Pot shot: Rally attempts to clear air concerning marijuana use

Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

"Legalize it!" Those were the words of a pro-marijuana coalition that drew a crowd of over 300 people to the Pentacrest Monday afternoon. According to U.S. statistics, available in any encyclopedia, you can live a year longer if you smoke marijuana every day than if you used no drugs at all, said Jack Herer, a member of the Help Eliminate Marijuana Prohibition organization, from Van Nuys, Calif. "You'll live eight to 20 years longer than alcoholics and smokers, who don't go to jail," Herer added. He told the crowd that prior to the mid-1800s, almost all paper and cloth products were made of hemp, the plant from which marijuana is derived. "Hemp is the longest-lasting, strongest fiber on earth. All ship sails in the Western Hemisphere, all ropes were made from it. It's much better than cotton," Herer said. "There has been no fiber before or since that was better than hemp, yet it's illegal — you figure it out." As Herer spoke, about 10 to 12 crowd members lit up and began smoking a substance resembling marijuana. Others moved through the crowd carrying signs and placards with See Pot, Page 6

Regents' staff speaks against curricula cuts

Some 'duplication' may remain

The state Board of Regents' staff on Monday disagreed with several recommendations made by an auditing firm that was paid $1.2 million to look at programs at Iowa's three state-supported universities. Contrary to recommendations by the firm of Peat Marwick Main & Co., the board staff said the journalism and industrial engineering programs at Iowa State University should be kept. But the Regents' staff concurred with the Peat Marwick audit that the home economics and materials engineering programs at the UI be eliminated.

tive director, said the Regents' staff recommended to the Regents only the parts of the study it found necessary for a monetary savings. "If we hadn't recommended these parts of the study, it would have had to be adopted in total or would have had to be set on a shelf to gather dust," Richey said. He said the staff recommended the ISU journalism program be kept intact because it does not duplicate the UI program. "Because ISU has a focus on science and technology, we've decided the program doesn't duplicate any other state program when taken with another major," Richey said.

At the University of Northern Iowa, the staff recommended the undergraduate program in home economics be retained, contrary to what Peat Marwick proposed. The staff did go along partially with a recommendation to eliminate six doctoral programs at UNI. The state Board of Regents, which hired the auditing firm, will vote on the staff recommendations at its October 18 meeting in Ames. R. Wayne Richey, Regents' execu-

The October 18 vote will cap weeks of hearings since Peat Marwick's recommendations were presented to the board in June. UNI President Constantine Curris had been upset by the recommendation to eliminate the doctoral programs in education and the home economics program, particularly since UNI recently completed a $3 million remodeling of its home economics building. ISU President Gordon Eaton was incensed at Peat Marwick's recommendation to eliminate the jour-

Supreme Court session to cover privacy issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court accepted a case involving sobriety checkpoints Monday, opening a 1988-89 session likely to be dominated by privacy issues including abortion and the court's first "right to die" controversy.

- Agreed to decide in an Illinois case whether public employers may be forced to put aside partisanship when hiring.
Turned down the appeals of eight Mafia figures from New York City convicted in the 1979 assassinations of crime chieftain Carmine Galante and two of his associates.
Left intact Maryland's revocation of a $300,000-a-year tax break for a men-only golf club that has counted presidents and members of Congress among its members.
Refused to spare an evangelical Christian group in Lenox, Mass., from having to return $5.5 million donated by a wealthy ex-member.
Rejected Alaska's attempt to forestall offshore oil and gas exploration in Bristol Bay. The state had argued that an oil spill there could do more environmental harm than the massive Exxon Valdez spill last March.
Allowed states to criminally prosecute employers accused of neglecting the health and safety of their employees.

The case accepted by the court, which poses the question of whether police officers may use checkpoints to spot drunken drivers, presents the latest test of strength for the court's newly solidified conservative majority. Michigan courts struck down that state's sobriety checkpoint program as an unconstitutional invasion of privacy, but courts in other states have upheld virtually identical police tactics. In its usual start-of-term flurry, the court issued orders in more than 1,000 cases Monday — denying review to most and agreeing to study 22. They will be among 150 or so disputes to be decided by the end of the term in July. In other action, the court:

Mubarak predicts a 'golden opportunity' in Mideast peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak met with President George Bush Monday on Mideast peace efforts and said he saw a "golden opportunity" for a breakthrough between Israel and the Palestinians. Mubarak said failing to seize the opportunity "would be a grave mistake" and that he and Bush agreed "to work closely together in order to utilize the existing momentum." "The continuation of the status quo is hazardous to both" Israel and the Palestinians, the Egyptian leader told reporters after an Oval Office session lasting nearly an hour. However, even as Mubarak sought to promote his plan, which includes a demand that Israel agree in principal to giving up seized lands, aides to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said the Israeli leader does not intend to alter his own Palestinian peace initiative. Monday's White House session came amid new concern that settling Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union in the Israeli-occupied West Bank could threaten peace efforts.

Bush administration officials reacted coolly to an Israeli request for $400 million in housing-loan guarantees for about 100,000 Jewish emigres from the Soviet Union. Israeli officials have said some dwellings probably will be in the West Bank. "The United States policy is to oppose additional settlements in the occupied territories," Secretary of State James Baker said. And presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater declared, "Our policy is we don't allow U.S. aid to be used for resettlement in the West Bank." Still, Baker and Mubarak were both upbeat about peace prospects. "I think it's fair to say that we all hope that conditions exist for progress," said Baker.

SLS closes for 2-day-long reorganization

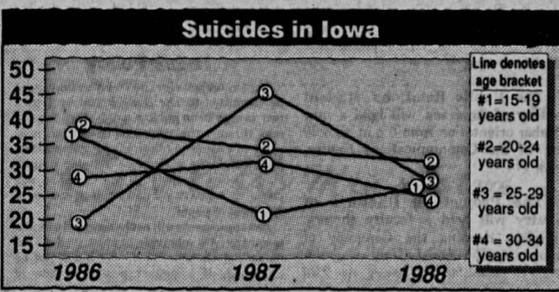

Deborah Gluba

When students walk up to the door of the UI Student Legal Services office today, they will be met with a bold sign reading "Closed for Administrative Reorganization, Open Oct. 4." While SLS is not completely closed, Friday's release of SLS Supervising Atty. James Prescott has shaken up the office. Two Iowa City attorneys, James Martinek and Charles Nadler, are stepping in to supervise the office until a replacement supervising attorney is found. "The office is still open until a longer-range plan can be formed," said Pepe Rojas-Cardona, UI Student Senate president. The Senate pays the supervising legal attorney salary through See Move, Page 6

Iowa suicide rate drops by 20% in '88 from '87 level

Brian Clark
The Daily Iowan

1988 brought a decline in the number of Iowa suicides — the biggest decrease following the record year 1987, when the state saw its highest suicide figures since the Great Depression. Three hundred seventeen Iowans ended their lives last year. That number dropped nearly 20 percent from 1987's figures, according to a recently released study from the State Department of Public Health. In 1987, 398 Iowans committed suicide — the highest number since the years of the Great Depression when, in 1932, 563 Iowans killed themselves.

Experts in the field of mental health could not attribute the significance of the statistics to any specific cause, but said that improving statewide economic conditions might be a factor in this year's decrease in suicides. A volunteer counselor for the Iowa City Crisis Center, who declined to be identified, said the receding effects of the farm crisis — in which countless Midwest farmers lost their property — could be related to the decline in the suicide rate. "With the farm crisis, there were quite a few suicides that happened as a result," the spokesperson said. "Before that, though, there was never enough education about suicide." See Suicide, Page 6

Proposal to cut CAC revealed

Jones plans 'comprehensive restructuring' for student gov't.

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Sweeping changes in both student government and UI Student Legal Services were among issues discussed at Monday's CAC meeting.

Friday afternoon, the UI Office of Student Services revealed a proposal to eliminate the UI Collegiate Associations Council.

Chris Anderson, CAC executive associate, said Phillip Jones, vice president for student services, informed him of a comprehensive plan to restructure student government from the current bicameral system to one elected organ. Jones further said the final plan would be completed by December 1 and activated sometime in the 1990 school year.

"He will implement his plan with or without our input," Anderson said.

Anderson urged the CAC councilors to formulate and articulate valid reasons to support the CAC and the existing bicameral system.

According to the draft report submitted to the UI Strategic Planning Committee, a system should be devised that is more conducive to the popular student election system.

CAC is a representative body of the 10 UI colleges. Members are selected from within the colleges. Pharmacy, medicine, education, law, liberal arts, engineering, nursing, business, dentistry and the UI Graduate College are programs represented through the individual collegiate associations.

According to the draft report, "The current system does not function with sound efficiency or effectiveness."

Leann Cabalka, UI Graduate Student Senate president, asked for more information about the allegations that the United Iowa Student Association structure is not consistent with student interests.

"It is impossible for us to come back with some strategies to combat them until we have some specifics from Dean Jones," Cabalka said.

Anderson said the call for reorganization will not go away as long as Jones is in office and urged CAC to work against the change.

In other business, CAC President Dan Shanes said the CAC advertised for commission members to fill the Student Legal Services supervisory commission but after conferring with the UI Student Senate president, opted to appoint five CAC members.

UI committee approves P.E. lecture class

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

UI students enrolling for physical education courses in the College of Liberal Arts next fall will have a new course to choose from, according to UI officials.

The UI Educational Policy Committee approved on Friday a proposal to add a two-semester-hour lecture course, "Health Fitness and Lifetime Physical Activity," to the P.E. Skills curriculum.

The proposal to offer a lecture-oriented P.E. course as an alternative to the current skills and participation-oriented courses culminated from several years of discussion about the effectiveness of the P.E. Skills requirement, according to a member of the Liberal Arts Student Association who sits on the committee.

Students in the College of Liberal Arts are required to take four one-semester-hour P.E. courses in order to graduate.

About three years ago, many students came to LASA concerned that the P.E. requirement did not qualify as a General Education Requirement because the courses were not teaching skills that students would carry on and use throughout their lives, according to LASA Representative David Ratowitz.

"Students didn't feel as if they were being taught things they would be able to use in the years to come," Ratowitz said. "In some humanities courses, like a theater course, students felt they could still appreciate theater 10 years down the road."

"But the P.E. requirements were not like that — they weren't teaching anything students could take away from the course," Ratowitz said.

Fourteen topics, including stress management, dieting, sexually transmitted diseases, drugs and coronary heart disease, will be covered in the lecture course, according to EPC chairman James Lindberg.

The semesterlong course must be taken for a letter grade instead of the pass-fail grading system used for other P.E. skills courses. Students will meet twice a week, once in a large lecture and again in a smaller discussion section.

The new theory course will emphasize fitness and wellness rather than requiring the student's actual participation in physical activity, Lindberg said.

"We wanted to add a theory component to the physical education skills," he said.

Lindberg also said the EPC proposal was largely the result of an effort last year by many student representatives to advocate an alternative to the existing physical education requirements.

"This has been under discussion for several years, and it was the subject of major discussion one year ago when the Educational Policy Committee considered student input into the discussion," he said.

"We heard a lot of input — in support of it and critical of it — from students and faculty," he said.

This resulted in an EPC action asking the UI Physical Education Skills Division to develop a new course, he said.

Alicia Brown, acting director of the P.E. Skills Division, said she supports the new course but is curious to see if the department will encounter staffing and funding problems as a result.

"I'm supportive of it, but it's going to require resources," Brown said. "It's going to require discussion leaders, possibly faculty in the future, and we will have space needs for the lab classes to be held in."

"The program will emphasize health, fitness and lifetime physical activity," Brown said. "They (the EPC) feel strongly that students need that knowledge."

Ratowitz said many LASA members are in favor of the new course offering because it will bring the P.E. requirements more in line with the other general education requirements.

"This course will teach them something they can take away and use over their lifetime," Ratowitz said.

Brown said the P.E. Skills Division took this into consideration when creating the course.

"I think it meets the general education requirements for physical education because it teaches aspects everyone should know in order to implement physical activity into their lives," she said.

"If the university wants this, then we have to talk about resources here. I mean, we can't do it now," she added.

110,000 nationwide sign greeting card for Soviet Union

Margot Krippner
The Daily Iowan

Over 10,000 football fans signed a huge greeting card during Saturday's Iowa-Tulsa football game. The card will be sent to the Soviet Union.

The card, which is three stories tall and 12 feet wide, is the brainchild of Fairfield businessman Jim Lawlor. Lawlor, who enlisted the help of 30 UI design students to create the card, said the card will have been signed in all 50 states by over one million people by the time it reaches the Soviet Union January 1.

The card, which shows an American and Soviet flag with a dove silhouetted in the center, contains the message: "Dear Mr. Gorbachev and the people of the Soviet Union, we the people of the United States of America wish to express our gratitude for your contribution to world peace. Happy New Year."

Gov. Terry Branstad was the first to sign the greeting card, kicking off the card's 50-state tour in May. Des Moines Mayor John Dorian was next to sign, followed by Hawkeye Football Coach Hayden Fry.

Since then, the card has been all over the western half of the United States and will now travel the eastern half. Already, the card has been signed by 110,000 people, including such celebrities as Barbara Streisand, Yoko Ono and Jackie Mason.

According to Lawlor, the card's tour will end in Washington D.C., where President George Bush is expected to sign the card, as are many senators and representatives.

Lawlor, accompanied by Yoko Ono and pop artist Peter Max, will fly to Moscow and present the card to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev on New Year's Day. The greeting will then be displayed in the House of Friendship in Moscow for Soviet citizens to see.

Lawlor first sent a card to the Soviet Union last December.

"I wanted to encourage Gorbachev to continue the changes he was making," Lawlor said. "I wanted the card to be large enough so that it would be noticed."

Lawlor took his first card to New York City, stopping for signatures in eight major cities along the way. By the time he sent it to the Soviet Union at the end of December, he had collected roughly 100,000 names.

A few days into the new year, Lawlor received a message on his fax machine from Soviet ambassador Yuri Dubinin. The message thanked Lawlor on behalf of Gorbachev, who felt the card showed the growing trust emerging between the two countries.

"I was inspired by last year's success and decided to do it really big this year," said Lawlor, who took a year's leave of absence from his business to run the non-profit organization, Americans' Greeting Card to the Soviet Union.

Lawlor added that many of the card's signatures also include messages.

"Some of them are funny, like 'Elvis lives,'" Lawlor said. "Others are more sincere, wishing the Soviets success with perestroika, or of a religious nature."

Gay, lesbian group lobbies for rights Caucus seeks clause for bill

Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

The newly formed Iowa Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus is working hard to secure passage in the Iowa Legislature of a gay and lesbian civil-rights bill and a bill protecting those groups from anti-gay violence.

The bill they are lobbying for is actually an amendment to the already existing Iowa Civil Rights Bill, said Michael Current, a Des Moines resident and co-chairman of the organization.

The bill, as it stands now, prohibits discrimination against people of a different religion, race and gender. The amendment to the bill would add the words "sexual preference."

The other proposed bill the group is lobbying for protects lesbian and gay people from anti-gay violence. It states that crimes which can be tied to a desire to harm a certain group (such as lesbians and gays) will have a more severe punishment than other crimes.

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, there has recently been a marked increase in crimes against specific groups, including gays and lesbians.

The UI presently has a human-rights policy which includes the protection of the right to sexual orientation.

The Iowa Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus was launched this June during Lesbian and Gay Pride Week.

"It has been a historic year for lesbians and gays in Iowa," said Linda Yanney, co-chairwoman of the caucus who lives in Iowa City.

She said the passage of the Hate Crimes and Civil Rights bills by the Iowa House of Representatives this spring helped make this year successful for those groups.

"It was particularly gratifying to see the broad support these bills had on both sides of the aisle," Yanney said.

The immediate goal of the ILGPC is to expand the base support for these bills in order to secure their passage in the Iowa Senate and approval by the governor, she said.

The ILGPC also plans to address other issues related to the quality of life of Iowa lesbian and gay citizens.

"As Iowans, we know Iowans in general are fair-minded. They should be open to accepting whatever people want to be," Yanney said. "We don't deserve to be harassed on the street for the way we are."

Yanney added that Iowa residents still need to be more broad-minded.

"People just don't realize the depth of discrimination," she said. "I would have left this state a long time ago if I hadn't thought Iowans were just people down deep."

The ILGPC is a non-partisan organization which tries to represent the political interests of some 300,000 lesbian women and gay men in the state of Iowa.

"Gay and lesbian people are everywhere," Current said. "We are parents and children, friends and neighbors, farmers and small business people, factory workers and fellow churchgoers. We are part and parcel of every facet of life in this great state of Iowa."

"The Iowa Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus seeks to help gays and lesbians achieve a political voice reflective of our numbers and diversity," Current said.

ILGPC will assist Iowa legislators and other interest groups in drafting legislation and formulating policy. The chief task of the organization is in educating legislators and state and local leaders on the interests and needs of lesbians and gays.

"We will also be working in close cooperation with other groups and individuals seeking to build a broad-based coalition of people concerned about civil rights, health care and a better quality of life for every citizen of Iowa," Yanney said.

Avenson asks older Iowans to consider broader agenda

DES MOINES (AP) — Representatives of older Iowans opened their annual mock legislative session on Monday with an urging they consider issues affecting young and old.

"Look at your issues . . . but also look at issues which are going to face your children," said House Speaker Don Avenson (D-Oelwein).

The Older Iowans Legislature, an annual meeting sponsored by the Department of Elder Affairs, concludes Wednesday with representatives setting legislative priorities to present to state officials.

They are scheduled to consider issues ranging from health care to transportation, but Avenson called for a broader agenda, mainly because the group carries considerable clout with the real Legislature.

"We have an excellent track record of passing legislation you recommend to us," said Avenson.

The reason for the elderly's clout in the Legislature isn't very difficult to understand, said Avenson.

"You are the fastest growing population in this state," said Avenson. "Not only are you the fastest growing population, but you all vote, and politicians listen carefully to people who vote."

Avenson said the state has undergone fundamental demographic and social changes because of the farm-based recession of the 1980s, and all age groups will have to advocate for change.

3 from Des Moines plead innocent to money laundering; trial date set

DES MOINES (AP) — A federal drug agent and a West Des Moines businesswoman pleaded innocent Monday to conspiracy and money-laundering charges in a courtroom jammed with Des Moines' elite.

U.S. Magistrate Celeste Bremer set a December 4 trial date, but lawyers said they would ask for a delay.

Drug Enforcement Administration agent Dennis Harker, his wife, Mary Ann, and businesswoman Susan Terry all entered innocent pleas during the 30-minute court proceeding.

Bremer freed all three, subject to a $100,000 penalty if they fail to appear for trial.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Joe Beck read the charges, and each declared "I am innocent" after the charges were read.

The charges against the three include tax charges, conspiracy and structuring bank deposits to avoid a $10,000 limit over which banks are required to report cash deposits.

A thick indictment against the three handed up by a federal grand jury last month details real estate and bank transactions and charges the Harkers had hundreds of thousands of dollars in transactions during years they reported only a fraction of that income.

In all, there are 11 counts in the indictment, with Harker charged in eight of the counts, Terry in six and Harker in four.

Harker faces up to 40 years in jail if convicted on all counts, while Terry faces up to 30 years. In addition to jail terms, the Harkers face Internal Revenue Service penalties if convicted on the tax charges.

Drugs are not mentioned in the indictment.

Harker is now a DEA agent in Miami, though he earlier lived in West Des Moines. Terry and the Harkers describe themselves as friends since high school.

The indictment says Terry and Harker set up a company which funneled cash to real estate investments and rare coin transactions.

Terry owns SKT Construction Co. in West Des Moines.

Monday's arraignment was jammed with Des Moines business, political and social leaders who showed up to offer support. They included Connie Cook, Des Moines city councilwoman; Carole Baumgarten, Prairie Meadows track manager; and businessman Bill Reichard.

After the indictments, former U.S. attorney and former Democratic gubernatorial candidate Roxanne Conlin appeared at a news conference with Terry, describing herself as a friend and business partner.

Terry said she was grateful for the support.

"It meant a lot to me," she said. "It said to me that people in this country believe you are innocent until proven guilty by a court of law, not by the media."

During the court hearing, Beck and William Kutmus, Terry's lawyer, clashed about the heavy publicity the case has generated. Beck cited news accounts he said violated local court rules against commenting on pending cases, a charge which Kutmus said was "offensive."

Monfort plant officials allow new contract

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa (AP) — Monfort pork plant officials, who created a stir last summer when they announced plans to lease the plant and fire all employees, have agreed to a new union contract that prohibits such a move.

Members of Local 50N of the United Food and Commercial Workers overwhelmingly approved the new contract Sunday, according to local president Ross Boyer. The pact also calls for a small wage increase.

Earlier this year, union officials accused Monfort, a ConAgra Inc. subsidiary, of trying to break the union by leasing the plant to a management company, which would fire all workers and rehire them without a union contract. Under pressure from politicians and workers, the company withdrew the plan in early September.

The contract raises wages from $8 up to $8.25 an hour on October 6 and then to $9 an hour by 1993. Union worker Randy Davis said the company also agreed to pay all of the workers' insurance and to provide better retirement benefits.

"It's basically what we had three years ago and they took away from us," he said.

Missing the point

More than 300 people crowded the Pentacrest Monday afternoon to hear a succession of marijuana advocates call for "decriminalization of the sacred herb."

In more than an hour of incoherent oration, skewed facts and punishing guitar playing, the speakers explained to the crowd how legalization would "end the greenhouse effect" and "save the planet."

Buried underneath was a single relevant point: There are countless vices prevalent in American society that are more malevolent than recreational marijuana use.

But that point alone is not sufficient to justify legalization. Marijuana users are, by definition, part of America's illegal drug problem. They may be the least of it, but they are still part of it.

Marijuana users are, by definition, part of America's illegal drug problem. They may be the least of it, but they are still part of it.

Legalizing marijuana now would only reinforce societal tolerance of more dangerous and insidious drugs. And reinforcing that tolerance, in the midst of a federally initiated anti-drug crusade, could only complicate America's ongoing drug crisis.

One of the greatest obstacles the federal government faces in its war against drugs is clearing the blurred distinction between what is culturally acceptable and legally permissible. Generations of Americans have been socialized that drug use is illegal, but all right.

Blind acceptance of that philosophy ignores the crucial link between individual drug use and subsidizing the evils of the drug trade. Those who use marijuana exclusively may argue that their dollars are not flowing into the pockets of murderous cocaine barons, but their use and advocacy of marijuana perpetuates the dangerous "illegal, but all right" credo.

Advocates of legalization contend that decriminalizing marijuana would increase the government's chance of success in the drug war by allowing it to concentrate attention and resources on hard core drugs.

But legalization is not the answer. Besides setting a confusing precedent, selective decriminalization undermines the critical need to make Americans identify their own drug use with "America's drug problem."

Empty celebration

The People's Republic of China's celebration of that nation's 40th anniversary this week was no more than a collection of empty gestures.

Security forces prevented ordinary citizens from attending the festivities in, of all places, Tiananmen Square. Thus, the celebration played only to members of the elite who had special passes. Perhaps these were the only Chinese people with anything to celebrate: Specifically, their solidification of power after the massacre last June.

The event was further deprived of meaning by the absence of any significant world leaders. Those leaders on the rostrum with Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping came from nations like Pakistan, Cuba, Ecuador and Mongolia. The single Soviet delegate was identified as a deputy of the Soviet-Chinese Friendship Society, hardly a member of the Politburo. No U.S. officials were present at all, although former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, on a private visit to China, did show his lack of principal by deciding to attend.

Compared to the huge military parade at China's 35th anniversary celebration, the military aspect of this year's event was played down considerably, with only 45 goose-stepping soldiers. Presumably, the people of Beijing have seen enough tanks and troops to last them a while.

Other festivities showed a distinct lack of joy as well. The carefully selected young people who danced at the main festivities appeared less resentful than simply bored. And the fireworks display, a highlight of the celebration five years ago, was not visible to most of Beijing's residents, because of the thousands of troops patrolling the streets. Good thing, too, because the people of Beijing might have confused the firework sounds with something else.

All this makes one wonder why Deng held the ceremony at all. The world's condemnation of last spring's bloody crackdown and subsequent executions of those who participated in the uprising is being ignored by Chinese leaders. The absence of the people from the People's Anniversary reveals Deng and his captains for what they truly are: no longer protectors of China's egalitarian ideology, no longer the champions of openness and change they were five years ago, no longer the leaders of the people.

Now they are merely the holders of power. They can celebrate all they want, but the world knows better.

Ethnic political humor falls flat

Comedian Jackie Mason is in the soup — and I don't mean his new sitcom "Chicken Soup," which is showing early signs of ratings fatigue.

The comic has been stumping for New York City Republican-Liberal mayoral contender Rudy Giuliani, apparently because his humor is seen as an antidote to Giuliani's image as a stiff-necked prosecutor.

In his off-the-cuff comments to a reporter for New York's Village Voice weekly, Mason, who specializes in acerbic observations about ethnic differences, must have sent the value of the Maalox concession at Giuliani headquarters soaring.

After describing Democratic mayoral nominee David Dinkins as a man who "looks like a black model without a job," Mason went on to make a few pungent observations about the political behavior of Jews.

"There is," he said, "a sick Jewish problem of voting for a black man no matter how unfit he is for the job. All you have to do is be black and don't curse Jews directly, and the Jew will vote for a black man in a second."

"The Jews," he added, "are constantly giving millions of dollars to the black people — have you ever heard of a black person giving a quarter to a Jew?"

Mason's response to the publication of these words was — three guesses now — to say he had been taken out of context.

And it is possible to tease out of these words some small comfort to a city whose recent primary was conducted in the shadow of a racial killing in a Brooklyn neighborhood, and where the long-standing civil-rights alliance between the blacks and Jews has been strained by two decades of conflict over the school system, Jesse Jackson and political power.

After all, what Mason was saying — and what every political survey demonstrates — is that in general, Jewish voters are much more likely to vote for a black candidate than for other whites.

But make no mistake — these words are going to cut, and cut deeply; not because they were taken out of context, but because Mason put himself into a thoroughly inappropriate context; he violated a wall of separation between remarks acceptable in a satirical environment, and what can be accepted in a public environment.

Time after time, we've seen ethnic remarks cause as much political trouble as liquor, money and unauthorized recreational sex put together.

In 1976, President Gerald Ford had to dump Agricultural Secretary Earl Butz after he was quoted as telling a grossly racist joke about the desires of blacks.

In the Reagan era, Interior Secretary James Watt survived countless attempts to oust him — until he jokingly referred to an advisory committee as having "a black, a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

Grover Cleveland won a tight battle for the White House in 1884 after a prominent opponent referred to the Democrats as the party of "rum, Romanism and rebellion." That got him enough New York Catholics to go for Cleveland, which gave him New York State and the presidency.

And it's not just politicians who run afoul of this wall of separation. Ask former Los Angeles Dodgers executive Al Campanis; ask former CBS tout Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder.

Why this wall? It stands, in great measure, because of the astonishingly polyglot nature of the American population. We come from everywhere; and, with the possible exception of the 10th generation WASPs, none of us can shake entirely the sense that we've been seen as strangers, that we somehow do not belong. (In fact, the white Southerner for decades had that same sense of exclusion.)

It is one thing to sit in a theater or nightclub and feel the hilarious shock of recognition when Lenny Bruce describes the white liberal at a cocktail party trying to make conversation with a black, or when Richard Pryor mocks the rigid walk of the white middle class, or when Jackie Mason satirizes the different responses of Jews and gentiles to a line at a restaurant.

It is quite another to watch these distinctions being mocked in the political arena; for here, the shock of recognition is not funny at all. It suggests a sense that those being satirized are somehow outside the norm. And in America, without a standard social contract, without a universally recognized "mainstream," no group wants to feel even the threat of exclusion from this arena.

So Jackie, knock it off... Mistah? Mistah? You hear me?... Mistah?

Inappropriate method

To the Editor:
 I am gazing out of the third-floor window of the Union, where I am privileged to observe the pronouncement spray painted on the walkway below: "dog!"

Frankly, I am offended. I believe that we should all be offended, not because whatever message the ignorant slob had in mind to convey, but because this individual chose to express him/herself in a destructive, illegal manner.

The [Union] is not the only place this individual (or, for that matter, group of people) chose to express his/her thoughts. The message "dog" is also painted on the Pentacrest, at the other entrance to the Union and at various other points along the heavily-traveled walkways of the campus.

Before someone chooses to pick bones, let me say that I am certainly not against free speech or freedom of expression. But show some maturity, and show some respect. Vandalism hurts everyone who shares this campus. If you choose to share your insights with the community, use an appropriate medium and method.

CAC clarifies

To the Editor:
 Some clarifications need to be made with respect to the article "CAC describes proposals as 'castration of student power'" [DI, September 22].

The article implied that Collegiate Associations Council made accusations against former UI Ombudsman Anthony Sinicropi. No such allegations were made by any member of the CAC against Sinicropi, or any other employee of the UI.

The focus of the discussion in question centered around the actions of Dean Phillip Jones and his apparent poor judgement with respect to the proposed move of Student Legal Services. A reference was made to an action taken by Jones in August where he tried to use the university ombudsman against specific members of the CAC; a move in which Sinicropi did not partake.

Additionally, the reference citing [Room] 114 Jessup as the Office of Academic Affairs was inaccurate. [Room] 114 Jessup is the Office of Student Services. Contrary to the implications of the story, the CAC in no way was raising any complaints with respect to the Office of Academic Affairs; our complaints were directed at the Office for Student Services.

Deceptive hoopla

To the Editor:
 The editorial regarding President George Bush's clean air proposal ("Go plant a tree," DI, September 25) is correct on several points and wrong on an important one.

Yes, Bush is probably positioning for some enthusiastic nuke-hustling. [The] editorial mentions (though not emphatically enough) several truths about nuclear power: It's unsafe, uneconomical, and it results in hazardous wastes that won't go away. I thought we'd learned long ago that nukes are not the answer. Where was George?

The editorial misses the mark, however, in crediting Bush with a clean air proposal which is "hard to find fault with." In fact, the Bush-Dingell bill is a weak, watered-down excuse for genuine environmental protection. It marginally addresses acid rain problems while not touching air pollution emissions from several other sources. Of course, the Bush plan, because of the aggressive, deceptive media hoopla with which it was introduced, has already captured the hearts of the American public — including, apparently, the DI — and therefore will be the popular bill for legislators to support.

Rep. Henry Waxman (D-Calif.) has offered strengthening amendments that include elements of two superior bills. These would set genuinely tough standards and deadlines for controlling polluting emissions from motor vehicles and industrial sources. I believe this entire matter is still being debated by the House.

This information is crucial to an understanding of current environmental legislation. I was surprised that the DI would editorialize on issues it has not fully researched.

To the Editor:
 The picture of the Israeli woman soldier on page 2A of the Sept. 28 DI insults women, women soldiers, Israelis and Palestinians.

The depiction of the woman soldier, smiling broadly and dressed in a bathing suit instead of fatigues... trivializes [Israeli soldiers'] physically and emotionally difficult lives, thereby trivializing the Israeli-Palestinian conflict itself.

Backers ask Supreme Court to overturn ban on Marcos

Politicians back appeal to garner support

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition politicians are backing efforts by Ferdinand Marcos' followers to bring his body home as part of an apparent scramble to receive the mantle of leadership of the late's president's following.

Marcos died Thursday in Hawaii, where he had lived since he was ousted in the popular uprising three years ago that propelled Corazon Aquino into the presidency.

Aquino has banned the return of the former leader's body, citing national security. Marcos supporters today asked the Supreme Court to overturn the ban.

Political analysts expect that with Marcos' death, his New Society Movement party will break up because it lacks leaders of national prominence.

The fact that Marcos designated no clear-cut successor will intensify efforts by major politicians to win the support of his constituency.

Sen. Ernesto Herrera, an Aquino supporter, predicted a "massive regrouping of various forces, galvanized by the clamor to lift the Marcos ban."

"The Marcos followers and sympathizers, having lost a prime mover, are now in search of a new leader who could unify and rally them into a strong, cohesive party," he said.

Although Marcos' popular support had dwindled, he still enjoyed a large following among his 6 million fellow Ilocanos, a linguistic group in northern Luzon.

The New Society Movement is also believed to be well-financed and have a network of experienced political operatives nationwide.

In congressional and regional elections since Aquino took office in February 1986, the Marcos party has fared poorly, except in northern Luzon and scattered parts of Mindanao and the Visayas islands.

But Aquino's decision to ban Marcos' body is controversial, even among her supporters. Six pro-Aquino lawmakers in the 23-member Senate support his return. Opposition to the ban is also widespread in the 200-member House of Representatives.

Pro-Marcos politicians see the issue as a means of winning broad-based sympathy in a culture which respects the right of the dead to be buried in their homeland.

This explains the absence of massive public demonstrations in the wake of Marcos' death. His supporters say they have decided for now to avoid large protests for fear violence would tarnish their image as an aggrieved party and ruin chances for the body's return.

Politicians not identified as pro-Marcos see the issue as a means of currying support among his followers without being tainted with loyalist label.

Chief among those angling for support in Marcos' camp include Vice President Salvador Laurel and Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, both

Quayle: Waiver on aid restriction to Philippines would protect lives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle said Monday the administration may ask Congress to let the Philippines use U.S. foreign aid to bolster internal security against communist insurgents.

Two American military base workers were ambushed and killed by communist rebels in the Philippines last Tuesday shortly before Quayle's arrival.

Quayle said a waiver of the restriction on using U.S. foreign aid for internal security would "help protect American lives."

Quayle, who returned Friday from a 12-day, four-nation Asian tour, was instrumental in obtaining a similar waiver for El Salvador earlier this year after he visited there.

The Philippines is due to receive almost $50 million in U.S. aid next year.

Quayle did not say how much he felt should be reallocated toward internal security, but aides said the country needs basic security equipment including two-way radios for police cars in Manila to help combat terrorism.

In a luncheon interview with The Associated Press and other news organizations, Quayle said that a long-term agreement to keep the six American military installations in the Philippines would make the country more attractive to foreign investors. "The country needs economic development. You see that just upon arrival, traveling the streets of Manila. You still have poverty at a very significant degree," Quayle said.

"They need private investment. They need businesses to come over there and invest," said Quayle, who also visited Japan, South Korea and Malaysia.

The base agreement, covering Clark Air Base, Subic Bay naval station and four smaller installations, expires in September 1991, and a dozen of the 23 members of the country's Senate favor closing them. Vice President Salvador Laurel has suggested a 5-to-10 year extension of the lease agreement.

But Quayle said he told Laurel a 5- to 10-year agreement "means we're leaving. I don't believe that that is what you really want if you want to think of the long-term stability of the Philippines."

"That's the question the Filipinos have to ask themselves," said Quayle, who reiterated that he believes "the majority of the people... still support our presence."

"I think we are a stabilizing force in the Philippines, and stability is what investors and people look to."

Iowa farmers rave over Idaho hay lift but discourage encore

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa farmers who were bused to the great Idaho hay lift last year are still pinching themselves over the generosity shown by farmers there, but it's unlikely there will ever be a sequel.

"To my notion, it's out of the question," said Don Murdock, the regional Farm Bureau official in Chariton who organized the Iowa end of the work. If there's to be travel to make hay in the future, he said, Iowa farmers will stay closer to home.

Not that the Iowa farmers didn't appreciate the hay, since there wasn't any to be had in drought-starved southern Iowa last summer. "We didn't even start the lawn mower last year, it was that dry," he said.

The problem, said Murdock, was that fewer than 250 tons of hay were brought back to Iowa. By the time it was divided among the 72 volunteers, it didn't cover many needs.

"It still is an exceptional activity in the minds of those who were close to it," Murdock said.

"But there's a mixed reaction from those not directly touched. The people who made the trip and met the folks in the West are still overwhelmed with the outpouring of generosity, but outside of that, there's a tendency to measure the results in terms of the amount of hay generated versus the cost," he said.

"And when you look at it that way, it was totally impractical."

It didn't seem that way at the time, though.

Thanks to adequate subsoil moisture coming into the season, southern Iowa farmers were able to make a cutting or two early in the season, but when the drought took hold, grass turned into shredded wheat and pastures dried up.

Meanwhile, thousands of acres of pasture were maturing in Conservation Reserve Program acres in northern Idaho. The government gave permission to cut it and Idaho farmers said Iowa farmers could harvest as much as they wished.

A memorable chain of gifts made it happen. The Iowa farmers were bused (free by Greyhound) to Idaho. Motels donated rooms; residents of Deary, Idaho, donated food; University of Idaho students in nearby Moscow helped load bales in rail boxcars; farmers from miles around donated their machinery, thanks to a plea by the governor, and the Burlington Northern hauled it back to Iowa.

"It was fun to meet and know people from your area of the country," said Mike Tracy, public relations director for the Idaho Farm Bureau in Pocatello. "I have a lot of good memories."

"And there was a lot of media attention. I remember Paul Harvey said one day, 'They need more food,' and all of a sudden food started rolling in. One lady brought in 75 loaves of bread."

"It blew us away," Tracy said. "We were not prepared for that level of generosity. There were tears in more than a few eyes when they (the Iowans) left."

In 10 days, the farmers made enough hay to fill about 47 boxcars, or something in excess of 200 tons, Murdock said. But at the beginning of the trip, he said he hoped to bring back as many as 5,000 tons.

"We had some people with large cow operations, and what we generated was just a drop in the bucket compared with their needs," he said. One problem was that farmers had to make square bales rather than more-efficient big round ones, which the railroad wasn't prepared to ship. And farmers didn't have enough time in the fields. "As a result, thousands of acres went to waste," he said.

Still, Murdock said he and the traveling farmers were touched by generosity shown them by Idaho residents.

To help the Iowans repay the kindness, the Des Moines Register commissioned an oil painting by Virginia Bell and paid for 1,000 prints. The painting is a montage showing various stages of the hay lift, with prominent display for volunteers and corporate sponsors.

Murdock sold 20 of the prints for $50 each and donated the money to the city of Deary. The original went to an Idaho Farm Bureau official, Norm Plank, who coordinated the Idaho end of the hay lift, while prints were sent to corporations and others who helped.

Murdock said he still has several hundred prints remaining, now available for $25 each, with proceeds going to Deary.

Despite the warm feelings toward Idaho, Murdock said he doubts Iowa farmers would accept such an invitation again. "I don't think so," he said. "I don't think it would ever fly again."

A better idea, he said, would be for farmers to stay closer to home, with southern Iowa farmers going to, say, northern Iowa to harvest hay and using National Guard trucks to return the booty.

Howard Beebout, of rural Columbia, agreed. Beebout went on the hay lift last year and brought back 300 bushels, which he donated to a youth camp.

"If we have another one, I'd insist we stop somewhere on the way," said Beebout, 73. "That was a 42-hour ride straight through. That's a little too much for an old man."

nalism and industrial engineering programs. Eaton had estimated the Peat Marwick recommendations would decrease the number of students at Iowa State by 2,000.

Curriss and Eaton said the Regents' staff recommendations were more acceptable.

Eaton said ISU officials "are most gratified with the board office recommendations."

UI President Hunter Rawlings echoed Eaton's concern.

"Some of the recommendations will be difficult for us to implement without careful attention to the long-term implications of program reductions for Iowa students, faculty, staff and the educational needs of the state," he said in a prepared statement.

The UI was the least affected by the audit's recommendations.

The duplication report, which cost the Regents $181,500, was one of 35 organizational audits done by Peat Marwick as part of a comprehensive study of the operations and programs of the universities and two specialty schools. Peat Marwick estimated the schools could save $5 million annually if its recommendations were adopted.

Richey said the staff will make recommendations on eight to 10 other audit areas to the board next week.

He said if the staff recommendations on duplication are approved, about $2.3 million would be available annually for reallocation to other programs at the universities.

"Herd Book" funds and student insurance sales. Rojas-Cardona said representatives from the Senate, SLS, the UI Legal Clinic and the administration will contribute to the supervising attorney search.

The UI Legal Clinic is responsible for supervising the legal interns assigned to the SLS.

Paul Papak, UI law professor, said he is not sure if the personnel turnover and impending move have damaged the interns' educational opportunity.

"Our concern, of course, is that the students practicing there continue to receive adequate supervision and education," Papak said.

Papak said the clinic constantly monitors any changes in SLS staff and arrangements. Inadequate arrangements would result in the interns being pulled from the office, he said.

Students now have a heavy caseload as two interns are doing the work meant for three interns, and the office is short one paid co-director, he said.

"We would like to see adjustments at SLS so students can have a caseload they can adequately manage," Papak said.

Rojas-Cardona said the 10-member joint Senate-CAC commission, which is supposed to handle SLS operational decisions, may be appointed this week, if the CAC fills its five designated seats.

SLS's proposed new office space will be five hotel rooms in the second floor of the Iowa House.

Members from the group NORML — the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws — one of the rally sponsors, sold buttons and T-shirts and passed out fliers from a table set up on the Pentacrest. The rally was also sponsored locally by UI Students Against Leadership.

Standing on a metal milk crate and speaking into a makeshift audio system, Herer told the crowd that hemp can reverse global warming.

"Stop being lemmings," he commanded. "Which bud are you going to chose? The one that kills 125,000 people per year from cirrhosis of the liver, murder and auto accidents, or the one that hasn't had any proven incidents of related deaths?"

Capt. Don Strand of the Iowa City Police Department said he was not sure if police officers were present Monday or if any arrests had been made.

"I suspect there would have been grounds for arrest, but I don't know if that would have been the appropriate action to take," Strand said. "The people that conduct these demonstrations usually do so for publicity and to be arrested."

Suicide

In the Iowa City area, several suicides occurred in the spring of 1988, but the agency mobilized to counter the local increase with educational programs, the spokesperson said.

"After last spring's suicides, we got together with several other agencies and went to schools to talk to kids about what happened," the source said.

"But we're having a hard time getting into the school system because it's a touchy subject," the source said.

Paul Carroll, director of social work for the state Mental Health Institute, related the decrease in the suicide rate in the late '80s to improving economic conditions in Iowa.

"Generally speaking, it's the groups of folks that feel trapped who commit suicide," Carroll said. "Statistics usually reflect the situation, and now some groups who were under financial stress in the early '80s have turned their situation around."

With the farm crisis gradually tapering off, suicide rates should continue to decline and its victims recover, Carroll said. But he added that counseling has historically helped people cope with stress and suicide.

"The farmer-outreach programs helped and subsequent to that, people started mental-health groups where farmers would sit around and discuss their problems," Carroll said. "The last time we saw something like this was back in the '30s."

While conditions are improving, people still continue to lose their jobs, so the situation has not completely righted itself, he added.

Iowa's suicide rate of 13 per 100,000 people is slightly higher than the national average. Farmers, according to the statistics, kill themselves at a higher rate than the general population.

The Iowa Department of Public Health analyzed the statistics and found that the number of suicides among Iowa farmers remained stable during the agricultural crisis of the early '80s. Nationally, men kill themselves more often than women, and statewide, 253 of the 317 Iowans who took their own lives last year were male.

The number of suicides among people above the age of 65 dropped from 96 in 1987 to 92 in 1988, but the number of teen-age suicides increased slightly.

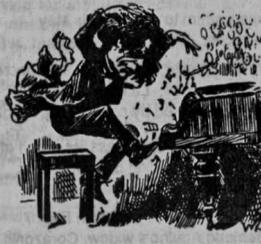

A total of 31 persons age 19 or younger committed suicide in 1988, increasing 1987's statistics by three deaths, according to the study.

Panamanian opposition leader freed

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Opposition leader Ricardo Arias Calderon and eight companions were freed after being held 20 hours and questioned about their efforts to curtail the government's funds, the Defense Forces announced Monday.

However, Atty. Gen. Carlos Villalaz said by telephone all nine still face charges of "crimes against the state, crimes against the administration of justice and crimes against the national economy."

Arias, a former vice-presidential candidate, was arrested Sunday while in Veraguas province, 180 miles west of the capital, to promote the opposition campaign against the government controlled by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

A statement by former presidential candidate Guillermo Endara said the opposition "reiterates its promise to keep fighting for the establishment of a democratic system of government and full respect for human rights by the peaceful means we have been following, despite the escalation of violations and attacks from the dictatorial regime."

Eurotunnel to cost more than planned

LONDON — Like many a construction project, the 31-mile rail link being built beneath the English Channel is going to cost a lot more than planned and might not be finished on time.

The cost of the project, estimated in 1987 at $7.8 billion, has grown 44 percent and now is $11.3 billion, builders said Monday. Project contractors blame the cost increase on inflation, construction problems and higher costs for rail cars.

The news sent shares of Eurotunnel PLC, the Anglo-French consortium building the link between England and France, slumping 72 cents to $10.47 in trading on London's Stock Exchange. Shares were trading at about $16.10 in late July, when Eurotunnel first indicated it would need more money.

Eurotunnel initially arranged $8.1 billion in loans and raised $1.61 billion by selling stock in the project. Now it needs to raise at least $1.61 billion more, said Eurotunnel co-chairman Alastair Morton.

The consortium said it would seek to raise the extra funds next year or in 1991, 75 percent from its banks and the remainder perhaps by selling additional shares to current shareholders.

Texas school financing unconstitutional

AUSTIN, Texas — The Texas Supreme Court found "glaring disparities" between the state's rich and poor school districts and ruled Monday that funding within the nation's second-largest system is unconstitutional.

Spending varies by as much as $17,000 from rich to poor districts, the court found.

"A remedy is long overdue," Justice Oscar Mauzy's opinion said. "The Legislature must take immediate action."

The 9-0 ruling could have enormous financial and social implications for the 3.3 million-student Texas school system, second in size to California's.

The court found the public school finance system violates the 113-year-old constitutional provision for an "efficient system" of public schools. It set a May 1, 1990, deadline for legislators to find a solution.

State attorneys had argued that the word "efficient" was intended to suggest a "simple and inexpensive system."

Court will study copyright rights

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court said Monday it will use the famous Alfred Hitchcock thriller "Rear Window" to decide a copyright dispute in which millions of dollars, and possibly the future of some movie classics, are at stake.

The justices said they will hear arguments on behalf of actor Jimmy Stewart, Hitchcock's heirs and others seeking to prevent a literary agent from sharing in profits from the motion picture's re-release.

The agent, Sheldon Abend, in 1971 purchased a copyright to the short story on which "Rear Window" was based. Abend paid $650 to Chase Manhattan Bank for the copyright.

He filed a federal lawsuit seeking a share of the more than $12 million in revenue that "Rear Window" has generated since 1983, when the 1954 movie was released once again in theaters and for the first time on video cassettes and over cable television.

"Rear Window" is based on a short story, "It Had to Be Murder," that was first published in February 1942 in Dime Detective Magazine.

The copyright was owned by the story's author, Cornell Woolrich, who sold the separate motion picture rights in 1945 for $9,250.

Israel asks U.S. for immigrant funding

JERUSALEM (AP) — Officials expect 100,000 Soviet Jews to come to Israel in the next three to five years following a tightening of U.S. visa requirements, and have asked the United States to guarantee $400 million to help house them.

But plans to settle new immigrants in the Israeli-occupied territories may jeopardize support from Washington, which views Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip as an obstacle to Middle East peace efforts.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday the Bush administration would reject any request for aid to resettle immigrants in the occupied lands.

The West Bank and Gaza are home to 1.7 million Palestinians and 70,000 Jewish settlers, and are the scene of a 21-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule.

Israeli officials say more Soviet Jews will flock to the Jewish state as a result of new U.S. immigration restrictions that make it more difficult to go to the United States and because of worsening economic conditions in their homeland.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's special adviser on Jewish affairs, Yitzhak David, said one barometer of the interest in emigration is the number of sponsorship offers sent to Israel's diplomatic mission in Moscow at the behest of would-be emigrants.

He said an average of 200 such invitations, needed to start emigration procedures, are received daily. About 200,000 Soviet Jews have requested sponsorship so far this year.

Washington has set a ceiling of 50,000 Soviets to be admitted as refugees next year. An additional 20,000 to 30,000 may enter the country on a so-called parole basis with no government support.

"We do anticipate growing numbers of Jewish immigrants wanting to settle in Israel," Fitzwater said. "There may be costs associated with that."

Simcha Dinitz, head of the quasi-governmental Jewish Agency which helps settle new arrivals, said 100,000 Soviets are expected over the next three to five years. David said the number could reach 150,000.

Israel estimates resettlement costs at $3 billion over three to five years and hopes to get $600 million in donations from U.S. Jewish groups.

It also wants $400 million in U.S. government guaranteed loans that would allow it to borrow money from commercial banks at low interest, Finance Ministry Spokesman Arie Greenblatt said.

The funding request was made by Finance Minister Shimon Peres, who raised the issue with President George Bush last week in New York, he said.

Fitzwater said Bush "emphasized his sympathy for that problem and committed to look into it," but details were not discussed.

Deworming drug shown to help cancer patients

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — A drug used to deworm farm animals, when prescribed in combination with another drug, saves the lives of some colon cancer patients who otherwise had little chance of survival, the National Cancer Institute said Monday.

Levamisole, a drug widely used to remove worms from the intestinal tract of cows, horses, goats, sheep and even elephants, was used in combination with 5-fluorouracil, a well-known cancer drug, to dramatically increase the survival rate among some colon cancer patients, NCI officials announced.

"I think this is an important advance," said Dr. Samuel Broder, director of NCI. "We might now be able to reduce the death rate due to colon cancer by as much as one third."

Ironically, levamisole is not approved for human medical treatment in the United States, and currently is available to American physicians only through a NCI research program approved by the Food and Drug Administration. The drug, developed by a Belgium pharmaceutical firm, is used in Europe, however, to treat intestinal parasites in humans.

The other drug, 5-fluorouracil, or 5-FU, has been a standard in chemotherapy for some cancers for 30 years.

The drug combination was used successfully in a small clinical test and then expanded to a national clinical trial involving about 1,300 patients, under the direction of Dr. Charles Moertel of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. The NCI sponsored the national trial.

Moertel said the findings showed that colon cancer patients at an advanced stage of the disease called Duke C experienced about a one-third reduction in death and cancer recurrence after five years when compared to patients who received either no drugs or levamisole alone. He said previous studies showed that 5-FU had no effect on colon cancer.

"We might now be able to reduce the death rate due to colon cancer by as much as one third." — Dr. Samuel Broder

It was only the combination, said Moertel, that gave "a significant reduction in the death rate." Just how the two drugs work together is not now understood, Moertel said.

He said the finding was particularly important because prior to the drug trial there was virtually no successful treatment available for Duke C colon cancer patients.

Duke C, or stage III of colon cancer, is named for a physician who first characterized the progress of the disease. At this stage, the cancer has penetrated the colon wall and spread to the lymph nodes, but there are no tumor cells detected in other organs. Duke C patients also have had the obvious tumors removed surgically.

Broder said that about 110,000 patients a year are diagnosed with colon cancer and 44,000 will die of the disease. About 21,000 of those deaths will be among patients who first received treatment at the Duke C stage of the disease.

Middle ground found for new clean-air law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key House members broke a decade-long stalemate over clean air legislation Monday, agreeing to apply California's strict auto emissions standards to the entire nation, congressional sources said.

The sources, speaking only on condition they not be named, said the compromise would put California's requirements — the toughest of all 50 states — into effect nationwide through 2002. They could be strengthened starting in 2003.

The agreement is supported by Reps. John Dingell (D-Mich.) and Henry Waxman (D-Calif.), whose bitter differences over auto emissions have played a large role in delaying an updating of the 1977 clean air law.

Dingell, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, shares the position of the auto industry, which has resisted tougher standards. Waxman, chairman of the panel's environment subcommittee, supports the stance of environmental groups in arguing for the strictest possible emissions caps.

With the two congressmen agreeing, passage into law seems inevitable, one source said of the new standards.

Most significant, according to the sources, was agreement by Dingell, Waxman and others to back the compromise through the entire legislative process, including any negotiations with the Senate.

Student's art travels to Davenport show

Robin Lemke
The Daily Iowan

Local UI art student Craig Albright has had two of his pieces accepted for a showing which began Sunday at the Davenport Museum of Art. Albright's work has previously been displayed at The Kitchen restaurant, 9 S. Dubuque St., and at the Checkered Space in the UI Art Building.

The two pieces submitted by Albright were accepted from over 200 entries. All artists featured in the Davenport show, which will continue until November 26, are from the Iowa and Illinois area.

Albright, who describes his work as a mixture of realism and the abstract, is currently working on a series of drawings and paintings featuring images of train cars, mostly working from memory, rather than from set image representations.

"My only process is one of allowing the image to evolve, mostly by itself, on the canvas," says Albright. "I don't try to decide on any one particular idea beforehand — it's less frustrating."

Albright came to the UI in 1981 as a pre-med student and didn't take his first art course, basic drawing, until his second year. Finally, during his fourth year, he declared art as his major.

Beginning in early October, Albright is scheduled to once again display his work at The Kitchen. The upcoming show will be a collection of his past and current work, featuring still lifes and pieces from the train series.

Local restaurants showcase area art

Robin Lemke
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City art scene is as diverse in its content as it is in its form of exposure.

Two Iowa City eating establishments have been making it a point to introduce the area to some of the local artists. Both the Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co. and The Kitchen have been giving artists a chance to have their work presented to the public.

Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 E. Washington St., has been displaying artwork for the past three years. Anyone is welcome to bring in their work and have it approved for display by the management.

All the artists have previously been from eastern Iowa and have brought in their work because of personal references or on their own inquiries. The only guideline is that the art be in line with the theme of the restaurant, being inoffensive to the customers.

Normally one artist is featured on the main floor, while another is displayed upstairs. Various themes and styles are constantly presented by individual artists. Paintings, drawings and photographs have all been presented.

When offered, prices are either located on the separate pieces or lists are given to the management. All sales and further inquiries are directed to the artists themselves. Not all artists intend to sell their work; some of the art is displayed for the exposure only.

The Kitchen, 9 S. Dubuque St., for the past six years, has also been a showcase for local artistic talent. Their showings have always featured one local artist, normally displaying the work for one month. Prospective artists bring in slides or samples of their work, and are booked up to six months in advance.

Both restaurants have been making it a habit to introduce new talent to the public. No previous experience or exposure is required.

Jerry Lee celebrates calm 54th

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A planned barbecue was rained out, so rock 'n' roller Jerry Lee Lewis celebrated his 54th birthday with 400 relatives and friends at a golf club lodge on the outskirts of Memphis.

Friends say Lewis, who has been married six times and has survived struggles with alcohol and drugs, has calmed down in recent years, spending as much time as he can with his wife and 3-year-old son at their home in rural Mississippi near Memphis.

Lewis played to those while performing an ad-libbed rendition of "Goodnight Irene."

"Jerry Lee, you've stopped your ramblin', and you've stopped your gamblin'," he sang at Friday's party. "You've got a nice home down in Mississippi, and you've got a beautiful, loving wife."

Krueberg nets honor

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — University of Iowa senior Jeanne Krueberg has been named Big Ten Conference Cross Country Athlete of the Month, league officials announced yesterday.

Krueberg, a native of Claremont, Minn., went 3-3 in the month of September, capturing three individual titles at all three of Iowa's competitions. She led the Hawkeyes to first place at the Hawkeye Open Sept. 9, finishing the 5,000-meter Finkbine course in a time of 17:56.

The Hawkeyes senior's second win came at the Illinois State Redbird Invitational Sept. 23, where she led the Hawkeyes to a perfect score, 15, and the team title while capturing a win for herself with a personal-best 17:17 time.

Krueberg bettered that PR at the Illinois Invitational Sept. 30, recording yet another win with a 17:12.37 time, pacing the Hawkeyes to second place behind national power Nebraska. A three-time all-American in track and field, Krueberg is competing only her third year of cross country.

The Hawkeyes make their final home appearance of 1989 at the Iowa Open, Friday, Oct. 6 at 4:00 p.m. at Finkbine Field Course in Iowa City.

Iowa ranked No. 7

(AP) — The University of Iowa women's cross country team is ranked seventh on the first NCAA coaches poll released yesterday.

Villanova owns the top spot with 198 points and six first place votes. Iowa registered 130 points. Indiana is the only other Big Ten Conference team rated. The Hoosiers are fifth. The Hawkeyes captured titles at the Hawkeye Open and Illinois State Redbird Invitational. Iowa finished one point behind No. 4 Nebraska at last weekend's Illinois Invitational. This Friday, Oct. 6, the Hawkeyes compete against Western Illinois, Northern Iowa, Morningside College and Iowa Wesleyan in their final home competition at the Iowa Open. Meet time is 4:00 p.m. at Iowa's 5,000-meter Finkbine Field Course.

Bears rule over Eagles

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak threw three touchdown passes and Richard Dent led a defense that overcame Randall Cunningham's fourth-quarter heroics as the Chicago Bears remained unbeaten with a 27-13 victory over Philadelphia Monday night.

Tomczak had a 14-yard touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon and a 1-yarder to Matt Suhey in the second quarter, then threw a 36-yard scoring pass to James Thornton with 6:08 left in the game after the Eagles had come within a touchdown.

He finished with 24 of 38 for 266 yards. Dent, meanwhile, was credited with 2 1/2 of Chicago's four sacks. The Bears, who held the Eagles to just 73 yards in the first half, also intercepted four Cunningham passes.

But the Eagles quarterback, limited to just 53 passing yards before halftime, came alive in the fourth period after the Bears had taken a 20-3 lead on Neal Anderson's 2-yard touchdown run with 3:13 left in the third quarter.

major-league record. Craig lost 24 games and Zimmer was the Mets' opening-day third baseman. He lasted 14 games, hitting .077.

"I learned a lot in those years," said Craig, who improved to 5-22 in 1963. "You have to look for the positives, try to build on that."

"Sure the Mets were terrible in 1962, but within seven years they won the World Series."

The last time the Giants won the Series was 1954, when the franchise was in New York. They haven't played in the World Series since losing to the New York Yankees in 1962.

The Cubs? They haven't won a World Series since 1908. There wasn't even a Wrigley Field then.

Craig learned from his long days with the Mets.

He was a member of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1964 and helped them win a World Series. In 1984, Craig was the pitching coach on the world champion Detroit Tigers.

Zimmer's first managerial job came with the San Diego Padres in 1972-73. He finished last each season, and lost 103 games in 1973.

From there, it was on to Boston, where things were looking good in 1978.

But the Red Sox blew a 14-game lead over the New York Yankees in mid-July and lost a one-game playoff when Bucky Dent hit a three-run homer off Mike Torrez at Fenway Park.

"That's history," Zimmer said. "I'm just thinking about the Giants right now."

Zimmer and Craig are finally in a position where they can't lose.

Craig took over for Jim Davenport in late 1985 when the Giants lost 100 games. The next season, he turned them into winners and in 1987 the Giants came within one game of going to the World Series.

The Cubs were 77-85 last season and many observers predicted a last-place finish this year after a 9-23 record in spring training.

turning a pitcher, even for the playoffs."

Gaston took over as manager for Jimmy Williams on May 15, but supposedly for just a few days.

Toronto general manager Pat Gillick said at the time it was 99 percent certain Gaston would not get the job.

But when George Steibrenner wouldn't let Lou Piniella out of his contract with the New York Yankees, Gillick decided to give the job to Gaston.

"I didn't think I'd be here in this position, but I thought the club would be here," said Gaston, a quiet Walter Alston type.

"I told the players my door is open and I'm willing to work things out," he said.

Gaston also smoothed things out with the fiery George Bell, who had his problems with Williams.

Bell has a sore elbow and will be used as a designated hitter if he's not any better by Tuesday night. If Bell can play, Lee Mazzilli will be the DH.

La Russa and Gaston both like to take things one day at a time.

"You hear certain things over and over in sports and the one you hear the most is play it one at a time," La Russa said.

"You hear it because that's the one that makes the most sense. I think the key in a lot of sports, especially major-league baseball, is being a consistent ballclub from April to October. The only way you can be consistent is to survive the low times and win the next day."

the child consents.

Polonia was in Milwaukee for a series between the Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers and was arrested Aug. 16 at the Pfister Hotel by police who were investigating a report that the girl was missing.

The criminal complaint said the girl accompanied Polonia back to the hotel after a game. According to the complaint, the girl told authorities she and Polonia had intercourse twice, once before the girl's mother called the hotel and talked to the player and once after the phone call.

The complaint said the girl told authorities that, after Polonia answered the phone call, he asked her if she was a minor and "she indicated that she was and she believes that she may have told him that she was 16 years old."

Polonia was quoted in the complaint as saying that he was told by one of the girl's friends that she was 19.

DiMotto said the charge against Polonia was issued because Polonia had sex with the girl after being informed she might be a minor.

He said the misdemeanor charge was issued because the girl's family said she did not want to testify in court. The girl is now 16.

DiMotto had asked for an immediate sentence of 30 days in jail and a $5,000 fine at the August sentencing hearing or, if sentencing was delayed, that Polonia be given a 90-day term and a $10,000 fine. DiMotto said earlier that immediate sentencing would have been more of a punishment for Polonia because it would have made him miss the remainder of the season, but said Monday he was glad that a presentence report was made first.

Ryan shelves talk of retirement, lists goals

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Nolan Ryan, who amazed the baseball world in 1989 with his unmatched strikeout pitching, said Monday he will go for his 300th victory next year and "be disappointed" if he doesn't get it.

The 42-year-old Texas Rangers' right-hander is 11 victories short of the 300 plateau, considered an automatic ticket to baseball's Hall of Fame. This year, his 23rd major league season and first with Texas, he won 16 games, his highest total since 1977.

"I should get 300 if I stay healthy and pitch all season," said Ryan, who was clocked by a radar gun at 99 mph in one game this season.

Saturday, Ryan recorded his 301st strikeout of the year in a three-hit, 2-0 victory over California, after pitching perfect ball for 7 1-3 innings. He became the oldest pitcher by 11 years to fan 300 in a season. He led the majors in strikeouts with 66 more than runner-up Mark Langston.

Ryan's biggest milestone came Aug. 22 when he struck out his 5,000th batter.

"My return hinged on how I fared physically and how my family enjoyed it," Ryan said. "Going in, I had programmed that it was my last year. I thought along those lines until the last six weeks."

"It turned out to be, if not the most enjoyable season, one that would rate up there with the top couple of seasons. The Rangers treated my family great. They are kid-oriented. In my last several seasons in Houston, my kids wouldn't even go to the Astrodome."

Ryan, who will make $1.4 million on his 1990 contract, signed with the Rangers after Houston allowed him to become a free agent. The Rangers have offered an option for the 1991 season, but he said, "I haven't even thought that far ahead."

Asked if he would like to go for 6,000 strikeouts, Ryan quipped, "I'll probably get that in slow-pitch softball some day."

Ryan had a 3.20 ERA in 32 starts and allowed the opposition a batting average of only .187, the lowest in the major leagues. Ryan, who has a record five career no-hitters, took no-hitters into the eighth inning on five occasions this year before losing them.

Ryan said he will decide soon whether to run for Texas commissioner of agriculture as the Texas Farm Bureau has asked.

"I have to decide whether I can pitch and campaign," said Ryan, who owns 1,000 head of cattle on his ranch near Alvin. "I have to study the pros and cons of whether I can do both."

In 1989, Ryan also: Reached the 300-strikeout mark for the sixth time, a figure that has been reached only 22 times in history.

Became the oldest pitcher to win an All-Star Game.

Set a club record with 301 strikeouts, averaging 9.4 per start and 11.3 per nine innings, the third-best ratio ever.

Intramurals offer midterm relief

Joseph Wagner
The Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa Department of Recreational Services has two intramural activities to offer students mid-term relief.

Coed wallyball and coed innertube waterpolo will begin in mid-October. Entry deadline for both sports is Thursday Oct. 5 at 4 p.m. in room E216 of the Field House. Play begins on Oct. 11 for wallyball and Oct. 15 for innertube waterpolo.

Contact Rec. Services at 335-9293 for more information.

The third week of intramural football got underway over the weekend with Sunday carrying a full slate of games.

In the men's independent league, What's Up, Sove's Machiene, The Gees, The Governors, No Clue, The Stuck Zippers, Ek-Lance, The Woodes, T. Galaxy, The Cheaters, Back Door-Front Door, Last Hurrah, Bubble House, The Dead, Dets II, Mom T., D-Boys, Temple

Slugs and Assault & Battery were all victorious.

The social fraternity league saw Sigma Tau Gamma, Sigma Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Gamma Delta, Kappa Sigma, Delta Upsilon and Lambda Chi Alpha emerge as winners in their respective contests.

In the men's residence hall division, Taste Buds, Slater No. 7, Merrill Marauders, N. 2nd to None, Flight Nine, Herring House, Hillcrest Homies, Bordwell Posse and Goofy Schabbies were winners.

For students, another alternative to studying is the University's sports club system. Club sports range from triathlon to juggling.

Other clubs are aikido, badminton, bicycle racing, bowling, fencing, ice hockey, kayaking, lacrosse, rowing, men's and women's rugby, sailing, cross country and downhill skiing, soccer, table tennis, taekwondo, volleyball, wallyball and waterpolo.

Managers prepare for championship tilts

AL bosses tell teams to enjoy

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Tony La Russa and Cito Gaston have a simple message for their clubs: go out and have fun.

The Oakland Athletics and Toronto Blue Jays had a mid-afternoon workout Monday to prepare for the American League playoffs starting Tuesday night.

While La Russa wants his club to relax, the manager rejects criticism that the A's are too laid back.

"That's one of my raw nerves," La Russa said. "It seems like some media people say, unless in the clubhouse before or after the game you have players talking controversial stuff, putting the opponents down, or bragging about themselves, that it's not an emotional clubhouse."

The A's, despite injuries to Jose Canseco, Dennis Eckersley and Walter Weiss, finished with a major-league high 99 victories and their second straight AL West title.

"When you watch us play, there is no way this club doesn't have a lot of heat," La Russa said. "We slide as hard as anybody, we run the ball out as hard as anybody. I just don't think we talk as much as the writers would like us to."

Dave Stewart (21-9) is scheduled to pitch in Game 1 against 17-game winner Dave Stieb.

Both pitchers have complained of having "tired arms" at times in the last month, but are ready to go.

AL

Gaston said right-hander Todd Stottlemire (7-7) will pitch Game 2 and then the Blue Jays will come back with left-handers Mike Flanagan and Jimmy Key at the Sky-Dome.

"Oakland has a good right-handed hitting team and Todd has been pitching well for us," Gaston said. "I know he's young, but I believe in a four-man rotation."

"In 1973, the Mets skipped over George Stone and he had a good season for them. It's not worth

Old acquaintances meet in NL

CHICAGO (AP)—For a couple of winners, Roger Craig and Don Zimmer know a lot about losing.

Wednesday night in Chicago, Craig, manager of the San Francisco Giants, and Zimmer, manager of the Chicago Cubs, will shake hands, then do the best they can to beat each other in the National League playoffs.

"Don and I have been friends for a long time," Craig said. "And no matter who wins, we'll still be friends."

"If we're not in the World Series, I'll be rooting for the Chicago Cubs."

The mutual admiration between Craig and Zimmer dates back to the mid-1950s when they were teammates on the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Their careers started out promising; they were members of the Dodgers' World Series champions in 1955.

Craig, a rookie, started Game 5 of the Series and beat the New York Yankees 5-3. He pitched six innings and allowed four hits before Clem Labine finished.

"That was the only champion Brooklyn ever had and I was there at the start of my career," Craig said.

Zimmer, an infielder, played in four games of the 1955 Series and was 2-for-9.

"Don could hit," Craig said. "But he had a couple of serious head injuries that hurt his career."

In 1956, Zimmer was hit in the head by a pitch from Cincinnati's Hal Jeffcoat.

"I don't think about what might have been," Zimmer said. "I consider myself lucky."

Well, some of it wasn't exactly pretty.

In 1962, Zimmer and Craig again were teammates, with the expansion New York Mets.

Perles: We're tougher than we've ever been EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Toughness. That's one thing Coach George Perles says he'll never stop emphasizing as his Michigan State team changes year after year, and even week after week.

"I think the difference every year is we're tougher now than we've ever been," Perles said Monday at his weekly news luncheon.

"I still see some room for us to be even tougher. Toughness will never lose a place on our football team, between the white lines, on the football field, within the rules."

The 1-2 Spartans, coming off tough losses to No. 1 Notre Dame and No.

2 Miami, Fla., are looking ahead to Saturday, when they open their Big Ten season against the Iowa Hawkeyes, 2-1, at Iowa City.

Despite their record, they think they've learned some valuable lessons from competing with the nation's best teams.

"I think we've had a very good test. Our players never went into a game thinking they couldn't win," Perles said. "We should be in good mental stage for this game."

"We're 1-2 and we're not happy with it. If we do well in the remaining eight games there will be something nice for us in the end." Michigan State's two top running backs, Blake Ezor and Hyland Hickson, are injured and question marks for Saturday. That means the Spartans will have to rely on backups Scott Selzer and Tico Duckett.

There's a small chance that Ezor will return this week. He missed Saturday's 26-20 loss against the Hurricanes with a shoulder injury suffered in the 21-13 loss to Notre Dame.

"Will Blake play? I don't think so. Is he healthy? Whew is he ready. He's got fresh legs and he's ready to fly, I've told you pound for pound he's as tough as they come," Perles said.

Hickson twisted his knee and missed most of the second half against Miami.

Perles said Spartan opponents may be seeing more tricks by punter Josh Butland, who rushed for 31 yards Saturday on a botched punt.

"That wasn't a fluke. That guy can run," Perles said. "Why don't you run him more? You worry about him getting hurt. We might, we're going to look at protection very closely. He's got good speed, he's an athlete."

Perles said he's confident going up against the Hawkeyes, a team he describes as consistent and with a solid defense.

"Iowa is the same scheme, different players. They have a good solid football team," the coach said. "Their first game, they got upset. But they had a pretty good test."

"I'm optimistic about our team, our players. I do feel we're getting where I want them to be as far as toughness. Toughness, toughness, toughness, toughness. Within the rules."

Irish remain on top of writers' poll

(AP) — While Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz continues to insist that his Fighting Irish are not a perfect football team, they remained the near-unanimous choice at the top of the rankings on Monday.

The Irish, who supplanted Michigan as the No. 1 team after beating the Wolverines on Sept. 16 and have remained there since, received 57 first-place votes from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and broadcasters. The Irish, who improved to 4-0 Saturday with a 40-7 victory over Purdue, got 1,497 of a possible 1,500 points.

Miami, Fla. (4-0), which received the other three first-place votes and remained second in the poll with 1,426 points, beat Michigan State 26-20 on Saturday.

Moving from fifth to third, its highest ranking since 1977, was Colorado. The Buffaloes (4-0) received 1,344 points after a 45-28 trouncing of Washington. The loss, Washington's worst at home in 60 years, dropped the Huskies, who had been 21st, from the poll.

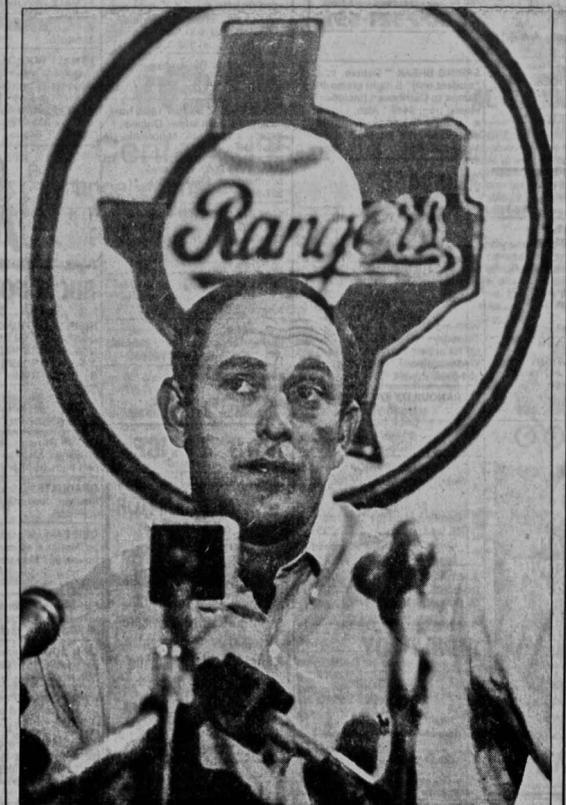

The strength of Colorado's victory convinced voters to move it ahead of fellow Big Eight member Nebraska. The Cornhuskers (4-0) fell from third to fourth with 1,344 points.

Brooke lets own expectations hinder performance on links

Rita Heimes
The Daily Iowan

Overpsyched and overpar. Iowa golfer Kelley Brooke is plagued by what she calls "trying too hard," and it has hurt her game.

In two tournaments this season, Brooke shot 18-hole, first-round scores of 80 and 83 on par 73 courses.

"Sometimes I get so focused I forget this game is really fun," Brooke said. "The biggest challenge in golf is the mental aspect. My problem is that I'm trying too hard to play really well, and I get overpsyched."

Thinking too much about shooting low numbers and performing well has disrupted her game in the first round of tournaments, Brooke said.

"My first rounds have been awful," Brooke said. "I need to just stop and think, 'Wait a second, what's the purpose?' I need to enjoy the whole experience of traveling with the team, college life and having fun."

Brooke's mental struggles have not gone unnoticed by Iowa coach Diane Thomason.

"Sometimes Kelley has a hard time concentrating, and she gets distracted," Thomason said. "She needs to focus in on her task. She tries too hard to get the job done."

Brooke has been working to improve her mental game. This year she changed her major from communications to sports management, and is enrolled in a sports psychology course which she says

"Sometimes I get so focused I forget this game is really fun. The biggest challenge in golf is the mental aspect. My problem is that I'm trying too hard to play really well, and I get overpsyched."

has helped her mental preparation. "My personal life in the past has gotten in my way," Brooke said. "Now I try to separate that from golf, and I'm working on dealing with my anxieties. I do a lot of imagery."

The class has also helped Brooke make a possible career decision. Although professional golf is still a possibility in her future, Brooke now considers pursuing a graduate degree in sports psychology.

"I could offer a lot to golfers," Brooke explained. "It would be easy to build a trust with them. I think all golfers experience similar problems."

Thomason said she recruited Brooke because she was "one of the best high school players in the state of Iowa." Brooke graduated from Bettendorf High School in 1986 and was captain and MVP of her team. She was picked as an all-state performer and finished as the Iowa state champion that year.

She has been a solid player for Iowa, and even this season, despite her first-round woes, Brooke has come back to finish among the top individual golfers for the Hawkeyes in the past three tournaments.

Now in her final year at Iowa, Brooke said she is finally beginning to appreciate her sport.

"I'm really starting to learn golf now," Brooke said. "I've known the physical part for years. Now I've just got to work on the mental part."

Polonia sentenced on misdemeanor charge

MILWAUKEE (AP) — New York Yankees outfielder Luis Polonia was sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $1,500 Monday on the misdemeanor charge of having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

Milwaukee County circuit judge Thomas Doherty also ordered Polonia to make a $10,000 contribution to the Sinai Samaritan Medical Center's sexual assault treatment center in Milwaukee.

Polonia, who pleaded no contest in August to the charge of having sexual intercourse with a child, will report Wednesday to begin his sentence.

He could be sent to the Milwaukee House of Correction, but his attorney, Dennis Coffey, asked Monday that his client be moved out of Milwaukee County, preferably to Madison, where Polonia played minor league baseball and has acquaintances.

Polonia probably will have work release privileges.

"I made a mistake and I'm really sorry for it," Polonia told Doherty before the sentence was imposed. "I'm a human being and anybody can make the mistake I made."

Doherty said that although Polonia's relationship with the girl was consensual, the purpose of the law is to protect the naive "from predators, if you will."

"Not to impose some jail sentence would diminish the significance of this incident," Doherty said.

The judge said he hoped the sentence would send a message to young men like Polonia who travel around the country "to think twice, three or four times and then not do it."

Polonia, who was traded from Oakland to New York during the season, could have received a maximum penalty of nine months in jail and $10,000 in fines.

Milwaukee County assistant district attorney John DiMotto argued that Polonia used his celebrity status to lure the girl into having sex with him. He asked for the maximum sentence Monday but said he was satisfied with the sentence handed down.

"I hope this message just goes beyond people with celebrity status," DiMotto said. "I hope it goes out to all adults — you cannot take advantage of children."

Coffey said the imposition of a jail term could have a detrimental effect on Polonia's future because the player's visa from the Dominican Republic expires soon. He asked that Polonia be allowed to do community service instead of jail time.

"I'm obviously disappointed for a lot of reasons," Coffey said. "I'm disappointed about the jail time. I'm surprised at the length, I'm not surprised he got jail time."

Polonia, dressed in all white Monday, slipped out a side door of the courtroom and was not available for comment.

A Yankees spokesman said the team was waiting to hear from the attorneys before commenting. Coffey said the Yankees might also penalize Polonia.

After Polonia's plea, Doherty delayed sentencing to learn more about the case. The judge refused Monday to release a copy of the presentence report to the media.
