Hawk charged with assault

Michael Trilk
 The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City woman filed assault charges against Iowa football player Eddie Polly Thursday after he allegedly punched her in the face on the downtown Iowa City Downtown Pedestrian Mall August 6.

Gina Weerts, 19, filed the complaint in Johnson County District Court Thursday charging Polly with assaulting her with intent to injure her. The complaint states that Polly punched Weerts in the left eye which knocked her unconscious and resulted in a black eye.

Polly, a 6-foot, 182-pound sophomore defensive back from Oklahoma City, had no comment.

Polly is scheduled to appear in a Johnson County Court September 19, three days after the Hawkeyes open the season against Oregon at Kinnick Stadium. Polly is listed as Iowa's first team free safety on the preseason depth chart.

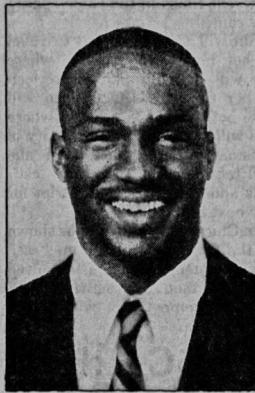

No arrest was made at the scene because, according to Iowa City police, there was no evidence of injury.

"We didn't take him to the station," Iowa City police officer Brian Steffen said. "We interviewed him at the scene, gathered information and turned it over to the county attorney. That's the way simple assaults are handled."

"There was no sign of injury at the time. We had conflicting stories. One side says he hit her, and the other side said he never touched her," Steffen said.

Insecticide in ventilation; 7 hospitalized

Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

Two firemen, four students and one campus security officer were treated and released from UI Hospitals and Clinics Wednesday night after a poisonous insecticide, fumigating the fifth-floor greenhouse in the Chemistry-Botany Building, filtered through the building's ventilation system, according to Bill Twaler, director of the UI Health Protection Office.

Just before 9 p.m. the Iowa City Fire Department responded to a call of smoke on the third floor of the building. Three hundred to 500 people were then evacuated by firemen. Later in the evening, under the command of the Johnson County Hazardous Materials Response team, the ventilation system was shut off and eight canisters of the insecticide were removed from the building, according to fire department records.

Once the type of the insecticide was identified by its chemical name, sulfotep, people exposed to it were contacted and treated as needed. Some were decontaminated as a precautionary measure, said Fire Marshal Larry Kinney.

The building was opened at 5 a.m. after air samples indicated a zero-percent concentration of sulfotep, Twaler said.

Previous tests had indicated zero-percent concentration in the chemistry building and one-twenty-fifth of allowable concentrations in the botany building, Twaler said.

The insecticide was being used to kill insects in the greenhouse and somehow entered the ventilation system, according to fire department records.

The greenhouse is fumigated about once a year, Twaler said.

"We don't know how it leaked," he added. "Right now the immediate

Countries commemorate, evaluate WWII

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — World War II began 50 years ago today. One of many events marking the grim anniversary will be a concert in Warsaw, the first target of blitzkrieg, Adolf Hitler's fearsome "lightning war."

The Soviet Union called the conflict "the most horrible and destructive of all wars." An ultra-conservative West German Cabinet minister said Germans should not bear all the blame.

More than 50 million people were killed in the war touched off by the German invasion of Poland on Sept. 1, 1939. The Nazi extermination of six million Jews shocked the world like no other atrocity.

Major events are scheduled for today in West Germany, East Germany and Poland, including an internationally broadcast concert in Warsaw conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Pope John Paul II used the occasion to declare: "We have a duty to learn from the past so that never again will there arise a set of factors capable of triggering a similar conflagration."

In the statement issued last weekend, he called the Nazi slaughter of Jews something "which will forever remain a shame for humanity."

John Paul is to address his Polish countrymen this evening by means of a huge television screen set up in Royal Castle Square in Warsaw's old city.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said Thursday: "The sad jubilee — 50 years since the beginning of the most horrible and destructive of all wars — requires that the world public not only learn the lessons of the past anew, but also determine guidelines for the future."

Its commentary repeated Soviet calls for a reduction of armed forces and weapons in Europe.

Neues Deutschland, the official newspaper of East Germany's Communist Party, said: "The most important historical lesson of Sept. 1, 1939, consists of never again letting fascism return."

In Hitler's native Austria, which he occupied and annexed in 1938 without firing a shot, the popular tabloid Kurier is running a daily series it calls "Hitler's War."

"It scarcely ever happened in history that the responsibility for a war was so clear," the newspaper said Monday. "It was, in the end, the work of one man. It was Hitler's war."

Austria has claimed to be the dictator's first victim.

News media, politicians and intellectuals in West Germany have used the anniversary for a review of Nazi atrocities.

Special events included a concert Thursday night in Frankfurt featuring violinist Anne-Sophie Mutter and Polish composer Krzysztof Penderecki conducting his "Polish Requiem."

As a gesture of reconciliation, the government said it was willing to return the Polish

Former PTL leader Jim Bakker is escorted to a car by U.S. marshals Thursday afternoon. Bakker, who did not appear in court Thursday, has been ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation.

Bakker to miss PTL trial after being sent to mental institution

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker was committed to a mental institution in handcuffs and manacles Thursday after a psychiatrist reported the TV evangelist was hallucinating and cowering in a fetal position in his lawyer's office.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's fraud trial and ordered him taken to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner for up to 60 days for psychiatric evaluation.

"Please don't do this to me," a sobbing, disheveled Bakker said as he was led from his lawyer's office by U.S. marshals to the courthouse for processing of the commitment order. He curled up in a fetal position in the back seat.

"Mr. Bakker, I'm going to have to ask you to sit up, please," a deputy marshal said.

After the paperwork was completed, marshals left for Butner, about three hours away, where Bakker would be spending his first night behind bars since the PTL scandal broke. The evangelist is accused of fleeing followers of his evangelical empire.

Dr. Basil Jackson, a psychiatrist who has been treating Bakker for nine months, told the judge that Bakker began hallucinating Wednesday after a former PTL executive testifying against him collapsed on the stand. The witness was revived within seconds and said he was laid low by illness.

"Mr. Bakker reported that when he left the courthouse Wednesday, suddenly people outside took on the form of frightening animals which he felt were intent on destroying him, attacking him and hurting him," Jackson said.

Jackson said Bakker's condition worsened overnight, even after he was given Xanax, an antidepressant sedative. Bakker was not in court for the hearing.

On Thursday morning, Bakker "was lying in the corner of his attorney's office with his head under a couch, hiding," Jackson said. "He was expressing thoughts that someone was going to hurt him."

"To put it in lay language, the man is stressed out," Jackson said later.

Prosecution and defense lawyers are under court order not to discuss the trial outside of the courtroom. But during the hearing, Assistant U.S. Atty. Jerry Miller described the psychiatrist as a "hired gun."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Scofield said most pretrial psychiatric evaluations take about 45 days. And the judge told jurors — who were not told the reason for the suspension in the trial — that it could resume as early as Wednesday.

Bakker and other PTL executives are accused of diverting for their own use more than $4 million of $158 million raised from followers who gave $1,000 for three nights of free lodging each year for life at the ministry's hotels.

If convicted on all 24 counts, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

Defense attorney George Davis told Potter that Bakker, 49, kept saying he wanted the trial to continue but was "on the floor in a fetal position."

"If Mr. Bakker is handled gently and carefully he may be able to proceed with this trial," Davis said. The defense had tried to persuade the judge to allow Bakker to stay in a private institution.

Noriega to maintain control in new gov't.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The Council of State today appointed Comptroller Francisco Rodriguez as president of Panama as it moved to fill the vacuum created by the cancellation of the presidential election on May 7.

The government takes over Friday the same day the term of acting President Manuel Solis expires.

Today's appointments assure the continuation of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega as commander of the military, known as the Panamanian Defense Forces, and as the country's de facto leader.

Foreign Minister Jorge Ritter, who resigned Wednesday night, said Rodriguez was appointed president and Carlos Ofores was named vice president. Ritter spoke with reporters after the Council of State met in closed session.

There was no official announcement by the Council of State, which is made up of about 40 people, including Cabinet ministers, heads of government agencies and military leaders. The civilian president will be the formal head of the Council of State, which will continue to be controlled by Noriega.

Sources said the new government will abolish the National Assembly and replace it with 41 appointed legislators. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the new government will evaluate the country's situation in six months before deciding on the possibility of holding new elections.

Rodriguez, an economist, has been comptroller for seven years. He is a veteran administrator who has held mostly economic positions.

Government officials have refused to discuss what shape the government would take, but sources said Wednesday that it appeared it would consist of a junta with civilian and military representatives.

The government will have the blessing of Noriega, who met today with current government officials, including Cabinet members and agency heads.

Since Noriega was indicted on drug charges in Florida in February 1988, the U.S. government has demanded his ouster.

In Washington, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger was to present new drug charges against Panama at a special meeting today of the Organization of American States, officials said.

The 31-nation session was set at U.S. request after Panama last week challenged the Bush administration for evidence of its charges of drug involvement against Noriega.

The government announced the arrest Wednesday of several members of the opposition Christian Democratic Party on charges of planning sabotage activities, and increased security nationwide in anticipation of protests.

Paramilitary groups organized into "national defense committees" trained at various sites in the capital, and government agencies announced they were placing themselves in a state of alert.

But opposition leaders said they did not plan any street protests Friday. They said the arrests were part of a military campaign of propaganda and repression.

Christian Democratic leader Ricardo Arias Calderon said the

New drug strategy 'tough'; portions of plan classified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some sections of an emerging national drug strategy detail U.S. limits in attacking drug traffickers, growers and users, but will remain secret lest narcotics peddlers benefit from the information, an administration source said Thursday.

It had been learned previously that the revamped strategy President George Bush will reveal next Tuesday will be tough on users, heavy on law enforcement and call for a new emphasis on treatment. Up to $260 million in economic and military aid will be sent to Colombia, Bolivia and Peru to stop cocaine at its South American origin, sources have said.

On Thursday, the administration source, discussing the strategy on grounds he not be named publicly, said that portions of the document will be classified.

"This would include any information that would give an advantage to the narco-traffickers," he said.

"It's a war, and you don't give all your plans to the enemy. You don't want the narco-traffickers to know what the limits are," the source said. "We can't let them know how far we would go before retaliation or how far before we pump more money in."

As an example, the source said, the United States would not make public the government's

Two UI researchers receive awards

Two UI College of Medicine researchers recently received awards from the Foundation for Physical Therapy.

Richard Shields, clinical specialists and adjunct faculty member in physical therapy, received a $17,000 award to determine the optimal seated position for paralyzed individuals confined to a wheelchair. Shields will use an instrumented chair to determine what position will facilitate spinal stability while putting the least amount of pressure on the buttocks to avoid pressure sores.

Once this position is determined, wheelchair design can be improved to prevent spinal deformity and pressure sores in paralyzed individuals, Shields said.

Loretta Lough, adjunct faculty member in physical therapy and education and a senior staff member in the UI Hospital School Decision of Developmental Disabilities, received a $5,000 doctoral fellowship to study the effects of two brace designs used by children with cerebral palsy. Lough will examine how the different braces affect joint position and muscle action while walking.

By knowing more about the effects of these brace designs, therapists and physicians will be able to prescribe the most appropriate brace for children's needs.

UI researchers cut drug-control costs

Two UI College of Pharmacy researchers have developed a quality control procedure for drug products that could mean a cost savings to pharmaceutical companies.

J. Keith Guillory, professor of pharmaceuticals, and Kerry Hartauer, a pharmacy graduate student, said they have found a potentially faster, easier method of performing quality control to ensure proper concentration of drug components in pharmaceutical products.

The method of analysis, which requires the relatively new infrared spectroscopy technique — known as FT-IR/ATR — is equivalent to or better than the traditional method of analyzing drug products, Guillory said.

The techniques are receiving increasing attention, but are not yet widely applied in the pharmaceutical industry. The method could possibly be used to analyze other drug products as well, Hartauer said.

The researchers used the technique to analyze two common drug components contained in intravenous injections used to treat infections.

The new technique performs with equal accuracy and precision and requires no sample preparation.

Chen, of Muscatine is a pre-medicine major.

Creation of this $1,826 tuition scholarship was established in December, 1968, with a gift from Elmer and Florence Gabel of Schenectady, N.Y.

UI grad student's short film to be shown in Chile, Spain

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

After premiering last week to a crowd of around 150 people in UI's Communications Studies Building, the short film titled "Still a Bridge" began a journey that will take it to Chicago, Chile and Spain.

The film, shot in Iowa City and Mount Vernon, Iowa, was the work of producer Adriana Zuanic, a UI graduate student in communications studies. Zuanic produced the 29 film as her master's degree project in film production.

Zuanic, originally from Chile, produced two versions of the film, one in Spanish and one in Spanish with English subtitles.

"Still a Bridge" follows a young woman named Fernanda who returns to her home to visit her dying grandfather. Her homecoming reveals great changes that conflict with her childhood memories, including the discovery that the house she grew up in is now a maternity ward. Fernanda finds herself recognizing faces, but she is unable to place them in her memory.

Zuanic described the film as having several levels of meaning beginning with a basic story for the audience to follow, yet offering other levels of meaning for those who want to look for them. She based the story on her personal experiences of coming home and on experiences of other foreign students who are away from their homelands.

Zuanic said she was searching for a tie between a physical distance and a spiritual closeness.

"It is a Latin American custom to play with time and space. I was intrigued with having people of different times in the same space," she said.

She will be leaving today to travel to her hometown in Chile where she will show the Spanish version of her film. In October, she will take both versions to Spain where she will study at the University of Salamanca for a year. There she will take her film to various festivals and begin writing a script for her next film.

In Chicago, the film will be shown at the Chicago Latino Film Festival in September. She just received the news that "Still a Bridge" will go into competition with other short-subject student films at the 25th anniversary of the Chicago International Film Festival.

Her film will also be one of the few short subjects to be presented before the showing of a feature film, which she says is "an honor and a thrill, because it will be shown as a piece rather than as a collection of student works."

She says her basic goal at the moment is to work on showing the film in as many places as possible, "out of respect for all the people who worked so hard on this film. It's really a personal thing."

The hardest part of the job, she said, was trying to gather the funds. Zuanic said that at times she worked three jobs to make ends meet.

The production of "Still a Bridge" spanned a long period of time. She did it in three stages: She shot it, edited it and printed it.

"The most important thing is communication. That is what I enjoy the most," Zuanic said. "You can communicate with people at all levels: production, post-production and exhibition. That is the biggest satisfaction."

Speaker calls socialism 'necessary' solution to world's social problems

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Society today is filled with poverty, hunger and oppression, but true socialism can offer a solution to those problems, said Sharon Smith of the Chicago International Socialist Organization.

Smith addressed a diverse crowd in the Union's Indiana Room Thursday night with a speech sponsored by the Iowa International Socialist Organization.

Smith said socialism is needed in the world today. "The world is full of tremendous problems," she said, detailing the extreme poverty and hunger which plagues all nations.

Smith also said U.S. military expenditures are irrational in light of the decreasing availability of funds for welfare and social spending.

"Today's capitalist society seems to be irrational," Smith said.

Quoting from Marx, Smith mentioned the aspects of capitalism which make it unique from other class systems.

"Capitalism has the technology to eliminate scarcity," Smith said.

She added that capitalism's creation of an industrial working class will be its downfall.

"Capitalism has created its own gravediggers," Smith said, adding that industrial workers are called upon by socialism to organize and revolutionize.

Smith emphasized the idea of class struggle throughout her talk. Less than 1 percent of the population owns 80 percent of shares in companies in the United States, according to Smith.

"The class system is the driving force behind capitalism," Smith said. "A tiny percentage of the population controls the greatest percentage of the wealth. Class society is alive and well in every nation-state in the world today."

She also stressed the disparity between the wealthy and the lower classes throughout her presentation and discussed the worldwide implications of the class struggle.

"It is essentially the world ruling class versus the world working class," she said.

Marxism or socialism calls upon the working class to organize and end the "production for profit" that exists in our capitalistic society. Marx's idea that socialism would have to be a revolutionary action is part of the ideology of today's socialists as well, according to Smith.

This revolution must begin with the preparation and organization of the industrial working class, said Smith, with the workers utilizing tools such as striking to control production and profit.

A key to dismantling capitalistic control lies within the armed forces, she added.

"We need to get the armed forces to turn their guns the other way," said Smith.

The International Socialist Organization has been present on the UI campus for about five years, said IISO member Nita Kehoe.

Women in majority at law school

The Daily Iowan

For the first time in its 123-year history, women make up the majority of the entering class of students at the UI College of Law.

In addition, this year's incoming class has also set a new record for minority enrollment.

This year's freshman class of 280 students — also a record number — includes 141 women and 139 men. There are 43 minority students, over the old record of 39 set last year. Of the minority students, 19 are black, 12 are Hispanic and 12 are of Asian background. In addition, 22 of the 43 minority students are women.

"We're concerned about the over-enrollment, but very pleased with the richness of diversity in the entering class," said N. William Hines, dean of the law school. "We hold ourselves out as a school that celebrates diversity, and enrolling record numbers of women and minorities is strong evidence of the success of our efforts to provide a hospitable learning environment for non-traditional members of the legal profession."

Dennis Shields, UI director of law school admissions, said the enrollment breakthrough came about partly because of the school's concerted efforts to attract more minority students.

These efforts have spawned trips to more than 60 college campuses a year, an annual "Bridging the Gap" Minority Pre-Law Conference, an annual Women in Law Conference, and a strong presence of minority and women faculty and administrators, Shield said.

"The word is getting out that this is a place where minorities and women enjoy professional success," he said. "Very few people are unsuccessful, here because we've committed the resources to helping them be successful."

"Minorities and women are also attracted to the UI law school for the same reasons other people are — the smaller class sizes and personalized attention, breadth of courses, and the new Boyd Law building, which is one of the finest in the nation," Shields added.

Another factor in the school's increasing popularity may be its relatively low cost, Shields said. Iowa residents pay $2,400 a year in tuition, and non-residents pay $7,400 — compared to the $12,000 and $15,000 payments asked for by many of the UI's competitor schools.

The rising interest in the UI College of Law school also appears to be part of a national trend, which Shields attributes to a healthier economy.

"We had 1,300 applications for this year, the most ever," he said. "That's up 10 percent from 1988, which was also a banner year."

Courts

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A warrant for the arrest of a Coralville man who allegedly borrowed a car from an acquaintance and never returned was issued Wednesday, according to Johnson County District court records.

The defendant, Douglas Van Damme Jr., 20, 2421 10th St., was charged for second-degree theft August 4 for allegedly borrowing a car to drive to his workplace, the Comfort Inn, 205 Ninth St., and never returning. He allegedly left the Comfort Inn at 3 a.m. in the car with $483.99 belonging to the motel, according to court records.

Bond is set at $2,500, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for September 8, according to court records.

IOSHA fines Sheller-Globe

Fines total $1,360 for health violations cited after inspection

Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Occupational Safety and Health Administration has issued two citations to Sheller-Globe Corp. for several violations of health standards, three of which were called "serious" by an OSHA official.

The citations, which include total fines of $1,360, were issued August 18 after a three-month health inspection of the local plant. Mary Bryant, IOSHA administrator, said the inspection was instigated because of a complaint by a Sheller-Globe employee.

The Sheller-Globe plant, located on East Highway 6, produces padded automotive parts.

The first citation includes separate fines for three "serious" health regulation violations. These include a $640 fine for failure to store discarded filter pads and filter rolls at the end of each day's operation.

"When we classify something as serious, it describes a situation in which, if there was an accident, it could cause death or serious injury," Bryant said. "With the filter pad violation, we have here a possibility of fire. At an extreme situation, certainly death or injury could result in such a fire."

Also included in the first citation were two other fines for $360 each. These include a violation for failure to properly identify biologically hazardous materials and failure to protect the plant nurse and other employees who could come in contact with AIDS- or Hepatitis B virus-contaminated blood in cases of occupational accidents.

The first of these violations, Bryant said, involved the plant's failure to label bags or receptacles with tags to express warning of potential or actual biologically hazardous contents.

This is the second time in recent months Sheller-Globe has received attention for possible health hazards. Last June, a report released by the Natural Resource Defense Council identified the plant as the state's third-largest emitter of methylene chloride, a suspected cancer-causing pollutant.

The other citation IOSHA issued to Sheller-Globe listed eight further violations considered non-serious by IOSHA standards. These included two additional labeling violations. The other non-serious violations are:

• A list of IOSHA regulations wasn't available to employees or posted in the workplace.

• The plant failed to implement or maintain a respiratory protection program. Respirators weren't stored in a convenient, clean and sanitary location, were not regularly cleaned and disinfected, and were worn in conditions which prevented them from being used effectively.

• A training program was not implemented for all workers who were exposed to excessive noise for extended periods of time.

The plant was not fined for these eight violations.

Sheller-Globe has 15 total working days, or until September 11, to contest the citations, but had not done so as of Thursday, Bryant said.

However, even if Sheller-Globe pays the fines, Bryant said IOSHA has not scheduled a re-inspection to see that corrective action has been taken.

She said, "We don't have the resources to do a follow-up on every inspection."

No Sheller-Globe spokespersons were available for comment Thursday.

Des Moines banker swims the Channel

DES MOINES (AP)—Banker J.C. "Buz" Brenton hadn't arranged a welcoming committee to meet him once he finished swimming the English Channel.

So he was all alone on the beach when he hit the French shore August 17 after a 13½-hour crossing.

"My fingers touched sand, and I stood up and went on in," Brenton said.

"I got up there, it was dark and nobody's around," he said.

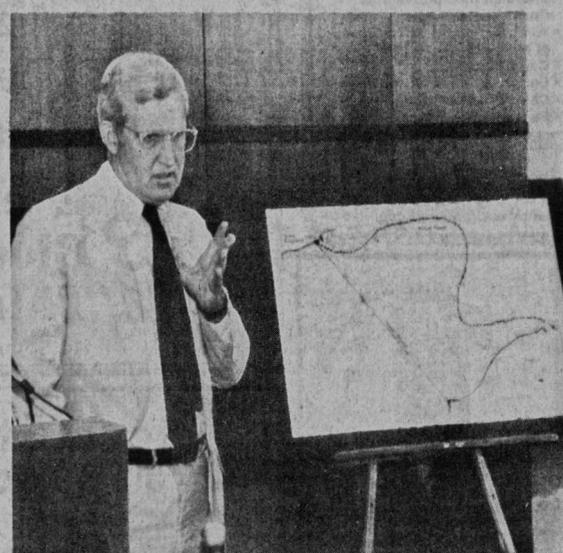

Brenton said at a news conference Thursday he was tired, but not exhausted, as he stood in the dark on the beach, and he was coated in lanolin and petroleum jelly to keep the 65-degree water of the channel away from his skin.

"And I'm wanting to talk to somebody," Brenton said.

"I see that the boat isn't coming in," he said. "I really hadn't covered with them what might happen in the event I make it. How I get back to the boat."

"The wind was blowing. I was getting cold. So, after a while, I decided I better go to them. So, back into the surf, back into the water. I swam back to the boat. They hauled me out."

Brenton, the 54-year-old executive vice president of Brenton Banks Inc. and chief operating officer of the Brenton National Bank of Des Moines, began his swim on Shakespeare Beach near Dover, England, at 12:35 p.m. August 16 and finished near Calais, France, at 2:05 a.m. August 17.

Brenton said the swim was delayed because of poor weather and that meant he had to go in less-than-ideal conditions.

"There are certain times of the month when the favorable currents are there," he said. "Those passed for me because the general weather was bad. So I took a day after the most favorable tides, when we thought the general weather would be good. It turned out it wasn't good. It wasn't real bad but it wasn't good."

The current pushed him on a looping course across the 21-mile channel, which had him land far from the ideal spot.

Brenton began training for the swim last September. He said he had been a swimmer for years and the channel challenge was a logical extension of that.

"I don't want to do it again," Brenton said.

To stave off exhaustion, Brenton drank fluids and ate a high-energy candy bar every hour during the swim. His forearms and wrists ached but that was not the biggest obstacle to completing the swim, he said.

"It becomes as much of a mental exercise as a physical exercise," he said.

He said he thought no profound thoughts while making the swim.

"It wasn't spiritual," Brenton said. "Your mind is riveted on the swim. Your mind is totally preoccupied with: How do I feel? Is the boat going to hit me? How strong is the wind? Do I really want to finish it? Things like that."

All he thought about afterward was going to bed and getting some rest.

"There was some elation. Maybe that came 24 hours after," he said.

Brenton has not set a new challenge for himself since crossing the channel.

"I have nothing planned," he said. "I'm open to suggestions."

Safest Labor Day yet, dares Iowa officer

DES MOINES (AP)—Labor Day could lose its dubious distinction as Iowa's most deadly holiday if drivers are as careful as they have been the past two summers.

"We might be able to knock Labor Day out of number one," said Department of Transportation safety officer Gus Horn.

Labor Day has traditionally been the most dangerous time to be on Iowa roadways, with 37 losing their lives in the last five years. The worst year was 1966, when 27 people died over the three-day weekend.

"What a slaughter," Horn said.

Last year, only five people died in roadway wrecks and the year before was a record low of four. In 1984 through 1986, there were seven, 13 and eight deaths.

"So we're challenging people to be on their best behavior," said Horn.

"Since we work in a negative field every year, you tend to think, 'Ho, hum, it's Labor Day, we're going to kill a bunch of people.' But we don't have to kill a bunch of people. There's no reason why we can't do even better than last year and the year before."

"They'll have to drive responsibly, buckle up and follow the laws. But it's obtainable," he said.

Horn said he is most concerned about motorcyclists and drivers who drink.

Of the 37 killed over the last five Labor Day holidays, 31 were alcohol related and 13 were motorcyclists. The holiday ranks number one in the state in percentage of alcohol-related fatalities at 84 percent, he said.

"And if you're thinking of drinking and driving, remember most of the people who are killed in drunken driver accidents are the drunken driver," he said.

July averages down for soybeans and many other raw commodities

WASHINGTON (AP)—Prices farmers got for raw products dropped 1.4 percent from July to August, leaving the monthly average at a year-ago level, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said in its preliminary report that lower prices for soybeans, corn, lettuce and potatoes were mostly responsible for the decrease from the July average.

Higher prices for cattle, apples, eggs and grapefruit partly offset the decline for the other commodities. Oilseeds, which include soybeans, and feed grains showed the greatest month-to-month decline, while meat animals and milk had the largest increases.

"A 90-cents-per-bushel decline in the price of soybeans from July to August was the largest month-to-month decline since June-July 1984," the report said. "Corn and sorghum prices were down, but the average barley price was up."

Wheat prices moved up after four months of small declines. Hogs and beef cattle were up from July, but calf prices were down slightly.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said earlier Thursday that he expects 1989 will be "a good year" for farmers, although there is "a mixed situation across the country" because of drought and other weather problems.

"I would guess net cash income (nationally) would be slightly below 1988, but not very much below," he said. Crop production generally has rebounded from last year's drought-reduced yields, and exports are up. "Overall, I'd say farmers feel a lot better," Yeutter said.

Department economists say net cash income of farmers — gross cash income minus cash expenses — rose in 1988 to a record of about $60 billion as drought forced commodity prices up. Many producers were able to sell harvests at the higher prices, thus more than offsetting reduced production.

The decline this year is expected to stem from farmers' larger cash expenses as they boost plantings, and also because of lower federal subsidies.

Consumer food prices are forecast by USDA to rise an average of 5 percent to 7 percent this year, following a 4.1-percent increase in 1988.

Based on the preliminary figures, the price index for livestock and livestock products as a group increased 1.9 percent from July and averaged 5.3 percent above the year-earlier level.

Crop prices, overall, dropped 4.5 percent from July and averaged 5.9 percent less than in August 1988.

The all-fruit price index for August was up 8.8 percent from July but was down 4.9 percent from a year ago, the report said. Apples were reported at 16.1 cents per pound.

Vanilla the perennial favorite despite influx of new flavors

Dennis Forke
The Daily Iowan

The latest shopping craze to hit the local grocery stores and ice cream parlors is headed toward some new and sometimes unusual combinations.

Ben & Jerry's Dastardly Mash (pecans, almonds, raisins, chocolate chips and chocolate ice cream), Chunky Monkey (banana ice cream, walnuts and chocolate chunks) and many other exotic flavors are the latest tastes to hit the ice cream scene.

Of course, there is the long-standing favorite, cookies and cream, which is available in almost any brand name. A wide variety of ice creams with other candies and nuts blended in can also be found. But one of the newest additions to many shelves is sugar-free ice cream and many varieties of frozen yogurt.

The consensus in the ice cream business is that traditional vanilla will remain the top seller among ice cream flavors because it can be mixed with many other things. But when it comes to a second place flavor, the race is wide open.

As trends move away from traditional one-flavor ice creams toward ice creams that contain multiple mixtures, competition among flavors becomes more difficult for storeowners and consumers alike.

Local frozen-food managers say the latest consumer trends have been toward higher grades of ice cream, sugar-free ice cream products and low-calorie frozen yogurts.

Branstad's prison veto draws legislative fire

DES MOINES (AP) — A chorus of legislative Democrats on Thursday sounded off again against Gov. Terry Branstad's prison funding veto, saying the Republican governor "threatens public safety."

Also, legislative sources said Thursday they anticipate Democratic-leaning interest groups to file a lawsuit within days challenging the vetoes.

The sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, would not identify the groups but said the lawsuit could be one of many challenging Branstad's veto of spending bills this year.

The Legislative Council, a bipartisan panel of legislative leaders, has hired a lawyer to help decide if it should take the governor to court, which is widely anticipated.

Legislative Democrats also sharpened their assault on Branstad about the prisons, underscoring the importance that Republicans and Democrats are assigning to the crime issue.

Branstad asked the Legislature this year to expand the prison system. The legislature responded by approving more space than the governor requested. Branstad attacked lawmakers for not making the prison space higher security.

Branstad also vetoed sections of the prison spending measure instructing the administration what level of security should be assigned to the new space.

Earlier in the week, Democratic House members said that had effectively blocked prison construction plans, and Senate Democrats made similar charges Thursday.

Branstad has rejected those criticisms, saying the dispute is about where to get the money.

"The governor has, by his own actions, stalled the prison expansion and that threatens public safety," said Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins (D-Audubon).

"Prison beds are not being constructed and the governor has done nothing this summer to safeguard the public," said Sen. Gene Frause (D-Fort Madison).

Branstad has said he wants to pay cash for the prison expansion, while lawmakers wanted to borrow the money.

They rejected his arguments, saying Branstad's plan would mean waiting until next year to begin building the space.

"At this point, paying cash means delaying construction, and that threatens public safety," said Sen. Joe Welsh (D-Dubuque), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. "In my book, that's a bad trade."

Early polling by politicians in both parties has shown fear of crime and drugs to be a major concern with voters. Both sides are afraid of being accused of taking a weak stand on crime questions.

The lawsuits are part of a dispute between the Legislature and governor. Branstad has the authority to item-veto spending measures, meaning he can reject sections while approving of the overall spending package.

Democrats have accused him of abusing that power and have sued the governor in the past with mixed results.

Increased sales of the high-grade, pint-sized ice creams such as Breyers, Haagen-Dazs and Ben & Jerry's was attributed by many store owners to the recent influx of college students to the area.

They think a student is more likely to purchase smaller, single-serving size containers while family shoppers would prefer a larger serving size.

However, some UI students said they either buy a half-gallon of a particular flavor or the brand being sold at the lowest price. They agreed that ice cream is something they don't buy every time they stop at the grocery store.

Scott Hutchinson, a UI senior, said ice cream was an impulse item for him. It's something he doesn't buy all the time because he is on a budget. Occasionally, when the mood strikes him, he will pick up his favorite flavor, cookies and cream.

Dawn McGarrahan, also a UI senior, said she doesn't buy much ice cream at the store, but when she does, she generally buys rocky road. She said she prefers to go to Baskin Robbins and have a German Chocolate Cake ice cream cone.

The Baskin Robbins chain now offers more than 600 flavors of ice cream. About 31 of those flavors at every store at any one time.

Baskin Robbins also offers frozen yogurt, sorbets (containing no dairy products) and sugar-free ice cream. Gary Reed, a co-owner of the Baskin Robbins at 115 S. Dubuque St., said recent trends are moving toward low-fat ice creams like sherbet and non-fat sorbets.

Reed said his store was the first in the immediate area to carry frozen yogurt, and now carries four flavors daily.

Another ice cream store in the Old Capitol area — Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 Washington St. — offers 32 of the 60 to 65 flavors they make in their store. Their product can be found on grocery store shelves as well.

Rip Russell, Great Midwestern assistant manager, said the ice cream sold in grocery stores is produced in Fairfield, Iowa, but the company was actually started in Iowa City in 1979. Great Midwestern emphasizes high-quality, all-natural ice cream, he said.

For those who are more health or calorie conscious, frozen yogurt offers an alternative to ordinary ice cream.

Frozen yogurt has only about half the calories of ice cream. Two scoops of ice cream may mean anywhere between 150 and 250 calories, depending on the grade.

Frozen yogurt companies have also come out with a non-fat yogurt, but it has about as many calories as regular frozen yogurt.

Regular frozen yogurt at TCBY (The Country's Best Yogurt) and Freshens is 96-percent fat-free.

TCBY's chain is battling with ice cream chains nationwide for business. Since the TCBY at 20 S. Clinton St. opened, the response has been tremendous, according to manager Steve Hamilton.

DNR analyst: Oil spill used to advantage

DES MOINES (AP) — Major oil companies used the psychological effect of the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska to raise gasoline prices in April and May, a state energy expert says.

Larry Dombrowski, an economic analyst with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, said the increases cost Iowa motorists $11 million in the month following the spill.

"It kind of gave oil companies a good excuse to raise prices," Dombrowski said.

Dombrowski said the oil companies "took advantage of the psychological effect of the oil spill" to raise prices nationwide.

He said profit margins at refineries increased substantially during April and May. Before the spill in March, refineries paid about $16.31 for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil. By April, the price had risen to about $19.22, Dombrowski said.

During the same period, refineries increased the price of regular unleaded gasoline from about 58 cents a gallon to 77 cents.

But prices have come down over the last month, Dombrowski said.

"The average price of gasoline reflected the largest decrease in price Iowa consumers have seen since December of 1988," a statement from the state natural resources department said.

It brings out the best in all of us.

Assault

The incident stemmed from an argument that occurred inside the College Street Club, 111 E. College St., according to the complaint, Weerts and her boyfriend bumped into a friend of Polly's as they were attempting to enter the dance floor of the bar. A verbal argument ensued, but soon broke up.

When Weerts and her boyfriend left the College Street Club, Polly and his friends started yelling at them. Polly approached them, and Weerts told Polly there wasn't a problem and to forget the early incident. Polly then punched Weerts in the left eye, the complaint stated.

"The last thing I remember was saying 'We don't have a problem with you,'" Weerts said. "Then I was laying unconscious."

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry could not be reached for comment on the matter this week.
If convicted, Polly faces up to a $100 fine or 30 days in jail, but not both.

Embassy in Berlin, seized by the Nazis in 1941, to Polish ownership.
The far right in Germany has taken the opportunity to try to shift some of the blame.

Theo Waigel, the federal finance minister, said he did not want to deny "one iota of German guilt" for the Nazi era and the war, but declared: "A one-sided view of history with the conclusion that only the Germans are burdened with guilt would be unbearable and would lead to dangerous condemnations."

Waigel did not say who should share the guilt, but many on the far right claim Soviet dictator Josef Stalin also was responsible. The minister wrote in the latest issue of the Bayernkurier, party organ of his ultraconservative Christian Social Union.

Franz Schoenhuber, leader of the extremist Republican Party, spoke of the "war guilt of the Soviets, who together with Hitler brought the people of Eastern Europe under their yoke" — a reference to the Soviet absorption of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania under a 1939 pact with Hitler.

Schoenhuber said an international panel of historians should be appointed to reassess whether Germans alone were responsible for the war.

At a service in Berlin, West German Jewish leader Heinz Galinski denounced the resurgence of right-wing extremism in Germany.

Anniversary events in Hungary included a live hookup with the Voice of America, the BBC and Swiss radio Thursday night for a discussion show about the causes of the war.

Bakker

Last year, Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye, described a similar scene, saying in a fund-raising letter to supporters that her husband had stayed in a fetal position for hours after he was forced to leave the ministry in 1987.

She made no mention of Thursday's developments on the couple's daily religious broadcast.

And Jessica Hahn, the woman whose 1980 sexual encounter with Bakker led to Bakker's downfall, said in a 1987 Playboy interview that just after the tryst, a fellow evangelist who had just come from Bakker's hotel room said he was "lying in a fetal position in his room, saying he's happy."

Jackson said his initial diagnosis was that Bakker was "actively hallucinating," suffers from "acute depression" and has episodes where he is unable "to adequately judge and relate to reality."

possible actions if assassinations continued against judicial officials in Colombia, where drug traffickers have killed scores of officials and vowed total war on the authorities currently conducting a major crackdown there.

The source said the plan's sections on intelligence operations also will be classified. This, he said, will include how material is gathered, what it indicates and by whom.

It also will not reveal third-party countries that give information, the source said. The U.S. intelligence community frequently relies on its allies to pass on useful secret data.

The document that Bush will unveil in his first nationally broadcast address from the White House draws from suggestions submitted to drug control chief William Bennett from agencies ranging from the National Security Council to the State Department.

Sections of the plan dealing with the precise areas of drug operations and the strength of U.S. anti-drug forces overseas will remain classified, the source said. Some portions dealing with strategies at home also will remain under wraps.

The source used the example of Jamaican gangs involved in crack houses in the United States, saying: "We're not going to reveal how we're going to infiltrate or if we're going after their money laundering operations."

"The idea is to tell as much as possible to the people," the source said, adding that about 70 percent of the plan would be unclassified. "But it is obvious we can't tell all."

The plan attempts to lay to rest the political infighting among the various agencies involved in combating drugs. Sources say it calls for an increased role for the military, committing troops to more training of overseas forces and advising but stopping short of direct intervention.

The strategy, according to sources, delineates the overseas operations of the Drug Enforcement Administration, the State Department, which runs drug eradication programs, and the CIA, which gathers intelligence data.

The CIA set up a Counter Narcotics Center in April to "combine operational and analytical support to our country's fight against international drug trafficking," according to spokesman Bill Devine.

He said the plan is to unite the intelligence community — the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency, Customs and the DEA.

Attempts to stop the cocaine flow into the United States by working directly in South America were all but stopped earlier this year because of security threats to American personnel.

concern is finding out what was the problem."

But, according to James Howard, associate director of UI Physical Plant, the new year-old ventilation system was not the problem.

The insecticide and the greenhouse caused the problem, he said.

"They used a different type of pesticide," Howard said. "The chemical leaked out of the greenhouse into the open air and then was picked up by the (ventilation system)," Howard said.

The greenhouse is not entirely airtight, he added.

But according to a UI greenhouse caretaker, Barb Fisher, sulfotep had been used by the UI before and is a commonly used insecticide.

The insecticide works like an aerosol or smoke bomb would, said Twaler.

The chemical is ignited in a canister with a wick, he said. The heat then causes the chemical to disperse throughout the room.

The smell detected by students working in the building was actually coffee grounds which are used to ignite the sulfotep, Twaler said.

Sulfotep comprises 14 percent of the entire compound and smells like garlic, Twaler said.

Side effects of inhaling the chemical — including headache, nausea, abdominal cramps, blurred vision, skin irritation and respiratory difficulties — can last up to 32 hours, said Dave Cole, director of Johnson County Ambulance Services.

"If they were going to have symptoms, they would occur in the first half hour of breathing the chemical," said Tom Jacobs, an Emergency Medical Technician/Paramedic present at the scene.

new government would be a "continuation of the military dictatorship."

"The changes are superficial," added former opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara.

"They are thinking of a government junta," Endara said. "They are not thinking of elections."

The winner of the presidential election held May 7 was supposed to have taken office on Friday.

Endara was the opposition candidate and international observers said he won. But the government annulled the balloting, alleging that U.S. interference and support for the political opposition distorted the results.

Opposition leaders complain that the United States has concentrated its campaign against Noriega on drug trafficking charges at the expense of the anti-democratic aspects of the government.

"Our argument with Noriega is over the democratization of Panama," Arias Calderon added. "The United States has a different perspective."

Opposition leaders say the OAS was partial to Noriega in failing to condemn the general and the government for annulling the presidential elections.

OAS members could not agree last week on a declaration about Panama based on a report by a special mission that visited Panama five times since May to seek a negotiated settlement between the opposition and the government.

Endara said he did not expect any favorable action by the OAS at today's meeting "unless there is a drastic change of attitude. I would be surprised if it happens."

Creative justice

"Rhymes with rich..." read this week's cover story in Newsweek magazine. In a not-so-subtle assessment of Manhattan hotel queen Leona Helmsley's character, the article depicted the flamboyant and excessive lifestyle of the billionaire hotelier and her tendency to treat her employees as lesser-beings. Tales of Christmas Eve firings and near-slave working conditions imposed by Helmsley have made headlines and angered millions.

But there's a saying that Leona would have done well to remember on her gilded journey through life: "Don't spit in the wind because it might come back in your face." In a New York City courtroom this Tuesday, Helmsley was found guilty of federal tax evasion — a charge that carries a hefty fine and possible prison term. After it was revealed that she once told a hotel maid, "Only the little people pay taxes," many social commentators and journalists have publicly called for maximum sentencing. Just one gossip columnist has valiantly taken the opposite stand and decreed that it's "not a crime to be a bitch, America."

This is true. It's not a crime to be a bitch. But it is a crime to lie on your tax forms, and as such, is punishable by law. So the question is, what do we do with Leona? Send her to the big house for a few years and fine her a few hundred thousand? A better suggestion is to turn the tables on such run-of-the-mill justice and come up with a more creative sentence.

So how about making her open the doors of her New York luxury hotels to the homeless for a few years? New York City has thousands of people in need of shelter, and Leona Helmsley has thousands of hotel beds that could be used for this purpose. Why not right a wrong with a right, rather than impose another meaningless jail term?

It would be sweet justice to see Helmsley in the role of shelter manager: instead of fluffing pillows for heads of state, washing linens for the homeless.

Middle class dreaming

There is now hardcore proof: Today's drug, poverty and moral problems can no longer be blamed on the decline of the American family. According to a recent report released by the Children's Defense Fund, young families have almost no chance to become members of the elusive middle class.

More than half the children born each year in this country have parents under 30, and nearly 36 out of 100 children living in traditional young families are poor. The pattern for young families now resembles what is found in a Third World nation, with a few families at the top and large number at the bottom, according to the report.

In America in the 1950s, young families were the norm. They exemplified the American dream waiting to be fulfilled. Today, the drop in earnings is the main factor fueling young families economic decline. They have no chance to overcome these economic factors. Manufacturing jobs have continued to be replaced with service jobs that pay less and are temporary. The minimum wage increase slated to take effect next January 1 will help somewhat, while still keeping many below the poverty level.

"We've always expected young people to work hard and struggle, but we're making it impossible to win that struggle," James Weill, co-author of the report was quoted as saying. "These families have a chance only if we give it to them."

It is important government officials realize that unless they tailor more policies — like last spring's minimum wage increase — toward the "growing underclass" of young families, American society will become more and more stratified.

Red flag

The Daily Iowan reported Thursday that the Iowa basketball program might be involved in recruiting improprieties.

The story, based on a report in the Chicago Sun-Times said that Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl may have strayed from the regulations in his dealings with Illinois high-school superstar Deon Thomas.

Pearl supposedly taped a phone conversation with Thomas without the player's knowledge and visited him during a time coaches aren't supposed to.

The entire incident should be regarded as a waving red flag. What Pearl may have done seems minor in the light of hard-core NCAA investigations into other schools. It does not involve cash payments to athletes or anything close to that level, nor are drugs involved.

It involves overzealous recruiting and a recruiting war between Iowa and the University of Illinois — where Thomas ultimately chose to play — that has been going on behind the scenes for some time.

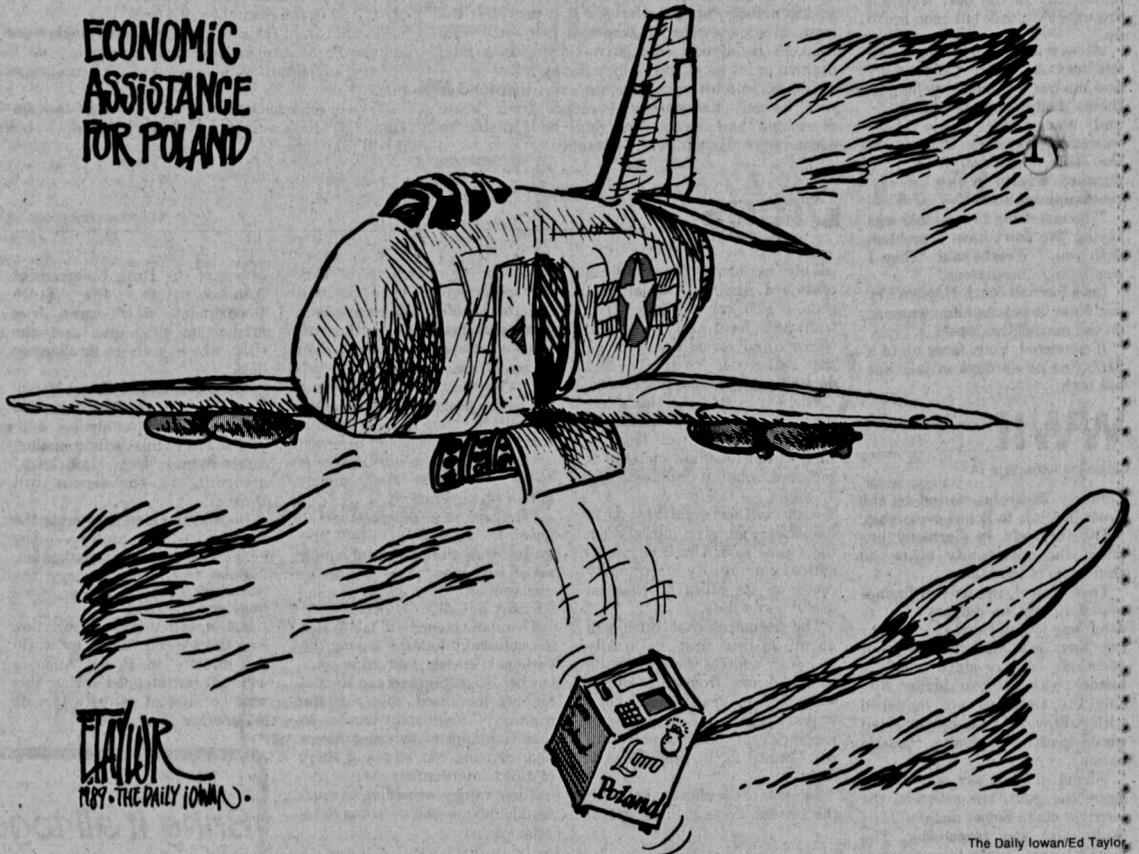

That's the key: It's frightening how much goes on behind the scenes in college athletics. That initial Sun Times story has already been followed by a report that Iowa assistant coach Rick Moss didn't follow the rules in recruiting another Chicago all-star, Jamie Brandon.

As this story unfolds, and if an NCAA investigation is conducted here, other incidents much more serious are bound to surface.

ON THE UI CAMPUS:

The Museum of Natural History — The UI's answer to the Field Museum offers almost a dozen different exhibits, with the variety of displays ranging from "Coelenterates to Mollusks" to the always-popular "Protozoa and Porifera." The museum is located in the hallways on the first and third floors of MacBride Hall. The best way to avoid the huge crowds it attracts from across the country is to watch the parking lot outside the Union for when the Greyhound tour buses (generally labeled "New York" or "Los Angeles") leave.

The UI College of Dentistry Building — Located on the west side of the Iowa River, the dentistry building is one of the ugliest buildings in the state of Iowa. Supposedly, it's shaped like a giant molar. Whether or not having dentistry classes in a building built like a tooth has furthered the cause of dental education at the UI is unknown. The Dentistry building is also interesting to hang around in because you've always wondered what sort of people are sadistic enough to want to become dentists.

Burge Hall — Sort of the UI's own public housing project/crack house, but — this being Iowa City — without the crack. Nice place to visit if you want to feel better about your own bug-infested, overpriced Iowa City box apartment.

Chemistry Botany Building — This decaying building isn't really a tourist attraction yet, but it will be as soon as either: a) the roof caves in, or b) the building burns to the ground and hundreds of innocent botany majors are killed or injured. Visit it now so when the inevitable catastrophe does occur, you can tell friends and relatives, "Yeah, even then, you could tell it was dangerous."

English Philosophy Building — Home of the Writers Workshop, which is located on the fourth floor. If you want to have fun sometime, sit in the middle of the hallway and read something from Stephen King or Danielle Steele until you begin attracting stares. Or, better yet, go up to someone in the hall and say, "Wasn't that new book by Tom Clancy just the greatest?"

IOWA CITY ATTRACTIONS:

Iowa City Civic Center — This building, which houses the Iowa City mayor's office and police and fire stations, is considered to be one of the dullest of its kind in the nation. It has no distinguishing features whatsoever. "Impressive in its blandness," wrote Iowa Architecture Today. "Even in Iowa, it's a landmark of sorts."

New Pioneer Co-op/Unitarian Universalist Church — Two of the last remnants of the '60s culture left in Iowa City. A good place to go and feel guilty if you long ago sold out your values or if you're in the process of selling them out by getting your law degree or M.B.A.

Plum Grove — The home of the first territorial governor of the state of Iowa, Robert Lucas, remains one of the most popular tourist sites in Iowa City. The home sponsors a laser light show every Friday night, as well as "Rockin' Out With Bob Lucas", a program on Saturdays featuring dancers dressed in early eighteenth century outfits performing to the music of such contemporary bands as Great White and Neneh Cherry while a disembodied mechanical head resembling Lucas recites the Iowa Constitution. Plum Grove also features a live reggae festival every Tuesday night.

OUTSIDE THE CITY:

Coralville — There is absolutely nothing to see in Coralville except people plodding along in their empty, meaningless lives.

Solon, North Liberty and Swisher — No known human beings live in these towns. In fact, many suspect they may just be part of old Iowa folk legends.

Kalona — On the surface, this town — located south of Iowa City — seems like a peaceful Mennonite community. But, in fact, it is home to one of the world's largest Satan-worshipping cults. Operated out of the funeral parlors and cheese shops in the town, the cult is estimated to include over 80 percent of Kalona's citizens. Those interested in seeing an actual Satanic ceremony (often featuring goat sacrifices) should listen for advertisements for Kalona "Tractor Pulls, with Big Tractors!" — the code words for the ceremonies. It even beats seeing the Natural History Museum.

Go get an education

To the Editor:

On the night of August 23, I and two of my fellow first-year law school classmates went to R.T. Grunts, a local Iowa City bar, to attend a "Law Night" gathering. The event was sponsored by the Iowa Student Bar Association, the law school's student government. We walked in the door and approached the ID checker when a male patron caught sight of us and began yelling, "Ah-so! Ah-so!" and making other noises intended to mimic the tonality of many Asian languages. The ID checker said to me, "Don't pay any attention to him," but made no move to remove the man from the premises, though it was clear from his slurred speech and inability to stand up straight that he was intoxicated. My classmates and I left R.T. Grunts immediately.

To put my complaint as briefly as possible, why should I have to put up with this crap? I have heard plenty of advice telling me to "be above it all; people like that aren't worth my time." Frankly, those arguments only go so far. I often feel that people who give that kind of advice are not themselves advised of the kind of racial discrimination that goes on in this society.

As a society which prides itself on being democratic and just, we have the obligation to investigate our attitudes, regulate our behaviors, and most importantly, educate ourselves about the different types of people that make up American society. This obligation is more imperative for the United States than for any other country because of the U.S.'s racial makeup. I'm sick of hearing that I should close my eyes to incidents of racial violence when so many people shun this obligation. To these people I say: Go get an education.

Boycott Festival

To the Editor:

Last spring, Regina Bailey, a music teacher at the Regina Schools, was fired from her job for writing a pro-choice letter to The Daily Iowan. In the letter, Bailey made no mention of her affiliation to the school, nor did she attempt to link her beliefs with that of her employer. Nevertheless, Bailey lost her job. She was fired for her beliefs, which run counter to that of the Catholic Church (but not necessarily to that of many Catholics).

The gross injustice of Bailey's situation is clear, but the chilling effect of her termination has had an even wider effect. Regina students and parents who supported Bailey were afraid to do so publicly, and fellow teachers have been effectively silenced for fear of losing their jobs.

As a private institution, Regina has a certain right, however abhorrent, to hire people who fit into a pre-formed ideological mold. It has a right to ignore basic tenets of free speech and to see to it that the children under its care are not allowed to discover different ideas, opinions or options.

But there is no law that says that we as a community have to pay for it. Regina receives a large amount of money from this community and the Fall Fun Festival is its biggest community-wide fund raiser of the year. That is why the Reproductive Rights Coalition of Iowa City has called for a boycott of the Festival. There is no reason our money should go to those who would dictate the personal beliefs of their employees or close off the minds of their students.

The children who go to Regina are not living in the Middle Ages. They are members of the Iowa City community and an important part of its future. That is why this Labor Day weekend we as a community should say that we will not fund the intellectual sterilization of our children. Join us in boycotting the Festival.

Matthew Willis

Conflict of interest found in Energy Dept.

WASHINGTON — A senior Energy Department official violated a conflict-of-interest law by participating in the award of a $1 billion contract to a group of companies that included one of his former employers, a federal judge found.

U.S. Claims Court Judge Reginald Gibson, in a finding released Thursday, said Samuel Rousso had violated the federal statute prohibiting an Energy Department supervisor from participating in department decisions involving any energy company that the supervisor has worked for within the past year.

Rousso is acting director of the department office administering a program to evaluate Yucca Mountain, Nev., as a possible site for building the nation's first permanent repository for high-level radioactive waste from nuclear reactors.

Gibson's finding on Rousso was a central feature of a ruling he handed down last week that blocked the Energy Department from giving a $1 billion Yucca Mountain management contract to a group led by Bechtel Management Systems Inc., a subsidiary of the San Francisco-based engineering and construction giant.

Britain, Argentina discuss Falklands War

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The director of the British Interest Section met at the Foreign Ministry Thursday with an Argentine diplomat in the first such meeting since the two nations went to war in 1982 and cut diplomatic ties.

Alan Hunt met with Matias Ordonez, Cabinet chief for Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo. A similar meeting took place in London between the chief of the Argentina Interest Section and a British Foreign Ministry official.

Britain and Argentina seek to improve commercial and trade links en route to resuming full diplomatic relations. Formal talks are to take place October 17 and 18 in Madrid.

Both nations claim the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic and fought over them in 1982. Nearly 1,000 people were killed in the 74-day war, which Britain won.

Argentina has refused to formally declare an end to hostilities and has barred British planes and ships from local ports, among other restrictions.

Britain, which has ruled the windswept islands as a colony since 1833, retook possession after an Argentine invasion and now is enforcing a 150-mile "protection zone" around them.

Former U.S. resident charged in war crimes

FRANKFURT, West Germany — An alleged Nazi war criminal who fled the United States to avoid deportation to the Soviet Union has been charged with war crimes, a state prosecutor said Thursday.

Boleslav Maikovskis, formerly of Mineola, N.Y., will go on trial in state court in Muenster, said Dortmund prosecutor Klaus Schacht.

Maikovskis, 84, faced U.S. deportation proceedings for war crimes allegedly committed when he served as a policeman in Latvia. He fled the United States in 1987.

Maikovskis, who was charged in August, is being held in the hospital wing of a prison in the city of Bochum.

In 1965, the Soviet Union sentenced him to death in absentia for his alleged role in burning down a village and helping to kill more than 130 men, women and children in the Latvian village of Audrine. The deaths occurred while he was acting as commander of a pro-Nazi police force during World War II.

The United States began deportation proceedings against Maikovskis in 1976, but that was delayed by several appeals. His last appeal was denied by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1986, and he fled to West Germany.

Rabbi won't join peace-prayer leaders

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's only rabbi said Thursday he won't join leaders of other religions in a prayer for peace marking the 50th anniversary of World War II's start because of a Roman Catholic convent at Auschwitz.

Organizers had pointed to the participation of the rabbi — a survivor of the Nazi death camp — as evidence that Jews were not boycotting the event, led by Roman Catholics and bringing to Warsaw representatives of many other faiths.

"I personally will not participate in the joint prayers. When I go to Auschwitz I cannot pray there because I am disturbed by a cross and the Carmelite convent there," said Rabbi Menachem Joskowicz.

"One cannot be barred from prayer at Auschwitz and at the same time participate in joint prayers in Warsaw," said the rabbi, who arrived in Poland in June.

The World Prayer for Peace was designed to foster understanding among religions. Polish-born Pope John Paul II is to give an address via a giant TV screen in Warsaw's Royal Castle Square on Friday, the anniversary of the German invasion of Poland that started the war.

"This is a moment for peace and reconciliation, a meeting of international friendship . . . a day of peace, brotherhood of all the world's religions," said Roman Catholic Monsignor Pietro Rossano, rector of the Pontifical Lateran University in Rome.

But Jewish-Catholic relations have been strained by the decision by the archbishop of Krakow to abandon a 1987 accord to move the Carmelite convent from the peimeter of Auschwitz, and by a speech by Cardinal Jozef Glemp.

International Jewish leaders were invited to the event but said they could not come, said Mario Marazziti, a prayer-day organizer.

Marazziti said the convent controversy "may be one of the reasons but not the only reason" for the lack of greater Jewish participation.

Marazziti said three representatives of the Jewish community were attending the conference but they were academic rather than religious leaders.

Jacob Neusner of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University called the convent dispute a "heartbreaking conflict" between Catholics and Jews that shows the need for religions to learn to accommodate each other.

Marazziti said he received confirmation August 20 that Joskowicz would attend the prayer and had only heard informally that he would not.

Sunni Moslems threaten to shanghai Pope John Paul II

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The pro-Iranian leader of fundamentalist Sunni Moslems was quoted Thursday as saying Pope John Paul II should be kidnapped if he visits Lebanon's besieged Christians.

Sheik Said Shaaban also recommended that President George Bush and President Francois Mitterrand of France be abducted as a means of ending support for Lebanese Christians and for Israel, the Beirut daily Ad-Diyar reported.

Syrian and Christian soldiers exchanged artillery and tank fire Thursday. Police said three people were killed and 24 wounded, raising total casualties since the artillery war began March 8 to at least 808 dead and 2,342 wounded. Nearly all the casualties have been civilians.

A mediation mission by French envoy Francois Scheer appeared to have collapsed, raising fears of intensified fighting between Gen. Michel Aoun's Christian army command and a Moslem alliance led by the 40,000 Syrian troops stationed in Lebanon.

Ad-Diyar quoted Shaaban as saying in an interview: "If the Pope comes to Lebanon and we manage to hold him for the sake of salvaging Palestine, I wouldn't be against such an act."

"It is our duty to abduct all those related to states that recognize Israel. Every citizen of a foreign state that recognizes Israel should be a hostage in our hand.

"I support the abduction of Bush and . . . Mitterrand to serve the purpose of ousting Israel from Palestine and stopping the French intervention (in Lebanon) and the naval warships that have come to rescue France's children in Lebanon."

Although Shaaban is a Sunni, he supports the radical Shiite Moslem goal of an Iran-style Islamic republic in Lebanon and has made several trips to Tehran.

His reference was to six French warships in the eastern Mediterranean. France, which governed Lebanon by mandate until 1943, says the ships are on a "humanitarian" mission, to evacuate the 7,000 French citizens in Lebanon if necessary.

Shaaban's talk of abduction was the most overt threat to John Paul since he expressed a desire August 19 to visit Lebanon and help end the 14-year-old sectarian civil war.

Threatening to kidnap the Pope may seem far-fetched, but Shiite zealots loyal to Iran carried out suicide bombings against American, French and Israeli forces in Lebanon in 1983-85 and have kidnapped scores of Westerners.

FmHA strives to restructure fiscal services

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Thursday the Farmers Home Administration has turned from being a lender into a "grant agency" and that he is determined to put it on a more businesslike footing.

"We've just got to reform that program, take it out of the status of what it's really become — a grant agency — and move it back to being a credit institution once again," Yeutter said.

The FmHA has its roots in the Great Depression of the 1930s and is often called the government's farm lender of last resort. To be eligible for loans, farmers must be able to get regular loans from banks or other commercial institutions.

Yeutter said the Agriculture Department agency has "made billions of dollars of questionable loans over the last decade or so, many of which are in default today."

But he noted that attempts have been made to change FmHA and to toughen its lending practices, only to be thwarted by legal action filed by farmers or their advocates, or by Congress.

"If we have to change legislation in this area in order to do a more effective and skillful job of managing (FmHA), we'll make legislative proposals to have that happen," Yeutter told a television news conference. "If we can do it administratively, we'll do it that way."

For years, the FmHA has been embroiled in controversial attempts to collect long-overdue farm loans. New procedures to help protect the interests of farmers and to enable the agency to proceed with its collections were included by Congress in the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

The latest move involves FmHA sending out a new batch of collection notices to borrowers who failed to make their scheduled payments by the first of this year.

Bridge collapses in Baltimore

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — A bridge being built over a major Baltimore-Washington artery collapsed during rush hour on Thursday as workers poured its concrete deck, trapping several motorists beneath debris. Fourteen people were injured.

One victim, Kimberly Anderson of Elkridge, was listed in critical condition. She was one of five commuters in two cars caught under a hail of wet concrete, metal and wood on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway.

Anderson, 30, suffered multiple injuries, including head wounds and facial cuts, said Andy Trohanis, a spokesman for the University of Maryland Shock Trauma Center.

None of the other victims, including nine construction workers, had serious injuries, authorities said.

Investigators were focusing on the false work, or shoring, that supports the concrete road surface while it cures and sets. The workers had poured about 200 tons of concrete and were two-thirds of the way through when the bridge collapsed in the middle, said Gene McCormick, deputy administrator for the Federal Highway Administration.

"The shoring basically collapsed. We suspect the shoring is probably the cause of the failure. We have no specific conclusions at this point," McCormick said.

The shoring was a combination of timber members and steel members," McCormick said. "Conceivably — I am not suggesting this at all — something could have hit one of the support members and thereby led to the failure."

Early morning rush-hour traffic was heavy when the Route 198 span collapsed about 6:30 a.m.

"All I seen was concrete flying and falling down," said Steve Brown. "It collapsed fast."

Rescue workers initially feared more cars may have been trapped under a 10-foot-tall pile of debris and carefully removed pieces of gooey concrete, wood and metal by hand.

By 11 a.m., however, rescuers said it appeared all the victims had been rescued. Heavy equipment was brought in to clean up the debris.

McCormick said five federal inspectors were at the overpass at the time of the collapse. The supports for the molds into which the concrete was being poured had been inspected and approved in early July, he said.

"The foreman said he heard a clanging or a clunk just before the bridge collapsed, but there was really no warning," McCormick said.

The Caribbean: An ideal stop for Colombian drug smugglers

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Colombian drug lords smuggle most of the cocaine sold in the streets of the United States through the Caribbean, which has become a strategic narcotics gateway.

On any given night, small planes from Colombia and other South American nations drop bundles of cocaine into the blue Caribbean Sea.

The bundles, bearing sophisticated blinking signal lights, are then picked up by boats waiting off any one of 25 Caribbean island-nations or the Bahamas.

"No island is exempt, no body of land," John Fernandez, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency spokesman in Miami, said in a telephone interview. "It comes by boat, by air . . . any type of boat, any type of plane, any which way traffickers can get drugs in."

Officials say the Caribbean became the main cocaine route in the last few years because of increased drug production and relatively successful surveillance efforts in usual western routes, including the U.S.-Mexico border.

In just two or three hours, a plane carrying cocaine from Colombia also can fly the 600 or so miles across the Caribbean to landing fields in Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, or the U.S. and British Virgin Islands.

The DEA estimates 60 to 80 percent of the cocaine and marijuana smuggled to the United States is transhipped from the Caribbean and the Bahamas, mostly to Florida, for redistribution to American markets.

Officials say Puerto Rico, a U.S. Commonwealth, has become a recent favorite of traffickers because it has no U.S. Customs inspections for flights leaving for the U.S. mainland.

"If it arrives here, it's in the United States," said Bill Mitchell, a DEA special agent in San Juan. "You can go up to any airline counter and say you want to ship 20 kilos of hardware to your sister. It's a domestic shipment, so you don't need to inspect it."

Other ways to ship drugs to the United States from Puerto Rico are by cruise ships, commercial planes, luggage and the U.S. mails. But most shipments are made inside ship cargo containers. Puerto Rico has about 1 million such containers, a number too great for U.S. Customs to inspect effectively.

In fiscal 1988, the DEA said, 11 tons of cocaine, 85 tons of marijuana, nine vessels and 20 aircraft were seized in the Caribbean.

But it's believed only about 20 percent of drug shipments are seized.

"Four, five years ago if you found 100 pounds of cocaine, it was a lot," said Jaime E. Verria, in charge of U.S. Customs in Puerto Rico. "Today, shipments easily have 1,200 pounds."

Crackdown may raise coca value

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — U.S. drug officials are concerned that a disruption of cocaine production in Colombia because of the government crackdown will raise cocaine prices in Peru and Bolivia and make it harder to persuade farmers to switch from coca leaf to other crops.

An estimated 300,000 people in Bolivia depend on coca farming and cocaine production for a livelihood. Coca leaf still provides a 100-percent profit to farmers and coca-leaf acreage increased by 20 percent in 1987 through 1988, according to a U.S. State Department report.

For farmers to stop growing coca leaves, viable alternative crops must be found. But with the recent drop in the price of coffee — a crop suited for the tropics where coca is grown — and the lack of other profitable alternative crops, farmers prefer to grow coca, which provides four crops a year and is easy to sell.

The Bolivian government last year passed a law that limits coca-leaf acreage. President Jaime Paz Zamora's government, which was sworn in August 6, says it will wage an all-out war against traffickers.

Coca-leaf reduction in Bolivia is moving ahead but slowly as the new government implements an anti-drug strategy.

Bolivian law calls for the reduction of 12,350 acres of coca land by the end of the year in order to comply with a quota agreed upon by the U.S. government. If the quota is not reached Bolivia stands to lose $10 million in aid. This year so far only about 3,200 acres have been destroyed.

In Peru, coca-leaf reduction programs in the 150-mile Huallaga Valley, 300 miles northeast of Lima, have been temporarily suspended because of threats to U.S. drug agents and the killing of Peruvian officials.

Coca farmers and traffickers in Peru have allied themselves with insurgency groups, among them the Shining Path, and many coca-leaf producing areas are off limits to law enforcement officials. Eradication and interdiction activities in the Huallaga Valley are expected to resume this month when a secure base is completed in the Santa Lucia area.

Peru destroyed 12,670 acres of coca in just four months last year.

Peru produces coca leaves on 285,600 acres. It is the main supplier of paste for Colombian cocaine producers and distributors.

U.S. official guesses size of Noriega fortune

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling him a man of "shameless excess," a top State Department official said Thursday that Panamanian Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has amassed a personal fortune of between $200 and $300 million from drug trafficking and other criminal activities.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger made the allegation in response to a challenge from a Panamanian diplomat last week for the Bush administration to back up its claim that Noriega has a long history of involvement in drug smuggling.

Eagleburger spoke to a meeting of the Organization of American States' permanent council, which was convened at State Department request.

Much of his presentation was devoted to repeating charges contained in indictments handed down by two Florida grand juries.

But no administration official had ever before offered an official estimate of Noriega's wealth.

"By conservative estimates, we judge Noriega's personal wealth (much of it hidden in secret bank accounts abroad) to be at least $200 (million) to $300 million," Eagleburger said.

Irish dominate in Classic way

N.D. scores on first five drives

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tony Rice guided Notre Dame to touchdowns on its first five possessions as the Fighting Irish opened defense of their national championship by routing Virginia 36-13 Thursday night in the Kickoff Classic.

After losing seven top players before the season started, Coach Lou Holtz said he didn't consider Notre Dame a Top 20 team. But the Fighting Irish sure looked like one against the Cavaliers, who are expected to contend for the Atlantic Coast Conference title after finishing last season with five straight victories.

The game was all but over at halftime after second-ranked Notre Dame raced to a 33-0 lead before a sellout crowd of 77,323 at Giants Stadium.

Rice, one of the preseason favorites for the Heisman Trophy, completed six of seven passes for 125 yards and ran for 34 yards and a touchdown in the first half. He played only three series in the second half as Holtz substituted freely.

Notre Dame outgained Virginia 333-60 in the first half and led in first downs 16-3. In fact, the Fighting Irish nearly matched the Cavaliers' total first-half yardage on one play, a 52-yard pass from Rice to Raghbi Ismail that set up a 2-yard scoring run by Rodney Culver late in the first quarter. Virginia, meanwhile, failed to cross midfield in the opening half. About the only thing Notre Dame did wrong was miss an extra point and come up short on a two-point conversion.

The Cavaliers scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter, but it was much too late to stop Notre Dame from winning its 13th straight game, the longest streak in the country.

It took Notre Dame just over four minutes to score its first touchdown on Ricky Watters' 2-yard run.

On their next possession, the Fighting Irish drove 57 yards in nine plays and scored on fullback Anthony Johnson's 1-yard dive.

After Culver's short run made it 19-0, Notre Dame forced a punt and began another long scoring drive to open the second quarter. Johnson capped the 14-play, 87-yard march by powering into the end zone from the 1.

Virginia's most glaring statistic was its failure to reach Notre Dame territory in the first half. When the Cavaliers finally accomplished the feat it was on a Notre Dame holding penalty midway through the third quarter.

Iowa field hockey player Alleen Trendler goes through a stickwork drill last fall in the Iowa Indoor Practice Facility. Trendler, last season's team M.V.P., is part of the leadership that should put the Hawkeyes in contention for their fifth trip to the NCAA final four in this decade.

Beglin's squad eyes Final Four

Open with 3 game road trip

Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

From the rain-soaked carpet of Franklin Field, overcast skies made it impossible to see Philadelphia's imposing downtown skyline only blocks away.

On this day, the Ivy League stadium renowned for track's Penn relays, was the site of the 1988 NCAA field hockey championships. Thundershowers that began early in the day failed to dissipate before Iowa and Old Dominion met for the national title.

Iowa, underdogs to the Lady Monarchs, scored first, but gave up a goal in the final 12 seconds of the half, going in tied 1-1 at intermission.

But as the rain came down even harder in the second half, the footing got more treacherous. An Old Dominion goal at 16 minutes, 27 seconds of the last half was enough for a national crown.

The Hawkeyes remember the miserable conditions, a controversial goal to end the first half and the misery of feeling a national title slip through their fingers.

And they want to do it again. "There's more pressure to get to the Final Four than to the championships again," Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin said, "because once you get there, you know you're one of the top ten in the country."

"This team definitely has the potential to go back." It starts the long trek back today with a three-game tournament in St. Louis.

"It's a tune-up weekend," Beglin said of the weekend's games. See Hawkeyes, Page 2B

Cubs make move for stretch

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, seeking fresh blood for the stretch drive in the division championship race, recalled six minor league players Thursday, a day after concluding a trade with San Diego for some hitting help.

Pitcher Paul Kilgus reported from the Iowa triple-A American Association club Thursday. Pitchers Jeff Pico and Kevin Blankenship report on Friday. Outfielders Doug Dasencenzo and Gary Varsho and infielder Greg Smith also were recalled.

A day earlier, the Cubs dealt pitcher Calvin Schiraldi and outfielder Darrin Jackson and an unnamed minor league player to the Padres for outfielder Marvell Wynne and infielder Luis Salazar.

The Cubs hold a 2½-game lead in the National League East over St. Louis and New York, with Montreal close behind.

"We tried to improve our ballclub in a few areas," Cubs general manager Jim Frey said. "Some things we couldn't get done. This deal gives us insurance and more depth for both the infield and the outfield. Wynne can play all three outfield positions and Salazar has played all four infield positions and can also play the outfield.

"They should make us a stronger ball club for this year and for the next couple of years. They give us

"I'm excited to go there. I'm not depressed. I'm ready to go."
— Marvell Wynne on his trade to the Cubs speed, defense, and both can hit," he said.

Wynne, 29, batted .252 with six home runs and 35 RBIs in 105 games this season. He began his major league career in 1983 with Pittsburgh and was traded to San Diego in 1986.

"I enjoyed my time while I was here (San Diego) but they had to make a trade and I was involved," Wynne, a native of Chicago, said.

"In a way I'm surprised. But I guess they needed another pitcher here for the rest of the way. They (the Cubs) needed me and Louie in return I guess. It had to be done. I'm excited to go there. I'm not depressed. I'm ready to go."

Salazar, 33, is a 10-year major league veteran who began with the Padres in 1980 and was reacquired by San Diego from Detroit prior to the start of this season. He was hitting .268 in 95 games with eight homers and 22 RBIs. Three of his homers came as a pinch-hitter.

"It's not a first time thing. I'm used to it," Salazar said. "Moving back and forth across the country is tough. This time it surprised me I've got to say that. On the other hand it's a business. I go where they send me and at least I'm going to a first-place team."

Schiraldi, 27, came to the Cubs in December 1987 from Boston in a deal for Lee Smith. He was 3-6 with four saves and a 3.78 ERA in 54 relief appearances.

Jackson, 25, has been used sparingly, batting .229 with only one homer and eight RBIs, mostly as a pinch-hitter. Jackson underwent cancer surgery in 1987 to remove a tumor from his groin area.

Sweden's Mats Wilander throws his racket in disgust Thursday in his match with Pete Sampras during the U.S. Open in New York. Sampras upset Wilander, 5-7, 6-3, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Volleyball looking to gain experience

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Winning is important to Iowa volleyball coach Ruth Nelson. But when her team travels to Nebraska-Omaha tonight and Nebraska Saturday, they will be concentrating more on getting experience.

"We want to give everyone the opportunity to play to see how the group mixes," Nelson said. "If we get a good win against one of these teams, we would have a good chance for a national ranking. So I won't say that winning is not important, but this is preparing us for the Big Ten matches."

The Hawkeyes have nine matches

Volleyball

before they begin Big Ten competition at Illinois Sept. 22.

This weekend's matches may provide some tough competition as Nebraska-Omaha is ranked tenth among Division II programs, while Nebraska stands at No. 7 in Division I according to the American Volleyball Coaches Association pre-season poll.

"They will be tough since they're both ranked in the top 10 in the country," junior Barb Willis said. "But after our scrimmage (Wednesday against Loras) we're confident with our plays. It's always good to win, but now our goals are also trying to get the plays down and running right."

Willis also said it helps to face tough competition at the beginning of the season.

"It shows us right off where we're at and where we need to go," she said. "Whether we win or lose, it will only help us when (NCAA) tournament time comes."

Willis, one of six juniors on the squad, earned a position at the U.S. Olympic Festival last summer where she was coached by one of Nebraska's assistant coaches.

"I learned a lot even though I didn't play (due to a fractured hand)," Willis said. "I learned by watching and listening to my coach, and I gained a lot of confidence."

The games this weekend are the first test for Iowa this season beside last Wednesday's scrimmage. But the Hawkeyes remember their win over Nebraska during the spring season last year.

"(Our win over Nebraska) could help somewhat," junior Ginger Lorentson said. "It showed us that they aren't an insurmountable team. But maybe Nebraska didn't have everyone playing or something, and spring season is really totally different. We can't be overconfident. Everybody looked like they were doing really well (at the scrimmage). They looked real organized."

Baseball owners ordered to pay $10.5 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners were ordered Thursday to pay players more than $10.5 million as compensation for the clubs' collusion against free agents between the 1985 and 1986 seasons.

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts' decision doesn't specify how much money will go to each of the 139 players affected in the first conspiracy case. He asked both sides to work that out, but said if they could not, he would hold hearings for each player to determine individual awards.

Roberts also decided that players were damaged by their loss of multiyear contracts, signing bonuses, bonus clauses and no-trade clauses. He said players could submit additional claims in those areas.

Owners said they would place the $10,528,086.71 penalty in an escrow account that will be used once the money is apportioned among the players. Each of the 26 teams will pay approximately $404,926.41.

"I think it's a vindication of our essential position," said Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association. "Everybody agrees that whatever the damages were for 1986, they were substantially greater and more pervasive for subsequent years. So we can look for greater damages down the line."

The Collusion I case, filed on Jan. 31, 1986, and decided on Sept. 21, 1987, centered on Kirk Gibson, Donnie Moore, Carlton Fisk and Phil and Joe Niekro. The Collusion II case, covering free agents between the 1986 and 1987 seasons, is now its damage phase. The Collusion III case has not been decided.

"The award represents a beginning in the resolution of the dispute between the clubs and the union over free agency," said Milwaukee owner Bud Selig, chairman of the owners' Player Relations Committee.

"The 10.5 is a minimum figure," Fehr said. "It's only for money lost in 1986 by players under contract in 1986. It does not cover players without contracts, players who lost right to play for other teams. What this does only is set the direct loss of salary."

Agents for the affected players had submitted claims totaling $16,622,000. Roberts said the parties should "harmonize" his award with that figure or he would do it player by player.

"It's so ambiguous at this point," said Doug Baldwin, the agent for Gibson. "If you go to 160 hearings, how long will it take?"

Roberts, in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office, said the decision of how to conduct

American greenhorns earn respect at Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Agassi and Michael Chang kept up the march of America's teen brigade at the U.S. Open on Thursday, avoiding the upsets that tripped up two former champions.

Agassi, 19, Chang, 17, and Pete Sampras, 18, who took out defending champion Mats Wilander Wednesday night, are part of a new generation of U.S. players on the verge of taking over the game.

The sixth-seeded Agassi, with flowing locks and a throng of screaming female admirers, beat South African Neil Broad 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 to advance to the third round.

Chang, the seventh seed and French Open champion, easily handled the swirling breeze on the stadium court and Sweden's Thomas Hogstedt, winning 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

out dropping a set.

Lendl didn't strain himself much in a snappy, 78-minute, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1 victory against John Fitzgerald, a doubles specialist from Australia who charged the net futilely while Lendl stayed back and hammered forehands and backhands past him.

Lendl said he wasn't surprised at the second-round upsets of Wilander by Sampras and four-time champion John McEnroe by newcomer Paul Haarhuis, or the near upset of Boris Becker by Dennis Rostagno.

"The game has gotten better," he said. "A new generation of players has come in and a lot of them are good. Some of them are good on a consistent basis, but not on the top level. Some of them are very up-and-down, and when they're up, they're very dangerous."

Chang said the young Americans are so good because they grew up playing together and pushing each

Tyson sets title defense

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Tyson's next heavyweight title defense, against Razor Ruddock, will be held in Canada on Nov. 18, a group of promoters said Thursday.

Sonny McPhee, who heads the group, said he had agreed to pay $3 million to Don King, Tyson's promoter, for the rights to the fight against Ruddock, a Canadian.

King had been searching for a site promoter since a Las Vegas hotel said the fight was not worth what King was asking.

McPhee said the preliminary documents were signed Wednesday night.

The date was confirmed by Home Box Office, which holds the television rights to all of Tyson's championship fights.

Still undecided is the site. Al Braverman, a King spokesman, said under consideration were B.C. Place in Vancouver, Northlands Coliseum in Edmonton, Toronto's SkyDome and Olympic Stadium in Montreal.

Norman leads in Milwaukee

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — Greg Norman shot an 8-under-par 64 Thursday in his first appearance at the Greater Milwaukee Open and took a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $800,000 tournament.

Wayne Grady, Phil Blackmar, Curt Byrum and Steve Pate were one shot behind on a windy, overcast day at the 7,030-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Norman, playing the back nine first, started slowly with a bogey-5 on the 444-yard 10th hole.

But a birdie on the 525-yard 12th got Norman rolling. He finished the round with nine birdies, one on each of the course's four par-5s.

Grady, playing in the same threesome with Norman, kept pace. He made two 40-foot putts and another from 60 feet for three birdies, and holed a sand wedge on the 390-yard fourth hole for an eagle-2.

Blackmar, Byrum and Pate played the course in the afternoon when the wind picked up and a threat of rain lingered. But all three managed seven birdies on a course known for low scores.

Kulwicki captures NASCAR pole

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Alan Kulwicki's latest trip around Darlington Raceway was much more successful than his first.

Kulwicki, who has four second-place finishes this year, captured the pole Thursday for the 40th annual Southern 500 NASCAR race at a track he considers one of his worst ovals.

The 25th of 37 drivers to attempt to qualify, Kulwicki drove his Ford around the 1.366-mile oval in 30.705 seconds, or 160.156 mph, on a sunny afternoon at the circuit's oldest superspeedway.

Darrell Waltrip, who can pocket a $1 million bonus if he wins Sunday's race, will start ninth after turning in a speed of 158.479 mph in a Chevrolet.

Kulwicki's speed was far off the race record of 160.827 mph set by Bill Elliott last year. But it puts him in position to win the Unocal 76 Challenge award, which has climbed to $144,400. The bonus money goes to any driver who wins both the pole and the race.

"This is one of the best," Kulwicki said of his pole-winning performances. "This is one of my worst oval tracks. I can remember spinning out taking my rookie test here (in 1986).

"To make that kind of progress and come back and win a pole here really is a great feeling of accomplishment."

Kulwicki, a Greenfield, Wis., native who lives in Concord, N.C., said winning the pole gave him a taste of what the Southern 500 means to race fans in the South.

individual hearings would be made after the union and the PRC discussed the matter. Roberts said he would need additional hearings on claims such as loss of multiyear contracts.

The damage phase of the Collusion I case took 38 hearing days and filled a 4,967-page transcript. The union and the owners submitted 363 exhibits. The first phase of the case filled a 5,674-page transcript and 288 exhibits.

Fehr said the union would also ask for interest, legal fees and other costs. Selig said the PRC believed both management and the union "learned that the current system of player compensation requires substantial change."

"The PRC, on behalf of our clubs, will pursue that goal in the upcoming negotiations," Selig said in a statement. "We will make every effort to bargain for a new baseball partnership based on a system of player compensation that is fair for all involved."

other "to the limit." "If you didn't work hard, you'd be at the bottom of the group, and nobody wanted to be down there," he said. "Everybody pushed everybody, and now that pushing is starting to pay off."

Chang said he was pleased that Sampras beat Wilander in the second round, "because he will start believing in himself that he can play great tennis against the top players."

Agassi saw the Sampras victory as confirmation of the rise of young American talent.

"Chang, to say the least, has proved himself to be a great player," Agassi said. "You have to be a great player to win a Grand Slam tournament, so you don't really need to defend him."

"Sampras last night proved he can play top players, and (Jim) Courier (another second-round winner) has already proven that," he said. "I think next year (Americans) will be really dominating in tennis ... no doubt about it."

Edburg, who beat Peter Lundgren, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, said he was particularly surprised that McEnroe lost after the way he'd been playing this year, coming back from several years of injuries and layoffs to reach No. 4.

Mayotte struggled only in the third set in beating Christo Van Rensburg 6-2, 6-2, 7-6. Mayotte, 29, is having his best year and looms as a dark horse to win the Open. He won a tournament in Washington in July, beating a hot Brad Gilbert in the finals, and reached the quarters at Wimbledon before losing to Edburg.

Among the women players, the Open has been relatively upset-free. No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini beat Cathy Caverzasio 6-3, 6-2 on Thursday, and No. 8 Helena Sukova beat Gretchen Magers 6-2, 6-7, 6-2.

Begin doesn't need to know anymore about are her five "phenomenal" seniors — All-Americans Erica Richards and Cherie Freddie, and all-Big Ten members Melissa Sanders, Erin Walsh and Aileen Trendler. They have helped ease her anxiety of Iowa's quest for a fifth trip to the NCAA Final Four in the 1980s.

"They're all outstanding players," Begin said, "and they all worked very hard this summer — and it kept them sharp."

All of them, except for Richards, played with the National under-21 in Canada this summer. Richards was too old to compete in that bracket.

"I'm confident about this weekend," Richards said. "I think we should come out on top. We're very strong this year. We've got a great bunch of freshmen; some of who will start."

Begin is equally impressed with the recruiting class of Amy Fowler, Kristy Gleason and Jamie Rofrano.

"We had an excellent recruiting year," she said. "All of them are excellent players."

The biggest twist to this year's team is the creation of the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference, the replacement for the Big Ten.

According to Big Ten bylaws, six of the ten Big Ten schools must participate on the varsity level for it to be an accredited conference sport.

But after Purdue dropped its program last season, only Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State, Northwestern and Ohio State remained.

IOC bans athletes in S. Africa

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Any athlete who competes in South Africa will be stripped of Olympic eligibility, the International Olympic Committee said Thursday.

The move, one of the toughest anti-apartheid measures taken by the IOC since it expelled South Africa in 1970, came amid a flurry of activity on Olympic eligibility at the committee's 95th session.

The IOC retained tennis as a medal sport for the Barcelona Games, but with the provision that the International Tennis Federation suspend a handful of tournaments it runs in South Africa.

Kevan Gosper, an IOC vice president from Australia, said there was a chance that tennis could be knocked off the Barcelona schedule if the condition was not met.

The ban on Olympic eligibility for those who go to South Africa was contained in the tennis proposal. But Gosper said it would have the same impact on any athlete from any sport who competed in South Africa from now on.

"You've got to accept the very clear message about athletes who play in South Africa. They are not acceptable from today to compete on the agenda of the Olympic Games."

— Kevan Gosper

"You've got to accept the very clear message about athletes who play in South Africa," Gosper said. "They are not acceptable from today to compete on the agenda of the Olympic Games."

The IOC also admitted defeat and adopted an experimental soccer-eligibility plan limiting the Barcelona tournament to players 23 years and younger. The committee wanted a broader eligibility base but FIFA, soccer's governing body, refused to compromise.

In recent months, the IOC has turned increased attention to sports in South Africa, appointing a commission to monitor conditions in the racially separated country.

Tennis became the focus of that attention this year. The IOC readmitted tennis as a medal sport on an experimental basis in 1988 and anti-apartheid forces lobbied to throw it out again unless the sport — one of 15 with formal ties to South Africa — cut or greatly reduced those links.

The ITF's headquarters said this summer that it would support a measure to expel South Africa at its annual meeting next month in Buenos Aires.

The women's tennis tour has no South African stops.

Intramurals provide fall relief

With students beginning to crack books for the fall term, entertainment alternatives can be found through intramurals and sports clubs.

Flag football and softball are among the favorites that kick off the fall intramural season beginning Sept. 9. Men's and women's tennis, Home Run Derby and canoe races round out activities starting this month.

The Home Run Derby will be similar in format to the old television show where batters try to put every pitch out of the park.

The contest is open to both men and women, with the men hitting baseballs and the women hitting softballs. Points will be awarded on the basis of how far the ball travels with maximum points credited for

NFL suspends Mack; will miss three games

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — The NFL suspended Cleveland Browns fullback Mack for 30 days on Thursday, one day after he pleaded guilty to a criminal charge of cocaine use.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle imposed the suspension, which means Mack will miss the Browns' final preseason game on Saturday and their first three regular-season games.

This was the first time Mack was held in violation of the league's substance abuse policy, so he would have escaped a suspension had he not been guilty of the criminal charge.

"It was Rozelle's decision, and I think it's fair. I don't like it, but I do think it's fair," said owner Art Modell, who discussed the suspension at a news conference attended by Mack and head coach Bud Carson.

Mack, 26, was arrested June 28 while sitting in a car on an inner-city street. He was initially charged with cocaine possession, cocaine sale, aggravated drug trafficking and possession of criminal tools, but the charges were reduced as part of a plea bargain.

Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Richard J. McMonagle said he would sentence Mack after receiving a presentence parole and dependency report.

Extended deadline: Iowa ticket manager Mike Naughton has extended Iowa football ticket sales for students until Sept. 8. The 6-game, $42 package can be purchased at Carver-Hawkeye Arena during regular business hours. "Things are still coming in, and we still have seats," Naughton said, "so we don't want to shut off the sales yet. It's (the number of tickets sold) at a pretty good level, but we'd like more."

Inside Iowans: Three former Iowa football players have taken their game indoors to Arena Football. Offensive lineman Jon Roehlk played on the Detroit Drive, which has won two straight Arena Football championships. Kicker Rob Houghtlin scored 19 points for the Chicago Bruisers in his rookie year, while Kerry Burt played both wide receiver and defensive back for the Maryland Commandos.

Early birds: Two teams on Iowa's 1989 football schedule open play over the Labor Day weekend. Tulsa, which comes to Iowa City Sept. 30 travels to Texas-El Paso Saturday. The Hurricanes are led by junior quarterback T.J. Rubley. Rubley is a native of Davenport. Monday, Big Ten rival Illinois opens against Southern California at the Los Angeles Coliseum. The USC-Illinois showdown will be shown live by ABC to a national television audience.

More early birds: Eight members of the Iowa football team have received preseason honors from a handful of publications. Senior linebacker Brad Quast was honored by five publications. All-American by Street and Smith, 10th best linebacker in the nation by Lindy's, fourth team all-American by the Football News, all-Big Ten by Athlon's and second team all-Big Ten by The Sporting News. Bill Anderson is a preseason Big Ten pick by Athlon's and Lindy's. Jeff Croston has been picked by Athlon's as all-Big Ten. Lindy's gives Iowa linebacker Melvin Foster an all-Big Ten honorable mention. Merton Hanks was honored by the Sporting News as a 2nd team all-conference selection and an honorable mention by Lindy's. Jeff Koepfel was rated the ninth best nose guard in the country by The Sporting News and all-Big Ten by Lindy's. ## Gioiosa trial gathers more facts on Rose CINCINNATI (AP) — Thomas P. Gioiosa bragged he was sheltering Pete Rose's track winnings from taxes, the mother of Gioiosa's former girlfriend testified Thursday.

Shirley Fehrenbach, whose daughter, Rose, dated Gioiosa for a year, became the seventh witness in Gioiosa's drug and tax-evasion trial to offer testimony implicating Rose in tax fraud.

The former Cincinnati Reds manager is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Cincinnati looking into whether he claimed all of his income from gambling, memorabilia sales and autograph appearances on his taxes.

Rose was banned for life from baseball last week by Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, who has concluded the former manager bet on baseball.

Gioiosa, who met Rose in 1978 and was his housemate for five years, is accused of claiming a $47,646 Pick Six ticket from Turfway Park in northern Kentucky on his taxes when, in fact, the prosecution claims Rose was the majority owner. Gioiosa has pleaded innocent, and Rose has publicly denied any involvement.

Fehrenbach testified Thursday that Gioiosa talked about the winning ticket and other tax matters on his visits to her family when he was dating her daughter from early 1986 to 1987.

"He was at our home for the Super Bowl in 1987 and he commented about a great deal of money Pete had won at the racetrack, and he said he claimed the ticket to keep Pete from paying taxes," Fehrenbach said. "He said he did this almost all the time when they went to the track and Pete won."

The Pick Six paid off Jan. 16, 1987, nine days before the Super Bowl.

Fehrenbach also testified that Gioiosa indicated to the family that he didn't pay taxes, and he questioned why they did so.

"He would, on several occasions he remarked that we didn't have to pay taxes," she said.

Gioiosa, 31, is charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and tax evasion. If convicted of all charges, he would face up to 38 years in prison and $2 million in fines.

Although Rose hasn't been charged with any crimes, the testimony in Gioiosa's trial gives an indication of the evidence the government has in its investigation of his taxes.

1984 and '89 Cubs both win, but without any similarities

CHICAGO (AP) — Experience, power and reliable pitching helped the Chicago Cubs take the 1984 National League East title. Youth, finesse and an unpredictable bullpen are what jump out about the team now leading the division.

But, the biggest difference between the two teams is the roller-coaster ride of the 1989 Cubs.

"By this time in 1984 I knew we were going to win it unless six guys got killed in a car accident," Jim Frey said. "This team is a young team and we have to wait and see."

The Cubs hold a 2½-game lead over St. Louis and New York, despite a 3-7 record over the last 10 games. Montreal is three games back.

Frey managed the 1984 Cubs and, as the general manager, he put the 1989 team together and handed it over to manager Don Zimmer, a third-base coach in 1984.

"That was a veteran team," Frey said. "There were no young guys. We had a good rotation and Lee Smith in the bullpen. We had a lot of power. This team doesn't have that kind of power but this bullpen is better and more people are contributing to the team."

Dallas Green, then-general manager, helped the 1984 team by trading with Philadelphia for outfielders Bobby Dernier and Gary Matthews.

"After about six weeks we talked about how good that team could be and I said we need two pitchers," Frey said. "It was clear to me we had a good offensive team. If we could get a couple of pitchers, we could compete."

Green went out and got Rick Sutcliffe and Dennis Eckersley and the 1984 Cubs were on their way.

"I would have to say this club has played a lot better than most people thought," Zimmer said. "A lot of good things have happened to this club by a lot of different people. Can we win it? Wait and see."

"We had a lot more power in '84, but it's not often that a pitcher joins a club and goes 16-1, that was the big thing."

That guy was Sutcliffe, who won the Cy Young award.

Sutcliffe, Most-Valuable-Player Ryne Sandberg and Scott Sanderson are the only players remaining from the 1984 team.

Sutcliffe, who recognizes "a ton of difference" between the two teams, was uncertain about the 1989 Cubs before the start of the season.

"There were a lot of question marks in spring training," Sutcliffe said. "We still had (Goose) Gossage and (Al) Nipper on the staff."

Recruits should strengthen Hawks

Pat Axmeier
The Daily Iowan

Several things were missing from the 1988 Iowa men's cross-country team: a conference championship, an NCAA bid and enough team members to fill a taxi.

But with a new, nine-man recruiting class this fall, Iowa coach Larry Wiecek and his team could fill a van — with enough room for some trophies.

"We finally have the numbers for a successful team," Wiecek said. "In the past few years we didn't have the depth to be a real threat."

The top returning runner for the Hawkeyes is senior Rod Chambers, who led the 1988 squad in highest finishes.

"The larger squad is something to smile about," Chambers said. "This is my last year and I personally feel it's going to be a great one."

Cross-Country

Seniors Tim Slingsby and Bruce Nie, and juniors L.J. Albrecht and David Brown are the other returning letterman.

Slingsby, the team captain, was Iowa's second-best placer three times last season, while Albrecht finished as the top Hawkeye finisher in the 1988 triangular vs UNI, Illinois State and Western Illinois.

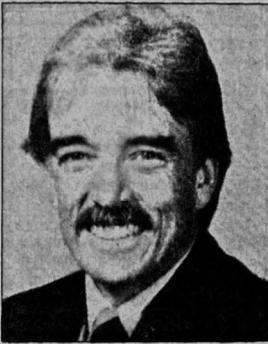

Junior Joe Ruth, and sophomores Dan Frazier and Matt Rybarczyk round out the squad's experienced runners. "The cross country season actually starts in the summer," Wiecek said. "The guys really worked hard during the summer — and it's showing."

Chambers included. "I've been working hard during the off-season and it has helped a lot," Chambers agreed. "A very good weight program has helped my running a lot."

A good year of recruiting brings the team nine freshmen: Tim Benke, Kevin Hellman, Kevin Herd, Doug Koon, Steve Marshall, Chuck Mattis, Mike Moore, Steve Morrissey, and Gary Roseman.

"We not only received the numbers, but they are complete runners," Wiecek said.

Yugoslavian cleared to play in NBA

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Vlade Divac, Yugoslavia's star center, has been granted a three-year deferment of his military service, allowing him to play for the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA, Yugoslav team sources said today.

NBA

Divac, 21, who signed with the Lakers in August and has been working out with them, subsequently was drafted by the Yugoslav army to start his compulsory military service Sept. 19.

The Yugoslav military authorities "have accepted Divac's request to postpone his military service and only a few formalities remain to be cleared before the deferment notice is mailed to him to America," reliable sources in his former Yugoslav club, Partizan, told The Associated Press.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said that he was cleared by the military until the 1992 Olympic Games. The state-run Vecernje Novosti newspaper carried a similar report today, quoting unofficial sources.

"The military does not wish to appear inflexible and to perhaps force Divac to emigrate from Yugoslavia for good," a draft board official, who declined to be identified, told AP.

"If he emigrated, it would be a great loss for the Yugoslav national team."

All able-bodied Yugoslav men are obliged by law to serve one year in the military between the ages of 19 and 27. Although most are called up immediately after finishing high school, many top athletes join the service only toward the end of that period.

Failure to report to the military after receiving an official call by the draft board is tantamount to desertion and punishable by a three-year jail term.

Three other Yugoslav players this year signed contracts with NBA teams. Center Dino Radja signed with the Boston Celtics, forward Zarko Paspalj with the San Antonio Spurs and guard Drazen Petrovic with the Portland Trail Blazers.

River Warden and exercise rider Pierre Petit undergo a leisurely workout Thursday in preparation for Sunday's Arlington Million in Arlington Heights, Ill. The three-year-old colt is one of the favorites in the ninth running of the premier racing event.

Arlington brings back Million

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILL. (AP) — In the case of the Arlington Million, you can come home again.

After a one-year hiatus, the Arlington Million returns to the brand new Arlington International Racecourse on Sunday as the featured event of a four-day festival of international thoroughbred racing.

This will be the ninth running of the Million, which was run last year at Woodbine Race Course in Toronto. Arlington, located in this northwest Chicago suburb, was undergoing major construction after a devastating fire in July 1985.

The cost? Arlington owner Dick Duchossois refuses to say. Estimates for the new racetrack range from $120 million to $175 million.

The Million, with a winner's share of $600,000, started in 1981. John Henry, the great gelding, gave it immediate credibility by winning the inaugural event.

Horse racing

John Henry missed the 1982 race because of injuries when Perrault won under Lafitt Pincay Jr. and set the track record for the 1 1/4-mile event on grass in 1:58 4-5.

John Henry returned in 1983 and finished second to Tolomeo but the following year, he defeated The Bart in a thrilling photo finish.

So impressive was the race that the new track has a life-size bronze statue of John Henry edging The Bart overlooking the paddock area.

It was after that race that disaster struck. On July 31, 1985, Arlington Park burned down with the Million scheduled a month later.

Other tracks bid for the event but Duchossois, determined the race would be held, said, "The Million started at Arlington and it belonged here" despite the fire.

The estimates were it would take two to three months to demolish the ruins and clear away the debris, but Duchossois undertook the challenge and had crews working 20 hours a day.

"We had backups for everyone who worked," Duchossois said, "and there were crossovers of the various unions. Plumbers helped carpenters and carpenters helped the painters."

The job was completed two days ahead of schedule and the "Miracle Million" was held in a country-fair atmosphere. Striped tents dotted the landscape, bands played Gay '90s tunes and people wore straw hats with streaming ribbons.

Finley glows over football

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Charles O. Finley, the man who gave fans orange baseballs and brilliantly colored uniforms, has invented another eye-popper: the fluorescent football.

A regulation high school ball sporting eight yellow fluorescent stripes running along the seams will be snapped from center Friday night in a high school game in LaPorte, Finley's hometown.

The former owner of the Oakland Athletics baseball franchise has never been shy about promoting his past sporting innovations. Nothing's changed.

"I call it the football of the future," Finley said Thursday in a telephone interview from his Chicago office.

"For years we've known the lighting at high school stadiums for football has been inadequate," he said. "I've been thinking about this kooky may be a good idea," Schindler said. He gave permission to the Indiana High School Athletic Association to waive the rules on football stripes and try the ball in a game.

"You certainly could see the thing, and that's the intent," said Bob Gardner, assistant commissioner of the IHSAA, who witnessed the ball's debut last Friday in a game between Shelbyville and Greenfield Central. "It made the game easier to follow."

While fans might like the ready visibility, players may not always find it an advantage.

"Football is a game of deception," Schindler said. "Who has the ball, and where's the play going. A visually enhanced football may make it more difficult for the offense to keep the defense from knowing where the ball is."

for quite some time. If a football was striped properly it would be easier for everybody to see."

So Finley found a fluorescent paint that clings to pigskin and then went knocking on the door of high school football coaches.

Dick Schindler, head of the rules committee of the National Federation of State High School Associations in Kansas City, says he's willing to run with Finley's ball, at least experimentally.

Wilkins joins $14.5-million neighborhood

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Hawks forward Dominique Wilkins signed a five-year contract Thursday, reportedly worth $14.5 million, and said joining the NBA's top money-makers was "a great neighborhood to be in."

At a news conference after the signing, Wilkins and Hawks President Stan Kasten refused to confirm The Atlanta Journal-Constitution's report of the $14.5

million figure, but Wilkins said the amount was "somewhere around there."

At that rate, Wilkins, who has led Atlanta's rise to a top contender over the past four years, would make an average of $2.9 million annually and would be the league's fifth-highest paid player. The newspapers said New York's Patrick Ewing tops the list at an average of $3.5 million a year.

Wilkins negotiated a contract that had two years remaining at $1.4 million each. He will be 34 years old when the new contract expires.

Wilkins, who has averaged 26 points a game over his seven NBA seasons, said that with financial concerns out of the way he can concentrate on basketball. The Hawks have won 50 or more games in each of the past four seasons but have faltered in the playoffs.

'Parenthood' critic duo finds movie has its ups and downs

Locke and Meg Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Unlike her older brother, Meg Peterseim is a kind, loving, soft-hearted person who thought "Parenthood" was warm, witty and charming. Not trusting him to appreciate such qualities, she has decided to pipe in this week with her opinions of the film.

Locke usually hates films about children unless the little guttersnipes are possessed by demons or at least menaced by rabid animals. But he must admit he found "Parenthood" quite enjoyable. Steve Martin, who couldn't make a good movie to save his life in the early '80s, now seems unable to do any wrong. And any film that has Keanu Reeves playing a drag-racing teen and stating, "I'm stupid, OK?" can't be all bad in Locke's book. Meg, on the other hand, sees in Reeves a most triumphant husband-type figure... but she's always been partial to drag racing.

Locke was extremely frightened by the appearance of yet another Phoenix child in "Parenthood." This one's name is Leaf (the curse of silly hippy parents), and you can tell he's a Phoenix because his hair hangs down in his face just like big brother River's. Meg doesn't think Locke should be so darn quick to make fun of odd first names.

Locke was amazed by the parallel autism that can be drawn from the careers of "Parenthood" director Ron Howard and "When Harry Met Sally..." director Rob Reiner. Both acted in successful television sit-coms ("Happy Days" and "All in the Family"), both had nicknames that haunt them to this day ("Opie Cunningham" and "Meathead"), their first films were wacky comedies ("Night Shift" and "This is Spinal Tap"), their second films were light, sweet romances ("Splash" and "The Sure Thing"), their third films were dripping with nostalgia and sentimentality ("Cocoon" and "Stand by Me"), their fourth films were fantasies ("Willow" and "The Princess Bride") — and now both have made comedies centering on adult problems. Meg doesn't need 10-cent film-theory words like "parallel auterurism" to make points nobody really cares about anyway.

As in any Ron Howard film, half the fun is trying to spot Clint Howard. Meg sorta likes the concept of directors hiring their siblings, but that's only because Locke has duped her into believing he's actually going to be successful someday. Locke, on the other hand, is counting on Meg to get a real job soon so he can sponge off her until he sells a screenplay. Meg thinks Locke's pedaling with a loose chain.

Both Peterseim kids had fun watching actual parents in the audience trying to cover their kids' ears everytime someone onscreen talked about vibrators, oral sex, diaphragms or drag racing. They were pleased to discover that though "Parenthood" is a film about families, it's not a family film. Of course, this is coming from two children whose first cinematic family outing was to see "Animal House."

Locke was loving "Parenthood," especially toward the end when he thought that the movie message was going to be "a family that drag-races together," stays together." But then came the epilogue, and people started spitting out babies left and right like some Aldous Huxley production line. Meg doesn't know or care who Aldous Huxley is.

But Locke, being a cynical bastard, was frightened by such a dangerous ending to such a nice film. He felt that "Parenthood" lulled the viewer into a happy, carefree euphoria and then slipped in a heinously irresponsible "Go forth and multiply" message. "Sure! You've screwed up the kids you have, you can't make your marriage work, or aren't sure if you're ready for a family, just go out and make more spuds! That'll make everything hunky-dory!" screamed Locke after the film. ("Why's the snack bar closed!" screamed Meg after the film.)

Locke also felt the roller coaster story at the end of the film was about as subtle as a cement truck and suggested that the filmmakers just put a red light in the corner of the screen that flashes "important thematic metaphor." Meg thinks flashing big words on the screen like that could be dangerous to her colored contacts. The whole roller coaster theme seemed to make sense to her — she grooves on the idea of going along for the ride and enjoying it. But everybody who knows Meg knows that. She figures hey, if you can't enjoy the ride at least you can polish the fenders. (Meg happens to be a very large Billy Joel fan. This says a lot about Meg's taste in art.)

Unlike Meg, who usually goes to the movies when there aren't any good reruns of "Facts of Life" on, Locke attends movies for a living and can't afford to just laugh and leave it at that. Meg, hardworking gal she is, guffaws loudly at Locke's notion of making a living.

Disgruntled, Brando ends film career

TORONTO (AP) — Marlon Brando, who hasn't appeared on screen in nine years, says the film he just finished is the last he'll make — and it's a bomb.

"It's horrible," the Oscar-winning actor said Wednesday of "The Freshman." "It's going to be a flop, but after this, I'm retiring. I'm so fed up."

"This picture, except for the Canadian crew, was an extremely unpleasant experience. I wish I hadn't finished with a stinker."

His grey hair combed straight back, an overweight Brando wore a big neck brace to ease muscles strained while skating for the first time in 20 years — required of his role in the movie, in which he stars with Matthew Broderick.

Brando, 65, who shot the Tri-Star Pictures production in Canada for the last 12 weeks, also told the Toronto Globe and Mail that he's fed up with kowtowing to the Hollywood publicity system and adores Canada.

"I've come from New York, which is a warthog straight from hell. To sing my swan song here is very pleasant," he said in the mumble that turned Broadway on its ear when he made his name on stage in the late '40s.

Brando said he never really liked acting.

"But there was nothing that would pay you that kind of money for that kind of foolishness," he said. "This is my last day," he said at the conclusion of the interview. "Two more shots, and I'm done with this madness. ... You can't imagine how happy I am."

DON'T PUT YOUR FAMILY

ON THE ENDANGERED SPECIES LIST.

Of all the creatures on earth, only people were given the ability to reason. Then why is it that each year hundreds of deaths in Iowa are directly attributed to people not wearing seat belts? We devote great effort to saving our wildlife from extinction, but the species that is really endangered is people who don't wear seat belts. Save your family from extinction. Buckle up.

Stradlin: When ya gotta go, ya...

PHOENIX (AP) — Izzy Stradlin, a guitarist for the rock group Guns N' Roses, has been freed on $5,000 bail on charges of urinating in a jetliner's galley area.

Stradlin was arrested Sunday at Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport during a scheduled stop of a USAir flight.

Geffen Records publicist Bryn Bridenthal said Stradlin was angry at having to wait to use the plane's restroom and "relieving himself in the galley was just his way of expressing himself."

Stradlin, whose real name is Jeffrey Dean Isbell, was charged with interfering with the duties of the plane's crew. He was released Tuesday.

Lyric Opera bans Pavarotti

CHICAGO (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti and his high Cs have been banished from the Lyric Opera, where officials say they are tired of hearing the same old song after he once again canceled his appearances for the season.

"Lyric Opera is now unwilling to take the risk of one more cancellation by Mr. Pavarotti," said general director Ardis Krainik. "I'm very sad about this. ... But I didn't have any choice. A lot of people have been very mad about his cancellations."

The last straw came when Pavarotti, 53, canceled six performances as Cavardossi in Puccini's "Tosca," scheduled at the Civic Opera House for late September and early October, citing an inflamed sciatic nerve, Krainik said.

Pavarotti has backed out of 26 of his 41 scheduled performances with the Lyric since 1981, she said.

Pavarotti's New York-based manager, Herbert Breslin, said he spoke with the tenor Thursday at his home in Modena, Italy, and Pavarotti issued a statement saying that he agreed "there should be no future collaboration" with the Lyric.

"It is true that most of the cancellations in my career have happened with the Lyric Opera of Chicago, so I understand very well the disappointment that they have," Pavarotti said. "I have never been a canceler, and I do not like to cancel my appearances in Chicago because they have a beautiful audience and theater there."

"I can say that if I am not good luck to the Lyric Opera of Chicago, then perhaps the Lyric Opera of Chicago is not good luck to me."

Breslin said he considered Krainik's reaction "a little bit irrational."

"I think she gets the impression that he is doing this out of spite for the Lyric Opera of Chicago, which is absolutely wrong," he said.

Breslin had written and advised the Lyric that the tenor "cannot subject himself to the rigors of a live operatic performance" because the inflamed sciatic nerve, near the hip, left him unable to move extensively on stage.

The singer requires two months of therapy, Breslin said.

Krainik said she "did everything possible to try to convince" Pavarotti to appear, even suggesting that he sing the role from a chair.

"His medical problem, while certainly a concern, is apparently not affecting his voice," she said. The singer rejected the idea.

A replacement for Pavarotti in "Tosca" is expected to be named within several days, Newman said.
