Iowa City's Drug War

I.C.'s big drug problem is alcohol, not cocaine

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Cocaine and crack may be the focus of President George Bush's war, but in Iowa City the battle against drugs rages on over a more common and more socially acceptable drug: alcohol.

"The war is on crack and cocaine, and alcohol has moved out of the area of concern. But that doesn't change the fact that in Iowa City the major public health concern is alcohol," said Art Schut, executive director of the Mid-Western Council on Chemical Abuse.

Cocaine has garnered public attention because of its reputation as a "jet set drug," while alcohol is so common that it is often overlooked as a major part of the nation's drug problem, Schut said.

"Cocaine is sexier. You get shot rather than killed in a car accident," he said.

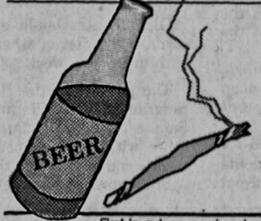

The public also blames cocaine and crack for high crime rates, said Mike Forrest, Iowa state drug policy coordinator.

"I think special attention has been given to hard drugs in part because the public uses them as the reason for higher crime and incarceration rates," Forrest said.

Although cocaine, crack and marijuana are responsible for some crimes in Iowa City, more than 50 percent of the crimes committed in Iowa City are alcohol-related, according to Iowa City Police Department records.

Iowa City's Drug Problem

First in a two-part series

Alcohol is also responsible for a higher number of deaths than any other abusable substance, Schut said.

Nationally, 100,000 people die every year of alcohol-related abuse, Schut said.

"(Other drug-related deaths) don't even come close to this figure," Schut said. "I don't think that there has been a murder in

USI refutes proposed health fee

Petition opposing fee aimed at Regents

Margot Krippner
The Daily Iowan

UI students who oppose a proposed mandatory student health fee are being petitioned by student leaders.

United Students of Iowa, a group of student leaders from the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa, have been working to defeat the proposed mandatory health fee since the state Board of Regents meeting in July.

At the UI, the proposed fee would tack a $27.30 per-semester charge on tuition.

USI leaders are now seeking student signatures which will be given to the Board of Regents at their October 18 meeting. Students are being asked to sign cards which say — "We at USI oppose the imposition of a mandatory student health fee and an increase in tuition."

The fee has been labeled "unfair" by UI campus director, Jo Ellen Huss, because the Regents failed to add the health fee into the proposed 4.27 percent in-state and 5.3 percent out-of-state tuition increases.

"With the health fee, the actual tuition increase is between 7 and 8 percent," Huss said. "It's unfair to students to have a hidden fee."

In addition, USI opposes the health fee because not all students use the service.

"Some students are covered on other health plans," Huss said. "It's ridiculous to charge everyone for a service that not everyone uses."

The acceptance of the health fee could also set a dangerous precedent, according to USI leaders.

"If this health fee passes," said Hank Hanson, USI executive director, "you'll pay it, your kids will pay it, and your grandkids will pay it."

"The Regents will start tacking on fees for any other items that the state doesn't want to pay for," Huss added.

Huss also criticized the motive behind the health fee, to free up general fund money which would be used for costs and fixture of the

Speculation about Prescott's SLS dismissal 'premature'

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Monday's assertion by UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona that there will be a new supervising attorney for UI Student Legal Services may have been premature.

Reports that James Prescott, SLS supervising attorney, was released from his duties last Friday are now being denied. When asked, Prescott said he is on a one- to two-week vacation. UI administration officials closest to the situation are attending out-of-town conferences.

Far too much speculation has surrounded the "administrative audit" of SLS. No evidence of misconduct by Prescott or SLS — besides leaked memoranda and off-the-record comments — has been forthcoming. Yet, because of the recent SLS controversy, it now appears that the future of a valuable student service is in jeopardy.

The UI student commission provides inexpensive legal advice and court representation for more than 2,000 UI students each year. The service provides representation for about 35 percent of the Johnson County criminal court cases and charges a flat fee of $50 per case.

"I would rather be out of the papers and be out of the news and just doing my job. I feel I do it very well, and that is simply what I like to do," Prescott said.

Prescott has supervised SLS interns for four years in his position and denies he had an opportunity to refute any alleged complaints leveled against him by UI administration members.

The timing of the charges is also questionable in light of relations between Prescott and the UI Office of Student Services over the suggested SLS office relocation.

Dalai Lama wins Nobel Peace Prize for struggle

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Dalai Lama, spiritual and temporal leader of Tibet whose title means Ocean of Mercy, won the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize on Thursday for decades of non-violent struggle to free his country from China.

"My case is nothing special. I am a simple Buddhist monk — no more, no less," he said, adding he hoped the award would focus attention on compassion in every human being.

One clear purpose of the Norwegian Nobel committee was to deliver a message of support to the pro-democracy movement in China. The Beijing government called the award an insult and interference in its internal affairs.

Analysts also said the committee's action might eventually help break the deadlock between China, which has occupied the Himalayan nation since 1950, and the Dalai Lama, who leads an exile government based in India.

The prize, worth $469,000 at the current exchange rate, will be awarded in Oslo on Dec. 10.

In its citation, the Nobel committee mentioned the Dalai Lama's rejection of violence and his preachings of respect for all living things. It praised his "constructive and forward-looking proposals for the solution of international conflicts."

Past prizes have been used to encourage human rights activists and support peace efforts. Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa won in 1983; the 1987 prize went to President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica for his Central American peace plan; and U.N. peacekeeping forces were given last year's award.

The Dalai Lama, 54, was born Tenzin Gyatso. The son of a poor farmer, he was named spiritual and temporal ruler as the 14th Dalai Lama at age 15, just before the Chinese army marched into Tibet. He fled Tibet in 1959 after a failed uprising against Chinese rule.

In Los Angeles, where he was attending a conference, the Dalai Lama said: "I very much appreciate that kind of recognition about my beliefs. In fact, I always believed in love, compassion and a sense of universal respect. Every human being has that potential."

"This prize may open more people's eyes to look at their own quality," said the Buddhist leader, who wore sandals and traditional red-and-orange robes.

Despite the Dalai Lama's teachings of non-violence, bloody clashes with Chinese authorities have occurred in Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, over the past two years.

Bakker convicted of all 24 counts in indictment

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — PTL evangelist Jim Bakker was convicted Thursday of using his television show to defraud followers of $3.7 million, money the jury foreman said corrupted a minister who started out to do good.

"He was called by God. But eventually the money became too much for him," said foreman Ricky Hill, who said during jury selection that he was a Christian. "We kept looking for something from the defense, and we never saw it."

Bakker faces a maximum sentence of 120 years in prison and $5 million in fines. The U.S. District Court jury convicted him of all 24 counts in the indictment, which charged he oversold lodging guarantees, called "lifetime partnerships," at his Heritage USA religious retreat.

"The message is you can't lie to the people and use television and the mails to get them to send you money," said prosecutor Deborah Smith. "It doesn't matter who you are or how well known you are, you simply can't do it."

Defense lawyer George Davis said the verdict would be appealed.

Prosecutors said Bakker diverted $3.7 million in ministry funds for personal use while knowing PTL was in financial trouble. He used money from PTL for vacation homes in California and Florida, a lakefront parsonage, a houseboat, Rolls-Royce and Mercedes cars and more peculiar luxuries such as an air-conditioned doghouse.

Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye, said she and her husband would return to Orlando, Fla., where they moved the die-hard remnants of their ministry.

"It's not over until it's over," she added during a news conference after the verdict. Hundreds of Bakker faithful and the lunchtime curious flocked around the courthouse, and she serenaded them with a verse of "On Christ, the solid rock, I stand. All other ground is sinking sand."

Bakker was freed later Thursday on $250,000 bond imposed by U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter. The judge set sentencing for October 24.

"I'm going to keep my faith in God, and I'm going to go see Tammy now. I feel sad but encouraged in God," Bakker said, smiling, in a brief midafternoon statement to reporters.

Potter said he granted bond reluctantly because Bakker faithful had a "Jim Jones mentality" and might help him flee the country.

"They think he could walk on water," Potter said. Davis declared the reference to the 1978 murder-suicide of 900 followers of Jim Jones' cult in Jonestown, Guyana, "horrible, absolutely uncalculated for."

Bakker showed little emotion as the verdict was read. Tears welled in the eyes of Tammy Faye Bakker, who also received large bonuses from PTL but was not charged with any crimes.

The jury foreman said he was unswayed by Bakker's testimony, in which he defended his earnings as reasonable for someone who raised millions of dollars for the work of the Lord.

"He was a man of God. He got corrupt, and I feel sorry for the man," Hill said. He said that in the day and a half of jury deliberations, "The most disagreement was when the fraud started."

Reaction to the conviction varied among trial spectators.

"I think it's wonderful," said Beverly Sparrow. "He deserves everything he's going to get."

"My faith was that he would be set free on all charges," said Bill Fisher of Fort Mill, S.C. "I still believe he will."

The trial started August 28.

Word Histories' brings to light the forgotten origins of words

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — From "bunk," the unfortunate legacy of a longwinded congressman, to "Bimbo," first used as a relatively sexless term for lackluster males of the Roaring Twenties, a new book by dictionary publisher Merriam-Webster Inc. examines the strange stories and forgotten figures lurking behind everyday words.

"Webster's Word Histories" is filled with lively prose and complete with an eye-catching "bikini" entry on the jacket.

Scholarly tomes about the origins of words already exist, most notably the "Oxford English Dictionary," which exhaustively defines hundreds of thousands of words and gives their sources.

But "Word Histories," published in September and priced at $14.95, is aimed more at the kinds of people who contact Merriam-Webster regularly, asking where words or phrases come from.

Audrey Duckert, a lexicographer at the University of Massachusetts who has contributed to Merriam-Webster dictionaries and to the last supplement of the "Oxford English Dictionary," said there are surprising numbers of non-scholars who are interested in word origins.

"I settled more Scrabble arguments than you can shake a stick at," she said.

Dentistry demand to increase

Longer life expectancy brightens future of dentistry students

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

The future of dentistry has never looked better.

A two-year study conducted by John Reinhardt, UI professor of dentistry, indicates that the services of dentists will be more in demand over the next 40 years than ever before.

Three factors — the number of natural teeth, the number of cavities and the life-expectancy rates of the adult population — led Reinhardt to this conclusion.

Previous studies have predicted a negative outlook for the economic future of dentists. Some studies said that due to advances in dental care and better oral hygiene habits, children will have fewer cavities, and fewer teeth will need to be extracted — threatening the need for dentists.

But Reinhardt's study came to a different conclusion.

Although the tooth-decay rate is decreasing, he said, the general population is living longer and retaining their natural teeth longer, he said.

This fact may contribute to a future increase in tooth decay and cavities, he said.

"There are many negative predictions that have come out in the past few years regarding the economic future of dentistry that are just unfounded," Reinhardt said. "I believe the real heyday is yet to come."

"I had been taught in dental school that decay goes away with age, but actually it increases with age," he said. "More people get dentures at an older age and didn't get a chance to get decay. Now the opportunities for decay are a lot longer."

Reinhardt estimated that the number of adult-teeth will increase from four billion to five billion over the next several years.

"The baby boomers are getting older," he said. "That's a whole lot of people and a whole lot of teeth."

"People are realizing that the benefits of dentistry outweigh any minor discomfort," he said. "And people are spending more on dental care, including cosmetic work."

Reinhardt said he was also concerned with the perception young people have of dentistry when conducting the study.

"I wanted young people to look favorably at dentistry without the perception that there is no future," he said.

Over the years, many factors helped spread the idea that dentistry is an empty profession, he said.

"Things were looking pretty bad in the late 1970s," he said. "The federal government put a lot of money into dentistry education, and there were too many students. Then the first major study of declining decay in children came out, and it looked bad.

"At the same time, the country was going through an economic recession," he added. "It began to look pretty negative."

Because many of the studies were misleading, the American Dental Association felt students were getting a great deal of misinformation, Reinhardt said.

"I wanted to go into this study not emotionally, but objectively," he said. "I wanted to do the calculations and see what the future might be. I wanted to know the answer to this question myself, and the truth is that right now would be an excellent time to go into dentistry. It is not a dead profession by a long shot."

'Hawkeye' cards provide discounts to students

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

No longer will UI students have to look with despair at last week's advertising section only to find that the coupon for 10 percent off the prescription cold medication they need at the drugstore has just expired.

Instead, they will be able to open their wallets, pull out the Hawkeye Express Cards, trot on down to the store and get their 10-percent discount — anytime, any day.

Hawkeye Express Cards, provided by the UI Student Senate, are sent out to all UI students allowing them yearlong discounts and special offers from over 30 local businesses.

Lori Meyers, executive associate for the UI Student Senate, likened the card to an "ongoing coupon that students can use throughout the school year."

UI students should expect to receive their cards and a list of where they can use them within the next week.

The purpose of the Hawkeye Express Card program is to provide finances for the Student Senate Scholarship Fund, a scholarship program which will help about 40 UI students meet some of their school expenses this year. Students can also receive gift certificates and prizes from businesses contributing to the project by listening to KKRQ. Throughout the year the radio station will be taking time out for trivia questions regarding these local merchants. Students who know the answers can call KKRQ to win prizes such as free haircuts and dinners.

The UI Herd Book, a telephone directory containing the numbers of all UI offices, administrators, faculty members and students, have also been distributed by the Senate. The books are now available for $2.50 at the University Bookstore and at the Burge and Quadrangle residence hall general stores.

Court lets insurance policy define pregnancy as illness

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Court of Appeals on Thursday said insurance policies may regard pregnancy as an illness.

An insurance policy is a contract, and if both sides agree to the terms, courts shouldn't interfere, the appeals court determined.

"While we do not necessarily view pregnancy as an illness, the insurer and insured, through their contract of insurance, have chosen to treat pregnancy as an illness for the purposes of this policy," the court said. "Since it is subject to the policy's limitations."

The court rejected a Polk County claim by Connie and William Decker against Federated Mutual Insurance Co.

Court records said she was added to her husband's policy after they were married in 1987. But, the records said, she became pregnant before being added to the policy.

The policy limited payments to $2,000 for medical conditions that existed before it went into force.

The policy said the limits applied to any illness. The couple said pregnancy should not be covered under that definition.

Illness is defined as "bodily injury, bodily disorder or mental infirmity" and that doesn't include pregnancy, they said.

The Appeals Court rejected the argument.

The policy refers to medical care during pregnancy and "while this policy could be clearer, a policy is not ambiguous merely because its wording could be more precise."

"While we do not necessarily disagree . . . that pregnancy normally is not deemed to be an illness, we find that under the policy in question pregnancy is treated as such," the opinion written by Judge Albert Habhab said.

Cedar Rapids adult book store is ordered to close

DES MOINES (AP) — A divided Iowa Court of Appeals on Thursday ordered a Cedar Rapids adult book store closed, because it is too close to buildings which offer classes, even though they aren't traditional schools.

The court, in a 4-2 decision, applied a city ordinance banning such shops within 450 feet of a school, with the majority saying local officials are not limited to protecting elementary and secondary schoolchildren.

"This court is not unaware of the First Amendment implications of this matter," said the majority opinion written by Judge Allen Donelson of Des Moines. But it added there are "alternative avenues of communications for businesses of this nature."

Dissenters said the court was letting its distaste for pornography carry it beyond "the plain meaning" of the law.

"Disapproval of the adult entertainment establishments cannot be a basis for construing a statute in contravention of legislative intent," wrote Judge Dick Schlegel of Ottumwa.

The decision reversed a lower court ruling and denied Ryan Montague the permits needed to operate an adult bookstore in downtown Cedar Rapids. His Adult Odyssey is located in a former downtown state liquor store, across the street from a senior citizens housing complex.

At issue is a city ordinance prohibiting adult bookstores and similar businesses from operating within 450 feet of a residential area or from a school.

That ordinance was patterned after a U.S. Supreme Court decision that allowed local governments to use zoning to regulate adult entertainment.

After city officials denied Montague a certificate of occupancy — needed to operate the business — he went to court.

Company gives 3 UI students fellowships

Research advances biocatalysis

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Three $12,000 fellowships have been awarded to UI students in the colleges of pharmacy and engineering for their work in biocatalysis research.

The fellowships, sponsored by Eastman Kodak, were awarded to UI graduate students Wei Gu Liu, Robert Beardsley and Keungarp Ryu.

new applications in chemical synthesis, including compounds used as pesticides, flavors, aromas and pharmaceuticals.

"He is a brilliant laboratory man, spectacular as a scientist in the laboratory," Rosazza said. "He is one of the most able researchers that I've had in my research group ever."

"I am very honored," Liu said. "I am very excited. It is the greatest honor of my life."

"I would like to thank Professor Rosazza. If I did anything to help science, it is thanks to him," he added.

Beardsley, a graduate student in the UI Department of Chemical and Materials Engineering, conducts research on electrophoresis and bioseparations.

He works with Gregory Carmichael, a UI professor of chemical and materials engineering.

Electrophoresis is a common medical laboratory technique that separates components based on their electrical charge. Beardsley is working to expand this technique from a small-scale device to a large-scale one for use in biotechnology industries.

Ryu, also a graduate student in the UI Department of Chemical and Materials Engineering, is studying the fundamentals of enzyme catalysis in solvents which contain little water.

"He studied the use of enzymes in organic solvents," said Jonathan Dordick, assistant professor of chemical and materials engineering. "The unusual aspect is that typically we thought that enzymes would only work in water. In fact, we found that enzymes can work very well in organic solvents."

"This allows us to carry out reactions that a typical organic chemist would do. We are looking at the effect the solvent has on the enzymes," he added.

Information gained through Ryu's work may lead to the development of enzymes that function well in such solvents, enabling researchers to perform reactions that are impossible in water.

"I'm sure he will make a very fine biochemical engineer," Dordick added.

Liu, Beardsley and Ryu were selected based on the progress they have made in research towards their master's theses, their academic records and letters of recommendation.

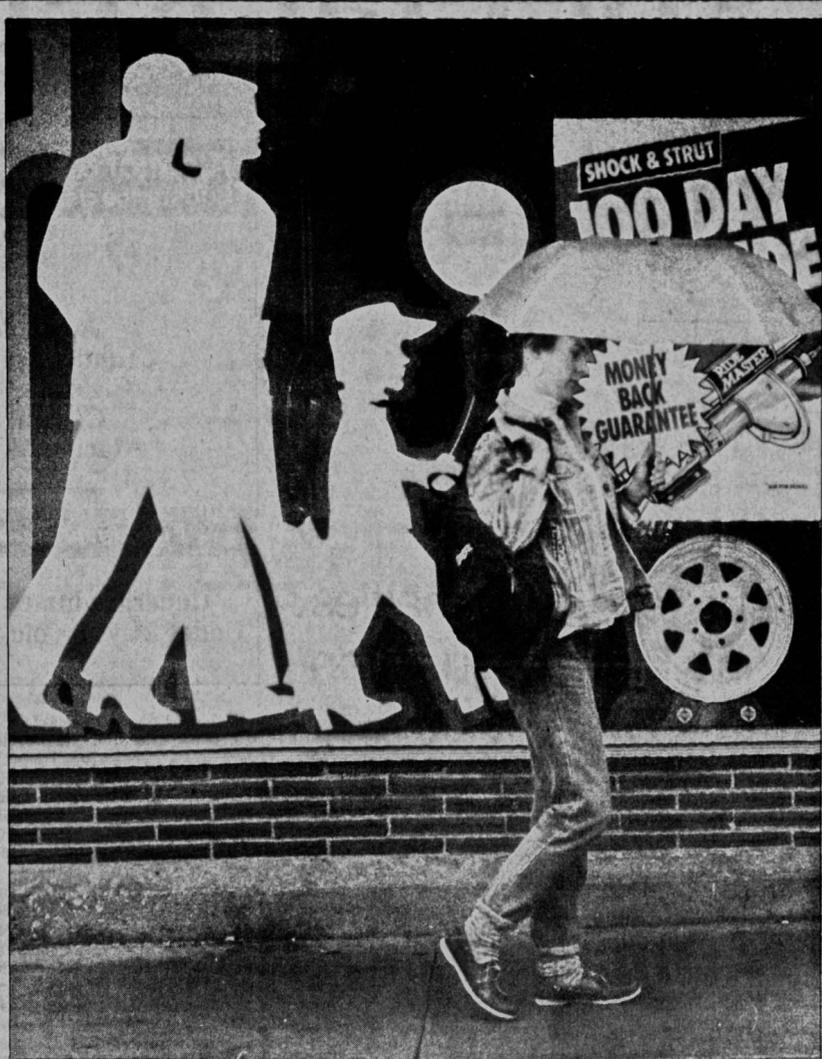

Liu, Beardsley and Ryu were selected based on the progress they have made in research towards their master's theses, their academic records and letters of recommendation.

Liu, a graduate student in the UI College of Pharmacy, has contributed to the discovery of a new biocatalyst, a bacterial enzyme that catalyzes the introduction of oxygen molecules into the structure of a hydrocarbon.

Working with John Rosazza, professor of medicinal and natural products chemistry, Liu has conducted a variety of studies in this area.

"He has been conducting studies related to a development of an enzyme or biocatalysis and trying to determine how it really works," Rosazza said. "The questions he is asking are very fundamental to enzymology and applications this enzyme might have to the synthesis of chemicals."

Liu has also studied the enzymatic and chemical aspects of catalysis in

Graduation's new policy angers some

Some colleges have no Dec. ceremonies

Vicki Green
Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI's new graduation policy has angered some of the same students it was meant to benefit.

Individual graduation ceremonies within each university college are replacing the mass ceremonies usually performed for May and December graduates. UI Registrar Jerald Dallum has said that the change will make graduation more personalized and more meaningful for the students and their families. But for some December graduates whose colleges have eliminated their mid-year commencement altogether under the new plan, the policy makes little sense.

The UI College of Law, with 17 December degree candidates, has the largest number of students that will be affected by the change.

Although the graduates have been invited to return in May for the official ceremony, some students do not consider it a viable alternative.

"I've been at the university for 7½ years. When you're all through you want to have a grand finale," said Stan Steins, an upcoming December law graduate.

"It's kind of cold," said December graduate Amy Kilpatrick.

Kilpatrick called the offer to attend the May ceremony, "a really empty alternative."

"It doesn't seem to mean anything. My family is proud, and they want to come up," she said.

William Hines, dean of the College of Law, said one of the reasons for the change to individual ceremonies was "the lack of appropriate decorum that has invaded the large ceremony. It's a party rather than a solemn event."

Bush pushes for stricter drug penalties by leaders of nation's higher education

Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

President George Bush wants the leaders of higher education to know they will not be immune from the war on drugs, so the president has urged the severing of federal aid to any college institution that does not adopt "tough but fair" drug policies for its students.

Legislation is already in the works in Washington, D.C., for an amendment to the Higher Education Act of 1965, which would make universities ineligible for all federal money — including research grants and student loans — if they do not have and enforce strict drug policies. The plan, which has yet to receive strong opposition from Congress, is set to go into motion by October 1990.

William Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Policy, said in a speech outlining the plan last month that the proposal fit with the Bush administration's philosophy of holding drug users accountable for their activities by denying them federal benefits.

If passed, aid would be denied to those colleges which did not meet the following criteria:

- Annual distribution of a letter to every student from the university president outlining the legal sanctions for drug use and distribution.
- In the same letter, a clear description of the health risks involved in drug use and the avenues for rehabilitation open to chemical abusers.
- And, perhaps most importantly, a firm statement from the university administration that they will impose "tough but fair" penalties on law breakers.

The proposal also calls for college institutions to biennially review their drug programs. The drug-control office will, in turn, hold periodic reviews of the nation's universities, and based on the effectiveness of their policies, may impose sanctions up to the severing of federal aid.

"The law does not require a drug-sniffing dog in every dorm room or for students to take a urine test before class," said Donald Hamilton, Bennett's director of public affairs.

"The law does not require a drug-sniffing dog in every dorm room or for students to take a urine test before class," said Donald Hamilton, Bennett's director of public affairs. "What it requires is that universities should have a firm drug policy and that it should be enforced."

"If you're caught using drugs, you're suspended," Hamilton added. "If you distribute drugs, you're out — period. It's very straightforward and clear-cut."

Hamilton contends people of university age are the most frequent users of drugs in the country and form the largest sector of chemical consumers in the national population.

Too often, Bennett emphasized in his speech, institutions have remained neutral in the face of such activity, paying "lip service" to the war on drugs.

"Most universities just have general declarations like 'we're against drugs or we're against apartheid, or we're against hunger and other things,'" Hamilton said. "But generally, they pay more attention to apartheid than to the drug problem that's right under their noses. That's lip service."

But the sentiment that college officials have failed to pay sufficient attention to the drug program angered many university leaders, who maintain that they have been working on the drug problem for decades.

"That's a patent Bennett cheap shot," said Sheldon Steinbach, general counsel of the American Council on Education. "His office still holds the view of higher education as being Woodstock. They're 20 years out of sync."

Steinbach said most schools in the country already have comprehensive drug policies in place, and added that little would be accomplished by a legislative initiative.

"This is not a new issue," he said. "We've been raising the specter of drug liability and responsibility for years, and university presidents have been responding. This is a serious business. To try and brand all universities as negligent and uncaring is just patently false."

Steinbach reserved judgement on other aspects of the proposal until more details are provided by the Bush administration.

"I'm not sure where they're heading on this except that they're making assertions which aren't based in reality," he said.

Steinbach's views were echoed by Elizabeth Nuss, director of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

"Dr. Bennett, even when he was Secretary of Education, had the impression that universities were lackadaisical in the enforcement of drug policies," Nuss said. "I don't think that's a true impression, but its one that's carried over to his position as drug czar."

Nuss also challenged Bennett's assertion that college students are the biggest abusers of drugs in the country. She cited a recent study done by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research which found that college students use drugs as much or less than their non-university counterparts.

The study showed drug use rates for marijuana among students to be relatively equal to that of non-students, and found consumption of harder drugs like cocaine, crack and LSD to be far less prevalent in higher education.

"We certainly don't find college students to use drugs more than their non-college age mates," said Patrick O'Malley, a Michigan professor who worked on the study. "Rates for the daily use of drugs are distinctly lower than their non-college counterparts."

UI students basically fit into this national trend, according to Ann Rhodes, UI assistant vice president for finance.

Like most national universities, the UI's chief substance abuse problem is alcohol.

If passed, Bush's proposal would require a dramatic reworking in the UI's policy of dealing with its students, Rhodes said.

"Obviously, we're going to monitor this very closely," she said. "But we don't have anything resembling that right now. That's reasonably harsh."

The UI currently does not require a letter from the university presidents such as the one spelled out by the Bush-Bennett plan, Rhodes added, and enforcement of most drug felonies are handled by the courts.

"At this point, we really don't see ourselves in the enforcement business," she said. "We aren't out policing students."

The view of universities acting in loco parentis for their students has been consistently shut down by the courts since the '60s, Steinbach said. The Council on Education maintains a log of national cases where universities' responsibilities have been questioned, and it shows that the courts have voted overwhelmingly in favor of self-regulation.

"The courts don't expect us to be acting in the place of parents," Steinbach said. "They also acknowledge that even if we tried to, we couldn't."

Steinbach added that no matter what the drug war eventually yields on the nation's campuses, college institutions must always provide students with the ability to make choices in their own personal lives.

"One could control all drugs and alcohol on campus, but you'd turn the university into a police state," he said.

Analysis

Cheap drug control only comes from legalization

Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

The response from both parties to President George Bush's drug war has been all too predictable.

Republicans have responded with the expected barrage of tough talk, and Democrats have reacted with the even more expected cry for greater money from the public trough.

Predictable, too, has been the almost complete absence of common sense in Washington.

Bush's drug war doesn't reach the New York City kid — uneducated and unemployed — who looks to the drug culture as a quick fix in his pursuit of happiness and money.

Bush has initiated his drug assault as if the issue did not have a history or a context. Indeed, the headlines are as fresh as today's news, but the problems are as ancient as civilization itself. Most recently in America's history these issues came to the fore during the era of prohibition, when — in a grotesque mockery of the law — illegal liquor provided an economic goldmine for organized crime, disgraced the cities and financed the corruption of law enforcement agencies, politicians and judges.

Legislators and crimefighters have spent the greater part of the last decade blindly searching for a solution to a menace that always seems to elude them; and for every battle won, 10 are lost. They have questioned, debated, questioned and redebated — but satisfactory answers are never provided.

Yet an answer that is constantly tossed aside amidst a sea of political rhetoric — one that deserves serious attention — is legalization.

The Bush administration refuses to accept any argument for the decriminalization of drugs as a basis for ending the drug war.

"It would be a disaster," said Donald Hamilton, director of public affairs for national drug policy coordinator William Bennett. "We agree that legalization would almost certainly increase drug use."

Supporters of legalization are characterized as being on the lunatic fringe of American politics, supporting a vision of America as a Woodstock gone haywire.

The truth is, most Americans agree that the drug problem is a "scourge that must be stopped" as Bush said. Supporters of legalization say that the battle can only be won by eradicating the core of the problem, rather than wiping away the surface veneer.

First of all, it is a myth that legalizing drugs would dramatically increase use. Right now, despite the tough laws and new anti-drug spirit, just about anyone in this country who wants cocaine or crack knows where to get it. And most people know how to get marijuana, whether they want it or not.

The picture is simple: Drugs are destructive to anyone who takes them, but they are a much bigger danger to society precisely because they're illegal. It is their illegality that provides incredible profits for drug kingpins and makes addicts cross the law to get them at any cost.

Bush's drug war doesn't reach the New York City kid — uneducated and unemployed — who looks to the drug culture as a quick fix in his pursuit of happiness and money. Drug pushing has the lure of fast cash, big cars and other luxuries that wouldn't be available if the drug trade wasn't such a lucrative business.

As libertarian critic Thomas Sowell has pointed out: "The mere cost of production of drugs can be very expensive. If an addict could support his addiction for a few dollars a week, he would still be an addict, but he would not have to steal, mug or kill other people to support his habit."

The recent highly publicized drug busts are fine for media blitzes and political ego boosting, but they hardly put a dent in the problem. For every seizure from the caches of the Medellin cartel, five other criminals are able to reap more inflated profits and enjoy life in the drug elite. And America's already overcrowded prisons don't have room for all of them.

Legalization is an idea that crops up in the political arena every now and then, and as the drug war grows uglier — as it inevitably will — the idea will resurface again.

Far from being on the lunatic fringe, the decriminalization of drugs has gained support from groups as far ranging as the civil liberties wing of the liberal left to arch-conservative William F. Buckley Jr. on the right; from Nobel-prize winning economist Milton Friedman to San Jose, Calif., police chief Joseph McNamara.

Though they disagree on specific points and clash on ideological reasoning, there is a definite consensus among them: The drug war has overflowed the courts, escalated violence on the streets, and the problem seems to be getting much worse.

No one wants the history books to read, "In 1989, George Bush declared a war on drugs, and drugs won."

Who would legalization harm? Surely a few egos at the White House. But more importantly, it would put an end to the likes of the Medellins, the Gotti family and all those who are allowed to rise to prominence and ruin the lives of innocent people through the suppression of drugs.

Forrest studies extent of Iowa's drug problem

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

As part of his new position as Iowa state drug policy coordinator, Mike Forrest has been working his way from community to community to determine the extent of Iowa's drug problem.

Forrest recently spoke with UI Student Health officials and the Johnson County Drug Coalition. On the state level, Forrest advocates grassroots-level organizations to fight drugs, a single spokesman representing the three Iowa state universities' positions on drug policy, better treatment facilities for drug abusers, and additional law enforcement.

Since he was appointed in June, Forrest has also been active in promoting a drug prevention program called Substance Abuse Free Environment at the community level.

As a liaison between the Iowa Narcotics Enforcement Advisory Council, the Iowa Drug Abuse Prevention and Education Advisory Council and the state legislature, Forrest aids in determining state drug policies.

The Daily Iowan's Kelly David recently spoke to Forrest about Iowa's drug problem.

DI: What do you see as the primary obstacles to stopping the use of illegal drugs in Iowa?

Forrest: There is more than one serious problem facing the state.

The treatment of identified addicts requires attention. There are not enough places or beds for those seeking treatment to get it. Also, with respect to treatment, the inability in many cases of treatment centers to provide aftercare is hampering treatment results.

Second, we need to become more prevention-minded. Parents and teachers especially need to become more familiar with the symptoms of illicit drug use. Much of the illicit drug use can be headed off by these primary centers of influence in the lives of young people. I think we are doing better on the classroom education side. I have found that students are frequently quite informed about the treatment and effects of drug abuse.

Third, on law enforcement we need training for street officers with respect to drug offenses. We also need more special narcotics agents and more prosecutors.

But above all, we need all the elements of the community to band together to determine and operate a strategy for their particular community. Once there are many organizations against substance abuse I am convinced we'll see positive results.

DI: Many university and community officials involved in drug treatment in Iowa City feel that alcohol abuse is being pushed off the public agenda by the war against cocaine and crack, even though alcohol remains the biggest drug problem facing the nation. How do you feel about returning some of the focus on drug abuse to alcohol?

Forrest: This is a must. Alcohol abuse is the largest substance abuse problem. It is both a gateway to other drugs and frequently the bridge to the use of hard drugs.

I would like alcohol abuse given more attention because it is such an important part of the drug abuse problem. I think special attention has been given to hard drugs in part because the public

Iowa City that has not been alcohol-related in the last 25 years.

Cathy Barnett, a substance abuse counselor for MECCA who treats UI students through Health Iowa, said that alcohol combined with marijuana use is the most common form of substance abuse among UI students.

"Most of the students use alcohol as their first drug of choice and use marijuana as a second drug," she said.

Consequently, if the student's first drug of choice is marijuana they often use alcohol as a secondary drug.

Although no students have been treated for abusing cocaine as their first drug of choice at Health Iowa, many have tried it, Barnett said.

Students who use cocaine as their first drug of choice often call to seek help, but don't follow up on the call, according to Lisa Broek, program assistant and health educator for Health Iowa.

"Cocaine users only call after they have a crisis. They binge, and then they get really scared and make an appointment, but never show up," Broek said.

Crisis calls make up less than 5 percent of the center's calls.

"I hardly ever see cocaine in Iowa City," said an Iowa City resident who uses drugs and was a UI student for two years. "I think the abuse of (marijuana and cocaine) in the country is getting worse, but in Iowa City I don't think it is as bad as it used to be."

Due to the number of recent drug arrests in Iowa City, marijuana is becoming increasingly hard to find, the student said.

"There's been a lot of people busted in Iowa City lately, and that's stopped a lot of people," she said. "It's sometimes hard to find someone who has pot to sell."

A UI graduate who bought and sold marijuana while he was a student also noticed a decline in the availability of marijuana and cocaine when he was a senior.

"When I was a freshman my roommates and I were selling cocaine and marijuana. We and about 30 other people would get a keg and sit around all night playing poker and smoking. That's what we did," he said. "We've sat on the Old Capitol steps at 12 in the afternoon smoking a joint."

"But when I left in '87, the supply had gone way down. Prices had doubled and tripled for high-grade sinsemillas."

The cocaine was shipped in from California by Federal Express in small quantities and immediately sold, the student said.

"We didn't sit there on a big stash and sell by the hit. We bought it by the eight-ball (1/8 ounce) and sold it for $300 at a time and let them sell $25 hits (1/4 gram) at a time. It arrived on a Monday and was gone by Wednesday," he said.

"Out of the 50 or 60 people who came to the house to buy and sell, only three of them were heavy-hitters — people who got into cocaine real bad, who became addicted and carried guns."

The cocaine dealing in Iowa City is small time, whereas alcohol is a big downtown business, he said.

"All this focus is on drugs, but at least in Iowa City drugs are on the downside. Cocaine is no longer the drug of choice," he said. "I was dealing both marijuana and cocaine, and I saw it all the time, but I wouldn't say it was as big a problem as alcohol. I know far more people who get into trouble because of alcohol."

In Iowa City, more people are arrested on alcohol-related charges than on any other drug-related charge, said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

Ten people were arrested in Iowa City for possession of cocaine from January 1989 to June 1989, during which there was a total of 1,966 arrests.

Of those, 42 people were arrested for possession of marijuana and 1,080 people were arrested on alcohol-related charges.

Many of these are UI, high school and junior high school students who are arrested for consuming alcohol in a public place, possession of an open container in a public place, public intoxication, operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, possession or consumption of alcohol as a minor, open container of liquor in a vehicle, making beer available to a minor, or possession of a fake or altered identification card.

"It is expected to have young people drinking in a university setting," Winkelhake said. "The biggest problem we have with drugs in Iowa City is alcohol."

But because alcohol is socially acceptable and legal, people often don't think of it as a drug, Barnett said.

"There is a tendency to say of kids who get caught (on alcohol-related charges), 'Whew, at least they're not on drugs.' Alcohol is OK. It is part of the normal process of growing up," said Joe Esquibel, MECCA adolescent substance abuse counselor.

uses them as the reason for higher crime and incarceration rates.

DI: Are hard drugs responsible for higher crime and incarceration rates than alcohol?

Forrest: Well, there's little question that hard drugs are associated with higher crime rates. The problem with quantifying that is that so often the crime is committed at the time that the perpetrator is under the influence of alcohol. For example, 40 percent of the people in federal prison acknowledge that they were under the influence of illicit drugs at the time they committed the crime for which they were imprisoned.

DI: What do you think of President George Bush's drug plan compared to the plan passed by the Senate, and what type of pressure do you think they will put on the states, especially Iowa?

Forrest: The essential difference between the president's plan and what ultimately passed the Senate was the amount of money made available. The Senate added $1 billion to the president's plan and the bulk of that is going to the demand side for prevention, treatment and education. Only about a 10th is going to law enforcement. Of the balance of the total amount the Senate appropriated, over half is going to law enforcement and the rest to prevention, treatment and education.

When it arrives it will put immediate pressure on the Iowa court system and the Iowa correctional system. With those funds available, more people committing drug crimes will be arrested, charged, prosecuted and imprisoned. But it is important to remember that those moneys won't start to become available until 1990.

DI: When national drug policy coordinator William Bennett tours Iowa to see how drugs have affected the rural Midwest, what do you think he will find?

Forrest: I can't speak for William Bennett, but I can say that I do have the perception of the U.S. attorney general (upon hearing that there was heroin in Iowa) that the people in the East are surprised to learn that there is a drug problem in the Midwest. If that is the case, then I'm sure he'll be confirmed in that opinion."

Use your head. Smart people recycle aluminum, paper and glass.

The strained relationship between Phillip Jones, dean of student services, and Prescott surfaced this summer when Prescott tried to prevent the UI Office of Campus Programs from expanding into the SLS suite. Jones wanted the SLS offices moved to the Iowa House.

Rather than relocate neighboring offices, such as foreign language teaching assistant offices or an arts and craft office, Jones targeted the SLS corner of the Union to make room for campus programs.

Prescott received an advisory opinion from the Iowa State Bar Association in early September. The ethics committee said the Iowa House office, as Prescott explained in a letter to the committee, would be unsuitable for the practice of law.

Jones maintains that the IBA decision is not binding to the UI and that SLS is scheduled to move on October 12.

"Students shouldn't have to bear this burden," said Huss. "The library is the university's responsibility."

USI suggests that the Regents seek funds for health care from the state legislature rather than from students.

"The Regents should identify health care on campus as a priority and ask the Legislature for the funds to support it," Hanson said.

USI representatives will speak in front of the Regents at their October 18-19 meeting, and will address the Iowa Legislature's Higher Education Task Force at a public hearing in the UI's Old Capitol Senate Chamber today.

Plight of newspapers

All week long top editors from several hundred Associated Press newspapers have gathered in Des Moines to share their successes and discuss their failures of the past year.

Such meetings are good for the field of journalism. In addition to getting management out of the office for a while, nationwide conferences enable editors to look over their shoulders at what everyone else is doing.

But this year's AP Managing Editors meeting was prefaced by a sour note. The latest studies show that only about half of all U.S. adults say they read a newspaper every day.

That's opposed to about three-quarters of all adults in 1967. Numbers like that scare anyone who has anything to do with producing the printed word. And that certainly was the feeling at the APME convention.

Television and other modern distractions are now realities that newspapers have to try to compete with. It's merely a matter of survival.

And we at the DI want to survive. We're constantly looking for ways to improve our product and keep our readers' interest.

Getting you, the readers and patrons, involved is the key. That's what Paul Janensch, president of APME, stressed to editors this week.

Fresher air

This week's Congressional compromise on clear air laws represents the most significant progress against polluting industries in years. After more than a decade of stalemate, a vigorous debate by the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment led to a unanimous decision to tighten air-pollution controls.

Not that heavy industry was willing to go down without a fight. Auto makers and other manufacturers have spent a fortune lobbying to influence regulation of their smokestacks. For example, Citizens for Sensible Control of Acid Rain spent $5 million between 1983 and 1988 to block legislation against sulfur exhaust.

And lobbying has not been the only method industry has used, either. Between 1981 and 1988, House and Senate candidates received over $23 million in campaign contributions from coal, oil and chemical companies, and electrical utilities.

Their lobbying dollars have been well invested. Notwithstanding public demand for cleaner air, and despite scientists' claims of an accelerating greenhouse effect, pollution curbs have remained at essentially the same levels since the Clean Air Act was signed into law in 1970.

But three factors have led to the change this week, and new legislation.

- The change in the Oval Office, and its diminished connection to heavy industry.
- The professed willingness of more and more Americans to pay the price for a cleaner planet, and industry's realization of the extent to which pollution control costs can be passed to their customers. (In fact, if the nation's electric utilities divided among their users the pollution control costs they expect under this week's resolution, the price would be only $12 per customer.)
- The cumulative effect of acid rain, now visible to the naked eye, from the burnt out trees of the Adirondacks, to the fishless ponds of Vermont.

There might be a fourth reason, too: Perhaps these industries are beginning to see the moral weakness of their arguments for dirty air. Could they actually be responding to the widespread concern that they are destroying the earth's ecosystem?

That would be too good to be true.

A useful U.N.

In the past, the United Nations has often served as little more than a mouthpiece in promoting world peace because it possessed limited power to mediate between member nations.

But Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has proposed a series of measures designed to grant the United Nations a greater role in preventing strife amongst nations and in protecting the environment. The plan is long overdue; the United Nations needs more clout to serve effectively, and Gorbachev's proposals are designed to give the organization much-needed bargaining leverage.

The plan includes measures to authorize the U.N. president to mediate between countries heading toward a dispute and to allow the U.N. General Assembly, the International Court of Justice and the Office of the Secretary General to have a greater hand in negotiating disputes.

Other measures, however, should not be included in the plan, such as the proposal to step up U.N. peacekeeping forces in areas of tension. This is an euphemism for military intervention, which is not the role of the United Nations was created to serve.

The other ill-suited feature of the proposal is the request for the use of satellites to monitor "the state of nature's health from outer space." The state of the nature's health is already known. It needs fixing, not just monitoring.

The Eighties: Who's to blame?

Voice Over: "The following program has been funded in part by a grant from I.B.M. Exxon and A.T. and T. Consolidated Industries. It's sort of our way of paying the government back for allowing us to merge and put millions of people out of work while making our executives rich."

Narrator: "It began with the election of a right-wing president and the death of a left-wing rock star. It's ending with the trial of Zsa Zsa Gabor. In between, you had junk bonds, 'Wheel of Fortune,' 'Cats,' tofu, video games, callanetics. Tonight, we'll take a look back at the Eighties — the people who lived it, the clothes they wore, the movies they watched, the drugs they injected and the co-workers they screwed over."

Credits: "WGB Boston, in cooperation with the Public Broadcasting System, presents, 'The Eighties — A Look Back At A Tumultuous Decade.' Well, wait a minute, not tumultuous. How about, 'The Eighties — A Look Back At An Exciting Decade?' O.K., exciting might be too strong. How about 'The Eighties — A Look Back At A Decade That Was Really Very... Adequate. I Guess.'"

Narrator: "Good evening, I'm Geraldo Rivera. And these are pictures of scenes of graphic violence from the movie 'The Texas Chainsaw Massacre.' Here's one of a woman being turned into sausage by a masked guy with a chainsaw. A lot of people in the Eighties probably rented this movie, and many like it were made during the decade. We'll be showing you scenes from these movies throughout the broadcast. We'll also be showing you gratuitous shots of Vanessa

James Cahoy

Williams' lesbian pictures in Penthouse, go on a raid of a crack house and interview a man who claims to have had sex with Barney Frank. But because this is Public Broadcasting, we also have to have some intellectual content. So let's get that out of the way first.

"You know, the Eighties meant many things to many people. We interviewed a typical average American, Donna Waleski, 27, a mutual fund manager at the Morgan Stanley brokerage firm, to ask what the Eighties meant to her.

Waleski: "Oh, gosh, where can I begin? I mean, it was such an exciting decade to live in, you know. Well, to begin with, I'm making over $100,000 a year, I've got a really nice apartment in midtown Manhattan, I just bought a BMW and I'm about to close a big deal with Cargill..."

Geraldo: "Uh, Miss Waleski? Sorry to interrupt, but actually we were more interested in knowing what you thought of the Eighties as a decade. I mean, you know, the politics, people's values, the culture."

Waleski: "The culture? Oh, I know, you mean the music. I thought the music in the eighties was very cool. I mean there was one group... what was their name? They sang that song 'I touched the rains down in Africa,' and the song about Rosanne Barr, and the song about..."

Geraldo: "But of course, there was more to the Eighties than just politics, values and culture."

Waleski: "Wait I know! Total! I mean Toto! Wasn't there a group with that name? Or maybe..."

Geraldo: "There was a grimmer side to the decade. Crack, random acts of violence, and of course, a war." (Switch to grim looking mental hospital.)

Geraldo: "Bob Briggs, on the surface, may look like your typical mental-hospital psychopath. But actually, former Staff Sgt. Briggs is one of the literally dozens of sufferers of the disease known as 'Post-Granada Stress Syndrome.' Briggs told us of his experiences."

Briggs: "Well, we were walking along the beach on patrol, having landed just 24 hours before. All of the sudden, I saw this beautiful pink and white tropical bird. I reached up to touch it. All of the sudden, Morris yells real loud, 'DON'T TOUCH THAT BIRD. IT MAY BE A CUBAN BOOBY TRAP!' And before you could say 'Al Haig' he shoots it off the tree. We tried to save it with medical attention, but it was no use. Seeing that bird die was the saddest thing."

Geraldo: "Because it reminded you of all the men you had to kill to salvage democracy on that troubled island?"

Briggs: "No, we never did see any combat, since we got there about five hours after the initial landing and they had pretty much cleared out all the enemy by that time. But that bird thing haunts me to this day, and I still get flashbacks whenever I go to a zoo."

Geraldo (walking in front of Wall Street): "Many people think the values of the Eighties could be described in one word: greed. But is that true? We interviewed some college students at the University of Southern California, asking them what they see as their basic values.

College Student 1: "Values? There's only three basic values, dude: booze, babes and bucks."

College Student 2: "Hey, are you really Geraldo Rivera? I'm a senior in communications, and I really need a job. You think you might have time to look at my resume?"

College Student 3: "Geraldo Rivera? That's Hispanic, isn't it? You know, some of my best friends are Hispanic, but I really have to tell you, I oppose affirmative action. I mean, as a white male, why should I be discriminated against? O.K., there was that whole slavery thing, but..."

Geraldo: "But perhaps no one epitomized the Eighties and its values more than former President Ronald Reagan. We asked Reagan what he thought the Eighties and his presidency meant to most people."

Reagan: "Well, Jerry, you know, that question reminds me of a story. Back when I was broadcasting in Iowa while serving as a combat veteran in World War II... They were brave men. I still remember to this day his words. He looked at me with a tear in his eye and said, 'I, too, love democracy.' Thank you, and God bless America. (Snore.)"

Geraldo: "Well, so much for the intellectual part of our program. We'll be back in a moment with a dramatic reenactment of the Rev. Jim Bakker's sexual encounter with Jessica Hahn."

James Cahoy's column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints page.

Barbecued chicken, anyone?

To the Editor:
Bravo Steve Cruse ["Les Miz" doesn't match hoopla," DI, October 2]. [His] insightful review so eloquently captured the essence of "Les Miz": "I thought it was boring, man."

[Cruse] failed, however, to mention the remarkable warmth the talented cast radiated throughout the show. A warmth so intense the entire audience was sweating like pigs. I sat in the balcony's uppermost section and it was so hot I could have barbecued a chicken on my forehead.

With tickets nearly 50 bucks and Hancher Auditorium making about $100,000, you'd think they could have turned on the A/C.

'Awesome' show

To the Editor:
In reply to the unfortunate Steve Cruse who thought "Les Miserables" was "boring" ["Les Miz" doesn't match hoopla," DI, Oct. 2], may I say that his review suggests that he has seen very little musical theatre, for anyone with a passing knowledge of music recognizes that the songs in "Les Miz" are incredibly beautiful.

This writer has seen every major musical for the past twenty years, and in my opinion, never has a show produced an effect as awesome as "Les Miserables."

Ninety-nine percent of the Iowa City audience left Hancher not humming, but singing; in some cases, people were simply speechless with pleasure at this wonderfully moving production.

Random nitpicking

To the Editor:
Steve Cruse's article ["Les Miz" doesn't match hoopla," DI, Oct. 2] was one of the funniest things I've ever read. In writing this article, [Cruse]... managed to make himself look really ignorant about theater in general.

I would hope that negative criticisms of a piece of art would have good supporting arguments, instead of random nitpicking at this clan of "uncultured Midwestern hating" brochure salesmen.

Furthermore, when criticizing the music it might be a good idea for the quotation to be correct. Javert's last line is, "There is no way to go on," not "I cannot go on."

Harkin meets the challenge

To the Editor:

Three cheers for Sen. Tom Harkin for his efforts on behalf of disabled Americans. While Republican members of Congress like Sen. Jesse Helms and Rep. Tom Tauke are busy trying to decide exactly what kind of art we should be allowed to see or whether a few fanatics should be allowed to burn the flag, it's comforting to know that Iowans have a senator who is working hard to ensure constitutional liberties for all Americans, not trying to attack and limit them.

The Aid to Disabled Americans bill is a major piece of legislation that will benefit more than 43 million Americans with physical and mental challenges... make it illegal to discriminate against such individuals, and assist them in finding positions in the workforce.

Creating equality of opportunity for all is a major task. We can be thankful that Sen. Harkin is up to the challenge.

Quote clarification

To the Editor:

I am writing to clarify two quotes that I made in Ms. Jennifer Glynn's article, "Pro-legalization rally sprouts criticism" (DI, Oct. 4). I was quoted as saying, "UI students do not support the legalization of drugs..." While I appreciate that Ms. Glynn did try to capture the spirit of my intent, I think it necessary to inform the student body that I said, "Most UI students do not support the legalization of drugs..."

It is also necessary to provide reference to the statement, "Seventy percent of the violent crimes committed in 12 major cities in the United States last year were committed under the influence of drugs." This study was made by the National Institute of Justice.

I apologize for any confusion that may have been caused.

Privately funded rocket burns

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A private rocket went up in flames during a launch attempt Thursday, ruining the first American booster designed and built solely with commercial funds, officials said.

"Once the flames came out of the rocket, we kept waiting for it to lift off and didn't see it leave the pad," said Peter Angelotti, a spokesman for American Rocket Co.

"People were saying, 'It didn't take off! It didn't take off,'" he said. "Then flame and black smoke began to come out of the bottom of the rocket cylinder."

The 58-foot-tall rocket was to have taken a 15-minute suborbital flight to test Star Wars missile detectors on a satellite orbiting overhead.

Thursday's failed launch was another blow to the Camarillo-based company. Its founder, George Koopman, died in an automobile accident July 19 while driving to a rocket test at Edwards Air Force Base. Koopman said earlier he wanted American Rocket "to be the Federal Express of the space business."

American Rocket said its booster, dubbed the "Koopman Express," was the first in the United States designed and built only with commercial funds, without any government subsidy or surplus parts. Rockets used in other commercial launches this year were built under government programs although later sold for commercial use, according to the company.

"This is the rocket business, and this is why you do test flights," said Jim Bennett, president of American Rocket. "It's not at all uncommon for your first prototype to have a problem like this. We'll be investigating and learning from it and go on."

He said it probably will be next year before his company attempts another launch. The company estimated this one cost $2 million.

The launch had been scheduled during a two-minute window beginning at 10:28 a.m. PDT, but "we lighted it up, and for one reason or the other it didn't lift off," Bennett said.

France plans trade to Brazil of rocket fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite strong U.S. protests, the French government plans to trade Brazil sensitive rocket technology that could be used by U.S. enemies to make ballistic missiles, government and industry officials said Thursday.

France has promised to give Brazil the technology of a liquid fuel motor called Viking, which powers the Ariane space launch vehicle, the officials said. In return, the French company Arianespace would be awarded a $60 million contract for the launch of two Brazilian communications satellites, they added.

The U.S. officials, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said French President Francois Mitterrand personally made the decision to give the technology to Brazil, promising that safeguards would be placed to prevent use of the motor for lethal purposes.

But a statement issued by the government in Paris denied a final decision had been made. "The definitive contract will be submitted to the government for approval, and this contract has not yet been given" to the government, the statement said.

"This contract will have to follow certain purposes and restrictions regarding technology transfers," it said.

The United States, however, is doubtful such safeguards can be implemented effectively.

"If someone like Libya wants to use this motor to harmful purposes, who will stop them?" asked one official.

Libya has been seeking to buy from Brazil equipment and know-how in an effort to develop a ballistic missile arsenal capable of delivering chemical weapon warheads, according to U.S. experts.

Brazil, one of an estimated 20 Third World countries which have some form of ballistic missile capability, has been exporting some missile technology while attempting to develop a more accurate and sophisticated arsenal of its own.

7,600 refugees make long trip to W. Germany on locked train

HOF, West Germany (AP) — Freedom trains brought 7,600 East Germans to the West on Thursday after a slow, cold trip that witnesses said was disrupted when thousands left behind fought police in an attempt to board the locked cars.

More than 600 more East Germans were heading for sanctuary in West Germany from Poland.

The refugees who reached this town Thursday from Prague, Czechoslovakia, had spent up to 14 hours locked in unheated East German trains. Many had long waits outside the West German Embassy in Prague for a chance to get in and join the exodus.

"We spent the night outside the gate," said Guido Albrecht, 26, of Potsdam. "It was really cold, but we kept hoping we'd get in. We were ready to stay longer if necessary."

Compassionate gestures by Czechoslovak civilians made things easier. Prague residents at first seemed indifferent to the refugees, who gathered at the embassy over several weeks, but gradually they became interested.

Many brought chocolate for the children or gave hot tea to people sitting in the cold. As the East Germans boarded buses for the railroad station, crowds gathered to applaud and wave.

But the Bush administration also cautioned East Germans that the U.S. Embassy in East Berlin cannot grant waves of them extended sanctuary.

Youth holds class hostage, wounds face of classmate

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy armed with a shotgun and a handgun took a high-school drama class hostage Thursday and shot one student in the face before being talked into surrendering, police said.

The wounded youth was in fair condition.

The confrontation at Loara High School lasted about 40 minutes. Police Chief Joseph Molloy said of the arrested youth, identified as Corey Robb, "We have had contact with him before in our department."

Robb, armed with a .12-gauge shotgun and a semiautomatic handgun, entered the class of 35 students and shot the victim within the first few minutes, then ordered the teacher out of the room, Lt. Marc Hedgpeh said.

Ten minutes later the girls and the wounded boy were allowed to leave, but 10 or 12 boys remained hostage. A police negotiator began talking to the boy, who eventually put down his weapons and walked out of the classroom, officers said.

Robb had only been a student at Loara for a few weeks and "there was nothing to indicate he was after one particular student," Hedgpeh said.

Fellow students identified the arrested youth only as "Corey."

Student Mindy DeLuca said she was in the class when the armed youth entered wearing a trench coat and holding a gun.

He told the teacher, identified only as Mr. Tuttle, to leave the auditorium and lock the door behind him, DeLuca said, and the teacher said: "Come on class, we're going."

Senate OKs ban on defacing flag

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Thursday overwhelmingly approved a statutory ban on defacing the American flag after defeating a proposed revision that sponsors said could prove fatal in a future court test.

President George Bush said he respected "the intention," but would continue to push for a constitutional amendment instead.

The 91-9 final vote came after maneuvering by Senate Republicans, who say along with Bush that amending the Constitution rather than passing a simple statute is the only effective way to counter last June's U.S. Supreme Court decision throwing out a Texas flag-burning law.

The bill, which previously passed the House but now returns there for consideration of Senate changes, calls for up to a $1,000 fine and a year in jail for burning or otherwise defacing the flag. Both houses are to consider a proposed amendment to the Constitution later this month.

The Democrats say they have carefully worded their bill to protect it against an expected new court challenge on free-speech grounds.

U.S. inflexibility helped Noriega

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, describing the aborted Panama coup as the administration's first "crisis operation," said Thursday the effort to overthrow Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was doomed by misjudgments by the rebels as well as by American forces' lack of flexibility.

"Every administration has a shakedown in one way or another, and we've learned some things about our operation that we need to improve," said a senior administration official who insisted on anonymity. "And we'll improve them."

"This is our first bloodletting, if you will," he said, the first "kind of a crisis operation."

Another U.S. official, evaluating the events of the past two days, said the American forces in Panama were prepared for any contingency — "from the maximum all the way to the minimum." But this official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said constraints were placed on Gen. Maxwell Thurman of the Southern Command, who assumed his duties in Panama just two days before the insurrection.

Soviet troops break Azerbaijan blockade

MOSCOW (AP) — Soldiers began guarding fuel and food shipments bound for beleaguered Armenia, cut off for more than two months by saboteurs in the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan, reports from the region said Thursday.

Soviet troops arrived in the republic to ensure the safe arrival of supplies, most of which must pass through Azerbaijan to reach Armenia, the reports said.

It was unclear if Soviet troops also were in Azerbaijan, but a source in the region said supplies were safely reaching Armenia.

Azerbaijanis for more than two months have burned bridges and blocked rail lines to stop the regular flow of supplies from reaching Armenia. The blockades are reportedly an outgrowth of the dispute over which republic should control the territory of Nagorno-Karabakh.

The blockade not only has resulted in chronic shortages of food, fuel and other crucial staples, it has also interrupted the flow of supplies to people affected by the devastating December 7 Armenian earthquake.

Armenia is at the southern border of the eastern Soviet Union and much of the republic is bounded by Azerbaijan, through which 80 percent of the supplies must pass.

Woman throws two children from 10th floor

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman threw two children out a 10th-floor window Thursday, killing one and critically injuring the other, officials said. Police stormed the apartment and saved a third child as he was being pushed out.

The woman, believed to be the children's mother, was taken into custody five minutes after the two children fell, said police spokesman Detective Joseph McConville.

Apparently a neighbor told officers at a nearby firehouse about the woman, and firefighters contacted police who went to the scene in time to save a child who was clinging to the window ledge, McConville said.

Three other children were in the apartment at the time but were not harmed. It was not known if they saw their siblings being thrown from the window of the apartment in the borough of Queens, police said.

The woman was identified as Meenah Abdussalaam; no age was given. She was not immediately charged.

Nancy Uzo, spokeswoman for St. John's Episcopal Hospital, said a girl, believed to be 7 years old, had died. A boy, thought to be 4, was in critical condition, she said. Both suffered massive internal injuries, fractures and cardiac arrest, said Charles De Gaetano of the Emergency Medical Services.

The woman also was taken to the hospital for examination although she was not physically hurt, police said.

Florida allows 'no consent' for abortions

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A law requiring pregnant girls to get parental consent before having an abortion was struck down by the state Supreme Court on Thursday, just five days before lawmakers were to consider restricting access to abortions.

The split decision said Florida's constitutional guarantee of privacy outweighed the 1988 statute requiring consent of a parent, guardian or judge for a minor's abortion.

Atty. Gen. Bob Butterworth immediately said his office would petition the court for a rehearing.

"The challenged statute fails because it intrudes upon the privacy of the pregnant minor from conception to birth," the court wrote. "Such a substantial invasion of a pregnant female's privacy by the state for the full term of the pregnancy is not necessary for the preservation of maternal health or the potentiality of life."

The court heard the case of a 15-year-old Lake County girl, identified in court records only as "T.W." She was denied permission for an abortion by a local judge, but her appeal wound its way to the U.S. Supreme Court, which returned the case without comment to the Florida Supreme Court.

In the decision, the Florida court noted the U.S. Supreme Court "has made it clear that the states, not the federal government, are the final guarantors of personal privacy."

"We can conceive of few more personal or private decisions concerning one's body that one can make in the course of a lifetime," the court determined in upholding a 5th District Court of Appeals decision.

The court's ruling came just five days before a special session of the Legislature called by Gov. Bob Martinez to consider further abortion restrictions.

"I'm going to work to make certain that somehow parental consent comes back," Martinez said. He also is seeking fetal viability tests; a ban on use of public funds, personnel and facilities for abortions; tougher abortion clinic standards and a notice to women seeking abortions on the development of their fetuses.

"If the Florida Supreme Court will not protect children, and parents cannot, then the Legislature must, by passing new abortion clinic regulations," Martinez said.

Senate President Bob Crawford said he planned to ask Martinez to postpone the special session in wake of the court's decision.

"I think it demonstrates very clearly that the abortion session is premature," Crawford said.

Reaction to the court's decision fell along lines already drawn in the state battle over abortion.

Is violence necessary to change society?

Marxists often talk about achieving "revolutionary" change, but what does this mean? And how does this compare with the strategy of "nonviolence" put forward by pacifists?

Lance Selfa will explain why these two strategies represent very different perspectives on social change.

Hawks eye rebound against N. Illinois

Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Attempting to come back from a 3-0 loss to Minnesota Wednesday, the Iowa volleyball team will take on Western Illinois Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"(Minnesota) was the most difficult match we've played this season," Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said. "But we've had real good matches all season. And it should be a good one against Western Illinois."

The Hawkeyes and the Westwinds have met 14 times, with Iowa leading the series 12-2. Last season, Iowa defeated Western Illinois 15-7, 15-3, 15-6.

So far this season, the Westwinds hold an overall record of 13-4 under coach Juli Kartel.

They are led by senior Michele Aulig, who averages 3.7 kills and 2.9 digs per game; and junior Diane Ellefritz, who averages 2.6 kills and 0.8 blocks per game.

Iowa goes into this weekend with an overall record of 8-5. Prior to the Minnesota game, senior Kari Hamel led the Hawkeyes, averaging 3.9 kills and 2.7 digs per game.

The biggest disadvantage for the Hawkeyes will be coping without their starting middle-hitter, Trista Schoenbeck.

Schoenbeck left the first game against the Gophers with a sprained ankle, and according to Nelson, she will probably not be up to form for three or four weeks.

"We played well against Minnesota considering many players

"We played well against Minnesota considering many players adapted to positions they had never played."

adapted to positions they had never played," Nelson said. "(The players who don't usually get much playing time) won't have a chance. They have to fit in. It's just a matter of how soon and how quick they catch on. But we found out that we need everybody."

According to junior setter Janet Moylan, this weekend will give the team a chance to try some new things, including some different lineups without Schoenbeck.

"I would like to use this match as a time to experiment," Moylan said. "Even when we were losing (to Minnesota), we were trying to do some different plays and things. And it's a good time to get comfortable with new people on the court."

Cubs even NLCS with 9-5 triumph

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs still can't figure out Kevin Mitchell and Will Clark. But Mark Grace and friends had no trouble solving Rick Reuschel and salvaging the split they needed.

Pitcher Mike Bielecki, the worst hitter in the major leagues, singled to spark a six-run first inning and the Cubs held San Francisco at bay, beating the Giants 9-5 Thursday night to even the National League playoffs at one game apiece.

Chicago bounced back from Wednesday's 11-3 rout in a hurry. They chased the 40-year-old Reuschel with five hits, including an RBI double by Grace, and Jerome Walton capped the outburst against Kelly Downs with his second single of the inning.

That, along with a three-run double by Grace in the sixth that gave him three hits for the second consecutive night, was enough for three Chicago pitchers to withstand San Francisco's sluggers.

Mitchell, who led the majors with 47 home runs, homered for the second straight game and singled twice. Clark, who drove in a record six runs in the opener, singled and walked, extending his streak of reaching base to seven. Matt Williams hit a two-run shot in the eighth and Robby Thompson a solo home run in the ninth that gave the Giants, who out-homered Chicago 141-124 during the season, a 6-2 home run edge in the playoffs.

The Cubs, however, stopped Clark when it mattered most, maybe because of a move Manager Don Zimmer might have made one night earlier. Chicago led 6-2 in the fifth when the Giants put runners on second and third with two outs. Zimmer pulled Bielecki and brought in lefty Paul Assenmacher to face the left-handed Clark, who grounded out on the first pitch.

In Wednesday night's opener, Zimmer was second-guessed for leaving in struggling Greg Maddux — even though Assenmacher was warmed up — to face Clark with two outs and the bases loaded in the fourth. Clark hit the first pitch for a grand slam that broke the game open.

The next three games will be in Candlestick Park. Rick Sutcliffe (16-11) will start against San Francisco's Mike LaCoss (10-10) at 8:20 p.m. EDT Saturday.

Les Lancaster pitched four innings for the victory. Because Bielecki did not last five innings, Assenmacher would have been in line for the win, but he gave up two singles to start the sixth.

An all-day rain that stopped shortly before gametime failed to dampen the spirits of the sellout crowd of 39,195 and fans standing five deep on the nearby rooftops.

San Francisco Giants manager Roger Craig takes the ball from Rick Reuschel Thursday night during Game 2 of the NLCS in Chicago. Reuschel was shelled in the first inning, as the Cubs scored six runs.

Words fly during AL series break

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays and Oakland Athletics took a day off from the American League playoffs Thursday and spent it trading insults.

Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber accused Oakland of "show-boating" during its victories in the first two games of the series.

Talking about Dave Parker's slow home-run trot in Game 2, Gruber said: "I don't particularly care for the hot dog type. It sort of makes me want to get some vengeance."

ALCS

Toronto catcher Ernie Whitt started the verbal war on Wednesday when he said he was angry that Rickey Henderson didn't slide while stealing second base in the seventh inning of Oakland's 6-3 victory. Whitt said Henderson tried to show up Toronto. Henderson said he didn't slide because there wasn't a throw.

Oakland Manager Tony La Russa took exception to Whitt's comments.

"If he's taking it personal and he's embarrassed, he's a fool," he was quoted as saying in a Toronto newspaper. La Russa said Thursday he did make the statement and then defended his team from Toronto's attacks.

"When you get to the postseason, there is a lot of emotion on both sides," La Russa said. "You celebrate. If I thought some of my people overdid it, I would be one of the first people to say, 'Keep it

Spartans bring tough D into conference opener

Kerry Anderson
 The Daily Iowan

It's safe to say that Iowa's 1989 non-conference football schedule pitted the Hawkeyes against much better competition than many of the powder-puff teams that have become a tradition in Iowa's pre-conference calendar in years past.

Instead of the usual laughs played during the Chuck Long-Ronnie Harmon era, this year's Hawkeyes have had to claw and scratch to survive.

But, that added competition early in the season just might be what Iowa coach Hayden Fry needs to help prepare his young team for the rugged Big Ten season.

Fry will find out soon enough in Saturday's Big Ten opener with Michigan State at Kinnick Stadium. Kickoff is set for 1:05 p.m.

The Spartans are coming off two heart-breakers against the top two teams in the nation, Notre Dame and Miami, Fla. In both games, Michigan State was ahead, but missed their chance to be giant-killers in the final moments of each contest.

"(Michigan State) played the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the nation and had an excellent opportunity to defeat both teams," Fry said. "I'm sure they're licking their chops against our youngsters."

"Obviously Michigan State will present one of the toughest tests our football team will face."

Michigan State boasts four potential All-Americans in linebacker Percy Snow, offensive tackle Bob Kula, defensive tackle Travis Davis and tailback Blake Ezor.

Probably the most impressive is Snow — the anchor in Spartan coach George Perles' feared

Snow racked up numerous post-season honors last year, being named first team all-American by The Sporting News, second team All-American by AP and consensus all-Big Ten. He was also in the final five considered for the Butkus Award, which goes to the nation's top linebacker.

"Most linebackers are on one side or the other and you can run away," Fry said, "but you can't run away from Percy. He's also an extremely fine pass defender, so he's a complete package as a college All-American linebacker."

One advantage Fry has going into Saturday's game that he didn't have last year against the Spartans is a healthy team.

Cross Country teams gear up for Hawkeye Open

Pat Axmear
 The Daily Iowan

By removing their top-four runners from competition at the Hawkeye Open, the Iowa women's cross country team hopes to see other team members play more important roles.

The women's race, which will be run at Finkbine Golf Course on Friday at 4 p.m., will be minus Iowa runners Jeanne Kruckeberg, Tami Hoskins, Jennifer Brower and Denise Alto.

"I feel that the girls I'm holding out will have enough competition without this weekend's race," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said. "This will give them a chance to rest before Central Collegiates next weekend."

"This is the last chance some of the team will be able to compete this season and I want to give them the competition they need. By not racing some of the others, (the new people) should have better performances. This will give them the chance to run a different kind of race."

W. Cross Country

Iowa's competition will be Western Illinois, Northern Iowa, Iowa Wesleyan and St. Ambrose.

The Hawkeye's toughest challenge will be from Western Illinois, whose top runner Kathy Campbell, beat everyone except Kruckeberg in the same race last year.

Although some of Iowa's runners will not be competing, Hassard said he feels with a good competitive effort, his team should do well.

"Western Illinois will be tough, but we should have enough to beat them, especially since Kim Schneckloth and Tracy Dahl will be back," Hassard said. "I'm looking to see improvements from the runners who are competing. This is the exact same course we ran on a few weeks ago, so we should be able to make some comparisons from the two performances. The race should answer any questions about how the team is improving."

Friday's race will be the last for some of the team, but it marks the first for Schneckloth. She has been out all season with a pulled tendon in her foot.

"I'm used to starting the season

Friday's Hawkeye Open will be an experiment for the Iowa men's cross country team.

The meet will be run at Finkbine Golf Course at 4:45 p.m. and will be a non-scoring meet as far as team points go, with only individual scores being kept.

"This meet will give us an opportunity to work on individual performances," Iowa coach Larry Wiczorek said. "Since their is no real risk, the team can run less conservatively. I expect to see some runners at the front of the pack early in the race. We should probably see some different tactics being used during this race."

Iowa State, St. Ambrose, Iowa Wesleyan and Morningside will be the other teams competing. Not everyone is planning to change their strategies for this meet. Tim Slingsby said he plans to go out and run like he always does.

"I'm going out from the start hard," Slingsby said. "The big thing is working through the meet. We're not looking past it because every meet is important, but were aren't keying on it either."

"It really doesn't effect me that there is no team scoring. No matter if you do poorly it still effects the individual."

Because the meet is open, unattached runners are allowed to compete. Last year's winner of the Hawkeye Open, Dan Hostager, formerly of Northern Iowa, will be racing on Friday. Wiczorek said he felt Hostager would be the Hawkeyes' toughest competition.

Iowa State will not be bringing their full team, but Wiczorek said he felt they also would be strong.

"I don't know how tough the competition will be," Wiczorek said. "Our worst mistake would be to underestimate the other teams. If you're not prepared and not at your best, you always stand a chance of losing."

According to Wiczorek, the Hawkeyes will be using this meet to piece things together. Many of the team members hope to develop their runner and show real improvement in this meet.

McGwire airs out Utah

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dan McGwire, while starting to make his mark as a college quarterback, still gets sacked now and then by his superstar brother's shadow.

The 6-foot-8 San Diego State quarterback is coming off one of the most productive passing days in the school's history, throwing for 510 yards in the Aztecs' 38-27 victory over Utah last week.

But one national publication recounting his performance referred to him as Mark McGwire, who happens to be the Oakland Athletics' slugging first baseman and Dan's brother. It's happened before, in a local paper and numerous times during interviews.

Dan McGwire, who has interest and pride in his older brother's accomplishments, takes the mixups in stride.

"It really doesn't bother me," he said. "But one of these days, and I'm working real hard at it, they're going to mess up Mark's name and call him Dan. When they do that, I'll know I'll have made it."

Wrestling exhibition

The Iowa wrestling team will hold their first a series of intrasquad practices Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 in the Iowa wrestling room of Carver-Hawkeye Area.

The Hawkeyes will open the 1989-90 season Nov. 18 at the Drake Classic in Des Moines.

Mariners sold

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners officially changed hands Thursday, with Indianapolis businessmen Jeff Smulyan and Michael Browning taking ownership of the club from George Argyros.

Smulyan and Browning purchased the Mariners for a reported $76 million in partnership with the Morgan Stanley Group Inc., a New York investment banking firm.

"All of the papers have been signed, all of the approvals have been given," Smulyan said in a prepared statement. "It's done."

At a news conference in the Kingdome, Smulyan announced the Mariners have extended the contracts of general manager Woody Woodward and manager Jim LeFebvre through the 1991 season.

Pistons start fresh

The defending NBA champions open camp in nearby Windsor, Ontario, with a hole in the starting lineup to fill.

Forward Rick Mahorn was lost in the expansion draft to Minnesota and backup John Salley bulked up to 250 pounds to ready himself for more inside duty.

"That's two-five-oh," Salley said. "That should answer a lot of questions right there."

Hornets sign Reid

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — J.R. Reid, the Charlotte Hornets' first-round draft pick, has been signed to a multi-year contract.

The terms of the agreement were not disclosed during the announcement by team officials Thursday, but Reid reportedly agreed to a three-year-contract at $1 million a year.

"It's a very nice contract. I'm happy with it," Reid said. "Now we're ready to get down to the business of playing basketball. We have the real business part of it out of the way. Now I just have to play ball."

Gooden tested for tumor

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets underwent tests for a possible tumor in his pitching arm, the team confirmed Thursday, although there never was any real reason to believe he had cancer.

"There was never a fear that there was any cancer at all," Mets spokesman Rick Lawes said.

Lawes said, however, that Gooden still has a small tear in a muscle in the back of his right shoulder and is undergoing a therapy program at his Florida home.

down. I saw the Blue Jays celebrate a lot the last two months. Hey, you get happy when you do something good. Now that we got something going good, I don't like some of the comments that make it sound like we're showing people up. We're excited that we're doing good, just as they would be."

Gruber, attending the off-day news conference, backed up Whitt and attacked Oakland anew.

"It's sort of like rubbing salt in the wound," he said of Oakland's behavior. "I believe that you play hard and try to win with grace. I'm glad I'm not a pitcher because you would see a lot of heads ducking. There might be some messages I'd send up there. The staring and the long walks around the bases may be their style of game. I just don't like it. Showboating doesn't mean anything to me."

Oakland worked out under the closed roof of the SkyDome while Toronto Manager Cito Gaston chose to let his players rest. The Blue Jays arrived home at 2 a.m. Thursday.

"I don't think a workout is good if you are exhausted," Gaston said. "You don't work on what you are supposed to. I think a day off is good."

On Friday night in Game 3, Toronto's Jimmy Key (13-14) pitches against Storm Davis (19-17). Key is known for liking to pitch inside, and Gaston said it shouldn't be misinterpreted by Oakland.

"They have some big guys and if they get their arms extended, they're going to hurt you," he said. "In baseball, if you don't pitch inside, you get beat up."

Gaston said Whitt will still be the catcher, despite Oakland's having stolen 10 bases in the first two games, seven by Henderson. He also said he didn't think Henderson had done anything wrong.

"I've been watching Rickey for eight years and he's always been that way," Gaston said. "I guess a lot of people don't like some of the things he does, but that's the way he plays."

Gaston said he also saw nothing wrong with Parker's slow trot.

"Dave's been doing that for a long time," Gaston said. "That's nothing new."

Oakland, trying for its second straight AL title, will be trying to win under a closed roof Friday night. Toronto is 10-0 when the SkyDome's sliding roof is closed.

"I think that's probably luck," Gaston said. "They tell me the ball carries better with the dome open."

"At this time last year, we had already had seven major operations going into the Michigan State game," Fry said. And we had nine other fellas that couldn't play in the ballgame."

Iowa has had to come from behind in the second half to win their last two games. The Hawkeyes battled back from a 21-14 halftime deficit against Iowa State, and had to come back twice to defeat Tulsa.

But Fry scoffed at a reporter's question at his weekly press conference Tuesday about how important it might be to get out in front early Saturday instead of having to play catch-up against a defense the caliber of Michigan State's.

"Gosh, I wouldn't even dream about getting out in front, I'd be dreaming about scoring ... the first play of the game, the last play, whenever," Fry said.

late," Schneckloth said. "I had to do it last year also. My legs are tired because they aren't used to the workouts yet, but I'm going to run my own race. The toughest thing is that I don't know where to set my goals or were I'm at. It will be hard, but I'm pretty confident." Schneckloth said she felt this weekend's race will not only be good for her, but also for the rest of the team.

"It's a low key race and we should do well," Schneckloth said. "The race will allow some of team to take a week off and the rest of us the type of competition we need."

Iowa 4th at McGuire Invite

Alta Heimes
The Daily Iowan

There's always room for improvement.

After the first round of the 54-hole Dick McGuire Invitational golf tournament in Albuquerque, New Mexico, the Iowa women's golf team is tied for fourth place in the 18-team field.

Three other schools with a one-day team score of 314, eight strokes behind Stanford, who leads the tournament with a 306.

Iowa golf coach Diane Thomason said she'll take the fourth-place standing, but she wants to see improvement when play continues today.

"I'm actually kind of a little bit ticked," Thomason said Thursday night. "We should be playing better."

Thomason had no complaints, however, about the performance of Iowa junior Stacey Arnold, who holds a second-place individual standing among 92 golfers with a one-over par, 74.

Also shooting well for the Hawkeyes is junior Shirley Trier, whose score of 78 puts her in a 7-way tie for 13th place. Last year, Trier shot a par round at the Invitational, and Thomason hopes she will do it again this weekend.

"Shirley played well today," Thomason said. "She parred the tournament last year, so we know she can do it. I'm hoping Stacey can stay right around the numbers she shot today."

As she has done all season, Iowa's Kelly Brooke struggled in the first round, shooting a seven-over par 80, and finishing the day tied for 28th. Brooke, however, has consistently shot better second and third rounds in tournaments this season, and Thomason said she is counting on the senior to play up to her ability today.

Thomason said her team's showing at this tournament is a great one for Iowa, since many of the participating teams are ranked in the top 15 nationally. She said some of the other team's coaches approached her after yesterday's round, with surprised expressions of congratulations.

"I think it's kind of hysterical," Thomason chuckled. "The coaches keep coming up to me and saying, 'Hey, good round, Diane.'"

"I want to say, 'Hey, buster, we're going to do this again (today), and then you can say good round.'"

Beglin sees apathetic Hawk squad

The question of whether a well-turfed team can adjust to grass could be answered this weekend when the sixth-ranked Iowa field hockey team plays Michigan State and Ohio State at East Lansing, Mich.

The Hawkeyes play the Spartans today at 3 p.m., meeting up with the Buckeyes Saturday at 1 p.m. "I'm very worried," Iowa coach Beth Beglin said. "We've had the worst week of practice all season. I think this team may be overlooking the competition this weekend."

Iowa, 9-0-2, romped Michigan State 12-0 in the first game of the newly-formed Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey conference Sept. 22.

Spartan coach Martha Ludwig said Michigan State isn't of the same quality as Iowa, but that won't take away the importance of the meeting.

"Michigan State is looking to regain some pride," she said. "The Hawkeyes sit atop the league with highly-ranked Northwestern. The two teams tied 2-2 in double overtime Sept. 30 in Evanston, Ill., in a matchup of conference powers."

"We have to be ready to play all the time," Beglin said. "We can't only get psyched for Northwestern and all the big teams. This is the kind of thing that gets a team in trouble."

Mets dispel rumors, Johnson will stay on (AP)—Davey Johnson kept his job after all Thursday when the New York Mets announced that he will return for a seventh season as manager.

The announcement came two days after sources told The Associated Press that the Mets had decided to fire Johnson and three days after the manager himself told The New York Times that he was convinced he would be fired.

In a statement released in New York and at the National League playoffs in Chicago, the Mets said: "In an effort to dispel rumors and responses to the contrary, general manager Frank Cashen of the New York Mets today announced that the club plans to have Davey Johnson return to manage the team next season. Johnson has a three-year contract with the Mets which runs through 1991."

Cashen had said Tuesday that a decision on Johnson's fate had been made but would not be final until he could talk to the manager, who was fishing in Florida.

"We never had any intentions of firing Davey," Cashen said Thursday through Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz.

Joe McIlvaine, the Mets' vice president for baseball operations, confirmed that the front office had been divided, but he said the final decision was "and we all stand by it."

McIlvaine would not say if he agreed with the decision. "There's always going to be disagreement in the room," he said. "You're not going to get 100 percent agreement all the time. We sit down and discuss it, but that's not unusual. We have these disagreements on trades all the time."

Johnson, who signed a three-year contract after last season, has led the Mets to two division titles and four second-place finishes in six years. The team is 575-395 under him.

McIlvaine said Cashen decided Thursday, a day after talking with Johnson, to keep him.

"We never had any intentions of firing Davey (Johnson)," — General Manager Frank Cashen through Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz.

Al Harazin, the Mets' senior vice president, met with owners Nelson Doubleday and Fred Wilpon on Monday after receiving input from McIlvaine. The next day, the Mets announced as expected that they would not re-sign co-captains Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez but left Johnson's status hanging.

A source close to Cashen quoted the general manager as saying a definite decision had been made to fire Johnson, and a source close to Wilpon confirmed this, saying without equivocation that "Johnson was gone." By Thursday, however, the Wilpon source said the Mets were re-evaluating.

Johnson's job was jeopardized when the Mets, overwhelming favorites in the National League East, struggled to a second-place finish.

"We finished second this year and you want to look for reasons why," McIlvaine said. "We were still 87-75, the same record as the Baltimore Orioles. We're not happy finishing second. We want to finish first all the time. But reading some of the things the last few weeks, you'd think we were a last place team."

Both managers in the NL playoffs said they were happy for Johnson. "I like Davey Johnson," the Cubs' Don Zimmer said. "He won a lot of games over there. There are some guys over there that didn't have the years they were supposed to have."

NBA preseason camps open with new faces

(AP) — Only the expansion teams in Minnesota and Orlando can claim to have more new faces than the San Antonio Spurs.

Only three players — Frank Brickowski, Willie Anderson and Vernon Maxwell — who were with the team when the season ended last April 22 will still be around when training camp starts Friday.

The Spurs went 21-61 last season — Larry Brown's first losing season as a college or pro coach — but the addition of David Robinson, Maurice Cheeks, Terry Cummings, rookie Sean Elliott, Caldwell Jones and Yugoslav Zarko Paspalj at least assures that they won't lose with the same cast.

"I'll never take winning for granted, ever again," said Brown, who was bothered by ringing in his ears last season. "Last year was a real learning experience for me. You start to doubt yourself. I never want to go through that again."

Robinson's return from Naval duty two years after he was the No. 1 pick in the 1987 draft is a surreal new interest in last year's moribund team. Season ticket sales have passed 7,500 per game, highest in team history.

"I was scared to death about David because he'd been away for two years," Brown said. "That's why I got players like David, Maurice and Caldwell Jones."

Elliott, the No. 3 pick in this year's draft, is unsigned but that hasn't prevented him from getting into the spirit of rejuvenation. He participated in three weeklong promotional tours during the summer.

Who let all the Spartans in?

Two — not just one, but two — OTL pickers are huge Michigan State Spartan fans this week. Who says the press, even here at Iowa, can't be fair.

Lo and behold, Spartan head basketball coach Jud Heathcote agreed to honor our page with his awesome presence after Magic Johnson, another State alum, backed out. His agent said something about him being in Hawaii filming a Buick commercial — you know where he gets in a car with Willie Shoemaker and they both fit.

Right. Dry that one out and fertilize the lawn. We can't fit outgoing Sports Editor Mike Trilk and any other member of our staff into a car at the same time — even one of those big Buicks.

Jud, one of only three current Big Ten coaches to lead a team to the National Championship, is probably a better pick than the Magic man anyway. He's a deadpan comedian off the court and a red-hot landmine while he's on the bench.

Bob Holzhammer, who does the public address at Iowa home games, said Jud came over to him once during a game, pulled the microphone away from him and told him not to announce scores while players were shooting free throws.

Like Bobby Knight, only a little more subtle, Knight would have yelled and then dropped a piano on Rev. Holzhammer.

Oh yes, the other MSU patron is our own Managing Editor Joe Levy. He's leading the OTL staff race so far this year at 22-7-1. He's the favorite for the Phinneus J. Whoopie "You're a Genius" OTL Trophy.

The rest of the DI sports staff, all of whom are Hawkeye partisan, is lumbering lathargically behind at 20-9-1.

That group includes Trilk, who calls himself "Magic" because he knows how to make doughnuts, pizza, cake, ice cream, fried chicken, mashed potatoes and all other food prepared in the Western Hemisphere disappear. Kind of like Ohio State's Earl Bruce.

Assistant Sports Editor Bryce Miller and staff writer Erica Weiland make up the rest of the laggards. But you can't pick on them because they're not as cocky as outgoing editor Trilk, who at one point predicted he'd walk away with the contest.

Trilk owns an Edsel. And for those of you ineligible for the Whoopie award, you can grab the $25 gift certificate from Fries BBQ & Grill, 5 S. Dubuque St., if you can solve the mysteries of college football better than any of the other 485 or so others who enter weekly.

Ten others will win OTL T-shirts, colorful silkscreens that have our paper's name splashed all over them. And Trilk will spend Tuesday washing the cars of 100 other entrants drawn at random.

We'll get back to you on that one.

Ben Johnson

Johnson uses drug publicity to send message to children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ben Johnson, who lost his Olympic gold medal last year after testing positive for steroid use, urged young athletes on Thursday not to make the same mistake.

"I got caught in Seoul. I lost my gold medal," Johnson said at a congressional news conference to introduce legislation that would classify anabolic steroids as a controlled substance. "I'm here to tell the people of this country it's wrong to cheat, not to take it, it's bad for your health."

But Johnson, who also had his world record in the 100 meters taken away after admitting he had used steroids, had to share the limelight with his chief rival, Carl Lewis.

Lewis, who sat among the reporters, said he is working on his autobiography and decided to attend the news conference because one of the chapters deals with steroids.

Three-way deadlock at 8-under in opening round of Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lanny Wadkins posted an early 8-under-par 62 Thursday and then sat back and saw it matched by Mark Wiebe and Tom Sieckmann in the first round of the Texas Open.

Attacking cozy Oak Hills Country Club with his customary fervor, Wadkins dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on his final hole to match the course record.

"When Lanny's got it going he never stops to consider what anybody else is doing," quipped Sieck-mann, whose only bogey in the opening round of the $600,000 tournament came when he 3-putted from three feet at the second hole.

"Those things happen," he shrugged.

The trio, all seeking their first title of 1989, held a one-shot lead over Dan Forsman.

Fresh from his sixth Ryder Cup appearance but mired in a year-long slump, Wadkins missed but two fairways, hit all 18 greens, never flirted with a bogey and tied the course record with his nines of 30 and 32.

"It was just a good, solid round of golf," said Wadkins, who could become only the sixth player in tour history to crack the $4 million barrier in career earnings if he gets his 19th PGA victory. The first prize of $108,000 would push his official winnings to $4,028,853.

It brings out the best in all of us.

Writers' Workshop's Gurganus returns

Writer will read selections from novel, 'Oldest Living Confederate Widow'

Tom Barbash
Special The Daily Iowan

It's time to return to your place of schooling a respected and revered author, book firmly lodged on the best-seller lists. It's another thing entirely to return half blind, widowed and 99-years-old.

Author and UI Writers' Workshop graduate, Allan Gurganus will do both 8 p.m. Friday when he steps on the stage at Shambaugh Auditorium and into the persona of Lucy Marsden, the widow of the Civil War's last surviving soldier.

The reading is sponsored by the workshop and by Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Gurganus' novel "Oldest Living Confederate Widow Tells All," published September 8, by Alfred A. Knopf, has leapt to number five on The New York Times' best-seller list. It has been compared by reviewers to works by James Joyce, William Faulkner, and Gabriel Garcia-Marquez. The Times Book Review called the book "a massive and exuberant first novel. Tragedy one page, comedy the next, sonorous myth, myth peppered with the most banal chitchat."

Paul Bogaards, a spokesperson for Knopf, calls Gurganus' book "one of those success stories in publishing that happens every 10 years." It's a serious work selling at the top of the charts. Already it is in its sixth printing.

As the giant book (718 pages) gains popularity and Gurganus takes his readings to 31 cities in 37 days, Lucy is becoming a bit of a celebrity — or as she says in the book's opening chapter "Not dead yet, thank you very much."

Gurganus said he might be by the end of his travels.

"It's been great, but I think I'll be buying a new pair of bedroom slippers when this is done. I'm dying to get back to work," he said.

Thursday during a telephone interview from the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Chicago.

Iowa City, the writer added, will be an easy stop.

"It's a homecoming. I have a few homes around the world and this is one of them."

That Gurganus and Lucy have succeeded on such a scale hasn't surprised students who studied with the writer last fall during a visiting semester at the workshop. Gurganus was known for spending long hours after class helping students, and for his Halloween party, at which he showcased his collection of over 100 neckties.

Second-year student, Bruce Holbert said his former mentor is a dramatic reader.

"He's wonderful reading his stuff. He read the first chapter of the novel last year and he took on (Lucy's) dialect and her voice. It's a performance for him."

Holbert said Gurganus' talents extended to the classroom, where he was a patient and generous teacher.

Students gush when they talk of Gurganus, said Paul Lisicky. "He taught the kind of class that made you want to go out and write right afterwards," he said.

Bogaards of Knopf, who has helped organize Gurganus' reading tour, said the author's accessibility — both as a person and as a writer — have been keys to his high sales.

"First off, the book is accessible. It's literary without being highbrow. And then he's been enormously giving with his time. He's gone all over to promote the book."

The book, Gurganus said, was written to be read aloud.

"I read each section 25 times aloud to myself. This book is about talking and listening. I'm honoring the ear."

While he says he loves reading Lucy's words, Gurganus said he doesn't mimic the voice of an old woman. Knopf enlisted actress Judith Ivey

Allan Gurganus

Reading

to present a shortened version of the book on audio cassettes, which are available now at bookstores.

"I think it's a little corny for me to go out there in a powdered wig and talk like a 99-year-old," he said.

Gurganus, who was born in Rocky Mount, North Carolina, spent seven years researching and writing the novel, which he said was inspired by a Times story about Civil War widows.

He said he modeled Lucy, however, on his paternal grandmother, who was crippled with arthritis and rarely spoke. Lucy's stories, he says, are those he wishes his grandmother told him.

They are stories well worth hearing.

Holy reincarnation, Batman! Robin may return to comics

CHICAGO (AP) — Holy resurrection, Batman! Robin may live after all!

The Boy Wonder of comics, killed off last year after Batman readers voted for his demise in a telephone poll, is about to make a return, a comic book dealer says.

Gary Colabuno, owner of Moon-dog's Inc., a chain of comic book stores in Chicago's northwest suburbs, says sources at DC Comics Inc. have told him a new five-part Batman series will culminate next month with the introduction of a new Robin.

DC's order form sent to retailers for issue No. 442, due out in early November, offers some hints, Colabuno said. It says Batman and "a mysterious youngster" will meet the villain Two Face in an issue that will mark "the introduction of a major new character into the Batman mythos."

Peggy May, marketing manager for New York-based DC, would neither confirm nor deny reports of Robin's return. "We really don't have any comment at this time," she said in a telephone interview

Wednesday. Colabuno says sources at DC indicated that Robin owes his revival to some corporate decisions at Time Warner Inc., which owns DC Comics and Warner Bros. studio.

The studio produced the blockbuster movie "Batman," which is expected to generate in excess of $1 billion in revenues when all ancillary marketing and merchandising rights are counted. And that's without Robin products, since the Boy Wonder wasn't in the movie.

Production is tentatively set to begin on a "Batman" sequel next year that could feature Robin.

"Disney wouldn't kill off Goofy," Colabuno said. "As a businessman, I think it was a dumb thing to do to kill off Robin."

The original Robin — who was known as Dick Grayson when he wasn't wearing his mask — grew up and became the superhero Nightwing in DC's The New Titans comics.

In the mid-1980s, he was replaced by another Robin, who in street clothing was a streetwise punk.

PREGAME

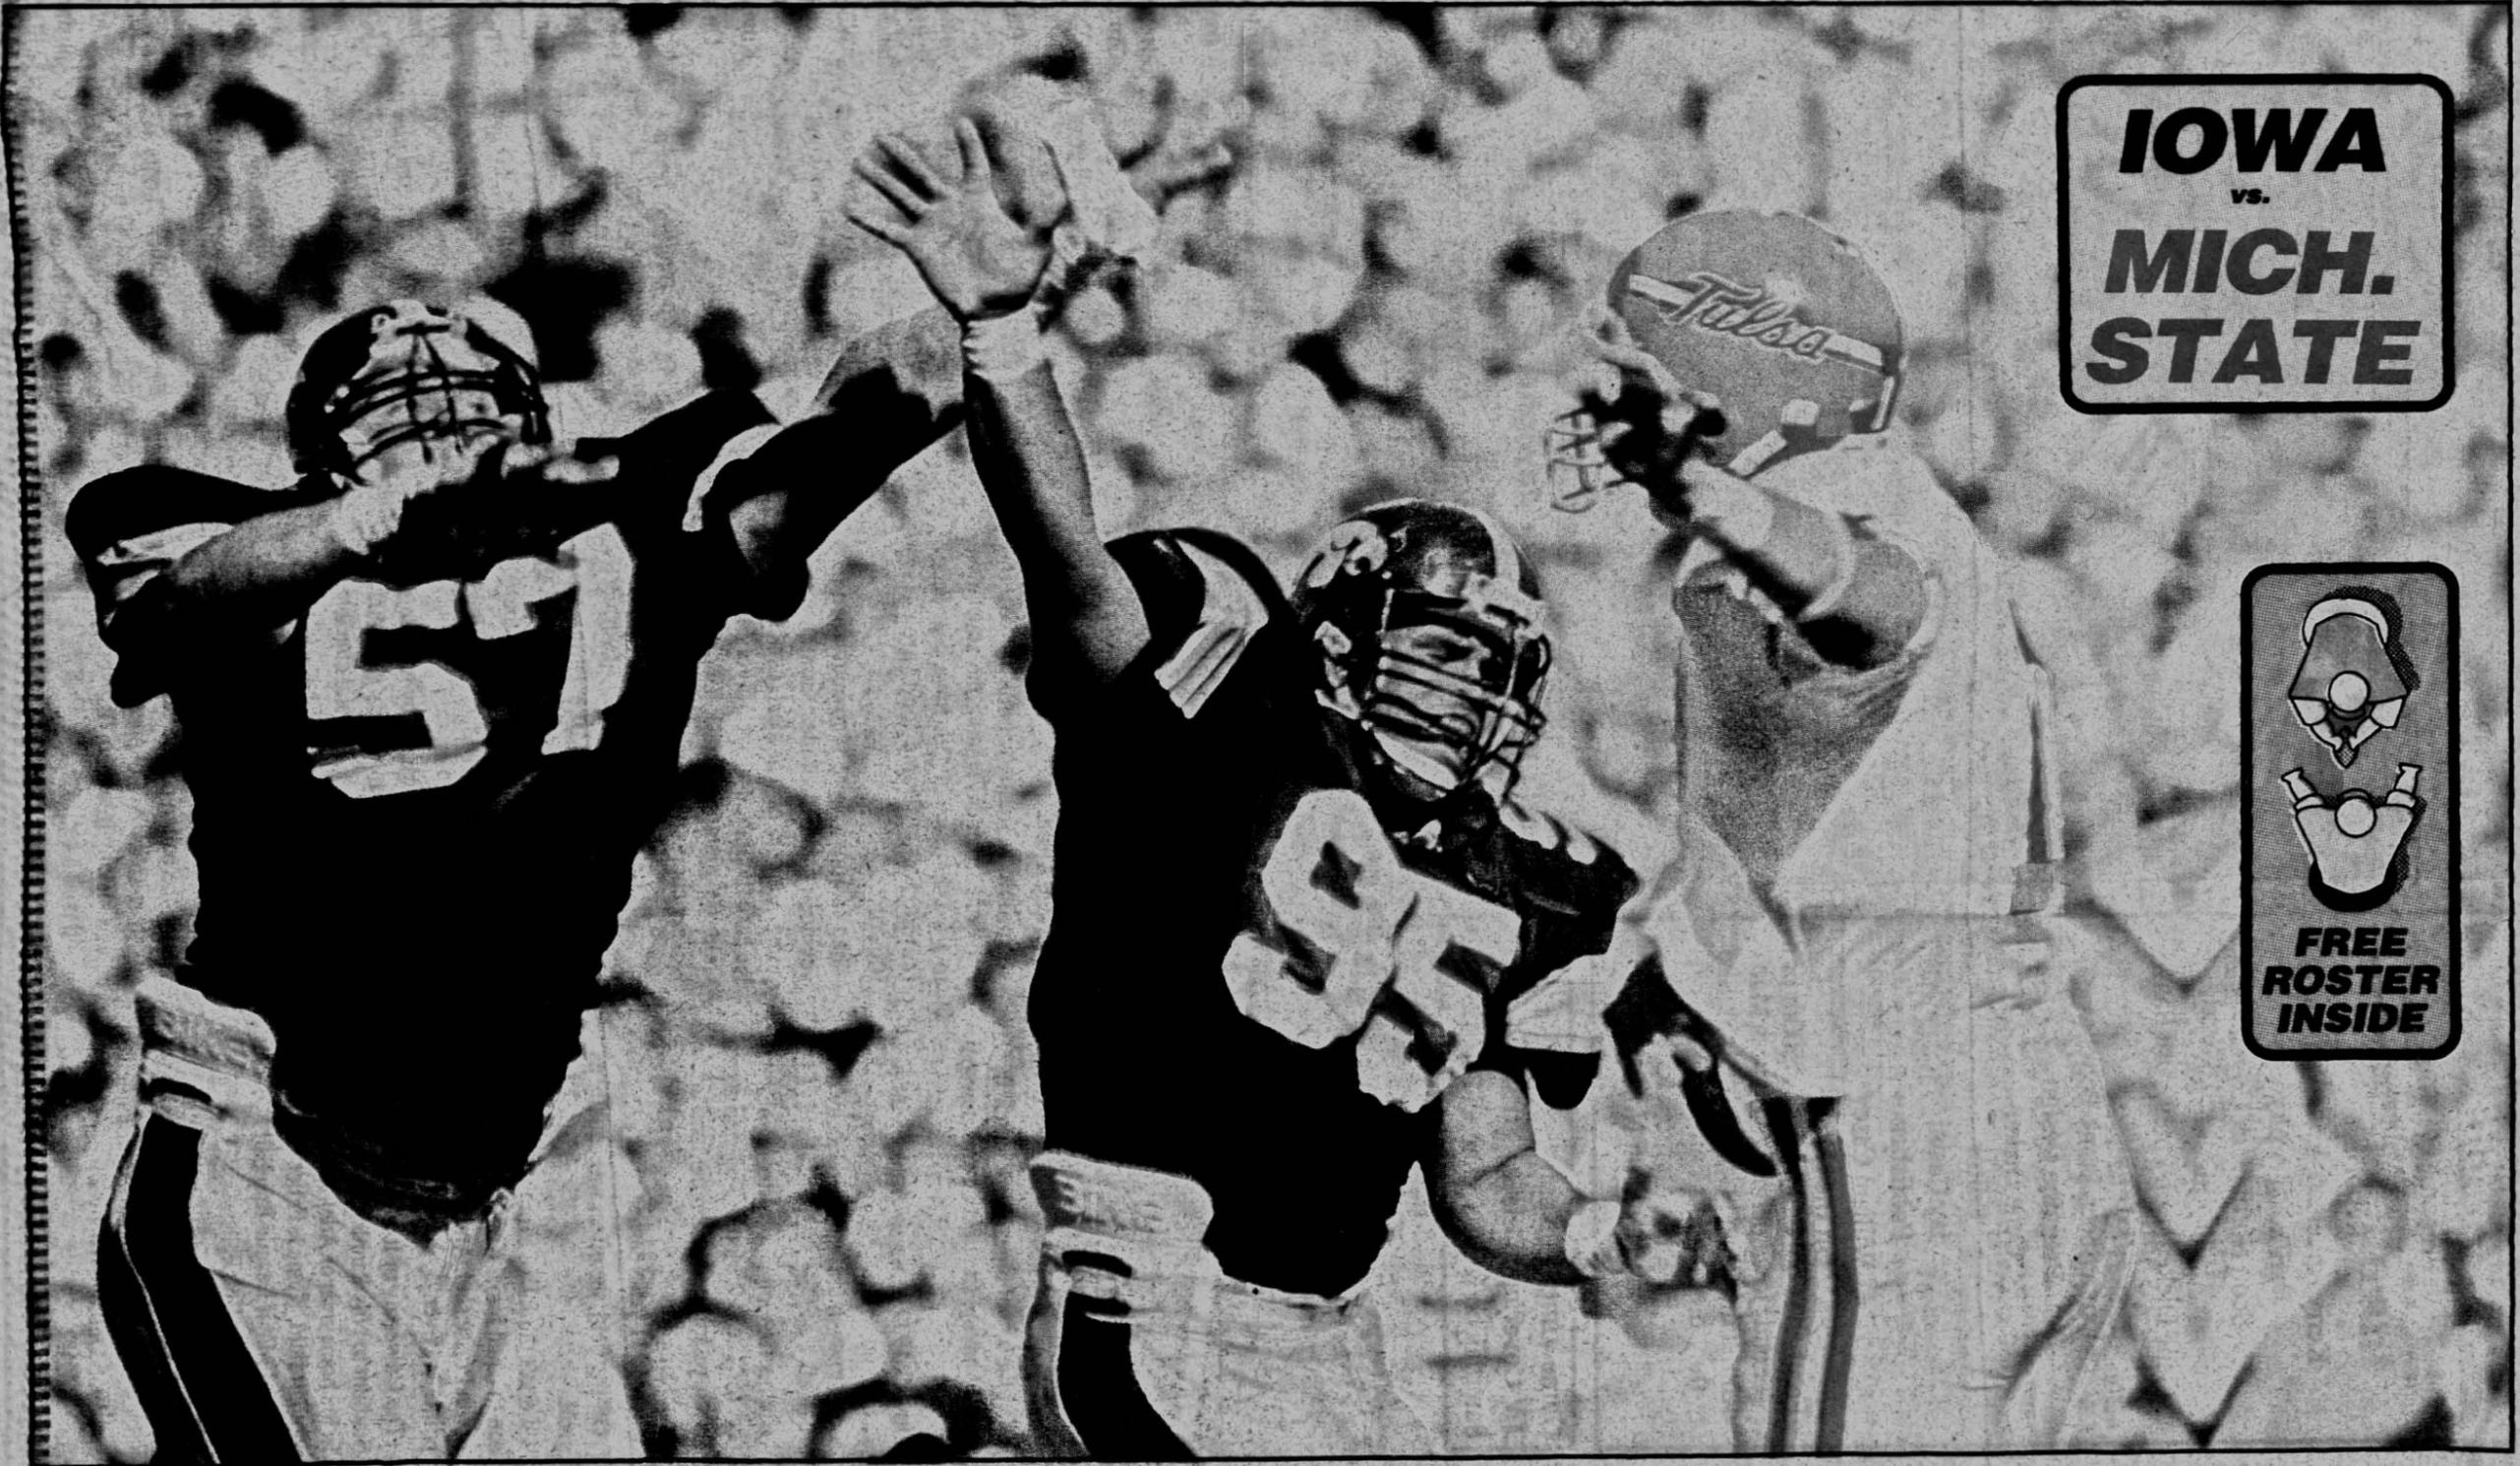

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1989

2 The name Nile Kinnick is synonymous with Iowa football. This week Sports Editor Bryce Miller continues his series on Iowa's first 100 years with a look at perhaps the greatest Hawkeye gridder.

4 When the offense needs a big play, Iowa coach Hayden Fry knows he can call upon reserve tailback Mike Saunders to make things happen.

6 Freshman punter Jim Hujzak recently took the starting slot from Sean Snyder. Against Tulsa, Hujzak averaged 43 yards per boot, a career best.

10 The Michigan State-Iowa series stands at 12-12-2. Despite the parity in recent years, the Spartans are heavily favored to win in '89.

100 Years of Hawkeye Football

An Ironman in every sense

Third of a Six-Part Series

Bryce Miller

The Daily Iowan

At the age of nine, Nile Kinnick Jr. was already having an effect on area newspapers.

Iowa's 1939 Heisman Trophy winner wasn't known across the country, let alone across town in the central Iowa city of Adel.

But his first job was delivering newspapers for The Des Moines Register. As a Hawkeye, his exploits on the football field would shape those very pages he had delivered 11 years earlier.

Off the field, the effect was equally as great.

"I don't think I've ever met another person to equal him," Kinnick teammate Erwin Prasse said. And he emphasized the point. "... Ever."

The University of Iowa renamed Iowa Stadium to Nile Kinnick Stadium in 1972. In his hometown of Adel, the high school football field, Kinnick-Feller Field, honors him and Major League Baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Feller.

Only two numbers have been retired in Iowa football history. Kinnick's legendary No. 24 and three-time All-American guard and 1955 Outland Trophy winner Calvin Jones (62).

Besides winning the Heisman in 1939, Kinnick was named to every major All-American squad.

Kinnick was the foundation of the immortal Ironmen, leading the Hawkeyes to a 6-1-1 record in '39. Iowa beat undefeated Notre Dame and arch-rival Minnesota.

The Ironmen were renowned for their versatility and fortitude. Kinnick was a prime example of that ideal. Coach Eddie Anderson played most players for the entire 60 minutes. Kinnick handled all the kicking chores, and pushed the ball upfield at left halfback.

"He was a self-starter," 1940 All-American lineman Mike Enich said, "always one of the first to arrive on the practice field, wholly absorbed in the perfection of his abilities as an athlete and as a scholar."

"He was highly regarded by his teammates, not only for his ability as an athlete, but also for his splendid moral character and his innate intelligence."

For those who knew him, Kinnick's abilities seemed limitless.

"One day I went to practice and he was punting the ball to people," teammate and '39 quarterback Al Couppee said. "I mean he was kicking it to them like you or I would pass a ball."

"A guy would run a pass pattern and Nile would kick the ball with a perfect spiral and it would hit the guy right in the chest."

"Most amazing thing I've ever seen."

If not for his devotion to studies, Kinnick could have been an Iowa basketball great as well. He became a team leader as a junior, but dropped the sport to concentrate on school.

During that year, the Indiana basketball team was preparing for a game with the Hawkeyes. As was much the custom, the Hoosier football team dropped the players a note in the student paper, wishing good luck — but warning of one player's court savvy.

Dear Basketball Team:

Last November we played Iowa and a young sophomore powerhouse. Nile Kinnick turned out to be papa, mamma and sonny trouble. We understand this driving athlete heads a strong Iowa five which has a "date" with you Monday in the fieldhouse. Please don't forget to handcuff Mr. Trouble in that game for, although he's a guard, we hear opponents find him underneath their basket too, too often.

*Wishing you goals of luck.
The Indiana football team*

Prasse was one of many who knew Kinnick that had a bottomless well of compliments about him.

"(Kinnick wasn't remembered) only as a football player," Prasse said. "I thought he would have become a senator or the President of the United States. He was a damn genius."

But a world at war in 1943 took the life of the Phi Beta Kappa graduate flyboy. On the morning of June 2, 1943, his Navy Grumman F4F-4 Wildcat single-seat fighter developed a serious oil leak over the Gulf of Paria off the coast of Trinidad.

The flightdeck of the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington was full of planes, so the young ensign was unable to land. At about 9:30 a.m., Kinnick made an emergency landing on calm water.

When a search party arrived less than 10 minutes later, all that remained was an oil slick where the plane had went down. Nile Kinnick was dead at age 24.

On being called to military service on Dec. 4, 1941, Kinnick kept a diary. Every day he listed activities and started the passage with a goal or idea.

On June 1, 1943, the final entry of Nile Kinnick was penned:

Tuesday, June 1:

How I wish I could sing and play the piano!

It is a sad mistake to try to be head man in everything you attempt. The axiom "If it is worth doing at all it is worth doing well," has its limitations. Stay on the ball most of the time, but learn to coast between moments of all-out effort.

People must come before profits!

But in measure of respect and accomplishments as a true student-athlete, few will come before Nile Kinnick.

Hawkeye Profile: Mike Saunders

"My official title is running back and I would like to carry the ball a lot more. I feel the coaches should have confidence in me carrying the ball."

-Mike Saunders

Chris Brandser

Saunders is Iowa's Mr. Everything in the clutch

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Getting into the end zone.

That's the one thing Iowa running back Mike Saunders wants to do in 1989 that he hasn't done yet. So far, that's about the only thing left for him to do.

In each of Iowa's first three games of the season against Oregon, Iowa State and Tulsa, Saunders has gathered at least 100 yards of total offense.

But even though the versatile sophomore from Milton, Wis., accepts his role as an all-purpose performer, he would still prefer to find a permanent home in the Hawkeye backfield.

"My official title is running back and I would like to carry the ball a lot more," Saunders said. "I feel the coaches should have confidence in me carrying the ball."

"I just hope I don't get known as 'the running back they put in to catch passes.'"

Like it or not, he is known as the guy who catches passes. And the guy who runs for big gains and the guy who, if called upon to do so, could pick up yardage with his arm.

Saunders threw for his first touchdown as a Hawkeye in last week's game with the Golden Hurricane when he hit Travis Watkins for a 63-yard scoring strike.

The play developed after quarterback Matt Rodgers handed off to tailback Tony Stewart, who gave the ball to Saunders on a reverse. Saunders then pulled up and hit a wide-open Watkins, who gathered himself, and streaked toward the end zone.

The first time Saunders really made his presence felt as an offensive threat was in his first ever start against Minnesota as a redshirt freshman last season.

After Stewart went down with a knee injury in the Ohio State game, Iowa football coach Hayden Fry gave Saunders the nod to start against the Golden Gophers.

Iowa won that game 31-22, and all Saunders did was scramble for 123 yards and three touchdowns. He was also the second-leading receiver in the game with 58 yards.

Although a multi-talented athlete, Saunders must battle juniors Nick Bell and Stewart for playing time. But Saunders insists the competition with the other two backs is a healthy one.

"The competition level is there, but I don't think it's the typical attitude of competition," Saunders said. "We encourage each other because we still make up a team. We like to see each other do well as much as we like to do well ourselves."

But when talking to the 6-foot-1, 195-pound Hawkeye, it's easy to feel his intensity.

"I always want to be in the game when it comes right down to it," Saunders said. "I don't think you should be out (on the field) if you don't want the ball in clutch situations. I just hope when they call on me, I'll be able to do it for them."

All Saunders would have to do is review the game films of Iowa's first three games to realize he is more than capable of coming through for his team.

Going into the Michigan State game Saturday, Saunders is second on the Iowa team in rushing and receiving yards, averaging 7.6 yards per carry and 11.5 yards per catch. He is also valuable as a kickoff returner.

Fry said getting Saunders in the game depends on the opposing defense.

"We had more things planned for Tulsa, and they really did some good things against us," Fry said, "so we couldn't get the ball to Mike as much as we wanted to."

With Michigan State coming to Iowa City Saturday, one might think Saunders, with his versatility, could be a key ingredient for the Hawkeyes against an often-dominating Spartan defense. But Saunders just plans to wait his turn and do what he can to contribute.

"With the coaches feeling I can go out into the game at more than one position, I hope that would get me on the field a little more," Saunders said.

"Saturday I had a throw for a touchdown but, besides that, there wasn't much else I did. I kind of felt like I had an off day. But if that's the worst off day I have all season, I'll be happy."

Hawkeye Profile: Jim Hujsak

Promising frosh looks to cure Iowa's punting woes

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

After lackluster performances in recent years, a couple of freshmen have put some power back into the Hawkeye punting game. Sean Snyder and Jim Hujsak have battled through spring drills and after three games in 1989, the job is Hujsak's — for now.

"It's still competitive now, and one game can determine the starter for the next," Hujsak said. He had a career best 43.2-yard average in Iowa's 30-22 win over Tulsa Saturday.

"That's how close the competition is now," he said. "It helps to be that competitive because you always have to stay on top and do your best every day, knowing that the next day you might not be the punter."

Hujsak means what he says.

In what Fry called a battle for a position "that is totally up in the air," Snyder came out No. 1 during pregame drills for the season-opener against Oregon.

It's been awhile since there was that kind of a war waged for the starting slot at punter.

Reggie Roby gained All-American status in 1981 from AP, UPI, Football Writers, Football News, Walter Camp and WTBS-TV. In 1982, Walter Camp gave Roby the same honor.

Roby owns the NCAA record for a season average with 49.8 yards per kick that he set in 1981. Since then, the Iowa punters that followed have given Iowa coach Hayden Fry some scares on fourth and long.

Gary Kostrubala was less than saintly in '84, '85 and '86. The last two seasons belonged to junior-college transfer Mark Adams. He did so poorly that Fry moved tight end Marv Cook into the position.

"I may have to punt this week," Fry said midway through the '87 season. "Our punting is just pitiful."

In 1989, Fry has made it clear that fourth-down situations will weigh in the success and failure of the Hawkeyes.

"For us to improve as a team, it starts with the kicking game," Fry said. "Last week was the first chance for us to evaluate (Hujsak). At Iowa State, he was always punting into a stiff wind except once, and he put that one inside the five-yard line."

The Nashua, N.H., native came to Iowa after looking at Syracuse, Boston College and a number of smaller programs. Hujsak was named a USA Today honorable mention all-American as a senior.

Out of danger

Freshman punter Jim Hujsak punts out of his own end zone in Iowa's 31-21 win over Iowa State at Ames. Hujsak won the starting job over Sean Snyder after the Oregon game.

Scott Norris

But the transition to the college game hasn't been simple. "As each game comes around, I'm becoming more comfortable with my position now," Hujsak said. "It's a big difference coming from high school to this level."

"You have to get the punt off. In high school, you could catch the ball, look up and see if there was a rush or not. Now, it's automatic."

Hujsak said he was lured to Iowa because of the treatment he received from people while he visited on a recruiting trip. But the clincher was the Hawkeyes' troubled past in the punting department.

"They told me that I had a chance to come in and play right away," he said, "and that was a big factor coming here; knowing that I had a chance as a freshman."

"But it was the whole atmosphere ...the coaches, fans and everything. It was just tremendous."

And the legacy of Roby had a great influence as well.

"Iowa has a tradition of putting players in the pros," Hujsak said. "That's a long ways down the road, but I wouldn't mind following in Reggie Roby's footsteps."

"He is just a great punter, and I'm not saying I would ever be like that, but I would like to try."

Saturday against the Spartans, Hujsak will see one of the toughest defensive units in the Big Ten. Blocking kicks is a Michigan State specialty.

"I don't know what (Miami of Florida) was thinking when they kicked that field goal late," Fry said of Saturday's 26-20 win by No. 2 Miami over Michigan State.

"Michigan State could've blocked that kick or had great field position," Fry said. "They put great pressure on field goals and punts."

Hujsak knows that.

"I'm not sure what to expect with Michigan State," he said. "I just have to remain consistent and concentrate. I know they'll be tough, so I've just got to keep my head in there."

But there will be moral support among the 67,700 Iowa faithful at Kinnick Stadium. Hujsak's parents will travel from the coast to keep a perfect attendance record for 1989 home Iowa games.

"They're ecstatic about it," Hujsak said of his parents. "They've been to both home games. They're really happy that I came here."

Michigan State Style

Spartan coach George Perles was defensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers during their dominating Super Bowl years, and has since incorporated his philosophy into the Spartans' defensive package. Using a 6-1 alignment with six down linemen and one linebacker, the Spartans present one of the most unique defensive sets in the country. The Spartan offense runs out of an "I" formation. The key to shutting down their offense will be to put pressure on junior quarterback Dan Enos, who has proved himself a threat against the likes of No. 1 Notre Dame and No. 2 Miami. Burner Andre Rison is gone, & senior Blake Ezor is sidelined so backup tailback Hyland Hickson will pick up the slack.

Big 10

CHICAGO (AP) — Purdue football coach Fred Akers isn't sure about how his teams have managed to contain Darrell Thompson. He is just thankful.

"After a football game, we sit down and sigh a big sigh of relief," Akers, whose Boilermakers face Minnesota and Thompson this weekend, said Tuesday. "He's an excellent back. He reminds me of (Anthony) Thompson of Indiana. They can take it to you speedwise or powerwise."

Minnesota's Thompson, named AP Player of the Week after running 37 times for a career-high 231 yards and three touchdowns in the Golden Gophers' 34-14 win over Indiana State.

But Purdue, Saturday's opponent for the Gophers, has been able to hold the senior tailback to 3.8 yards a carry during the past three years. Thompson averaged 4.3 yards a carry last year while gaining 910 yards.

"We're glad he has got to the point where he can run 30 times a game. Injuries hampered him last year. He had an excellent game with 231 yards on 37 carries," Minnesota coach John Gutekunst said during the weekly Big Ten coaches teleconference.

Big Ten coaches have turned their attention to league opens this Saturday after going 15-15 against nonconference foes over the past month. That's an improvement over their 11-19-1 record a year ago.

Besides Purdue-Minnesota, other Big Ten games find Wisconsin at Michigan, Ohio State is at Illinois, Northwestern at Indiana and Michigan State at Iowa.

Wisconsin coach Don Morton said even though his team is expected to lose by five or six touchdowns against No. 5 Michigan, it projects some measure of success.

"We are 36-point underdogs," Morton said. "The way Michigan has dominated us the last few years that's almost a step in the right direction."

The Wolverines crushed Wisconsin 62-14 last year on their way to their Big Ten title, while the Badgers suffered through a 1-10 season.

But Michigan coach Bo Schembechler said he thinks Wisconsin is improving and could be a title contender within a few years.

"This is a better Wisconsin team than we saw last year," Schembechler said. "I don't think you can take this team lightly and we don't."

Michigan, Illinois and Michigan State were mentioned as the coaches' first three choices for the 1989 Big Ten title and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

"Everybody has been saying Michigan is going to win it and I haven't seen anything so far to change my mind," Ohio State's John Cooper said.

"Michigan State is going to be a power. They played the No. 1 and No. 2 teams very closely," Illinois' John Mackovic said of the Spartans' narrow losses to Notre Dame and Miami, Florida the past two weekends.

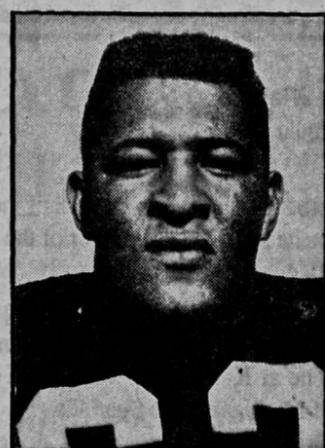

NILE KINNICK

Perhaps the most famous of stars in the history of Iowa football, Nile Kinnick won the Heisman Trophy in 1939 after leading the Hawkeyes to numerous last-quarter victories. Kinnick was a consensus All-American, winning just about every major honor that could be bestowed upon a college grid player.

CALVIN JONES

Calvin Jones played from 1953-1955 and was named an All-American each of those years. Jones was a bruising offensive guard and was recognized for his talents by being named the 1955 Outland Award winner. Hawkeye fans selected an all-time Iowa team in 1970 and Jones received more votes than any other player.

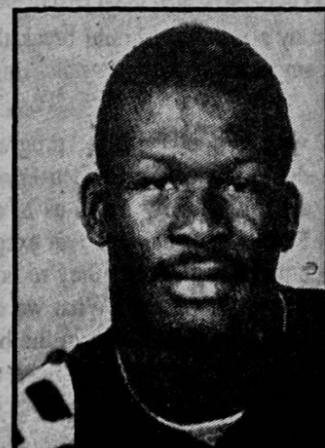

ALEX KARRAS

One of the nation's most dominating defensive linemen in college football in the mid-50's was Alex Karras. Karras was named an All-American in both 1956 and 1957. He won the Outland Award in 1957 and went on to star for the Detroit Lions. After football, Karras found success as an actor where he still remains in the public spotlight.

ANDRE TIPPETT

The Hawks were Big-Ten co-champions in 1981 thanks in a large part to their punishing defense. The leader of that feared defensive squad was standout Andre Tippett. He holds Iowa records for tackles & lost yardage in a season (153) and in a career (241). A consensus All-American in 1981, Tippett is now one of the premier linebackers in the NFL, playing with the New England Patriots.

CHUCK LONG

In the history of the Big-Ten Conference, no one threw for more yards than Iowa's Chuck Long. Long threw for 10,461 yards as a three year starter for the Hawks from 1983-85 & holds every existing career passing mark in Iowa football history. In 1985, Long guided Iowa to their second Rose Bowl in six years, leading the nation in passing efficiency and launching an Iowa record 27 touchdown passes.

...sive sets in the country. "I" formation. The key to put pressure on junior ...ved himself a threat ... and No. 2 Miami. Blake Ezor is sidelined ... will pick up the slack.

Michigan State Spartans

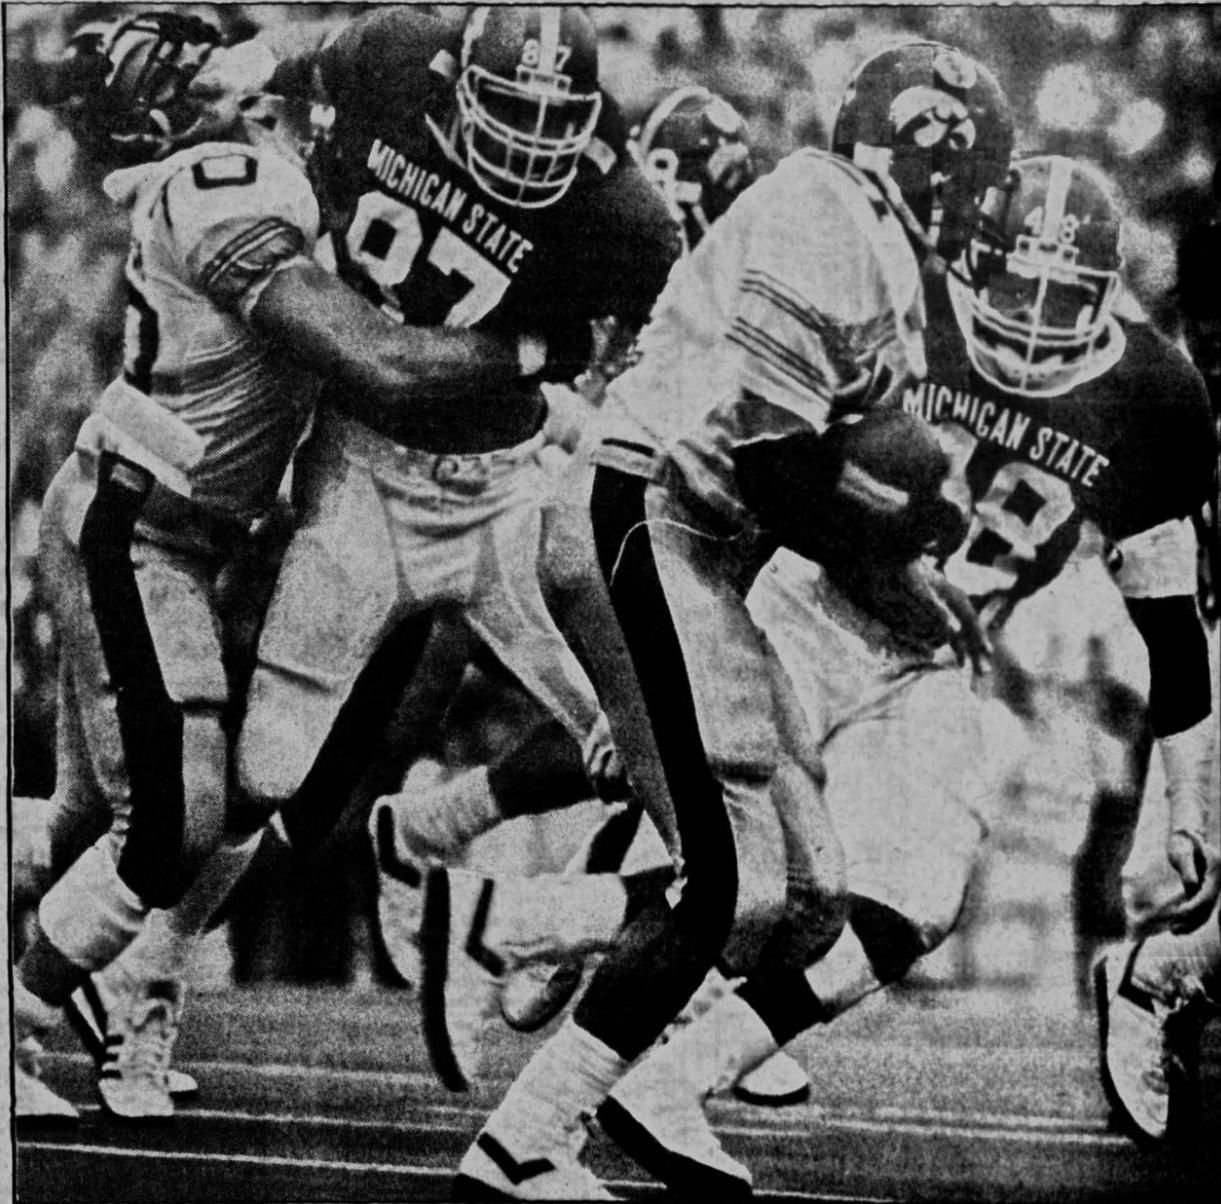

Spartans and Hawks play for series advantage

"We'll have to play our hearts out because this is where it starts. We're looking for a Rose Bowl season"

-Percy Snow

Erica Wleland
The Daily Iowan

Football is said to be a game of inches and Hayden Fry says he has a painful reminder of the old cliché hanging in his office.

Adorning one of Fry's walls is a photo of former Iowa quarterback Chuck Long laying from the waist up in the end zone at Kinnick Stadium. Piled on top of Long are a host of Michigan State Spartans.

The picture was taken during the final play of the 1984 Iowa-Michigan State game. Long was ruled short of the end zone on a two-point conversion try and Michigan State won, 17-16.

So goes the football series between the two schools.

Last year, the two teams tied 10-10 after both teams missed field goal chances with under a minute to play on a sopping wet day in East Lansing, Mich.

Two years ago Michigan State beat Iowa 21-17 in Kinnick Stadium, and three years ago Iowa's Ken Sims intercepted a Dave Yerema pass in the Michigan State end zone to clinch an Iowa victory.

The Iowa-Michigan State series is the closest series in Big Ten history. Each school has beaten the other 12 times. There have also been two ties.

Saturday's matchup should break the deadlock, but neither team is ready to put a notch in the win column just yet.

"I'm very pleased with the progress our football team has made," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "But obviously we're not on the same level as Michigan State. I think Coach Perles' staff has done an excellent job of bringing their team about. I'm sure they're licking their chops this week for our youngsters. What we have to do is find an opportunity where we can win the ballgame. And I think that's going to be extremely difficult to do."

"I expect a tough game," Michigan State linebacker Percy Snow said. "It's been a tough game between Iowa and Michigan State the past five or six years. We'll have to play our hearts out because this is where it starts. We're looking for a Rose Bowl season, but we have to get by Iowa first."

Statistics would point in the Spartans favor this time around.

Michigan State will bring a 1-2 record into Saturday's game, but both losses were narrow misses at the hands of the nation's top two teams the past two weeks. The Spartans were defeated 21-13 by Notre Dame and 26-20 by Miami, Fla.

"We put that in the past," Snow said. "It's Iowa week. We can't let the past bring us down as a team or as players. It was two games that we felt we had but that's the breaks; that's just how it is."

Now that they have faced the nation's finest, Snow said that the Spartans are ready to take on the Big Ten.

"Notre Dame is probably the best running team we'll face," the 6-foot-3, 240-pound senior said. "And Miami of Florida, the best passing team. I think we're well prepared for this Big Ten season."

Snow, who was an All-American last year and was voted a preseason Heinrich College Football all-American this season, has been averaging 14 tackles per game for Michigan State.

He has also been nominated for the Butkus Award, which is given to the nation's top linebacker. Last year he finished in the final five for that award, and in 1987, he was in the top 16.

"I don't think you can really do anything to a fellow like Percy Snow," Fry said. "George (Perles) cheats. He puts him in the middle of the defensive scheme, so he can go to the right or to the left or up the middle. Most linebackers are on one side or the other, and you kind-of have an advantage; you can run away. You can't run away from Percy. And he's also an extremely fine pass defender. He's a complete package for a college All-American linebacker."

But despite all his personal honors, Snow still works hard to improve his performance.

"I'll never play a perfect game," he said. "I'm going to just go out there and play a little bit harder. I know there's some mistakes that can be corrected as far as getting a little deeper drops, breaking on the ball a little quicker, and not pursuing too quick. It's just little things, not too serious. But it's something I know I can improve on."

Something else that Snow said he hoped his team improved on is decreasing the number of penalties they receive.

Michigan State has totalled 15 penalties for 110-yards this season.

"Last week we had quite a few penalties, and we can't expect to beat Iowa if we go up there and get a lot of penalties," Snow said. "We just have to play together as a team. We can't have any mental errors. I think we have to correct little personal problems here and there, but I think we'll be just fine."

Hawkeye Profile: Eddie Polly

Oklahoma native finds new home on & off the field in Iowa as Hawkeye free safety

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa defensive back Eddie Polly said his decision to attend the University of Iowa was probably the best choice in his life.

"I'm happy to be a Hawkeye right now," Polly said. "Being up here around the great people in Iowa City, the great people on this team and the coaching staff has been a real experience. I don't regret it one bit."

A sophomore from Oklahoma City, Polly makes his feelings very clear when asked what drew him to Iowa.

"The biggest influence in me coming up here was the people of Iowa City," Polly said. "I keep going back to that, and I still talk about it to this day."

"The people here are so much more together and homey, it just gives a young high school student coming here getting ready to go to college a great feeling."

"It's great being in a place where you feel wanted and everybody feels like they're close to each other. It just makes you feel positive and helps you out as far as school is concerned."

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry is definitely one person who made Polly feel wanted.

Fry said he and assistant coach Dan McCarney went down in a snow storm to Oklahoma, one of the toughest recruiting states for an outsider, to watch Polly.

"We were fortunate to get Eddie," Fry said. "He said he wanted an chance to leave that part of the country and come to school up here."

"I think he was the only youngster in the family that had an opportunity to go to college. He's had a pretty rough go down there."

Maybe that rough environment Polly was subjected to while growing up, is what contributed to an off-the-field incident that took place at the Downtown Pedestrian Mall in Iowa City August 6.

On August 31, an Iowa City woman filed assault charges against Polly after he allegedly punched her in the face outside an Iowa City bar.

The complaint stated Polly punched the woman in the left eye, knocking her unconscious and resulting in a black eye. A court date has been set for Nov. 7.

When asked about the incident and its potential adverse affects, Polly seemed anxious to make his views known and help clear the air.

"I've had more adverse things happen to me," Polly said. "It hasn't really affected me because once I start playing on Saturday, I forget about those things."

"I've just tried to to put it behind me. I'm glad things have finally cooled off a little."

The 6-foot, 182-pound free safety actually played running back more than anything else at Grant High School in Oklahoma City, but his toughness projected him as being more valuable on the defensive side of the ball in college.

"Eddie's a wild man," Fry said. "He made 14 tackles in the (Tulsa game) Saturday."

The Iowa pass defense is led by two sophomores, a junior and only one senior, but Polly foresees the unit becoming solid once they get accustomed to playing together.

"The role of playing is much more of a learning experience than just being here for a couple of years," Polly said. "You've got to play to get the feel."

Eddie Polly

Hometown: Oklahoma City, OK
Position: Defensive Back
Ht: 6-0
Wt: 182
Class: Sophomore
Personal: Primarily a running back at Grant High School in Oklahoma City.

This secondary works good together, but if we stop making a lot of the mental mistakes we've been making, we'll be a real good secondary.

"I'm a youngster to the secondary. I played a couple games last year as a nickel back, but other than that, I really didn't play too much."

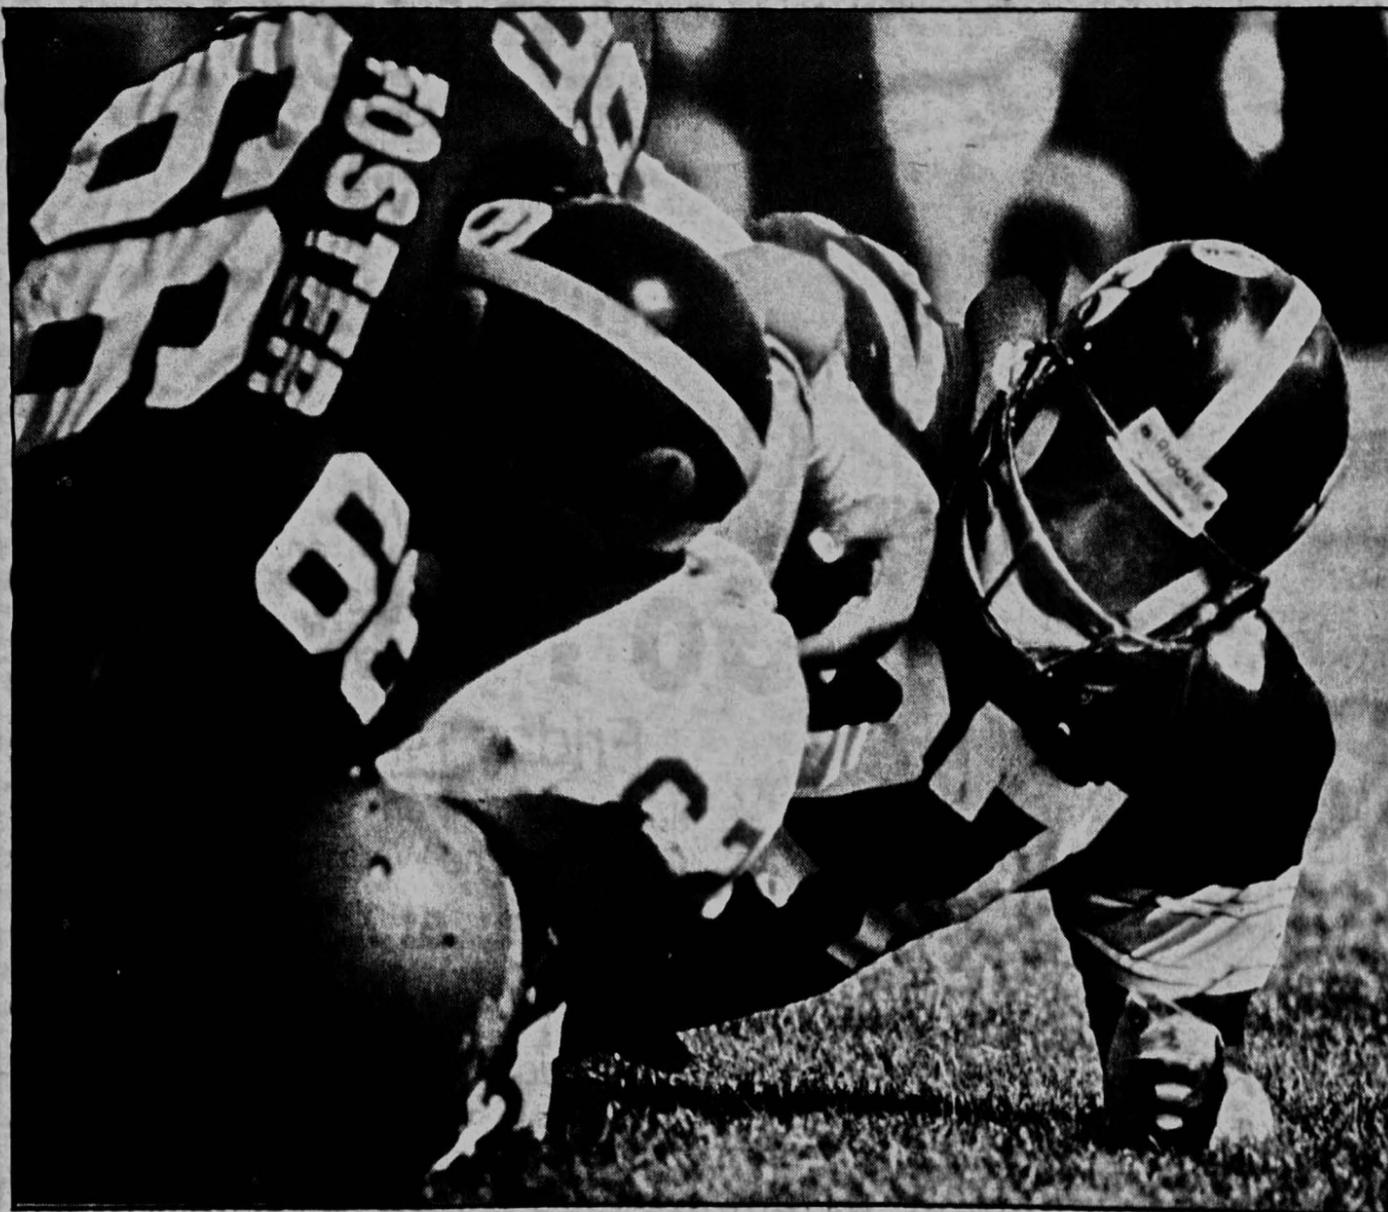

The Hawkeye defense, much like the offense, is loaded with youth. And with only one starting senior in the secondary, Polly knows this year's Iowa team will have to rely more on pure heart and determination.

"We're not the Hawks of old," Polly said, "as far as total yardage. But as far as aggressiveness, going after the ball and making plays, this team can compare in a couple ways to some teams of the past."

"This defense is not that great-over-all-defense where you've got the low numbers and things like that, but if we keep working hard it can get to that status."

Double trouble

Hawkeye free safety Eddie Polly, 27, teams up with Melvin Foster to make the play on Tulsa's Mark Brus at Kinnick Stadium Saturday. Polly finished the game with 14 tackles.

There's beer and there's Michelob.
The difference is day and night.

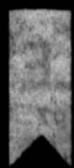

Even in the dark, without labels, or bottle shape, or type, you can tell the difference.

Because of the way Michelob looks that makes it special, so the way it tastes. The full body of a super-aged, with an exceptional smoothness, no other beer can match.

For over 100 years, Michelob has been carefully brewed with the world's most expensive ingredients. Aged to perfection. A beer to be savored.

A beer that could make tonight the best part of your day.

Of course, you don't have to wait until night to drink Michelob. But you just might want to sit back, close your eyes and enjoy the difference superior quality makes.

The night belongs to Michelob.
