Measles outbreaks increase nationwide

Sara Langemak

WASHINGTON

A recent 400 percent increase in the number of reported measles nationwide may cause the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to reconsider its policy, according to the director of its Student Health Services.

Nationally, 10,711 people have been diagnosed with the infection since January 1 of this year, according to the Immunization program's figures.

This figure was 2,270 people at the same point last year.

Judge still out on case involving nuclear-powered space probe

Carole Perry

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge weighed the arguments Tuesday of citizens groups trying to halt Thursday's launch of the space probe, which is carrying a nuclear-powered space probe in its cargo bay.

In Washington, the judge gave no indication on whether the probe could be stopped.

Meanwhile, at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, NASA had to decide whether to replace the mission to one of the three shuttle missions that were scheduled to depart from the Kennedy Space Center.

In Washington, the judge gave no indication on whether the probe could be stopped.

Monoxide misdiagnosis is fatal

Flu, carbon monoxide poisoning symptoms are outwardly alike

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Symptoms of influenza and carbon monoxide poisoning can often appear identical, but a misdiagnosis could lead to a deadly outcome.

According to Tom Cremin, Iowa State University’s director of health services, carbon monoxide can be deadly because its outward symptoms can be identical to the symptoms of the flu.

"The main toxicant is carbon monoxide, and then you have your normal viral flu symptoms," Cremin said. "The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning can be the same as the flu so people don’t realize that what they have is carbon monoxide poisoning and not the flu."

Cremin said that carbon monoxide can build up in closed spaces, such as homes with gas furnaces or houses with wood stoves, because the flames needed to produce carbon monoxide are windowless.

"Carbon monoxide poisoning takes place when you have carbon monoxide building up over a long period of time and the levels become toxic to the human body," Cremin said.

According to Cremin, symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning include headache, nausea, vomiting, confusion and dizziness.

But just like the flu, carbon monoxide symptoms can be mistaken for a normal viral illness.

"Symptoms are very similar, but they’re not exactly the same," Cremin said. "So, people need to be aware that symptoms could be happening that aren’t just the flu."
A group of young students from Shimek Elementary School visited the Iowa City Fire Department Tuesday afternoon to see Spunky the Dellman, who is in the department’s prevention mascot Spunky speaks to the students about safety measures in the situations.

The message the children received is that if they open matches or lighter, they should give them to their parents and not play with them. Humston said. More than one-third of last year’s home fires fatalities were caused by children according to the International Association of Fire Chiefs.

The educational programs also stress hearing the fire alarm quickly, placing hash exits, practicing stop-drop-and-roll, and maintaining smoke detectors.

On October 1, the fire prevention station will participate in a nationwide awareness campaign directed primarily at smoke detector maintenance, Humston said.

In addition to Spunky, the station will participate in a nationwide awareness campaign directed primarily at smoke detector maintenance.

The Oct. 1 awareness campaign will involve people to change the batteries in their smoke detectors each time they change their clocks’ batteries, he said.

“The idea is to get people into the habit of changing their batteries,” Humston said.

One of Humeston’s ideas was to have a school designated as Iowa City’s public fire education and prevention center in July.

Humeston said.

SLS’ move will provide more spacious rooms between October.
Measles

Measles in the News: The outbreak in Iowa is but a small part of a national problem. In recent weeks, the number of confirmed cases of measles has more than doubled since the beginning of the year.

The Iowa outbreak is part of a larger epidemic that has affected several states. In total, there have been over 1,000 cases of measles reported in the United States so far this year.

In response to the growing number of cases, health officials are urging people to get vaccinated. The vaccine is highly effective and can prevent measles.

In Iowa, three cases of measles have been reported in Johnson County so far this year. At the time of this report, the majority of these cases were thought to be related to a large gathering that occurred earlier in the month.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) have recommended that all people aged 12 months and older be vaccinated against measles.

Hatkoff, the president of the National Association and Space Administration, had just announced Atlantis while it was carrying the Galileo probe and two nuclear heat sources, one of which carried 24.7 pounds of plutonium-238.

"We're very tenuous themselves," said Rogers. "There's a very good historical experience shows that, even when there is a launch explosion similar to this, the likelihood of a plutonium release is very small." Rogers added that "a small fraction of all ships have a launch explosion similar to this." Rogers is a member of the board of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

NASA hopes to get a close-up view of Jupiter's moon Europa in about a month. But the launch must be by mid-October to get a single RTG.

"NASA is very concerned about the timing of the launch," said Rogers. "We need to get the launch done as soon as possible."

The launch is a launch for Galileo to be in the right place at the right time to study Europa. The Galileo probe will carry a heat source, a radioisotopic thermoelectric generator (RTG), that will provide power for the probe's instruments.

Rogers agreed that NASA failed to perform the test before the launch, which was supposed to happen in early October. Rogers said that NASA "doesn't want this to happen again."

The two nuclear heat sources are involved in accidents, but only in accidents in which there is a release of radiation. Rogers said that NASA was "very concerned about the design, the way it's built, and the way it's going to operate." Rogers added that the two nuclear heat sources are important for the mission.

The Galileo probe is expected to arrive at Jupiter in about two years. At that time, the probe will study Europa and its potential for supporting life.

Florida

Newspapers continue to report on the measles outbreak in Florida. People are being urged to get vaccinated to prevent the spread of the disease.

Florida is currently experiencing one of the largest measles outbreaks in the country. The state has reported over 200 cases of measles so far this year.

A free measles vaccine clinic will be held in Fort Lauderdale on Saturday. The clinic will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will be located at the Fort Lauderdale Library.

The clinic will be staffed by medical professionals and will provide free measles vaccines to people who do not have health insurance.

University Theatres' first production offers relief to reality of World War I

Joe Bernard

The Daily Iowan

The University Theatre's first production of the fall, "Lovely War," is a musical comedy that offers relief to the grim reality of World War I. It follows an English tradition of musical comedies that attempt to distill the spirit and outlook of the times, offering a stark relief to the horror and brutality of the "Great War." The show is a nostalgic look back at the era of innocent and carefree entertainment before the war.
