bratislava" through one pregnancy. He recommended vaccination prior to each breeding.

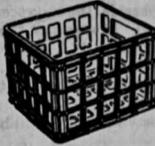

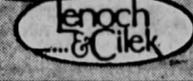

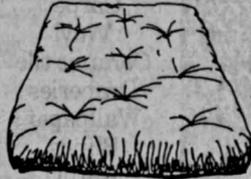

Leptospirosis in both animals and humans can be mild or severe and is often misdiagnosed, the agency said.

British report to release CIA file

WASHINGTON — An unpublished British report rejects testimony by Austrian President Kurt Waldheim to the Justice Department and includes a secret CIA file which identifies Waldheim as a Nazi intelligence officer, the World Jewish Congress said Wednesday.

The British Defense Ministry announced Tuesday that the report, ordered by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to determine whether Waldheim was linked to the execution of six British commandos in World War II, will be released in a few weeks.

Speculation has arisen in London that some evidence may be suppressed because of possible post-war links between Waldheim and British and U.S. intelligence services.

But World Jewish Congress executive director Elan Steinberg said he has learned the report will include a CIA file of April 26, 1945, which contains an interrogation conducted by British military intelligence of a Nazi officer who identified Waldheim as an intelligence officer.

Moldavians weigh compromise on law

MOSCOW — Moldavian leaders tried to placate outraged minority groups on Wednesday by considering a watered-down version of a plan to make their native tongue the official language of the ethnically diverse republic.

Moldavian leaders, reportedly at the urging of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, were leaning toward adopting the compromise to try to stop strikes by Russians and other groups opposed to the pending language law.

Non-Moldavians are reported to be on strike at 200 businesses and industries in the tiny southern republic bordering Romania. The official Tass news agency said rail workers in several cities Wednesday joined the walkouts.

The initial proposal would make only Moldavian the official language of the republic. The compromise plan would make Moldavian the language of government officials and documents, and Russian would be the language for everyday contacts between the republic's ethnic groups.

Study: AIDS will test state resources

WASHINGTON — Increased demands of the growing AIDS epidemic will force more budgetary tradeoffs for state and local governments battling the disease, a privately funded research project reported Wednesday.

Though many states continue to rely heavily on federal money to support AIDS programs, states with high levels of the disease are exceeding federal funds with their own general revenues, according to a survey by the AIDS Policy Center at George Washington University.

In fiscal year 1989, states spent about $495 million in non-Medicare funds on AIDS education, prevention, surveillance, care, testing, research and other related activities. Of the total, states contributed $252 million, while the federal government's share was $233 million. The rest came from private sources.

Public health officials believe that between 1 million and 1.5 million people in the United States are infected with the AIDS virus.

27 injured in Austrian train crash

VIENNA, Austria — A passenger train that switched to the wrong track collided head-on with another train Wednesday, killing one person and injuring at least 27 others, a railway official said.

Three cars derailed when the two trains crashed while traveling at a low rate of speed between Voralberg province's capital of Bregenz and the small town of Wolfurt, the railway official said.

Killed was Alfred Rainer Heller, 48, of West Germany. Rescuers found his body in the wreckage about two hours after the crash.

Sixteen people, including both train drivers, were hospitalized, and 11 other people were treated for minor injuries, the rail official said.

The injured included Austrian, West German and Swiss passengers, as well as two Japanese, the official said.

He said human error was probably to blame for the accident because one of the trains, an express traveling from Bregenz to Vienna, was switched onto the same track as the other train.

Teacher strikes mean no school for 50,000

More than 50,000 students in five states enjoyed an extended summer vacation Wednesday because of teacher strikes.

Pay and benefits were the major issues for the estimated 2,900 teachers on strike.

The walkouts idled more than 20,000 students in three Illinois districts; 12,000 students in one Montana district; 8,000 in one Ohio district; 6,700 in three Michigan districts; and 3,400 students in one district in Pennsylvania.

Classes were cancelled by the Indian Creek School Board in Jefferson County in Ohio after a picketing teacher was arrested on charges of throwing an object through a bus attempting to enter an elementary school on Tuesday.

a recruiter will do and how low they will stoop to obtain a player they want," Hambric told the Sun-Times. "They will circumvent a coach's authority. They will go behind your back. They will stoop to any means to get a kid."

Hambric alleged that Iowa hired a Simeon student to sway Thomas, having in the recruiting process.

"I haven't heard of anything like that," Simeon assistant principal Austin McLinn said. "We certainly haven't received any news of something like that."

Neither had Mims. He said some of the parties involved were simply venting their frustrations over the heated recruiting of Thomas.

"When I first read the article, I was expecting the worst," Mims said. "But after looking at it, it seems like people just putting off steam."

"Whenever you have two colleges fighting over an athlete like this, rumors abound."

The article said Hambric had been angered by Pearl's attempt to acquire Thomas' transcripts without the coach's permission. McLinn said he was also unaware of that, but "we don't give those transcripts to anyone but the student or their parents."

Although the NCAA hasn't made any comment on a potential investigation into Iowa, many Chicago high school coaches have taken notice.

"Coaches from the area have kept the phone ringing off the hook," Sun-Times contributing writer Clyde Travis said. Travis was one of three writers who wrote the article.

"(Coaches) have been saying that if these facts are indeed true, (Pearl) is through in Chicago," Travis said.

Davis and Illinois coach Lou Henson seemingly called a truce over the tug-of-war with Thomas during a high school all-star game in July. Davis said the two coaches haven't had problems since.

"No, there haven't been problems," Davis said. "We don't see that much of each other until this fall, but it hasn't been a problem. But I can see how it could be."

serve as a reminder that no one, regardless of how wealthy or how well-insulated by underlings, under the law is free to flaunt the tax laws," said U.S. Attorney Benito Romano.

He said it was too early to say what sentence prosecutors would seek.

"We gave a very fair verdict. It was very hard," said David Samuel, a member of the jury that deliberated for five days.

Helmsley and her husband, Harry, still face prosecution on charges of evading state taxes; no trial date has been set.

Helmsley, 80, heads a $5 billion empire that includes 27 hotels — the Helmsley hotels in New York City and the Cleveland-based Harley chain. He was indicted with his wife in 1988 but was found mentally incompetent to stand trial.

In addition to expenses at Dunnellen Hall, prosecutors alleged that $320,172 in Helmsley's personal purchases, including thousands of dollars in designer clothing, were charged to the Park Lane Hotel in New York.

Another item was a $45,000 silver clock in the shape of the Helmsley Building, a birthday present to Harry Helmsley from his wife.

Her former housekeeper testified that Helmsley once told her, "We don't pay taxes. Only the little people pay taxes."

Many of the 44 prosecution witnesses during the eight-week trial described how she fired employees at the slightest provocation and disputed bills.

Defense attorney Gerald Feffer sought to discredit the witnesses as disgruntled ex-employees.

He also noted the Helmsleys paid $57.8 million in taxes during the time covered by the indictment and argued the couple did nothing wrong in billing Dunnellen Hall expenses to their business because they used the estate for business.

ously with other animal products including feed for racehorses.

When questioned on national sales, Nash said that the company is encouraged by how well the product is selling. She said Associated Ice Creams decided to market the product upon learning there are 49.4 million dogs in the United States and that sales on total pet food and treats have been on a steady increase the last number of years.

After learning so much about this product, this reporter decided it was necessary to give it a test.

It was easy to pick up a box of Frosty Paws at the local grocery store. The box was right beside the popsicles in the frozen foods aisle. Next, it was necessary to recruit four dogs to participate in the taste test. The owners of the dogs were somewhat skeptical, but they willingly went along with the idea.

The four dogs in the taste test gave Frosty Paws a paws up as far as the owners and this reporter could tell. All four dogs excitedly devoured the frosty treat. In fact, a Schnauzer went a little overboard when he almost choked on it after he tried to swallow the ice cream treat all at once.

A word of caution when feeding a dog this product: Make sure it's not frozen solid and the dog doesn't attempt to inhale it all at once like a vacuum cleaner.

The owners of the dogs said they thought it was a novel idea, but they were not so sure they would purchase the treat the next time they were at the grocery store.

Frosty Paws is found nationwide in grocery stores in sizes for large, medium and small dogs.

So if Spot wants a nutritional snack, consider giving him the latest doggie treat. With the hot summers Iowa City suffers from, it's a good possibility Spot will be panting for more.

Nationwide demonstrations in India result in 11 deaths

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Protesters blocked railroad tracks and battled police during nationwide demonstrations against Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi Wednesday. Officials said 11 people were killed and more than 100,000 arrested.

Rajiv Gandhi

The nationwide strike shut down communication and transportation in six states controlled by opposition parties but had less effect in the 19 states governed by Gandhi's Congress Party, Press Trust of India said.

Several clashes broke out between government supporters and opposition demonstrators, and at least four people died when a bomb was thrown at a bus, police said. Police used batons and tear gas to break up crowds nationwide, news reports said.

At least 80 people were injured and 103,450 were arrested nationwide, police said.

Opposition parties had called the strikes to focus attention on alleged government corruption. Gandhi must call new parliamentary elections later this year, and the strike has been perceived as being the start of the opposition's campaign.

The strike closed shops, businesses and schools and stopped rail and transport services in the six opposition-government states. In other regions, it evoked only a limited response; although there was a drop in business activity and attendance at schools, colleges and offices.

About 2,700 people, including 16 lawmakers, were arrested for sitting on railroad tracks to block trains in southern Tamil Nadu state, police said.

Press Trust said at least 11 people were killed in clashes involving police and pro- and anti-government factions. It said seven deaths were reported from the northeastern state of Tripura, which borders Bangladesh, in fighting between members of the Congress Party and the Marxist Communist Party.

Four people were killed in the states of Kerala and West Bengal, both governed by the Marxist Communist Party, it said.

V.P. Singh, the leader of an opposition coalition trying to unite political groups against Gandhi, said the strike was a success.

"We are very confident of the future," he said at a news conference.

Singh's National Front had called the strike and was supported by the Marxist Communist Party, the Communist Party of India and the right-wing Indian People's Party.

Federal Home Minister Buta Singh claimed the strike failed and "the forces that inspired it have been decisively defeated."

He said that, except in the opposition-ruled states, citizens rejected the strike call and federal government organizations nationwide functioned normally.

In New Delhi, thousands of government employees slept in their offices Tuesday night so they could report to work on Wednesday. The government had threatened not to pay them the day's salary if they missed work.

Food and bedrolls were provided for employees and senior executives were given rooms in luxury hotels, said officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The strike brought to a climax the opposition's campaign against alleged corruption in the government. Last month, 106 opposition members in Parliament resigned, saying a government audit into a controversial arms deal proved kickbacks were paid to senior officials and Gandhi's party.

Opposition leaders say a Swedish company, AB Bofors, paid $50 million in kickbacks and bribes to secure a $1.4 billion contract to supply artillery guns to the Indian army. The government denies the charge.

Parliamentary elections must be called before January.

The strike was a rare show of unity for the normally fractured opposition.

Gandhi's Congress Party won 415 out of the 544 parliamentary seats in the last general elections in 1985. Political analysts say any chance the opposition could have for winning the next election lies in its ability to put up consensus candidates and avoid splitting the anti-Congress vote.

The only time the Congress has lost an election in independent India was when the opposition united in 1977. But that government fell apart less than three years later when the fragile coalition splintered.

200 women arrested in S. Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Police arrested more than 200 women, including the wife of Archbishop Desmond Tutu, during a protest march in central Cape Town as part of a nationwide defiance campaign.

Many of the women, blacks and whites, sat on the street and chanted freedom songs before police led or carried them into vans.

In Pretoria, eight blacks and two whites were arrested for trying to desegregate the capital's whites-only buses, another phase of the defiance campaign. The two whites were women who bought bus tickets for blacks.

Twice this week, shots have been fired into the homes of organizers of the Pretoria campaign.

Police stopped the throng of placard-carrying women in Cape Town after they emerged from a church hall to begin a march to the British Embassy. They intended to ask Britain to protest the South African government's handling of student unrest in the Cape Town area and to intercede on behalf of three black activists facing execution for a 1986 killing.

In addition to Leah Tutu, those arrested included Mary Burton, a white who heads the Black Sash civil rights group, and Dorothy Boesak, wife of the Rev. Allan Boesak, a prominent mixed-race activist who is president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Many of the marchers sat in a street adjoining a small plaza until they were led into police vans and driven away. Scores of onlookers cheered them.

Many of the marchers sat in a street adjoining a small plaza until they were led into police vans and driven away. Scores of onlookers cheered them.

Police said the women would be charged with participating in an illegal gathering.

A white activist involved in the defiance campaign, Willie Hofmeyer, was admitted to a Cape Town hospital Wednesday with suspected internal bleeding, his father said. Hofmeyer has been on a hunger strike since he was detained by police last week during a protest at a branch of First National Bank, sponsor of an ongoing tour by an international rugby team which activists say violates the sports boycott of South Africa.

The South African Council of Churches, which supports the defiance campaign, announced plans for an outdoor rally Saturday in Soweto, the vast black township outside Johannesburg. The church council's general secretary, the Rev. Frank Chikane, said the rally was intended as a forum for blacks to express their opposition to the white-controlled government in a peaceful manner.

Outdoor rallies are illegal unless authorized by the government, and Chikane said he hoped Saturday's event would be approved. Tutu and Boesak are among the scheduled speakers.

Before dawn Wednesday, a bomb exploded at the home of a member of the Indian chamber of Parliament, causing damage but no injuries. Police said the explosion wrecked a door and several windows at the home of Ahomed Lambert in Alberton, southeast of Johannesburg. There was no claim of responsibility.

Anti-apartheid militants are urging a boycott of the September 6 elections for the mixed-race and Indian chambers of Parliament, which is dominated by a whites-only chamber and excludes the black majority.

King's 'ylle humours' blamed on lack of fruits and veggies

LONDON (AP) — King Henry VIII, renowned for his appetite for women and power, was killed by his craving for meat, a historian has concluded.

Susan Maclean Kybett, writing in the September issue of History Today, argues that Henry died in 1547 of scurvy, a disease caused by a lack of fruits and vegetables rich in vitamin C.

Or as the headline in Wednesday's Guardian newspaper put it: "Henry was a scurvy knave."

The king, Kybett said, displayed a number of symptoms of scurvy: swollen, ulcerated legs, bad breath, frequent colds, constipation, lethargy, forgetfulness, bloating and wild mood swings.

It could have been Henry, she wrote, that the Elizabethan writer Phillip Stubbes had in mind in this blast against the English diet:

"For who is sicker than they that fare deliciously every day? Who is corrupter? Who belcheth more? Who looketh worse, who is weaker and feebler than they? Who hath more filthy colour, phlegm and putrefaction (replete with gross humours) than they?"

"And, to be brief, who dyeth sooner than they?" Significantly, Henry was usually sick during Lent, when fasting coincided with a lack of nutritious food, Kybett wrote.

"But nobody in the Tudor era associated foods with health. They hoped in vain that the green and golden concoctions of the alchemist would bring a cure."

It was once believed that Henry, who died at age 56, succumbed to syphilis, but that theory has been discredited.

A cure for scurvy was unknown until Dr. James Lind of Scotland published "A Treatment of the Scurvy" in 1755.

Sailors were frequent sufferers from scurvy until it was discovered that they could be protected by citrus fruits — hence the term "Limey" for British, from the lime juice rations that were given to seamen.

Kybett, a native of Scotland who lives in Jackson, Mich., said that the English of Henry's time had no techniques for preserving fruits and vegetables.

End of the lurch

Tuesday's passage of a riverboat gambling measure by voters in four Mississippi River communities makes floating casinos all but a done deal for Eastern Iowa. Apart from the lesson — obviously unlearned — of the Prairie Meadows debacle, and forgetting, for the moment, the moralists' objections to legalized wagering, voters in Scott, Jackson, Muscatine and Clinton counties will be very sorry for what they've done.

Indeed, legalized gambling presents more bad examples of itself and what it can do to a community than virtually any other industry.

Gambling advocates in the Iowa Legislature have sworn up and down that gambling in Iowa will be different — "run in a quality fashion... and clean as a hound's tooth," according to House Majority Leader Robert Arnould — but one has to wonder why they think they can operate a brothel without whores.

What Arnould and others in his camp seem to think is that because this is Iowa, not New Jersey or Nevada, clean gambling is possible.

They seriously underestimate the size and nature of the camel whose nose they've allowed in the tent.

Legalized gambling is insidious and seductive. It makes elaborate promises and delivers almost instantly with an injection of outside capital, with jobs and opportunities that did not exist before.

But virtually any new industry can accomplish that in the long run, and without the permanent, transforming effect that legalized gambling has on any community it touches.

At its best, economic development empowers a community. People who grew up there can remain there, have jobs, buy homes.

Gambling does just the opposite — it transforms a city in its own image, making it all but unrecognizable to people who call it home. And those who think things will go differently in Iowa should remember that Chicago is roughly the same distance from Davenport as New York is from Atlantic City, a community whose identity was virtually eradicated when hard times made legalized wagering look like the only way out.

Iowa's long lurch toward the gambling trap is now complete. And unless the state Legislature changes its position between now and the spring of 1991, it's a trap in which Iowa's river cities may forever languish.

Put another way: Legalized gambling is not economic development. It is copping-out.

Two front war

Next Tuesday, President Bush will address the nation to unveil drug czar William Bennett's comprehensive combat plans for the war on drugs. Bennett's plan is expected to depart slightly from previous Reagan administration policies, with a greater focus on domestic measures to ease the demand for illicit drugs in the United States.

Curbing that demand, which fuels murderous drug cartels like the Medellin syndicate currently ravaging Colombia, will be an essential ingredient of long-term battle plans. Yet, in the wake of the Bush administration's recent agreement with Colombia to extradite known drug barons to the U.S., it is now both unwise and inappropriate for Bush to focus the American public's attention completely on the domestic front of this drug war.

Capitol Hill lawmakers have been advised that Bennett's plan will call for extensive, expensive measures such as doubling the federal prison budget and adding millions in funding for education and treatment programs. Those measures will require millions of dollars to be reallocated from other programs and — quite possibly — necessitate new taxes.

Bennett has quipped in past months that "crack is worse than taxes," but while the Bush administration readies itself to rally a moral and financial commitment against drugs from the American public, Colombia is paying the price daily in blood.

After the assassination of Colombian presidential candidate Senator Luis Carlos Galan twelve days ago by members of the Medellin cartel, the outmatched Colombian government declared war on their country's drug barons. The U.S. rushed $65 million in helicopters and other military aid to the Colombian government, but through intimidation tactics and brutal, precision terrorism against government entities, the cartel's forces have quickly weakened the resolve of both government officials and the Colombian people.

Colombian government officials may have declared this war against the cartel, but it is now as much the United States' fight as Colombia's.

The Colombian government is both uncomfortable in and unprepared for the role of anti-drug strong man. And, not surprisingly, its people have difficulty supporting the enforcement of a policy meant to end another nation's problems, especially at the cost of hundreds of Colombian lives.

Crushing the cartels is the ultimate goal of this offensive, and it will involve a serious financial — if not military — sacrifice from the U.S. Moral support and $65 million amounts to far less than the U.S. can reasonably provide. Without considerably more aid, Colombia's government could fall, and a critical battle in a vital war will be lost.

We're losing the war on drugs

Well, what drug prevention has got us now in Colombia is civil war, and we may as well call it that, trained though we are to refer to great big wars (like Korea) as "police actions." The drug cartel has now publicly threatened to kill 10 judges in Colombia for every drug trafficker extradited to the United States, and the minister of justice has announced that, all things considered, she would just as soon have another job. As for Colombian judges, they will soon have to be recruited from Death Row.

The accumulation of evidence is unending. Richard Berke, writing a special report for the New York Times, describes the use of the U.S. highway system by the drug peddlers. He begins by quoting a secret cable from the narcotics intelligence center in El Paso, Texas, sent out to all hands: "Maryland State Police reported one pound cocaine seizure concealed in stuffed teddy bear. Two teddy bears discovered in vehicle, one heavier than the other. Velcro closure on heavier bear opened and cocaine discovered."

These are nice, heartwarming little triumphs, but oh-so-slight. If the mayor of Miami is to be believed, our whole anti-drug effort is interdicting something on the order of one percent of the population. Berke reports flatly that law enforcement officials "acknowledge" that theirs is a losing battle to keep the stuff from coming into U.S. territory, so that the next line of defense will be the highways. And how are we doing there? In 1988, 41 state police agencies reported seizures of 36,000 kilos of marijuana (about 80,000 pounds), 4,000 kilos of cocaine (about 10,000 pounds), and 10.6 kilos of heroin (about 22 pounds). "The cocaine would have a wholesale price of $45 million to $138 million, depending on purity and market conditions." If you think this is a lot, alas, you are mistaken. The drug business rings in at somewhere between $150 billion and $200 billion per year.

"We're not bragging for a minute," reports Sgt. Roy Herren of the Missouri Highway Patrol. "We know we're not touching the traffic."

"The last line of defense we have is the highway," a narcotics intelligence officer is quoted. "Once it gets past that line, the odds are probably one in a million of getting an entire load of dope off the street."

Where are we going with all of this? Flash. The feds are giving up at the conventional level. "We don't think interdiction is the answer," reports a special agent from El Paso. "There are more ways to bring the drugs into the country than we have the ability or wherewithal to stop. You can't just go willy-nilly stopping people in the country. The answer is not interdiction, but combining law enforcement and reducing demand."

That's right, and the demand is sharply reduced among college students (37 percent in five years), which is very good news but says nothing about the galloping pace of drug consumption in the cities and especially in the ghettos, or about our creepy-crawl in the direction of the chaotic conditions of Colombia:

It is safer to walk the streets of Johannesburg at night than those of New York.

Bobby Kennedy made famous a line (from Shaw), which he used in almost every speech. "Some men see things as they are and ask, Why? I dream of things that never were and ask, Why not?" Well, it is the duty of conservatives to declaim against lost causes when the ancillary results of pursuing them are tens of thousands of innocent victims and a gradual corruption of the machinery of the state. We conservatives are not against fighting for lost causes, which after all is what the clergy vow to do until death, but we insist on designating them as such.

Berke ends his story by quoting the director of the Drug Abuse Research Group at the University of California at Los Angeles, who was asked what could be done about the interstate travel of drugs. "We need a urine test for cars. That's what we need." Pending which we need, on the eve of the release of drug czar William Bennett's paper, to rethink his conclusions.

William F. Buckley's syndicated column appears Thursdays.

Censorship in Fairfield

To the Editor:

Never before a critic of Maharishi International University, today I feel I need to be one. This might bar me from the campus out there, but it has to be challenged. My criticism is based on the following recent developments.

Researching some concepts for an historical novel I'm working on, I consulted the writings of Sri Aurobindo early in August at the MIU library in Fairfield. Aurobindo was a pre-eminent philosopher who dealt with all aspects of Indian idealism in great detail, the school of integral non-dualism. I was interested in his treatment of the subject of illusion, or maya for certain story line ideas I was trying to develop.

Educated at Cambridge, an enlightened poet, philosopher, writer, teacher — Aurobindo was well-versed in contemporary Indian philosophy and religion, as well as the philosophy and literature of western civilization.

Returning last week to expand my notes, I was horrified to discover that the MIU library had just removed Aurobindo from its collection. When I asked the managing librarian if I could have the books, or buy them from the library, he said no, the books were being held in the director's office and that the physical disposition of them was not quite decided.

I then asked about the Indian philosophers Vivekananda, Tagore, Gandhi and Radhakrishnan. The librarian told me they were being pulled from the shelves as well, as they were no longer approved.

I spoke with the library director then, objecting to the removal of Aurobindo's work. He told me that this is not a public library, that the action taken in their continuing effort to "preserve the purity of Maharishi's teaching." He said,

"Maharishi's teaching is the only path to enlightenment we recognize here."

The library of a private school has the right to preserve the purity of the (Indian philosophy) teaching they approve of. But removing other philosophy books of historic importance and international acclaim, like Aurobindo, Vivekananda, Tagore and others from its collection, is not the way.

Enlightenment notwithstanding, removing these books is a curtailing of intellectual freedom by an international university. It is a controlling of what you can and cannot know there. It is censorship, plain and simple. There are other "paths to enlightenment" in the Western Philosophy Section at the MIU library, such as may be found in the idealism of Hegel, Whitehead, or Bergson, or the Kantian ideal in "The Critique of Pure Reason" by Immanuel Kant. I wonder if they are next on the list of "those to go?"

It seems to me that Maharishi's interdisciplinary principals of education, which I understand are in general practice at MIU, should apply to the study of Aurobindo if one wishes, as they do to the study of philosophy, to psychology and psychologists, to neuroscience or any other university subject. Why not?

Maharishi's teaching would be more honored, better preserved, even strengthened, by allowing it to co-exist and compare naturally on library shelves, both public and private, with all the thoughts of man; just as his teaching now harmonizes with diverse thoughts in the minds of millions of mediators he has initiated from many walks of life, worldwide.

I urge the MIU library officials not to fear, not to burn, not to bury, but to restore and expand the Aurobindo collection on its shelves, and to leave the remaining Indian Philosophy Section intact. Only then can we say, with a measure of conviction, that there really is a school of higher learning, an "International University" in Fairfield: One that educates — not indoctrinates — students on the philosophical level.

Extreme View

To the Editor:

In his first article of the semester, editor Jay Casini defended his somewhat controversial decision to carry neoconservative guru William F. Buckley's weekly syndicated columns as an attempt to diversify the DI's Viewpoints Page. Casini argued that Buckley would provide (much needed) "astute political analysis" for the DI. Although diversification of opinions is important, I would argue that Buckley, who wrote that "the commitment by the Liberals to democracy has proved obsessive, even fetishistic," represents extreme rightist views that are greatly biased by emotional "patriotic" fervor (a far cry from "astute political analysis"). Further, I would add that Casini's attempt to diversify the DI does not include carrying weekly columns by political analysts that are as far to the left as Buckley is to the right.

An example of Buckley's analysis, unfettered by obsessions with democracy, is his commentary on the downing of KAL 007 by a Soviet fighter. Buckley, outraged and suffering from "initial shock," decried the tragedy as an "execution" carried out by "Soviet barbarians," and demanded "compensation for the families." Buckley was particularly incensed because the Soviets attempted to explain their actions by a "succession of lies," most of which proved to be true. Evidence clearly shows that the Soviets made a legitimate mistake.

By comparison, when the U.S. shot down an Iranian jetliner and attempted to explain its behavior with a "succession of lies" (which really were, if not lies, at least not true), Buckley did not suggest that this tragedy was an "execution" committed by "barbarians." Nor did he demand compensation for the families of the victims, a dramatic example of Buckley's "astute" hypocrisy.

As one who admittedly suffers from a democracy fetish, I welcome a diversity of views. I think it is wrong, however, to argue that the DI has achieved this when there is a notable absence of left opinion. Certainly, there is no weekly columnist, Jeff Greenfield included, who can be considered a leftist counterpart to Buckley.

Bush to aid Colombia and other drug-plagued nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush's new drug strategy is being adjusted to focus more U.S. aid on Colombia and two other South American nations that are fighting cocaine cartels in the region.

The crisis in Colombia, with seven bombings Tuesday in the city of Medellin, was high on the agenda when the president met with top Cabinet officials at his Maine seaside retreat to complete the new anti-drug strategy to be unveiled next week.

Bush promised "to cooperate to the best of our ability" with Colombia's latest request for $19 million to protect judges from drug cartel death squads.

He did not comment specifically on the request but said details were being worked out in discussions in Washington with a delegation of Colombian officials headed by Justice Minister Monica de Greiff.

Because of the crisis there, "Colombia is a new ingredient in the overall drug strategy," national security adviser Brent Scowcroft told reporters in Kennebunkport, Maine.

In Washington, de Greiff told reporters "the law is under siege in Colombia and we must protect it every way we can."

"We must uphold the rule of law, and regrettably at this moment that requires intensive physical protection of our judges," said de Greiff, her country's eighth justice minister in three years.

The 32-year-old lawyer denied reports she had considered resigning in the face of death threats against her family, saying: "The threats are out there, but I am satisfied with my protection right now. I am determined that the integrity of our justice system survives this crisis and I hope to play my full part in assuring this."

Meanwhile, the State Department recommended Tuesday that Americans postpone non-essential travel to Colombia indefinitely and suggested that U.S. citizens living there consider leaving.

"Although Americans have not yet been the target of any violence, visitors and Americans residing in Colombia should carefully re-evaluate whether it is essential that they travel to or remain in Colombia at this time," said the statement. "The department believes it would be prudent for those who deem their presence non-essential to seriously consider leaving." Asked about reports that the anti-drug proposal will include $300 million for Bolivia, Peru and Colombia, Scowcroft said it will contain an "Andean strategy" to help these countries improve drug interdiction.

He said the aid package was adjusted upward to include the $65 million that Bush announced last week for the Colombian armed forces.

Curfew set to quell drug violence

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Authorities imposed a curfew Wednesday in Medellin and nine other cities in the heart of coastal Colombia to try to halt violence by drug barons stung by Colombia's crackdown on narcotics.

Also Wednesday, the U.S. government ordered families of its embassy staff to leave Colombia, a spokesman said.

Future of U.S. bases debated in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A U.S. congressman said Wednesday that objections of Filipino senators to U.S. bases here could prompt Washington to reduce its military commitment to the Philippines.

He spoke the same day that activists mounted two small protests at the U.S. Embassy about the bases.

Rep. John Murtha (D-Pa.) was referring to a resolution signed Thursday by 12 of 23 Filipino senators who called for closing the bases when their lease expires in 1991.

U.S. and Philippine officials are expected to begin talks this year on extending the lease.

But any agreement must be approved by two-thirds of the Philippine Senate. The Senate resolution suggests President Corazon Aquino would lack votes for ratification.

"Obviously, it can't be ratified if they stick to what they say," said Murtha. "I have no idea whether they mean what they say. But I know it doesn't help the political situation and climate in the United States when we see distinguished members of their Congress making statements about the treaty."

About 40,000 U.S. troops, civilian employees and military dependents are stationed at six U.S. installations, which include Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay Naval Base. They are among the largest outside the United States.

Earlier Wednesday, Murtha, who serves as chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, told an American business group that maintaining current force levels in the Philippines "is not a top priority of the American Congress."

He said statements against the bases "could inflame members of Congress" eager to find ways of reducing American troop strength overseas.

However, at a later news conference, Murtha said he believes the bases are vital to the defense of the Far East and contribute economically to the Philippines. About 70,000 Filipinos work at the installations, collecting more than $96 million in annual salaries.

Filipino critics claim the bases infringe on national sovereignty. During the protests Wednesday, about 100 leftist students unfurled anti-bases banners at the Department of Foreign Affairs.

A group of militant feminists mounted a separate protest against the bases in front of the U.S. Embassy.

No violence was reported in either protest.

Utility industry predicts higher rates under acid rain controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush's proposed legislation to reduce acid rain will cost more than $5.5 billion a year and force electric rate increases of at least 5 percent to 10 percent in many states, the utility industry claimed Wednesday, calling the costs excessive and unnecessary.

The industry estimates were about a third higher than those projected by the Bush administration, but officials at the Environmental Protection Agency characterized them as not far out of line from administration estimates when various factors are taken into consideration.

"We're heartened that their numbers are coming out so close to ours," said Nancy Kete, senior analyst in the EPA's office of air radiation. She said the EPA has estimated industry costs would be about $4 billion a year when full compliance with the proposed acid rain controls go into effect in the year 2000.

The acid rain curbs are included in legislation before Congress tightening federal air pollution laws. The Bush proposal calls for cutting sulfur dioxide emissions — the chief source of acid rain — by 10 million tons a year, mostly from coal-burning power plants.

The report by the Edison Electric Institute projects industry costs as high as $120 billion as a result of having to install pollution-control equipment and make other adjustments to meet the emission curbs required by the legislation.

Under some scenarios, costs could jump to as much as $7.1 billion a year after the year 2000, said the industry report.

Mack pleads guilty to cocaine use

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns running back Kevin Mack pleaded guilty Wednesday to cocaine use as part of a plea bargain which included the dismissal of three charges stemming from his arrest at a drug-infested street corner.

"Guilty," Mack said quietly as he stood with his hands folded in front of him before Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court Judge Richard J. McMonagle, who asked if the player wanted to change his innocent plea.

With a series of one-word responses, Mack said he understood the plea could result in a sentence of up to 18 months and said he understood the charge to which he had decided to plead guilty.

Mack, who has rushed for 2,989 yards in four years with the Browns, looked straight ahead as he left the courtroom with his wife, Ava. He didn't speak to reporters.

The judge said he would sentence Mack after receiving a probation and drug use pre-sentence report. The NFL was taking a wait-and-see attitude.

"We continue to monitor the case and will review today's court proceedings," said league spokesman Joe Browne. "We do not plan to comment further, probably until after Kevin Mack's sentencing."

Mack returned to the Browns' training camp at Baldwin-Wallace College in the afternoon.

"It's been pretty tough," he said during brief a comment to reporters about the case. "The last couple weeks it hasn't been too bad, because everything has died down."

"Now that it's all kicked back up, I'm pretty sure it's going to be real tough for me to keep my concentration about what I have to do on the field."

Art Modell, Browns majority owner and president, issued a statement:

"What's important is that Kevin has admitted he used cocaine and he has taken dramatic measures to fight against ever using that drug, or any other, for the rest of his life," Modell said. "He knows that his effort will be a day-to-day commitment, and we're all pulling for him to succeed."

"We never believed he was a trafficker and the prosecutors obviously did not either. All the facts of this case are being forwarded to the commissioner's office, and we'll wait for the league's response to the resolution of this case."

Hawks mix youth and experience

Pat Axmear
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team, nationally ranked for the last nine years, will use a combination of youth and experience in 1989.

The return of three seniors, two juniors, two sophomores and a strong freshmen class will give Iowa coach Jerry Hassard the nucleus to challenge for the conference title.

"This year we have a bigger team," Hassard said. "We haven't had a team this size since 1980. Not only do we have the numbers, but they are quality runners."

Leading the team is three-time All-American Jeanne Kruckeberg. Although this will be the senior's last year of eligibility in track, it is only her third year in cross country.

"The team is going to be better than last year," Kruckeberg said. "We lost a couple of upperclassmen but the freshmen seem to be very strong."

Also returning are seniors Kim Schneckloth and Jennifer Moore. Schneckloth was twice named academic all-Big Ten in both cross country and track.

Junior Tami Hoskins is a member of the league's defending-champion indoor 4 x 800-meter relay team, while sophomore Jennifer Brower placed 31st at the Big Ten cross country meet her freshman year.

The other runners returning are junior Beth Wilson and sophomore Patty Jones.

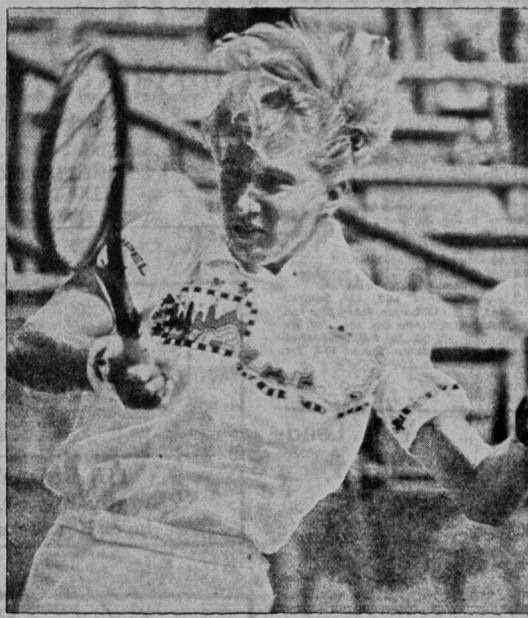

Hassard said he feels that the maturity of the returnees and the work they did over the summer will help the team to a strong finish in the Big Ten Championship.

"This team has improved, both mentally and physically," Hassard said. "Now it's up to the team to see Cross-country, Page 2B

West Germany's Boris Becker, above, and fellow countryman Steffi Graf both were victorious Wednesday at the U.S. Open. Becker

McEnroe ousted in U.S. Open shocker

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Haarhuis, ranked 115th and forced to win three matches just to qualify for his first U.S. Open, sent four-time champion and fourth-seeded John McEnroe out in the second round Wednesday night in a 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5 shocker.

Haarhuis' victory capped a day of splendid tennis at the Open as three-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker struggled to survive a five-set match and top-seeded Ivan Lendl won his first match.

"It's one thing if the guy plays really well," said an annoyed McEnroe. "It's harder to take if I play as poorly as I did. This is a tough one to take."

McEnroe, who lost in the semifinals at Wimbledon and hoped to crown a year of hard work by coming back to full strength at the Open, was plainly disgusted with himself.

"I worked to get to No. 4 in the world, then to lose to a guy I hadn't seen play before is pretty bad," he said. "I expected more from myself."

Haarhuis, 22, who is ranked third in the Netherlands and didn't even qualify for his country's Davis Cup team, was elated to be playing here at all, much less to beat McEnroe on his home turf.

Haarhuis never attempted to qualify in a Grand Slam event prior to qualifying for the 1989 French Open, where he reached the third round. He attended Armstrong State College from 1984 to 1986 before transferring to Florida State for two years.

"I was loose. There was no pressure on me to win," Haarhuis said. "All I had to do was go out and play good tennis. And it's

Hawkeyes rebuilding for 1989

Rick Gabriel
 The Daily Iowan

The 1989-90 Iowa men's tennis team will be going through a major rebuilding year according to last year's NCAA Region IV Coach-of-the-Year, Steve Houghton.

Jay Malthy and Dave Novak are the only two regulars returning from last year's 16-8 team. Each posted 20-8 individual records and are expected to lead this year's team.

Novak feels he'll be up to the challenge.

Men's Tennis

"I think I'll be able to handle it well," he said. "I've been around for three years and I'm used to college tennis. I think I and the other seniors are prepared to step in."

Those who play this year will be stepping into some big shoes. Gone because of graduation are last year's top four single players, including two-time all-Big Ten selection Claes Ramel, who last year earned NCAA Region IV Sportsman-of-the-Year honors.

Paul Buckingham, Greg Hebard and Tim Reynolds will be the returning players trying to help Malthy and Novak fill the holes.

Joining them will be seven new faces: transfers Thomas Adler, Tommy Heiting, Paul Rouse, Lou Horwitz and freshmen Mike Marino, Eric Schulman and Jason Palmer. Horwitz will have to sit out for the year.

With 7-of-12 players new to the team, inexperience may be a problem. But Houghton feels that it might not be such a bad thing.

"We're an inexperienced but capable team," he said. "The inexperience may help us. We will be an underrated team and we may be able to sneak up on some teams."

Houghton said that because Iowa's tennis program has gained national recognition the past few years, this season's schedule may be one of the toughest. Houghton said he feels his team will need some early wins to gain the necessary confidence.

"Attitude will be the key," he said. "A lot of these guys may feel they have something to prove and that could really help us."

Novak agreed.

"It may be tougher than in the

Virginia-Notre Dame Kickoff another college grid season

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Notre Dame's top dog is scared of cats.

Quarterback Tony Rice, who led the Fighting Irish to the national championship last season, isn't afraid of anyone on the football field. It's felines that he fears.

"I hope Virginia doesn't bring a cat onto the field," Rice said of Notre Dame's opponent in tonight's Kick-off Classic at Giants Stadium, the opener of the college football season.

"I hate cats. If they put one next to the ball, I'll probably run off the field."

Running is Rice's specialty, but he's also a potent passer. That's why the 6-foot-1, 200-pound senior is on almost every preseason list of Heisman Trophy contenders.

Notre Dame has produced seven Heisman winners, more than any other school. The last one was Tim Brown in 1987.

about," Rice said. "I just want to go out and help the team win. Individual awards don't mean anything if the team doesn't do well."

Notre Dame, No. 2 in the rankings, is expected to do well this season despite losing seven projected starters or backups in the last month because of injuries, rules violations, poor grades and other problems.

"A lot of things have happened to us lately, but I think we can overcome it," Rice said. "We had a team meeting last night and I said,

"No matter what happens, we've got to stick together."

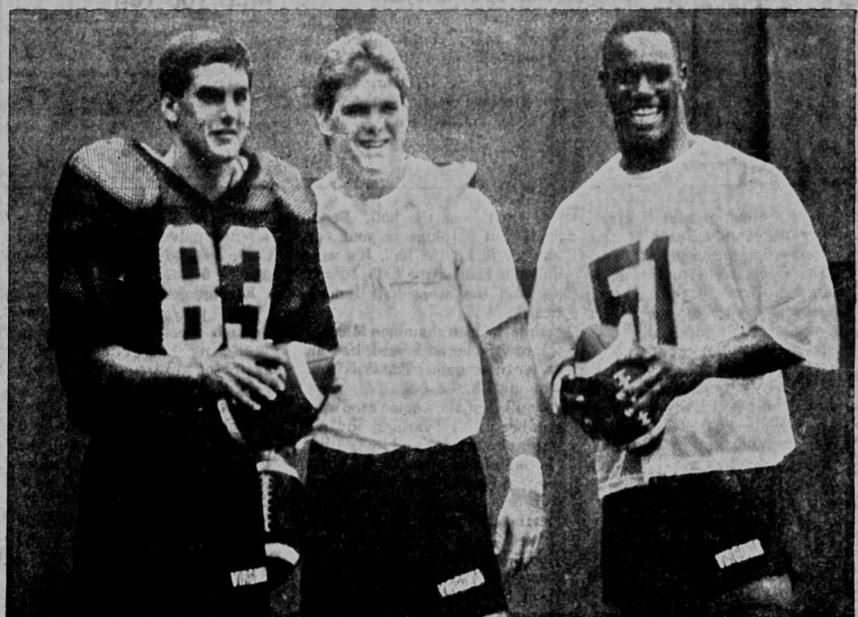

Rice has been through tough times before at Notre Dame.

The South Carolina native had to sit out his freshman year because his SAT scores fell just below the NCAA minimum. Then he had to listen to critics who said he was a runner masquerading as a quarterback.

Last year, Rice was the team's leading rusher with 700 yards. But he also proved he can pass, throwing for 1,176 yards and eight touchdowns.

When Notre Dame played Miami, Southern California and West Virginia, quarterbacks Steve Walsh, Rodney Peete and Major Harris got most of the pregame attention. After the games, Rice was the hot topic.

"He's not a good athlete playing quarterback. He's a good quarterback, period," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "He can run, he can pass and he can lead."

Virginia's Derek Dooley, Scott Griese and Yosef Jackson loosen up before practice for tonight's Kickoff Classic. Dooley's father is the athletic director at Georgia, Griese is the son of former Miami Dolphin quarterback Bob Griese and Jackson's dad is the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Stewart regrets recruiting problem

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Coach Norm Stewart said Wednesday he regrets that a highly regarded basketball recruit has decided not to attend Missouri because of an on-going NCAA investigation.

But Stewart said in a statement released by the university that he has not released the player — Daniel Lyton, a power forward from Detroit — from his commitment to Missouri.

"We're sorry that he won't fulfill his commitment, but his absence will present a tremendous opportunity for someone else in the future," Stewart said. "I have made repeated efforts to call him, but he has been unavailable (though) I did talk to his mother last weekend."

Lyton said in a telephone interview Monday that he wanted out of the letter of intent he signed with Missouri because the school might face probation over alleged recruiting violations. He said Stewart refused two months ago to release him from his commitment.

"We haven't had any indication that we would be involved with any (NCAA) probation and don't know where he's getting his information," Stewart said. "Obviously he is not listening to us. Maybe it's better that he go somewhere else and hopefully he'll listen to them. Any move toward a release at this time, for this reason, would dilute the validity of the national letter of intent."

If Missouri refuses to release Lyton, he would have to sit out two seasons and would have just two years of eligibility left at another school. A release from Missouri would allow Lyton to play at a four-year school after sitting out one year.

Another recruit, Chris Heller of Center High School in Kansas City, said he is concerned about what might happen at Missouri but has no plans to leave.

"Lately, there hasn't been much said about it, but right now anyway, there's nothing I can do about it," Heller said.

The father of another recruit, point guard Travis Ford of Madisonville, Ky., said his son plans to stay at Missouri.

"Travis is at Missouri because he made a commitment, and he's looking forward to having a good year there," said Eddie Ford. "Travis and I have discussed this, and it was a disappointment to us that there were some allegations. We looked into it and feel they have handled it properly."

Wyche warns of let down

(AP) — The start of the NFL season is still 11 days away, but Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche is worrying like it's half over.

Wyche, who coached the Bengals to the Super Bowl last season, was upset with his team's play in Monday night's 27-10 exhibition loss at New Orleans and is warning his club about a post-Super Bowl letdown.

"It's a powerful thing," Wyche said. "Every team that goes to the Super Bowl warns each team the following year about this thing that happens."

"I'm not sure that letdown is the word. There's a satisfying effect for coaches as well as players. You end up losing what some of our coaches call a sense of urgency about it. You're not neglecting anything. There's just a different urgency to get things done."

past," he said, "but with positive attitudes things should work out well."

Houghton said the team won't go into the season, which begins with the Harvard Invitational on September 22, with any specific team goals.

He said that the team would hope to finish in the upper half of the Big Ten, but won't set any limit on how high. He said instead he would judge his team's progress by different standards.

"I would prefer to measure the success of this team by individual efforts," he said. "If we can get the most out of every guy on the team, then we'll just let the chips fall where they may."

keep the intensity level high."

New strength will be provided by the six new freshmen. Tracy Dahl is a four-time Minnesota state champion. Rachel Hosmer of New York was named all-state in track and field.

Denise Alto, Amy Rodhaver, Christine Salsberry and Wendy Welch round out the freshmen class.

Wisconsin has captured the Big Ten title the last six years. Last season, the Hawkeyes finished fourth.

The last time Wisconsin did not win the conference championship was when Iowa took the crown in 1982. In 1986, the Hawkeyes tied for second and were outright runner-up the next year.

Hassard is optimistic that this year's team could mirror the accomplishment of the 1982 squad.

"We have our work cut out for us, but I feel we have a real chance at the title," Hassard said.

a great feeling to beat a great player like John McEnroe."

Becker, fighting his private curse at the Open, went to the edge against a free-spirited, go-for-broke Californian in the second round and barely survived.

Becker lost the first two sets to Derrick Rostagno and saved two match points in the fourth-set tie-breaker before clawing back to win 1-6, 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3 in a 4½-hour marathon filled with spectacular points.

Lendl, who chased his own demons at the Open in his early years but overcame them to win it three times and reach the finals four more, struggled a little before beating Diego Perez 6-1, 7-6, 6-4 in a first-round match suspended by rain Tuesday night.

The lights bothered Lendl when he started the match and the jets from LaGuardia Airport bothered him when it resumed.

"I can't hear the ball," Lendl said. "Put earplugs in your ear and try to hit the ball. It's very difficult. Half of the balls I don't see and the other half I don't hear."

French Open champion Michael Chang, the seventh seed, had an easier time against Tim Wilkison, winning 7-5, 6-3, 6-2.

Steffi Graf, the women's top seed, had her usual yawner, advancing to the third round by beating Nathalie Herremann 6-1, 6-1.

Second-seeded Martina Navratilova beat Julie Halard 6-1, 6-0, fourth-seeded Chris Evert beat Elise Burgin 6-4, 6-1 for her record 99th career victory at the Open, and fifth-seeded Zina Garrison beat Gigi Fernandez 7-5, 6-4.

Women's French Open champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, the sixth seed, beat Jo-Anne Faull 6-3, 6-1 in a first-round match.

Manuela Maleeva, seeded seventh, advanced when Isabel Cueto retired in the third set, trailing 5-7, 6-3, 5-3.

Rostagno, 24, of Brentwood, Calif., played the aggressor through most of the match in sweltering heat and humidity against Becker, a 21-year-old West German who has had little luck at the U.S. Open.

Becker suffered blisters on both feet last year when he lost in the second round to unseeded Darren Cahill, and he got knocked out in the round of 16 in 1985 and 1987. Becker's best showing here came in 1986, when he reached the semifinals.

Becker said his poor showings at the U.S. Open stem, in part, from his emphasis on the two Grand Slam events that are more important to him, Wimbledon and the French Open.

"I build my season on them, and I peak there, and you almost have to keep your peak another two months," he said. "It was good I had to struggle, come back and win it."

Against Rostagno, Becker was facing a man used to long hauls. Rostagno keeps two buses, one on each coast, for commuting between tournaments, and often sleeps in them on the way.

Rostagno charged the net repeatedly and scorched the hard court in the stadium with his serves in the first set as Becker missed some easy shots and looked slow.

"I was enjoying myself out there," Rostagno said. "I was rather sad it didn't turn out my way, because I think it should have. I'll have to watch it on replay, and maybe one time I'll win it."

But who won?: Fewer than 50 spectators gathered at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Wednesday as the Iowa volleyball team hosted a scrimmage against Loras College. But according to Iowa coach Ruth Nelson, the scrimmage served its purpose. "It was for us to see everybody in playing action," Nelson said. "I knew about the people who played consistently and who were strong in skills. This let me see where we can get the number seven, eight, nine and ten players."

Around the dial: No less than 408 radio stations will carry Big Ten football games this season in 14 states throughout the nation. Iowa football will be heard on four networks, the most of any Big Ten school. The Iowa Hawkeye Network with Bob Brooks and Larry Morgan calling the action is based at KHAK-AM and FM in Cedar Rapids. WMT-AM in Cedar Rapids is the Iowa Sports Network flagship which features Frosty Mitchell and Gus Schrader behind the mic. The Palmer Sports Network from WHO-AM in Des Moines has Jim Zabel and Ed Podolak describing Iowa play-by-play. Thom Cornelius and Jim Albrecht are the voices of KSTT-AM in Davenport, the fourth network.

Ticket please: There are 1,000 tickets available for Iowa's football showdown Sept. 30 against Tulsa. The Iowa ticket office will start selling the tickets to the general public Friday. The tickets, which were returned to the university from Tulsa's allotment, will go on sale at 8 a.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. They cost $16 each and no one may buy more than four. Mail orders also will be accepted. They must be accompanied by an extra $1 to cover postage and handling. Also Friday, the university will put 150 season tickets on sale for $96 each. The tickets are for single seats scattered throughout Kinnick Stadium.

Quoteable: If allegations against Iowa assistant basketball coach Bruce Pearl are true, the Hawkeyes may have a difficult time landing future basketball players from Chicago. Although the NCAA hasn't made any comment on a potential investigation into Iowa, many Chicago high school coaches have taken notice. "Coaches from the area have kept the phone ringing off the hook," Sun-Times contributing writer Clyde Travis said. "(Coaches) have been saying that if these facts are indeed true, (Pearl) is through in Chicago."

- notes compiled by the Daily Iowan sports staff.

DUISBURG, West Germany (AP) — Roger Kingdom won the gold medal in the 110-meter hurdles Wednesday at the World University Games, but cold weather and stiffness prevented the two-time Olympic champion from challenging his own world record.

Americans also won three gold medals in relays on the final day of the Games, tying them with the Soviet Union for the lead with nine.

"I was very stiff this morning and I was concerned about that," Kingdom said. "I just didn't have enough." Kingdom won easily, but his time of 13.26 was well outside his two-week-old world record of 12.92.

"I wanted to break it again," he said. "I felt pretty good yesterday. (In the heats) I was hitting quite a few hurdles and today we had the wind in front of us, which is good because I ran well against the wind. But I just wasn't able to break the record."

Kingdom held a slight lead at the first hurdle and continued pulling away despite hitting hard against the sixth hurdle. He was 10 feet ahead of Emilio Valle of Cuba at the finish line.

"I tried to stay under control until the end, particularly at the last hurdle," Kingdom said.

Valle was timed in 13.52, while the bronze medal went to Florian Schwarthoff of West Germany in 13.63.

The U.S. women's 400-meter relay team of Michelle Finn, Anita Howard, Lamonda Miller and Esther Jones took the gold with a meet-record time of 42.40, breaking the mark of 42.82 set in 1983 by another U.S. team.

Walker Watkins, Michael Dees, Andre Cason and Michael Marsh teamed to power the U.S. men's 400-yard relay team to the gold medal with a time of 38.58.

The women's 1,600-meter gold medal for the Americans was won by Celena Mondie, Natasha Kaiser, Jearl Miles and Terri Dendy.

Jamaica prevented a U.S. sweep of the relays by winning the men's 1,600-meters in 3:02.58. The Americans were second in 3:02.75.

"I was very stiff (yesterday) morning and I was concerned about that. I just didn't have enough."
— Roger Kingdom, 110-meter hurdle world record holder

The Americans got another silver from Michael Stulce in the men's shot put. His toss of 67-6¼ was second only to Lars Nilssen of Norway, who won the gold with a throw of 67-9¼.

Another world record-holder also won despite being sub-par.

Javier Sotomayor of Cuba took the gold in the men's high jump by clearing seven feet, eight inches, four inches below his world record. He failed three times at 7-11¼, which would have been a meet record.

"While training here I developed problems with my left knee again," Sotomayor said. He said he first hurt the knee at a meet in Oslo in July.

But the Cuban said he was happy with his season.

"I have a lot of self-confidence and I've reached a certain level. I can't explain why, but everything seems to be going well for me this year."

American Hollis Conway was second in 7-7, while Rudolf Povarnitsyn of the Soviet Union, a former world record holder and bronze medalist at the 1988 Olympics, was third. He also cleared 7-7 but had more misses than Conway.

"I had problems with my first attempt and that took a lot out of me," said Conway, who had to make two efforts at 7-4½.

"When I'm strong I can beat him (Sotomayor) but I just wasn't strong enough today," Conway said.

Clemson back jailed for DUI

WALHALLA, S.C. (AP) — Clemson tailback Terry Allen, who could become the school's all-time leading rusher this season, was charged with driving under the influence and jailed for five hours before being released on bond.

South Carolina Highway Patrol Officer Robert E. Gambrell stopped Allen, 21, of Commerce, Ga., at 4:05 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 76 near Seneca for DUI, according to a booking report and confinement record, said Officer Jerry Zimmerman, assistant supervisor at the Oconee County Law Enforcement Center.

Allen was released on a personal recognizance bond at 9:05 a.m. after appearing before Magistrate Judge Larry Butts, Zimmerman said.

Allen was given a Breathalyzer test, said Sgt. Neil F. Brown, Highway Patrol supervisor in Oconee County. Brown would not comment on the results of the test.

"He was stopped and charged with DUI. Any other information will have to be held until after the court date," Brown said.

Hayes belts expensive home run

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The difference between a bunt single and a home run was $300. Von Hayes went for it, and became the first National League player to hit three home runs in a game this season.

Hayes also drove in six runs Tuesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants 6-1. He entered the series in a 2-for-31 slump, but in the first two games, he went 5-for-8 with three homers, two doubles, seven RBIs and six runs.

He also won $500 from teammate Lenny Dykstra.

"We've had a bet on who would be the first player to get three hits," Hayes said. "I asked him what he would give me if I laid down a bunt for my last hit. He said $200. I asked him what would happen if I hit a home run? He said, 'I'll give you $500.'"

It was a bad night for Dykstra, who went 0-for-4 and lost another $100 when he drew an automatic fine for throwing his helmet after arguing a close play at first base in the fifth inning.

As far as Hayes' hot bat, he says it's about time.

"I'm trying to get back to the way I was swinging in April," he said. "I've been trying for a long time."

Hayes is the first player in 10 years to hit three homers in one game against the Giants. Dale Murphy did it last in Atlanta on May 18, 1979.

Hayes' first three-homer game of his career gave him 21 home runs this season. Six of those shots came in April, when he got off to a hot start.

"A night like tonight, the ball can carry out to right field here," he said. "The really isn't one of my favorite hits, but when you're hitting good, it can become one of your favorites."

Hayes said at least 30 of his family and friends were in the stands to watch his accomplishments. His mother lives in nearby Stockton.

Hayes hit the first homer, a solo shot, into the upper deck. The second one was a long, high fly that fell just inside the right field foul pole for a three-run homer and a 4-1 lead. Both drives came off Don Robinson.

Unhappy smile

Chicago Bears second-string defensive back Maurice Douglas, shown at training camp in Platteville, Wis., in July, was suspended Tuesday for 30 days without pay for using steroids.

Samaranch handed 2nd term

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Juan Antonio Samaranch, a Spanish businessman and diplomat who has helped turn the Olympics from a disaster area into one of the biggest successes in sports, was unanimously re-elected president of the International Olympic Committee on Wednesday.

Samaranch, 69, was given a second term by acclamation after the nominations closed with no other candidates at the IOC's 95th Session.

His re-election was never in doubt, after his diplomatic and business skills helped the IOC change from an organization beleaguered by political boycotts and empty pockets into a unified community with millions of dollars in television revenue and respect throughout the world.

This term will run for four years and enable Samaranch, first elected to a nine-year term in 1980, to fulfill his dream of leading the Olympics in his hometown of Barcelona in 1992.

The 85 members of the IOC in attendance also unanimously elected Zhenliang He of China as a vice president and Robert Helmick of the United States to a place on the ruling executive board.

Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, becomes the first American on the board since the late Julian K. Roosevelt in 1985.

The IOC also gave final approval for a multimillion-dollar flying drug laboratory and announced a commission to set rules for out-of-competition drug testing.

Prince Alexandre de Merode, head of the IOC medical commission, said the first meeting of the panel would be held by the end of the year, and that the subject would be discussed at an international symposium on drugs in sports in Moscow in October.

International Olympic Committee

Merode also said he personally opposed a plan, submitted by IOC member Anita De Frantz, for a lifetime Olympic ban on any athlete caught using drugs at future Games. He said it would be unfair to permanently bar an athlete who failed a dope test for the first time just because that test took place at the Olympics.

"Everyone has the right to make one mistake," Merode said. "The second time it is different, but we try to re-insert people into society on first offenses and I feel it should be the same for sports."

As it opened its session, or annual meeting, the IOC also took away Olympic eligibility for any tennis player who has competed in South Africa since last summer's Games.

Anti-apartheid leaders, in a related development, said they were pleased with the Association of Tennis Professionals' decision to drop two South African tournaments next year, and that their next aims were the country's expulsion from the International Tennis Federation and barring South African players from Grand Slam tournaments.

The idea of a flying lab was developed after last year's Olympics, where Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson was nabbed for steroid use in the biggest drug scandal in the history of the Games.

Formerly rockin' Stones fall to formula rock

Gregory Galloway
The Daily Iowan

I'm sorry, I apologize, please forgive me. I thought that the new Rolling Stones album, "Steel Wheels," might actually be good. I don't know what came over me, I feel so ashamed. The album opens promisingly enough with Keith Richards' trademark guitar ring, "Sad, Sad, Sad" grinds to a halt while Mick Jagger opens his thick-lipped yap.

Remember when the Stones used to epitomize a birthday cake and beer irreverence, when Mick and Keith could write the opening to a song like "Miss You" walking down to the studio, and the band could ad lib the rest and create a disco/anti-disco classic? The Stones were always brash wit and glib poise, a certain studied nonchalance that many have tried to emulate, but none have ever duplicated. The Stones themselves now fall into that category; Mick's brashness seems half-hearted, and Keith sounds as if he's trying so hard to keep the band together he's afraid to cut loose.

Keith Richards modestly concedes that there are only three riffs in the Stones repertoire, but too many songs on "Steel Wheels" sound familiar, and that borrowing is not restricted to just other Stones songs. "Terrifying" sounds torn from the Robert Cray songbook, a meandering blues guitar with insipidly simple lyrics. "Blinded by Love" is nothing more than a hybrid of "Indian Girl" and "Waiting on a Friend," and the truly awful "Can't be Seen" swipes copiously from Robert Palmer. "Can't be Seen" might also contain the single-worst line on the album: "I got to chill this thing with you." It's a ludicrously forced "hipness" heretofore unheard on any Stones album, and the rest is all follow-the-formula rock 'n' roll, something we all should have expected.

Records

While "Steel Wheels" fails miserably to match the usual hype ("The best Stones record in a decade"), it does contain three bright spots. "Mixed Emotions," the first single, is a great pop song; it has everything the Stones used to deliver — a rock-solid rhythm section, the swagger-and-stagger guitars, and of course, Mick's cock-of-the-walk croak. "Mixed Emotions" is also buoyed by a swelling brass arrangement, layered down in the mix, unlike the overpowering, frequently blaring horns found on "Rock and a Hard Place."

"Almost Hear You Sigh" is a leftover from Keith's solo record, and this mid-tempo, piano and acoustic guitar-tinged ballad might have equaled the superior level of "Talk is Cheap," but the song suffers from Mick's one-dimensional singing. This claim is reinforced by the last song on the album, another Keith-penned ballad, "Slipping Away." While the song might not be as well written as "Almost Hear You Sigh," Keith's plaintive voice adds an emotional dimension Mick seems unwilling to express any longer. Mick does sing one verse of the song, however, and that verse speaks volumes: "All I want is ecstasy/ But I ain't getting much/ Just getting off on misery/ It seems I've lost my touch." Just as "Mixed Emotions" seems to comment directly upon Mick and Keith's announced truce, "Slipping Away" seems to comment on the band as a whole, and "Steel Wheels" specifically.

It's too bad that Keith Richards is the world's biggest fan of the self-professed "world's greatest rock-and-roll band" (a boast that is conspicuously absent from the recent tour hype). He keeps claiming "Steel Wheels" is the start of the second half of the Stones' career, while Mick keeps shaking his head and saying, "We'll see." Judging from their respective solo records, it is Jagger, not Richards, who needs the Stones. But here is Keith trying to save the marriage, placing the group in the uncomfortable position of having to either put up or shut up.

Unfortunately they could do neither.

Memorial Memoir

I remember dirty terrazo floors sticky
with the scattered remnants of forgotten meals.
Decaying vinyl seating.
torn asunder by can people who are now but memories.
Faux wood tables
scarred
by countless generations of restless D & D players searching in vain for that portable hole

shopping for books to the bitterweet accompaniment of restless bowlers drinking beverages of epic proportions in a Wheelroom existing now only in the mind waiting for the perfect bratwurst
Was the wait in vain?
I think not.

For what was,
I mourn.
For what is,
I search
As I wander through a melange of Grey carpeting
and maroon accents.

The lights buzzing incessantly,
I search for the Barber/ Stylist.

— Daniel Langdon

Judges' Comments: "Books," "bittersweet," "bowlers," "beverages," "bratwurst," "Boy howdy!
If this bard doesn't have a mellifluous voice! But don't be misguided by the sheer beauty of Daniel Langdon's poesy; "Memorial Memoir" is a lament that ought to send every hound baying at his personal unap-proachable moon, or at least his own private barber, brat, beverage,
etc. If Gerald Stern is Iowa
City's bagel poet, then Daniel Langdon might be well on his way to becoming Iowa City's bratwurst poet.

There is a rhythm here that holds you tight while Danny's carefully chosen mots batter you with rabbit-punches. The past (first stanza), present (second) and future (third) approach leaves the reader reeling, staggered by the poet's all-encompassing worldview. And we dare you to find a more chilling bit of imagery than "countless generations of restless D & D players."

We'd assumed that the slapping facetiousness of the Weekly Bad

Art Corner would forever silence those annoying requests from frustrated local poets to print their Iowa Rag-rejected poems, haiku and other overly-sensitive musing on life, nature, death and the pain of being a poet in a town where everyone else is too.
But alas, already we've had folks — poet-folks, we assume — whining as to when we'll print good poetry (which naturally would include their work). "The DJ used to do this," they always point out. Yeah, back in the days when the Pentacrest was constantly being torched and people were smashing the windows of Iowa Book and Supply every morning. But those idyllic days of wine and acid and land wars in Asia are gone and so are those pusillanimous editors you used to bribe to print your sophomoric imitations of Sylvia Plath.

Sorry, but we're running this show now, and we got ourselves
one art contest and one art contest only and you're looking at
it. So either play our game or take your poems and go home.

And so the contest continues.
And remember, it's not just hapless poets we want to barbeque on the coals of our sarcasm; we're looking for artists, photographers and fiction writers as well.

'Original duality' marks duo International musical influences add spice

Robin Lemke
The Daily Iowan

Robert Johnson is a classic moniker for a blues musician to carry, but the Iowa City version has a very unclassical background. Recently arriving from a residency in Turkey, Johnson's music bridges an international as well as a musical gap.

This Friday and Saturday Johnson will perform at 9:30 p.m. along with premier Turkish guitarist Erkan Ogur at the Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St.

For the past five years, the 46-year-old Johnson has been living and teaching English in Istanbul. It was there he met Ogur at a small recording studio.

At the time, there was a small group of people oriented toward Western music living in Turkey. Johnson first played with Ogur a year later on a live, improvisational recording. They soon became friends as well as professional partners.

Music has been a part of Johnson's life for over 30 years. He got his first guitar in 1958 and was playing in bands throughout most of high school and college, writing his own material. But Johnson notes that living in Istanbul inspired him to write more in the past five years than in the previous 15.

During his career, Johnson has toured nationally and released two American albums, as well as three Turkish cassettes. He has opened in Hancher Auditorium for Phoebe Snow, Bonnie Raitt, and Hall and Oates, appeared five times on "Prairie Home Companion," and presented a concert at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. But Johnson has always made a point to get back to Iowa City at least once a year to play at the Sanctuary. He is currently living here as he works on his master's degree in English at the UI.

Johnson speaks enough Turkish to be understood but said he's a long way from being fluent. When asked how he communicates with Ogur, he replied, "(Music) is one of our common forms of interaction. At times you can reach a point where you do not need to talk in order to be understood."

The two artists' musical styles are as diverse as their cultural origins. Ogur has been classically trained in the Turkish tradition, and his music and performances stem from an Eastern influence. The focus of his life has been the study of music.

Johnson, however, has had little musical training, with his major influences rooted in the American folk blues. His music comes from his own originality, playing and writing most of his material by ear.

In further contrast, Johnson's style utilizes components of the acoustic guitar, harmonica and cymbals. Ogur adds his electric fretless and scalloped-neck guitars. The result is a hybrid of Western and Eastern musical influences.

"In our duality, our music takes on an original tone," noted Johnson. "(It) takes our music up a notch because Erkan is such a hot guitar player."

Museum to exhibit Frasconi art

The UI Museum of Art will show works by one of the pioneers of contemporary color woodblock printing in the exhibition "Antonio Frasconi," scheduled September 2 through October 29 at the museum.

The exhibition will contain 12 of Frasconi's prints, including several color woodblocks, plus portfolios and books with original woodcuts. Most of the exhibited works will be color prints.

Frasconi's works have frequently dealt with the social and political issues of his times, including the Spanish Civil War, the civil-rights movement in the United States, and the Vietnam War. Mary Kujawski, director of the UI Museum of Art, commented, "Frasconi has created a body of work that reflects his celebration of life and his concern for social injustice and oppression.

"For example, this exhibition includes prints from a series called "Law and Order," that portray the infamous Attica prison riots in New York and the killing of students at Kent State University in the 1970s. These prints are quite exemplary of the artist's concerns with contemporary events."

Frasconi was born in Montevideo, Uruguay, of Italian parents. He came to the United States as a student and has lived here ever since. In recent years, he has taught at the State University of New York at Purchase.

Frasconi will visit the UI campus October 26 through 29 and give a series of lectures as an Ida Beam Visiting Scholar. His visit will be sponsored by the UI School of Art and Art History.

A seasonal bevy of dreck: The Big Fat Fantasy Novel

By weird coincidence, they're out in force these days. Once upon a time, they were as rare as they were awful, but no longer. Nowadays, thanks to home computers and editing by machines that cannot say, "This is dreck," they're multiplying like locusts in an asparagus field.

What we're talking about here, of course, is the Big Fat Fantasy Novel.

If we were to toss off a rule of thumb in this case, it would go something like this: Science fiction is skinny and intense, and fantasy is fat and self-indulgent. Of course, there are exceptions — the late L. Ron Hubbard, science fiction author and modern-day messiah wanna-be, wrote some pretty fat science fiction novels, and geniuses like C.S. Lewis and Lord Dunsany specialized in skinny fantasies. But usually, the rule of thumb applies, and the reason is simple.

Science fiction, at its heart, is an invasion, an intentional distortion of some aspect of our comfy world. The quintessential science fiction writer asks, rather gleefully, "How can I shake 'em up?" (and then comes up with a story in which your blood is sentient — and doesn't like you). A certain leanness is necessary when that's the desired effect, otherwise the strange becomes boring just because you've been reading about it for 1000 pages.

Fantasy is radically different. The fantasy writer asks "How can I make them want to live there?" (and then meticulously shapes a Middle Earth, or a Land, or, as we'll see, a Pern). Essentially, the fantasy writer wants to make you homesick for an imaginary place, and this takes lots of detail, and so, lots of space.

But this much space? This latest bevy of bovine books will not only cost you an arm and a leg (each one retails for five bucks a paperback pop), they'll tire you out just carrying them around. And each of the authors walks the line between "lavish detail" and "flabby-brained sentimentality." And they've got other things in common, too.

Melanie Rawn's "The Star Scroll," sequel to last year's "Dragon Prince," can be ID'd entirely by the "By Their Rip-Offs Shall Ye Know Them" sliderule. In this case, it's the "Dune" (the late Frank Herbert's masterpiece) pattern — astonishingly handsome prince of a desert kingdom proves he's smarter than the domineering women and feral men around him think he is, mainly because he realizes the

Artists' boycott forces shows to be cancelled

WASHINGTON (AP) — An artist boycott has forced the cancellation of two scheduled exhibitions at the Corcoran Gallery, which in June, amid a swirling political controversy, abruptly cancelled a show that included sexually explicit photos.

Gallery officials said Wednesday that contemporary artist Annette Lemieux has withdrawn her one-woman show scheduled for October 28 to December 31 and that an exhibit by six sculptors scheduled for next February 3 to April 8 also has been "indefinitely postponed."

"We're hoping to reschedule both at some point," said Deborah Shriver, a spokeswoman for the private gallery, which has been trying in recent years to establish itself as a showcase for contemporary art.

Lemieux, whose work was subsidized by the federal government through the National Endowment of the Arts, described the withdrawal of her show as an "indefinite postponement... until they (the Corcoran) demonstrate a definite change in policy."

Both she and two of the six sculptors said in letters to the gallery their decisions were based on the Corcoran's cancellation in June of an exhibit of 150 photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe, who died last March from AIDS.

"We believe the Corcoran, by its regrettable decision, not only compromised its own curatorial standards, but also demonstrated its complicity with the punishment subsequently attempted against other art institutions," wrote sculptors Buss Spector and Donald Lipski.

"This is what we feared from day one," Christina Orr-Cahall, the Corcoran's director told The Washington Post. "We're in the middle of the storm."

Rule of thumb: Science fiction is skinny and intense, and fantasy is fat and self-indulgent.

economic importance of the great sand beasts (sandworms, dragons, whatever) everybody else hates and fears. "The Star Scroll," like its predecessor, is soaked hip-deep in cookie-cutter characterization, predictable action and silly relationships. This is the second book in the inevitable trilogy, and the whole wet mess should be avoided like a heat rash.

Lamentably-named Linda Lay Shuler is the author of "She Who Remembers," another brainy neanderthal story in the vein of Jean Auel, and no runner-up in the length category. The opus tells the story of Kwani, a blue-eyed young woman who lives in pre-pre-Columbian America but nevertheless has many New Age ideas. By the time you sludge through several hundred pages of this paleolithic sludge, you'll be relieved that Kwani is, well, extinct.

"The Dragonbone Chair" by Tad Williams is, naturally, Book One in a Trilogy, this one cheerily named "Memory, Sorrow and Thorn," and it, like virtually every other fantasy novel over 300 pages, has been "acclaimed" as "the 'War and Peace' of fantasy novels." Sorry, folks, this baby's long (770 pages), but only about half as long as "W & P," although definitely in the doorstep range. Williams, the author responsible for "Tailchaser's Song" (what is it about cats that makes science fiction and fantasy writers insist on writing about them in such vapid, adolescent ways? Robert Heinlein never wrote a book about a parakeet; Asimov never edited an anthology about hamsters), is kind enough to tell us whom he's ripping off — expect reheated Tolkien, primarily, since this book loudly relishes in the ephemera of that monumental trilogy. There are plenty of songs and likeable short characters, and there's an index chock full of "Help! my fingers are stuck between the keys" names like Kendharaja'aro, Enki-e-Shao'saye and, my personal favorite, Jao e-Tinukai'i. The young Dudley Do-Right hero-in-training is every bit as tiresome as Tolkien's hobbits, but fortunately, Williams rips off some of the master's skill as well. "The Dragonbone Chair" is remarkably fluid reading for being a Big Fat Fantasy Novel. If you've got the money and a semester's worth of reading time to spare, you could do worse.

Joan D. Vinge's "The Snow Queen" was the kind of critical success writers of Big Fat Fantasy Novels lie awake at night dreaming about. It won the Hugo Award and garnered praise from virtually every science fiction and fantasy writer. Roughly one-half of the story follows the "Dune" pattern mentioned earlier, but the other half — the half that actually features Arlenrhod, the Snow Queen — is fairly readable and rips off only slightly, and only from relatively obscure sources like Brian Aldiss' "Hellinonia" series or Levin's "The Boys from Brazil." And although it's less enjoyable than "The Dragonbone Chair," it does have the advantage of not being part of a trilogy.

The inclusion of Anne McCaffrey's "Dragonsdawn" in a menagerie of Big Fat Fantasy Novels listed here at first glance seem strange. After all, the book, which tells the story of how dedicated teams of genetic engineers developed the giant fire-breathing dragons of Pern, is littered all about with technological do-hickies and references to Earth. But we've already covered the answer to the riddle: Pseudoscientific mumbo-jumbo aside, McCaffrey's overriding single goal is — and always has been, through all the Pern books — to make you wish you lived there. She goes to a fantasy writer's lengths — figuratively, not literally, since this book is by far the slimmest of all these — to warm you and cuddle you and make you wish you could invite all the characters over for a slumber party. "Dragonsdawn" is by far the most manipulative of all the Big Fat Fantasy Novels listed here. But it's a testament to McCaffrey's talent that it's also easily the best, least pretentious, most enjoyable book of the bunch.
