Dalai Lama wins Nobel Peace Prize for struggle

The Dalai Lama, spiritual and temporal ruler of Tibet, whose title means Prince of Truth, won the Nobel Peace Prize on Thursday for decades of non-violent struggle to free his country from China.

"My case is nothing special. I am a simple Buddhist monk — no more, no less," he said, adding that he would use the award for "freedom and peace and to work for Tibetan people."

The other prize winners were Jimmy Carter, president of the United States, for his negotiations and "understanding" in the Middle East, and John Donne, a British peace activist, for "his public engagement with and sharing of the insights of a great English poet and statesman in the service of world peace ."

The prize money, about $100,000, will be shared by the Dalai Lama, who is living in exile in India, and the United Nations, which represents the international community.

"It was my wish for the Nobel Peace Prize to benefit the well-being of the Tibetan people," said the Dalai Lama in a statement.

In 1959, the Dalai Lama fled to India to escape a Chinese military crackdown on the Tibetan rebels. China, which invaded Tibet in 1950, has since occupied the country from China.

The Dalai Lama was later awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his "struggle for freedom and peace and for the development of international law between nations, especially between Tibetans and China."

"It is a fitting tribute to his work on behalf of freedom and human rights," the Dalai Lama said.

The prize money will be used to promote human rights and to support the Dalai Lama's fight for the restoration of Tibet as an independent country.

Deborah DeHaan The Daily Globe

"The Dalai Lama's rejection of violence and his emphasis on respect for all living beings is a message that resonates with people around the world," she added.

The prize money will be used to promote human rights and to support the Dalai Lama's fight for the restoration of Tibet as an independent country.

Former PTL leader Jim Bakker and news media will await the results of the trial Thursday. He was found guilty of 24 counts of fraud and racketeering.

Word Histories' brings to light the forgotten origins of words

The word "loan," for example, is derived from the Germanic word "leuan," which means "to give." However, "loan" has taken on a broader meaning over time, including "unpaid" and "borrowed."

"The word "loan" is a testament to the complexity of language," she said. "It has been used in various ways throughout history, from giving money to someone to borrowing something for a limited time."

Dentistry demand to increase
Longer life expectancy brightens future of dentistry students

Sonya Dzenas
The Daily Iowan
The future of dentistry has never looked brighter. A recent study conducted by John Reinhardt, a professor in the department of family and preventive medicine at the University of Iowa College of Dentistry, found that the demand for dentists will be in demand over the next few years.

"There has been a significant increase in the number of people seeking dental care," Reinhardt said. "This is due to the growing number of people who are living longer and seeking to maintain their natural teeth for as long as possible."

According to the study, the number of people seeking dental care has increased by 28% over the past decade. The study also found that the demand for dentists is expected to increase by 15% over the next five years.

"This is good news for dentists," Reinhardt said. "It means that there will be plenty of opportunities for those who are interested in pursuing a career in dentistry."

In addition to the increase in demand for dental care, the study also found that the number of dental students is expected to increase by 30% over the next five years. This is because more schools are offering programs in dentistry, making it easier for students to pursue this field.

"The future of dentistry is bright," Reinhardt said. "There are many opportunities for those who are interested in pursuing a career in this field."

The study was conducted by the University of Iowa College of Dentistry and involved a survey of 1,000 dentists and 500 dental students.

"We are excited to see the increase in demand for dental care," said greetie. "This is a great opportunity for those who are interested in pursuing a career in dentistry."

The study was funded by the American Dental Association and the American Dental Education Association.

Research advances biocatalysis

Liu, Beardsley and Ryu were selected based on the progress they have made in research towards their master's theses, their academic records and letters of recommendation.

Liu, a graduate student in the UI College of Pharmacy, said all of the fellowships were sponsored by Kodak.

Robert Beardsley and Keungarp Ryu, students in the UI College of Pharmacy, have been conducting studies in the area of biocatalysis and trying to recommend an enzyme that might have to the synthesis of a new biocatalyst, a bacterial enzyme that could catalyze the introduction of an organic group into the internal structure of a molecule.

Working with Gregory Rosazza, a UI professor of chemistry and materials engineering, Beardsley is working to improve this technique from a small-scale device to a large-scale one for use in industrial-scale production. "We studied the use of enzymes in organic reactions," said Jonathan Dordick, assistant professor of chemical engineering. "The enzyme was so effective that we found that enzymes are not only capable of performing reactions, but also have a natural tendency that a typical organic chemical reaction cannot." "If we can do this on a more consistent and economical scale, we may be able to make this process more attractive to industry," said Beardsley.

Bush pushes for stricter drug penalties by leaders of nation's higher education

Andy Brownstein
The Daily Courier
President George Bush wants the leaders of higher education to know they will not be able to ignore the drug drama in a campaign run by the White House, according to an interview with university leaders in a White House meeting.

In a meeting with leaders of 20 of the nation's leading universities, Bush has urged that the nation's colleges and universities sever ties with the drug trade. The drug war has cost billions of dollars, and the problem is getting worse.

Laws that have not been successfully eradicated, in the last 20 years

Cathi Barnett, a sophomore from Missouri who works for UI\'s alcohol and drug awareness office, said that UI students need more help to understand the dangers of drugs.

"We don\'t have a problem with drugs," Barnett said. "But we have a problem with alcohol."

Barnett said that alcohol awareness office has become more active in recent years.

There have been no deaths reported from alcohol-related incidents at UI since 1989, she said.

However, Barnett said that students do need more help to understand the dangers of alcohol.

"We need to do a better job of educating students," she said.

The University of Iowa College of Health and Human Sciences needs undergraduates and graduate students to serve on the All-University Committee on Counseling.

The position involves meeting once a month to discuss issues related to student counseling.

"We need more people to serve on the committee," said Dr. James Smith, chair of the committee.

Smith said that the committee needs more members to ensure that all students are represented.

Plight of newspapers

All week long edition after several hundred Associated Press newspapers have been given in Des Moines to share their revenues with the publisher. It's a matter of survival.

Such meetings are good for the field of journalism. In addition to getting payment made for the officer for a while, nationwide conferences allow editors to learn of the latest trends at what everyone else is doing.

But in the Case of Managing Editors meeting was profaned by a sore note. The latest studies show that about half of all U.S. newspapers do not publish every day.

That's opposed to about three-quarters of all papers in 1976. Numbers show that someone who has anything to do with the printing press would produce the printed word. And that certainly was the feeling at the APME convention.

Television and other modern devices are now realities that newspapers have to try to compete with. It's merely a reader's matter.

It's true that newspapers have to try to compete with. It's merely a reader's matter.

That's firmly believe that... we don't. We will fade... might be responding to the... the state... to "the state..."
Privately funded rocket burns

VANDENBOOM AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — A private company that is working to build and launch satellites said Thursday that it has successfully launched a rocket designed and built solely with private funds.

"There will be no federal funds involved," said President and Chief Executive Officer John H. H. Hurley of Aerospace Technology, a company that bought and refurbished a commercial rocket designed and built by an anonymous source.

"We wanted to prove it could work and that it could be done," Hurley said. "Everyone believed it could, but we wanted to show they were wrong."

"People were talking, 'It's not going to work,' " Hurley said. "But now we can say, 'Yes, it can work."

The rocket was launched from an airport in southern California at 6:45 pm.

The launch, which cost $7.6 million, was designed and built solely with private funds, Hurley said.

"We launched it down here because we had to," Hurley said.

"Our goal is to launch a satellite in the next year," he added.

"We had no money and had to work with what we had," Hurley said.

"It was a struggle, but we did it, " he added.

"The launch was a success," Hurley said.

"Next year, we plan to launch another," he added.

"We have no plans to stop," Hurley said.

The company said it would be launching another rocket in the next two months.

"Our ultimate goal is to have a satellite in orbit," Hurley said.

"We have a long way to go, but we are excited," he added.

"We are looking for investors and will be launching another rocket in the next two months," Hurley said.

U.S. indemnity helped Norgia
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, describing the abortive envoy trip as the administration's first "fleecing operation," said Thursday the effort to overthrow Gen. Manuel Antonio Norgia was foiled by a misjudgment of the rebels as well as by American foes' lack of flexibility.

"Every administration has a misjudgment in one way or another," a senior administration official who insisted on anonymity said. "This is our first one, so we'll fix it.

"We're not being blundering, if you will," he said, the first forthright official admissions of a "fleecing" operation.

Another U.S. official, evaluating the events of the past two days, and the administration's role in Panama were prepared to let it be known that the envoy was a misjudgment of the rebels, as well as by American foes' lack of flexibility.

"This was a misjudgment," he said. "If you will, the first forthright official admissions of a "fleecing" operation.

Hawks eye rebound against N. Illinois

W. Cross Country

The Hawks will have their first meet since last year's 1-4 loss to Minnesota Wednesday at 130 p.m. in Carrier-Hawksway.

"Greatest was the most diff- erent," Iowa coach Beth Nelson said. "We've held fall and spring meets against Western Illinois, but not this season in the Hawkeye Classic and Western Michigan.

The Hawks and the Western- Illinois have met 14 times, with Iowa leading the series 10-3. Last season, Iowa defeated Western Illinois both in the Hawkeye Classic and at the Western Michigan invitational.

The Hawks have won 13 meet- overs, lost nine and tied one. They are led by senior Mike Loo's average of 13:39 per mile and junior Jon Mier's average of 13:11 per mile.

The meet will be held in a small rural area of the state. The Hawks have a chance to win in the meet against a competition that is tough.

Cubs even NLCS with 9-5 triumph

ChICAGO (AP) - The Chicago Cubs still have a ways to go, but they're not giving up. They showed the Chicago White Sox and Oakland A's that they're for real Saturday and the Pirates that they're not giving up.

"We did it in 9-5," said Mark Grace, who hit a three-run home run. "We did it in 9-5," added Mike Von Oehsen, who had two singles, a double by Grace in the third and the biggest hit of the day, a three-run home run. "We did it in 9-5," said Ron Wuerffel, who drove in three runs.

"I would like to see this match as a time to experience," Michigan State coach Larry Proctor said. "When we were losing in the first inning, we tried to do some different plays and change it's a good time to get comfortable with the way people play on the court.

Words fly during AL series break

Tampa Bay - The Tampa Bay Rays and Oakland Athletics are trying to gear up for the American League playoffs. Thursday and Friday, the teams will play two games to try to get into the playoffs.

The Rays won both games in the series, winning 6-4 and 3-2, but the A's have the best record in the league at 75-49. The Rays are 31-40.

The Rays are a little more experienced, but the A's have more power at the plate. The A's average 10 runs per game; and junior catcher Ernie Whitt's average is 7.30.

The meet will be run at Finkbine Stadium and the meet will be on Tuesday and Thursday.

McGwire airs out Utah

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mark McGwire, while starting to make his mark as a college quarterback, still gets a kick out of remembering the day he threw for 117 yards in a high school game.

The 6-foot-8 San Diego State quarterback is coming off one of the most prolific passing days in the school's history.

Before he loaded up the quarterback categories, McGwire was a star of another kind — as an offensive tackle for Bishop O'Dowd High School in Oakland.

That day in 1983, he threw for 117 yards.

"It was a big deal," said Brian Gaston, McGwire's high school coach. "It wasn't the most yards ever, but it was big for him."

McGwire went on to star in college at Stanford, where he was named a consensus All-American.

"I'm glad I did it," he said. "It's something I'm proud of."

Field Hockey

In a seven-over par round at the Doonesbury Invitational golf tourney in Albion, N.Y., Iowa's six-man team scored 313, just one stroke behind Ohio State, which scored 312. "That's the best we've ever had," Iowa Coach Eugene T. Maleska said. "It's the first time we have ever been in the top 10 nationally." Iowa had never been in the top 10 nationally since the team was ranked seventh in 1965.

The name Nile Kinnick is synonymous with Iowa football. This week, Sports Editor Bryce Miller continues his series on Iowa's first 100 years with a look at perhaps the greatest Hawkeye gridder.

When the offense needs a big play, Iowa coach Hayden Fry knows he can call upon reserve tailback Mike Saunders to make things happen.

Freshman punter Jim Huisak recently took the starting slot from Sean Snyder. Against Tulsa, Huisak averaged 43 yards per boot, a career best.

The Michigan State-Iowa series stands at 12-12-2. Despite the parity in recent years, the Spartans are heavily favored to win in '89.

An Ironman in every sense
Third of a Six-Part Series

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

At the age of nine, Nile Kinnick Jr. was already having an effect on area newspapers. Iowa's 1939 Heisman Trophy winner wasn't known across the country, but alone across town in the central Iowa city of Adel.
But his first job was delivering newspapers for The Des Moines Register. As a Hawkeye, his exploits on the football field would shape those very pages he had delivered 11 years earlier.
Off the field, the effect was equally as great.
"I don't think I've ever met another person to equal him," Kinnick teammate Ervin Prasse said. And he emphasized the point. "... Ever."

The University of Iowa renamed Iowa Stadium to Nile Kinnick Stadium in 1972.

In his hometown of Adel, the high school football field, Kinnick-Feller Field, honors him and Major League Baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Feller.

Only two numbers have been retired in Iowa football history, Kinnick's legendary No. 24 and three-time All-American guard and 1955 Outland Trophy winner Calvin Jones (62).

Besides winning the Heisman in 1939, Kinnick was named to every major All-American squad.

Kinnick was the foundation of the immortal Ironmen, leading the Hawkeyes to a 6-1-1 record in '39. Iowa beat Notre Dame and Ohio State.

During that year, the Indiana basketball team was preparing for a game with the Hawkeyes. As was the custom, the Hoosier football team dropped the players a note in the student paper, wishing good luck — but warning of one player's court savviness.

Dear Basketball Team:
Last November we played Iowa and a young sophomore powerhouse. Nile Kinnick turned out to be papa, mamma and sonny trouble. We understand this driving athlete heads a strong Iowa five which has a "date" with you Monday in the fieldhouse. Please don't forget to handcuff Mr. Trouble in that game for, although he's a guard, we hear opponents find him underneath their basket too, often.

Wishing you goals of luck.
The Indiana football team

Prasse was one of many who knew Kinnick that had a bottomless well of compliments about him.

"Kinnick wasn't remembered only as a football player," Prasse said. "I thought he would have become a senator or the President of the United States. He was a damn genius."

But a world at war in 1943 took the life of the Phi Beta Kappa graduate flyboy. The morning of June 2, 1943, his Navy Grumman F4F-4 Wildcat single-seat fighter developed a serious oil leak over the Gulf of Paria off the coast of Trinidad.

The flightdeck of the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington was full of planes, and young ensign was unable to land. At 9:30 a.m., Kinnick made an emergency landing on calm water.

When a search party arrived less than 10 minutes later, all that remained was a slick where the plane had gone down. Nile Kinnick was dead at age 24.

On being called to military service on Dec. 4, 1941, Kinnick kept a diary. Every day he listed activities and started the passage with a goal or idea.

On June 1, 1943, the final entry of Nile Kinnick was penned:

Tuesday, June 1:
How I wish I could sing and play the piano!
It is a sad mistake to try to be bad man in everything you attempt. The axiom "If it is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well," has its limitations. Stay on the ball most of the time, but learn to coast between moments of out effort.
People must come before profit!

But in measure of respect and accomplishments as a true student-athlete, few will come before Nile Kinnick.

Hawkeye Profile: Mike Saunders

"My official title is running back and I would like to carry the ball a lot more. I feel the coaches should have confidence in me carrying the ball."

—Mike Saunders

Saunders is Iowa's Mr. Everything in the clutch

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Getting into the end zone.

That's the one thing Iowa running back Mike Saunders wants to do in 1989 so he hasn't done yet. So far, that's about the only thing left for him to do.

In each of Iowa's first three games of the season against Oregon, Iowa State and Tulsa, Saunders has gathered at least 100 yards of total offense.

But even though the versatile sophomore from Milton, Wis., accepts his role as an all-purpose performer, he would still prefer to find a permanent home in the Hawkeye backfield.

"My official title is running back and I would like to carry the ball a lot more," Saunders said. "I feel the coaches should have confidence in me carrying the ball.

"I just hope I don't get known as 'the running back they put in to catch passes.'"

Like it or not, he is known as the guy who catches passes. And the guy who runs for big gains and the guy who, if called upon to do so, could pick up yardage with his arm.

Saunders threw for his first touchdown as a Hawkeye in last week's game with the Golden Hurricane when he hit Travis Watkins for a 63-yard scoring strike.

The play developed after quarterback Matt Rodgers handed off to tailback Tony Stewart, who gave the ball to Saunders on a reverse. Saunders then pulled up and hit a wide-open Watkins, who gathered himself, and streaked toward the end zone.

The first time Saunders really made his presence felt as an offensive threat was in his first ever start against Minnesota as a redshirt freshman last season.

After Stewart went down with a knee injury in the Ohio State game, Iowa football coach Hayden Fry gave Saunders the nod to start against the Golden Gophers.

Iowa won that game 31-22, and all Saunders did was scramble for 123 yards and three touchdowns. He was also the second-leading receiver in the game with 58 yards.

Although a multi-talented athlete, Saunders must battle juniors Nick Bell and Stewart for playing time. But Saunders insists the competition with the other two backs is a healthy one.

"The competition level is there, but I don't think it's the typical attitude of competition," Saunders said. "We encourage each other because we still make up a team. We like to see each other do well as much as we like to do well ourselves."

But when talking to the 6-foot-1, 195-pound Hawkeye, it's easy to feel his intensity.

"I always want to be in the game when it comes right down to it," Saunders said. "I don't think you should be out (on the field) if you don't want the ball in clutch situations. I just hope when they call on me, I'll be able to do it for them."

All Saunders would have to do is review the game films of Iowa's first three games to realize he is more than capable of coming through for his team.

Going into the Michigan State game Saturday, Saunders is second on the Iowa team in rushing and receiving yards, averaging 7.6 yards per carry and 11.5 yards per catch. He is also valuable as a kickoff returner.

Fry said getting Saunders in the game depends on the opposing defense.

"We had more things planned for Tulsa, and they really did some good things against us," Fry said, "so we couldn't get the ball to Mike as much as we wanted to."

With Michigan State coming to Iowa City Saturday, one might think Saunders, with his versatility, could be a key ingredient for the Hawkeyes against an often-dominating Spartan defense. But Saunders just plans to wait his turn and do what he can to contribute.

"With the coaches feeling I can go out into the game at more than one position, I hope that would get me on the field a little more," Saunders said.

"Saturday I had a throw for a touchdown but, besides that, there wasn't much else I did. I kind of felt like I had an off day. But if that's the worst off day I have all season, I'll be happy."

Hawkeye Profile: Jim Hujsak

Out of danger
Freshman punter Jim Hujsak punts out of his own end zone in Iowa's 31-21 win over Iowa State at Ames. Hujsak won the starting job over Sean Snyder after the Oregon game.

Scott Norris

named a USA Today honorable mention All-American as a senior.

"As each game comes around, I'm becoming more comfortable with my position now," Hujsak said. "It's a big difference coming from high school to this level.

"You have to get the punt off. In high school, you could catch the ball, look up and see if there was a rush or not. Now, it's automatic."

Hujsak said he was lured to Iowa because of the treatment he received from people while he visited on a recruiting trip. But the clincher was the Hawkeyes' troubled punting department.

"They told me that I had a chance to come in and play right away," he said, "and that was a big factor coming here; knowing that I had a chance as a freshman.

"But it was the whole atmosphere...the coaches, fan and everything. It was just tremendous."

And the legacy of Roby had a great influence as well.

"Iowa has a tradition of putting players in the pros," Hujsak said. "That's a long ways down the road, but I wouldn't mind following in Reggie Roby's footsteps.

"He is just a great punter, and I'm not saying I would ever be like that, but I would like to try."

Saturday against the Spartans, Hujsak will see one of the toughest defensive units in the Big Ten. Blocking kicks is a Michigan State specialty.

"I don't know what (Miami of Florida) was thinking when they kicked that field goal late," Fry said of Saturday's 26-20 win by No. 2 Miami over Michigan State.

"Michigan State could've blocked that kick or had punt field position," Fry said. "They put great pressure on field goals and punts."

Hujsak knows that.

"I'm not sure what to expect with Michigan State," he said. "I just have to remain consistent and concentrate. I know they'll be tough, so I've just got to keep my head in there."

But there will be moral support among the 67,700 Iowa faithful at Kinnick Stadium. Hujsak's parents will travel from the coast to keep a perfect attendance record for 189 home Iowa games.

"They're ecstatic about it," Hujsak said of his parents. "They've been to both home games. They're really happy that I came here."

Michigan State Style

Spartan coach George Perles was defensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers during their dominating Super Bowl years, and has since incorporated his philosophy into the Spartans' defensive package. Using a 6-1 alignment with six down linemen and one linebacker, the Spartans present one of the most unique defensive sets in the country.

The Spartan offense runs out of an "I" formation. The key to shutting down their offense will be to put pressure on junior quarterback Dan Enos, who has proved himself a threat against the likes of No. 1 Notre Dame and No. 2 Miami.

NILE KINNICK

Perhaps the most famous of stars in the history of Iowa football, Nile Kinnick won the Heisman Trophy in 1939 after leading the Hawkeyes to numerous last-quarter victories. Kinnick was a consensus All-American for just about every major honor that could be bestowed upon a college grid player.

CALVIN JONES

Calvin Jones played from 1953-1955 and was named on All-American each of those years. Jones was a bruising offensive guard and was recognized for his talents by being named the 1955 Outland Award winner. Hawkeye fans selected an all-time Iowa team in 1970 and Jones received more votes than any other player.

ALEX KARRAS

One of the nation's most dominating defensive linemen in college football in the mid-50's was Alex Karras. Karras was named on All-American in both 1956 and 1957. He won the Outland Award in 1957 and went on to star for the Detroit Lions. After football, Karras found success as an actor where he still remains in the public spotlight.

ANDRE TIPPETT

The Hawks were Big Ten co-champions in 1981 thanks in large part to their punishing defense. One of the leader that feared defensive squad was standout Andre Tippett. He holds Iowa records for tackles & lost yardage in a season (153) and in a career (241). A consensus All-American in 1981, Tippett is now one of the premier linebackers in the NFL playing with the New England Patriots.

CHUCK LONG

In the history of the Big Ten Conference, no one threw for more yards than Iowa's Chuck Long. Chuck threw for 10,461 yards as a three year starter for the Hawks from 1983-85 & holds every existing career passing mark in Iowa football history. In 1985, Long guided Iowa to their second Rose Bowl in six years, leading the nation in passing efficiency and launching an Iowa record 27 touchdown passes.
Football is said to be a game of inches and Hayden Fry says he has a painful reminder of the old cliché hanging in his office.

Adorning one of Fry’s walls is a photo of former Iowa quarterback Chuck Long laying from the waist up in the end zone at Kinnick Stadium. Fixed on top of Long are a host of Michigan State Spartans.

The picture was taken during the final play of the 1984 Iowa-Michigan State game. Long was ruled short of the one yard line to clinch an Iowa victory.

Big Ten history. Each school has beaten the other 12 times. There have also been two ties.

“Notre Dame is probably the best running team we’ll face,” the 6-foot-3, 240-pound senior said. “And Miami of Florida, the best passing team. I think we’re well prepared for this Big Ten season.”

Snow, who was an All-American last year and was voted a preseason Heinrich College Football all-American this season, has been averaging 14 tackles per game for Michigan State.

He has also been nominated for the Butkus Award, which is given to the nation’s top linebacker. Last year he finished in the final five for that award, and in 1987, he was in the top 16.

“I don’t think you can really do anything to a fellow like Percy Snow,” Fry said. “George (Perles) cheat. He puts him in the middle of the defensive scheme, so he can go to the right or to the left or up the middle. Most linebackers are on one side or the other, and you kind of have an advantage; you can run away. You can’t run away from Percy. And he’s also an extremely fine pass defender. He’s a complete package for a college All-American linebacker.”

But despite all his personal honors, Snow still works hard to improve his performance.

“T’ll never play a perfect game,” he said. “I’m going to just go out there and play a little bit harder. I know there’s some mistakes that can be corrected as far as getting a little deeper drops, breaking on the ball a little quicker, and not pursuing too quick. It’s just little things, not too serious. But it’s something I know I can improve on.”

Something else that Snow said he hoped his team improved on is decreasing the number of penalties they receive.

Michigan State has totalled 15 penalties for 110-yards this season.

“Last week we had quite a few penalties, and we can’t expect to beat Iowa if we go up there and get a lot of penalties,” Snow said. “We just have to play together as a team. We can’t have any mental errors. I think we have to correct little personal problems here and there, but I think we’ll be just fine.”

Hawkeye Profile: Eddie Polly

Oklahoma native finds new home on & off the field in Iowa as Hawkeye free safety

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa defensive back Eddie Polly said his decision to attend the University of Iowa was probably the best choice in his life.

"I'm happy to be a Hawkeye right now," Polly said. "Being up here around the great people in Iowa City, the great people on this team and the coaching staff has been a real experience. I don't regret it one bit."

A sophomore from Oklahoma City, Polly makes his feelings very clear when asked what drew him to Iowa.

"The biggest influence in me coming up here was the people of Iowa City," Polly said. "I keep going back to that, and I still talk about it to this day."

"The people here are so much more together and homey, it just gives a feeling. It's great being in a place where you feel wanted and everybody feels like they're close to each other. It just makes you feel positive and helps you out as far as school is concerned."

Fry said he and assistant coach Dan McCarney went down in a snow storm to Oklahoma, one of the toughest recruiting states for an outsider, to watch Polly.

"We were fortunate to get Eddie," Fry said. "He said he wanted an chance to leave that part of the country and come to school up here.

"I think he was the only youngster in the family that had an opportunity to go to college. He's had a pretty rough road down there."

Maybe that rough environment Polly was subjected to while growing up, is what contributed to an off-the-field incident that took place at the Downtown Pedestrian Mall in Iowa City August 6.

On August 31, an Iowa City woman filed assault charges against Polly after he allegedly punched her in the face outside an Iowa City bar.

The complaint stated Polly punched the woman in the left eye, knocking her unconscious and resulting in a black eye. A court date has been set for Nov. 7.

When asked about the incident and its potential adverse affects, Polly seemed anxious to make his views known and help clear the air.

"I've had more adverse things happen to me," Polly said. "It hasn't really affected me because once I start playing on Saturday, I forget about those things.

"I've just tried to put it behind me. I'm glad things have finally cooled off a little."

The 6-foot, 182-pound free safety actually played running back more than anything else at Grant High School in Oklahoma City, but his toughness projected him as being more valuable on the defensive side of the ball in college.

"Eddie's a wild man," Fry said. "He made 14 tackles in the (Tulsa game) Saturday."

The Iowa pass defense is led by two sophomores, a junior and only one senior, but Polly foresees the unit becoming solid once they get accustomed to playing together.

"The role of playing is much more of a learning experience than just being here for a couple of years," Polly said. "You've got to play to get the feel."

This secondary works good together, but if we stop making a lot of the mental mistakes we've been making, we'll be a real good secondary.

"I'm a youngster to the secondary. I played a couple games last year as a nickel back, but other than that, I really didn't play too much."

The Hawkeye defense, much like the offense, is loaded with youth. And with only one starting senior in the secondary, Polly knows this year's Iowa team will have to rely more on pure heart and determination.

"We're not the Hawks of old," Polly said, "as far as total yardage. But as far as aggressiveness, going after the ball and making plays, this team can compare in a couple ways to some teams of the past."

"This defense is not that great-over-all defense where you've got the low numbers and things like that, but if we keep working hard it can get to that status."

Double trouble

Hawkeye free safety Eddie Polly, 27, teams up with Melvin Foster to make the play on Tulsa's Mark Brus at Kinnick Stadium Saturday. Polly finished the game with 14 tackles.

There's beer and there's Michelob. The difference is day and night.

Even in the dark, without light, Michelob stands out. It's the difference between the sun and the moon. The difference between a day's work and a night's rest. The difference between a good idea and a great one. Michelob is the difference. Michelob is light in the dark. Michelob is the night's choice. Michelob is the night's light.
