Rawlings takes plunge, dines in Currier

Sonja West
 The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings opted for the beef stroganoff over the chicken patty with bun and got a small glimpse of how the other half lives when he dined at Currier Residence Hall Monday evening.

Accompanied by about 30 residence assistants and floor activity, athletic and association coordinators, and residence hall executives and staff members, Rawlings had a chance to mingle while tasting some of the food service specialties.

The meal was organized by Currier RA Kirk Goodwin and Stanley RA Michelle Bowman.

According to Goodwin, Rawlings wanted to become more involved in residence hall life and chided other UI administration members because they had never been in a residence hall.

Rawlings and his wife, Elizabeth, met with students in the Currier

Green Room prior to the meal for a reception and hors d'oeuvres of potato chips and chopped vegetables.

"He met a lot of residents, and he wants to play football with us sometime," Goodwin said. "We also got a chance to meet his wife."

After obediently clearing his tray, Rawlings had to leave, canceling the scheduled speech and question and answer session.

He was then given a tour of Currier and Stanley residence halls. He saw some of the student rooms and the other facilities such as the laundry room, the weight room and the computer room, Goodwin said.

"He saw the inside of some of the rooms that were open and stopped to talk to some of the residents," Goodwin said.

"It was most successful," he added. "He wants the Iowa faculty to be more involved with the residence halls."

Police search Allen's scar, find possible clues

Stabbing suspect held on bail

Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

A search of Iowa City resident Michael J. Allen's car revealed several items that may lead to new information in an ongoing attempted-murder investigation, said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

Winkelhake said he would not comment on the items seized in the search until the police conduct a complete review of the items.

Allen, 25, was charged with attempted murder Sunday after witnesses identified him as the man who stabbed a 29-year-old man in the chest and stomach Saturday in the parking lot of Mumm's Saloon and Eatery, 21 W. Benton St., according to Johnson County District Court records.

The victim is in fair and stable condition at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

About 1:30 a.m. Sunday, Allen was allegedly seen arguing with another man while the two played pool at Mumm's Saloon and Eatery. Both men reportedly left the bar, and a short while later the victim was found with stab wounds in the chest and stomach.

Allen, 2015 Bancroft St., was also seen at the time, according to a report filed by Iowa City Police Detective Paul Sueppel.

"The sequence of events that led up to the time of the stabbing are pretty well established," Winkelhake said.

The circumstances of the stabbing will not be completely known until the victim is able to speak to police officers, Winkelhake said.

He added that Sueppel was scheduled to interview the victim Monday afternoon. Sueppel was unavailable for comment Monday.

Allen, who is being held in the Johnson County Jail on $50,000 bail, elected to have an attorney present when talking with detectives, Winkelhake said.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 13.

If found guilty of attempted murder, Allen could face up to 25 years in jail, according to Johnson County Atty. J. Patrick White.

UI to 'personalize' commencement by holding 9 ceremonies

Amy Davoux
 The Daily Iowan

Beginning this December, the UI will no longer have one graduation ceremony — it will have nine.

The UI Office of the Registrar plans to instate a new graduation policy using nine individual ceremonies within each university college rather than the traditional single, universitywide ceremony held in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said that by changing the ceremony, graduation would become more personalized and more meaningful to the graduates, their families and their friends.

Individualized ceremonies will be held for the colleges of liberal arts, business, pharmacy, nursing and engineering, the professional colleges of law, medicine and dentistry, and the graduate college.

According to Assistant Registrar Jean Lawrence, the ceremonies will now contain more dialogue between the deans of the colleges and UI President Hunter Rawlings — or his presidential designee to the ceremony — as well as a conference of the degrees for the graduates. Both these were previously impossible due to the magnitude of the universitywide graduation.

Lawrence said no diplomas will be handed out at these ceremonies, holding with tradition.

"The university recognizes that there will be some loss by not having a universitywide graduation, but there's a trade-off," Dallam said. "What will be gained from dignity and personalization will more than offset these losses."

UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said that by changing the ceremony, graduation would become more personalized and more meaningful to the graduates.

Robert Wiley, dean of the College of Pharmacy, said he had not yet been informed by Dallam of the specifics of the new process. He said he would be content with graduation under either format.

Wiley said that though the previous graduation ceremony was large, the College of Pharmacy personalized this by adding a convocation.

According to Dallam, convocations were a popular way for the colleges to individually recognize students and highlight special honors they had earned. The convocations would likely cease at the instatement of the individualized graduation ceremonies, he added.

Both December and May graduations will use the new format, but August graduation will remain a mass graduation, because of the smaller number of August graduates, Dallam said.

The 1989 December graduation ceremonies will take place on December 15 and 16, Lawrence said. On the December 15, the College of Business will hold ceremonies in the Main Lounge of the Union, and the Graduate College will hold graduation ceremonies at Hancher Auditorium.

On the December 16, the College of Liberal Arts will hold graduation ceremonies in Carver-Hawkeye Arena; the College of Engineering's ceremonies will be held in the Union's Triangle Ballroom, and the College of Nursing's ceremonies will be held at Hancher.

Under the new format, there will be no official ceremonies held in December for the College of Pharmacy, or the professional colleges of law, medicine and dentistry, Dallam said. Students graduating from these schools in December will be invited to return in May for the official ceremony.

This decision was also attributed to low numbers graduating at semester.

Dallam said information about the individual colleges' graduation ceremonies will be mailed to students who have applied for a degree during late October or early November.

Inquiry sorts through potential causes of Pan Am 103 crash

LONDON (AP)—A British television inquiry into the Pan Am Flight 103 disaster said Monday that West Germany committed major blunders, including releasing the probable bomb-maker after a raid on a Palestinian group last year.

However, the chief Scottish investigator into the bombing of the plane over Lockerbie, Scotland, last December 21, said on the program: "We are still on course to being able to put together a case that will reveal who was responsible."

The British Broadcasting Corp.'s current affairs program "Panorama" reported that investigators are convinced the Syrian-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command — long the prime suspect — master-

HACAP housing helps homeless

Margot Krippner

A new avenue for assistance to the homeless has recently been created by Iowa City HACAP's Transitional Housing Program.

The Hawkeye Area Community Action Program, which attempts to buy or lease run-down housing, refurbish it and find a homeless family to occupy the home, was recently introduced in Johnson County, according to program coordinator Mike Maher.

The Transitional Housing Program is decidedly long-term in its outlook, Maher said. Program officials will carefully select a homeless family to occupy the furnished house for 18 months and then Bush's proposal, in his first speech to the General Assembly as president, was designed to spur a 40-nation conference in Geneva to ban chemical weapons entirely within 10 years.

Moose on loose may have excuse

LARRABEE, Iowa (AP)—Iowa's latest moose, making a brisk hike south, apparently is a loner who lost a territorial fight with another male and was forced to strike out on his own, according to a state moose expert.

"I suspect the wandering behavior is caused when they're pushed out of their territory by other bulls," said Lee Gladfelder of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

The moose is in northwest Iowa. It was first seen Friday night and Saturday morning near Sheldon and Ritter. Regional DNR official Gary Biederman said the moose was last seen Monday about a mile and a half west of Larrabee, about 35 miles southeast of Sheldon and about 130 miles northwest of Des Moines.

Gladfelder said wandering moose often follow river valleys, and this one may be following the Mill Creek River, which joins the Little Sioux River at Cherokee about five miles south of Larrabee. The Little Sioux merges with the Missouri about 60 miles downstream, near Onawa.

"But there's no rule about it," said Gladfelder. "Two mooses ago, if you can put it that way, the moose followed a northwest to southeast movement, which is generally the way drainages go. But the last moose moved across all of them. I don't know what he thought he was doing."

Perhaps he was tired, since the normal habitat for moose is about 400 miles north of Iowa.

Gladfelder cautioned would-be hunters to steer clear of the animal, since it is protected in Iowa. And he said sightseers should keep their distance from the moose.

"They're unpredictable, and they can be dangerous. They can do a lot of damage to a person. They're not aggressive; they don't go looking to ram a car or something. They still respect humans and are most likely to flee if they see a person. But they're not an animal to approach very closely," he said.

At least three other moose have visited Iowa in the past 12 years.

CAC describes proposals as 'castration' of student power

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

The UI Collegiate Associations Council voted a no-faith measure against Phillip Jones, UI associate vice president for academic affairs, regarding the treatment of UI Student Legal Services at Monday's CAC meeting.

Jones' office has been conducting an informal audit of UI student commissions and has recommended modifications, including moving the SLS office to an Iowa House location.

Also, in a September 14 memo to UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona, Jones said SLS supervising attorney James Prescott's contract should not be extended beyond January 31, 1990.

"We need to turn to somebody in this university who has the authority to judge things judiciously and promptly (and one of those people is) UI President Hunter Rawlings," said CAC President Dan Shanes. CAC Executive Associate Jerry Miller described recent Jones' SLS actions, his threats to cut off student lobbying funds and an August UI ombudsman investigation as "an aggregate castration of student empowerment."

"We simply cannot have an active student government if all of our actions are approved by 114 Jessup Hall (the Office of Academic Affairs)," Miller said.

Rojas-Cardona addressed the CAC. He said the legislation condemning Jones' actions and opposing the SLS move should not be worded "student leaders" because that would imply all student organizations supported the bill.

Rojas-Cardona said inadequate space considerations in the Union made the move necessary. He said alternate quarters must insure adequate work area and student accessibility.

"If they don't want to move, I'll support them totally — as the parent body we're here to support them," said Rojas-Cardona.

Miller said the Iowa Bar Association Ethics Committee ruling found the proposed SLS Iowa House space was inadequate based on law offices being separated by a hallway and bathrooms.

Further, the five Iowa Room Hotel rooms scheduled to become SLS's new office would not allow the supervising attorney to be in the same room as the legal interns, Miller said.

A supervising attorney is supposed to be in the room during all legal conferences between clients and interns, according to legal precedent.

Councilors also discussed the merits of Prescott's performance as an attorney for most of the two-hour meeting night.

Miller said Prescott litigates nearly 35 percent of the cases in Johnson County and makes only about $25,000 — a figure much lower than other lawyers.

USI to voice student needs at capitol

Jean Thilmay
The Daily Iowan

The UI chapter of the United Students for Iowa is achieving its comeback effort on the UI campus this year by ensuring that student demands are heard at the state capitol.

"Our main focus this year is to speak at the Regents' meetings against the proposed mandatory student health fee and proposed tuition increase," Jo Ellen Huss, USI campus director, said.

USI is the student organization that lobbies the Iowa Legislature on issues at the three Iowa Regents' colleges. Each state university has a USI chapter, and two members from each chapter sit on the USI board, which formulates a combined stance on student issues.

Last year, the UI chapter suffered from low membership and a cut in mandatory student fee funding, but this year the group has 25 members who are working to change that trend, Huss said.

She said current members have been waging a recruitment drive on campus and will soon begin soliciting student signatures against the mandatory student health fee proposed by the state Board of Regents. The signatures — each on an individual card — will be presented to the Regents at their October meeting.

Jerry Miller, Collegiate Associations Council executive associate, said that while the UI chapter of the organization is working hard to rally the Regents against passing the health fee and the tuition increase, the combined USI board didn't sufficiently address those issues throughout the summer.

"I want to be cautious, but I haven't seen anything coming out of Des Moines," Miller said. "The individual chapters of the organization have done well, but the board as a whole hasn't been helpful at all. In fact, I think they are hampering our efforts."

At a summer meeting, USI board members only touched on the health and tuition increase issues, Miller said.

The board also granted $350 to an Iowa State University organization of Chinese students last June, Miller said.

"If student groups need money, they should be sent to a specific student government," Miller said. "When we give money to the USI, it is for USI spending."

The CAC and the UI Student Senate designate 42 cents of every student's tuition per semester to USI. The money is used to fund the combined USI organization, not just the chapter organization.

Hank Hanson, USI executive director, said the organization voted last June to award the ISU students the $350 because the students needed money to contact relatives and to send messages to Beijing, China.

"From a moral standpoint we wanted to do something solid; it's easy to give vocal support," Hanson said. "We picked the ISU Chinese students because they are the largest and best organized Chinese student organization."

"Our board stands behind the decision 100 percent," Hanson added.

Courts

Two Iowa City men were charged with possession of a controlled substance Sunday after they invited police into their apartment where they had marijuana pipe in plain view, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Police knocked on the door of the defendants — Dean R. Ochotnicki, 20, and Craig D. Zick, 20 — apartment at 504 S. Johnson, Apt. 4, after seeing a 20-inch potted marijuana plant under two grow-lights in the apartment window, according to court records.

The plant was visible from the street, according to court records. After the police were told to "come in" by voices from within the apartment, they allegedly found a marijuana pipe on a bookcase, according to court records.

Both defendants were taken to the Johnson County Jail where they paid their bail charges of $575 and were released, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing for both defendants in the matter is set for October 13, according to court records.

• A Schaumburg, Ill., man was charged with third-degree sexual abuse after he allegedly sexually abused a victim against that person's will, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Michael J. Jarema, 18, 101 Beech St. Schaumburg, Ill., was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $10,000 bail, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 4, according to court records.

• A Cedar Rapids man was charged with assault resulting in injury Sunday after he allegedly pulled his wife from a car by the neck, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, David T. Corbett, 33, 5810 Pleasant Drive, Apt. 537, reportedly struck the victim's head against the door frame of the car as she tried to get away, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 10, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man was charged with assault resulting in injury Saturday after Iowa City police responded to a call of a woman screaming "get off me" and found him standing outside the bathroom of a common building with his pants unzipped and unbuttoned, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The victim, who was allegedly crying in the bathroom, suffered a bloody nose and lip, according to court records.

The defendant, Brian N. Elliott, 22, 530 N. Clinton, Apt. 13, was ordered by the court not to contact the victim by phone or in person, according to court records.

Both the defendant and victim told police they had been living together for a month, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 13, according to court records.

• A Solon, Iowa, man was charged with assault resulting in injury Saturday after he allegedly cut the mouth of a woman he lives with by grabbing her, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Dale C. Flecksing, 37, RR 4 570 Lake Drive, Box 433, was ordered by the court not to contact the victim by phone or in person, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 13, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man was charged with third-degree theft Saturday after he allegedly took a love seat valued between $100 and $500 from the Stanley Residence Hall 4th floor lounge, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Christopher J. Meder, 18, 937 Slater, was found with the love seat on the loading dock of Hillcrest Residence Hall by UI Campus Security officers, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 13, according to court records.

• A Kalona, Iowa, man was charged with fourth-degree criminal mischief September 15, after he allegedly smashed a truck window valued at $197.91 with an aluminum bat, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Thomas W. Miller, 34, RR 1 Box 126, allegedly admitted to police to smashing the window, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 13, according to court records.

Serenades restore tradition to greeks

Practice promotes enthusiasm

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

From the Shakespearean era to modern times, singing has been a dramatic way to proclaim affection for a loved one.

But UI fraternities and sororities serenade each other to have fun and promote good relations among the greek houses on campus, and the Beta Theta Pi fraternity takes it seriously. According to Matthew Ahrens, former Beta Theta Pi song chairman, the house serenades a sorority at least once a week.

"We serenade a sorority to get the girls fired up for whatever event we have going on that weekend," Ahrens said.

The Betas have no trouble getting members to participate in the serenades, Ahrens said.

"It's a lot of fun," he said. "We take a pride in it."
In addition to dressing formally for the Monday night serenades, the Betas also hold weekly practices, Ahrens said.

"We use harmony, and we use our own fraternity songs rather than just making up parodies of other songs," Ahrens said.

Phi Delta Theta song chairman Chad Wood said his fraternity usually serenades on special occasions, such as their annual party, the Miami Triad.

"The girls seem to enjoy it," he said. "They usually sing back to us."

The Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity recently serenaded the Pi Beta Phi sorority to ask them to be their partner for the Greek Week Follies production.

"We serenaded them and brought them roses," said song chairman Scott Winicour. "They seemed really surprised."

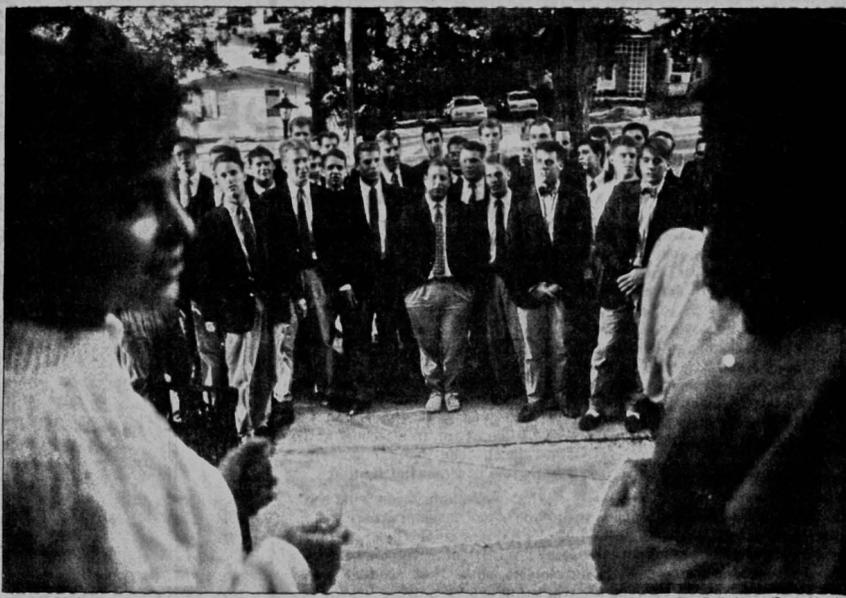

Winicour said his fraternity serenades for all their philanthropies as well as for some parties and other special occasions.

The Sammys concentrate on the fun rather than the musical side of the serenade, Winicour said.

"We stress brotherhood since we can't sing," he joked, but added, "It's a fun event, but we do take it seriously."

Brad Deutsch, also a Sigma Alpha Mu member, said most of the girls enjoy the serenade.

"It seems to get their spirits up,"

Members of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity serenade the members of Kappa Alpha Theta at the sorority's house on the corner of Burlington and Governor streets Monday afternoon.

The Daily Iowan/Scott Norris

he said.

Suzi Francis, member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, said serenading is a great way to show enthusiasm.

"It's flattering that the boys take the time to come and sing to us," she said. "Especially if you can tell they practice and really get into it."

There is a lot of tradition in serenading, said Beta member Tim Adams.

"Some houses have gotten away from the way things used to be," Adams said. "We're really into tradition, and our serenading is one of the most visible examples of it."

Although serenading is good for publicity, most greeks find it to be just plain fun.

Beta Pete Susic has his own reason for wanting to serenade. "The chicks dig it," he said.

UI biotechnology research has link to business world

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

The UI has been working hard to transfer the results of UI research into the business world with its development of the 170-acre research park north of the Oakdale Campus, Rex Montgomery, UI acting vice president for research, said Monday.

More than 50 representatives from leading businesses and research institutions gathered at the UI Monday to view and discuss recent innovations in the field of biotechnology at the UI.

"We have quite a number of projects going on in the area of biotechnology," Montgomery said. "The developments did not come about because someone assigned a special goal or task to a certain person, and they did not come about overnight."

The purpose underlying research of any kind is to acquire knowledge, but this process is often time-consuming, he said.

"Research exists not for financial gain, but simply to discover something in the unknown," Montgomery said. "The direct benefits from scientific research sometimes take 30 years to develop."

The Oakdale Research Park, which until recently housed the laboratory of Joe Walder, UI biochemistry professor, is just one of "the things that is giving us the right environment for research in biotechnology," Montgomery said.

Walder has been a UI faculty member for 10 years. He formed Integrated DNA Technology in 1987 as the result of his research at the UI.

Integrated DNA Technology's mission is to develop DNA probe diagnostics and DNA therapeutics that will detect the presence of an organism at the cellular level and also detect certain types of cancer.

The company recently graduated to a 20,000 square-foot building near the Oakdale Campus, with some UI support.

"My colleagues on the West Coast asked me why I chose to locate a company in Iowa," Walder said. "After telling them that ocean-front property was too expensive, I told them that we had a highly educated work force and that it was possible to attract people here."

Several little-known facts about the UI should attract researchers with advanced technological degrees, Walder said.

"The UI Hospitals and Clinics is the largest teaching hospital in the world, with more than 1,100 physicians and hundreds of research programs," he said. "The UI also ranks among the top 20 to 30 schools in (National Institute of Health) funding, and has among the finest set of core-service laboratories in the nation."

Starting the company would not have been possible without the transfer of technology from the UI to Integrated DNA Technology, Walder said.

The company once housed its 15 employees in a 2,000 square-foot building before the researchers moved to the new facility that is 10 times the original building's size.

Brett Davis is majoring in Computer Science at Iowa.

"I use the Macintosh to put a high gloss shine on everything I do."

"The Macintosh enables me to present my ideas to instructors in a much better light. A perfect example is the Digital Systems course I took last year. We had to draw circuits and include text that explained what the circuits did.

"Most of the students in this class had computers, but, unless they had a Mac, they had to resort to pencil and paper drawings that became smudged with revisions. I drew my circuits up using MacDraw II with text. I could change my drawings right on the screen and print out the finished product on the LaserWriter. When I was finished, my circuit drawings looked like they were professionally done.

"How did I learn the Mac? The best way to learn is to do. I could have read the manuals, but I really didn't need to. The Mac allows you to get up and running in minutes. From there, you can go outward exploring."

Branstad puts focus on long-term results of 2-day education summit

DES MOINES (AP)—This week's education summit is "more than a media event," though there will not be immediate results, Gov. Terry Branstad said on Monday.

Branstad said attention should be focused less on President George Bush's two-day meeting with the nation's governors and more on its long-term effects.

"It's not just an event, it's a process," said Branstad. The Iowa governor heads the National Governors Association and has helped plan the meeting.

Though some governors are pushing for more federal funding and specific proposals, most realize that won't happen and will be happy with less ambitious results, he said.

"I think there's also a realism on the part of the White House and the governors that you don't just get instantaneous results out of one meeting," said Branstad. "What you do is you raise the visibility of an issue."

"Yes, it's a media event, but it's much more than that," said Branstad. "It's more than a media event. We're going to have some frank discussions."

"There are some governors who would like to see substantial additional federal resources, but I think there's also a realization among most governors that with the federal budget problems... that we're not likely to see substantial amount of federal resources."

Branstad and governors from around the nation will sit down with Bush and education officials beginning Wednesday. The meeting already has gotten much attention.

But Branstad worked hard at a news conference to warn that the only result is likely to be agreement to work together. There won't be any splashy announcements of new programs or more money, Branstad said.

Branstad said the meeting is important because it will focus the nation's attention on education and symbolize Bush's commitment to making improvements.

"It can't just stop with a meeting of the governors," said Branstad. "For the most part, the action is going to be at the local school and state level. The federal government's role is somewhat limited."

"What we're able to do with the summit is get national attention to what's happening on the state and local level. It can give some recognition to what that student and what that school is doing."

Committee says dropout rate won't fall by revoking students' licenses

DES MOINES (AP) — A legislative committee looking for ways to make Iowa students stay in school was told Monday not to rely on quick-fixes such as taking away the driver's licenses of dropouts.

The Legislature should pay more attention to basic programs such as job training and come up with new ways to help youngsters make the transition from school to work, said Gary Lacy of the Washington-based Children's Defense Fund.

Lacy said some states are lowering dropout rates by raising the compulsory attendance age or by taking away drivers' licenses.

While those could be helpful, they aren't likely to have much effect on their own, Lacy said.

"I would hope that some careful assessment would be done" before they are enacted, he said.

He said the Legislature should develop community learning centers and take other steps that can provide support for schools. Much attention is focused on schools, but almost none is given to the environment in which children live, Lacy said.

"We're talking about and criticizing the public school system too much," he said.

While almost all schools offer vocational education, the programs are not well coordinated with businesses that will hire the students, Lacy said.

"It's not linked properly to what's happening in the real world," he said.

Members of the legislative committee were receptive to Lacy's message, and most agreed that focusing on potential dropouts is the next logical step in reforming education.

Rep. Art Ollie (D-Clinton), chairman of the House Education Committee, said the Legislature must find programs of value to students.

"I don't think you can coerce somebody to stay in school," said Ollie.

"That sounds great, but I think the farther you are away from education the better it sounds," he said.

Housing

provide counseling to the family in such life-skills as money management and goal setting.

The family selected must meet several criteria including the family's motivational level, current housing situation and income.

"The family must meet poverty standards and lack permanent housing," Maher said.

The program is unique because it is the only area service providing long-term assistance to the homeless, he said.

"The aim of the program is to take homeless people and get them to the point where they are self-sufficient," Maher said.

The biggest hurdle for the program is to locate a vacant house for refurbishment, he added.

"We hope to acquire a house within six months, but there is huge lack of low-income housing in Iowa City," Maher said.

After obtaining the house, which will be funded through a combination of local donations and federal grants, Maher said he hopes to garner the support of several volunteer groups both on and off campus that will aid in refurbishing the shelter.

The homeless problem in Iowa City will continue to increase, according to Maher, making such programs as transitional housing essential.

"There will be more homeless as long as there is a lack of low-income housing and people's incomes cannot keep up with rising housing costs," he said.

Flight

mind the attack. The group's leader has denied involvement.

All 259 people aboard Flight 103 from Frankfurt to New York via London were killed, along with 11 people on the ground in Lockerbie.

Scottish investigator Lord Fraser, speaking on the program titled "Lockerbie: An Avoidable Tragedy," said a West German police raid in October 1988 and the discovery in April of three bombs similar to the radio-cassette bomb on Flight 103 may be linked to the Lockerbie disaster.

"There are clearly points of similarity that have to be checked out and may indeed point to more than just a loose connection, but a firm link," said Fraser.

West German authorities arrested 16 men in the October raid on an apartment being used by the Popular Front, but released 14 of them, despite finding a radio-cassette bomb, detonators and Semtex plastic explosives.

Those released included a Jordanian, Marwan Khreesat. "Panorama" said Khreesat is a known bomb-maker and widely believed by British and U.S. investigators to have made the Lockerbie bomb and several others.

"There were major blunders by the West Germans... (who) let the group's bomb-maker go in very strange circumstances," said reporter Gavin Hewitt.

"They took until April to find all the bombs he had made, including ones that could have been used to blow up commercial airliners. And they freed key members of the PFLP-GC, who were capable of regrouping their network," he said.

One of the men still held — on bombing charges unconnected with Flight 103 — is Hafez Kassem Dalkamoni, the top aide to Popular Front leader Ahmed Jibril.

Jibril has denied his organization had any role in the attack but said

Dalkamoni often built and used the type of bomb that blew up Flight 103.

The West German federal prosecutor's office told The Associated Press Monday it has "not yet come up with a connection" between Dalkamoni and the Lockerbie bombing.

Hewitt said, without disclosing the source, that he had been told Khreesat, now in hiding in Jordan, was a double agent working inside the Popular Front for Jordanian intelligence. He said this was apparently why the West Germans freed him.

Asked why Khreesat was released, Hans-Juergen Foerster, spokesman for the West German prosecutor's office, said, "He was released because there was no urgent suspicion of his connection with a crime."

Previous West German denials that there is evidence linking Dalkamoni and the October raid to Flight 103 have prompted speculation Bonn is trying to deflect criticism of its security operation.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Authority last week fined Pan Am $630,000 for lapses in security procedures at Frankfurt and London's Heathrow Airport. But the agency said it was not charging that any of the breaches contributed to the Lockerbie disaster.

"Panorama" said that in addition to "blunders" surrounding the October raid, West German police also released a key Popular Front operative, Salah Fiaz Kweiks, last October.

It said police failed to discover the true identity of Kweiks, who was carrying a stolen passport in the name of Ramzi Diab, and failed to fingerprint him. It added that Lockerbie investigators want to interrogate Kweiks but he has now disappeared.

10th Iowa county set to vote on riverboat gambling issue

SIoux CITY (AP) — Groups trying to stop riverboat gambling from coming to the Missouri River don't like their odds of winning Tuesday's county referendum on floating casinos.

"I wouldn't bet on it," quipped the Rev. Jerry Walker, director of the Sioux City Gospel Mission.

Woodbury County is the 10th Iowa county to vote on riverboat gambling, which was approved this year by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. Terry Branstad.

County voters must approve before the gaming boats can dock in that county. Under Iowa law, the first excursions by gambling boats will be in April 1991.

"I would say we have as good a chance as the other side because we have at least made our position known," Walker said.

The Rev. Neil Rippey, pastor of the Free Methodist Church, said he thinks opponents have a good chance of defeating the referendum, especially if many voters turn out.

Voters in Allamakee and Clayton counties along the Mississippi River voted down riverboat gambling August 15. Dubuque, Des Moines, Lee, Scott, Jackson, Clinton and Muscatine counties have approved the floating casinos. Louisa is the only Iowa county along the Mississippi not to vote on the question.

"Passage of the riverboat referendum means the creation of over 525 new jobs, 250,000 more tourists visiting the area and an economic impact of over $27 million for Woodbury County," — riverboat developer Philip Molony.

ists visiting the area and an economic impact of over $27 million for Woodbury County," said riverboat developer Philip Molony.

The California company Molony works for, Fried-Schegan and Associates, has said it will dock a $7.5 million showboat at Sioux City if voters approve and they win a license from the state Racing and Gaming Commission.

Mark Halliday, president of the Sioux City Hospitality Association, coordinated an advertizing blitz in support of riverboat gambling in the final days before the vote.

"I'm confident to the point that I feel we have done everything that I know how to do," Halliday said.

"It's all going to come down to what the people who vote in Woodbury County foresee as being if it's right or wrong. If this is something they want in this county, that's how it will be decided."

Gambling opponents said they did not have the money or organization to challenge the excursion boat task force.

Gambling stakes would be limited to $5 per play and $200 per excursion per participant.

The state commission will make decision on licenses next January or February. It voted to accept license applications November 15 through January 1, with applications confidential until the deadline.

The task force submitted 6,500 signatures to call the election. A simple majority must vote in favor of the issue for it to pass.

If a referendum fails, backers must wait for two years before putting the question back on the ballot.

Only one other county along the Missouri River, Mills County, just south of Council Bluffs, has shown an interest in securing a riverboat.

Glenwood Mayor Gene Schatz said Mills County has the necessary number of signatures to call a vote but is waiting for results of the Woodbury County election.

Bush

ing "a number of obstacles" in the way of treaties to reduce long-range nuclear weapons, and troops and tanks in Europe.

Bush noted progress on those issues and agreements on other matters — during talks last weekend between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze — as well as a decision to hold a summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev by early next summer.

"Let us act together — beginning today — to rid the earth of this scourge," Bush said in his comments on chemical weapons. Shevardnadze said after the speech that the Soviets had "a positive view" of the plan but that it and other Bush proposals "will have to be studied additionally."

Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, said the Soviets had been given an outline of the U.S. initiative in advance and "they really have not responded."

He also told reporters at a briefing that Bush's proposal did not include biological weapons, which some experts consider as deadly as poison gas.

One year ago, during the first presidential candidates' debate, Bush had said, "I want to be the one to banish chemical and biological weapons from the face of the earth." The United States has in the past accused the Soviets of developing biological weapons.

Congress has passed legislation requiring the administration to destroy old chemical weapons by 1997 as more advanced weapons are stockpiled. Asked about any connection between Bush's proposal and the legal mandate to destroy a large percentage of such weapons, the White House official said that whether or not the new plan was "making a virtue of necessity it is certainly part of a major effort and a serious effort now."

Twice, as vice president, Bush blocked legislation to destroy U.S. chemical weapons by breaking a tie vote. In those instances, the cut-back would not have required Soviet reductions as well.

To get down to the equal stocks that Bush proposed, the Soviets would have to make deeper cuts since they are thought to have more chemical weapons on hand. Only the two superpowers acknowledge having poison gas, but Bush said more than 20 nations either possess them or are capable of producing them.

Bush, who served as U.S. permanent representative at the United Nations in 1971 and 1972, described his visit and speech as a homecoming. The delegates interrupted him twice with applause — when he proposed the chemical weapons reductions and when he reported progress in U.S.-Soviet relations.

At one point, he also mourned the slaying of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, who was taken hostage on a U.N. mission in Lebanon in February 1988 and subsequently slain. He called Higgins "a man of unquestioned bravery and unwavering dedication to the U.N.

ideal" and called on the General Assembly to condemn the murder.

Bush's chemical weapons proposal has three key elements:

- The United States was "ready to begin now" by eliminating more than 80 percent of its stockpile while working on a treaty, provided the Soviets also made their cuts.

- In the first eight years of a 40-nation treaty the United States would destroy nearly all — 98 percent — of its chemical weapons if the Soviet Union joined the ban.

- All U.S. chemical weapons — "100 percent, every one" — would be destroyed within 10 years, once all nations capable of building such weapons signed a total ban treaty.

As for superpower relations, Bush said he saw "signs of a new attitude that prevails between the U.S. and U.S.S.R." though he acknowledged serious differences remain.

He spoke of a "rise of freedom" around the world and said, "Make no mistake. Nothing can stand in the way of freedom's march."

"Today we are witnessing an ideological collapse, the demise of the totalitarian idea of the omniscient, all-powerful state," he said. "East and West, North and South, on every continent, to every horizon, we can see the outlines of a new world of freedom."

As for chemical weapons, he said, "These horrible weapons are now finding their way into regional conflicts. . . . This is unacceptable."

Bush referred to the use of poison gas by Iran and Iraq in their Persian Gulf war.

First state frost does little damage to corn and soybeans, report says

DES MOINES (AP) — Chilly conditions that brought Iowa its first statewide frost of the season did little damage to the state's row crops, a report from the state and U.S. agriculture departments said Monday.

The season's first freeze occurred over the northern two-thirds of the state Saturday and Sunday and in scattered areas elsewhere.

However, Iowa's corn crop remained in mostly good condition, with 3 percent rated excellent in this week's report, 50 percent good, 36 percent fair and 11 percent poor. Last week's report had the corn crop 3 percent excellent, 50 percent good, 39 percent fair and 8 percent poor.

The report said 93 percent of the corn crop was mature. Almost all of last year's drought-hurried crop was mature by this time. Normal for this time of year is 88 percent mature.

Leaves have turned color on 98 percent of Iowa's soybeans, the report said. Last year at this time, all the leaves had turned. The norm for the soybean crop is 96 percent turned.

This week's report rated the soybean crop 2 percent excellent, 56 percent good, 37 percent fair and 5 percent poor. Last week's report listed the soybeans as 2 percent excellent, 50 percent good, 43 percent fair and 5 percent poor.

The state's topsoil was a little drier this week, with 21 percent short of moisture and 79 percent adequate. Last week, 4 percent of the topsoil had surplus moisture, 90 percent had adequate moisture and 6 percent was short of moisture.

Subsoil moisture conditions were almost unchanged from the previous week, with 19 percent adequate and 81 percent short. Last week, moisture levels in the subsoil were 80 percent short and 20 percent adequate.

Pastures in the state were rated 5 percent excellent, 39 percent good, 43 percent fair and 13 percent poor. Last week's report rated the pastures 10 percent excellent, 31 percent good, 44 percent fair and 15 percent poor.

Temperatures for the week ranged from 1 degree above normal in the northwest to 3 degrees below normal in the southeast. The high temperature for the week was 85 at Spencer on Wednesday. The low was 23 at Ames on Sunday.

Rain averaged 0.08 of an inch for the week, well below the normal for this time of year, which is 0.76 of an inch.

FOCUS

Chemical weapons can be made in just about any kind of chemical plant," — Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Deadly weapons

Libya, Iran among those who hold killer gasses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are the only two nations to acknowledge having chemical weapons, although up to a dozen, including Libya and Iran, are thought to have the grisly substances or the ability to make them, experts said Monday.

President George Bush, addressing the U.N. General Assembly, proclaimed his readiness to destroy 80 percent of U.S. chemical weapon stores if Moscow agrees to the same stockpile level, and urged other nations to sign a multilateral pact to ban them entirely.

Bush, however, did not suspend production of new U.S. chemical weapons, and his offer did not appear to go beyond legislation passed by Congress requiring the government to destroy old chemical weapons stocks by 1997.

The president's proposal "might focus international attention on chemical weapons and lead to a multilateral treaty," said Lee Feinstein of the Arms Control Association, a disarmament lobby in Washington.

But it may instead produce a U.S.-Soviet deal on chemical weapons and divert attention from production by other countries, he said.

Private analysts believe the United States has 30,000 tons of chemical weapons. The Soviets have said they have "no more than" 50,000.

Delegates to the 40-nation Conference on Disarmament ended their most recent meeting in Geneva last month without any clear idea of when it would be possible to conclude a global ban on chemical weapons.

The conference, which meets again in November, is stalled on the issue of how to monitor the production of chemical weapons, which experts say can be made in factories similar to those that make fertilizer or other compounds.

"The problem we have is that nobody has determined how to (monitor) it in an effectively verifiable way, because chemical weapons can be made in just about any kind of chemical plant," Gen. Colin Powell said earlier this year, before he was nominated chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Also in dispute are the size of chemical weapons stockpiles, and even the number of countries that have them.

U.S. intelligence officials have said that Libya is building the world's largest chemical weapons plant at Rabta. Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi has said the factory is designed to produce pharmaceuticals.

In 1984, the United Nations concluded that Iraq had used lethal chemical agents against Kurds along the Iran-Iraq border, although Iraq has not admitted it.

Other nations thought able to make their own chemical weapons are Burma, China, Iran, Israel, Libya, North Korea, Syria, Taiwan and probably Egypt, said Elisa Harris, a scholar who closely tracks the issue at the Brookings Institution in Washington.

The size of the U.S. and Soviet stockpiles is not publicly known, although those two governments last weekend signed an agreement to exchange and verify data on their chemical arsenals, including the right to on-site inspection.

The United States has disclosed what type of weapons it has and where they are stored, but not the size of the stockpiles. The Arms Control Association estimated the size of the U.S. stock at about 30,000 tons.

In 1987, the U.S. government, after an 18-year moratorium, began to manufacture a new generation of "binary" chemical weapons, which consist of two toxic substances that become lethal when mixed together.

Congress also has ordered the destruction by 1997 of 90 percent of stockpiles of older U.S. chemical weapons, stored at 11 sites in the United States and in West Germany.

Work began on August 31 at the Toole Army Depot in the Utah desert to destroy 42 percent of the U.S. stockpile, consisting of nerve and mustard gas, blistering agents that were used in World War I.

The U.S. stockpile also consists of the nerve agents Sarin and VX, and other substances, according to the government.

The Soviet Union suspended chemical weapon production on Dec. 26, 1987, seven months after the United States resumed production. Kremlin spokesmen, giving the first-ever Soviet figures on chemical weapon stockpiles, said they contained "no more than 50,000 tons of chemical warfare agents."

U.S. estimates of Soviet stockpiles have ranged from 30,000 to 50,000 tons.

Moldavian-language protesters end strike

MOSCOW — Strikes at nearly 100 factories and offices ended Monday a monthlong walkout called to protest a law making a Romanian dialect the official language of the Moldavian republic, Tass reported.

The Soviet news agency quoted strike organization co-chairman Vladimir Ivanov as saying the non-Moldavian workers in Bender, Tiraspol and other cities hoped their demands would be considered by the Supreme Soviet legislature that began its fall session Monday in Moscow.

Strikers who walked off their jobs just before the August 29 opening of a legislative session in the Moldavian capital Kishinev, where Moldavian was declared the official language, returned to their jobs Monday, Tass said.

Strikers demanded that the republic bordering Romania be given two official languages, Moldavian and Russian.

Tass said strike committees however remain active. "Their purpose is to maintain working-class political activity, elect people dedicated to perestroika to party and public bodies in the course of the current election campaign," for local offices.

About one-third of the 4.2 million residents of Moldavia are non-Moldavians.

Official admits issuing passports for gifts

LONDON (AP) — A former official at the Irish Embassy pleaded guilty Monday to charges he provided falsified passports to foreigners in return for cash and sex. Southwark Crown Court sentenced Kevin McDonald to 21 months in jail.

Witnesses told the court that McDonald, 35, charged up to $24,000 for a passport normally available for $100, and he made $400,000 in six months.

McDonald, who was the chief passport officer for the Irish Embassy in London, pleaded guilty to conspiring with other unidentified people to obtain false passports between January 1986 and May 1987.

"In return for thousands of pounds, he supplied passports to virtually anyone, no matter how bogus or sham their applications were," said prosecutor Julian Bevan.

The official also demanded sexual favors from Moroccan prostitutes to whom he sold passports, the prosecutor said. He said the official was photographed in bed with two of them.

In sentencing McDonald, Judge Marcus Anwyl-Davies said the official had breached the trust of his employers. The judge ordered him to pay $5,680 in legal costs.

Automakers demand equal advertising time

WASHINGTON — An environmental group's 30-second public service ad that links automobile pollution to global warming has prompted the auto industry to cry foul and demand equal time.

The ads were unveiled a week ago by the Environmental Action Foundation, which said it was distributing the spots to radio and television stations across the country to warn about the effects of global warming and the automobile's part in it.

While the news conference attracted only sparse attention, it was noticed by Detroit.

Within 24 hours, Thomas Hanna, president of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, dispatched a letter to television and radio stations complaining the ad was "clearly political in nature" and full of misinformation.

He wrote that if the environmental group's spot is used as public service announcements, "we intend to demand equal time to rebut the misinformation and misleading material they contain."

Falwell disputes builder's testimony

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jerry Falwell offered Jim Bakker $300,000 and other perks to keep his mouth shut after Falwell took over the scandal-ridden PTL, the TV ministry's chief builder testified Monday.

Falwell denied the account given by builder Roe Messner, who testified for the defense at Bakker's fraud trial.

Messner also said a chief Bakker aide claimed Bakker knew nothing about $265,000 in hush money to Jessica Hahn, the church secretary with whom Bakker had a sexual encounter in 1980.

Bakker is accused of defrauding followers by using more than $3.7 million in ministry money to live in high style. The TV evangelist faces up to 120 years in prison and more than $5 million in fines if convicted on all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

Falwell, founder of the now defunct Moral Majority, took over PTL in 1987 after Bakker resigned in the scandal involving Hahn.

Messner testified that the offer to Bakker from Falwell included a maid, a security guard and telephone expenses if Bakker "kept his mouth shut."

Coordinated selling devalues U.S. dollar

WASHINGTON — The U.S. dollar plunged on world markets Monday as the United States and its major allies demonstrated determination to push the currency's value lower in a bid to solve America's trade deficit problems.

The sell-off began in hectic trading in Tokyo and was later matched in European and New York markets in what traders described as a rout for the dollar.

"The market is shell-shocked," said Robert Hatcher, a trader in the New York office of Barclays Bank PLC. "The manner in which the central banks conducted the intervention in the Far East and Europe today was extremely effective."

The dollar began dropping when markets opened in Tokyo with the decline continuing later in trading in Europe and New York.

In Tokyo, the dollar lost 1.4 percent of its value, falling to 142.95 yen, compared to a Friday level of 145 yen. Later, in London, it fell further to 142.69 yen. The slide continued in the United States, where the dollar skidded to 142.13 yen in New York trading, down 2.7 percent from Friday's level of 146.05.

The dollar also lost ground against the West German mark, the British pound, the French franc and other European currencies.

Traders reported heavy selling on the part of the central banks of the United States, Japan, West Germany and other major U.S. allies.

Missing wallet fished out after 4 years

CONCORD, N.H. — Robert Howley has a fish story to tell that even he didn't believe at first.

Howley, 51, was reunited with his wallet last week after a four-year separation. It was found in 30 feet of water, 200 yards off the shore of Lake Winnepesaukee — right where he had dropped it in 1985 while trying to fix his boat's engine during a fishing outing.

A scuba diver who was looking for a light that had fallen off an antique boat found the wallet.

Howley said at first he didn't believe it when Robert Ouellette, 24, called to tell him he'd found the wallet, which contained $480 in spending bills. For years, Howley's friends had teased him, joking that they had found the wallet.

But Ouellette convinced Howley that this was no gag.

"When he explained to me exactly where he had found it, I got so excited I headed right up there," said Howley, who lives in Seabrook. "I'm very appreciative."

Special court chosen for Papandreou's trial

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A special high court was chosen Monday to try former Premier Andreas Papandreou on charges of instigating widespread illegal wiretapping while in office.

He faces a minimum of five years in prison if convicted.

Parliament speaker Athanassios Tsaldaris chose 12 judges by lot from a list of the nation's 48 Supreme Court judges and 43 Appeals Court presidents. Tsaldaris then sent the case file to Supreme Court President Yannis Grivas, who will preside over the tribunal. It is expected to convene in November.

Parliament voted last Wednesday to try the 70-year-old Papandreou on allegations he was behind the tapping of telephones of his political friends and foes from May 1987 to April 1989.

Papandreou boycotted the debate, sending instead a note saying he was being persecuted unjustly by his political rivals.

Theofanis Tombras, former managing director of the Hellenic Telecommunications Organization, and Costas Tsimas, former director of the National Intelligence Service, will appear in court with Papandreou on charges of having been accomplices.

The debate followed a report by a parliamentary commission of inquiry recommending that Papandreou, Tombras and Tsimas be indicted.

After eight years in power, Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement lost elections last June that resulted in a hung Parliament.

The conservative New Democracy party and the Communist-led Coalition of the Left and Progress formed a governing alliance that pledged to carry out a cleansing of Greek political life before holding new elections by November 5.

On Tuesday, Parliament will begin a two-day debate to decide whether Papandreou and four of his former senior ministers will be indicted in connection with a $210 million Bank of Crete embezzlement scandal, which another parliamentary commission of inquiry has recommended.

Parliament has already indicted former Deputy Finance Minister Nikos Athanassopoulos, who will stand trial before a special high court set up last month. He is accused of ordering a cover-up of a scandal in 1986 in which a state company sold the European Economic Community 9,000 tons of Yugoslav corn, claiming it was Greek.

The European Court last week ordered Greece to pay $3.8 million in unpaid dues on the corn, court costs and interest.

Thousands of Germans march in Leipzig

LEIPZIG, East Germany (AP) — About 8,000 people marched through this East German city Monday, calling for more democracy in their communist homeland and singing "We Shall Overcome," witnesses reported.

An Associated Press reporter at the scene and human rights activists said security forces arrested scores of people after the protesters blocked traffic in downtown Leipzig.

The demonstration came hours after communist authorities refused to register a pro-democracy opposition group called New Forum and told its members to cease all activities immediately.

The Leipzig demonstration began after a religious service in the St. Nicholas church. The Monday evening services, known as "peace prayers," have become a rallying point for dissidents and rights activists in recent months and frequently have been followed by demonstrations.

Witnesses and rights activists said about 2,000 people attended the service, while another 2,000 gathered outside the church.

The crowd then started marching toward downtown and Leipzig's main train station. About 4,000 people joined the march, and the crowd sang "We Shall Overcome" and shouted slogans such as "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity!" witnesses said.

Security forces cordoned off downtown and intervened to disperse the crowd when the protesters reached the main train station.

Syrian gunners break truce

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian gunners fired more than 80 shells into the Christian enclave Monday, violating a 2-day-old cease-fire that has drawn 1 million refugees back to Beirut. An Arab League mediator urged both sides to honor the truce.

Police reported no casualties in the barrage that hit pine woods near the mountain towns of Beit Meri and Ein Saadeh, 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

Christian forces commanded by Gen. Michel Aoun did not fire back.

There was no official explanation for the Syrian bombardment of the thinly populated mountain slopes.

But an informed Moslem source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was designed as "a Syrian message to Aoun that the truce could fall apart if the Christian media do not stop their campaign against the Syrians."

The Arab League envoy, Lakhdar al-Ibrahimi, announced after a one-hour meeting with Parliament Speaker Hussein Hussein, a Shiite Moslem, that Lebanon's Parliament will meet in Saudi Arabia on Saturday to seek political reforms aimed at ending the 14-year-old civil war.

That marked a major advance in the efforts by the 22-member Arab League to bring Lebanon's feuding factions together and create a formula aimed at reuniting the fragmented country.

But the Syrian shelling was a graphic reminder that nothing is certain.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein blamed Lebanon's plight on Syrian occupation as he inaugurated an Arab Cooperation Council summit Monday in North Yemen.

Praising the peacemaking efforts of the three-man Arab League committee, the Iraqi leader said:

"We support the efforts of our brethren in the tripartite committee despite our conviction that the root of calamity and the gateway of evil in Lebanon is the Syrian occupation of the country."

The council groups Iraq, Egypt, Jordan and North Yemen.

A Lebanese police spokesman said

Syrian howitzer batteries hit the Christian area in a 45-minute barrage that ended at 7:45 a.m. An additional four shells hit the woods at 3 p.m.

Some shells exploded within a mile of the hilltop Bustan Hotel where Ibrahimi is staying.

The shelling was the first serious violation of the cease-fire since it took hold Saturday. It prompted Ibrahimi to urge "all sides to abide by the cease-fire . . . and to believe that there is a new chance for peace."

The truce was called last week by a three-member Arab League committee assigned to find a settlement to the civil war, in which more than 150,000 people have been killed.

Many Lebanese, who have seen hundreds of truces collapse, remain skeptical of an overall settlement but welcome the current respite.

Police said at least 1 million refugees who fled the ferocious artillery battles that began March 8 have returned to Beirut.

Bush asks U.N. to remember Lt. Col. Higgins

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President George Bush called on the United Nations General Assembly on Monday to condemn the murder of one of its own "soldiers of peace": Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins.

He also appealed again for the release of the body of Higgins, murdered by terrorists who kidnapped him in Lebanon where he headed the U.N. peacekeeping force.

"More than 700 peacekeepers have given their lives in service to the United Nations" — President George Bush

"More than 700 peacekeepers have given their lives in service to the United Nations" in its 44-year history, Bush said.

"Today, I want to remember one of these soldiers of peace. An American on a mission of peace under the U.N. flag, on a mission for all the world. A man of unquestioned bravery and unswerving dedication to the U.N. ideal: Lt. Col. William Richard Higgins.

"I call on the General Assembly to condemn the murder of this soldier of peace and call on those responsible to return his remains to his family," Bush said. "And let us all right now, right here, rededicate ourselves and our nations to the cause that Col. Higgins served so selflessly."

Higgins' captors, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, said July 31 they hanged him in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of a Moslem cleric, Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid.

Higgins was kidnapped Feb. 17, 1988, and threatened with death earlier by the terrorists.

U.S. intelligence experts said in early August they were convinced by a videotape released by the terrorists that Higgins was dead, but it was not clear when or how he was killed.

"If you want to reach all the right people you have to use direct mail..."

Not in Iowa!

The U.S. Postal Service can put your circular on every doorstep in Iowa...so can newspapers. The real difference in the two methods of delivery comes when the circular is brought into the home.

More people are likely to read circulars delivered with their newspaper. According to a recent survey 49.5% of Iowa households usually read circulars received in their newspaper. Only 36.9% of Iowa households read circulars received in the mail.

When you compare the cost of developing and maintaining a mailing list, postage and handling, using your local newspaper is a real bargain.

So if you just want to reach addresses, use direct mail. But if you want your customers to read your circular, use the newspaper to deliver it. Because...

In Iowa... People read newspapers!

Unlikely champion

The First Amendment had an unlikely champion this week: Ted Turner. Here's the story.

Some time ago, the National Audubon Society produced a documentary on the current state of the timber industry. The program, called "Rage Over Trees," focused on the conflicts between loggers and environmentalists in the Pacific Northwest. The show was scheduled to air on Turner Broadcasting System, and advertising was sold, as usual, to national accounts.

Every one of the advertisers withdrew from the program. And although they surrendered without firing a shot, these eight companies are hardly powerless outfits.

But then news of the program reached the Oregon Project — the public voice of the Western States Public Lands Coalition, a lobbying group for the timber and mining industries. Although no one at the Oregon Project had viewed the program, or even asked the Audubon Society about its content, they contacted the show's advertisers and threatened to organize a boycott of their products if they advertised during the show.

Every one of the advertisers withdrew from the program. And although they surrendered without firing a shot, these eight companies are hardly powerless outfits: Sears, Roebuck; Citicorp; Michelin Tire; New York Life and Casualty; Omni Magazine; Ford; and fresh from a limited engagement in Prince William Sound, Alaska, the Exxon Corporation. Stroh's Brewing Co. even withdrew its support as underwriter of the entire series of Audubon programs this season.

Sadly, because of their size and public images, these companies are among the best equipped to support the ideals of the First Amendment, by refusing to be bullied by a lobbying group. But not one of them was willing to risk lost sales for something as important as a principle.

What's really too bad is that these companies failed to realize how much America respects action based on principle, and the kind of support their products would receive were it known that they refused to bend to an unjust boycott threat.

Enter Ted Turner. Whatever Americans may think about Turner's hucksterism and ceaseless self-advertising, he immediately elected to air the program without any advertising.

"We can't let other people decide what shows we put on," said Joel Westbrook, executive producer at TBS.

Bravo. Let the silence during station breaks tell the tale of censorship defeated. Let the program's content speak for itself. And let the Oregon Project realize that their attempt to suppress the truth damages them, as well as the companies they manipulate.

Influence peddling

When officials of The World Bank and International Monetary Fund gather in Washington, D.C., this week for their annual meetings, a smaller, but no less important convention will also take place.

In the shadow of the huge development banks' meeting, more than 100 environmental groups from 70 countries will be in Washington as well, for one reason: to pressure the international moneylenders to make the worsening state of the environment a priority when deciding which global development projects to fund.

The environmentalists' target is well chosen. By funding Third World development projects that permit — indeed, even necessitate — destructive environmental practices (such as the conversion of the Amazon rainforest into virtually worthless cattle ranching land), The World Bank and IMF have substantially contributed to the deterioration of the world's environment.

The kind of destruction enabled by these development banks' vast reserves is clear: For every 10 trees cut in the tropics, just one is replanted. According to The World Resources Institute, each generation is stripping a forest the size of India. Simple arithmetic shows how quickly the earth is going to be reduced to miles of stump-covered, parched land.

The environmentalists lobbying the World Bank and IMF this week have realized that, despite the damage these banks have done with their misplaced development funds, they can do an equal, if not greater, amount of good by making environmental prudence a criterion for funding.

These organizations hold the purse strings of development for those countries most guilty of mismanaging their environmental resources. Policy makers in Mexico, Bolivia and Ecuador need guidance and education to make responsible decisions regarding land use, and this is where the failings of the IMF and World Bank can be redeemed.

The health of the planet has, in the past, qualified as only minor-league policy discussion and rarely as a concern of politicians or economists. Now it is clear that it must concern everyone — something that, one hopes, the IMF and World Bank will realize this week.

Horton ad wasn't Ailes' doing

Warning: I'm about to violate the code of ethics for political writers. I'm coming to the defense of a highly paid political operative who plots television strategy for candidates.

The man in question is none other than Roger Ailes, the Republican strategist who came to fame two decades ago as the shrewd media master of Richard Nixon's comeback.

As portrayed in Joe McGinnis' book, "The Selling of the President, 1968," Ailes was the sharp-tongued operative behind the warmer, less frightening "new Nixon."

Ailes' more recent notoriety came as a result of the 1988 George Bush campaign, where his commercials were credited — or blamed — with painting Mike Dukakis as a wimpy, effete liberal outside the "mainstream values" of America.

What brings me rising — or at least slouching — to his defense is the notion that seems to accompany every word written about Ailes, that he authored the infamous "Willie Horton" commercial, the TV ad that featured a menacing mug shot of the convicted murderer who, while out of a Massachusetts prison on a furlough program, terrorized a Maryland couple. Ailes, it has been charged several thousand times, thus appealed to base racial fears by raising the specter of a black hoodlum raping a white woman.

Did the ad, in fact, appeal to such fears? Yes. Was it contemptible? Yes.

Then why defend Ailes? Simple. Ailes did not do the ad, and in fact had nothing to do with it. That commercial was produced and aired by an independent group, Americans for Bush. Under current law, such "independent organizations" have a First Amendment right to produce, finance and air whatever political messages they want, as long as they have nothing to do with the official campaign organization.

And that, to the best of my knowledge, is what happened here.

Roger Ailes did produce a commercial about the Massachusetts furlough program that Dukakis supported (the program was in fact created by his liberal Republican predecessor as governor of Massachusetts). It was the "revolving door" commercial, featuring prisoners going in and out of a prison, while a voice-of-doom announcer explained, in somewhat misleading terms, how Dukakis had helped put hardened criminals back on the street.

It may even be that, given the inextricable bond between race and crime as a visceral anxiety of many Americans, any discussion of crime has to involve race.

That ad was worthy of tough criticism. As with most political advertising, it was woefully simplistic, and ignored the fact that Massachusetts had one of the lower serious crime rates for a major industrialized state.

What it did not do so was show a picture of Willie Horton, or even mention Willie Horton. The faces it did show were overwhelmingly white. In and of itself, that commercial simply did not have a racial component to it.

To be sure, the Bush campaign itself drummed up interest in the Willie Horton case for months before the election. It may even be that, given the inextricable bond between race and crime as a visceral anxiety of many Americans, any discussion of crime has to involve race.

But if Roger Ailes is to be painted as the Darth Vader of the 1988 campaign, he at least deserves to be attacked for what he did, or what he can plausibly be charged with doing.

Journalists who casually list "the Willie Horton ad" as one of Ailes' achievements are simply proving themselves too lazy to go beyond the handful of press clips and find out the facts. They are, in sum, doing what they accuse Ailes of perfecting: throwing out a cheap shot.

There: I've gone and defended a right-wing media manipulator. How I'll explain this back at the office I'll never know.

Dangerous graffiti

To the Editor:

I was dismayed to see the slogan, "F--- the Campus Review" painted next to the English-Philosophy Building. By using the imperative form of the Anglo-Saxon verb for sexual intercourse, the writers have implied that sexual violence is an acceptable means of exercising power and control.

Their rhetoric shows that these alleged leftists have tacitly bought into an ideology of rape. I hope they clean up their acts, then clean up the sidewalk.

No 'man of God'

To the Editor:

On September 20, [the DI] referred to the Pentecost preacher, James Gilles, as a "man of God" and a "born-again Christian" ["Man of God" sent packing by 'Son of Christ']. Is he?

Although I would not want you to print many of Gilles' sexual accusations, allow me to mention some of what he said. Gilles accused a girl of being "50-percent lesbo," [and said that] "the Pope and Mother Theresa will burn in hell fire." He condemned people for wearing designer blue jeans, makeup, etc. He also claimed that he has not sinned for nine years.

Now I ask, does a true man of God judge others? Not according to Matthew 7:1 — "Judge not..." Also, does a true man of God claim to be without sin? John 1:10 — "If we claim to be without sin, we make God out to be a liar." Does a man of God call God a liar?

The Bible does not say that Christians no longer sin. Christians are sinners who have been forgiven and are commanded to "aim for perfection" (2 Corinthians 13:11).

Having served as a campus minister at the UI for seven years, I am becoming more and more frustrated with many of the traveling Pentecost preachers. They stereotype and condemn the students and, consequently, turn the students off to true Christianity as revealed in the Bible.

Effective drug education

To the Editor:

In reference to the September 14 [letter to the editor] titled, "Why say no to drugs?", think about the hypothesis, "What if the world did say yes to drugs?"

Legalizing drugs would eliminate the Escobar and Rodriguez Gacha drug cartels of the world, and we wouldn't have to wonder where $8 billion is going to come from for the war on drugs.

Just saying "no" isn't going to cut it. Education through the school system can target children when they are most vulnerable. By educating our elementary students about the irreversible, detrimental [and] lasting effects that drugs can have on their lives or their children, through such programs as

D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education), some kids might think twice before subjecting their bodies to drugs.

In order for a program to be effective, at least two items must be stressed: 1. giving children the skills to say "no" by themselves, and 2. giving them the cold, hard, graphic examples of damage already done to people's lives as a direct result of having used drugs (e.g., taking a trip to your local mental[ly] handicapped institute, as I did in junior high school, where we saw an adult strapped to a board on wheels, attempting to master the concept of crawling, and a young teenager staring off into space because of a drug overdose).

Informed commentary

To the Editor:

Steve Donoghue's [article] ["Exhibit by 'misinformed idiot' a bigoted, dangerous display," DI, September 18] is the most overt attack upon a gay person I have ever seen printed in The Daily Iowan. Donoghue (presumably a heterosexual) obviously needs some "informed commentary" on several fronts:

• The article is a personal attack upon [the artist, Darrin] Jackson and not his "piece." Granted, there was a presentation of problems with the piece, but that was subverted into a personal critique of the individual. Donoghue overextended his critique from the artwork to the artist. What ever happened to judging on merits alone?

• Donoghue's use of "dangerous" is wrong for several reasons. It devalues and clouds Jackson's attempts to express his viewpoints, it creates unnecessary tension in an already explosive debate concerning AIDS, and who is it "dangerous" to? Donoghue's morals? Jackson's reputation? Heterosexuals? Gays? Who?

• Who is the "misinformed idiot" here? Donoghue's critique clearly operates within a heterosexual and homophobic frame.

• What is implied about [Donoghue's use of the word] "crusade"? Jackson's "crusade" was to present his opinions about AIDS that operate within the gay culture and apply to gay males. Donoghue's "crusade" remains questionable.

• With any artwork, one must try to understand the artist's intent and viewpoint. This requires empathy, historical references, cultural references and [understanding] the context from which the particular piece was created.

Obviously, Donoghue is in the past his "shock," his "disgust" and most noticeably his "pseudo-liberal" attitudes. In his critique, Donoghue consistently positioned heterosexuals as knowing what is "best" and "good" for homosexuals and that "gays" would be misinformed about AIDS.

I believe the title of the article more aptly applies to its author than to Jackson.

2 arrested in Tacoma drug war

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Police patrols were doubled by Monday in a drug-infested neighborhood where about a dozen off-duty soldiers and reputed crack dealers fought a 30-minute gun battle.

Hundreds of rounds from handguns, shotguns and semiautomatic weapons were fired, witnesses said, but no one was hurt in Saturday night's shootout. Police arrested two suspected dealers.

The next day, scuffles broke out among a handful of supporters of the Army Rangers and opponents, who said they were being falsely accused of selling drugs. No serious injuries were reported.

The gunfight between the Rangers from nearby Fort Lewis and 15 to 20 people police described as gang members happened outside a home owned by Bill Foulk, a member of the special force.

"They shot at us, and we fired back," — Bill Foulk, Tacoma, Wash., resident Police Chief Ray Fjetland said the incident could have been avoided had residents called police. But Foulk said police are too slow to react, and must wait "until shooting actually starts."

Army officials said they would wait for completion of a Tacoma Police investigation before deciding whether disciplinary action was warranted against the Rangers.

But Maj. Clyde Newman, second-in-command of the 2nd Ranger Battalion, said, "From everything I am told by the city police, the Rangers were right. They were having a party, and they were attacked."

Residents of the house denied Sunday that they fired any shots at the Foulk house. They also denied participating in drug deals, although they said drug activity often occurs in front of the house. The Morning News Tribune of Tacoma reported.

Foulk said he and his neighbors see drug deals at the house day and night.

"I bought this place two years ago for $10,000 after it was abandoned. We're fixing it up and as far as I'm concerned, I think this neighborhood is going to be restored to a decent place to live," he said.

A neighbor, 16-year-old Candy Harris, said the arrival of crack cocaine dealers in the past two years has transformed the tree-lined, working-class street into a dangerous place to walk. "Now, most people are scared to be outside," she said.

Police said suspected Crips gang member Frankie Lee Strickland, 20, was held for investigation of assault, and gang member Daniel Lynn Vaughn, 21, was held for investigation of unlawful use of a weapon.

D.C. court orders release of mother jailed for contempt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia Court of Appeals on Monday ordered a lower court to release a Washington physician jailed more than two years in a custody case involving her daughter.

The court ordered a Washington, D.C., Superior Court judge to sign the release papers for Dr. Elizabeth Morgan. However, it left open the possibility of further consideration of her former husband's challenge to a law, signed over the weekend by President George Bush, designed to free her.

She was jailed in August 1987 for contempt of court after refusing to produce her daughter, Hilary, for a visit with Dr. Eric Foretich, her former husband and the girl's father.

The appeals court has been weighing the requests of Elaine Mittleman, who represents Foretich, and attorneys for Morgan, who filed papers seeking the woman's immediate release on Saturday, the same day Bush signed the law.

Morgan has alleged that Foretich sexually abused the child; Foretich has consistently denied those charges.

Mittleman maintained in a 12-page filing that the new law was unconstitutional because it infringed on the power of the judicial branch to enforce its orders.

Acting as matchmakers saves animals

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tomorrow's baby zoo animals, from Aruba Island rattlesnakes to Grevy's zebras, are but a gleam in the eyes of zookeepers and aquarium directors who are playing matchmaker this week for endangered species.

"We're playing God, all of us are. I sit here and say who should do what and when they should do it," said Ron Young, an official of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

"It's important if we want to continue on some semblance of what we were living with originally on this earth. All of us realize we can't save the world, but we save as much of it as possible."

Young, who works for the Mesker Park Zoo in Evansville, Ind., coordinates the nation's captive breeding of black palm cockatoos, an endangered large black parrot from Papua, New Guinea.

He and about 1,000 other officials from 140 zoos and aquariums from around the country are meeting at a downtown hotel for a week to match, borrow and trade endangered mammals, birds, fish, reptiles and amphibians for breeding.

In some cases, the animals are extinct in the wild, and zoos are trying to build a captive population that can be reintroduced into nature some day.

"It's better than not having anything," said Jack Grisham, of the Oklahoma City Zoo, who oversees the nationwide breeding of cheetahs, an endangered species.

"Remember the bison," Grisham said. "Back at the turn of the century, there was just a handful, and the New York Zoological Society took them to the Wichita Mountains in Oklahoma, and they started breeding again. They're the basis of all the bison in North America."

The association oversees survival programs for 50 endangered species.

Fire on Danish ferryboat kills 2, slightly injures 10

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — A fire broke out on a Britain-bound Danish ferry in the North Sea on Monday, killing two passengers and slightly injuring 10 others, police said.

A company official said the 350-foot Tor Scandinavia was sailing on its own engines toward the Danish western port of Esbjerg with 650 passengers and crew aboard.

The nationalities or identities of the victims were not immediately released. Most of the passengers were from Britain and Sweden. Police in Esbjerg said the dead were probably Swedish passengers.

At least one crew member was among the injured. Rescue workers said injuries were minor and caused by smoke inhalation.

Four of the injured were taken to hospitals in Denmark by helicopter, and medical teams were sent to the ship to assist passengers, said Klaus Ipsen, managing director of the Danish owner, the shipping line Scandinavian Seaways.

The 14,893-ton liner was on a regular trip from Goteborg, on Sweden's western coast, to Harwich on Britain's east coast, when the fire broke at dawn about 90 miles west of Esbjerg.

The blaze, which apparently started in a linen closet in the bow on the fifth deck, was put out within a few hours. The cause was not immediately known.

Danish national radio reported that Tor Scandinavia's communications equipment was destroyed by the fire

Much of the speculation on whether Chicago Bears Q.B. Mike Tomczak could ever replace Jim McMahon has ended. The Bears are 3-0. See page 3B

Rubley is third straight challenge for Fry's Hawkeyes

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — First it was Oregon's Bill Musgrave. Then it was Iowa State's Bret Oberg. Now comes another talented quarterback to challenge the Iowa defense — Tulsa's T.J. Rubley. Rubley, a native of Davenport, will lead the Golden Hurricane against the Hawkeyes at Kinnick Stadium on Saturday. The 6-foot-4, 198-pound junior is Tulsa's career passing leader and will be playing in his home state for the first time as a collegian. Iowa didn't offer Rubley a scholarship during his senior year at Davenport West, although Coach

Hayden Fry was aware of his abilities. Rubley earned all-state honors and was the last of five brothers who were quarterbacks at West. Another Rubley brother, Tim, played at Davenport Assumption. "As I recall, that was the year we only had one quarterback scholarship," Fry said. "We followed T.J. all the way through because of his family. He had real good ability, he was intelligent, he had good bloodlines. I think a lot of people in this part of the country fouled up by not going after him." The only quarterback Iowa signed

"We followed T.J. all the way through because of his family. I think a lot of people in this part of the country fouled up by not going after him." — Hayden Fry when Rubley was a senior was Matt Rodgers, who's now the Hawkeyes' starter. In his first start last week, Rodgers passed for 276 yards and three touchdowns in a 31-21 victory over Iowa State. Tulsa is off to a 3-1 start, beating Texas-El Paso, Oklahoma State and New Mexico and losing to eighth-ranked Arkansas. Rubley has thrown for 5,199 yards and 34 touchdowns in his career. He became Tulsa's career yardage leader in the second week of the season. Fry said that's a noteworthy accomplishment considering that Tulsa has been blessed with quarterbacks like Jerry Rhome and Bill Anderson, who once threw 45 passes in one half. "When I was a little fella, I remember Glenn Dobbs and people like that (at Tulsa)," Fry said. "They were All-Americans, fantastic passers, and he (Rubley) broke all their records." Tulsa is coming off a 35-33 victory over New Mexico in which Rubley passed for 122 yards. The Golden Hurricane's most impressive victory was a 20-10 decision over Oklahoma State of the Big Eight Conference. "They've beaten some good teams," Fry said. "They've really moved the football and at times, they've played good defense. We'll really have our work cut out for us. And T.J. probably will be at his best before the home folks." Rubley said he's looking forward to the game, but not because he wants to get back at the Hawkeyes for taking Rodgers over him. Actually, he never thought that much about playing for Iowa. "I've always been an Iowa State fan. I had two brothers play there." See Rubley, Page 2B

Panthers in Top Ten after 5-year absence

(AP) — Notre Dame isn't the only school that's waking up the echoes. Pittsburgh, the alma mater of Mike Ditka, Tony Dorsett and Dan Marino, is 3-0 and ranked 10th in The Associated Press' college football poll — its first Top 10 ranking in five years. "People are starting to find out we're contenders, not pretenders," quarterback Alex Van Pelt said. "We've opened some eyes now. We're making some people believe." Van Pelt is one of the main reasons the Panthers are prowling among the nation's elite. In Pitt's 30-23 victory over Syracuse Saturday night, the redshirt freshman completed 25 of 32 passes for 306 yards and one touchdown. In his first three college games, Van Pelt has completed 51 of 67 passes — an amazing 76 percent — for 663 yards and four touchdowns. "Was I surprised at the way he played? Yes, and not pleasantly surprised," Syracuse coach Dick MacPherson said. Not pleasant also would be an apt description of Pitt's remaining schedule.

AP Top 25

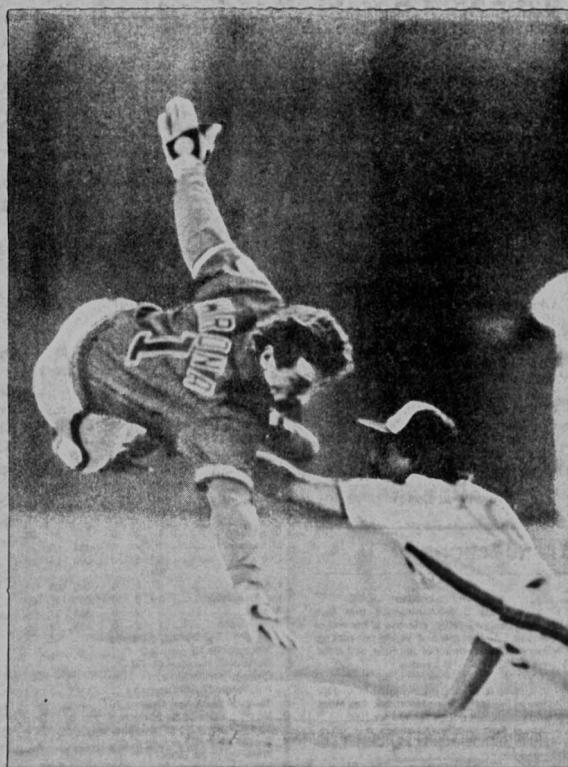

The Top Twenty Five teams in the Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Sept. 23, total points based on 25 for first (Notre Dame) and 1 for last (Florida St.) and last week's ranking:

Team	Record	Pts	Pvs
1. Notre Dame (57)	3-0	1,487	1
2. Miami, Fla. (9)	3-0	1,432	2

Miami, a 38-7 winner over Missouri, drew eight points closer with 1,432. Nebraska was third, followed by Auburn, Colorado, Michigan, Clemson, Arkansas and West Virginia. Michigan and Colorado switched positions, but otherwise the order was the same as last week.

Nebraska pounded Minnesota 48-0, Michigan edged UCLA 24-23, Clemson beat Maryland 31-7, Arkansas downed Mississippi 24-17 and West Virginia beat Louisville 30-21. Auburn and Colorado did not play. Syracuse fell eight spots to No. 18 following its loss to Pitt, but that wasn't the biggest drop among ranked teams. Washington plunged 10 places to No. 21 following a 20-17 loss to Arizona. The victory lifted the Wildcats from No. 23 to No. 17. Loses dropped Oregon, UCLA and Ohio State out of the rankings.

Chicago's Rick Wrona dives to avoid a tag at second base Monday night during the Cubs game with the Expos in Montreal. Tim Foley recorded the out and the Expos went on to win 4-3 in 10 innings.

Cubs miss chance for clinching a tie

MONTREAL (AP) — Chicago missed a chance to clinch a tie for the National League East championship Monday night when pinch-hitter Jim Dwyer singled with one out in the 10th inning to give the Montreal Expos a 4-3 victory over the Cubs. The second-place St. Louis Cardinals lost earlier Monday night, 4-2 at Pittsburgh and remain four games behind the Cubs. St. Louis and Chicago each have five games left.

The Cubs, who have a magic number of two games, can clinch the division Tuesday night if they beat the Expos and the Cardinals lose to the Pirates. Andre Dawson hit two home runs for the Cubs, including a controversial inside-the-park homer in the seventh to give Chicago a 3-2 lead. Scott Sanderson, 11-9, came on to pitch the 10th inning for the Cubs and Mike Aldrete led off with a single. Rex Hudler pinch ran and stole second and the Cubs intentionally walked Andres Galarraga. After a sacrifice by rookie Marquis Grissom moved the runners up, Mitch Williams relieved. With the infield and outfield playing in, Dwyer lined a single to right field on a 1-2 pitch to score the winning run. See Cubs, Page 2B

Cards lose

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals moved within two games of elimination in the National League East race Monday night, losing to the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2. The first-place Chicago Cubs lost 4-3 at Montreal in 10 innings and missed a chance of clinching a tie. The Cardinals remain four games behind the Cubs. The Cubs and Cardinals each have five games remaining, including a season-ending, three-game series against each other in St. Louis this weekend. The Cubs can win the division Tuesday night if they beat Montreal and the Cardinals lose to Pittsburgh. Barry Bonds hit a two-run homer for the Pirates.

Owners will give search another shot

CINCINNATI (AP) — NFL owners will meet Oct. 10 in either Chicago or Dallas to attempt to elect a new commissioner, the league said Monday. One source said the owners would be presented with five finalists — Jim Finks, Paul Tagliabue and Robert Mulcahy, plus two new names. Finks, Tagliabue and Mulcahy all were on the original list of finalists. This will be the second try at finding a replacement for Pete Rozelle, who announced March 22 he was stepping down after 29 years as commissioner. The first meeting took place in Chicago on July 6. Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints and the only candidate recommended by the selection committee, fell three votes short of the 19 needed for election at that meeting. The other 11 teams abstained — Houston was not present at the vote — saying they want more information. Since then, a new search committee consisting of a combination of the two groups has attempted to find other candidates. However, Finks remains the frontrunner, along with Tagliabue, the NFL's Washington lawyer who was considered the other most likely candidate when deliberations began. Mulcahy is the chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, where Giants Stadium, the Brendan Byrne Arena and the Meadowlands racetrack are located. Several of the dissident owners have recommended that someone with a business background be named to the post. Victor Kiam, owner of the New England Patriots, suggested at one point that a seven-figure salary not be an impediment toward finding the best possible new commissioner. Rozelle, meanwhile, has stayed on in the job but has moved to a New York hotel while his wife, Carrie, has relocated to their new home in the San Diego area.

Colorado players lay quarterback to rest 2,000 pack memorial service

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado quarterback Sal Aunese, who died Saturday of inoperable stomach cancer after a six-month battle, was praised for his fighting spirit by his coach, the governor and teammates at an emotional memorial service Monday. About 2,000 people jammed the 1½-hour service at CU's Macky Auditorium to say goodbye to Aunese, the Buffaloes' starting quarterback last season. "His humility and his courage are something we will always remember," said CU coach Bill McCartney, commenting publicly about Aunese's death for the first time. Aunese, 21, died at University Hospital in Denver Saturday night. Doctors at it diagnosed him as having inoperable stomach cancer on March 30, and Aunese had held up well under chemotherapy treatment, even discussing returning to the team. But by midsummer, the disease had begun to get the upper hand. Many in the audience wept openly as McCartney praised the team of doctors who tried to help as Aunese's condition deteriorated. McCartney's voice broke as he looked directly at the rest of his team seated in the first three rows. "Perhaps never in recent history has a young man allowed a group of guys to love him like you did," McCartney said. McCartney also acknowledged publicly for the first time that Aunese had fathered a son by McCartney's 19-year-old daughter, Kristin. McCartney expressed admiration for his daughter, who sat in the second row with the 6-month-old baby, Timothy. "You could have had an abortion. You could have gone away to have the child to avoid the shame. But you stayed. And you're going to raise that little guy," he said. Gov. Roy Romer, who interrupted a visit elsewhere in the state to attend the service, expressed sympathy for Aunese's family and his teammates, who have dedicated the 1989 season to him. School President Gordon Gee lauded Aunese as someone who faced his cancer battle head-on. "His indomitable spirit shone through despite his troubles," Gee said. "That's just the kind of guy he was." Aunese's family, along with Kristin McCartney, then filed onstage and surrounded the casket. A private memorial service for his former teammates, coaches and family was held earlier Monday. At a news conference following the service, McCartney said the uni-

Hawkeye named Player of Week

CHICAGO (AP) — Tackle Jim Johnson of Iowa has been named Midwest defensive Player of the Week by the Associated Press for his efforts in a 31-21 victory over Iowa State. Johnson, a 6-3, 270-pound junior from Forest City, Iowa, had 14 tackles including 7 solos. He also had 2 quarterback sacks for losses of 10 yards and caused a fumble that teammate Larry Blue recovered for a touchdown to tie the game at 21-21. Johnson started in the opening nine games of last season before being sidelined with an injury. In ten games as a sophomore, he recorded 64 tackles, eight for losses and had a previous career-high 10 tackles against Michigan in 1988.

Bengals trim Browns

CINCINNATI (AP) — Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes and Jim Skow led a second-half defensive surge as the Cincinnati Bengals beat the Browns 21-14 Monday night, handing Cleveland its first loss of the season.

Esiason, who had just three TD passes in nine previous games against the Browns, matched that output. He had second-quarter scoring tosses of eight and 16 yards to tight end Rodney Holman, then hit James Brooks with a 19-yarder 5:05 into the second half to put the Bengals ahead for good.

But it took two late goal-line stands by the Bengals to win it, the second ending at the 3-yard-line with 1:41 left when Eric Thomas knocked down a fourth-down pass.

Skow, meanwhile, was credited with 2½ sacks on Cleveland's first two possessions of the second half, giving Cincinnati good field possession both times. He also dumped Tim Manoa for no gain on a fourth-and-1 at the Bengals' 9 with 7:52 left.

The first time Skow got a sack, the Bengals capitalized, going 49 yards in six plays, capped by the TD pass to Brooks from Esiason, who finished with 14 completions in 20 attempts for 104 yards, plus 34 yards rushing on five carries. The second time, Jim Gallery, who later missed a 44-yarder, missed a 48-yard field-goal attempt.

But it didn't matter as the defense almost completely shut down Cleveland, sacking Kosar six times and holding the Browns without a first down in both the first and third quarters.

Kosar, who threw for 163 yards and two touchdowns in the first half, finished with 15 completions in 23 attempts for 203 yards.

Bucks extend Harris' contract

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee coach Del Harris has signed a three-year contract extension through the 1992-93 season and was named vice president of basketball operations, the club announced Monday.

Harris' current three-year contract, signed in June 1987, would have expired at the end of the upcoming season.

Financial terms were not revealed. "I'm happy to have the opportunity to carry on with the Bucks," said Harris. "One of the strengths of the Bucks organization has been continuity."

Harris, 52, took over as Bucks coach on June 4, 1987 after Don Nelson resigned. In his two seasons, the Bucks are 91-73 with a 5-9 playoff record.

Rice, Stanley done in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice, who has 382 career home runs, was told by the Boston Red Sox on Monday his option for the 1989 season would not be picked up and reliever Bob Stanley, the club's all-time save leader, announced his retirement.

Rice, a 15-year veteran, would have been paid $2.4 million if the club chose to bring him back next season.

Stanley, who will be 35 on Nov. 10, told Red Sox officials at a separate meeting on Monday that he would retire at the end of the season after 13 years with the club.

Doctor gives Stewart green light

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart, who missed a third of last season after surgery for colon cancer, has been given the approval of his doctor to return to coaching this season.

Stewart underwent extensive tests last week at Columbia Regional Hospital that showed his body was free of cancer and the seven ulcers that plagued him in February, according to his personal physician Dr. Jay Ward.

"Everything we did went extremely well," Ward said. "It was great."

Stewart, whose collapse on an airplane Feb. 9 triggered the discovery of cancer, has gained almost all of the weight he lost during his recovery, Ward said.

Yogi is done on the diamond

HOUSTON (AP) — Yogi Berra, who coined the phrase "it ain't over 'til it's over," announced Monday that it's over as far as his 42-year on-field career is concerned.

Chicago Bears quarterback Mike Tomczak escapes from the pocket during the Bears' 47-27 win over Detroit Sunday. Tomczak passed for 302 yards and two touchdowns against Detroit.

Life without McMahon . . . Bears are 3-0 under Tomczak's leadership

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Mike Tomczak, the free agent quarterback who had been fighting under the shadow of Jim McMahon, has come into the sunset.

Tomczak had the best game of his career Sunday, leading the undefeated Chicago Bears to a 47-27 victory over the Detroit Lions. He completed 17 of 25 passes for 302 yards and two touchdowns.

"That's a dead issue," Tomczak said when asked if the trading of McMahon to San Diego during the preseason has eased his situation.

"What's happened happened. I've always felt comfortable. I had an opportunity in '87 and more of an opportunity (in) '88. I'm comfortable when I'm behind the center. I believe in myself and I believe in the team."

Tomczak was signed by the Bears as a free agent out of Ohio State in 1985. He and David Krieg of Seattle are the only starting quarterbacks in the NFL who were not drafted.

"That's been the tradition in the league," Tomczak said of high draft picks making it as starting quarterbacks. "It's my turn to change that tradition."

But Tomczak also said he can make it "for the same reason there's a free agent quarterback in the Hall of Fame by the name of Johnny Unitas."

Unitas originally was drafted by Pittsburgh, then released before going to the Baltimore Colts and becoming one of the game's all-time greats.

Tomczak said he felt he could be a starting quarterback in the NFL from "the day I joined the Bears' organization in May 1985."

It's not that Tomczak is new to a starting role. Playing behind the oft-injured McMahon, he had enough opportunities to lead the Bears to a 16-3 record as a starter before this season. Now, he is 19-3.

Still, he has had his detractors. Even after leading the Bears to victories over Cincinnati and Minnesota to open this season, his statistics and ratings were near the bottom of the league.

"Stats are for idiots," Tomczak said.

Did the Detroit game change that? "I don't know," he said. "I can't change the minds of the critics or the fans. This is a humbling profession. But I believe in myself and I communicate well with the players and the coaching staff. The biggest thing for me is to better myself in each game."

Ryder Cup to undergo change

Ryder Cup

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England (AP) — Some changes might be in order in the Ryder Cup format, American captain Ray Floyd suggested.

And some changes will be made, at least on the European team.

Tony Jacklin, the most successful captain Europe has had, has resigned.

"I've had a wonderful run," the former U.S. and British Open champion said Sunday after his team had retained the Cup with a 14-14 tie against the United States.

"I've enjoyed it. I can't tell you what it's meant to me to lead these guys four times," Jacklin said at the Ryder Cup closing ceremonies at the Belfry Golf Center.

"But now it's time for me to move on and for someone else to take over."

That someone, Spanish star Seve Ballesteros said, should be Bernard Gallaher, eight times a member of the European team during the long period America dominated the biennial matches.

Gallaher, now a British club pro, served as Jacklin's assistant for the last two matches.

"I'd like to see Bernard take it," Ballesteros said. "He's the closest to the players. He has my vote."

Jacklin took over as captain for the 1983 matches at PGA National in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. and came within one point, 14½-13½, of halting a long United States winning string.

Jacklin's team broke through at the Belfry two years later, scoring a 16½-11½ upset victory and taking the Cup from the United States for the first time in 28 years.

That triumph was perceived by the British press as a signal that world golf leadership had moved.

With care, that $20 can get you more than some novel

Robert Tanenbaum's latest novel, "Depraved Indifference," costs $18.95. That's almost $20. We got our copy of "Depraved Indifference" free. But there are a lot of other things you could buy for $20.

Here are some of them:
• A boxed set of J.R.R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" trilogy, which is full of great characterizations, colorful dialogue and believable plot developments. Unlike some novels you could buy.

• A hardcover copy of Palmer and Colton's "A History of the Modern World since 1815," in which you could learn all about Croats. Croats also appear in some novels you could buy, but they'd be used in repugnantly gimmicky ways, held up as made-for-TV movie plastic villains. And you wouldn't want that.

• A ticket to some exciting Hancher event like "Les Miserables" or Kathleen Battle. These events would not only involve you personally in ways a by-the-numbers legal potboiler never could, they'd also get you out to meet people, which would be impossible if you were closeted at a home reading.

• A long-distance phone conversation with somebody you know you ought to call more often. Along with the joy of mending old bridges, this option would also involve meaningful dialogue, which you wouldn't get in some legalistic Croatian-sporting novels you could buy. Novels like that will shamelessly present stuff like this:

Croatian hijacker: "Listen carefully to what I am saying and do not make a disturbance. There is a bomb on this plane..."

Flighty stewardess: "A bomb! That's impossible. There are children..."

Better get this newflash out to Belfast and Beirut: Bombs and children just don't mix.

Or the novel's dialogue might go something like this:
"I knew it was you when I saw the orange soda. No piss bum would ruin his stomach with that shit."

"Whimper, whimper, cringe," Karp said.

"She opened the door and looked down at him. 'Jesus, Karp, you look like Griefyria's Bobby. How long've you been waiting for me?'"

"My whole life..."

Certainly your phone conversation would be much nicer.

• Several pads of paper and some new pens, with which you could write your own novel. You could design its plot any way you want, and with about 15 minutes of sober thought, you could come up with many ways to avoid the deus ex machina stage-show clichés that infest some legalistic Croatian-sporting dialogue-poor novels you could buy. You would never cause the screaming climax of your novel to take place — ever so realistically — in a packed courtroom. You would never build the principal case of your crusading, idealistic attorney on circumstantial evidence, hearsay and coincidence. Oh no — you could do much better than that.

Ex Libris...

• About 10 minutes with a therapist, which might help you to understand just exactly why you need "realistic" novels torn from the pages of today's headlines. Tanenbaum has eked out a reputation for himself as an author of "true-crime" books, because he was himself once a New York City assistant district attorney. What this means to the everyday reader is fairly simple: an average of 4.3 more expletives in any paragraph, lots of interbreeding civil servants and gratuitous mentions of El Salvador. Even in 10 minutes, any good therapist would be able to tell you why "Inherit the Wind" isn't good enough for you.

• A subscription to The New York Times, including the Sunday edition, which contains The New York Times Book Review. From the Review, you could learn how to avoid legalistic, Croatian-sporting, dialogue-poor "true-crime" potboilers, especially ones that cost $20. The key to the Review is mathematical. Let's go through it in steps:
Step 1: Count the number of paragraphs in the review.

Step 2: Blot out the number of paragraphs that are pure plot summary or peripheral comments about the author.

Step 3: If there are any paragraphs left, read them.

Step 4: Under no circumstances believe what you read.
• An acceptable bribe to be offered to your nearest underpaid, overworked Daily Iowan book reviewer, in return for which he would probably look the other way while you walked off with the complimentary copy of any legalistic, Croatian-sporting, dialogue-poor "true-crime" best-selling potboilers that happened to be handy.

Keep in mind, however, that bribes don't come with money-back guarantees. And you'll certainly want your money back.

'Les Miz' charges into town

Musical production to run 5 days at Hancher

Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

"Les Miserable" is — and no one's sorrier than I to have to put it this way — the "Batman" of the theater.

As the national touring company arrives in Iowa City for its five-day run at Hancher Auditorium, you get a sense of just how massive this operation is. Sometimes resembling, in size and execution, more a military invasion (or a rock 'n' roll tour) than a traveling theater company, the show charges into city after city, riding a wave of pre-publicity hype, media overkill and an international reputation that goes beyond mere artistic approval. Plus there's the oft-mentioned 10 semi-trailer trucks, 30 tons of scenery and lights, 3,000 costume pieces, 1,500 props, 14 orchestra musicians, a crew of 19, a cast of 38 and a logo that shows up everywhere on everything.

Based on Victor Hugo's sprawling novel of turmoil and intrigue in 19th-century France, "Les Miz" has become the musical theater sensation of the decade, including eight Tony Awards for its continuing Broadway run.

The journey of "Les Miz" from epic novel to smash musical began more than a decade ago in France, when librettist Alain Boublil and composer Claude-Michel Schonberg saw the project as an opportunity to touch their countrymen with a national historical classic. Undaunted by the fact that France has no significant tradition of American-style musical theater, they worked to bring "Les Miz" to the stage.

Theater

From a short Paris version that was a series of staged tableaux, "Les Miz" developed into a dynamic London musical and a rousing Broadway sensation. The novel and the musical take their name from the outcasts and rebels of society, in this case the victims of France's ingrown system of privilege and power. Hugo's story is a battle cry for freedom, justice and equality.

(Unless you are a scholar of Hugo, be sure to get to the show early enough to read the plot summary in the program. It's better to forfeit a little surprise for some basic knowledge of the characters and events. After all, while the show is big, Hugo's book is a helluva lot bigger and condensing it into 3½ hours means the information moves by quickly. And since the show is all-sung, it's often hard to catch names and places — it's no fun if you can't tell the Eponines from the Fatines, or the Mariuses from the Enjolrazes.)

More than any show in history, "Les Miz" is an international phenomenon, with more than 30 major productions playing or planned in locations on every continent except Antarctica, and there'll probably be one there too, as soon as they can figure out a way to teach penguins to sing.

The touring production is the most ambitious musical theater project ever put on the road. Producer Cameron Mackintosh vowed that if a touring production could not be designed to duplicate the spectacle of the London and Broadway productions, "Les Miz" would not tour at all. (Having seen "Les Miz" performed in London as well as by the touring company that will be here, I can say without reservation that the difference between the shows is extremely minimal, both in set and spectacle performance quality.)

As you can see, under the weight of all this information, logistical precision, merchandising and hype it's easy to forget that at the center of it all is a show — and a very good show at that. But more on that tomorrow...

Glass music to be absorbed; but remember, he's a genius

Laura Tillotson
The Daily Iowan

For the man who walked onstage at Clapp Recital Hall Sunday afternoon, the performance was all in a day's work. But for the audience, the piano recital by composer Phillip Glass was a unique and intimate opportunity to experience some of the talented, minimalist musician's best work.

Perhaps Glass summed up his style best when referring to his piece "Planet News," which was originally written to accompany works by poet Allen Ginsberg. Glass remarked that the original audiences "didn't notice that there was music at all" during the performances with Ginsberg. And on Sunday afternoon, it was easy for listeners in Clapp to use Glass' music as a relaxation tool, something to absorb rather than merely listen to.

Glass is noted for more complicated compositions like "1000 Airplanes on the Roof" and the score for "Koyaanisqatsi," but on Sunday his performance was on the piano alone and remained minimalist throughout. The melody strain from one piece was often transposed into another key within a different piece. Several of the works, particularly the five-part combination of music from "Metamorphoses" and "The Thin Blue Line," were hardly more than a handful of repeated chords with a simple melody line. And of course his technique of endlessly repeating chords, themes or entire sections was no less prevalent in his piano arrangements. (An English critic recently began a Glass album review with "Phillip Phillip Phillip Glass Glass Glass remains remains remains the the the same same same.")

Sunday, Glass's music seemed to float through the hall, with the melody and bass chords merging into perfect harmony. Part of the reason these pieces hold so much appeal is due to their extreme simplicity and exercise-book quality. It is difficult to look at each score individually without wondering why they are so highly acclaimed. Instead, they should be considered as a whole, a long string of pure chords which merge into a full and satisfying experience rather than merely a series of songs.

After playing nearly an hour-and-a-half, Glass returned onstage to enthusiastic applause to play the title piece from the film "The Thin Blue Line," which was originally written for strings. Unlike the rest of the program, this work was more intense and resounding, making the transition to piano less successful.

Attired in a suit with no tie, Glass spoke between pieces Sunday with an amiable tone and the air of giving a living-room recital rather than a concert-hall performance. It was easy for the audience to forget that the unassuming man on stage was an ingenious composer, but once the music began memories were refreshed.
