Weapons reductions may be pending

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Tuesday accepted President George Bush's call for deep U.S.-Soviet chemical arms cuts and challenged the United States to go further and faster. Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union will "radically reduce or completely destroy" its chemical weapons, halt nuclear tests and stop making weapons-grade plutonium and uranium — all if Washington reciprocates. Shevardnadze, speaking to the U.N. General Assembly, said the two governments have narrowed their differences and he predicted that by the U.S.-Soviet summit next spring or summer, "We may have passed the last turn on the road" toward a treaty reducing strategic arms by 50 percent. There was a quick response from the White House. Bush said, "I am very pleased with the way things are going. The reaction from the Soviets to our proposals yesterday has been positive, so now the goal is to get moving and try to work out these agreements." White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater called Shevardnadze's statements "a very constructive response. Our ultimate objective is total elimination of chemical weapons. And it appears that both nations are now ready to act." Shevardnadze also said that if NATO countries agree to start talks on tactical nuclear weapons, the Soviet Union will respond by further unilateral cuts in its tactical nuclear missiles in Europe. He repeated his government's call for a nuclear test ban and said Moscow was considering extending a 1963 treaty to cover underground nuclear explosions. Secretary of State James Baker later praised Shevardnadze's nearly hour-long address as "a good speech, an interesting speech." He called it "very responsive to the President's statement" on chemical weapons. But Viktor Karpov, the Soviet Union's chief arms control expert, told reporters, "Our proposal is a wider one" and does not wait to destroy all weapons or halt production until all nations capable of producing them have signed a ban. "It will not be sufficient only to get rid of old weapons if the United States is going to produce new chemical weapons," Karpov said. Bush told the General Assembly on Monday that the United States will destroy more than 80 percent. See Response, Page 6A

I.C. asked to aid survivors of hurricane

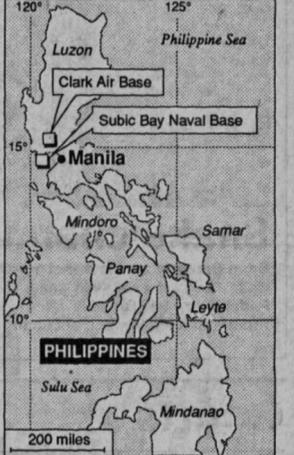

The Daily Iowan
Iowa City residents are being asked to help the Salvation Army relief efforts to areas devastated by Hurricane Hugo, including portions of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The Iowa City Salvation Army, 331 E. Market St., is collecting donations so the organization can air lift goods and services to many areas of the Caribbean that have been devastated by the storm. The people in the stricken areas are in desperate need of food, supplies and donations to rebuild their lives, according to a Salvation Army spokesperson. "If a disaster happened around here, and the resources dried up, what would we do?" asked Lt. Kenneth Nicolai of the Iowa City Salvation Army. "Disasters come unexpectedly and I'm just sure people want to do their part in helping others in that situation." The Iowa City Salvation Army is collecting donations that will be shipped to areas hardest hit by the hurricane. Suggested gifts include bottled water, cots, canned food, flashlights and batteries. Contributions should be labeled Hurricane Hugo and are requested to be delivered to the organization's headquarters as soon as possible, Nicolai said. He added that Johnson County residents were generous during the Mexican earthquake relief efforts. The Salvation Army collected about $2,000 through a mail appeal for contributions. Ambush kills 2 U.S. civilians in Philippines

'Cowardly' terrorists blamed
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen believed to be communist rebels ambushed and killed two American civilians working at a U.S. military base Tuesday, shortly before Vice President Dan Quayle arrived to discuss the future of U.S. military installations here. The victims were employees of Ford Aerospace Corp., which contracts to maintain an electronic warfare training range at Camp O'Donnell. The camp is a U.S.-run facility about 50 miles north of Manila and 12 miles from the U.S. Clark Air Base. Ford Aerospace spokesman Norman Black identified the victims as William H. Thompson, 45, and Donald G. Buchner, 44. He said both were retired from the U.S. Air Force. Their hometowns were not known. Also Tuesday, gunmen killed a member of President Corazon Aquino's presidential guard, about a mile from where the president will meet with Quayle on Wednesday. The attacks followed a series of bombings this month and came amid growing opposition to U.S. military installations in the Philippines. The Americans slowed their car as they approached a dump truck and a jeep blocking a highway near Capas, 60 miles north of Manila, police said. Six men sprang from the jeep and riddled their car with gunfire, according to police Lt. Pepito Pimentel. The assailants then opened the car door and pumped bullets into the victims, Pimentel said. The attack occurred about 5 p.m. "We deplore this senseless and cowardly act of terrorism," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington. "Acts like this will not deter us in our resolve to support the democratic government in the Philippines." Col. Florentino Amorabon, a spokesman for the Philippine Constabulary in central Luzon island, said the assassins were believed to be members of the New Peoples Army, which operates in the area. In April, rebels killed U.S. Army Col. James Rowe as he was driving to the headquarters of the U.S. Joint Military Assistance Group in Quezon City, near Manila. In October 1987, rebels killed three Americans in simultaneous attacks outside Clark Air Base. The United States operates Clark Air Base, the Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations in the Philippines, but there are increased calls for an end to the U.S. military presence. Rojas-Cardona: Procedures for inquiry 'proper'

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan
UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona assured senators Tuesday night that proper procedures are being followed in the UI Student Legal Services investigation. SLS is being forced to move out of its Union location, and there have allegedly been charges of improper conduct lodged against SLS Supervising Atty. James Prescott, Rojas-Cardona said. "There have been some complaints against the office and against the supervising attorney. We're investigating them. We're getting help from someone in the UI who knows how to handle these matters," Rojas-Cardona said. Phillip Jones, UI associate vice president for academic affairs, has been conducting a review of the Senate investigation. Rojas-Cardona did not comment on the recommendations or modifications Jones suggested, but a memorandum addressed to him September 14 and signed by Jones said Prescott should be terminated by Jan. 1, 1990. "The reason I haven't kept you informed was because I couldn't. Any time we have a personnel matter, I feel it is important to keep it up before the Senate," Pepe Rojas-Cardona said. Prescott's position is a temporary appointment, can be terminated at See Senate, Page 6A

Former HUD secretary charges committee prejudged him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. refused to answer questions Tuesday from a House panel investigating housing scandals, citing his constitutional right against self-incrimination. He contended he had been "prejudged by this body." Pierce, compelled to appear by a subpoena, accused the subcommittee of trying to rush him into testifying without adequate preparation and said he hoped to tell his story later. His refusal to testify came at a dramatic meeting of a panel that has been investigating allegations of billions of dollars worth of fraud, mismanagement, influence peddling and political favoritism at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which Pierce headed throughout the Reagan administration. Disagreements between the subcommittee and Pierce even extended to news coverage of the hearing. Pierce invoked House rules that forced subcommittee chairman Tom Lantos (D-Calif.) to bar television, radio and photographic coverage, despite the chairman's complaint that the move was unwarranted. Pierce read a brief statement saying he had not had time to prepare, did not have the HUD documents he needed, and would invoke his constitutional right not to testify. Lantos then posed eight questions to Pierce, some raising new suggestions of political influence involving HUD and the Reagan White House. See Pierce, Page 6A

Rally kicks off pro-choice week

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan
Speakers at Tuesday's pro-choice rally urged supporters to take an active role in protecting a woman's right to a safe and legal abortion. The rally, sponsored by the Reproductive Rights Coalition, was held to kick off Iowa City Reproductive Rights Week. The event featured several speakers including Iowa gubernatorial candidate John Chrystal and Iowa City councilor Karen Kubby. Kubby began the rally by quoting from a proclamation naming this week as Reproductive Rights Week. Other speakers included Sonia Bendorf, a UI graduate student from Brazil, and pro-choice activist Clara Oleson. Both women stressed that the fight to preserve legal abortion is being waged worldwide. "We think globally but act locally," Oleson said. Bendorf said illegal abortion in Latin American countries results in injustice to women there. "We need to realize that the issue of abortion accessibility and safety is a global issue," she said. "Accessibility to a legal abortion is not a privilege but a right for all women." The coalition also staged a satirical representation of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Rehnquist dragging a shackled and chained woman called "The Nameless Woman." Chrystal, who will be running for governor in 1990, said he would defend a woman's right to abortion if elected to office. "It's a matter of privacy, not abortion," he said. The Reproductive Rights Week will continue with residence hall film screenings and discussions on Wednesday and a pro-choice panel discussion in Shambaugh Auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday. Mom and Dad of Year named

Pamela Dolan chosen for courage, Frank Craig for enthusiasm

Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

On the surface, Pamela Dolan and Frank Craig may not have a lot in common, but the two really share several traits. They are both extraordinary parents who were named this year's UI Mom of the Year and UI Dad of the Year.

UI sophomore Bret Dolan nominated his mother for UI Mom of the Year after witnessing her courageous fight against breast cancer. His essay prompted Mortar Board to name Pamela Dolan UI Mom of the Year on September 16.

Dolan said he was shocked when his mother was diagnosed with cancer last summer. But he says her strength and determination not to let the disease get the best of her made him proud.

"In my essay, I said I've never been as proud of anyone as her," he said. "I do think if anyone can beat it, it's her — just because of her desire to want to beat it.

"I suppose now I really look at her as a motivation. If she can fight her battle as courageously as she has, then I can only do my part here," he added.

Although the family doesn't discuss his mother's illness often, Dolan said, "it's all in the back of our minds a lot of times. We mainly emphasize the positives."

"Any time you're dealing with cancer, it's unpredictable. You always have the dreaded possibility in the back of your mind," he said.

Pamela, who is undergoing chemotherapy as cancer treatment, said her family gained strength in spite of the trials they underwent this summer.

"They rallied quite a bit. You don't realize how strong kids can be until you have an adversity like that," Pamela said.

UI Father of the Year Frank Craig also serves as an outstanding parent to his four children. He was named September 16 by Omicron Delta Kappa, a UI honor society, during Parents' Weekend.

Craig, from Independence, Iowa, began taking his children to Hawkeye athletic games when they were young.

When they were older and attending the UI, he moved them into the UI residence halls when all four children attended school here.

UI Sophomore Andy Craig is the last of his parents' nest to attend the UI. He said he would like to be the same type of father his dad was.

"You never really notice all the little things about your parents until they're not there anymore," he said. "You begin to appreciate how much trouble they went to just to keep things going from day to day."

Craig said he placed a lot of importance on his role as his children's cheerleader.

"Sometimes you do get tired of going to all those school functions, but when it's your child, it's always worthwhile," he said. "Even the seventh-grade band."

'The real world' people to recruit at UI campus

Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Thursday's Careers Day will cater both to UI students who are finding the harsh job-search reality swiftly approaching and to those who don't ever want to grow up.

Careers Day will enable students to discover what types of jobs are available and which majors are helpful in pursuing those jobs.

Representatives from 160 employers — the most ever to attend Careers Day — will be available in the Union Main Lounge from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

"This is an excellent opportunity for graduating seniors and graduate students looking for jobs, as well as for undecided students who want to see what's out there," said Jim Seyfer, coordinator of UI Career Information Services.

Nancy Noth, associate dean of liberal arts, said Careers Day is not limited to upperclassmen and graduate students.

"The day could be very helpful to freshmen and sophomores too. It is important for them to know what kind of jobs stem from their major," Noth said.

Representatives from businesses and government agencies around the country are seeking all majors and this year a record number are seeking liberal arts majors, Seyfer said. In addition, a record 15 hospital representatives will attend to recruit nurses.

Careers Day attendees are free to browse and visit with employers. Those seeking employment are encouraged to wear suits and bring résumés.

"Employers consistently give UI students high marks for being prepared with résumés and for doing their homework on the companies before Careers Day," Seyfer said.

UI sponsors include the University Placement Offices, Cooperative Education and the College of Nursing.

A panel of four employers will share their expertise on interviewing tonight from 7 to 8:30 in the Union Triangle Ballroom. Students will be able to ask panel members everything they need to know about interviewing.

Topics include:

- What to know about the employer before the interview.
- What employers look for during the interview.
- Ethics and the job search.
- Dressing for the interview.

A question-and-answer period will follow. More than 2,000 students are expected to attend Careers Day 1989.

Woodbury approves riverboat gambling; will create 500 jobs

SIoux CITY (AP) — Woodbury County on Tuesday became the eighth county in Iowa to allow riverboat gambling and the first on the Missouri River to authorize the floating casinos to land.

County voters approved the measure by a comfortable margin, with a final unofficial tally of 9,951 yes votes to 7,977 no. Don Linduski, county auditor and commissioner of elections, said the referendum did better than many expected.

"There was a lot of talk that it would be a nip and tuck ordeal, but it won pretty comfortably," he said. "That was a pretty good show."

Linduski also said the measure fared slightly better in Sioux City precincts than in the rural parts of the county.

"That was kind of anticipated," he said. He estimated voter turnout at about 40 percent.

A simple majority had to vote in favor of the riverboat gambling issue for it to pass.

Voters in Allamakee and Clayton counties along the Mississippi River voted down riverboat gambling August 15. Dubuque, Des Moines, Lee, Scott, Jackson, Clinton and Muscatine counties have approved the floating casinos.

Courts

An Iowa City man was charged with second-degree theft Monday after he was allegedly involved in an accident with a car that was reported stolen by its rightful owner, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Eric F. Tomaszewski, 19, 806 E. College St., Apt. 2, was arrested and taken to the Johnson County Jail on $2,500 bail, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for October 11, according to court records.

A 55-year-old custodian sentenced to concurrent terms of two years and 30 days Friday filed an application to revoke his probation from a previous sexual assault charge Monday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Marion E. Jones, 4C Towncrest Trailer Court, was charged in November with assault to commit sexual abuse without injury, according to court records.

Jones received a suspended sentence of 240 days on those charges and two years' probation, according to court records.

In Brief

• The former second-ranking official of the Iowa Department for the Blind has been charged with stealing $12,000 from the agency.

Terry Pepper, 40, of West Des Moines has been charged with first-degree theft. He is accused of taking a check made out to the department and depositing it in his own bank account, according to court documents filed Monday.

Pepper had been the department's senior program administrator, but resigned last week when it became apparent that charges would be filed, said R. Creig Slayton, the director of the department.

Pepper had been with the agency about eight years. Eugene Meyer, assistant director of the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation, said the investigation into Pepper's handling of state money is continuing. Robert Kromminga, Pepper's attorney, said his client intends to cooperate fully with the investigation. Pepper was released on a $10,000 bond. His next court appearance is October 25.

• Herbert Buchsbaum, a former UI College of Medicine professor, died Monday. He was chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at the Medical College of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Wis.

Buchsbaum, an internationally recognized gynecologist, joined the UI College of Medicine in 1970 and rose to the rank of full professor. He became the chairman of the Medical College of Wisconsin in 1988.

Bush vows to fight IRA deductions

Battle may prolong spending impasse

WASHINGTON (AP)— President George H. W. Bush vowed Tuesday to continue his fight for a lower capital gains tax even if it prolongs a spending impasse with Congress and triggers across-the-board program cuts.

He also said he would continue to oppose an "unacceptable" Democratic alternative for a liberalized Individual Retirement Account deduction.

"A president has to use the tools at his disposal to accomplish the ends for which he was elected. And I plan to do exactly that," Bush said.

House Democratic leaders have coupled their plan to expand IRA deductions with a tax increase on wealthy Americans and a more modest reduction in the capital gains taxes than Bush wants.

The House is expected to vote on the issue later this week.

"I think we ought to stand up to the understandable political rhetoric on the other side; rhetoric that we heard all last year and that we're now hearing once again," Bush said at an Oval Office meeting with a group of business people whose support for the lower capital gains tax was evident.

Bush was asked by a reporter if he would be willing to see extensive automatic spending cuts if there is no agreement in the capital gains battle.

"I don't want that, but I'm not ruling it out," Bush said.

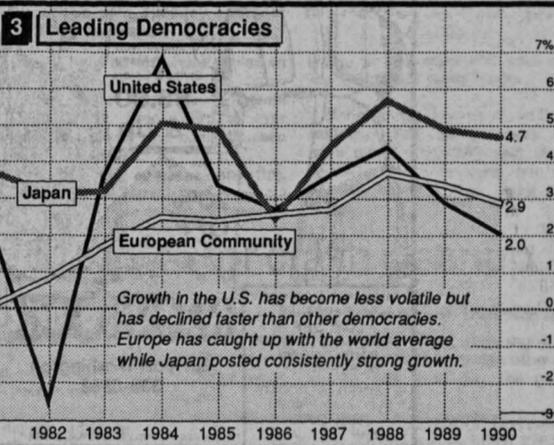

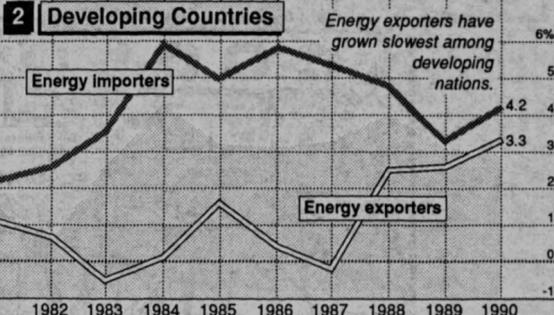

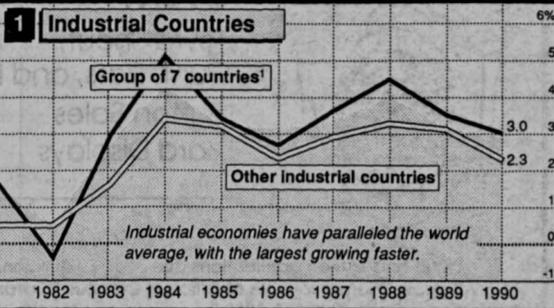

The administration and some congressional leaders have suggested the fight over the capital gains tax appears to have dimmed chances of reaching a bipartisan spending agreement for the fiscal year that begins October 1.

Congress' failure to enact legislation getting the federal deficit to under a $110 billion target will trigger across-the-board cuts October 16 in both domestic and defense programs.

"If (Congress) would go forward and do what we've suggested, we could avoid sequestration (automatic cuts)," Bush said. "But I'm not ruling it out."

A Soft Landing for the World Economy

Growth of the world economy (the grey background in each panel) is gently slowing down to an estimated 2.9% in 1990, according to new IMF projections. Economic policymakers hope that such a "soft landing" can avoid severe inflation without triggering a recession (below-zero growth). Some kinds of countries have fared better than others in the last decade.

World Bank vows to protect nature

Actions follow heavy protest, criticism

Martin Crutsinger
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON—The head of the World Bank, responding to longstanding criticism, pledged Tuesday that his agency would make protection of the earth's resources a top priority in the '90s.

"In the coming decade, it will be impossible to improve the quality of life in developing and industrial countries alike unless we do much more to conserve our global environment," World Bank President Barber Conable said in his opening address to the annual meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Over the years, environmental groups have attacked both international lending organizations for ignoring the environmental threats posed by the loans they made to the Third World for such projects as hydroelectric dams, roads and other development projects.

Last year's annual meeting in West Berlin was disrupted on the opening day by thousands of environmental protesters.

Conable told the delegates from 152 nations that his agency is striving to improve in this area by building environmental impact assessments into its loan review process and by boosting its monetary support to address such key environmental threats as depletion of tropical rain forests, ocean pollution and global warming from the excessive use of fossil fuels.

In addition to global pollution, the finance officials were reviewing such issues as the Third World debt crisis, the political upheaval in Eastern Europe and the efforts needed to keep huge trade imbalances from derailing the global economic expansion.

The U.S. delegation, led by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, continued to push forward with its debt-reduction initiative, which seeks to trim poor countries' debt burden by using IMF and World Bank resources to spur debt forgiveness on the part of commercial banks.

The administration got good news Tuesday, when Venezuelan planning minister Miguel Rodriguez Fandeo indicated that his country was backing away from its demand that commercial banks provide the nation with a 50-percent debt reduction, a demand the banks had dismissed as completely unreasonable.

While the negotiations are continuing, Rodriguez said a group of 15 was considering adopting to restructure the country's crippled economy.

President George Bush's speech to the finance ministers Wednesday will touch on the need for the West to provide financial support for the historic reforms underway in the Communist bloc, according to presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Other countries have also made international aid to Poland and Hungary top priorities with many officials saying the IMF and the World Bank need to focus expanded resources during the next decade toward the goal of integrating the Communist world into the global economy.

In his opening speech, IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus called this development "complex and historically unprecedented" and said many of the Communist nations needed to better address the high rates of inflation.

Fitzwater said that the administration was "sympathetic to the need for more funds" being sought by the World Bank and the IMF to meet its growing responsibilities but that "we haven't made judgments yet about the amounts of aid."

Finance officials from the world's seven richest countries continued their efforts Tuesday to push the dollar lower on foreign currency markets as a way of addressing America's huge trade deficit.

Currency traders reported that major central banks intervened numerous times during the day to sell dollars as the banks continued to back up a joint statement by the Group of Seven nations on Saturday that a further rise in the dollar's value represented a threat to the world economy.

The efforts managed to drive the dollar lower in trading in Tokyo and London but the dollar rose slightly against the yen in New York, to 142.35, still down significantly from the 146-yen level of just last Friday.

President George Bush's speech to the finance ministers Wednesday will touch on the need for the West to provide financial support for the historic reforms underway in the Communist bloc, according to presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

banks has indicated it would provide Venezuela with a short-term loan of $600 million to allow the country to catch up on late interest payments.

The remarkable political changes under way in Eastern Europe were also under review at the annual meetings. Polish Finance Minister Leszek Balcerowicz held discussions this week with Brady to outline the proposals his new government, the first in Eastern Europe to be led by non-Communists,

Legislature may restrict Iowa's minimum wage

DES MOINES (AP) — The debate over Iowa's new minimum wage is about to shift gears as a legislative committee looks at who will get the higher pay.

On January 1, Iowa's minimum wage becomes $3.85 an hour, 50 cents higher than the national minimum wage.

Critics and backers of the higher wage differ in their evaluation of what it will mean to working Iowans. But both sides say it will not be changed.

"I think that there's a false sense of hope for a lot of people who saw this and assumed that there was going to be a dramatic increase, because there just isn't," said David Brasher of the National Federation of Independent Businesses.

"There will be a lot of people in Iowa who will be making more money than they are now," said Rep. Gary Sherzan (Des Moines-D) who wrote the minimum wage legislation.

The Administrative Rules Review Committee next month will review 30 pages of guidelines spelling out who is eligible for the higher wage.

Officials say there are significant exceptions.

"The minimum wage is not applicable to every Iowan," said committee staffer Joe Royce.

The regulations list exemptions for the smallest of businesses and professional workers. They require waitresses to count their tips as part of their income. Babysitters and others providing in-home care can forget about the new minimum wage, under the regulations.

The rules also exempt "other domestic service occupations."

Benefits such as housing have to be counted as income when determining wages. Farms that pay workers for fewer than the equivalent of 500 days of labor a year and small newspapers also are exempt from paying the minimum wage.

"There will be a little bit of an impact in some paychecks," said Brasher. "There aren't that many of those kinds of jobs. That doesn't exactly rejuvenate the local economy."

Sherzan and Brasher said the wage will have little effect in economically healthy urban areas of the state, where many businesses must bid for workers. Many fast-food restaurants, which usually have minimum wage jobs, are paying more than $4 an hour, Brasher said.

"In some places like Des Moines and Cedar Rapids the idea of a $3.65 or $3.85 job is like an antique out of the past," he said.

"Quite frankly, they can't hire anybody for $3.35 an hour right now anyway," Sherzan said.

Under the minimum wage law, Iowa's basic wage will grow to $4.65 an hour by 1992. It was passed when all sides assumed the U.S. Congress would approve a similar federal wage.

That didn't happen. President George Bush vetoed the federal minimum wage.

Gov. Terry Branstad has said he'll ask the Legislature to roll back Iowa's wage to whatever Congress approves.

Brasher's group backs that, but he does not expect it to happen.

Sherzan, who heads the House Labor Committee and is running for majority leader, agreed.

"I have no intentions of supporting anything that lowers the minimum wage we passed last year," said Sherzan.

Track still operates at a loss, though honestly

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's only horse racing track lost $5.3 million in the first six months of operation but "we found no evidence of any wrongdoing," said an independent audit released Tuesday.

The audit answers financial questions raised about the Prairie Meadows horse track near Altoona. And the continued loss of money has track manager Carole Baumgarten saying racing alone is not going to support the track.

"Everybody has to get a different expectation for this place," said Baumgarten. "It's not going to break even in a year."

"I do think that it's time for everything to be put behind us and move on, and the audit does that, and surely it shows us there wasn't any fraud, and I think that's what people were looking for and were concerned about."

Officials of Deloitte, Haskins and Sells presented an audit to the Polk County Board of Supervisors showing the track lost $5,336,266 in the first six months of the year. Of that total, $4,817,849 was operating loss and the rest was debt servicing.

Eugene Jorger of the auditing company was asked by supervisors if the audit uncovered any fraud.

"Obviously in the course of doing an audit, you are aware of that. You're looking for it in the process of the items you investigate, and we found no evidence of any wrongdoing or any fraudulent acts or we would have brought them to your attention," he said.

Baumgarten, questioned after the meeting, said the track is in better shape financially, with daily losses now at $9,000. At the peak of the track's financial troubles, it was losing $43,000 a day, she said.

"They are looking a lot brighter than they were, things are looking brighter than they were two months ago," she said.

Baumgarten said officials will spend October planning for next year. She said all bets are off on what the track will do about a racing season or other uses for the track.

"Make no assumptions about next year," she said. Although she noted, "we probably won't race thoroughbreds after Labor Day next year."

Baumgarten said the track is not capable of breaking even on racing and efforts will be made to find other uses.

Track finances are a major issue in Polk County because supervisors voted to guarantee $40 million in bonds used to build it. That means taxpayers will be stuck with the tab if it fails.

"We have to come up with other usages of the building or the grounds," she said.

"We can trim back and we can save money and we can find other ways to use our facility," she said. "Horse racing alone, obviously, is not going to support this facility."

"Utilizing the facility is the key," she said.

She said the figures in the audit were expected.

Deases pleads innocent to charges of cocaine delivery

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) — Eustaquio Deases, boyfriend of Jennifer Gardner and brother of her alleged murderer, has entered a written plea of innocent to drug charges and his attorney filed a motion to suppress evidence against him.

Deases, 22, is charged with delivery of three-quarters of an ounce of cocaine to a confidential informant, according to court records. Deases allegedly sold $1,350 worth of cocaine to the informant February 15.

Defense attorney Alfredo Parrish on Monday filed a motion to suppress notebook paper with telephone credit card numbers, and paper with names, fractional amounts and dollar figures on it, as evidence.

Parrish said in his written motion that Louis deBaca and Michael Houchins, both of the Story County Attorney's office, performed a warrantless search of Deases' apartment. DeBaca and Houchins searched the apartment while investigating the May death of Gardner.

Deases, whose trial has been set for November 14, is being held in the Franklin County Jail, in Ottawa, Kan., on a separate drug charge.

Edward Deases, 21, is being held in Story County Jail. Ruben Deases, 17, is being held in the State Training School for Boys, in Eldora, Iowa. Both are charged with first-degree murder.

5-alarm fire rages out of control

10-foot flames engulf wooden grain elevator

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A five-alarm fire Tuesday destroyed a building once used to store grain, threatened an adjacent grain elevator and sent flames 100 feet into the air.

Two firefighters were taken to a hospital, treated for minor injuries related to heat and exhaustion and released, said Robert Warsocki, an assistant Omaha fire chief.

The fire was reported about 10:30 a.m. at an elevator owned by the Good Seed and Grain Company in Hamburg, Iowa.

The blaze was contained but not under control by mid-afternoon, Warsocki said. The cause was still under investigation, he said.

The wooden building, once a grain elevator, was destroyed and there were cracks in the concrete elevator adjacent to the destroyed building, said Mike Dineen, another assistant fire chief.

Authorities waited for a structural engineer to examine the elevator before going closer or into it. Dineen said the firefighters did not know if there is fire in the concrete grain elevator or smoldering grain in it.

They continued to pour water on the standing elevator and the rubble of the old elevator, which continued to smoulder.

The fire's heat was so intense at one point that it broke the glass windshield and melted the turn-signal light on an aerial ladder on an firetruck.

The flames could be seen from miles away. Smoke drifted over part of the city and could be seen six miles away.

During the height of the fire, people lined streets and viaducts surrounding the structure, clogging traffic in the industrial area surrounded by railroads tracks.

Robert Zuck, Good Seed and Grain manager, said the company had been using a concrete part of the elevator to store corn but the wooden elevator was being torn down.

United charged $121,646 for crash cleanup

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa National Guard and state agencies have billed United Airlines $121,646 for helping in the aftermath of the crash of a DC-10 jumbo jet.

The July 19 crash of Flight 232 at Sioux Gateway Airport killed 112 people, and 184 people survived the fiery, tumbling crash.

Brig. Gen. Harold Thompson, deputy adjutant general of the Iowa Guard, said the airline was billed $95,396 for guard personnel, fuel, supplies, meals, communications, housing, maintenance and cleanup and painting of a hangar where autopsies were performed.

United has paid $32,579 of the bill, Thompson said.

He said 309 guard members helped on the day of the crash, and that number dropped each day after the accident until July 31, the final day the guard helped.

Ellen Gordon, director of the Iowa Division of Disaster Services, said United will be billed $26,250 for help by state agencies.

"A lot of that is overtime. We aren't charging regular time costs," she said.

Rally

Panel members will include Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, and Minnette Doderer, Iowa State Representative (D-Iowa City).
Jackie Fordice, director of the anti-abortion group Defenders for Life, said her organization will continue a picketing program throughout the week. They also plan to submit to the city council a proclamation defining a future anti-abortion week. "There has been a big response from pro-life people who want to see this done," she said.

The Pentecost rally also generated a strong response from the preachers who regularly speak to students.
Scott Cone, one of the preachers, reacted to the Reproductive Rights Week proclamation by saying, "I think everyone has the right to reproduce — when they're married."
But Kim Painter, rally organizer and coalition member, said she was optimistic about the event. "I think we had a wonderful turnout," Painter said. "It's very exciting."

of its chemical weapons, before an international treaty banning use of the weapons is signed, if the Soviet Union will reduce its arms to a similar level. That would mean greater cuts by the Soviet Union, which has a larger stockpile.
Bush said in the first eight years of a chemical weapons treaty, the United States would be ready to destroy 98 percent of its arsenal if the Soviet Union joins the ban. The United States would destroy all chemical weapons within 10 years once every nation capable of building the weapons signs the treaty, he said.

- Renounce the use of "those barbaric weapons" under any circumstances.
- Institute rigorous verification of the cessation of production.

Shevardnadze praised the U.S.-Soviet dialogue and said progress had been made in recent talks.

"These talks have demonstrated the increasing awareness by both sides of the need to cooperate for the benefit of mankind and the growing confidence that such cooperation is possible."

Agreement to hold a summit meeting next year, he said, "shows that we have moved quite far ahead in solving a number of major bilateral and international problems."

But he said extraordinary efforts at the highest level will be needed to conclude an agreement on a 50 percent reduction in strategic offensive arms. "Our partners have accommodated us on mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles, he said. "Positions on other outstanding problems have become closer to each other.

"In our view, by the time the summit is held next year in late spring or early summer, we may have passed the last turn on the road toward a treaty reducing strategic offensive arms."

In a speech that praised the right of a people to choose its government and course of development, Shevardnadze also wished "every success" to Poland's new government, the first East bloc government not led by Communists. He pledged to cooperate with it.

He also praised Bush's Open Skies proposal, which would allow both nations to fly surveillance missions over the other's territory.

"We like it . . . The Soviet Union calls for opening up the lands, the waters and outer space. Let us have Open Lands, Open Seas and Open Space. Only then shall we attain absolute transparency and the necessary level of confidence."

Shevardnadze said: "The Soviet Union is ready, together with the United States, to go further and assume mutual obligations prior to the conclusion of a multilateral convention."

The Soviet Union offered to:
• Cease production of chemical weapons, as it says it already has done, including more sophisticated binary weapons.

Philippines

As Quayle arrived, hundreds of leftists burned his effigy and an American flag while chanting "Bases out! Quayle go home!"

Quayle arrived in Manila about 7:30 p.m. from Japan for a visit expected to focus on the future of the bases, which operate under a lease that expires in September 1991.

Acting Foreign Secretary Manuel Yan said Quayle was bringing a letter from President George Bush believed to include a proposal to begin talks on extending the lease.

Two hours before Quayle's arrival, about 150 members of the League of Filipino Students and the Youth for Nationalism and Democracy reached the airport terminal and began a noisy demonstration against the visit.

Protesters shouted "Quayle go home, bases out!" and "Yankees go home!" They carried banners reading "Quayle visit — a curse."

After negotiations with police, the group agreed to pull back about a half mile away along the main road into Manila. Police estimated the crowd grew to nearly 1,000 by the time Quayle arrived.

Earlier, nine policemen were injured and nine students were arrested when security forces broke up a rally at Manila's Adamson University, officials said.

Also Tuesday, suspected rebels killed Capt. Carlos Daileg, a staff officer of the Presidential Security Group, in an ambush in the city's Pandacan district. He was the fourth member of the presidential guard slain in the past four months.

That killing occurred about one mile southeast of where the president will hold talks with Quayle on Wednesday.

Police and troops have been on alert in the capital following a series of bombings in Manila that have killed two people and injured 16 since September 16.

Aquino has offered new talks on the U.S. bases but refuses to say whether she will support an extension. Any new agreement must be ratified by two-thirds of the 23-member Philippine Senate, where opposition to the bases is strong.

About 40,000 U.S. troops, military dependents and civilian employees are stationed at the bases, among the largest U.S. military facilities overseas.

In October, U.S. and Filipino negotiators agreed to allow the bases to remain until 1991 in return for $431 million a year in U.S. aid. American officials say they are not prepared to pay substantially more to keep the bases, despite Philippine demands for up to $2 billion a year.

Quayle is to visit Clark and Subic on Wednesday. On Thursday, Quayle travels to Corregidor island, where U.S. and Filipino troops battled Japanese invaders during World War II. He then will go to Malaysia.

Pierce

Each time Pierce refused to answer.

"The subcommittee's desire to rush me through this process, together with various statements made by members . . . leads me to the painful conclusion that I have been prejudged by this body," Pierce said.

"Under these circumstances, my counsel has advised me and I have agreed to assert my constitutional rights under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments by refusing to answer questions before this subcommittee," he said. "I trust this subcommittee will remember that these rights are intended as shields for the innocent and that they do not create any inference or presumption of wrongdoing."

Paul Perito, his attorney, said he hoped Pierce would be ready to testify on October 27, the next date he has been ordered before the employment and housing subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee.

But Perito, outside the committee room, told reporters the subcommittee wouldn't give Pierce a fair hearing and wanted to "rush him to judgment."

"They want to try, convict, and sentence him, and we will not let that occur," Perito said. "This man is an innocent man . . . This man wants very much to tell his story."

Perito and Lantos engaged in a brief but heated exchange after the lawyer attempted to challenge the presence of three lawmakers who are not members of the subcommittee.

Lantos said that under House rules Pierce's attorneys had no right to speak but only to advise their client.

"In this hearing, you are in fact a potted plant," Lantos told Perito — a remark that recalled the 1987 Iran-Contra hearings when Oliver North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan, told a different investigating committee, "I am not a potted plant," something to be ignored.

Pierce himself cited public comments about a need for a special prosecutor, as well as comments by panel members alleging inconsistencies in his voluntary testimony last May, as evidence he had been prejudged.

A Republican on the subcommittee, Rep. Christopher Shays of Connecticut, said before the hearing that if Pierce refused to testify he would support calling for the Justice Department to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate the former secretary.

Aid

Salvation Army representatives are feeding, distributing supplies and providing shelter for hurricane victims. Counseling and cleanup efforts are also being organized.

A team of New York doctors and nurses arrived in St. Thomas this week and joined a relief crew that has been working there since the crisis began. The relief workers plan to remain in the Caribbean until Oct. 1, 1989.

any time and is periodically reviewed by the Senate, he said.

Rojas-Cardona said because personnel matters are considered confidential, he has not made any public disclosures and is trying to handle the allegations appropriately.

"You know how people like to sue people, how people like to sue student government and UI officials all of the sudden?" Rojas-Cardona said. "We just want to make sure that no one attempts to sue the UI Student Senate, or even each individual senator or, more importantly, myself."

Senator Larry Willis questioned what role Jones has asked Senate to play in assessing Prescott's job performance.

Rojas-Cardona said Jones has not recommended pursuing a specific course of action, but the Senate plans to begin a review of SLS operations.

Senate Executive Associate Lori Meyers said the Senate has not attempted to fill positions on the joint CAC-Senate committee that is mandated by the United Iowa Student Association constitution to supervise SLS.

"The joint committee will be worked on and hopefully within the next week or two," Meyers said.

Also, the Senate debated paying $647.49 in telephone charges accrued on a Union of International Students line.

Big spenders

One would think the state Board of Regents would be exasperated with the latest building request from the UI, especially in light of the construction delays, cost overruns and the proposed $5 million bailout associated with the UI Laser Center.

Such problems usually have a tendency to make state legislatures hesitant to provide funds for future capital projects. But a quick glance of recent headlines suggests otherwise in this case.

Last Thursday, the Regents considered a proposal to build a $40 million "state-of-the-art" bio-medical research building for the UI College of Medicine, with construction commencing in 1992. Instead of deep-sixing the proposal right off, the Regents advanced it on their capital priority list from 21st to 11th.

This project makes little sense.

The Regents are ignoring the immense cost incurred as a result of the stopped construction at the Laser Center, a "sink hole" for Iowans' tax dollars. Unaccountably, when it comes to additional proposals from the UI, they still appear to be in a spending mood.

UI officials have been aggressive in their requests for new building funds in recent years, and all signals from the Regents indicate they need not worry too much about past construction foulups.

But if the Regents encourage white-elephants like the Laser Center by funding new projects now, the UI can surely expect more disasters of cost-overruns and bad management.

Until the Laser Center dilemma is sorted out, the Regents should not consider any new major building projects at the UI.

Cartel buyout

President George Bush has set the goal of cutting the drug trade, especially cocaine, by 10 percent this year and by 50 percent within 10 years.

A possible solution: Buy cocaine from the Peruvians and Bolivians who are growing it.

Sound strange? According to Newsweek, estimates of the drug trade range from $15 billion to $50 billion. But even assuming the worst case scenario, $5 billion spent at the source cuts 10 percent out of the drug trade and still leaves $3 billion in Bush's proposed budget for treating addiction.

This weakens the muscle of trafficking cartels in Colombia, impedes the supply to American dealers, raises the price of drugs on the street to discourage would-be purchasers, and allows farmers in Peru and Bolivia to make a living, which they can't do growing coffee.

And the United States doesn't have to foot the bill all by itself. As the buyout process grows, other nations that suffer from the scourge of drugs could contribute to a full-leveraged buyout of the illegal drug industry. The cost to the participating nations wouldn't be nearly as much as a genuine drug war — especially in lives.

The purchased cocaine could then be used for pharmaceuticals, or it could simply be destroyed.

The situation may seem backwards — Americans paying taxes to give to farmers for growing crops that we don't want consumed. It's a temporary solution to a problem of mass addiction and urban poverty and hopelessness.

But it's not much different in principle from what goes on in the heavily-subsidized tobacco industry.

This year, Antarctica is the subject of a controversy involving the United States, the Soviet Union, Australia, France and 29 other countries. After six years working with other nations toward an agreement to permit the regulated exploitation of Antarctica's oil and mineral resources, France and Australia — at the request of Jacques Cousteau — are pulling out, leaving the other nations without a consensus.

The two countries now contend exploitation must be completely banned. But the United States and New Zealand, among other countries, believe drilling and mining are inevitable and should be regulated. If exploitation isn't controlled, these nations argue, it will "exist in a legal vacuum in which no restraints of any kind are imposed on even the most environmentally hazardous exploitation."

Impassioned rhetoric aside, the U.S. government obviously is looking to get its finger in the Antarctica-development pie. And they are not alone.

Some poor nations, such as Malaysia, say that whatever mineral riches Antarctica may possess should be shared equally among all nations. They accuse the United States of "neo-colonialism" by trying to restrict mineral exploitation throughout the continent. It sounds like they're right.

New evidence shows that mining for minerals and oil in Antarctica may serve no purpose but disturbing the ecology of the continent. The presence of oil and minerals is speculative, geologists say, and any deposits would be layers beneath three miles of ice in most places.

There is no reason Antarctica shouldn't be declared a wilderness preserve, protected by all the world's nations.

Dirty pictures, public property

To begin with, I want to thank Senator Jesse Helms for trying to protect me from my thoroughly corruptible and prurient self. I have no doubt that Sen. Helms, and those beside him in government who want the photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe yanked from the walls and tossed into the dustbin, truly believe they have my best interest at heart — that they think I, an average taxpayer, have been schooled by a pornographer.

I thank him for caring, and I forgive him for caring too much, and now I would ask him to kindly keep quiet.

I'm being so nice not just because I love sincerity in all its forms, but also because I deeply believe that Helms-the-Man can be as offended by the photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe as he wants to be. Personally, I am offended by a lot of things, including anything painted on velvet and the music of rock groups with unlauters in their names. Everyone is entitled to his own aesthetic, his sense of how the world should be decorated.

But decorating the world isn't the business of government. And when the Congress last summer, led by Helms-the-Senator, vented its collective, thoroughly priggish disgust at the NEA-funded photos of Robert Mapplethorpe, they crossed a line as dicey and ill-defined as the line between church and state.

I don't have to see Mapplethorpe's photos to know that they are, well, dirty pictures. Really dirty pictures.

But ugliness has never precluded art; if you want to see something filthy, go look at Picasso's "Guernica." A better question to ask of Mapplethorpe's really dirty photos is: Are they art? Certainly they sprang from a full-fledged attempt at art; certainly they are what we might call gestures of art. But I don't have the slightest idea what they are beyond that, and neither does Sen. Helms; for that matter, neither does the NEA nor the Corcoran gallery, whose proprietors have actually seen the darn things.

Justin Cronin

A friend of mine once said, "I don't know anything about art, but I know what I like. And I like art."

What he meant, apart from pointing out the idiocy of the average art cliché, was that art is a mystery, and one he approves of. Art does something nothing else can. If there were no such thing as art, we'd have to invent it. But putting your finger on what exactly art accomplishes, or what constitutes an official work of art — well, you might just as well try to buy your shadow a cocktail.

That's precisely why the National Endowment for the Arts doesn't exactly endow art. It endows artists. It takes chances on the reputations of serious women and men like Mapplethorpe, writes them checks and then goes back to its paperwork, which is exactly as it should be. To foster a creative society, government must foster individual creativity, one of those ineffable forces-for-good that rest foursquare on the principle of individual liberty.

And the NEA helps out plenty. In fiscal 1989, it doled out $150.65 million for projects all over the spectrum of art, some of them pretty loony and thoroughly forgettable, some of them genuine expressions of genius, the rest of them just everyday cultural fuel.

Two things are worth noting here. One, the fact that the NEA does as much as it does — even after nine years of Republican hostility to the show. But a certain amount of damage has already been done.

All censorship is the freedom, but censorship, as frightening as it is, as ugly as it is, and as angry as it makes us, tends to draw attention to the work. Mapplethorpe was certainly a major photographer, but how many people pay attention to those things until someone tells them they can't? The Corcoran's initial decision to pull the exhibit was cowardly, but it also guaranteed that the show would eventually be seen by an audience ten times as large. Just last year we learned that the surest way to make a thoroughly obscure — some would say boring — book a bestseller is to declare its author a heretic and sentence him to death. Book burning does nothing if not create a demand for more books.

But if we redirect the NEA's function from endowing artists to merely commissioning acceptable works of art, artists will inevitably censor themselves. You can't silence good work, but you can pull the purse strings and prevent good work from being done. And that's work that will never be seen.

So, Sen. Helms, be as disgusted as you want. Rant and rave and brush your teeth and take a shower and do all those things people do when they are in the throes of a great, convulsive "icky-poo."

But don't tell me I can't look at pictures I've paid for, don't tell me you know what's best for me, and don't tell artists what they can and cannot do to participate in the endowed creative life of the nation. Don't you dare.

Sen. Helms has cast himself yet again as the nation's leading prude and the enunciator of simplistic truths such as: "Gross!"

arts — means the federal government still holds the purse strings on our natural culture. And two, the fact that all the money comes from tax revenues means the NEA is everybody's business, not just Sen. Helms, who has cast himself yet again as the nation's leading prude and the enunciator of simplistic truths such as: "Gross!"

Indignity is a cheap emotion, and the only thing as vague as our definition of art is our definition of obscenity. Meaning: I, for one, am old enough to see those dirty photos I paid for.

Happily, New York's Corcoran Gallery has reversed its previous reversal (that's how silly things have gotten) and this week, apologized for pulling the Mapplethorpe

Women are misled by cholesterol myth

Good news, ladies. The American medical establishment was not thinking about us during the last 40 years of research on heart disease.

As Elisabeth Rosenthal reported in "Different But Deadly," a study of women and heart disease that appeared this month in the New York Times Sunday Magazine, "Almost all of the classic cardiology studies included only men as research subjects... Only the Framingham Study enrolled nearly equal numbers of men and women."

And what did the Framingham study show? "Men were much more likely to develop heart disease than women, especially before age 55. Premenopausal women were practically immune; only 11 of 1,600 such women developed coronary heart disease." That's what Thomas J. Moore reports in "The Cholesterol Myth," the cover article in the September issue of the Atlantic Monthly.

In Moore's new book, "Heart Failure," he reinterprets the data that gave rise to the current recommendations of the National Cholesterol Education Program. His controversial thesis, which pertains to both men and women, is summed up by the Atlantic: "Lowering your cholesterol is next to impossible with diet, and often dangerous with drugs — and it won't make you live any longer."

The problem seems to be that somebody mistook a correlation for a cause. What's the difference? Here's an example. In "Different But Deadly," Rosenthal writes: "... I found myself cross-referencing 'women' and 'heart disease' in a computer journal-search system to see what was known about the two. My efforts turned up a single, unsatisfying result: a paper on the finding that a man's risk of cardiac arrest rises with his wife's level of education."

How much public support could be drummed up for limiting college education for women in the interest of protecting men from heart attacks? It depends on whether you could come up with a causal link between the two statistically correlated items. Something that explains how you get from A to B.

How about stress? Guy comes home, carries on about whatever, expects wholehearted agreement from his wife. But wait. She's a college graduate. "Honey," she says, "you're not seeing this clearly. It makes sense if you look at it this other way." In other words, you're wrong. What's worse, she's right. Guy has a heart attack.

Now we're talking cause and effect.

But what is the cause? College education? No. The cause lies somewhere in the murky area of that little story.

The little story that's causing big problems today is the story that reducing cholesterol in your diet reduces blood serum cholesterol; and that lowering blood cholesterol lowers the risk of heart disease.

Someone would be more likely to believe this if there were something in it for them. The last weeks have made it clearer who stands to gain. Moore looks at the profitability of the cholesterol-reducing program to individual physicians, and to drug companies.

reduction in the risk of heart disease, and not the 10- to 20-percent reduction claimed by the Quaker ads. The Des Moines Register reported: "... that reduction applied only to women if they ate 25 percent more oatmeal than what Quaker recommends as a regular serving."

Does that mean that women must work even harder than men to lower their cholesterol? Maybe not. Maybe higher levels of cholesterol are normal for women — healthy, even. Rosenthal attests that "blood cholesterol content in women is probably not as strongly linked to heart disease as it is in men, except at extremely high levels. The Framingham study... that a woman with a cholesterol count of 295 is still less than half as likely to have a heart attack as a man with a cholesterol count of 204."

What if the researchers started with the notion that women are doing something right? Then, instead of trying — perhaps in vain — to lower an alleged risk factor, we could concentrate on strengthening whatever it is that protects women to heart-healthiness.

Greek party spokesman killed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The spokesman of the leading political party was shot and killed Tuesday, and a Marxist guerrilla group claimed responsibility.

The killing of Pavlos Bakoyannis took place hours before Parliament was scheduled to debate the biggest bank scandal in the nation's history. The guerrilla group, called November 17, has accused Bakoyannis of playing a role in the scandal.

Police said Bakoyannis was shot at least five times in the chest and stomach with a 45-caliber pistol from close range in the hallway of his downtown office.

The 54-year-old former journalist and magazine publisher was rushed to the Evangelismos hospital, where he died on the operating table, police said.

Bakoyannis was elected to the 300-member unicameral Parliament in June. He was the spokesman for the conservative New Democracy party headed by his father-in-law, Constantine Mitsotakis.

November 17 claimed responsibility in a 1½-page proclamation scattered near the scene of the shooting.

The group first surfaced with the assassination of Athens CIA station chief Richard Welch in 1975. It also claimed responsibility for the killing in June 1988 of U.S. defense attaché William Nordeen.

The group takes its name from the day in 1973 when students at the Athens Polytechnic Institute rose against the military dictatorship that ruled from 1967 until it collapsed in 1974.

It accused Bakoyannis, 54, of connections to a banker linked to a scandal that contributed to the defeat in June elections of the Socialist administration of former Premier Andreas Papandreu.

After Papandreu's defeat, the New Democracy party forged a governing alliance with the Communist-led Coalition of the Left and Progress. The coalition is led by Prime Minister Tzannis Tzannetakis, a deputy in Mitsotakis' party.

Witnesses told police that two men had apparently been waiting for Bakoyannis as he entered the building where his political office is located.

One witness said he heard many shots. Another told police that after the gunshots, two men casually walked out of the building to a waiting car about 50 yards away and drove off.

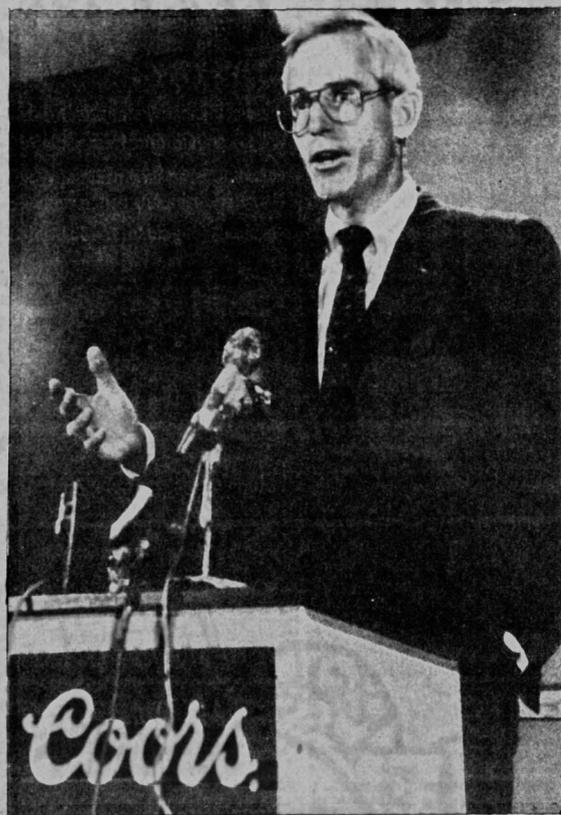

Police said later that the getaway car was found abandoned about a mile from the scene of the shooting.

Mitsotakis rushed to the hospital along with his wife, Marika, minutes after he learned his son-in-law had been shot. He was joined later by his daughter, Dora, Bakoyannis' wife.

Bush hopes summit will improve schools

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush said Tuesday he hopes his two-day education summit with the nation's governors this week will produce ways to "dramatically change things" in America's troubled schools.

"We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how can we be more accountable," Bush told reporters after hearing business leaders complain about the problems that poorly educated students cause in the workplace.

Bush will travel by helicopter to Charlottesville, Va., on Wednesday afternoon for an education summit with the governors on the University of Virginia campus.

It will be only the third such presidential convocation of governors in history, and the first since President Franklin D. Roosevelt summoned governors more than half a century ago for their advice on coping with the Great Depression.

Even before the governors gathered at Thomas Jefferson's

"academical village," educators and politicians were expressing hope that the summit would give new impetus to a school reform movement that has shown signs of floundering.

White House officials and leaders

"We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how can we be more accountable" — President George Bush of the National Governors' Association have said the meeting's top priority will be to lay the groundwork for the first set of national performance goals for the schools.

Bush, who promised in last year's election campaign to become "the education president," said, "I think we're going to come together with the governors on major objectives for this country in terms of education, something that's never been done before."

He said he has his ideas for changes but was keeping them private. "I'm going down there to listen and work with the governors, not try to impose an agenda from here," he said.

"I want to see us come up with that I think we can make a real contribution."

John Akers, chairman of International Business Machines Corp., who led a Business Roundtable delegation of corporate executives who met with Bush, scoffed at the notion that America's $353 billion education system suffers from a lack of money.

"There's twice as much money per student than is available in Japan and the Japanese are beating our brains out," Akers said.

"It's not a money problem," he said. "It's a management and an execution problem."

The Business Roundtable executives, including the chairmen of Xerox, Du Pont, Bell South, K Mart, Procter & Gamble, Alcoa and Union Carbide, pledged that they and other leaders of the 200 major companies would get personally involved with school improvement efforts in their home states.

"We're not getting (enough) educated people to fill the jobs... of importance to American industry," some suggestions that will dramatically change things," Bush said. "I was just reminded by a group of business leaders that, on a per capita basis, we spent far more than Germany, far more than Japan, and yet we're not achieving the way they are."

"We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how can we be more accountable," he said. "It's in those areas of goals, national goals, but coming up through the governors,

Iowa's Horton signs deal with Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. (AP)—Former Iowa basketball player Ed Horton, a rookie forward who was the Washington Bullets' last unsigned player, has agreed to a two-year contract and will report to the team's training camp on Monday.

"I want to concentrate on basketball, not negotiations."
 — Ed Horton

"I want to concentrate on basketball, not negotiations," said Horton, a second-round draft pick.

The contract, which was signed Monday, reportedly will pay Horton nearly $200,000 during the 1989-90 season.

Horton, who averaged 18.3 points and 10.6 rebounds his senior year with the Hawkeyes, had considered playing in Europe this season. "I considered Europe, but my desire has always been to play against the best in the National Basketball Association."

"I'm happy with my contract, and I like what I saw of the Bullets organization in June," Horton said.

Ironman of '39 passes away in Wisconsin

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for Jens Norgaard, who played on the University of Iowa's 1939 "Ironmen" football team and was a decorated pilot in World War II.

Norgaard, 72, died Sunday in Burlington, Wis., after a short illness. He played end for the Ironmen team, so named because Coach Eddie Anderson used most of his players on both offense and defense, which was unusual at that time.

The 1939 Hawkeyes finished 6-1-1 and achieved fame by beating Notre Dame 7-6. They were led by Nile Kinnick, who won the Heisman Trophy that year.

Norgaard became a lieutenant colonel in the Army Air Corps during World War II and won France's Croix de Guerre medal for bravery, the highest honor that nation gives to a foreign soldier.

He flew the lead bomber over the beaches of Normandy during the D-Day invasion on June 6, 1944.

NFL reinstates 11 players after drug ban

NEW YORK (AP)—The NFL on Tuesday reinstated 11 players who were suspended during the preseason after testing positive for steroid use and suspended Phoenix linebacker Freddie Joe Nunn for 30 days for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

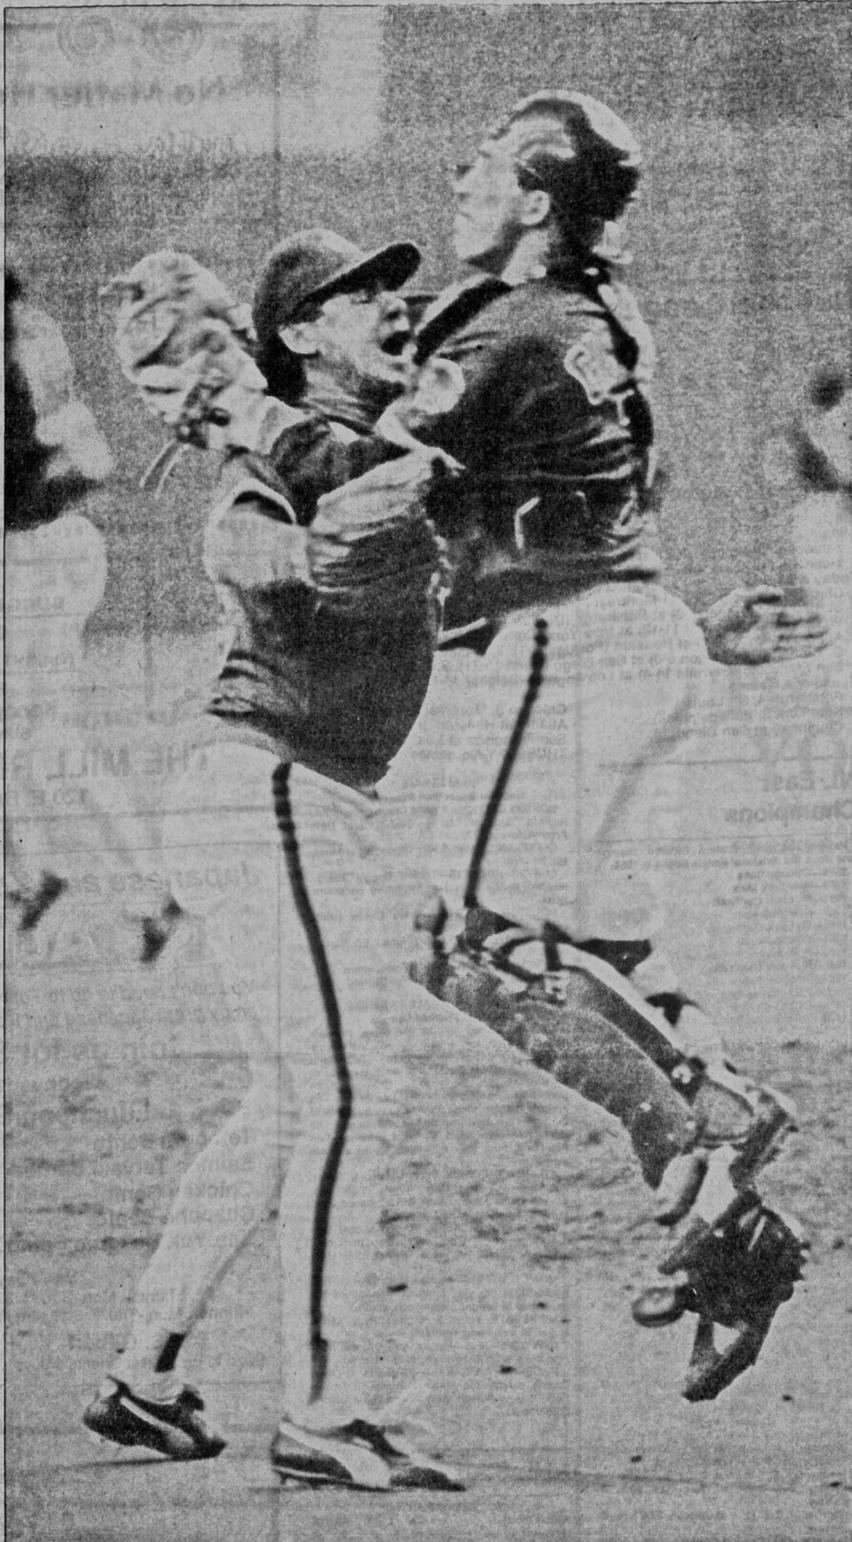

The 11 players reinstated were: Sean Docter, Tom Docter and Matt Jaworski of Buffalo; Maurice Douglas of Chicago; Keith Uecker of Green Bay; Mark Mraz of the Los Angeles Raiders; Vince Amoia and Bobby Riley of the New York Jets; Ron Solt of Philadelphia and Keith Henderson and Rollin Putzier of San Francisco.

A decision was pending on another Green Bay player, Mike Arie, who was the last player to be tested.

The Jets waived both Amoia and Riley following their reinstatement.

Cubs clinch NL East title

Chicago beats Expos for 2nd title of decade

Chicago Cubs pitcher Mitch Williams, left, and catcher Joe Girardi celebrate Tuesday in Montreal as the Cubs beat the Expos 3-2, clinching the title in the National League East. The St. Louis Cardinals lost earlier Tuesday, leaving the fate to the Cubs. Chicago last captured the division in 1984.

MONTREAL (AP)—The Chicago Cubs clinched their second National League East championship in six seasons, beating Montreal 3-2 Tuesday night with an unearned run in the eighth inning after second-place St. Louis already lost.

The Cubs took advantage of the Cardinals' 4-1 defeat in Pittsburgh and became the first team to guarantee a spot in the playoffs.

Ryne Sandberg's dash home in the eighth made Don Zimmer a champion for the first time in 11 years of managing, and also made meaningless a season-ending, three-game series in St. Louis.

Chicago will open the playoffs Wednesday night at Wrigley Field, all but certainly against San Francisco. The Cubs and Giants split 12 games this year.

After Mike Fitzgerald made the final out of the game, the Cubs darted out of the dugout and met in celebration at the mound.

Sandberg, the only everyday starter remaining from the Cubs' last title team in 1984, scored the go-ahead run with the kind of aggressive play that transformed Chicago from an 77-85 club last year into winners.

Sandberg singled with two outs and was running when Dwight

Smith followed with a single to right field. When Hubie Brooks bobbled the ball for a split second Sandberg kept going and beat second baseman Tom Foley's relay to the plate.

Zimmer, Chicago's eighth manager in the 1980s, was among the first to greet Sandberg as the Cubs spilled on to the field. Smith, who had never played in the big leagues before this season — think about all the years Ernie Banks and Billy Williams played for the Cubs and never won anything — also did a little celebration dance on the bases.

Greg Maddux, 19-12, allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and Mitch Williams got two outs for his 36th save. Maddux is second in the league in victories, one behind Houston's Mike Scott.

From cellar to celebration, Cubbies pull off huge upset

CHICAGO (AP)—Few gave the Chicago Cubs even an outside chance to win the National League East this season: not manager Don Zimmer, not general manager Jim Frey, not even the most optimistic of players.

Expected to finish fifth by most and last by some, the Cubs pulled off one of the bigger upsets in baseball history with their second divisional title in five years.

"The greatest year in my life," said Zimmer, who has never managed a championship team before although he came close in 1978 when the Boston Red Sox lost in a one-game playoff to the New York Yankees.

"This is special," he said. "In 1978, you knew the Red Sox would be a contender. But with this team this year, nobody gave us a chance and a lot of people said we'd be last."

"In spring training I knew we had a better team than we had last year," said Zimmer, whose club finished fourth a year ago, 24 games behind the champion New York Mets. "Sure, we were shooting for .500, which would have been acceptable. Especially after going 9-23 in spring games."

Since 1977, the only Cubs team to finish .500 or better was the 1984 group that won the divisional title when Frey was the manager. That team lost to San Diego in the playoffs.

"Absolutely, I would have settled for .500," said Frey, whose only major winter trade was a multi-player deal in which he sent Rafael Palmeiro to Texas for reliever Mitch Williams.

Williams, nicknamed "The Wild Thing," provided the excitement that was to prevail throughout the season with his first appearance on opening day. He gave up three singles to load the bases in the ninth inning and then struck out the side to preserve a 5-4 victory over Philadelphia.

That was the beginning of an unforgettable season that climaxed with winning the divisional title.

After a so-so April, the Cubs were hit by a series of injuries. In a span of five days, outfielders Andre Dawson, rookie Jerome Walton and Mitch Webster went on the disabled list.

Zimmer had to revamp. He brought up Lloyd McClendon, Doug Dascenzo and Dwight Smith to fill the outfield. Dascenzo did the job defensively and McClendon and Smith hit so well that the Cubs moved into first-place by the end of May.

"Everybody has injuries. We over-

Stewart gallops back into starting lineup

Michael Trilk
 The Daily Iowan

What a difference a week makes. A more relaxed and confident Hayden Fry said on Tuesday that Tony Stewart had regained his starting running back position at the Iowa football coach's weekly press conference.

Last week Fry was more on edge after Iowa's 44-6 opening loss to Oregon. But after Saturday's 31-21 win over Iowa State, Fry was much more enthusiastic about his football team.

"The thing I go by is how much we improve," Fry said. "I don't know of anybody in the country that has played a better second half than (Iowa's at Iowa State). We are real pleased from a progress standpoint, knowing that certainly we have a long way to go in every phase of the game. But we made a tremendous amount of progress in every phase of the game last week."

"The greatest experience this football team could've had was being down at halftime (against Iowa State), knowing that all but about 4,000 fans were for the other school, and the other team was playing emotional football.

"We came out and beat them 17 to zip in the second half. That was a rewarding experience and it will help us down the road."

The Iowa State game also helped get Stewart back on his feet. Stewart was injured in last year's Ohio State game, missed spring practice entirely and was used sparingly against Oregon.

Saturday, Stewart finished with 99 yards rushing although being used in a reserve role. As a result, he will start when Iowa entertains Tulsa in Kinnick Stadium at 1:05 p.m. Saturday.

"I was just elated with his performance," Fry said. "I think Tony's for real. He's back. I know Tony thinks he's back. The stability of the leg keeps getting better each week. He had real good production against Iowa State."

The only other notable change in the Iowa lineup will be at defensive end. Freshman Larry Blue will start in place of his roommate Moses Santos. Santos suffered a foot injury and will not play against Tulsa.

Blue replaced Santos midway through the Iowa State game and finished with seven tackles. Two of those were quarterback sacks. He also recovered two fumbles — one for a touchdown.

"For a freshman he had a phenomenal game," Fry said. "He played a real consistent defensive game. Larry's a big strong guy. It kind of amazes us because he is not supposed to be that good, being a true freshman."

Senior linebacker Brad Quast will get his second start of the season against Tulsa.

One year later: Canada remembers fall of hero

TORONTO (AP)—A year ago, hundreds of journalists waited impatiently for the world's fastest human to arrive for his post-race news conference at the Olympic Games.

Ben Johnson had just lowered his world record of 9.83 seconds to 9.79 in winning the 100-meter gold medal. And he had beaten his bitter rival, Carl Lewis, the defending Olympic champion — just like he had done a year earlier in setting the world record at the World Championships in Rome.

Olympic Stadium came alive. Hundreds of Canadians in the stands yelled and screamed and cried. It was Canada's first gold medal of the Games.

"I did not expect to go this fast," Johnson said. "It was nice."

Lewis, who finished a distant second in 9.92, suggested Johnson was on steroids. He was accused of sour grapes.

Then Johnson was late for his date with the media. Officials explained, he apparently was having trouble producing a urine sample for drug testing.

In a small room in the stadium, Johnson drank 10 beers and waited almost two hours for his uncooperative, dehydrated system to provide the urine sample.

When Johnson finally met with the media, he said, "The gold medal is the most important thing. Anybody can break my world record, but the gold medal is mine."

It wasn't his for long. Less than 36 hours later, there was trouble.

Carol Anne Letheren, head of the Canadian team, received a letter from the International Olympic Committee saying that Johnson had tested positive for the banned steroid stanozolol.

She and other Canadian officials met with a stunned Johnson and coach Charlie Francis at the Seoul Hilton. Johnson and Francis denied any wrongdoing.

Later that day, a second test of Johnson's urine was performed. The result again was positive. Meetings were held between Canadian and IOC officials, with the Canadians suggesting Johnson was the victim of sabotage.

But the IOC rejected the argument, pointing out the test results indicated a pattern of long-term steroid use. Early on Sept. 27, at another meeting in the hotel, Johnson's gold medal was taken back — the medal he had dedicated to "my Mom and all the people of Canada."

At a news conference a few hours later, Letheren said Johnson was in a state of shock. "He was not comprehending the information we were giving him," she said.

As Letheren spoke, Johnson was already on his way home. He and his entourage checked out of their hotel in the middle of the night, leaving behind a messy room of forgotten luggage, flowers and congratulatory messages.

A's clinch tie

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics clinched a tie for their second straight American League West title, beating the Texas Rangers 4-3 Tuesday night on Dave Henderson's two-run homer in the eighth inning.

Oakland leads the American League West by five games with five games remaining. The best either Kansas City or California can do is tie if the Athletics lose their remaining games. The Royals played the Angels later Tuesday night.

Padres stay alive in West

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres avoided elimination from the National League West race Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Padres, however, had an eye on the scoreboard after the game as a San Francisco victory at Los Angeles would knock San Diego out of contention.

But the Dodgers beat the Giants 2-1 keeping San Diego's hopes alive.

Toronto, Baltimore both lose

DETROIT (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays failed to hold a two-run ninth-inning lead Tuesday night, losing to the Detroit Tigers 4-3. But they maintained their one-game lead in the American League East as Baltimore lost to Milwaukee.

Gary Pettis tied the game with a two-run single off Tom Henke, 4-10, and Alan Trammell followed with a game-winning single that ended Toronto's nine-game winning streak against Detroit.

The Orioles, beaten by the Brewers 7-3, finish the season this weekend with a three-game series at Toronto.

With one out in the ninth and Toronto leading 3-1, Scott Lusader reached on pitcher Duane Ward's fielding error. Ward, who relieved in the eighth, walked Matt Nokes and hit Doug Strange with a pitch, loading the bases.

Henke relieved and Pettis singled up the middle for his third hit of the game, tying the score 3-3. Two pitches later, Trammell lined a hit to center, scoring the winning run. It was Henke's fourth blown save in 22 opportunities but his first blown save since May 2.

Mike Henneman, 11-4, pitched two innings of two-hit relief as Detroit stopped a six-game losing streak.

Toronto had taken a 2-0 lead in the third. Lloyd Moseby walked and Mookie Wilson reached on Strange's fielding error, the 19th for the third baseman in 60 games this year. One out later, Kelly Gruber singled in two runs.

Pat Borders' RBI single in the sixth made it 3-0 but Kenny Williams tripled in a run in the seventh for Detroit, ending the Tigers' 20-inning scoreless streak.

Toronto starter Mike Flanagan only one hit in six shutout innings. Detroit's Frank Tanana gave up six hits in seven innings and struck out seven. He is winless in seven starts since Aug. 16, when he shut out Baltimore.

ISU signs cage recruit

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Mark Chappell, who plays at the same Illinois junior college that produced former Iowa basketball star Kevin Gamble, has decided to sign with Iowa State.

Chappell, a 6-foot-3 guard at Lincoln Junior College in Lincoln, Ill., made up his mind after visiting the Iowa State campus last weekend, his coach said. He also visited Drake and canceled a visit to Evansville.

"Mark is a great player," Lincoln coach Steve Yount said. "He's going to break all of Kevin Gamble's school scoring records this year."

Gamble, who played two years at Iowa, is now with the Boston Celtics.

Chappell averaged 21 points and six rebounds a game last season in helping Lincoln to a 28-5 record and a No. 12 national ranking. He shot 59 percent from the field and made 58.5 percent of his 3-point attempts.

Chappell's commitment is the second that Iowa State coach Johnny Orr has received for the November signing period. Skip McCoy, a 5-11 guard from Hammond, Ind., said last month he would sign with Iowa State. The Cyclones have one scholarship remaining for 1990-91.

Cubs

It was the second time this season Maddux and Sandberg had teamed up to win a big game. On Aug. 7, the Cubs took sole possession of first place for good when they beat co-leader Montreal behind Sandberg's home run and Maddux's seven-hitter.

Dennis Martinez, 16-7, took the loss.

The Cubs, who have not been in the World Series since 1945 and not won it since 1908, earned another chance to get there by winning for the fifth time in six games. All of their playoff games are sold out as 27 million telephone calls were received the first day 84,000 tickets went on sale.

At the exact moment the Cardinals lost, there was no cheering in the Cubs' dugout because they were in trouble, too.

The Expos, shut out on three hits for five innings, tied it with two runs in the sixth. Rookie Marquis Grissom, Andres Galarraga and Hubie Brooks opened with singles for the first run and, with the Cardinals' final posted, Nelson Santovonia's one-out sacrifice fly with the bases loaded made it 2-2.

The Cubs scored in the second on a walk and Rick Wrona's two-out triple and added a run in the sixth on Sandberg's double off the left-field fence and Smith's bloop single. Mark Grace singled Smith to third, but Martinez escaped when Andre Dawson grounded into an inning-ending double play.

A crowd of 11,615, bolstered by three tour groups from Chicago, sat quiet for most of the night. Even with the retractable dome covering Olympic Stadium, the temperature inside was only in the upper 50s.

Before the game, the Expos announced that Manager Buck Rodgers would return next year. There had been speculation he would be dismissed after a disappointing season that began with high hopes and ended with elimination last weekend.

The Expos were in first place from June 26 to Aug. 6, but fell out when Maddux and the Cubs beat them 5-2 on Aug. 7.

came ours," Zimmer said. So much so, that when Walton and Dawson returned to the lineup, Zimmer had to keep McClendon and Smith and platooned them in left field.

But late in August, catcher Damon Berryhill was lost for the season and that appeared to be the beginning of the end for the Cubs. Who could replace the switch-hitting Berryhill, who Zimmer called one of the best catchers in the league? Rick Wrona and Joe Girardi, a pair of rookies, that's who.

"They're young but they're good, I can go with them," Zimmer said.

Zimmer, who had the Cubs squeezing in runs and making the most of hit-and-run plays all season, used the two deftly.

Against teams like the St. Louis Cardinals with their exceptional speed, Zimmer played Girardi because of his throwing ability. Wrona, a better hitter, was used against teams not apt to steal bases.

Berryhill's loss did not bring about an expected collapse.

"At the start of this season, everybody picked the Mets, and rightfully so," Zimmer said. "Then when the Mets had trouble, everybody said the Expos would win it. When they had trouble, everybody said, 'Here come the Cardinals.'"

The Cardinals did come on and the series in the second weekend of September proved pivotal for the Cubs, who at the time held a 1½-game lead over St. Louis.

The Cubs took a 7-1 lead in the series opener only to have the Cardinals rally for a 11-8 loss.

The following day, the Cardinals were poised to take over first place when they held a 2-1 lead with two out in the eighth.

"We lose that one, who knows?" Frey said. "We could have gone right down the tubes."

trade with San Diego, came to the rescue. Salazar singled to score the tying run in the eighth and doubled in the winning run in the 10th.

"The biggest win of the season, by far," Zimmer said.

The Cubs beat the Cardinals again Sunday and then swept Montreal to move five games ahead, prompting Expos manager Buck Rodgers to say, "I guess we're all playing for second place."

How did it all come about? When the Cubs went to spring training they were sure of only one outfielder, Dawson in right. Zimmer gave Smith a full shot at left field, but he failed at the time. Center was the big question mark with Walton, who made the jump from Double-A.

"He's got the job even if he hits .250," Zimmer said. Walton hit .300 most of the year and had a team-record 30-game hitting streak to become the main candidate for rookie honors.

But don't look for any Cy Young or MVP candidates. These Cubs have none. Ryne Sandberg had a good, solid year and hit more than 30 home runs, but it was nothing like 1984 when he was the National League MVP.

Dawson struggled all year at a .240 pace with little explosion from the bat that produced 49 home runs and 137 RBIs in 1987, when he was MVP.

"It's been a total team effort," Dawson said. "It's difficult to explain. I've had a down year, but so any good things have happened. For most championship teams, there are one or two guys who carry the load. Not here. You can't name the player who has been most valuable. You'd have to pick anywhere from six to nine guys. Give Zim a lot of credit."

Rice will leave Sox after 15-year term

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice hit more homers than Joe DiMaggio, drove in more runs than Johnny Bench and had more hits than Mickey Mantle. Never a spotlight seeker and sometimes surly, he always let his numbers speak for him.

Now, they tell the final, sad chapter of his life with the Boston Red Sox.

Memories of his brilliant rookie year with Boston in 1975, his American League Most Valuable Player Award in 1978 and his three home run crowns faded as his career with the club began going downhill in 1987. Fans who once cheered his powerful line drives began jeering his meek double play grounders.

Now those fans have only five days left to boo him in a Boston uniform, although elbow problems likely will keep him on the bench until the end of the Red Sox' season Sunday.

Rice, 36, plans to try and hook up with another team next year after the Red Sox, his team for all 15 of his major league seasons, told him Monday they would not exercise an option to renew his contract. He is batting .234 with three homers and 28 RBIs in 209 at-bats and his career average has dropped to .298 from .300 at the start of the season.

"After he's gone, I certainly think they (fans) will look at his career in a positive way," Jerry Remy, Rice's former teammate, said Tuesday. "I would hope they would because they're not going to see many better."

With a baleful glare forming a moat around his spot in the Red Sox locker room, Rice never was a media darling. He talked to some writers but didn't go out of his way to curry their favor even though they influenced public opinion and might have to decide whether to vote for him for baseball's Hall of Fame.

"I know when I do well," Rice said Monday after learning of the imminent end to his days with the Red Sox. "I know when I mess up. So does everybody else. Why do I have to talk about it?"

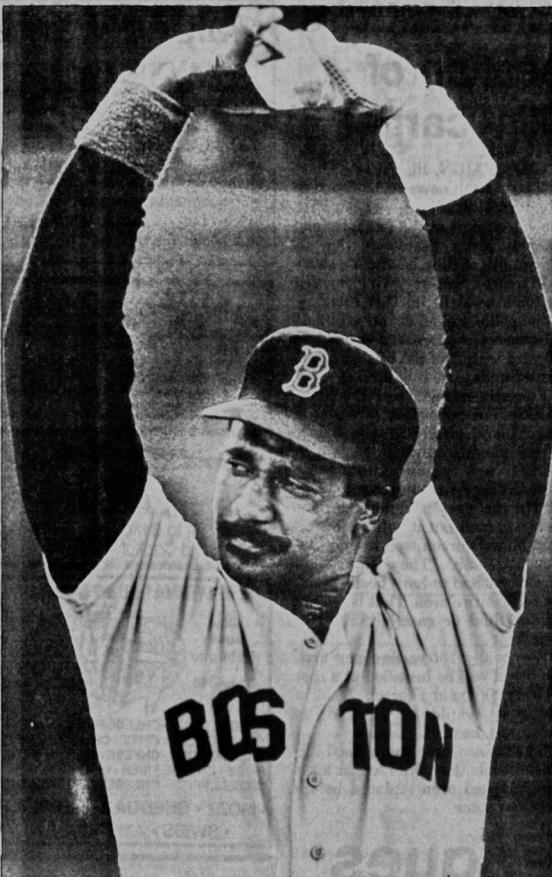

That's the Jim Rice who John Moore remembers from their home town of Anderson, S.C.

From the seventh through the 11th grades, Rice played for Coach Moore on the Westside High School baseball team, a school that was segregated at the time.

"He has this thing; let the works that I do speak for me," Moore said. "A lot of people want to get publicity by shooting their mouth off."

"Jim Rice was a Southern boy. During those formative years, if you're not given a chance to be vocal and say things you believe, you don't talk a lot."

"That's the way it was for most black people down here. You're not going to ask questions because people don't want to talk to you anyway."

Long-time Boston Red Sox player Jim Rice stretches during spring training in Winter Haven, Fla. Sox management told Rice Monday that they would not exercise an option to renew his contract.

Tigers give Anderson three-year contract

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers ended speculation that Manager Sparky Anderson might retire by extending his contract for three years on Tuesday.

Anderson, who became only the third manager in franchise history to have 100 or more defeats, will be with the club through 1992.

"I don't want to walk away from here now," Anderson said. "A lot of people thought I would retire. My wife would like it if I did, but I won't leave until the Tigers are straightened out.

"And if I don't straighten them out, then I'll retire."

Anderson was sent home by the team physician from May 19 until June 5 suffering what was described as exhaustion.

Returned, Anderson said "he had been taking the Tigers mounting losses home with him and was unable to sleep. His health appears to be fine now."

Sox' Boggs belts way out of slump

BOSTON (AP) — A week ago in Toronto, Wade Boggs was "really down," gripped in a rare 1-for-20 slump.

The Boston Red Sox' hitting star counted himself out of the race for a fifth American League batting championship.

Hitting only .322, he said he would concentrate instead on getting 200 hits.

"My back was against the wall," Boggs said of the slump which had him with 188 hits and 11 games left.

So, Boggs did what's become natural for him in eight years with the Red Sox. He went on a batting binge.

In five games, he went 13-for-25, becoming the first player in this century to reach the 200-hit mark seven years in a row.

By going 4-for-5, including his 50th double of the season, against the New York Yankees Monday night, Boggs also set a major league record with 200 hits and 100 walks in four consecutive seasons. He broke out of a tie with Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig, who did it from 1930-32.

And, while pushing his average to .331, Boggs got back into the race for a fifth-consecutive batting title and sixth in seven years. Minnesota's Kirby Puckett, the league leader, sat out a game Monday with a .342 average. Oakland's Carney Lansford is next at .336.

Boggs said he considered the 200-hit, 100-walk season "quite an accomplishment" because of the distraction after details of his steamy affair with Margo Adams were published during spring training.

"I didn't want to fold up my tent and have a bad year and blame it on what happened," Boggs said.

Cable T.V. captures Olympic games

NEW YORK (AP) — The Olympics will go on cable television for the first time under a $50 million deal between CBS Inc. and Turner Broadcasting Systems Inc., that covers the 1992 and 1994 Winter Games.

Under Tuesday's deal, Turner Network Television will air approximately 50 hours of programming for each Olympics.

CBS, which paid $243 million for the 1992 Games at Albertville, France, and $300 million for the 1994 Games at Lillehammer, Norway, plans on airing about 120 hours of each Olympics.

"There's a lot of programming at the Winter Olympics that doesn't get on because of the limited amount of time," CBS Sports president Neal H. Pilson said.

"We think it will help promote the prime-time programming. We don't think the dilution factor will be one of concern. We think there will be an audience for TNT programming."

TNT, begun last year, will broadcast from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. EST on weekdays, much of it live, and from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. on weekends (tape).

"Hey, kids! Let's put on a show!" Michael Le Poer Trench/Bob Marshak

'Les Miz' deserves its hype

Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

In the face of the hype, merchandising and obscenely large amounts of cash going into Cameron Mackintosh's pockets, it's easy to lose sight of one simple fact about "Les Misérables": If it weren't a tremendous theatrical experience to begin with, none of this would have happened. Sure it's populist entertainment, sure it's nicely and cleanly packaged to appeal to a wide, non-theatergoing audience, and sure it's a wee bit hypocritical to make so much money off a story about the poor and dispossessed. And no, "Les Misérables" isn't going to dramatically reroute anyone's feelings about life, art and the theater. But for 3½ hours it will entertain and uplift just about anyone of any age, disposition and artistic/intellectual ilk.

"Les Misérables" charges off the stage like a rock show, clean gray sets cloaked in smoke and lights, the massive rotating stage keeping the convoluted story continually moving both physically and narratively. There is no escaping the show's theatricality; Hugo's novel was built on coincidences, parallels and tragic ironies, and when wrapped up neatly for mainstream audiences even the story's subtleties become blaring.

What's it all about? Oh, there's a healthy wallop of historical social criticism, a touch of religious socialism and a cleverly hidden call for a modern class revolution. (Comies! In the West End? On Broadway? Never!)

It's not only "Les Misérables" sets, costumes and lighting that hit you full face; Claude-Michel Schönberg's score pushes the usual musical theater fare forward with a driving rock beat. Much of the show's musical appeal lies in the variety of the songs, which, with Herbert Kretzmer's English lyrics, range from the gaggingly insipid ("Castle on a Cloud," "Little People") to the sublime ("Stars," "One Day More," "Who Am I?").

In the middle of all this an actor caught napping will be swallowed up. It's easy to be swept away by the epic grandeur, and the show's pace and scope leave little room for subtle character nuances; most of the character definition is built into the songs, sets, costumes and wigs.

Still, there are some wonderful characters here, no matter how they're created. At the center is, of course, Jean Valjean, a pillar of righteousness in the face of constant persecution and injustice. But while Valjean provides the show's honor and heart, it's his tormentor, Inspector Javert, who provides the most interesting characterization — driven by ramrod devotion to his duty, Javert is never so much evil as lost in his misguided obsession (Both Valjean and Javert blindly put their faith in God to guide them).

The show's comic relief comes from the Thenardiers, who, much more than Javert, provide the show with its representation of simple, ever-present malevolence — "Clear away the barricades and we're still here," note the Thenardiers after the idealistic students have launched and lost their revolution. The icky love stuff provides some of "Les Misérables'" most beautiful music, but also its silliest subplot. Valjean's adopted daughter Cosette (yes, she's the little waif peering out from all those sweatshirts) grows up into a fine plot prop. The woman does absolutely nothing in the show except serve as the object of student Marius' affections (and even then he's usually mooning over her in her absence — she's barely on stage more than 20 minutes).

Much more engaging is the tragic Eponine, the un-requited corner of the young lovers' triangle. Not only does Eponine get not one, but two of the show's best songs, but she also represents the true soul of the show — an innocent crushed by emotional and political forces much bigger than herself. There is a moment, immediately following her show-stopping "On My Own," when Eponine walks to the center of the stage as the massive barricades converge on her from the wings. It's a sublimely theatrical moment; "Les Misérables" is at its best when everything — music, characterization, sets — comes together.

In the end, that's what's made "Les Misérables" the superlative, hyperbole-begging event it's become. All of this is rolled up and presented as one big SHOW — Hugo's themes speaking the characters, the characters sing the songs, the songs present the themes while further defining the characters, and the sets and effects pound it all home.

'Misérable' conversation, food and music

In celebration of the Iowa debut of "Les Misérables," the UI will host a symposium, "Les Misérables" — Words and Images of Victor Hugo, from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. today, in the Terrace Room of the Union.

The symposium will present a lively discussion of the genius of Victor Hugo — his literary art, his visual art, and the importance of his work during the post-French Revolutionary period. Admission to the symposium is free, but people who plan to attend should make reservations by calling the UI Arts Outreach office at 335-2694.

Speaking at the symposium will be Kathryn Grossman, professor of French at Pennsylvania State University; Dorothy Johnson, assistant professor of art history at the UI; and Alan Spitzer, professor of history at the UI.

A dinner featuring French cuisine will be served in the State Room of the Union immediately following the symposium and prior to the 8 p.m. performance of "Les Misérables" in Hancher Auditorium. Please make dinner reservations by calling 335-1507.

Billy Joel sues former manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Billy Joel is suing his former manager for $90 million, alleging that he stole millions of dollars and lost millions more in risky investments such as horsebreeding.

The suit was filed Monday, the day after Joel was hospitalized with severe abdominal pain from kidney stones, the New York Post reported today.

The pain struck Joel as he waited Sunday afternoon at John F. Kennedy International Airport for a Concorde supersonic flight to London, said Joel's lawyer, Leonard Marks. The trip was part of a tour of Europe to promote his new album, "Storm Front."

Marks would not disclose the name of the hospital. "He's in this country, and he's OK — that's all I can tell you," he said.

The lawsuit was filed in state court against Frank Weber, who was fired August 30, after an audit uncovered the alleged thefts, Marks said. Weber also was Joel's former brother-in-law.

The lawsuit charges that Weber used Joel's money in the form of interest-free loans; misused his power of attorney by signing the singer's name to documents without his consent; and invested Joel's money in high-risk ventures despite the singer's express instructions to invest conservatively.

Court documents said the horsebreeding venture in which Weber invested without his consent, Thoroughbred Breeding Associates, is a partnership with Weber as general partner.

There was no answer at Weber's lawyer's office when The Associated Press called Monday.

Week One: The Home Altar Miracle Prayer Rug

Gregory Galloway
The Daily Iowan

Rev. Ewing wants my ass, metaphorically speaking. He's been vying for my soul, bribing me like some ecclesiastical Monty Hall, tempting me with kitchens, cars and cash. Rev. Ewing has been sending me letters from his Home Bible Study and Prayer headquarters in Tulsa, Okla., almost every week, because God sent the Rev. a message that I needed spiritual help (if he only knew). Each letter describes a world of wealth awaiting me, in this life and the next, if I would only send him a "spiritual seed," i.e., $20.

It all started calmly enough, with the Rev. sending me a crucifix with "faith," "grace" and "Rev. Ewing" engraved on it — my key to God's bargain basement. The Rev. had also enclosed the "Home Altar Miracle Prayer Rug," through which Jesus would visit my home at 6 1/2 S. Dubuque St.

Rev. Ewing's letter then related a parable about a man and wife who handed the Rev. $20, a "real sacrifice," then immediately walked to a car dealership where they told the salesman that they were going to be missionaries in Mexico, and the dealer wept and gave them a "new red station wagon absolutely FREE OF CHARGE!"

I've never been too impressed with cars or car stories, but Rev. Ewing was determined and kept reciting case after case of similar events, and everyone seemed to get a new car; the Rev. seemed to be running his operation better than "The Price is Right."

Rev. Ewing also wanted to know if anything

"unusual" had happened "last Tuesday at around 1 p.m.," trying to display some sort of empathetic psychic ability, and the kind of verbally precise vagueness I've always admired in the clergy, but what Rev. Ewing failed to realize was that I live in Iowa City, where nothing unusual ever happens.

Rev. Ewing still hadn't explained how to use the incredible "Home Altar Miracle Prayer Rug." All I had to do, it seemed, was stare deep into the eyes of the picture of Jesus on the magic placemat (an artist's rendering that looked more like Eric Roberts in "Rude Awakening" than most images of the Messiah I'm used to). I stared and stared at the eyes, and either through some divine intervention or some cheap printing illusion the eyes opened. Did this mean that the Savior was now in my home? Or did it mean that the Rev. thought I was sap enough to ignore the fact that whenever I tilted the Eric Roberts visage the eyes would blink?

Rev. Ewing then implored me to send the "Miracle Home Altar Prayer Rug" back to him: "Do not keep it. I need it back. I've got to mail it to someone else." Send it back, he asked, along with $20, and all my problems would be solved. "The greater the sacrifice, the greater the blessings." I've never been known to tempt fate, but I've also never been known to make sacrifices, especially when it comes to money, so I kept the $20 and placed the rug over some sleeping knight of Jesus who couldn't quite make it home from some local tavern. I wonder what this fortunate soul thought when he awakened wrapped in some sorry Xerox excuse for the Shroud of Turin. "By your deeds," I kept thinking. "By your deeds..."

On the Scene

John E. Lyons
The Daily Iowan

This should be an amazing month for live music in Iowa City. The big bands (the ones you definitely should not miss) are:

- Grisly Fiction, Tuesday, October 3 at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. Also playing will be Horny Genius and All Out Desert.

- Totem Soul, Saturday, October 7 at Gabe's, will give their "Farewell to Iowa City performance." If you have a penchant for "Dead Rock," old tie-dyes and the '80s revival of hippiedom, you'll dig this show.

- The Movie Stars, an up and coming rock combo from San Francisco, will appear on Tuesday, October 10 at Gabe's. If the album is anything to judge the band by, the show will be well worth seeing.

- Sonic Disruption Theory, formerly Suburban Death Trip. The former Iowa Citizens, now hailing from San Francisco, will appear Saturday, October 24 at Gabe's, along with Iowa Beef Experience and Primus. The Beef are currently playing with the idea of releasing several 7-inch recordings in the near future. What exactly will happen is impossible to predict. Primus has a new live LP, titled "Suck on This," out on Prawn Song records.

- Also worth seeing will be Mudhoney, Friday, October 20. They will play alongside the explosive Nice Strong Arm and Bullet Lavolta. And Mojo Nixon & Skid Roper will appear October 29, for two shows at Gabe's. There's more, but I'll touch on that later... I don't know how I can afford all these shows as it is!

The Blue Tree Farm continues its pounding schedule of shows each weekend throughout October. Playing this Sunday will be House of Large Sizes, NoiseTrap and newcomers Trusty; the show will be well worth the travel time to reach the farm. (As before, they usually post maps on the Downtown Pedestrian Mall with the directions to the Blue Tree Farm). Otherwise, I'll list the shows as the information is available.

The Downsidiers played with local nutballs, the Blank Expressions, Tuesday night, but because of the fact that this column goes to press on Tuesday evening, I'm unable to review that show. The Downsidiers have several LPs out on Mammoth records, and Blank Expressions can definitely be depended on for a great show. I hope you got the chance to check them out.
