Scrutiny targets organizations

Memo says Student Legal Services may replace attorney

Deborah Gluba
 The Daily Iowan

The supervising attorney of UI Student Legal Services will be replaced in February, according to a memorandum signed by Phillip Jones, UI associate vice president for academic affairs.

In addition, SLS is only the first of several student organizations that will come under closer scrutiny, according to UI administrators and student government leaders.

"We're in the process of assessing the student commissions,"

Jones said. "This legal service happens to be one of the first ones we've looked at, and there are some modifications in the works."

The appointment of SLS supervising attorney James Prescott will not be renewed, according to a September 14 memorandum Jones sent to UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona.

The senate and the UI Collegiate Associations Council jointly supervise the student organizations.

Dan Shanes, CAC President, said student government should give weight to UI administration comments, suggestions and valid concerns, but said decisions are made within student government.

"It's my understanding that Prescott has a contract with student government, with the university through student government as we are part of the university," Shanes said. "My limited understanding of American jurisprudence would lead me to believe that contracts are binding. I don't know that people who are not parties to contracts really have much to say about them."

An across-the-board audit of the operating procedures and supervisory mechanisms of all commissioned student organizations is now under way, Jones said. It is an attempt to bring SLS and the other commissions into compliance with the UI Student Association Constitution, Jones said.

"Based on my review of the situation regarding Mr. Prescott, I believe there is a need to modify the Student Legal Service," Jones wrote in the memo. "Mr. Prescott's appointment may not be extended beyond January 31, See Prescott, Page 5A

SLS director says new offices jeopardize client confidentiality

Tonya Feit
 The Daily Iowan

If the UI administration has its way, Student Legal Services will soon have a new address.

But officials of Student Legal Services, a student-sponsored program that handles the legal needs of UI students, say they cannot give up their offices in the first floor of the Union.

The UI administration would like to move SLS's offices to the second floor of the Iowa House so the Office of Campus Programs can expand into the space.

According to SLS Director James Prescott, the proposed offices would jeopardize the confidentiality of SLS clients.

Five hotel rooms in the Iowa House were proposed to serve as office space for SLS. The rooms will be bordered on either side by public hotel rooms and are separated by a general hallway. Three of the rooms are on one side of the hall and two are on the other.

Prescott said SLS has been told that the rooms will not be modified in any way.

"Along the public hallway, anyone can hear what the interns (third-year law students who counsel clients for SLS) are talking about

19 killed as school bus plunges into pit

ALTON, Texas (AP) — A bus crowded with youngsters on their way to school Thursday plunged more than 40 feet into a water-filled pit after being struck by a delivery truck. 19 students were killed and 65 other people were sent to hospitals.

Dazed students scrambled out of the submerged bus and stood on it, screaming for help. Rescuers dove in 12 feet of water to pull out survivors and the dead trapped in the bus.

Passersby pulled youngsters out of the bus, as notebooks and school papers floated on the water. Four boats, firefighters from six departments and about 10 divers helped in the rescue.

"They were just trapped. We had to break the glass of the windows to get in," said Al Nye, a diver who pulled seven bodies from the bus.

The driver had picked up his last student en route to nearby Mission High School when the bus collided with a soft-drink truck about 7:40 a.m. CDT at an intersection just east of Alton, just north of the U.S.-Mexico border.

A witness, Mike Herrera, said he saw the truck hit the school bus from behind, pushing it off the road about 20 feet and into an unfenced gravel pit that was filled with water. The truck remained alongside the road.

Herrera said he dove in and helped rescue three students.

Sgt. David Baker of the state Department of Public Safety said he believed the truck was traveling north and the bus west when they collided. Both drivers were being treated at hospitals. Their conditions were withheld.

Roads were dry and the weather was clear at the time of the accident.

Authorities used a crane to pull the bus from the pit and planned to drag the pit later in a search for more victims. It was not immediately known how many people were aboard the 83-seat bus.

All the dead were 12 to 18 years old, said Mike Cox, a public safety spokesman in Austin. A temporary morgue was set up at a civic building in Mission.

Parents swamped phone lines at the school and police office as news of the accident spread. Ambulances were sent to an information center for parents when some of them became hysterical, said Mission firefighter Ruben Ortiz.

"We're going crazy here," Ortiz said. The parents "are very hysterical. They have really lost control, some of them."

Students brought by ambulance to McAllen Medical Center were "soaked from head to toe, muddy

Hugo leads Southerners to evacuate

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Hurricane Hugo advanced faster and with renewed fury Thursday on Georgia and South Carolina as a flood of coastal residents grabbed what they could carry and fled inland on jammed highways.

"We're not going to take any chances," said Lamar Davis, a bartender on St. Simons Island off southern Georgia, who stole a last glance at a pounding surf before leaving with his wife and 4-year-old daughter.

The leading edge of Hugo, whose winds muscled up to 125 mph from 105 mph the day before, was most likely to hit between Savannah, Ga., and Charleston any time after 8 p.m. A hurricane warning was in effect between Fernandina Beach, Fla., and Oregon Inlet, N.C.

At 3 p.m. Hugo was 220 miles from Savannah and bearing down at 20 mph. It was expected to turn gradually to the north, according to the National Weather Service.

The timing of the landfall was critical because of the storm's tidal surge, a dome of water 10 to 15 feet high that would feed a normal 5-foot high tide that peaks after 2 a.m.

"On top of that will be waves, and so (on) ... barrier islands (in) many places the buildings will be swept clean off of those islands," Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, said from Coral Gables, Fla.

Evacuees queued up at gas stations and stripped store shelves of bottled water, bread and batteries. Officials warned coastal dwellers not to linger because gale force winds and flash floods could block

Bush talks of need for new summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Thursday, opening three days of high-level talks likely to set a general time frame for a super-power summit and spur chemical and nuclear weapons cutbacks.

After nearly two hours of discussions, Shevardnadze said the two sides had not set a date for a summit between Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev but "we have concluded that a summit is necessary. There is no doubt about that."

The high-level meetings began with a White House session attended by Bush, Shevardnadze and Secretary of State James Baker. The discussions will continue between Baker and Shevardnadze on Friday and Saturday at a wilderness lodge near Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Baker said there was "a full discussion of a summit" and that "we hope to have a general time frame for a summit which we could announce while we're in Wyoming."

Shevardnadze talked with reporters in the White House driveway after before getting into a waiting limousine. He said his talks with Baker probably would set "a general time frame" for a Bush-Gorbachev summit. The Soviet official said, "I think it is entirely

2 die in USAir crash; pilot aborted takeoff

NEW YORK (AP) — A USAir pilot sought permission to abort takeoff moments before his jetliner slid into the East River, killing two passengers, but did not say what the problem was, officials said Thursday.

Many of the 59 survivors praised crew members, fellow passengers and rescuers for quick action after the Boeing 737 plunged into the water at 11:29 p.m. EDT Wednesday.

Investigators recovered the plane's two flight recorders, and National Transportation Safety Board officials interviewed the crew to try to learn the cause of the crash. The three pieces of the jet remained in the water off LaGuardia Airport.

USAir Chairman Edwin Colodny declined to discuss any details or possible causes of the crash, saying the NTSB had jurisdiction.

"The captain is taking advice of his own counsel," Colodny said at a news conference. He declined to identify the pilot or other crew members or describe their experience, other than to say they had been based in Baltimore and had worked for Piedmont Aviation before its merger with USAir in August.

Flight 5050, bound for Charlotte, N.C., was accelerating down the runway in a light rain when the control tower acknowledged the pilot's request to abort and cleared him to turn onto the last taxiway before the end of the runway.

"There was no indication of why he was aborting," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar in Washington. "Until we know why the guy aborted the takeoff, we have no way of knowing the cause of the accident."

"The pilot seemed to be accelerating but didn't have enough power to get the plane up," said passenger Larry Martin. "He put on the brakes. The plane took a dip and the next thing I knew all hell broke loose."

The plane broke into three parts about 50 to 100 feet into Bowery Bay, its front sections resting above the water on a trestle that held runway lights, its back sections submerged. The two women who died were seated in the rear.

"People were on top of each other. People were screaming," said Martin, who was traveling with his wife, Valerie. "There was the smell of gas. Everyone was saying 'Get out! Get out! Get out!'"

Stunned passengers scrambled out doors and onto wings. Some escaped down an emergency chute and found themselves in about 25 feet of water. Many clung to wings or grasped floating timbers.

"I said, 'Hell, this thing is going to blow up,'" said passenger Fred O'Loughlin. "Then all of a sudden I was in the water by myself."

"The crew was great. ... They were pitching people out and down the slide," said passenger Tom Newberry, 27. "We just grabbed on to a big piece of wood and held on for dear life."

Missing art found intact inside closet

Sara Langenberg
 The Daily Iowan

The erotic art display which mysteriously disappeared from the UI Art Building last Thursday has been found.

The morning after it disappeared, the photo collage of nude males was found in a small closet in the Art Building by two faculty members.

According to the artist, Darrin Jackson, the piece was found in what he described as "a janitor's closet," only moments before he spoke to students in an art colloquium about his work.

Last week in The Daily Iowan, Jackson said he felt a faculty member may have taken the piece out of the Checkered Space exhibit area because the UI Art Building was then undergoing inspection by a two-member 10-year review committee.

Lobbyists: Legislators waste time reining in special interests

DES MOINES (AP) — The Legislature is wasting its time trying to rein in special interests because they fill a natural void and "you can't keep us from doing that," three of the most powerful lobbies told legislators Thursday.

"I don't think $500 or $1,000 or $2,000 to a legislative candidate is going to corrupt this Legislature," said Chuck Gifford of the United Auto Workers.

"We represent the little people," said Ed Failor of Iowans for Tax Relief, a Muscatine-based group that spent more than $100,000 on legislative candidates last year.

In a blunt exchange leaders of three of the best-financed political action committees in Iowa told the Campaign Finance Disclosure committee proposals for changes were "illogical" and "short-sighted."

Gov. Terry Branstad suggested daily reporting of contributions to candidates for governor during the closing weeks of the campaign and said gubernatorial candidates and members of their family should file full financial disclosure

1987-NOW: THE INTIFADA

THE PALESTINIANS WILL NEVER KNEEL

Seven years have passed since the tragic massacres in the Palestinian refugee camps, Sabra & Shatilla. For three days September 17-19, 1982, Christian Phalangist troops gunned down 3270 Palestinian and Lebanese civilians living inside the camps. Armed Israeli soldiers surrounded the camps and prevented the people inside from escaping, thereby ensuring their deaths. This atrocity continued for three days without the knowledge of the world.

"THE MASSACRE IS THE SHAME OF THE STATE, OF THE GOVERNMENT, OF THE ARMY...WE HAVE ALL BEEN MADE ACCOMPLICES," wrote an editor for the Israeli Jerusalem Post.

Today another kind of massacre is happening. For the past 21 months Palestinians in the Occupied Territories have been engaged in a just struggle for dignity and freedom. The Israeli occupation authorities have been acting with unprecedented brutality that so far claimed the lives of more than 900 Palestinian civilians and left thousands of others injured.

Hawkeye Express Discount cards will show up in mailboxes

Virginia Roudabush
Special to The Daily Iowan

Students tired of receiving only bills and junk fliers in their mailboxes have something better to look forward to.

The UI Student Senate will soon be mailing all registered students the 1990 Hawkeye Express Discount cards, which are good for discounts at several local businesses.

The round coupons — similar to plastic gift cards — offer price reductions on various services and products from about 30 area merchants when the card is displayed at the time of the sale.

This year, Student Senate hopes to increase distribution of the cards and more effectively explain their function to users. In past years, not everyone was aware of the cards, and for those that did have one, it wasn't always clear which local merchandise the discounts applied to.

Part of the confusion stemmed from the fact that although the discount cards featured each individual merchant's name or logo, their actual size was not large enough to permit a description of each discount offered from each store.

"We had hoped all merchants would offer the same discount, but that wouldn't work because of the variety of merchants participating," said Lori Meyers, a Student Senate executive associate.

To solve the problem this year, the Senate will mail a letter along with the card, explaining which merchants participate and the discount offered by each. The letter will also include information on the Senate itself and the activities it sponsors.

"Faculty and staff will all be sent postcards to notify them the cards are available," Meyers added. "If they would like to receive a card, one will be sent upon request."

The Hawkeye Discount Cards serve a dual purpose: In addition to giving students discounts, they help fund student scholarships.

All merchants featured on the cards must donate at least $300 toward scholarships offered by the Senate. Last year, the Senate offered 15 scholarships of $250 each from moneys earned in the project and members are hopeful that this number will increase in the 1990-91 school year. Interested students may contact the Student Senate office for scholarship applications.

To aid this year's campaign, radio station KKRQ FM 101 has donated air time to advertise the cards. Trivia questions about the participating merchants will be announced and the winner will receive special awards from that merchant.

So far, interest in the Hawkeye Discount Cards has been substantial.

"If the number of people that have inquired about obtaining new cards is any indication then we have hit upon a worthwhile project," said one Student Senate representative.

The black-and-gold cards, along with the information letter, are scheduled to be sent out in the next week and a half.

Until the new cards arrive, the 1989 Hawkeye Express cards, which were to expire August 31, will still be honored.

Growing UI Honors program offers wealth of opportunity

Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

You wouldn't guess it, but the quaint, Victorian-style blue house next to Daum Residence Hall is the unassuming home of one of the UI's most important student academic programs.

Step inside the front door and you'll find the UI Honors Program, which boasts a membership of more than 1,400 students and offers a goldmine of academic opportunity for those who make the grade.

In the last five years, the program has grown substantially, according to Sandra Barkan, acting director of Shambaugh Honors House. Barkan said this year's largest-ever entering class of 450 students has created an even bigger pool of potential honors students.

"We're very excited this year," she said. "The Honors Program offers these students a wide variety of opportunities to take advantage of faculty and resources."

UI freshmen are automatically invited to join the program if they received a minimum score of 29 on the ACT and were in the top 10 percent of their graduating high-school class. But any UI student who has a 3.2 cumulative grade-point average is eligible to enter the program after a brief orientation appointment.

many ways through the program, Barkan said. She cited one-on-one interaction with professors and crucial access to the university's research resources as the kinds of opportunities program members have.

UI Senior Lyn Raue said she receives information on available scholarships, which she called one of the more valuable benefits of the program.

"The honors program has kept me informed of a lot of scholarships to apply for," Raue said. "The advice and assistance that I got from Sandy has been one of the most beneficial things I got out of honors."

Barkan said the Honors Scholars Research Program plays an especially important part when it comes to offering students unique opportunities.

"This is a research university, and we have faculty with national and international reputations based on their research success," Barkan said. "Students can take advantage of that. This program allows students to work with faculty in faculty research as research assistants. These students earn three credit hours for working approximately 10 hours a week."

A student in the honors program is also eligible to receive "honors designation" by arranging with a professor to do supplemental work in a class.

"Students in the College of Liberal Arts may approach the faculty about writing an extra paper or doing some outside reading for the class to have the course designated as an honors course on their transcript," Barkan explained.

Close contact with his professors has convinced UI senior Thad Metz that the UI Honors Program has given him an added advantage during college.

"It's allowed me to get to know my professors," he said. "It's given me more contact with my professors, which has made me a better student and given me a better education."

Pike says 2 boat licenses to be approved

DES MOINES (AP) — The chairman of the Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission predicted Thursday that commission members will approve licenses for at least two gambling boats and probably more.

"I'm only one vote, but I can tell you that one isn't right," said L.C. "Bud" Pike, a Grundy Center banker who chairs the five-member commission.

Asked if the group would approve at least one boat to ply each of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, Pike said, "more than that."

"There are an awful lot of qualified applicants out there," he said in an interview during a break in a commission meeting.

The commission approved rules for those wishing to obtain a riverboat gambling license. The commission voted to accept license applications November 15 through January 1. The applications will be confidential until the deadline.

The commission also announced the resignation of member LaVonne Mydland of Rock Rapids. Mydland is the only member other than Pike among the original five appointed by the governor in July 1983. Commission director Mick Lura said Mydland stepped aside to spend more time with an ill daughter who lives in Washington state.

Lura said the governor has not decided when he will appoint a replacement.

Charges dropped against 2 arrested in Iowa abduction

GRANT CITY, Mo. (AP) — Charges against two of the four people arrested Tuesday for allegedly abducting an Iowa man have been dismissed after investigators determined the two had "just been along for the ride."

Ed Manring, the Worth County prosecutor, said he had filed misdemeanor charges of marijuana possession and resisting arrest against all four, who fled police early Tuesday in a car belonging to Scott A. Potter, 19, of Perry, Iowa.

But Manring said he dismissed charges Wednesday against James Junior Crites, 24, and Kimberly Kaye Holcomb, 23, both of Rogers, Ark., and both were released. The other two people, Kenneth Eugene Loy, 27, who listed addresses in both Rogers, Ark., and Forest City, Iowa, and Charlie D. Phillips, 27, of Gravette, Ark., remained in custody on the charges, Manring said.

Since Worth County does not have a jail, one of the men was being held in the Gentry County jail at Albany.

Drug agent indicted for conspiracy, tax evasion and laundering currency

DES MOINES (AP) — A grand jury has handed up indictments against a federal drug agent, his wife and the owner of a construction company on charges of conspiracy, tax evasion and laundering "substantial amounts of currency," officials said Thursday.

Named in the federal grand jury indictment were Dennis Harker, Drug Enforcement Administration special agent, his wife Mary Ann and Susan Terry, who owns SKT Construction in West Des Moines.

Terry was honored as one of five recipients of the "women of enterprise award" sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration last year, said William Kutmus, her lawyer.

Kutmus called her "a spokeswoman for women in non-traditional positions."

The 11-count indictment charges Harker and Terry with "use of an interstate facility to promote an illegal activity." It alleges that between 1986 and 1988 Harker and his wife "spent, invested and profited by cash transactions exceeding $1 million."

Kutmus said he had advised Terry not to comment on the facts of the case, but "the charges themselves are ruinous to her and her business."

Kutmus said he would enter an innocent plea at her arraignment. "She feels she is wholly innocent and that the charges are very ridiculous," Kutmus said.

Arraignment was set for October 2. The indictment also says Harker loaned thousands of dollars in cash to other drug agents.

Harker and Terry were charged with using a business they established "to launder substantial amounts of currency which Harker had acquired, and to funnel the cash through what would appear to be legitimate business transactions and loans between the two partners."

There was no mention of drugs in the indictment, and U.S. Atty. Joe Beck refused to elaborate.

"We will have no comment," said Beck. "We don't want to go beyond that."

Kutmus described Terry as a widow with two young children whose husband died in a construction accident.

Harker is now assigned to the DEA in Miami.

88-year-old woman forced to close home

DES MOINES (AP) — The operator of a small nursing home in Maquoketa has agreed to close the home and never open another.

But Muriel Hoffman, 88, owner of the Hoffman Residential Care Facility, said she took good care of residents, including one who weighed just 55 pounds last spring.

Hoffman said the resident was thin to begin with and refused to eat.

"She would only drink. If you tried to feed her, she would hold the food in her cheeks like a squirrel. I liked her, and the good Lord knows I took care of her. Now I'm getting my 'thank you,'" Hoffman said.

In an agreement with the Iowa Department of Inspection and Appeals, Hoffman agreed to transfer all of the residents to other facilities and to "never operate a health facility or apply for a license in Iowa again."

Department spokesman John Easley said Wednesday the department's plan to fine Hoffman $5,000 was dropped when she agreed not to open another home. Hoffman said she agreed to the terms because she didn't think she would be able to comply with requirements to update her home, which was licensed for seven patients.

State inspectors said the only medical history on the woman who weighed 55 pounds last spring showed that she weighed 116 pounds in 1981 and was admitted to the Hoffman home in 1987.

"She was in a deteriorating state, had teeth which were stubs and could not eat," inspectors said. Easley said the woman was placed in an intermediate care facility.

Hoffman, who operated the home for 30 years, said she is unhappy about the state's actions.

"I'm hurt, I'm badly hurt, and I've shed many tears over it. I'd like people to work in a residential home for a month."

1990." Prescott declined to comment on the situation.

"Because of the possibility of litigation with regard to these matters, I think it would be most fair to all parties for me to make no comment," Prescott said in a prepared statement.

Jones' memorandum described a complaint lodged against Prescott for a "lack of professional behavior," as well as acting in a "belligerent," "insulting" and "hostile" manner at a March 20 meeting. In addition, the memorandum documented a separate instance of "rude behavior" toward a UI graduate student.

Prescott, the supervising attorney at SLS for the past four years, said he was not notified of significant problems prior to the release of Jones' memorandum.

"I have not been informed of any significant problems with Student Legal Services, and until I am informed of any problems, I am unable to comment," Prescott said.

The memo also said, "While serious concerns have been raised about Mr. Prescott's performance and behavior, the UI (Student Association) has had no mechanism to address the issues."

Jones said SLS is the first of many student government commissions that will be reviewed. SCOPE and BIJOU are among the student groups for which the administration will consider organizational, procedural and operational changes, he said.

On Wednesday, Jones said he would not comment about specific personnel matters except with other administration officials or with the persons directly involved in the matter.

Rojas-Cardona said the UI commission review was requested and welcomed by the Student Senate. He said the recommendations may become guidelines for a student strategic planning process.

All the student organizations, including SLS, will be strengthened in the long run, he said.

"It's not that Student Legal Services is doing a bad job — we just want to keep tabs on them," Rojas-Cardona said.

Rojas-Cardona described Prescott as a good person who has done a good job at SLS. However, the position is temporary, and a new appointment may be made at any time, he said.

Rojas-Cardona added Student Senate has not had an opportunity to review Prescott this year.

denied that he or any other faculty member removed the piece.

Thursday, Tomasini said he still does not know how to explain the display's disappearance or reappearance.

"(The piece) was found Friday morning, and that's about all I know about it," Tomasini said. "It was found by a teaching assistant and a faculty member who were on their way through a small corridor which led into a lecture room."

The corridor is very small and is usually only used to gain access to light switches, Tomasini said, adding that early last Friday morning when the lights were switched on, no one saw the piece there.

"I can't believe that anyone could have used (the corridor) without noticing (the display)," Tomasini said.

Jackson said he is glad to have the display back.

on the phone with regard to any case they may be handling," Prescott said. "And you know how hotel rooms are."

SLS submitted the proposed floor plans of this arrangement to the Iowa Bar Association Committee on Professional Ethics and Conduct to determine if the offices are appropriate for legal services.

The arrangement was rejected by the committee as a violation of the ethical and disciplinary codes for attorneys.

"It is a basic tenet of the profession that a client's confidence be protected," said Hedo Zacherie, who submitted the committee's determination. "Full compliance would seem to be impossible in the proposed new offices because of the public exposure, open doors and general arrangement."

In addition to ethical problems, the proposed office space also hampers the supervision of the law students, Prescott said.

The Iowa Supreme Court ruled that the interns for SLS must be supervised by a practicing attorney. The hotel rooms will not allow Prescott to oversee the interns' daily actions, he said.

"I will not know if they're in their office reading Sports Illustrated or working on a case file, or talking on the telephone with a client or adversary or a girlfriend or a boyfriend," Prescott said.

Phillip Jones, UI dean of student services, said SLS will be moving to the hotel rooms as soon as their phones can be installed.

"This is not an area (where) the Iowa Bar Association Committee of Professional Ethics has any jurisdiction," Jones said. "It has no bearing on the decision. Anything that has been said so far contrary to that is incorrect."

But Prescott said that violating the ethics committee's binding decision could force the committee to bring disciplinary action against Prescott, which could include revoking his license.

"The fact of the matter is that the ethics committee ruled that SLS cannot move up there," Prescott said. "I don't understand how the administration can require us to do what the Iowa State Bar Association Ethics Committee has ruled we cannot do. If Dean Jones is saying we are moving, he is saying there will be no SLS."

with no shoes," said Susie Ramon, a student nurse.

Ralph Cantu, Mission school superintendent, canceled all extracurricular activities for the weekend "because we've had a tragedy. How can you be cheering at a football game when something like this has happened?"

Cox said it was the worst school bus accident in Texas history. The two worst such accidents in United States history occurred in Kentucky. In 1988, 24 children and three adults on a church outing died in a fiery collision near Carrollton. In 1959, 27 people were killed when a bus went into a creek in Prestonsburg.

Eighteen survivors and one firefighter were taken to McAllen Medical Center, according to spokeswoman Judy Gomez. Their conditions were withheld.

Seven people were taken to HCA Rio Grande Medical Center in McAllen, and were admitted for observation, according to a spokeswoman.

About 40 people were taken to Mission General Hospital, but hospital spokeswoman Linda Thayer would not release any additional information.

possible that we'll have something more definite for you in Wyoming."

Bush said on Monday he felt he was "under no rush" to have a summit.

Bush's talks with Shevardnadze ran nearly twice as long as had been scheduled. The Soviet official said he "did not come here empty handed."

Some U.S. officials said Baker would not come empty handed either.

Speaking on condition they not be identified, the officials said Baker would present a proposal to abolish travel restrictions on American and Soviet visitors in each other's countries.

Acceptance by Shevardnadze would end a relic of the Cold War that is a nuisance but has little practical effect, an expert on U.S.-Soviet relations said Thursday.

It would lift virtually all travel restrictions on Soviet diplomats, trade representatives and journalists, the sources said.

"It strikes me as a sensible thing to do at this stage," said Raymond Garthoff, senior fellow in foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution and a former U.S. ambassador to Bulgaria.

"I don't think it's a terribly important matter, but I think it's an appropriate, a reasonable thing to do."

The late Soviet dictator Josef Stalin placed severe travel restrictions on foreigners in the Soviet Union in the 1950s, and the United States reciprocated with restrictions on travel by diplomats and other visitors from the Soviet Union and other Eastern Bloc countries.

These restrictions were gradually eliminated by agreements between the Soviet satellites and the United States in the 1970s. Garthoff said he signed the last such agreement in 1978, when he was ambassador to Bulgaria.

"From then on I and my staff in Bulgaria were able to travel anywhere in Bulgaria that any other foreigner was, which meant in effect the whole country," the Brookings scholar said.

Reciprocal travel restrictions by the United States and the Soviet Union remained, however, with close to 90 percent of the Soviet Union closed to Americans and much of the United States off limits to visiting Soviets.

The Navy moved ships out of coastal harbors to ride out the storm at sea. Army bases in coastal states moved helicopters inland or into shelters.

In South Carolina, which was in a state of emergency, Gov. Carroll Campbell dispatched 400 National Guardsmen to assist a mandatory evacuation of coastal barrier islands and shorefront. About one-fifth of the state's 3.1 million residents live in eight coastal counties.

By early afternoon, the windswept streets of the resort island of Hilton Head were deserted. Stores were fortified with boards and most homes were empty. State troopers guarded the island's entrance.

HMB gets in gear for Cyclone Stadium

Through rain and sleet, 'Ten hut and HO!'

The Hawkeye football team is not the only squad that has used this week to prepare for a trip to Ames to perform in Cyclone Stadium Saturday afternoon.

The Hawkeye Marching Band is also preparing for their moment on the field.

Approximately 280 members spent this week working out the quirks of last week's show and rehearsing new drills to perform for the capacity crowd.

Daily Iowan Photo Editor Scott Norris followed the band through its practices and recorded the visual aspect of the group.

Duarte near death, bids president farewell

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Jose Napoleon Duarte on Thursday bid farewell from his deathbed to his successor, President Alfredo Cristiani, sources close to the family said.

Members of Duarte's security detail told reporters Cristiani arrived at Duarte's home Thursday morning to see him.

Duarte, 63, is dying of liver cancer that was diagnosed in June 1988. His condition has deteriorated rapidly the past two days, and his doctor says the end is near.

"President Cristiani arrived without warning, and he and President Duarte spoke. Duarte wanted to get up from the bed to accompany Cristiani to the door when he left, but his doctors prevented it," said Hector, who has been part of Duarte's personal security detail for 10 years.

Hector declined to give his full name.

Cristiani arrived before journalists had taken up watch and what the two men said to each other was not available.

Woman wins custody of embryos in court

MARYVILLE, Tenn. — A woman fighting for control of seven frozen embryos in an unprecedented divorce case on Thursday was awarded temporary custody by a judge who ruled that life begins at conception and the woman should be allowed to carry them to term.

Blount County Circuit Judge W. Dale Young, ruling in favor of Mary Sue Davis over her estranged husband, Junior Lewis Davis, declared that their embryos were children not property.

"I'm thrilled. It's definitely what I wanted," Mary Sue Davis told a news conference in Titusville, Fla., where she now lives.

Her estranged husband said he would appeal in the state court system, and potentially beyond. "They are going to force me to become a father against my wishes," he said.

Davis said she would not try to get pregnant immediately. "I'm waiting to see about the appeal then hopefully after that try to have a child," she said. "I could (try) at any time, but I have to recover from all of this and then consider starting the program."

She added that the earliest she would try to get pregnant was January.

"As far as we are aware, this is the first judicial decision which has declared an embryo a human being," said Charles Clifford, Davis' attorney, adding that he would ask the court to prevent Davis from implanting the embryos until appeals are settled.

Survey: Hospitals disposing waste properly

CHICAGO (AP) — Most hospitals are complying with federal guidelines on the disposal of infectious medical waste, but additional regulations may be needed to cover doctors' offices and other health care sites, specialists say.

A study published in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association found that 82 percent of the hospitals surveyed complied with the federal Centers for Disease Control's recommendations for infectious waste disposal.

Seventy-five percent of the hospitals in the survey complied with voluntary guidelines for waste disposal set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which has a broader classification of infectious waste than the CDC, the study said.

"I think it's generally good news that the vast majority of hospitals are in compliance with the CDC and EPA recommendations," said Dr. William Rutala, administrative director of the Department of Hospital Epidemiology of North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. "I believe it indicates the seriousness with which hospitals manage their medical waste."

Even in the cases of non-compliance, Rutala said no hospital could identify an infection problem, excluding needle-stick injuries. He also noted that the hospitals not fully complying with the CDC and EPA guidelines could still be in compliance with their state regulations.

Two freight trains collide head-on

TCHULA, Miss. — Two slow-moving freight trains collided head-on in the Mississippi Delta, slightly injuring seven Illinois Central Railroad crewmen.

Authorities were unsure why the trains were traveling in opposite directions on the same track on Wednesday, said Paul Reed, office manager with Illinois Central's Transportation Department in Chicago.

"At the moment, we can't pin down the cause," Reed said. No damage estimate was available.

A 45-car train collided with a 119-car freight, knocking off the tracks two engines and two "piggy-back" cars, Reed said. The engines and cars of the longer train remained on the rails.

Four crewmen jumped as the trains came together, said Lt. L.C. Clarke, executive officer of the Highway Patrol's Greenwood District. The seven injured crewmen were examined at a hospital for scratches and other minor injuries.

Boxer's feisty mom KO's opponent

SOUTHAMPTON, England — Boxer Tony Wilson won his fight in three rounds Thursday night after his mother climbed into the ring and hit his opponent over the head with her stiletto shoe.

When McCarthy refused to return, referee Adrian Morgan raised Tony Wilson's arms in victory, declaring McCarthy had retired.

Uproar broke out among the 1,000 spectators at The Guildhall in this south English port, where the British light heavyweight title eliminator fight between local boy McCarthy and Wilson was being staged.

The furious crowd kicked and punched Wilson before he escaped to a dressing room, sheltered by his trainer and manager Jimmy Tibbs.

"The first thing I saw was my mum in the ring, and then everything went wild," said Wilson, from Wolverhampton, central England.

"She has been watching my fights for years and nothing like this has happened before."

Police reinforcements were sent, but no one was arrested and no one was reported injured.

Angry mom socks principal in drug war

OTSEGO, Mich. — A high school's war on drugs turned violent when an angry mother socked the principal in the jaw for calling police to question her son.

The woman, whose name was withheld, was arrested Monday for assault and battery after allegedly punching Otsego High School Principal James Leyndyke, police Chief Elton Goswick said.

Leyndyke called police Friday because he suspected a student of selling drugs, Goswick said. When the youth was told police were called, he fled on foot.

The boy's mother later showed up at school, angry that police were called, Goswick said.

"She took her into the office to try to explain the situation to her," Goswick said. "It was part of his job, Goswick said. The woman then responded, 'And this is part of my job,' and she struck him on the jaw with her fist."

The 5-foot-3, 130-pound woman bruised Leyndyke's jaw, Goswick said. She has posted bond and no arraignment date has been set. The misdemeanor carries a maximum 90 days in jail.

Her son was suspended from school.

Polish convent issues tries Catholic-Jewish relations

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — A Vatican statement calling for a convent at the edge of Auschwitz to be moved has not changed the feelings of local residents who want the nuns to stay.

"This is Poland, and they (the Vatican) are very far away," said an elderly man hoeing vegetables Thursday in the well-tended garden on the convent grounds adjacent to the walls of the former German death camp.

"The nuns need to be here, and nobody has the right to throw Poles off Polish soil," said a woman who has worked more than 20 years in a bookstore inside the camp, under the cloister's shadow.

All the Poles interviewed seemed wary and refused to give their names.

Most said they had not heard of the Vatican statement in Rome Monday. It was not prominently reported in the Polish media.

The 14 nuns of the Carmelite order, who in 1984 moved into the abandoned theater used by Nazis as a storehouse during World War II, are at the center of a controversy that is straining Catholic-Jewish relations.

Monday's Vatican statement appeared aimed at persuading the Polish church to reverse its stand and honor a 1987 agreement between church representatives and Jewish leaders to move the convent.

Led by Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the primate, the Roman Catholic Church in Poland has yet to officially react to the Vatican's position.

Glemp met Wednesday in London with a British Jewish leader, and according to the state PAP news agency, "further prospects surfaced" for resolving the dispute.

Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki quietly asked fellow-Catholic journalist Stefan Wilkanowicz to help mediate the controversy.

Wilkanowicz, editor-in-chief of the monthly Znak in Krakow, said on Thursday the decision to move the convent has been settled "in principle" although many logistical and financial problems remain.

"For sure the church in Poland will make some moves now to solve this problem," said Krzysztof Kozlowski, assistant editor of the influential Tygodnik Powszechny.

A non-event

On Wednesday, one of most important local news stories, at least according to the Iowa City Press-Citizen, was a UI fraternity not hazing. A report of blindfolded men in the dining room of the Sigma Phi Epsilon chapter house turned out to be nothing more than a traditional ritual for a pledging ceremony.

Yet, despite the fact that nothing illegal or especially irregular occurred, the Press-Citizen devoted nearly a dozen inches of local news space to this non-event. Why? Because "hazing" remains a misused and overworked buzzword for any fraternity activity out of the realm of the strictly ordinary.

Hazing, as understood by much of the public, has been rendered illegal, imprudent and isolated by a succession of stringent laws and policies as well as the spread of more enlightened attitudes in collegiate communities. Incidents of brutal, inhumane and senseless mental and physical abuse commonly associated with the term have not been totally eliminated. Graphic reminders such as this week's ugly event at The University of Mississippi prove that at many institutions, the eradication of real, archaic hazing is incomplete.

But not at the UI.

For years, the hazing record of the UI's greek system has gone without a serious blemish. Harmless pranks and stunts still occur, unusual traditions are maintained and, in many chapters, pledges must still earn their membership. But the dangerous, sadistic practices that were once common elements in greek systems are ancient history at the UI.

And this widely ignored fact, for which the UI system deserves praise, is distorted and overshadowed by sensationalizing a non-event with a provocative "hazing" label.

Fighting proliferation

Next week, more than 60 nations will gather in Australia to negotiate an international chemical weapons accord. The mere existence of the event indicates global progress against such weapons.

But before the meeting has begun, already there is discord. The original agenda focused on establishing trade limits on the components of these weapons. But this week, faced with a boycott by Third World nations, Australia changed the program's focus to developing a ban on all poison gas.

Sounds good? Sounds as if developing nations are setting a proper example? In reality, those nations who caused the agenda to be changed are acting in pure self-interest.

Today, Third World nations profit by the poison gas trade. Earlier this year, for example, India arranged a deal with Iran to sell them 257 tons of thionyl chloride, a primary component in the manufacture of mustard gas. Their insistence today on unhampered trade smacks of ugly profiteering.

One aspect of their argument does have teeth, though: It is hypocritical of the United States to insist that the Third World limit trade, while it modernizes its own arsenals.

What's the solution to this? First, the United States should continue to insist on reductions in chemical arms component trade. The capability to manufacture them should be contained.

Second, U.S. negotiators at the conference should work toward a treaty to eliminate such chemicals, now that the door is open.

And third, the United States should stop building and deploying chemical weapons, so that charges of hypocrisy lose their merit. The United States can play a leadership role, but only by placing itself above reproach.

Church and state

Perched quietly in front of the Johnson County Courthouse is a relatively harmless monument listing the Ten Commandments.

Those, of course, are among the tenets upon which Christianity is based. And even if you're not Christian, they're not bad rules to live by.

"Thou shalt not kill; honor your mother and father; thou shalt not commit adultery; thou shalt not steal..."

It seems fairly obvious that few could find offense in advice like this, even if it supposedly came from God, via Moses. But a line between church and state has to be drawn somewhere.

When snow begins to fly and people's minds turn to the traditional winter holidays — Hanukkah and Christmas — religious displays will become an issue.

If the Fraternal Order of Eagles — the Iowa City organization that donated the religious monument in front of the courthouse in 1964 — wants to place a Nativity scene there, the idea might meet with resistance.

It has in other towns and court rulings have supported the argument that Nativity scenes don't belong on state property.

And rightfully so. Church and state should be divided and such a display crosses the line. That might not have been so apparent in 1964. It is today.

Lost values call for legal action

James Cahoy

So this is how it was. We were sitting around Mike O'Leary's Authentic Japanese Pub, downing sushi and quaffing Corona's, when Owen brought it up.

"You know what makes me really sick?" he asked, ignoring the sushi in his mouth he had forgotten to swallow. "You guys read about this psycho kid in Kentucky, right? The one who took his classmates hostages and held them for the entire day at gunpoint? Well, do you know what his inspiration was?"

We admitted we didn't. "It was a Stephen King novel," Owen said, not concealing his disgust. "A Stephen King novel, for godsakes. I mean, when Mark David Chapman shot John Lennon, he was carrying Catcher in the Rye. And when Hinckley tried to off Reagan, he was inspired by the movie Taxi Driver. If you ask me, those are two very fine works of art. But now, our nation's youth is inspired to perform psychotic acts by a prolific author of pop horror novels. What the hell has happened to our standards?"

"It's this whole decade," said Beth, as songs from the "Top Gun" soundtrack drifted into the room. "I mean, what do you expect from an era where art means 'Risky Business' and 'L.A. Law' and where laws are enforced by people like Ed Meese and William Rehnquist?"

"It's true," said Milton. "My standards have gone way down in this decade. When I was in high school in 1980, my goal was to teach high school in inner city schools. My hero was Ralph Nader, I listened to the Rolling Stones and the Who. I watched 'M.A.S.H.' and 'Hill Street Blues.'"

"And now?" I asked.

"Now, I'm about to graduate from the UI with a finance degree," he said, sighing. "I hope to use it to become a commodities broker, make a lot of money, buy a yacht and sail around the world like those people in Fortune magazine commercials. I own a complete collection of George Winston albums. I watch 'Thirtysomething' and 'Designing Women.' God, I even voted for Bush."

"Well, I still think I have some values left," I said.

"Oh, for godsakes, you're a law student," Beth said. "Most of the people in law school only have values until the firm that represents Iowa Beef Packing or Exxon offers them a $50,000-a-year starting salary. They don't mention values again except when it comes to deciding what charities to give to for tax write-offs."

"Oh, gee, sorry, Beth," I replied. "I forgot that accounting students represent the height of ethical behavior. Of course, Exxon or Iowa Beef Packing probably don't hire accounting firms to do any work for them. They probably use magic gems or something to do it."

"Most of the people in law school only have values until the firm that represents Exxon offers them a $50,000-a-year starting salary."

"All right, shut up all of you!" said Alexi. We all became quiet, showing our respect for Alexi, a member of the Writers' Workshop and therefore clearly above ethical reproach.

"Look, I'll be honest," Alexi continued. "This decade hasn't had the best effect on me, either. I used to want to write the Great American novel, to become the next Dreiser or Melville. These days, all I can think about when I sit down to write is — 'Does this work have any movie potential? And what's going to be my gross take from paperback sales?' But the point is, we're not solving anything by bickering among ourselves. We've got to take action."

We all drew closer to Alexi, intrigued by what he had to say. "All right," Alexi said. "It's obvious that something has gone tragically wrong in this decade. Our values have gone completely askew. And what, I ask you, is the typical thing people do during the 'Eighties when things go tragically wrong for them?"

We pondered the question for a second.

"Wait, I know!" I said. "They sue someone!"

"Exactly," Alexi said. "And who is most responsible for the disgusting excesses that characterized the 'Eighties?"

Once again, we pondered the question.

"Oliver North," said Beth. "Donald Trump," I said.

"Jay McInerney," Milton said. "Patrick Swayze," Owen said.

"Nope," Alexi said. "I'll give you a hint. Think forgetful, think likable, think a smooth voice and a penchant for building nuclear weapons and invading small Caribbean countries."

"Ronald Reagan!" we all replied in unison.

"Yup," Alexi said. "That's my suggestion. We sue Ronald Reagan."

"On what grounds?" I asked.

"Actions including, but not limited to: encouraging our generation, i.e., the plaintiffs, to commit immoral behavior by hiring people like Ed Meese and Mike Deaver for high administration positions; lowering our standards of quality by hiring incompetents like James Watt and Samuel Pierce; encouraging a sense of fiscal irresponsibility by running up a $1 trillion deficit and blaming it on Congress; glamorizing violence by funding the Contras and invoking clichés from Sylvester Stallone and Clint Eastwood movies; encouraging racism by attacking civil-rights leaders and programs; and fueling our illusions about the world by refusing to admit America ever had any problems, even though we had quite a few," Alexi said.

We were all quiet for a second. Then, I spoke up.

"Sorry Alexi, but it'll never work," I said. "It would be thrown out of court before the ink is even dry on the summons."

"I know that," Alexi said. "You're missing the point of this whole thing. If we file a suit against an ex-president for corrupting our values, we'll become famous. Everyone will want to know about us and why we did it."

"So, who cares?" Beth said. "Why would we want to be famous for that?"

"Can you imagine," Alexi said, with a twinkle in his eye, "What they'll pay us for the movie rights to our story?"

James Cahoy's column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints page.

For bicyclists, Iowa City is one fast town

It's not as fun as it should be. And there's nothing relaxing about it. Not in Iowa City, at least. If I ride a bicycle, I'm caught between getting myself creamed by a car, or bashing into a pedestrian who moved in front of me just as I was about to pass. Or worse.

The bicycle ads show well-muscled bikers astride metal-alloyed beauties. The bikers are smiling, their eyes intent on a distant destination somewhere beyond the magazine page.

1st Person

Barbara Olson

But our city just wasn't designed with bicyclists in mind.

There are some streets with bike paths, a small section of the shoulder divided from the main road by a neat white line. But when I ride in Iowa City on these paths I get a surprise. The paths end. Suddenly, abruptly. Just when I'm starting to get into some nasty traffic. When a road narrows ahead, you can bet there's nothing for a biker to do but pray. And merge.

Granted, we are lucky here in Iowa City to have such a fine public transit system. City buses are as regular as a diet with prunes. And Camuses take up the slack.

The difficulty comes when a bus driver, who is already pulling out his hair, trying to maneuver his rig without hitting all the cars trying to pass him, or all those students who still don't know how or when to cross a street, has to avoid all the bikers that slip along his blind spot and appear out of nowhere. It must be like driving on the highway and trying to dodge the bugs before they smash on the windshield.

And pity the pedestrian. Gone are the chain-clanking bicycle behemoths that moved only with the application of brute strength. Enter the new, sleek models that weigh less than your spandex riding shorts and promise to practically glide self-propelled up hills. They're shiny and sharp. They slip through the air like Cupid's arrow. And they're so quiet you can barely hear them.

Enter the pedestrian, walking along absorbed in thought, staring at the sidewalk, plodding toward her favorite ice cream shop when suddenly — zwo! She feels a rush of wind, sees a blue blur disappear over the horizon. It will take a minute while her heart steadies before she realizes that it was a bicycle that zipped by, just missing her because she happened to be breathing in, not out.

Europeans have solved this problem with a bell ringer. Every bicycle has one attached to the handlebars. The bell makes a soft "ting" — much like the bell ringers we associate with tricycles, only more European.

It's a sound that doesn't scare anybody, helps keep bicyclists and pedestrians from becoming better acquainted on short notice, and costs very little. And it could put some of the fun back into bicycle riding.

Barbara Olson lives in Iowa City.

Too much ado about oats

To the Editor:

I am writing to correct several errors in the column by Marlina Corcoran ["Is this cereal, or a dessert?" DI, September 19].

The piece began well enough with a pun involving "Oatios" and "odious." Such wordplay makes life more liveable, in my view. What followed was a scattered complaint about the marketing of healthful foods. The author's first point seemed to be that the cereal, Oatios, arrived when oat bran became a household word. This is not the case. Oatios has been around for years as an alternative to a well-known mainstream cereal containing sugar and salt. The oat bran craze certainly helped the sales of all oat-based foods, but Oatios were here before the craze.

Corcoran goes on to the "progress" Americans have made in regarding cereal as "hell-in-a-box." While I love the phrase, "hell-in-a-box," it must be pointed out that the dietary need for whole grains has been promoted for decades by natural food advocates and more recently, by the medical establishment.

A greater hell than breakfast may await those who cannot stomach fiber-rich foods.

[Corcoran] then complains that natural cereals imitate the form of brand name cereals; therefore they are nothing but repackaged junk foods. First, it is very helpful to present healthful foods in a familiar form, especially when dealing with children who are quickly snared by the mind-grip of TV ads. Second, when you remove the artificial color, sugar, excess salt and preservatives, you have a new item, one that it worth eating.

It is irritating that the degeneration of modern foods makes food choice more complicated. But don't resent those people who are trying to better the quality and remove the poisons.

Abominable comparison

To the Editor:

It was with great enthusiasm that I read of the Young Americans for Freedom's concern for the Chinese students massacred at Tiananmen [DI ad, September 7].

Having grown used to YAF's usual sophomoric, yet mildly amusing ("Lime Jello Off Campus" comes to mind), attempts at satire, I ventured to hope that the members of YAF, like any well-meaning but nascent extremists, right or left, were now ready to focus on an issue of genuine importance. This feeling of pleasant surprise quickly turned to disgust when I noticed that, in the same announcement, the group lamented Col. "Ollie" North's receiving a "bad rap."

To even associate the martyred Chinese students with "Ollie" North is nothing short of abominable. While some may find North's loyalty and tenacity to be admirable traits, it is the Chinese people's courage to struggle for democracy that should be considered exemplary.

"Ollie" North belongs in jail, not in the Marine Corps. I applaud YAF for its concern for the slain Chinese students; it is, however, abominable that the group would give a common criminal equal billing with these selfless martyrs.

No recession predicted, for now

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a moderate 2.5-percent pace in the second quarter, the government said Thursday, down somewhat from the first quarter but strong enough to stop any new predictions of imminent recession.

The Commerce Department reported that April-June growth in the gross national product compared with a 3.7-percent gain in the first three months. The second-quarter GNP had been revised downward 0.2 percentage-point from the 2.7-percent growth estimate a month ago.

Nearly two-thirds of the January-March strength came from an anticipated rebound in farm output. Without the drought effect, growth actually was only 1.5 percent.

"The picture is a pretty one," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for The Boston Co. "Not too much growth, not too little... right on the nose for a 'soft-landing.'"

"The picture," said Robert Dederick, chief economist for The Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, "is an economy that is continuing to climb, albeit at a subdued rate... a laid-back pace, but that's really what the Fed wants."

The Federal Reserve has moved for over a year to achieve a so-called "soft-landing" by dampening inflation by slowing the economy without driving it into a recession.

Thus, analysts said, the Fed also should appreciate the downward revision in the GNP's April-June inflation rate. A price index tied to the GNP showed a 5-percent gain, rather than the 5.1-percent estimate a month ago.

Since the April-June quarter, Dederick noted, "inflation has ebbed considerably." He said the second-quarter GNP rate "is the worst inflation number we'll have for the year and for some time ahead, at least several quarters ahead."

And he predicted "we're likely to see more of the same on growth, perhaps a bit lower... no more than what it has been in the second quarter and more likely less."

The Fed, which influences the economy by controlling monetary growth, "will not be influenced by this report" to reduce interest rates further at this time, Sinai said. "In fact, had it known in June that the economy would have risen this much, it probably would not have reduced interest rates then."

In a companion report, the Fed said after-tax profits of U.S. corporations fell 7.2 percent in the second quarter, a bigger decline than the 5.4-percent drop estimated a month ago.

It was the second consecutive quarterly decline and, Dederick said, "shows that economic slowing is not without pain."

The GNP is the nation's total output of goods and services and its broadest measure of economic growth.

The downward revision in the second-quarter GNP reflected drops in earlier estimates of consumer and government spending. But consumer spending, which represents two-thirds of all economic activity, still increased a

Salesman guilty of advance trading on stock information

NEW YORK (AP) — A former salesman for the company that prints Business Week pleaded guilty Thursday to conspiring to trade on advance information about stocks mentioned in the magazine's influential "Inside Wall Street" column.

Shayne Walters, 32, of Laguna Hills, Calif., also pleaded guilty to perjury for lying under oath to an investigator of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The plea expands to the West Coast the government's investigation of illegal trading using perjured copies of the business weekly from 1986 to 1988. The magazine was not charged.

Walters was a sales representative for R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co., a Chicago-based printer of Business Week, from January 1983 until April.

In entering the plea, Walters agreed to cooperate in the federal investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorney Carl Loewenson said his office would recommend a lenient sentence for Walters based on the information he gives the government.

Walters faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each of two charges. He is to be sentenced April 24.

The conspiracy charge alleged that from September 1986 to July 1988, Walters obtained advance copies of Business Week from the Donnelley printing plant in Torrance, Calif., and then supplied them to his stockbroker who traded on companies reported favorably in the "Inside Wall Street" column.

Walters told the judge he would leave his house at 3:45 a.m. on Thursdays, the day the magazine was distributed, and drive 45 miles to the plant to get a copy of the magazine.

He then would drive back to his hometown and give the magazine to his stockbroker, Walters said. He also said the stockbroker, who was not identified, paid him for some of the advance copies.

Walters was the latest person to plead guilty to schemes involving trading on prepublication copies of "Inside Wall Street."

William Dillon, a former Merrill Lynch & Co. broker, and S.G. "Rudy" Ruderman, the former broadcast editor for Business Week, had previously pleaded guilty to similar charges. Both were sentenced to six months in prison.

At least seven other Donnelley employees have either resigned or been fired in wake of the Business Week scandal. The SEC also has sued Dillon and five others.

HUD scandal total rises with new discoveries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal housing auditors have discovered nearly $300,000 in additional payments to consultants who won lucrative rent subsidies for developers, bringing the known total of such payments to $6 million.

The payments, detailed in a new report to the Senate Banking Committee obtained Thursday, included $57,500 more to former Department and Housing and Urban Development official Joseph Strauss, by far the most highly paid HUD consultant with more than $1.7 million in fees in the last five years.

The report by HUD's inspector general also revealed additional payments to two prominent Republicans, political consultant Lou Kitchen and Frederick Bush, the top fund raiser for President George Bush's campaign. Frederick Bush's nomination for an ambassadorial post was doomed by disclosures about his role in influence peddling at the agency.

Meanwhile, Stuart Weisberg, staff director of the House subcommittee investigating the HUD scandal, said subpoenas ordering former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce to appear before the panel were being formally served with Pierce's lawyers late Thursday.

The subcommittee voted unanimously Tuesday to subpoena Pierce to testify on at least three occasions, the first next Tuesday, as part of the congressional investigation into the department's problems. Weisberg said Pierce's attorneys had agreed to accept the subpoenas on behalf of Pierce.

Payments to five consultants not identified in previous reports were discovered during a follow-up investigation by HUD auditors. Those payments totaled $128,000, a relatively small amount compared to the huge fees paid to more prominent consultants.

All of the $6 million in consulting fees were paid since late 1983 by developers seeking subsidies from HUD's Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program. It was an April audit of that program that triggered the current congressional, internal and Justice Department investigations of fraud, mismanagement and influence peddling at HUD during the Reagan administration.

The April audit identified $4.2 million in fees paid to consultants and said those lobbyists, some former HUD officials and other prominent Republicans with little or no experience in housing, appeared to win special treatment from HUD officials.

At an August hearing, HUD Inspector General Paul Adams said his investigators had discovered additional payments that brought known consultant fees to $5.7 million, and in a report sent to the Senate panel this week Adams said the total had grown to $6 million.

Kitchen, southeastern regional director for the Reagan and Bush presidential campaigns, received $90,000 more than had been known just last month, bringing his total from $25,000 to $115,000, the report said.

The first $25,000 was for his work on a North Carolina project Pierce approved over the objection of several agency experts.

And auditors uncovered an additional $800 paid to Frederick Bush, who is no relation to the president but served as a top aide to then-Vice President Bush and as well as treasurer of his presidential campaign.

Frederick Bush was in line to be U.S. ambassador to Luxembourg but withdrew his name from consideration earlier this month after it became clear his work as a HUD consultant had doomed his chances of Senate confirmation.

U.S., Soviet spacemen share mission to town of 'Martians'

MARS, Pa. (AP) — It's official. U.S. and Soviet spacemen are going to Mars, and the Martians can't wait to greet them.

That's Mars, Pa., 16046, U.S.A. Earth.

Soviet cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev arrives in Mars on Monday, by jetliner and car, for an eight-day visit to this community of about 1,800 humanoids about 25 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Krikalev, 31, a flight engineer, spent five months on a Soviet-French Soyuz mission that ended in April. He will be joined Wednesday by Navy Lt. Cmdr. Mario Runco Jr., 37, a NASA astronaut who is awaiting assignment to a space shuttle flight.

The spacemen's mission is to teach Martian children about space and Soviet-American friendship at school lunches and assemblies.

Organizers say it's just like Martians, as some residents call themselves, to do something spacey like this.

At least seven other Donnelley employees have either resigned or been fired in wake of the Business Week scandal. The SEC also has sued Dillon and five others.

NATO offers new proposals

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — NATO on Thursday offered the Warsaw Pact sweeping new proposals for reducing the threat of war in Europe, and senior Western negotiators expressed confidence agreement could be reached by next year.

The proposals would regulate exchange of information on numbers and locations of forces and weapons systems of the two military pacts over a zone stretching west from the Atlantic Ocean to the Soviet Ural mountains in the east.

Western delegation heads said their new presentation at the talks on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe completed initial NATO concepts on curbing the possibility of non-nuclear war on the continent.

In earlier proposals, the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization suggested weapons ceilings on arms categories including combat aircraft and helicopters, and the scrapping of all withdrawn equipment.

Chief West German delegate Ruediger Hartmann called the total NATO package the "most comprehensive, most detailed and most ambitious arms control system that was ever worked out for conventional forces."

His Canadian counterpart, David Peel, told reporters, "Now that our package is there ... I think chances of our reaching agreement next year are extremely good."

Reflecting NATO confidence of quick progress, chief U.S. delegate Stephen Ledogar said the alliance was planning to present a draft treaty possibly before the current round of talks ends October 19.

The new, 13-page, NATO initiative includes the following proposals:

- Exchange of detailed information on combat and support units and air defenses to the squadron or battalion level.

- Providing the numbers and locations of main battle tanks, artillery pieces, armored troop carriers, combat aircraft and combat helicopters, as well as NATO arms depots and their Warsaw Pact equivalents.

- Information on the number and location of U.S. and Soviet troops in allied European countries.

- Advance notification of major changes in force organization and strength, mobilization of reservists if they number 42,000 or more, and of major movements of main battle tanks, artillery and armored troop carriers.

- Limits on the numbers of main battle tanks, artillery and troop carriers in storage.

- No more than one military exercise every two years mobilizing more than 40,000 troops or 800 main battle tanks.

Pravda runs apology for Yeltsin story

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda printed a rare public apology Thursday for a report that said political maverick Boris Yeltsin had gone on a boozing and buying spree in the United States.

It said the reporter who wrote the story had not seen anything of the kind.

A legislative committee created to serve as a watchdog for the state-run media said the account of Yeltsin's purported American binge smacked of the "gutter press" and was unacceptable. Yeltsin called the piece "garbage."

The lengthy expose appeared Monday in Pravda. It was originally published by the Italian newspaper La Repubblica and said the Soviet legislator left behind in the United States "a wake of catastrophic prophecies, insane expenses, interviews and above all the perfume of Jack

Boris Yeltsin

Daniels Black Label."

The Pravda article was picked up by the official Tass news agency and distributed nationwide. Regional newspapers carried it in full.

A flushed and angry Yeltsin, who returned home Monday from a nine-city U.S. tour, accused Pravda of seeking "revenge for the fact that Americans received us with admiration."

Jetliner bomb draws airport security fears

PARIS (AP) — The likelihood that someone put a bomb aboard a French jetliner in an African backwater, killing 171 people, kindled fresh fears among specialists over aircraft vulnerability.

Worldwide, according to the International Air Transport Association, 900 to 1,000 scheduled airlines serve 5,000 to 6,000 airports. Security is all but absent in many of the airports.

Experts scrutinize major airports after fatal incidents, but otherwise, airport security is left to national authorities, with almost no international oversight.

"This is the problem with security," said John Brindley, a transport association spokesman. "It's like night guards at a bank. After you've been robbed, you realize you need three guards instead of two."

If terrorists target airports where security is lax, he said, echoing concerns of others interviewed, the cost of protecting flights could be far higher than once believed.

Codes may curb 'shock radio'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Broadcasters, responding to a federal regulator's suggestion to curb "shock radio," said Thursday it is considering reviving radio and TV program codes that were dropped under government pressure in the 1970s.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Alfred Sikes, in an address to a radio broadcasters' convention in New Orleans last week, urged radio executives to tune out "shock radio" programs that use sexually and racially oriented humor to attract audiences.

Sikes said broadcasters should revive the codes that were abandoned in the mid-1970s after the Justice Department initiated an antitrust lawsuit against provisions of the codes involving advertising. New codes should be drawn up by the industry, without government pressure, Sikes said.

NAB spokesman Walt Wurfel said the NAB's executive committee, "in response to comments made by Chairman Sikes at Radio 89 (convention) ... instructed the staff to conduct an assessment of the feasibility, effectiveness, legal and legislative elements of — and member support for — devising a statement of standards or guidelines concerning programming in the public interest."

Sikes, a former radio station owner who came to the FCC six weeks ago, told the broadcasters' convention they were not "simply recorders, transmitters and antennas. We are what we broadcast."

Jim Bakker defends himself against charges of fraud

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Television evangelist Jim Bakker went to court Monday to defend himself against charges that he cheated followers out of $4 million so he could afford the trappings of star-

Jim Bakker

"Our faith is in God," Bakker proclaimed as he strode into the U.S. District Courthouse with his attorneys and daughter.

While jury selection was getting under way in the courtroom, Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, went on television to tearfully ask viewers to send money and pray for her husband.

Bakker, who has pleaded innocent, is charged with eight counts of mail fraud, 15 counts of wire fraud, and conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

Earlier this month, former PTL Executive Vice President Richard Dortch, who was indicted with Bakker, pleaded guilty to charges of fraud and conspiracy. Last month, former Bakker aides James and David Taggart were convicted of tax evasion. All three are potential government witnesses.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter questioned potential jurors, telling them "to put yourself in the place of the defendant, who has had a lot of publicity in this case."

Potter said the publicity "makes our job very difficult to find a jury."

By mid-day, Potter had dismissed six members of the regular jury been mentioned as a possible defense witness, stayed in Orlando, Fla., where Bakker has transplanted his ministry, to carry on their daily live broadcast.

Soon after the "Jim and Tammy Show" opened at 11 a.m., she broke into tears as she spoke about the trial.

"We need you to really pray for him," Tammy Faye Bakker told viewers. "Not only is Jim on trial. . . Everything that has to do with Christian television is on trial when Jim walks in that courtroom."

The evangelist arrived at the courthouse in a black BMW sedan and walked past reporters with attorneys Harold Bender and George Davis and his daughter, Tammy Sue Bakker.

Neither Jim Bakker nor his attorneys have been willing to discuss their trial strategy. But he has said he knew little about PTL's finances.

"I was a pastor, and a businessman I was not," he once said.

Bakker, who left the PTL television empire in 1987 because of the scandal involving Hahn, relocated earlier this year to an almost empty shopping center in Orlando.

The Bakkers have pleaded with supporters to contribute $1 million for his defense fund. A letter sent two months ago said half of that amount had to be raised by the end of the month. On Monday's show, Tammy Faye Bakker asked for contributions to pay operating debts for the ministry.

pool and one potential alternate. At least two of those who were dismissed said they had opinions about their case that they couldn't overcome.

Besides the Taggarts and Dortch, Potter said the potential witnesses at the trial included several former PTL board members, including actor Efreim Zimbalist Jr.

Jessica Hahn, whom PTL paid money to stay quiet about a sexual encounter with Bakker, and Virginia evangelist Jerry Falwell, who took over the PTL empire after Bakker quit in March 1987, weren't mentioned as possible witnesses. A list of potential witnesses has not been made public.

Mail-delivered bomb hurts 8 in NAACP regional office

ATLANTA (AP) — A smoke bomb mailed to NAACP regional headquarters went off Monday when the package was opened, filling the office with fumes and slightly injuring eight people, officials said.

Earl Shinhoster, executive director of the Southeastern regional office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he and his secretary opened a package "no bigger than a hatbox" about 12:25 p.m. EDT and immediately saw sparks and a cylinder emitting a yellowish, caustic smoke.

Atlanta police earlier reported that a fire, possibly caused by a bomb, had broken out at the building, but Shinhoster said there were no flames.

Eight people were taken to hospitals suffering discomfort from the smoke, Shinhoster said. He said his own eyes and nose were burned by the smoke, but he wasn't seriously injured.

Shinhoster said the smoke filled the two-story office building near the Atlanta University Center campus in less than two minutes.

"This is a very evil and dastardly act," he said. "I don't know why anyone would want to try to hurt innocent people like this."

Shinhoster said the package, delivered via the U.S. Postal Service's priority mail about 11:30 a.m., was addressed to the NAACP office, but to no one in particular. He said he believed the return address was in Atlanta.

Assistant Fire Chief Walter Campbell said the gas was similar to tear gas. The package remained largely intact and was being looked at by investigators, he said.

Police and fire crews cordoned off a block of Martin Luther King Jr. Drive around the building.

Only Shinhoster and his secretary were in the NAACP office at the time, but the building's air conditioning system rapidly took the gas throughout the two-story brick office building, Campbell said. Some of the other offices in the building are medical offices.

Among the eight people taken to the hospital were two children ages four and 12 who were in the building, he said. Shinhoster did not immediately seek medical treatment.

U.S. Rep. John Lewis (D-Ga.) said he was in the neighborhood speaking to a community group when he heard about the incident and rushed to the scene.

"Anytime something like this would come to the NAACP office, you have to believe it's racially motivated," Lewis said.

Voyager 2 nearing Neptune

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2 fired its thrusters Monday in a delicate maneuver to bring it closer to Neptune's mysterious moon, Triton. Then it searched for northern lights over Neptune and snapped pictures of its turbulent storms.

One of two partial rings — called ring arcs — discovered earlier this month by Voyager has not been seen in subsequent photographs, leading scientists on a "search for the lost arc," said Bradford Smith, the head of the Voyager imaging team, which analyzes the spacecraft's photographs.

Scientists expect to find many ring arcs as they get closer to the planet, and to obtain very detailed photographs of them, Smith said in a press briefing at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists issued their first weather forecast for Neptune, predicting fairly accurately on August 13 where Neptune's Great Dark Spot — an Earth-sized cyclone — would be found Sunday.

"It's not perfect, but weather forecasting isn't a perfect science," Smith said.

The length of a day on Neptune — the time the planet takes to spin on its axis — was estimated to be 16 hours, based on observations of intense bursts of radio waves from the planet's magnetic field, which varies with its rotation. Previous estimates had put the day length at 17 or 18 hours.

Voyager has so far discovered four new moons around Neptune, bringing the total to six.

The course correction executed Monday didn't use Voyager's main thrusters, but two tiny thrusters that kept the spacecraft pointed in the right direction to remain in communication with Earth. The smaller thrusters also avoided heating that could have disrupted a radio receiver that partly malfunctioned a year after Voyager was launched in 1977.

It was the first time such a maneuver had ever been performed, the researchers said.

Use of the main engine could have put mission controllers out of touch with the spacecraft for up to two days, said Norman Haynes, Voyager project manager. The controllers couldn't risk that with the spacecraft's closest encounter with Neptune set for Thursday at 8:55 p.m. PDT.

The spaceship will pass 3,000 miles from Neptune, and about 24,000 miles from Triton five hours later. The course correction will bring the spacecraft 439 miles closer to Triton and will allow better observations of any rings arcs and of the atmospheres of Neptune and Triton.

The latest pictures of Triton show the moon is brighter, cooler and only about half the size scientists previously thought, Smith said. Its diameter is now estimated at 870 miles, about one-third the size of Earth's moon.

The pictures show dark spots near Triton's equator and a pinkish cast that may be from discolored frozen natural gas, or methane, falling to the moon's surface as a sludge, Smith said.

Thames' safety under dispute

LONDON (AP) — For centuries, the Thames has been a working river, a winding highway where barges, tall ships, then steamers brought the wealth of the world to one of its major commercial centers.

Now it's also a popular excursion river, and Sunday's fatal collision of the pleasure cruise boat Marchioness and a dredger many times its size raises questions about whether there is room for both.

Transport Minister Michael Portillo said Monday the government "will obviously be looking very carefully" at whether to ban pleasure cruisers from the river.

The opposition Labour Party called for an immediate conference involving the Port of London Authority, the police and river users to discuss what can be done to improve safety.

The Port of London Authority says the Thames is like "an eight-lane motorway," traveled by 37,000 vessels annually, but insists it is still one of the safest rivers in the world.

"There are very few incidents indeed on the River Thames," a spokesman said. "It's one of the safest in the world."

The port says 25 companies are licensed to operate 40 river cruise boats, like the Marchioness, on the

The Associated Press

The pleasure boat the Marchioness sits on the edge of the River Thames Monday after it was brought to the surface Sunday by salvage vessels. Rescue workers searched for bodies in and around the splintered hull that was rammed and sunk by a barge early Sunday.

London stretch of the Thames between Greenwich and Hampton Court Palace.

"They have certainly increased, the popularity has increased," said port spokesman Terry Hatton, although river cruise operators disagreed.

A ferry service was also launched last year, taking passengers from central London's business and financial districts to the booming Docklands residential and commercial development.

An ocean liner dropped anchor in the Thames for the first time in a decade last year, the first of 25 booked up to 1991.

The river cruisers carry about 2 million passengers annually. By day, they're full of tourists viewing London from a different angle.

Aoun's offer of peace talks gets no answer from Syrians

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gen. Michel Aoun offered Monday to talk peace, but there was no response from the Syrians, with whom his Christian army units are locked in a 5-month-old artillery war that has killed hundreds of civilians.

Moslems responded angrily to French naval movements in the eastern Mediterranean, and the Shiite Moslem captors of two American hostages threatened to kill them if France took military action.

"I am ready anytime to discuss Lebanon's future at a round table with leaders of the other side," the Christian general said in an interview published by the Arabic magazine Koll el-Arab, based in Paris. His press office confirmed its accuracy.

Aoun did not mention his previous condition that Christian-Moslem negotiations on political reforms after 14 years of civil war could not be held until Syria withdrew its 40,000 soldiers.

Walid Jumblatt, the Druse chief-tain allied with Syria, rejected the offer as a "trick to allow Aoun a breathing spell to rearm and marshal his forces."

Jumblatt accused the French of seeking "to kindle a new Crusaders' war in Lebanon." France ruled Lebanon by mandate until 1943.

The Syrian troops are in Lebanon under a peacekeeping mandate issued by the Arab League in 1976, a year after the civil war began. Aoun calls the Syrians an occupation army and has declared a "war of liberation" against them.

All radio stations broadcast Aoun's offer as his 20,000 soldiers exchanged sporadic artillery and tank fire with the Syrians across the city's sectarian dividing line and in the hills above Beirut. Police reported one person killed and 14 wounded.

By police count, 785 people have been killed and 2,140 wounded since the shooting began March 8 between Aoun's men and a Moslem alliance of the Syrians and their militia allies. Nearly all the casualties have been civilians.

Artillery and rocket fire has abated since the U.N. Security Council passed a resolution August 15 calling for a cease-fire, and a semblance of life has returned to the city.

Many stores were open Monday, and traffic was heavy in the city's main commercial districts of Hamra and Corniche-Mazraa. The money market reopened, and banks were operating for the first time in 10 days.

Border-free Europe is in pope's plea

COVADONGA, Spain (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Monday gave his blessing to a border-free Europe as he ended a three-day visit to Spain.

After a 30-minute meeting with Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez at the Asturias airport the pontiff left for Rome and arrived back in Italy shortly before 9 p.m. (3 p.m. EDT).

Gonzalez told reporters after the meeting that he had discussed with John Paul the conflict in Lebanon and the political situation in Eastern Europe, especially the pope's native Poland.

The pope on several occasions during his visit appealed for a cease-fire in Lebanon where more than 775 people have been killed since fighting broke out in March between Syrian troops and their allies and Lebanese Christian forces.

"I confidently place the project of a Europe without borders at the feet of the Virgin of Covadonga and pray that such an entity will not turn its back on its Christian roots," John Paul said during a Mass at the shrine of Covadonga high in the Picos de Europa.

Covadonga, in the mountains near Spain's northern Atlantic coast, is the site of a victory in 722 of Christian forces over a Moslem army. The province of Asturias in which the shrine is located is considered the birthplace of the Spanish nation and monarchy.

Briefly

From DI wire services

Bush plan to cost $7.5-8 billion

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President George Bush will propose that the United States spend $7.5 billion to $8 billion to fight drugs but is not prepared to send U.S. troops to aid Colombia's battle against drug lords, his chief of staff said Monday.

John Sununu, for the first time putting a price tag on the president's anti-drug blueprint, said it would include more financial aid for other nations in the international war on drugs. Bush will unveil his proposal in a speech to the nation September 5, a day after he returns to Washington from a nearly three-week vacation at the family compound here, then will send implementing legislation to Congress.

Growth may keep interest rates same

WASHINGTON — Recent signs of resurgent economic growth likely will cause Federal Reserve policymakers, meeting privately this week, to pause in their summertime push toward lower interest rates, economists said Monday.

"I don't think they're going to do much of anything right now," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. "They can say their policies are working pretty much as desired. The economy is still moving up, and the inflation numbers have been fairly good."

The central bank, which attempts to regulate the nation's economy by manipulating interest rates, has been engaged in a delicate balancing act over the past 18 months.

From March 1988 to March 1989, the Fed pushed short-term interest rates up by 3 percentage points in an effort to curb the economy and bring inflationary pressures under control.

It paused for several months, and then in early June, as signs of sluggish growth emerged, reversed course and began to push rates lower in an attempt to stimulate the economy and avoid what would be the first recession since 1982.

Survey: Many Latvians want independence

RIGA, U.S.S.R. — The question among many Latvian activists who gathered here Monday is no longer whether their tiny republic will declare independence from the Soviet Union, but when.

Activists at a conference on national self-determination said sovereignty within the Soviet Union — a radical goal just nine months ago — is no longer enough.

"We now have the strong belief that the large majority of the Latvian nation favors only independence," said Ianis Freimanis, chairman of the pro-democracy Latvian People's Front.

As a result, Freimanis said in an interview, the 200,000-member People's Front will vote in October whether to change the organization's platform from sovereignty to full independence.

Young Kennedy starts job as assistant DA

NEW YORK — John F. Kennedy Jr. took the subway his first day on the job Monday as an assistant district attorney and told peering reporters his goal was "to get through the day."

The 28-year-old son of the late President Kennedy, and People magazine's "Sexiest Man Alive," rolled his eyes as he saw more than 40 reporters, photographers and TV crew members waiting when he arrived to be sworn in as one of 69 new assistants to Manhattan Dist. Atty. Robert Morgenthau.

"I felt more relaxed until I saw you guys," said Kennedy. His preparation for the day: "I had breakfast." His reaction to the media horde: "I think it'll pass."

Kennedy, who graduated from New York University Law School in May and took the bar exam last month, was assigned to the Special Prosecutions Bureau, which handles low-level civic corruption.

His salary will be $30,000 a year; if he passes the bar, he'll get $1,000 more. When asked why he didn't go into more lucrative private practice, Kennedy said, "It's a great place to work."

California girl leads team to World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP)—Victoria Brucker, a 12-year-old slugger from San Pedro, Calif., is just one of the guys, a teammate says. Not exactly.

Victoria will be the first girl from the United States to play in the Little League World Series.

While the rest of her 14-member team sleeps in a bunkhouse on the Little League complex here, San Pedro's leading home-run hitter is staying with a chaperone at a nearby hotel.

The first baseman had nine home runs this season for San Pedro, which won the Western Regional title in San Bernardino, Calif., on Saturday, earning the chance to compete against eight other teams in the Series. She also pitches occasionally.

"It's fun," the shy right-hander in the extra-large shirt said a few hours before practice Monday afternoon. San Pedro, which arrived here Sunday, is slated to play its first Series game Wednesday against the Southern Regional champion, Tampa, Fla.

Victoria is the second female to play in the tournament in 43 years, said Little League President Creighton Hale. Victoria Roche, a substitute for European champion Brussels, Belgium, was the first in 1984.

San Pedro players said opposing pitchers learn quickly to take their 5-foot 3-inch, 137-pound teammate seriously.

"They just pitch her fastballs, and she hits them out," said backup third baseman Anthony Pesusich. "They think she's a girl so they just pitch fastballs."

Lately, though, she's been gaining respect.

"She's just one of the guys," teammate James Santos said Monday.

In one of San Pedro's 17 tournament games en route to the World Series, the opposing team walked her intentionally after she hit a home run.

"She's pretty good," said San Pedro manager Joe Dileva.

For her part, Victoria appears to be very excited about her first trip out of California.

"Who would have thought in the first trip out of state I'd be in the World Series?" said the youngster, who's entering the eighth-grade this year in her seaside Los Angeles suburb.

Victoria said she doesn't remember how she started playing baseball, but she began competing in the sport at age 9. She said she wants to continue playing in the Senior League for older players next year.

Victoria's 8-year-old brother also plays baseball, and her 10-year-old sister and 8-year-old sister play softball. Her father is a computer repairman, while her mother babysits.

Bandits kill Adamson, 2 assistants

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Bandits killed conservationist George Adamson near his bush camp, the Kenyan government said Monday, nine years after the violent death of his wife, Joy, who wrote the touching story of Elsa the lioness in "Born Free."

Adamson, 83, was slain when Somali bandits who attacked three of his assistants opened fire on his vehicle with automatic weapons as he tried to run them down, said Richard Leakey, Kenya's director of wildlife. Two of his assistants also were killed.

The Adamsons helped popularize wildlife conservation. Joy Adamson propelled them to fame with the books "Born Free," "Living Free" and "Forever Free," describing their practice of taking lions born in captivity, teaching them to survive and releasing them into the wild.

She was killed by a servant in a wage dispute in 1980.

Adamson died Sunday near his camp in the remote Kora National Reserve of northeastern Kenya, where he helped dozens of lions learn to survive in the bush.

A spokesman for the Kenyan government said Monday three of the British conservationist's assistants had set off for a nearby airstrip to pick up guests the conservationist expected for lunch.

Three Somalis forced the assistants to stop by shooting at their tires, then robbed the men and beat one of them with an iron bar, breaking his legs, the spokesman said.

The shots could be heard in Adamson's camp about a mile away and he went to investigate, with three other assistants.

Poland's future

Recent news out of Warsaw should put the brakes on Western nations' unrealistic hopes about heightened Polish independence from Moscow and from the Communist Party.

Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski's decision to legalize Solidarity after years of militant refusal to do so marked an abrupt policy reversal.

Analysts praised Solidarity's trouncing of communist candidates in the first open elections in 40 years as a first step toward modernization in a country rife with bread lines and shortages of basic necessary goods.

At the Kremlin, Mikhail Gorbachev watches with no small amount of trepidation as a country that once heeded all commands from the Soviet Union dares now to not only question those commands, but to ignore them.

Gorbachev is in an interesting catch-22 with respect to Poland. If he makes no move to bring Poland more staunchly back under the Soviet Union's umbrella, he loses a perennial and convenient whipping boy. Yet by making moves to strongarm Poland into obedience, he stands to lose much of the glasnost/public relations ground he has gained in recent months.

But on Sunday, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, nominated to be prime minister a day earlier, said he would consider giving the Communist Party more high-level positions in the new government than had been originally envisioned.

Mazowiecki's move in all likelihood eased Gorbachev's mind a bit. The action points out not only that the Communist Party is still potentially a very dangerous adversary, but that Poland itself may be a bit leery of severing ties to the Soviet Union entirely.

Too, Gorbachev has devoted much time of late to problems in his own land. Ethnic unrest in Azerbaijan has spread to encompass much of the southern portion of the Soviet Union, fueling reports that the "union" may be crumbling.

Polish cries for independence may prove to be merely another symptom of a disease that has spread beyond the Soviet Union and into many of the Warsaw Pact nations.

Whether Moscow will stand idly by while its stranglehold on Poland weakens remains to be seen.

In the meantime, Western nations must be wary of developing unattainable expectations for Poland.

To assume that a country that has been communist for decades can become democratic in a matter of months is overly hopeful. To assume that Poland is entirely free to do so is ludicrous.

Not out of mind

There's a new chapter being written in the history books of today entitled, "Battle for Democracy in China: The Massacre at Tiananmen Square." This chapter will chronicle the massive pro-democracy stand that Chinese students initiated last May against Mao's communist machine and relive their equally massive crushing at the hands of Chinese soldiers. The phrase "Tiananmen Square" has now taken its place among "Prague Spring," "October Revolution" and "Bastille Day" as yet another national revolution that riveted the world's attention in its scope, purpose and consequences.

Last May, newspapers and television news carried daily reports from China about the popular uprisings taking place on Mao's doorstep. We were informed, we were talking and we were thinking about it. We wondered in fascination when the proverbial "other shoe" would drop and whether or not it would be on the side of democracy or communism.

On Sunday, June 4, the other shoe dropped. And the world looked on, dumbstruck, at the carnage accumulating in the square as all hell broke loose. The violence and bloodshed that Sunday was a sign of things to come, as the following weeks brought endless graphic images and detailed first-hand reports of the ongoing massacre. Hundreds, even thousands of reports.

Pretty soon, although it's difficult to admit, the pictures began to look alike, and the front-page headlines and top stories on the news became repetitions of a tragedy we had heard too much about. Our attention shifted to other topics — the Pete Rose gambling scandal, George Bush's new commitment to the environment, the shake-up in the Japanese government. And thus, the oldest adage in journalism was proven true again: There is nothing harder to sell than yesterday's news.

The first exposure to news of China's revolution inspired rallies in support of the pro-democracy protestors, pressured our governments to take a stand, and raised funds for the students. Yet as our capacity to absorb graphic images and generate outrage dimmed, we grew numb about what was going on.

But although news from China may have been taken off the nightly news cast, we should not be so quick to forget. Journalists are quick to jump on the bandwagon and cover stories in packs, saturating the public's conscience and effectively building up an immunity against the very stories being reported.

This fact, in addition to China's crackdown on Western reporters, means we now see very few reports about that country and the still very brutal events taking place there. But despite such limitations, out of sight should still not mean out of mind. We cannot stop thinking about or trying to do something about wrenching events, like those in China, that the media is no longer willing, or perhaps able, to report on. To remember things like Tiananmen Square may be painful, but it is necessary.

Just cheering for ourselves?

Jeff Greenfield

Most of us are painfully aware of America's past: Where a black man or woman, no matter how credentialed, was denied it because of pigmentation.

Most of us are painfully aware of America's past, which was indeed racist in the most literal sense of that word: Where a black man or woman, no matter how well educated, no matter how well equipped for a chance at success, was denied it because of pigmentation.

This was the great evil against which Martin Luther King Jr. crusaded when he said that he dreamed of a day in which his children would be judged "not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

Most of us, I think, have taken those words as part of the essential American creed. We may have a limited sense of what life is like for many on the other side of the still-extant racial divide, but as a society, we mean it when we say that "all men are created equal," regardless of race or gender.

Most white Americans, I believe, take pride in much of what has happened here since the end of World War II — a time when blacks could not play major league baseball, when schools in the nation's capital were segregated, when the vote was denied, with murderous violence if necessary, to black Americans. What has happened since then in the area of civil and political rights ought to be occasion for celebration.

Yet most of us also know the grimmer part of the story: the searing tragedy of what has happened to generations of young blacks who have grown up utterly disconnected from a sense of security, stability, nurturing, love.

To look at the numbers — or the human victims — of homes that have never known a father, of illegitimacy rates exceeding 80 percent in some inner-city neighborhoods, of a school system collapsing under the weight of family pathologies, of eight-year-old children dealing drugs under the watchful eyes of their parents — these are horrors for which we have no simple explanations.

And when we hear the most extravagant kinds of "analyses" — for instance, that the drug plague in black neighborhoods is a white genocidal plot to eradicate young black men — we are, literally, struck dumb.

It is impossible to believe such nonsense, but we wonder: Is it in fact "racist" to believe that something has gone horribly wrong with the structure of the inner-city black family? And what is to be done about that?

In the face of such uncertainties, I believe, we hunger for more reassuring images. Gen. Colin Powell is just that: Here is a true success story we can admire and celebrate without hesitation. Here is the American dream personified.

Make no mistake, Gen. Powell has earned his cheers. It's just that it would be even nicer if the cheers did not also represent the gratitude of a nation that simply does not know how to think about, much less do anything about, this still-festering American dilemma.

Edits page aims to serve UI community

The success of a newspaper's editorial page depends heavily on its understanding of the audience it serves. The majority of The Daily Iowan's readers are members of the UI community — a literate, critical community that demands and deserves a consistent forum for intelligent, provocative and diverse opinion.

For years, the DI editorial writers seemed to interpret diversity as finding alternative angles to attack the Reagan administration or different means to support the radical left on campus. More recently, the editorial page has strived to provide more moderate opinions, too often at the expense of strong viewpoints from relevant political extremes.

Understanding the audience means appreciating the changes that have taken place in Iowa City since the UI was a uniquely liberal mecca — "the Berkeley of the Midwest." Today, although the liberal viewpoint still represents a principal force on campus, it is not decisively dominant.

The opinions presented on the DI editorial page should reflect these changes, featuring sharp, distinctive commentary from the left, the right and everywhere in between. This year, the DI editorial page will pursue the goals of diversity, balance and quality in order to meet the challenges and the needs of its unique audience.

The editorial page roster will include regular editorials and columns by DI staff members. In addition, the page will feature weekly columns from local writers, two syndicated political columnists and daily editorial cartoons.

On Mondays, the DI will feature local columnist J.L. McClure. After a brief absence, McClure returned to the page this summer with more incisive, irreverent observations on the Iowa City community.

On Tuesdays, the DI will run Jeff Greenfield's syndicated column. Greenfield is a young, funny, uncompromising liberal. Over an already exhaustive political career, this self-confessed "political junkie" has worked as an aide to Robert Kennedy and a speechwriter for former New York Mayor John Lindsay, authored several books and countless articles, and is currently the political and media analyst for ABC News.

On Thursdays, the DI will present "On The Right" by William F. Buckley. Buckley is one of America's most respected and articulate conservative commentators. A best-selling author of both fiction and non-fiction, host of the weekly television program "Firing Line," and founder of the conservative chronicle National Review, Buckley's columns provide astute political analysis laced with dry, biting wit.

The DI will end the week with James Cahoy's local column. Cahoy, a second-year UI law student and former DI metro editor, regularly pens manic columns that poignantly reflect his "trapped-in-the-Seventies" obsessions and haircut.

In addition, the DI will feature editorial cartoons by syndicated artists Jeff MacNelly and Dana Summers and local cartoonist Ed Taylor.

But access to the DI editorial page is not limited to our regular contributors. As always, the DI welcomes well-reasoned guest opinions and letters to the editor for publication.

Jay Casini is editor of The Daily Iowan.

Letters to the editor must be typed, signed, and include the writer's address and phone number for verification. Letters should be no longer than one double-spaced page in length. The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length and clarity.

Soviet Union 'quietly watches' Poland

MOSCOW (AP) — Twenty-one years after it sent tanks to crush the "Prague Spring" reforms in Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union is watching quietly as Poland takes its political changes even further, breaking the communist monopoly on power.

The Soviet reaction to events in Poland, including the nomination of Solidarity journalist Tadeusz Mazowiecki as prime minister, indicated how Mikhail Gorbachev has shaken up the Kremlin's relations with its Eastern European allies since Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces halted Czechoslovakia's reforms on Aug. 21, 1968.

In contrast with Leonid Brezhnev, Gorbachev is willing to allow his allies to find their own way as he experiments with reform at home and grapples with nationalist movements on his own side of the border.

Even in Hungary and Poland, where reforms have proceeded the furthest, they apparently have not gone beyond what is now acceptable to the Kremlin. It is no longer certain where that limit is.

"The formation of a government in Poland is an internal affair of the Polish people," Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskykh told a news briefing Monday.

"At the same time, we are not indifferent to it. Poland is a neighbor and an ally," he said. "We hope the political forces in the country will act constructively to find a way out of the crisis."

Wojciech Jaruzelski

Gremitskykh was reiterating the cautious Soviet reaction to events in the past several months as Solidarity has been legalized and carried out a successful election campaign.

In the meantime, Poland's Communist Party has not been able to form a government, and President Wojciech Jaruzelski was forced to turn to Solidarity for a prime minister.

Soviet officials last week expressed satisfaction at Solidarity leader Lech Walesa's statement that even a Solidarity-led government had responsibilities to the Warsaw Pact.

In 1981, Jaruzelski crushed Solidarity after it grew into a national movement, ending speculation that Brezhnev would again use Soviet soldiers to bring a wayward ally back in line.

Official Soviet TV and radio are reporting the events in Poland but generally refraining from making judgments about the political situation.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda on Monday painted a grim picture of shortages of meat and other goods. It said Poland was on the brink of "hyperinflation."

Prospects of a coalition of Solidarity and two minor, non-communist parties were "becoming all the more realistic," Pravda said. In contrast, it said the Polish Communist Party was "living through one of the most difficult periods of its history."

Gorbachev has said several times in trips to Eastern Europe that the Soviet Union believes its allies should be free to find their own road to developing socialism, depending on local conditions.

Twenty-one years ago, on Aug. 21, 1968, Brezhnev and the Warsaw Pact sent soldiers to Czechoslovakia to end a reform spearheaded not by an organized opposition, but by Alexander Dubcek and the Czechoslovak Communist Party.

Gorbachev is reported to be frustrated with the conservative leadership in Prague that has been in power since 1968 and continues to block reform.

But the Soviet reaction to the anniversary of the invasion indicates a continuing sensitivity.

The Soviet Union has never said that it made a mistake in sending soldiers into Czechoslovakia.

In response to a question Monday about how the Soviet Union now views the invasion, Gremitskykh said only that it had to be understood in the context of the times.

Walesa says Communists have place in Solidarity

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Monday there is a place for the Communist Party in Poland if it embraces democratic reform, but it cannot try to hang on to power and privilege by force.

"Fish begins to rot from its head. I am beginning from the head. We need reforms ... If the party doesn't understand that, and starts provoking and only provoking — and they are — then it will lose everything," he said.

Walesa advanced his goal to end the Communist Party's 45-year monopoly on political power when President Wojciech Jaruzelski nominated Solidarity adviser Tadeusz Mazowiecki as prime minister Saturday.

The party Central Committee, after an emergency weekend meeting, threatened to withhold support from the first East bloc government without a communist at the helm if it does not receive a significant enough role.

In an interview with The Associated Press at Solidarity's headquarters in Gdansk, Walesa said there is room in the government for the Communist Party if its members accept democracy and pluralism.

"They (the party) should not fight for keeping their posts anymore. If they are wise, we ourselves will offer them those posts, because we need wise people, no matter what membership they have," he said. "But if they want to take posts by force, we won't give them."

"We are not against the party, but we are against its monopoly and stupidity. If this 'nomenklatura' understands what the point is, it will also be needed," he said, referring to those given control of key political and economic jobs virtue of their party membership.

He said the party must "catch up with the times" to survive.

"If they play the fool, they can lose even more," he said. "They will be rejected. And if they understand what these times mean, the party may rule for a long time because there are many wonderful people there who are prepared for that. But they have to change the system, their concept."

Asked why, after initial reluctance, Solidarity decided to forge ahead and try to form a government so quickly, Walesa said the independent movement's achievements since April were insecure as long as the party remained on top.

"I don't want a lot of hype. I just want something I can count on."

Cyclones look to upset Hawkeyes

Instate game is up for grabs after Iowa's dismal opener

Michael Trikk
The Daily Iowan

For the first time in a while Iowa State is supposed to have a chance at beating Iowa when the two teams hook up on Jack Trice Field at Cyclone Stadium Saturday.

Kickoff is at 12:10 p.m. Iowa State (1-1) has not beat Iowa (0-1) since 1982, but came within a touchdown, 10-3, of winning last season. Couple last season's score with Iowa's 44-6 opening loss to Oregon and you have a scenario Iowa State fans have been praying for since 1982.

"It's the first time that truly a lot of Cyclone people are coming into the ballgame with hope, a little bit of glimmer that we might win," Walden said earlier this week. "I don't think it's 50-50, but there's a 30 to 40 percent chance that if we play well, we could win."

Iowa is a six-point favorite, but that doesn't sit well with Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry.

"They look a heckuva lot better than we do at this point," Fry said. "I don't think we've proven anything yet. We're a bad football team based on the Oregon game. They have a win under their belt, they have the key ingredients back and yet they have us favored, and we play in Ames. That's ridiculous."

Iowa's opening loss came as a surprise to Walden and he doesn't expect the same type of effort against his Cyclones Saturday.

"Iowa is probing to find the replacements for the guys they had a year ago," Walden said. "On film (Iowa) played pretty good on defense. They just gave up some big plays. You can play pretty good in a ball game and all of a sudden four plays destroy you."

"I didn't see the real Iowa. Hayden didn't even see the real Iowa," Walden added.

Fry may not have seen the real Iowa. See Football, Page 2B

Iowa football defenders Jim Johnson (71), Jeff Koeppel (51) and Jason Dumont (97) celebrate after sacking Oregon quarterback Bill Musgrave Saturday in the Hawkeyes season-opening loss to the Ducks, 44-6. The trio will set sights on Iowa State quarterback Brett Oberg Saturday at Ames.

Hawks to break in new facility

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The state of Michigan is coming to town.

The Iowa field hockey team, in one of only two weekends of home competition, will play Michigan State at the new $600,000 Iowa field hockey facility today at 3 p.m.

Sunday, the Hawkeyes meet the Wolverines at 11 a.m. The only other home match of the season is with Northwestern Oct. 28.

Field hockey

"We're hoping we have a good crowd," Iowa forward Erica Richards said. "Since we're not in Kinnick (Stadium) anymore, people will be closer together and hopefully they'll get a little more rowdy here."

Iowa is 7-0-1 and ranked seventh on the first NCAA field hockey poll released this week.

Today's match with the Spartans will be the Hawkeyes' first game in the newly-formed Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference. After a lack of team membership at Big Ten schools, the conference could no longer sponsor the sport.

Iowa, Michigan State, Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State of the Big Ten and former independent Northern Illinois will play a double round-robin format over the year.

"I think the most pressure is because of the new conference," Richards said. See Field Hockey, Page 2B

UBS - O - METER

81 Years and Counting

Marty Prather, from Springfield, Mo., holds a 'cubs-o-meter' Thursday at Busch Stadium in St. Louis. The sign mimics a recent trend of signs at Wrigley Field in Chicago. Prather was showing off his handiwork before the opening pitch of the Cardinals-Mets game.

Chicago pads lead in East but Cardinals won't give in

Cubs win, Cards lose

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson, who entered the game in an 11-for-58 slump, hit a three-run homer Thursday that led Chicago past Philadelphia 9-1 and reduced its magic number to six for clinching the National League East.

Chicago, which had 17 hits, stretched its lead over St. Louis to 4 games. The Cardinals lost to New York 6-1 Thursday night.

Greg Maddux, 18-12, pitched a six-hitter to equal his victory total last season. Maddux, pounded for seven runs and 12 hits in 4 1-3 innings against the Phillies on Sept. 6, struck out out six and walked two in his seventh complete game.

Eight Cubs starters had two hits. Philadelphia, which won 9-8 on Wednesday, has allowed 35 hits in two games.

Chicago, 34-19 against left-handed starters, went ahead in the second on Rick Wrona's RBI single off Terry Mulholland, 4-7.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Frank DiPino, no fan of Don Zimmer, likes the St. Louis Cardinals' chances of catching the Chicago Cubs with him as their manager.

"With Zimmer at the helm, you know he's panicking," said DiPino, one of four St. Louis relievers who shut out the New York Mets for 6 2-3 innings after the Cardinals won 5-3 for their fourth straight victory Wednesday night. "I have a lot of confidence in that little guy."

"Now we're three games back. It'd be nice to be four up when the Cubs come to town. With Zimmer at the helm, it's possible."

In the absence of Todd Worrell, who leads the Cardinals with 20 saves but was lost for the season with an elbow injury Sept. 4, Manager Whitey Herzog is using a variety pack of relievers. After starter Ken Hill faltered Wednesday, DiPino, Scott Terry, John Costello and Ken Dayley combined to allow four hits.

DiPino was an unhappy reliever in Chicago last season, signing with St. Louis as a free agent.

DiPino, who worked three scoreless innings Wednesday to get the victory, is 8-0 with a 2.61 earned-run average with St. Louis. He was 2-3 with a 4.98 ERA with Chicago last season, and says bullpen management could be a big factor if the Cardinals come back to win the East.

"I'm working with the best," DiPino said of Herzog. "He keeps me in there when I'm doing well and gets me out of there as soon as I start to struggle."

"And if you have a bad game, the next night you get to go right out there to redeem yourself."

DiPino says that Zimmer, on the other hand, has no game plan when it comes to his bullpen.

"In pressure situations, it seems like he goes against the odds all the time," DiPino said. "You just can't do that."

DiPino said that last season Zimmer had a tendency to either give his bullpen too much rest, or too much work.

"Goose (Gossage) would sit for seven or eight days at a time," DiPino said. "He put a lot of pressure on Goose."

"Sometimes he'd leave relievers in too long. I thought I was misused. Sometimes he would just leave me in there to die."

DiPino said that certain managers know how to handle their bullpen. "Jim just doesn't have that," DiPino said.

Schillig's happy to be at home

Rick Gabriel
The Daily Iowan

Micki Schillig is looking forward to the weekend.

"It's nice to be home," the Iowa women's tennis coach said. The Hawkeyes will be hosting the Hawkeye Invitational this weekend at the Klotz Tennis Center.

The tournament will feature a strong field made up of Clemson, U.S. International and Minnesota. Clemson and U.S. International were both top-20 teams last year and Schillig expects them to be tough again.

"It's a special tournament," Schillig said. "It's the first time we've ever brought teams of this caliber to Iowa. The competition will be stiff, but it will make us a tougher team."

One thing Schillig said she is finding tough is deciding on the line-up for her team. The tournament is set up to have four, flighted brackets for singles and two brackets for doubles. Schillig said she still hasn't determined who will play in which bracket.

"Our lineup isn't set yet," she said. "We're waiting to see if two injured players, Catherine Wilson and Tracey Donnelly, will be able to play."

Wilson, who is recovering from a knee injury, said she's ready.

"Hopefully I'll be able to play, I'm very excited," she said. "I'll just play doubles if I play because I'm not ready for singles yet. I just hope I don't let anyone down."

Wilson also realizes the strength of this weekend's competition, but said the team is taking it as a challenge.

"We're looking at this as a test," Wilson said. "Last week's tournament (All-Iowa Invitational) was good practice, but this will show us where we stand. Nobody's expecting us to win so we don't have anything to lose."

Schillig said that she has no expectations in terms of winning or losing, just in terms of personal performance.

"I expect them to go out and give 110 percent and keep up the intensity we have in practice," she said. "We're progressing but I think they're tired because of all the new things."

Tournament action gets underway today at 3 p.m., with action winding up Sunday at 8 a.m. In the event of bad weather, the matches will be moved into the Recreation Building.

Iowa prepared for conference opener

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Hoping to be named one of the country's top-20 teams, the Iowa volleyball team will open its Big Ten season at Illinois today and at Purdue Saturday.

This could prove to be the toughest weekend of conference play for the Hawkeyes, as Illinois currently holds the No. 5 position on the NCAA poll.

Volleyball

"Illinois will be tough," Iowa sophomore middle-hitter Caryn Cumerlato said. "They're a great team. And if we beat them, we could be ranked in the top 20. (Winning) would really boost our attitudes because we feel we're up there."

Iowa coach Ruth Nelson had hoped that their win over 16th-ranked Santa Barbara last weekend would put them on the ranking. Unfortunately, it didn't work out that way, and Santa Barbara was right back

Caryn Cumerlato at No. 16 this week.

"It's just par for the course," Nelson said. "The people who do the poll probably figured it was a fluke that we beat them. But we're eighth or ninth in the Midwest region right now."

Duran predicts he will KO Sugar Ray

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roberto Duran on Thursday predicted he would knock out Sugar Ray Leonard in their WBC super middleweight title fight on Dec. 7, while Leonard vowed to recapture the magic that eluded him in his draw with Thomas Hearns.

"I will be the winner by KO," Duran said through an interpreter. "When he stops clowning around and starts fighting, that will be the end."

Duran, 38, is intent upon gaining a measure of revenge for his infamous "No Mas" defeat at the hands of Leonard nine years ago. Duran, frustrated by Leonard's showboating, quit boxing in the eighth round and thus allowed Leonard to avenge what remains his lone loss as a professional.

The only other blemish on Leonard's otherwise perfect record is the 12-round draw against Hearns on June 12. Leonard said Thursday that he was not mentally prepared for the bout, a shortcoming he promised would not occur when he meets Duran in the rubber match of their rivalry.

"I was in tip-top shape physically, but I wasn't OK mentally," Leonard said. "It was a no-win situation, because everyone expected me to knock him out in one round. The motivation was not there."

"That wasn't me out there against Tommy. I just didn't have that magic," he said. "So I'm going back to the drawing board, back to the basics, to get in total focus this time."

To help him reach his goal, Leonard said he would train David Jacobs and will use Jose Correa. "I thought he would be the man for this particular fight," he said.

The 33-year-old Leonard said he wouldn't go toe-to-toe with Duran, but doubted whether he could frustrate his foe again, as he did in New Orleans in 1980, by tauntingly dancing around the ring.

"I think he's prepared for that. I think he has the mindset now that he won't allow that to happen," Leonard said. "I'm going to do it, but I don't think he'll make an irrational decision to quit."

While Duran has been waiting to get a shot at Leonard for nearly a decade, Leonard said his rival finally became a worthy opponent when he won a split decision over Iran Barkley to win the WBC middleweight crown last February.

Cubs win coin toss

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Cubs won a coin flip Thursday that will give them the home field for a playoff game if they and the St. Louis Cardinals finish the regular season tied for first place in the National League East.

The single game playoff for the division title would be held Monday, Oct. 2 at Wrigley Field.

Soviet upset with Athletes greed

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet deputy sports minister attacked some of his nation's athletes Thursday for being too interested in money, singling out tennis star Natalia Zvereva for criticism.

Alexander Kozlovsky, whose chief responsibility is sports exchanges with the West, said he was pleased with the growth of East-West contacts but dismayed by the motivation of some athletes now competing outside the Soviet Union.

"Some are too interested in money. When you go someplace to work for three or four years, the first thing in your mind should be the people you're going to work with, the city you're going to, the chances for improving in your sport," he said in an interview.

"But in some cases the first thing I see is the interest in money. Boys of 30 and more are supposed to be more sophisticated."

Kozlovsky, who spoke English in the interview at his office in the state sports committee headquarters in downtown Moscow, referred to the biblical story of "the expulsion of the money-changers from the temple" in attacking those athletes.

"I don't like at all this situation which is created around some athletes when they are working on their contracts (with western clubs)," he said. "When money interests play the biggest part, that is what I don't like."

Flojo blasts critic

NEW YORK (AP) — Florence Griffith Joyner, accused by Darrell Robinson of buying growth hormones from him, on Thursday called the sprinter "a compulsive, crazy, lying, lunatic."

"I don't do drugs," Griffith Joyner said. "I never have taken any drugs. I don't believe in them. It's a false accusation."

Robinson detailed his dealings with the 1988 Olympic heroine and other track and field athletes and coaches, including Carl Lewis, in the West German magazine Stern. A copy of the story was made available to The Associated Press on Wednesday night and Robinson repeated the charges Thursday on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Griffith Joyner, accompanied by her husband Al Joyner, the 1984 Olympic triple jump champion, and business manager Gordon Baskin, flew from her California home to New York for the early morning show in hopes of meeting her accuser. But Robinson failed to show up. However, the two confronted each other via a hookup from his Toronto home, and the rhetoric was bitter.

Kite, Strange lead U.S.

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England (AP) — Pairing four big names in the opening match, team captains Ray Floyd and Tony Jacklin made their opening bids for the Ryder Cup Thursday.

"There's nothing much different from what I expected," Floyd said after he nominated Curtis Strange and Tom Kite as America's leadoff team against Europe's Nick Faldo and Ian Woosnam in the opening match Friday.

Floyd said his reasoning was simple.

"I expected Tony to lead with Faldo and Woosie," Floyd said. "I wanted Curtis against them, because he's beaten them both in the U.S. Open (in 1988 and '89). Kite's game is very complementary to Curtis. Their games are very compatible."

Yankees, Brewers duke it out

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Polonia, Mell Hall and Mark Knudson were ejected after a bench-clearing brawl in the sixth inning of the first game of Thursday's two-night doubleheader between the Milwaukee Brewers and New York Yankees.

Iowa last Saturday, but he saw enough to shake up his lineup for this week's game.

Matt Rodgers will start in place of Tom Poholsky at quarterback and Jim Hujsak will take over the punting duties. Tony Stewart may start at running back and Brad Quast may return after missing the opener with a leg injury.

Iowa State is led by junior-college transfer tailback Blaise Bryant, quarterback Steve Oberg and senior tight end Mike Busch.

"They have the nucleus to have the best team up there since Jim has been there," Fry said. "The thing that has really given them a boost is that big junior-college running back. He's much better than anybody anticipated he would be. He's more than taken the place of Joe Henderson and Henderson was a real fine back. But this guy is bigger and faster.

"They've opened up their game considerably. Jim has been real conservative in getting his program started and now he's opened it up, which means he is much more confident that they can handle it now. They present a heck of a problem."

Iowa sophomore midfielder Shirley Kessler said. "We want to get off to the right track and move up."

Kessler has proved her desire to play.

The San Diego native was declared ineligible at the beginning of the year because of a lack of hours. She finished a class before the first weekend of competition, but the release didn't make it through the system before the team left town.

Last weekend Kessler opened the Stanford game with the Hawkeyes first goal.

"Since I didn't start last year, I will be nervous," Kessler said of the homestead. "I get nervous in front of people anyway, but since this is at home, it'll add to it."

Richards, co-MVP of the Big Ten in 1988 and the conference's leading scorer with 27 goals in 25 games, poured in seven of the Hawkeyes 14 goals over a three-game stretch last weekend.

The senior from Pennsauken, N.J., said she feels she has the ability to continue to be potent offensively.

"That's the way I should be playing every weekend," she said. "I know how that sounds, but the team played so well that it was easy for me to concentrate on my offense."

"I had so much fun," Richards added. "The ball movement was great and we got a lot of support when we were moving it around."

Michigan will have an intrastate match with the Spartans at the Iowa field hockey facility Saturday at 1 p.m. After the weekend, the Hawkeyes travel to Northwestern a week from Saturday for a 1 p.m. match.

Nelson said her goal for the weekend is to prove that last weekend was not a fluke.

And she would like the team to begin working on her goal for the season — by winning 75 percent of its matches.

"It would be realistic for me to say we can win 90 percent, if I were the person out there playing," Nelson said. "But since I'm not, that's up to them."

But for these matches, the players seem up to the challenge.

"We're really not intimidated," Iowa junior middle-hitter Jenny

Rees said. "It could be intimidating, since we start with really tough teams. But we're motivated to start with the best."

"We had a good pre-season. We had highs and lows, and it was good to get those lows out of the way before the Big Ten competition starts."

According to Rees, starting against the 1988 Big Ten champions will give the Hawkeyes a chance to see where they stand and how they need to improve.

Although Rees said the team has improved a lot in the pre-season, she and her teammates need to work on consistency.

"Our transitions (from offense to defense) have been quicker," Rees said. "And we're communicating more on the floor because we're getting used to each other. But we need to be more consistent, and we have to play with a sense of pride."

Nelson said that Illinois could be a little lacking because two of their key players are injured. But she said she does not count on that helping the Hawkeyes.

"They have depth on their bench," Nelson said. "We don't have a lot of depth on the bench. We just get all we can out of what we have. I don't worry about what's going on with them. I'm too busy playing traffic cop on our side of the net. About halfway through the season, I'll start paying attention to our opponents."

Even if the Hawkeyes lose to Illinois tonight, Cumerlato said she feels they will still accomplish something.

"As long as we play well and know we didn't let down, it will be O.K.," she said. "We can only get stronger."

Iowa Notebook

Iowa to get early peek at golf meet

Rita Heimes
The Daily Iowan

Call it a sneak preview. Iowa women's golf coach Diane Thomason will get a chance to scout the other Big Ten teams when the Hawks travel to the Lady Northern Invitational golf tournament in Minnesota this weekend.

The event is held each fall at the university that will host the Big Ten championships in the spring.

Thomason said the tournament is good because the golfers get to play the course and the coaches get to see the opposition before the spring Big Tens.

But though she says it is a good tournament to win, Thomason does not consider the Lady Northern to be too significant.

"I don't place as much importance on this tourney as I do on the Big Tens," Thomason said. "Everyone's still experimenting with their schedule and with their players, and it's only the third tournament for most."

Iowa heads into this, their third tournament, with a second place team finish at the Hawkeye Invitational and a tie for sixth at last weekend's Lady Tar Heel Invite.

The contest pits nine Big Ten teams (Northwestern does not have a golf program) along with Iowa State, Northern Iowa, Illinois State, Kansas State, Minnesota-Duluth, Southern Illinois and Winona State.

Minnesota coach Nancy Harris acknowledged that while a lot of things can change over the winter, this fall tournament does give the Big Ten teams a chance to see who is the best.

"I guess by the end of the weekend we'll know for sure," Harris said when asked to pick a winner. "It will probably be Indiana, Iowa or Ohio State."

Thomason agreed with Harris, picking Indiana as the toughest opponent Iowa will face. But she didn't kick the Hawkeyes out of the winner's circle either.

"We're definitely going to be a contender," Thomason promised. Senior Kelley Brooke will play the number one spot for the Hawks this weekend as her fifth place tie at last week's tournament in North Carolina was Iowa's top individual finish.

Close behind her is junior Stacey Arnold, who leads the team with an average of 75.8 strokes for six rounds.

President Patton: Iowa men's swimming coach Glenn Patton has been elected president of the College Swim Coaches Association of America. Patton served as president-elect last year and began his term as president at the College Swim Coaches Convention this week. He has been coaching the Hawkeyes for 14 years.

Hawkeye history: On Sept. 22, 1979, the Hawkeyes blew a 21-7 third-quarter lead, losing 24-21 to nationally prominent Nebraska on a 30-yard field goal by the Huskers Dean Sokup with five minutes to play. On Sept. 23, 1972, senior fullback Frank Holmes gained 193 of Iowa's 313 yards rushing, leading the Hawkeyes to a 19-11 win over Oregon State. The win was the first game on the new artificial turf in Kinnick Stadium. On Sept. 24, 1983, seventh-ranked Iowa upset third-ranked Ohio State 20-14 before 66,125 fans in the newly-expanded Kinnick Stadium.

Basketball? Already?: The Big Ten is already sending flyers to the media for the first Big Ten Men's Basketball Tipoff Luncheon Oct. 11 at the Chicago Marriott Downtown Hotel. Wayne Larrivee, announcer for Big Ten football on ESPN, will be the master of ceremonies. Tickets for the 11:30 a.m. Luncheon are available to the general public for $25 or $250 for a table of ten.

Loose lips . . . : The Iowa Board in Control of Athletics has revised a policy that would require athletic department employees to sign agreements that would prohibit them from releasing information about student-athletes that would be deemed confidential. The program would require new employees to sign the agreement before being hired. Current employees would also be asked to sign the document.

Hi dad: Matt Rodgers, the listed Iowa starter at quarterback against Iowa State at Ames Saturday will have a lot on the line besides his first start as a Hawkeye. Matt's father Jimmy, the Boston Celtics basketball coach, will be on hand. "Dad couldn't make it to our game last week against Oregon, and I haven't been able to talk to him about it," the younger Rodgers said. "In addition to the Iowa State game, he plans to see us play against Tulsa next week in Iowa City. Then he'll be busy with the Celtics' season."

Quotable: Iowa field hockey senior Erica Richards on Iowa having a new field, new assistant coaches and only a second-year head coach: "We've been through so many changes while we've been here that we keep looking over our shoulder to see what's going to happen next."

Hugo could interrupt games

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Hurricane Hugo could force South Carolina to shift its football game with Georgia Tech from Saturday night to Sunday afternoon, and the Maryland-Clemson game also could be affected.

A decision on whether to postpone the Georgia Tech-South Carolina game will be made on Friday, Athletic Director King Dixon said Thursday.

"We are taking it hour by hour to see what the storm is going to do. I would think we would have to do that (make a decision) early on sometime on Friday," Dixon said.

"Of course, we'd like to play the game as scheduled. But we have to look at two particular areas. No. 1 is safety. We have to have power and lights," he said.

"Secondly, if substantial wind would prevail, we would not want to have people in the stadium, particularly in the upper tiers. We're watching it very closely."

School officials are checking hourly with the National Weather Service to keep track of the powerful hurricane, Dixon said. Hugo is expected to hit the South Carolina coast late Thursday night or early Friday morning.

X-country teams hit the road

Men conclude 1st phase at Illinois State

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross country team will end the first of three phases this Saturday at Illinois State.

The Hawkeyes have two breaks this year, the first one starting after the weekend's meet against Northern Iowa and Illinois State. "We would like to finish this week

M. Cross country

on a positive note," said Iowa coach Larry Wiecek. "After this weekend we'll get a chance to regroup and evaluate our performances." Returning for Illinois State, the defending Missouri Valley champions, are juniors David Wilson and Tony Daniels.

"We've won the last four out of five conference championships and I feel Wilson and Daniels are the top two runners in the conference," Illinois State coach John Coughlan said.

Women look for faster times on flat course

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

Saturday's meet at Illinois State may allow the Iowa women's cross country team to run some of its fastest times all season according to head coach Jerry Hassard.

It will be the quickest course they run on all year according to Hassard.

W. Cross country

"I would like to see at least five or six of the girls run under 18 minutes," said Hassard. "The team has had a week of unloading training. They cut back on mileage and aren't as tired as they were at the last meet. The course is very flat so the athletes should speed through."

Iowa will be facing Purdue, Illinois State, Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Marquette, Indiana State, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, Southwest Missouri State and College of St. Francis.

OTL. Second week. Pickers' race tightens.

Brevity. Like it or lump it. This week's award — $25 gift certificate from Ewers Men's Store. Leader board: Levy was 7-3 in the first week. Pure luck.

Trilk and Miller are 6-4. Weiland is 5-5. Remember that crack about letting a girl pick? We apologize. We didn't realize how mad that would make her sister.

player Troy Skinner. Advice from Iowa coach Tom Davis — 'Troy, don't look stupid.' Tom, he won't. He stole all of Miller's picks. Epilogue — Keep picking.

UI Symphony: Nielsen, Tchaikovsky a-go-go

Jennifer Weglarz and Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Note — Counternote

Steve: So, Jen ... got any threatening phone calls lately?
Jen: As a matter of fact, I have ... but fully, the answering machine took the call.
Steve: I wasn't so fortunate. Some supercilious spud wanted my attention. Something about trivializing peoples' livelihoods. Did you catch any of the pertinent details, hon?
Jen: All on tape.
Steve: Good. So, what did you do Wednesday night, Jen?
Jen: My job, Steve. Some of us have them.
Steve: So, that's what you did, huh?
Jen: That was my evening, thank you very much.
Steve: Excuse me, Jen, but did it ever occur to you that other people might have had interesting nights? HUH?
Jen: Ah, no, not really, Steve. I know that's a trifle inconsiderate of one, but, well, one's own priorities and all that. You needn't be so intensely horrible about it. Did you do anything at all Wednesday night of which one could possibly at all be so appraised?
Steve: Why yes, Jen, thanks for asking! I went to the UI Symphony concert last night, with James Dixon conducting and Kenneth Amada as guest pianist in a program that included Carl Nielsen's Fourth Symphony and Tchaikovsky's First Piano Concerto, thanks.
Jen: Oh, how very.
Steve: Yes, it was. The program opened, Jen, with the Nielsen — "The Inextinguishable." Jen, secret question: Is Nielsen just, well, noise? I ask because you know these things.
Jen: He wrote a very nice piece for the oboe, Steve, and I think that's all we need to know.
Steve: Well, that's a relief. I found "The Inextinguishable" tough going, although the orchestra played lots and lots. Dixon was positively grim with concentration, and he worked those kids up there 'til they were about ready to drop. Still, I thought the piece was a bit of a snoozer.
Jen: Obviously, you hold no truck with the program notes: "... the spirit of survival, the strength of all that will not be extinguished!"

Steve: (Hey — how'd you get a program ...) Yes, well, anyway. The second half of the night was Tchaikovsky's First Piano Concerto. Hoo boy.
Jen: Will you cut to the quick and not drop exasperating hints?
Steve: Well, there was this kid, see. All throughout the Nielsen, he was just quietly reading a "Bloom County" book, minding his own business.
Jen: How vexing!
Steve: Well, no — I mean, he really was behaving himself. But the Tchaikovsky piece is so grand, and the orchestra was playing it so well ... and this kid was busy sketching!
Jen: Erm. Yes.
Steve: Well, I guess his Opus the Penguin was pretty good ... but oh, Jen! So was the Tchaikovsky! Kenneth Amada plays the piano with his whole body! And Dixon conducted like he was avenging some foreign war! It was marvelous! Oh!

Jen: It definitely is interjections a-go-go for you today, Steve.
Steve: In case you're interested — and I'm beginning to suspect you aren't — there was no encore. But I did touch the "Les Miserables" van out in the parking lot.
Jen: Erm. Yes. Revolutionary goings-on, what?
Steve: Hey, Jen — what's with this feigned interest? Here I took extensive notes on a better-than-average UI symphony concert, specifically so I could tell you all about it, and what do you do? You "erm" your way through our entire review. So please — share it with all of us.
Jen: Well, hastily scrawled comments like: "I was ready to puke — with anxiety" and "lazy, lazy strings" don't present one a rounded picture, free from bias and those other journalistic nasties penicillin can't cure.
Steve: Where did you get my program notes?

Off-beat concerts staged on farm

Robin Lemke
The Daily Iowan

Eight-and-a-half miles outside of Iowa City may seem an unlikely location for people to go to in search of alternative music. But all summer long the Blue Tree Farmhouse has been the site for a variety of bands.

Perry Blakley, a Newton, Iowa, native, has been arranging concerts on his farm since he moved there in the fall of 1988. Blakley had lived in Chicago and played in the band Stool. While in Chicago, Blakley was exposed to a diversity of music, and when he moved back to Iowa to raise a family he decided to participate in the local music scene.

The motivation behind the concert-on-the-farm concept came from Blakley's frustration over the lack of an outlet for alternative music. Notes Blakley, who studied music at the UI, "the musical styles offered (in Iowa City) don't coincide with the variety of tastes held by many."

Most of the bands that've played at the Blue Tree have been classified as hard-core punk and "industrial jazz" bands. Such Iowa bands as the Iowa Beef Experience, Ritual of Agony, Divin' Duck, and 100 and None Delinquents performed this summer. No Empathy out of Chicago, Insecticide from Los Angeles and Toxic Reasons from Indianapolis are a few of the bands that have traveled to the farm to perform while on tour.

Blakley hosted a show every weekend throughout the '89 summer, and the success of the concerts have persuaded him to rent halls to continue the performances indoors this fall. Blakley only charges $3, with all the proceeds going directly to the bands. He states he's not out to make a profit, but rather is attempting to enhance the area's musical scene.

Blakley has little time for promotional work on his shows. He spends most of his time talking to anyone involved in musical acts that may be interested in playing in the area. The low overhead allows him to support his interest while providing the area with a musical alternative.

"I am not trying to make a business out of the music," says Blakley. "The music scene has been full of compromises for the sake of making money. I am an avid music lover, and want to emphasize the music for its own sake."

On Friday the Generals, Horny Genius and Shojocat will be playing at the Blue Tree Farmhouse. The music will start at 7 p.m., and there will be a $3 admission. The Blue Tree Farm is located eight miles south of Iowa City, on Old Highway 218, one-half mile south of Hills. The outdoor concerts will continue through October 1, with indoor shows to begin soon after.

'High Hopes' plays on philosophies, real life

Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The first character we meet in "High Hopes," a British comedy written and directed by Mike Leigh, is Wayne, an eerily naive country boy who arrives in a dreary London with a suitcase in one hand, a plastic bag in the other and the hopes of starting a new life in the city.

But "High Hopes" isn't the story of a country boy's trials in a teeming metropolis. Rather, Wayne is put on a bus back to his rural hometown and is never seen again. The scenario of foolish optimism is unceremoniously junked.

The true focal characters of this sardonic social satire, then, are Cyril (Philip Davis) and Shirley (Ruth Sheen), the working-class couple that takes Wayne in and puts him up for the night. Cyril, a strict Marxist, sees himself as the enemy of England's class society. But Shirley is ready to move beyond Marxist slogans and do something more bourgeois — she wants to have a baby.

At the Bijou

"High Hopes" gets going when Cyril's mother, a bitter widow on the verge of senility, locks herself out of her house. This sets the stage for a collision of the three central couples, each of whom represent a class in Margaret Thatcher's England. Mrs. Bender (Cyril's mother) takes refuge with her upper-class next-door neighbors, Letitia and Philip, a pair of Tory boobs who are disgusted to find this working-class crone of their doorstep. Mrs. Bender's tacky, bourgeois daughter Valerie, and then Shirley and Cyril, must come to rescue her.

And the brilliance of the simply plotted "High Hopes" is that Leigh presents the contradictions of three types of lifestyles in ways that are sometimes subtle and sometimes blaring.

Just as the foolish optimism of Wayne is rejected, the film is also critical of Cyril's pessimism. When he and Shirley visit Marx's grave at Hyde Park Cemetery, the camera lingers on the stone, which reads: "Philosophers only interpret the world in various ways. The point, however, is to change it."

This is the thought that disturbs Cyril as he realizes his own hypocrisy. And later, when Shirley takes Mrs. Bender home with her, this is the thought that triggers Cyril's altered perspective of his life. After seeing his old, afraid mother to bed, Cyril realizes he must take care of her. There's a suggestion as well that he's open to having children of his own. He cannot reject the family.

These are, in fact, the high hopes Leigh is championing: not foolish optimism or shallow pessimism, but something more human and realistic. To change the world, Leigh seems to say through this film, you first have to live in it.

CAREERS DAY is sponsored by the University Placement Offices, Cooperative Education and the College of Nursing

CAREERS DAY '89

is next Thursday, Sept. 28

10:30 am to 3:30 pm • Main Lounge, IMU

WHAT IS CAREERS DAY?

It is a day when representatives from business, industry, social service organizations and government meet informally with University of Iowa students for an exchange of career information. It is a chance to learn about career opportunities with approximately 160 employers.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Careers Day is open to all University students - Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors, and Graduate students.

WHY SHOULD YOU ATTEND?

Careers Day can help all students learn about many career fields. You can find out about post-graduation employment opportunities. Juniors and Seniors can talk with recruiters about job opportunities, resumes, and interviews. Freshmen and Sophomores who are trying to decide on a major can benefit by talking directly with professionals from different career fields. Information about cooperative education programs and internships will also be available.

TIPS ON HOW TO MAKE CAREERS DAY WORK FOR YOU:

Freshmen:

- Read the Careers Day list of employers in the Tuesday, September 26th Daily Iowan and circle the companies you'd like to visit.
- Bring a book bag to put your employer information in—the companies will give you a lot of brochures, reports, etc.
- Walk around and talk informally with the representatives. Stop in and out throughout the day.
- Dress casually.

Sophomores

- Follow the same steps as the freshmen and add these tips.
- Begin to explore internship and summer job possibilities by taking a resume with you. Ask the employers if they hire interns, and if so, in what areas.
- Dress professionally if you want to make a good impression.

Juniors

- Do all of the above with the addition of trying to research the employers a bit more before you attend Careers Day.
- Stop by 286 IMU, the Career Information Center, and 18 PHBA, the Employer Literature Room, to learn about each employer.
- Write down a number of questions to ask each employer about opportunities with their company. Leave your resume if you're looking for an internship or summer job.
- Dress professionally.

Seniors & Graduate Students:

- Target 10 or 15 companies to explore in depth.
- Write down questions to ask each representative, and make sure you visit with your targeted companies first. You can fire easily if you try to talk with too many.
- Pick up materials from each employer which will help you make a decision about whether you want to pursue opportunities with them.
- Tell them about yourself and leave your resume.
- Dress as you would for an interview.

TIPS FOR EVERYONE:

- Make sure that you check in at the information tables at the South and East entrances. Get a nametag and wear it. The employers like to know who you are.
- Plan to visit several times throughout the day. Last year, over 2,000 students talked with the employers. You're often standing in lines or pushing your way through crowded aisles. It's tiring! If you can take a few breaks, you'll feel fresher.
- Don't expect to get private time with the employers. This is an information fair, and you'll have lots of people trying to get themselves heard too. Be patient, and try your best to listen carefully when the employer is talking to you.
- Prepare questions that you want to ask. Don't ask the obvious. Only ask what you really want and need to know.
- Don't monopolize the employer's time. Stop back several times rather than overstaying your welcome. They're trying to visit with as many students as they can.
- Be sure to thank the employers for their time and materials.
- When you leave, please fill out a quick evaluation form. That will help the Careers Day Committee in planning for next year's event.

Watch for the Careers Day ad in next Tuesday's Daily Iowan. Find out which employers are attending and the majors they are seeking.
