Professors: Audit used to carry out vendetta

Departmental politics
flaw engineering audit

Andy Brownstein
The Daily lowan

The impending termination of the materials engineering program at the UI may be due more to departmental politics than program duplication, according to several members of the engineering faculty.

The program was targeted for elimination earlier this year by the Peat Marwick Main & Co. audit of Iowa's three Regents' universities because it allegedly duplicates the materials engineering program at Iowa State University.

The firm's proposal has been branded by members of the engineering faculty as having "little merit" and "no justification," but the state Board of Regents is expected to approve termination of the program today at its meeting in Ames.

The school's only two materials engineering professors, Keith Beddow and David Luerkens, believe UI College of Engineering Dean Robert Hering is using the audit to carry out a personal vendetta against them.

"With this audit, Hering saw the chance to give the appearance of obliging the Regents, while at the same time get rid of myself and Luerkens," Beddow said.

Beddow and Luerkens are not alone in the belief that the materials engineering recommendation served political purposes.

"The Peat Marwick thing left an opening for the administration to get rid of them," said one engineering professor. "It's just a personality conflict. The dean doesn't like them, and so he's trying to get rid of them."

Steve Collins, chairman of the UI Institutional Audit Advisory Committee, said Peat Marwick provided no substantial rationale for dropping the materials engineering program.

"In general, there was very little justification presented for the various recommendations in their report," he said.

Collins, who is also an engineering professor, said the elimination of materials engineering will not produce substantial financial savings for the UI.

Even David Vernon, acting UI vice president for academic affairs, who presented the proposal to the Regents in September, said he was unsure how much money, if any, would be saved by eliminating the program.

"I really don't know if there's going to be any savings," Vernon said. "I just have no idea."

Vernon said in his September presentation to the Regents that the engineering faculty had voted unanimously to de-emphasize the materials engineering program. But, according to minutes from an engineering faculty meeting, "the faculty of the College of Engineering state and reaffirm that the study of materials is an important part of all engineering disciplines at both the undergraduate and

Quake shakes SF Bay area

Tremor registered
6.9 on Richter Scale

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A catastrophic earthquake rocked Northern California on Tuesday, killing more than 50 people, caving in a section of the San Francisco Bay Bridge, and causing widespread damage.

The quake, which registered 6.9 on the Richter scale forced the evacuation of 60,000 fans from Candlestick Park where they were waiting for Game Three of the World Series to begin. There were no major injuries reported at the stadium.

Three hours after the 5:04 p.m. PDT quake, the magnitude of the disaster began to emerge as reports came in of widespread death and destruction.

Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy said a section of Interstate 880 in Oakland had caved in, killing at least 40 people in their cars.

"The rubble is so bad that they still don't have an accurate count of the fatalities," McCarthy said.

Six people were crushed to death in their cars when part of an old four-story brick building toppled onto the vehicles on Bluxome Street in San Francisco, said Police Lt. Jerry Kilroy.

The California Highway Patrol said six were killed in the collapse of part of the City Garden Mall in Santa Cruz.

One person died of a heart attack and four people were injured in San Jose, 50 miles south of San Francisco, according to Willis Jacobs of the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

Mayor Art Agnos' press secretary, Eileen Mahoney, said as many as 20 people had been injured at a fire in the Marina section. Another fire was blazing near downtown Berkeley.

The quake, which apparently was centered about 10 miles north of Santa Cruz, was felt for hundreds of miles, in Reno, Nev., 225 to the northeast and even in downtown high-rise buildings in Los Angeles.

Televised footage of the bridge connecting Oakland and San Francisco showed that a 30-foot section of the upper deck had collapsed, leaving two cars dangling between the two levels. Reports said most occupants got out of their cars safely.

In Washington, President George Bush said the federal government was prepared to send help to the earthquake area in California, and he was sending Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner there to assess the damage.

At City Hall in San Francisco a radio reporter told listeners, "The entire building started to shake... you could hear people yelling and screaming all over the building."

She said there were "obvious problems" at the health department across the street. "Water was literally gushing out of the building from a window on the second floor," the unidentified reporter said.

Citizens of Marin, north of San Francisco, were warned to shut off their gas because the smell of gas was all over town.

Frank Baldwin of U.S. Geological Survey's Earthquake Center said the quake's magnitude was 6.9 on the Richter scale. It occurred at 5:04 p.m. PDT and was centered in the Santa Cruz, Calif., area, 75 miles south of San Francisco on the Pacific Coast.

The quake was felt as far away as Reno, Nev., 225 miles to the northeast.

The quake knocked out phones and power, including electricity at The Associated Press bureau in San Francisco.

The San Mateo bridge, which crosses the bay about 10 miles south of Candlestick Park, was closed for inspection.

San Francisco police officer Dwayne Collins said there were reports that buildings and statues in the historic South of Market district near downtown had collapsed.

"I thought I was losing my balance, then I saw the lamppost sway one foot each direction. Then I saw falling glass, broken glass on the street, but luckily not near me," said Les Galvacs, who was walking down Market Street in

MBA school among top 'hidden' 20

Jennifer Glynn
The Daily lowan

The UI College of Business Administration may be in for an increase in applicants next year, following the program's ranking as one of the nation's best graduate business programs in the recently published Business Week's Guide to the Best Business Schools.

The guide, published by McGraw-Hill, lists the 40 best business schools and notes that the UI program "has been a well-kept secret except to those that read scholarly journals."

The list is broken into the "Top 20" and the "Hidden 20," with the UI in the second category. The Hidden 20 are not ranked.

"The book will be widely read. Because that we will most probably have a bigger applicant pool," said Bill Greer, UI associate dean for graduate business.

"Iowa will be a strong contender for people looking for a quality MBA program," Greer said. "But it is hard to forecast how much influence this report will have on employers."

"It may have somewhat of a halo effect on the undergraduate business program — but it is hard to tell," Greer said.

"Clearly the people who are in the program are glad to see it. It's always nice to have some external

Laser center directorship rearranged

Jean Thilmay
The Daily lowan

Effective immediately, William Stwalley will step down as director of the UI's Center for Laser Science and Engineering and Arthur Smirl, an endowed professor in laser sciences, will take his place.

Stwalley will continue as head of UI laser facilities.

David Vernon, UI acting vice president for academic affairs, said the decision to reappoint the center's director was made between the two men.

"It was sort of a mutual decision by the senior people in the laser center," Vernon said. "Stwalley did a fine job in getting the center started and conceptualizing it, but they decided between them that the configuration needed to be changed."

Stwalley proposed the idea for the laser center in 1984 and has been key to its development.

Stwalley said that because Smirl is now settled in to his department, they decided to divide the labor differently.

"Smirl is going to be leading the effort to try to obtain major federal funding," Stwalley said.

The UI will ask the state Board of Regents to approve Smirl's appointment today. The appointment would be effective immediately at an annual salary of $125,350. Stwalley will remain on the executive committee for the laser center.

Smirl left North Texas State University to come to the UI in September 1988, becoming the first laser scientist to fill one of three endowed professorships for laser researchers at Iowa.

Ralliers revel in tuition concessions of Regents

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily lowan

About 100 UI students braved the cold weather Tuesday and gathered on the Pentacrest to celebrate an amended tuition proposal by the state Board of Regents which, if passed, will increase next year's resident tuition by 3 percent instead of the originally discussed 4.3 percent.

Jack Hatch, speaker at the rally and chairman of the state Higher Education Appropriations Subcommittee, said he and House Speaker Don Avenson are supporting a proposal to cover the increase with state-appropriated money, thus eliminating any direct increase of student tuition.

The intention of Tuesday's rally was to focus statewide attention on the improvement and continuation of quality education in Iowa, said Jo-Ellen Huss, UI campus director of United Students of Iowa, which sponsored the event.

Other speakers included Mary Neuhauser (D-Iowa City) and Jenö Berta, UI Student Senate vice-president and the UI's newly-elected Homecoming king.

Novello nominated for surgeon general

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush has chosen Antonia Novello, a pediatrician and deputy director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, to be surgeon general, administration sources said Tuesday.

Novello was undergoing routine background checks before her formal nomination, said the sources, who spoke only on condition of not being identified.

If nominated by Bush and confirmed by the Senate, she would become the first woman to hold the post and would succeed C. Everett

Dow average down 19 pts. on Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market seesaw tipped downward again Tuesday as the Dow Jones industrial average lost nearly 19 points after briefly falling more than 60 points early in the day.

Speculators and program traders yanked around a market still deeply shaken by Friday's 190-point plunge and Monday's 88-point recovery in the Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks.

Stock prices held up fairly well despite continued uncertainty surrounding a proposed buyout of United Airlines' parent company and a government report showing a bigger-than-expected trade deficit in August. The Federal Reserve helped by adding a modest amount of reserves to the banking system.

In a sign of the market's nervousness, stock index futures plunged shortly before noon, which briefly dragged the Dow Jones average 63 points below Monday's finish.

The average closed with a loss of 18.65 points at 2,638.73 with 224.07 million shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange, scarcely more than half Monday's volume.

Markets were calmer than on Monday, when the average swung through a 150-point range and trading was the heaviest

SVP requests funding for satellite system

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye sports fans may no longer have to wait for tape-delayed broadcasts pending the approval of a UI Student Video Productions proposal.

SVP requested $6,881 to purchase new satellite equipment that would enable the student group to expand their programming capabilities. With the new equipment, SVP could receive transmissions of live and network shows from across the nation, and show them in the UI viewing area.

"This allows us to bring more channels to SVP and more importantly, more channels to the UI," said Pepe Rojas-Cardona, UI Student Senate president.

The Senate approved $3,440.50 for the new down-link satellite system and a video recording deck that will allow the additional SVP broadcasting capabilities.

The combination of the new satellite and down-feed capability will eventually enable SVP to broadcast a wider variety of programs, such as nightly UI newscasts, sports, entertainment and educational programming on a regular basis.

SVP programming could be operational by January 1990, but would initially be limited to the Union Wheelroom.

Although SVP could not charge admission to the televised shows, proceeds from concessions could help finance any additional costs resulting from obtaining television rights to the satellite programs, he said.

In addition, SVP production manager Jerry Lee said the proposal is only in the initial stages and satellite installation requires UI approval.

Rojas-Cardona said about $80,000 has already been invested in SVP for broadcasting equipment. However, the existing satellite is eight years old and does not have down-feed capability.

SVP is a student organization which provides a forum for community service programming and a way for students to learn about broadcasting. Because SVP is a joint student-government commission, granting the full funding request will be at the discretion of the UI Collegiate Associations Council.

In other business, representatives from The Human Condition newspaper requested additional support from the Senate.

"We would like Student Senate to help us create an environment where more productive things could be done," said UI senior Brad Parks.

The newspaper's objective is to present diverse articles, facilitate written debate and detail upcoming Senate-sponsored group events.

Iowa City councilors support arts facility

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

To enhance the artistic climate of Iowa City, Iowa City councilors voiced support for an arts facility in Iowa City Tuesday evening.

The Iowa City Arts Committee presented a proposal for a centrally located, multidisciplinary arts facility that would service Iowa City and the surrounding area.

"The time is right for discussion and endorsement of an arts facility in Iowa City," said Karen Wallace, co-chairwoman of the Arts Committee. "The arts community is strongly backing this and would like to see a centralized, cooperative effort."

According to the proposal, committee members hope to include not only galleries, auditoriums, and theatres in the arts facility, but businesses, recreation facilities and restaurants as well.

"Space initially available for the 30-50 arts organizations within the Iowa City area could be expanded to have additional identities. An open space for sculpture could also house a lighted ice skating rink circling the sculpture," the proposal explained.

According to committee members, the proposed arts facility holds many advantages for Iowa City, including economic development and enrichment.

"The arts facility would allow Iowa City to market itself as the culturally and artistically rich community we know ourselves to be," said Deboreh Burger, co-chairwoman of the arts committee.

An arts facility could fill the void of cultural and recreational activities commonly perceived by many non-residents of Iowa, and may therefore attract new businesses to Iowa City, according to the proposal.

The committee would like to use the last remaining urban renewal parcel — a tract of land east of Burlington Street near the downtown area — to develop the facility.

"This is a neat idea," Mayor John McDonald said. "So many groups coming together offers a great deal of potential for the last urban renewal project."

The old public library on the corner of Linn and College streets is also being considered as a home for the arts facility.

Funding for the project has not been determined, but according to the proposal the arts community is capable of maintaining sufficient profits to cover operating expenses once the facility is built.

"We have a dream at the moment and would like your backing," committee member Wallace ChapPELL said.

Former UI student commits suicide

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A former UI student shot himself in the head with a shotgun Monday morning, according to Iowa City Police Department reports.

Police found Scott D. Eades, 25, dead in an apartment at 631 1/2 E. Jefferson St. after responding to a 911 call made by Trip Kilander about 7:40 a.m., police officials said.

Johnson County Medical Examiner Dr. T.T. Bozek has ruled the death as a suicide by a single gunshot wound to the head.

Court orders independent crash tests

CHICAGO (AP)—A Cook County judge on Tuesday ordered that National Transportation Safety Board tests on engine parts from Flight 232, the United Airlines DC-10 jet that crashed in Iowa last July, be conducted at an independent laboratory.

The NTSB tests are under way at the General Electric Co. plant in Ohio where the engines are made, following standard practice.

Circuit Court Judge Joseph Casciato ordered the change in locale at the request of attorney William Harte, whose firm is representing seven plaintiffs suing GE, United Airlines, and St. Louis based-McDonnell Douglas Corp., which manufactured the plane.

The lawsuits are seeking damages for victims of the July 19 crash that killed 112 of the 286 people aboard the plane.

The testing should be conducted according to "a procedure that protects the right of the victims," Harte said, after the ruling.

In his ruling, Casciato cited "the interests of substantial justice" in ordering the tests to be carried out at an independent lab "rather than at the facilities and laboratory of the defendant, General Electric Co."

Asst. U.S. Atty. William Clabault said he would challenge the order in federal court, noting the NTSB's mandate to investigate accidents involving the nation's interstate transportation system.

Clabault said after the ruling he had moved to have the case shifted to federal court.

He said the order meant that federal authorities "are prohibited from conducting our own investigation."

Attorney Sara Gourley, representing Fairfield, Conn.-based GE, argued for the appropriateness of the NTSB practice of conducting tests in the laboratory of the company that made the part under inspection.

Courts

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man filed suit against Sunrise Mobile Home Village after the trailer park allegedly evicted him because of a physical disability which causes him to loudly utter certain words or phrases or to bark noisily, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The plaintiff, Saul Lubaroff, said he was evicted from the trailer park because he suffers from Tourettes Syndrome, according to the suit.

Lubaroff is petitioning the Iowa Civil Rights Commission's decision that Tourettes Syndrome was not a factor in his eviction, according to the suit.

The commission's investigation found the owners of the trailer park evicted Lubaroff based on his untended yard and slight defects in his trailer, according to the suit.

After he had been notified of the problem, Lubaroff fixed his trailer and tidied his yard, according to the suit.

In the suit, Lubaroff said many other trailers in the park are defective and have untended yards, but no action has been taken against their owners.

Lubaroff is seeking relief for his suffering and expenses resulting from his eviction, according to the suit.

■ An Iowa City man was charged with assault resulting in injury after he allegedly punched a man in the mouth and dislodged at least one tooth, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Christopher A. Schriever, 24, 2 Triangle Place, reportedly assaulted the victim outside The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., after they had an argument, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 1, according to court records.

In Brief

Briefs

• United States policies on carcinogens will be the topic of a seminar by a national toxicology expert, sponsored by the UI Center for Health Effects of Environmental Contamination.

Dorothy Canter, assistant to the director of the National Toxicology Program of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will present "The Annual Report on Carcinogens: A Study in Science, Policy and the Law" at 10:30 a.m. Friday in the Bowen Science Building, Auditorium 3.

Canter will discuss a recent lawsuit brought against the National Toxicology Program by several chemical manufacturers over the findings contained in its annual report. She also will talk about the report, its findings and policies on carcinogens.

A 'classic' guy

Rawlings' antiquities background enhances his administration duties

John Klemme
Special to The Daily Iowan

While most students recognize Hunter Rawlings as a leading member of the UI community, few realize the UI president has also been an award-winning teacher and renowned scholar for nearly 20 years.

Although many former presidents at the UI specialized in law, Rawlings' academic success stems from his love for the classics.

"I became interested quite early when my mother handed me a copy of 'The Iliad,'" Rawlings said in a recent interview.

"I read it with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm and was hooked from that point on."

This enthusiasm led Rawlings to Haverford College, where he graduated in 1966 with an honors degree in classics. He earned his doctorate from Princeton in 1970.

Rawlings' love for the academic life eventually brought him to the University of Colorado, where he flourished as a teacher and later as chair of the classics department. He was also Colorado's prestigious Outstanding Teacher of the Year in 1979.

His transition from teacher to administrator came in 1980, when he gained a broadened interest in the workings of the university.

"I was fascinated by what was happening in other fields, particularly in the sciences," Rawlings said. "We had some very strong (science) departments at Boulder ... and I wanted to know some of those people and what they were doing ... so the administration became, for me, a way of learning more about what was happening in other fields."

Rawlings said his training in the classics has proven very useful in his role as the UI's chief spokesman.

"I think it (studying the classics) has primarily helped strengthen my communication skills. ... You learn a lot about the art of persuasion and a great part of my job entails persuasion," he said.

The subject is an integral part of Rawlings' life, often finding its way into his speeches as president.

"I really can't help it (making classical allusions)," he said. "It comes out all the time because I find so many things that go on today reflect earlier history, often in a direct way."

Although Rawlings' role as UI president entails many responsibilities, his new role has not kept him from what he loves most — teaching.

Rawlings made his teaching debut at the UI earlier this semester, teaching the classics portion of Sydney James' History I class, offered within the Unified Program.

Adam Holz, a sophomore in the Unified Program, said most of the students in the class were very pleased with Rawlings' performance.

"Rawlings was very impressive," said Holz. "He doesn't try to give a standard lecture to the class ... he points out important things to look at, but allows the discussion to flow naturally from those points."

Rawlings said he believes a good teacher will inspire students by bringing passion to the subject.

"We don't so much teach; we help people learn," Rawlings said. "Because the best learning really takes place on one's own, and the best way to make this happen is by showing students how excited you are about a subject."

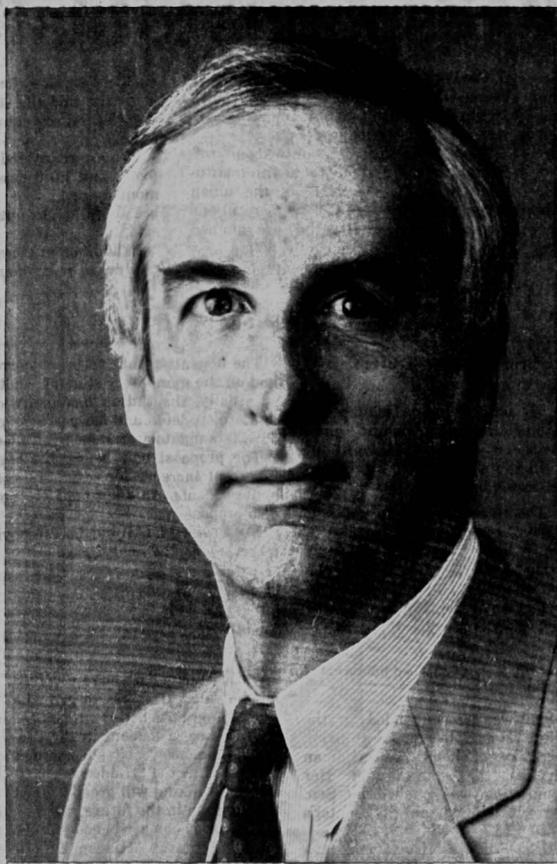

He said he attributes his own success as a teacher to the fact that he makes students active participants in the class.

An exceptional rapport with students and his deep passion for the classics have created some special moments during his teaching career, said Rawlings.

"When I describe the end of Athens as a political force, I've sometimes had students in tears," he said.

"That has affected me as well, because when you share those feelings, you feel like you've communicated something important, and that is not only an academic or intellectual matter, but it's a personal matter."

Although Rawlings has been involved in administrative work for the past nine years, he has

Rawlings on the Classics: "I became interested quite early when my mother handed me a copy of 'The Iliad.'" remained an active scholar, publishing numerous articles and a book on Thucydides' history in 1982.

Rawlings said he plans to expand his teaching role at the UI next semester, teaching a graduate course in Greek history.

Asbestos provokes civil suit

Man sues his employer's suppliers for physical pain

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A former Iowa City electrician filed suit Friday against more than 10 companies that sold asbestos products to his employers, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The plaintiff, Jacob Kobes, Lot 317, Bon Aire Mobile Home Village, has contracted asbestosis and other illnesses as the result of being exposed to asbestos while working as an electrician, according to the suit.

Asbestosis is a chronic lung inflammation caused by prolonged inhalation of asbestos particles.

In the suit, Kobes states that although the companies were aware of medical and scientific studies that associate certain illnesses with the use of asbestos products, they still failed to properly label, design, test and produce their asbestos products.

The companies intentionally withheld information regarding the dangers of using their products and failed to warn users of the potential health hazards associated with using asbestos, according to the suit.

The suit names eight companies nationwide, including Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., Celotex Corp., Armstrong World Industries Inc., Keene Corp., Fibreboard Corp., Gaf Corp., Crown Cork & Seal Company Inc. and Iowa-Illinois Thermal Insulation Inc.

As a result of his illnesses, Kobes has suffered mental anguish, depression, mental disorders, physical pain and extreme shortness of breath, according to the suit.

Kobes has also lost his earning potential and increased his chances of developing lung cancer or other tumors associated with exposure to asbestos, such as mesothelioma.

Kobes' wife, Fern, also filed suit against the companies, based on the loss of her husband's companionship and services, and on expenses incurred for medical services for her husband. They are suing for general, special, punitive and exemplary damages.

Senate proposal to allow 18-year-olds into area bars

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

A proposal to ask Iowa City bars to open their doors to 18-year-old UI students is now being considered by the UI Student Senate.

The Senate held an informal meeting Sunday night to discuss the proposal, which would be introduced to Iowa City bar owners by the Senate's City Relations Committee.

Bars should admit 18-year-olds because it is hypocritical to dictate a difference between 18 and 19, according to Senate Vice President Jenö Berta.

Both are "still underage," he said. "Eighteen-year-olds are equal in everything else on campus ... except when it comes to being able to go certain places," he said.

Although the drinking age is 21, some Iowa City bars admit 19- and 20-year-olds but stamp their hands so bartenders know they cannot legally drink alcohol.

The Iowa City code of law does not provide a minimum legal age for people in bars, so for a bar to admit 18-year-olds would simply require a change of policy rather than of law, Berta said.

Drinking is not the only reason why students go to bars, Berta said.

Many students go to the bars to eat, dance, play foosball or pool or just to meet people, he said.

In addition, Berta said, it is simpler and less expensive for many underage students to drink alcohol in their residence hall rooms or apartments than to deal with the hassle of getting in a bar under the current law.

Berta said that he realized bar owners might be concerned that allowing 18-year-olds in the door could draw an unwelcome influx of high-school students to the Iowa City bar scene.

But he said the potential high school student problem could be avoided by requiring 18-year-old bar patrons to produce their college identification cards to prove they are enrolled in college.

Scott McDonough, manager of The Airliner, a restaurant and bar located at 22 S. Clinton St., said the proposal may be a good idea for local bar owners.

"Initially my reactions are positive toward it," McDonough said. "It would take away lots of the headaches of being so stringent on carding."

In addition, McDonough said, the proposal would "virtually eliminate" the need for students to use fake and borrowed IDs — a common tactic used by minors to enter bars illegally.

Committee responds to staff shortages in institutions

DES MOINES (AP) — A legislative committee Tuesday recommended hiring a consultant to determine how many more people are needed at mental health and juvenile institutions suffering staff shortages.

"We have to look at that and see if there's a way we can either reduce population or increase staffing at those institutions," said Rep. Johnie Hammond (D-Ames). "That means we go to a professional."

The Legislative Fiscal Committee, which oversees the state budget, recommended hiring the consultant. A final decision rests with legislative leaders.

There have been complaints about staffing at juvenile and mental health institutions in Iowa. The head of the union representing workers at those institutions has told legislators that they are jammed and patients are increasingly violent.

"There have been constant problems in our institutions for years," Hammond said. She said the state has had brushes with federal regulators over licensing and standards.

"We are concerned about a suicide that took place at Independence a couple of months ago, and whether that was because of inadequate staffing there," she said.

In addition to increasing staff, a consultant might recommend a different organizational structure, she said.

The problem is critical at juvenile institutions, which poses long-term problems for Iowa if young offenders do not get adequate treatment and counseling, she said.

"Our juvenile institutions are in trouble," she said. "We're not doing a good job in our juvenile institutions because we don't have enough people there and we have too many kids."

She said legislators do not have time to waste in hiring a consultant. A decision could come as soon as Wednesday, she said.

"We want a report back in time to make some staffing decisions for the next fiscal year," she said.

The state's next fiscal year begins July 1, but lawmakers will make budget decisions for that period this winter, she said. She said a recommendation would be needed by February.

the center will also be presented to the Regents today since construction bids on the building exceeded the $16.2 million budget allocated by the Regents.

In July, the Regents rejected the construction bids because the summation of all the lowest bids exceeded the $16.2 million by $4.5 million, according to Stwalley.

Susan Phillips, UI vice president for finance and university services, said she hopes to tell the Regents how the $4.5 million can be trimmed from the building's design.

UI officials said Monday the modified design would save between $5 and $6 million, bringing the project within the allocated budget.

The university plans to simplify current building designs to bring it in line with the allocated budget, but Stwalley would not comment on what specific changes will be recommended to the Regents today.

Her office said she had no comment, but later the institute's press office provided Novello's résumé.

Novello, 45, is a native of Puerto Rico. She graduated from the University of Puerto Rico and in 1970 from the university's medical school in the top 5 percent of her class. She is a pediatric kidney specialist.

Novello joined the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in April 1986. She is its deputy director as well as coordinator for AIDS research.

She was recommended to the White House by Louis Sullivan, secretary of health and human services, the sources said. Her nomination was pushed by Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) the senator's office said.

In addition, she was one of a number of women recommended for the job by Bush's personal physician, Burton Lee, who said he was knocked out of consideration because his views on abortion differ from Bush's.

Novello "would be terrific" in the job, Lee said Tuesday.

Novello worked for Hatch in 1982-83, when he was chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Paul Smith, a spokesman for Hatch, said he remembered Novello as "a ball of energy. She's got a lot of vitality."

Rally

The Regents will be voting tomorrow on the proposed tuition increase and on the mandatory student health fee.

Initially, the tuition increase was proposed at 4.27 percent for all in-state students and 5.3 percent for out-of-state students at the UI. A $27.30 mandatory student health fee at the UI was also suggested.

The proposal now before the state Board of Regents consists of a 3-percent increase for residents and a 4-percent increase for nonresident students. An additional $10 per-semester mandatory health fee is also proposed.

Huss said the USI has been lobbying since June to reduce the tuition increase and the health fee.

"It's been an intensive drive to lower the increase," she said. "This rally will kick-off a yearlong effort by students at all three state schools in Iowa to improve the quality of education in the state."

Huss cited the progress that her organization has been making to further the educational cause, including placing students on the Legislative Task Force and implementing a student seat on the state Board of Regents.

"This is historic," she said. "For the first time in nine years, the Board of Regents is keeping the tuition increase below the rate of inflation."

She thanked Regent president Marvin Pomerantz and the board members for compromising on the tuition increase.

IT MAY COME AS A SURPRISE, BUT ONE OF THE MOST ACTIVE ORGANIZATIONS IN THE FIGHT AGAINST ALCOHOL ABUSE, DATE RAPE AND HAZING IS A FRATERNITY.

Delta Tau Delta is dedicated to dealing with many of the critical issues facing today's college students. Alcohol abuse, date rape and hazing simply cannot be tolerated.

As a result, we have instituted a comprehensive alcohol abuse education program among our 124 chapters.

We abhor date rape, believe in the worth of every individual, and have committed ourselves to the development of moral character.

We find hazing unthinkable, see no benefit whatsoever in the violation of an individual's physical well-being or personal dignity, and have taken steps to ensure that no Delta chapter engages in the practice.

Those may be strong words, especially when you consider that they come from a fraternity.

At Delta Tau Delta, however, those are words to which we are thoroughly committed, and to which we have dedicated ourselves and our efforts.

graduate levels. "Courses and research in this area are critical to the educational mission of the college," the minutes went on to state.

Several of the engineering professors believe Vernon was misinformed about the outcome of the faculty vote, though Vernon denies the allegations.

Ravindra Datta, professor of chemical engineering, said Vernon may have interpreted the faculty's decision to change the name of the chemical and materials department to chemical and biochemical engineering as de-emphasis, "exactly the opposite of what the faculty intended."

Members of the engineering faculty believe the audit's enormous expense and the attention paid to it necessitated some cuts, and Luerkens and Beddow provided appealing targets.

"There's now enormous pressure on the Regents to show, after spending $1.5 million on the study, that they made some profit," said James Andrews, professor of mechanical engineering. "It is now overwhelmingly political."

Datta said no one in the engineering school supports the proposal to eliminate materials engineering.

"I think rationale has very little to do with all this," Datta said. "It's all become political football."

The materials program at the UI is unique and internationally respected, several engineering professors said, and is not duplicated anywhere in the country.

Beddow's and Luerkens' emphasis in fine particle characterization makes the UI program unique in the world, Datta said. "It's not duplicated anywhere," Datta said. "It's a unique program that's of the highest quality, and it's known the world over."

In fact, Datta said, eliminating the program would jeopardize the entire college, since more than 70 percent of all engineering programs use materials in some way.

According to several engineering professors, Hering was "conspicuously absent" from Regents hearings where materials engineering was discussed and did not take an active stance in defending a vital program.

Hering could not be reached for comment this week. According to his secretary, he has been out of town and is scheduled to return to Iowa City today.

Carmichael refused to comment on the situation with Luerkens and Beddow, explaining that it was against his policy to comment publicly on personnel matters.

"Political Football"
The lingering feud between Hering and the two materials engineering professors began years ago, because Beddow and Luerkens refused to "play ball" in departmental matters, Datta said.

At the Regents' September meeting, Beddow and Luerkens presented their case before the board. Citing a UI Judicial Committee Panel report on the engineering college's refusal to deny Luerkens tenure in 1987, the two professors claimed their career progress had been impeded by Hering.

The judicial committee noted "personal and political tensions between the Dean and Chairman (Gregory Carmichael) and the faculty of the department."

The report also said that "a number of extraordinary events provide evidence of a deep schism that may be irreparable and of intense hostility that far exceeds the norm of faculty politics and professional disagreement."

Among the most glaring events was the unanimous election of Datta as department chairman in 1987, followed by Hering's "extraordinary and unique intervention" to void the results and hold a second election. Carmichael was then elected by one vote — his own.

"This was illegal," said Arthur Vetter, a professor emeritus in materials engineering. "It was completely fraudulent. This is just an example of the manipulation Hering does to get his way."

According to Vetter, the dean wanted a chairman who would be more favorable to his own policies, so he had two professors emeriti join in a second vote. The second election so incensed the College of Engineering faculty that they later voted to exclude emeriti from votes on departmental business.

Luerkens was the only untenured faculty member who voted against Carmichael in the second election.

After the second election, materials engineering suddenly began to be "de-emphasized" by Carmichael and Hering, according to several engineering faculty sources.

In a five-year plan drafted just prior to Carmichael's controversial election, Carmichael outlined the future of the chemical and materials programs at the college. The plan, which is currently at the midpoint in its cycle, described materials engineering as a field with a great potential for growth.

"Our plan calls for a major realignment and modification of our curriculum, and a focusing of our research in the areas of ... particulate and materials science," Carmichael wrote in September of 1986. "We have arguably the best-equipped particulate characterization laboratory in the nation."

Those goals were basically discarded after the second election, several sources said, and the proposals regarding materials engineering were never again taken seriously.

It was also at this time, in early 1987, that Carmichael began to note problems Luerkens allegedly was having with graduate students as "problems of major proportions during the tenure, promotion and reappointment process during early 1987," according to the judicial committee report. Such problems were absent in similar summaries of Luerkens' performance in the fall of 1984 and fall of 1985.

Though the panel didn't fully clear Luerkens of having problems with students, they maintained many of those problems were complicated by departmental politics.

The report mentions complaints against Luerkens by students he had never taught and the appearance of a letter of negative allegations by one alumnus who had not been Luerkens' student, and who was being recommended for a faculty position by Carmichael.

Carmichael maintains that de-emphasizing materials engineering was a result of a growing national trend toward increased emphasis on biochemical engineering.

But at the same time, materials engineering was being "internally squeezed" by a lack of resources and a freeze on hiring, Andrews said.

Beddow recalled a request for $11.50 worth of Alumina for a graduate class. The request was denied by Carmichael, on the grounds that "there is no money for graduate class projects." Later, the Alumina was donated to Beddow by Kirkwood Community College.

Long, Bizarre History

In 1974, Vetter's wife Juanita was attending a League of Women Voters' conference with her friend, state Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones. On the ride home from the conference, she said Lloyd-Jones arranged for her to meet Willard Boyd, then president of the UI.

Juanita Vetter said Boyd asked her why her husband chose to work with Keith Beddow and said his relationship with Beddow could hurt his career at the UI.

"The point is," Juanita said, "the feud between (Hering and Beddow) was well enough known that the university president almost 20 years ago said it would hurt my husband's career if he continued to associate with Professor Beddow."

Though the actual beginning of the feud is disputable, Art Vetter traces it back to a faculty meeting with then-department chairman Kirk Vallanis.

In the meeting, Vallanis said too many independent research projects were being done at once, Vetter recalls, and that the faculty should all work together on one project — his own.

Beddow and Vetter resisted this, since their work in fine particle characterization had already won them international acclaim and was being actively funded by the National Science Foundation. Their stubborn, uncompromising defense of the program — coupled by their subsequent alienation from the chairman and dean — is the subject of political in-fighting in the college to this day, Vetter said.

"We found one area (fine particle characterization) that was relatively untouched," Vetter said. "We wanted to make it our own, but we paid for it."

According to the judicial panel report, Vetter was denied promotion numerous times during Hering's tenure, but was promoted just two weeks before his retirement because, according to Hering, he "earned it."

Stunned reactions

A copy of the report Beddow and Luerkens gave to the Regents has since circulated among the engineering faculty, Andrews said, and the response has been quite startling.

"They're stunned," Andrews said. "Many of them were unaware of the political conflicts with Carmichael and the materials program."

"There's a possibility that the audit is being used as a vindictive response, and a real concern that a very important part of the engineering program may be curtailed," he added.

Now that the Regents' ultimate decision on materials engineering is at hand, many engineering faculty members fear that it may be too late to save the program.

"It certainly bothers me that not only are the faculty not involved in the decision-making process, but that these things are so fuzzy that you don't know what the damage is until it's too late," Datta said.

Despite the lack of evidence that the UI program is duplicated anywhere in the country and controversy over how the engineering faculty's wishes were presented to the Regents, few engineering professors are expecting a stay of execution from the Regents.

"Let me tell you, my friends, they are in charge," Collins said. "They can do anything they want."

downtown San Francisco. David Balague, 22, was on the 14th floor of the Bank of America building. "I've never been so scared. People were fighting to get under the desks."

Fans at Candlestick screamed as the stadium swayed shortly before the San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics were to have begun the third game of the World Series.

"This upper deck was absolutely shaking, the light stanchions were blowing back and forth, phones have gone out," Suzyn Waldman, a reporter covering the World Series for WFAN-AM in New York told listeners shortly after the quake hit. "Everyone is standing around here, people in the upper deck absolutely terrified to move, not knowing what to do."

A man in Saratoga, southwest of San Jose, told a San Francisco radio station, "My house is OK, but everything in it is gone. My refrigerator is standing in the middle of the kitchen." He said 10,000 gallons of water from his swimming pool crashed through his picture window into his home.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 6 on the scale can cause severe damage.

Loose moose shot by hunter, allegedly in self defense

UNDERWOOD, Iowa (AP) — Many Iowans who watched for weeks as a bull moose wandered southward through the state were angered when they learned that the animal had been shot and killed by a hunter.

"Everyone is appalled that the moose was shot, because everyone has been watching him from day one," Doug Clayton, a conservation officer for the state Department of Natural Resources, said Tuesday. "People are asking 'Why, why, why?'" Michael Scott Wiggins, 27, of Underwood, who said he shot the animal in self defense, was cited Tuesday in Pottawattamie County District Court for shooting the bull moose and having a center-fire rifle in his possession during a deer hunting season restricted to muzzle-loading guns.

Both citations are simple misdemeanors with a maximum penalty of $100 fine or 30 days in jail, said Assistant County Attorney Tim Markel. The state will also seek $1,000 in damages, he said. Wiggins arraignment was set for October 20.

Wiggins, who notified Iowa Department of Natural Resources officials about the shooting Sunday evening, said he encountered the moose in a soybean field east of Underwood, Clayton said.

Underwood is about 10 miles northeast of Council Bluffs. Clayton, who investigated the shooting, said he is skeptical about Wiggins' claim that he shot the moose after it charged him.

"He said the moose was charging north to south, but we found moose tracks going east to west," Clayton said. He also said the animal had not been killed with "head-on shots."

Richard McGeough, chief of the department's enforcement bureau, said he also found it hard to accept Wiggins' explanation.

"These animals routinely travel through the state, and people line up on the highways and gawk and take pictures," he said. "And of all these reports, the people who shoot the moose are the only ones who say the moose charged them."

Clayton said Wiggins told him he had been hunting for a coyote with his high-power .270 Magnum rifle in his father's soybean field when he looked up and saw the moose charging him.

Iowa not a hazardous-waste dumping ground

DES MOINES (AP) — The state Department of Natural Resources says Iowa exports six times as much hazardous waste as it imports.

"We have heard some people say that Iowa is becoming a dumping ground. But in fact, we export far more hazardous waste than we import," said Thomas Blewett, an environmental specialist for the department.

A Capacity Assurance Plan released Monday outlines Iowa's plan for dealing with hazardous waste cleanup over the next 20 years.

It was signed by Gov. Terry Branstad and sent to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as part of a requirement for receiving federal Superfund money.

The report shows that Iowa has nowhere to send nearly 50,000 gallons of hazardous waste that will be generated by 1995. However, it is only a planning document to satisfy the EPA, said

Teresa Hays of the Department of Natural Resources.

"We have no actual control over where private generators send the waste," she said. "It's just that Congress didn't want Superfund money going to states that would not look at the problem."

The Superfund is a federal fund designed to clean up hazardous waste sites while the courts sort out who is responsible for it.

Under the proposal, the bulk of the hazardous wastes generated in Iowa would be sent to Missouri and Kansas, which have negotiated joint waste-management agreements with Iowa.

Nearly 90 percent of the hazardous wastes generated in Iowa now are managed in the state or at plant sites through chemical or recycling processes, the report said. But more than 32,000 tons a year are exported, primarily to Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana.

About 5,000 tons a year are imported from Wisconsin.

Flag amendment sponsor recants mistake

WASHINGTON — A Senate sponsor of the proposed constitutional amendment to ban flag burning reversed course Tuesday and declared he would vote against the measure.

"It was a mistake of the heart, but nonetheless it was a mistake," Sen. John Danforth (R-Mo.) said of his earlier sponsorship as the Senate began a second day of debate on the proposed amendment. "I will vote against it," said Danforth, who had been among 53 cosponsors of the measure. "If it is going to be stopped, it must be stopped in the Senate."

Democratic critics for the first time expressed a measure of confidence that they could defeat the amendment when it comes to a vote, perhaps today. "I hope and expect that there will not be sufficient votes for the amendment to prevail," said Majority Leader George Mitchell (D-Maine).

The measure would authorize the federal and state governments to outlaw burning and other desecration of the American flag.

The House gave overwhelming final approval last week to a proposed law to ban flag-burning, and sent it to President George Bush. He said he would allow it to become law without his signature, but he also said anew that a mere statute wouldn't be enough to get around a June U.S. Supreme Court ruling that flag-burning could be constitutionally protected political protest.

Rain postpones shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Rain offshore, not demonstrators or mechanical problems, stopped the launch of the space shuttle Atlantis and its nuclear-fueled cargo Tuesday.

"It looks like the local weather is not going to cooperate. We're going to call it a day," launch director Bob Sieck told the five astronauts who had been lying on their backs in Atlantis' cabin for three hours.

NASA said it will try again today at 12:50 p.m. EDT. The launch opportunity — determined by the relative positions of Earth and Jupiter — extends until 1:21 p.m.

The outlook was not promising, with only a 60-percent prospect for adequate weather today. Another scrub then and no further attempt could be made until Friday at the earliest. The chances for clear skies Friday were rated at 70 percent.

NASA's last opportunity to launch the space probe is November 21, when Earth and Jupiter lose their favorable alignment. The launch "window" lengthens each day until November 2, then gets shorter by the day.

The scrub cost NASA $624,000, more than half of that for the liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen that had been pumped into the shuttle's external fuel tank overnight.

Funds okayed for Nicaraguan election

WASHINGTON — Under heavy White House pressure, the Senate Tuesday approved President George Bush's proposal to spend $9 million to boost the chances of Nicaragua's struggling political opposition in next February's national elections.

The legislative package, which Bush said would give opponents of the leftist Sandinista government "a fighting chance," was approved on a vote of 64-35 after the Senate fended off a series of weakening amendments. The House had passed the measure 263-156 on October 4, and it now goes to the president for his signature.

Bush has sought the money as a way to "level the playing field" for the coalition of parties opposing leftist President Daniel Ortega's re-election bid. He met earlier Tuesday at the White House with GOP senators to drum up support, and sent Secretary of State James Baker and White House chief of staff John Sununu to Capitol Hill to lobby senators.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the February 25 elections "the last crucial shot at getting representative democracy in Nicaragua."

In a letter to lawmakers, Bush acknowledged administration discomfort with a Nicaraguan law that could send as much as $2 million of the funds directly to the Sandinista-controlled Supreme Electoral Council. But he added: "We should not let this displeasure... be used as a transparent attempt to prevent the United States from helping its democratic friends."

Fed works to aid stock market hurt by deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit widened sharply to $10.77 billion in August as imports flooded into the country at a record pace, the government said Tuesday in a dose of bad economic news that crimped the stock market's recovery.

The Federal Reserve Board moved for the second straight day to soothe investors' worries, pumping $1.5 billion into the banking system a day after making a $2 billion cash infusion.

The money is intended to calm jittery markets by showing the Fed's resolve to make sure banks have enough reserves to keep loans flowing to brokerage houses caught in a cash squeeze because of falling stock prices.

The Commerce Department said the August trade shortfall between imports and exports was the largest imbalance in eight months and was 31 percent bigger than a revised July deficit of $8.24 billion.

At the White House, the Bush administration expressed disappointment in the trade report.

"This is, of course, an unwelcome increase, and we're hopeful that it simply is a one-month situation and will turn around," presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters.

Asked if the administration feared that the trade numbers would drive the market down, Fitzwater said, "The market seems stable and the economy is sound, and there is no cause for disruption of that kind."

U.S. Trade Balance

The market did retreat significantly in the hours after the trade deficit announcement, dropping by more than 60 points at one time. But the market rallied, with the Dow Jones industrial average finishing the day down 18.65 points.

Tuesday's performance followed a gain of 88.12 points Monday and a plunge of 190 points Friday.

The sharply higher trade deficit for August also captured the attention of Democrats in Congress unhappy with the Bush administration's trade policies.

Spokesman announces Bush will veto federal abortion bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush will veto a bill allowing federally financed abortions for rape and incest victims, his spokesman said Tuesday. Abortion-rights activists immediately denounced the decision as "embarrassing" and "immoral."

"I think it is unfortunate and regrettable," said House Speaker Thomas Foley (D-Wash.).

The threatened veto was all but assured when talks between the White House and Congress on finding a compromise broke down the day before.

"No blame. Just didn't work out," Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, told reporters on Tuesday.

Foley and other Democratic leaders vowed to fight to override the veto. Asked if he has the votes to do so, Foley said, "Perhaps not, but we will have a vote."

The bill passed the House by 216-206, short of the two-thirds margin necessary to override a veto.

In the past, administration officials had suggested a veto was a strong likelihood. Fitzwater on Tuesday ended any doubts.

"In the end we couldn't find any flexibility," Fitzwater contended.

Bush had raised hopes for a compromise by telling reporters last week he thought there might be "some room for flexibility" in his position.

At issue is a provision that extends the use of Medicaid money to pay for abortions. Currently, Medicaid payments are restricted to abortions to protect the pregnant woman's life.

Rep. Vic Fazio (D-Calif.) charged Bush's threatened veto was "fundamentally an immoral decision" that means only well-off rape and incest victims could have abortions. And Rep. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.), a sponsor of this year's broader provision, called Bush's stance "outrageous... I think it will haunt him for the rest of his political career."

Fitzwater on Tuesday insisted that Bush last week never intended to signal a liberalization in his position on the issue and was only speaking about "flexibility in the process."

The abortion provision is part of a spending bill for the departments of Labor and Health and Human Services that has already been approved by a House-Senate conference committee and by the full House. It awaits final Senate approval.

Ivory gauche as elephants declared endangered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ivory is suddenly taboo in America. In an effort to save the elephant — just declared an endangered species — stores have stopped selling ivory, fashionable people no longer wear it and even Vladimir Horowitz agreed to give up his ivory-keyed Steinway piano.

Jewelry made from the tusks of elephants became unpopular so fast that some observers see the trend as evidence that a new environmental ethic is taking hold among fashion-setters.

"It's a grass roots movement; it's becoming unfashionable to wear furs, too," said Reenie Brown, publisher of the trade magazine Accessories. "There seems to be a very strong trend among Americans to think first of wildlife, of compassion, and not our own vanity."

"I talk to jewelers every day, from Main Street to Fifth Avenue, and they all express abhorrence at selling ivory today," said David Federman, gemstone writer for Modern Jeweler magazine. "If they're doing it, they're selling it under the counter."

Reported another trade journal, Colored Stone:

"Many dealers are switching to ivory substitutes. Treated cow bone seems to be the current favorite." — fashion journal Colored Stone

"Many dealers are switching to ivory substitutes. Treated cow bone seems to be the current favorite."

William Conway, general director of the New York Zoological Society, compared the situation to a turnaround in the fur industry a decade ago.

In 1968 and 1969, furriers imported the skins of 17,490 leopards, 23,347 jaguars and 3,168 cheetahs, he said, but under pressure from public opinion stopped using those animals.

"The American alligator is another example of an endangered animal which turned around in population after a ban," added Brian Day of the World Wildlife Fund.

Steinway & Sons appealed this summer to 800 "Steinway artists" — ranging from Horowitz and Van Cliburn to Billy Taylor and Peter Nero. They were asked to forgo the ivory-keyed concert pianos the company had continued providing them even after switching to plastic years ago for ordinary pianos.

"Without exception, all were appreciative of the environmental concern," said spokesman Leo Spellman. Other piano makers also have switched to plastic, despite the preferred porous quality of ivory keys.

The effort to protect the elephant reached its climax this week at an international conference in Switzerland that classified the elephant as an endangered species and banned all trade in elephant products.

Five African nations balked, saying they would continue selling tusks.

Nonetheless, the action by the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species is likely to undercut the market for poachers.

Yosemite Gramm

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction plan isn't doing the job.

On Monday, $16.1 billion in funding was "automatically" and "permanently" cut from the budget. Sixteen billion dollars may seem like a lot of money for the government to save, but considering that just 25 percent of the government's programs are eligible for cuts, it's clear the savings will barely scratch the surface of the debt.

Richard Darman, White House budget chief, said he does not want to see this happen again, and sticking with the cuts may be the government's best option.

But Darman's recommendation has a hollow ring to it. Reducing the deficit by cutting government spending is a respectable start, but Gramm-Rudman still allows $100 billion to be added to the national debt in fiscal-year 1990. The bill simply doesn't do enough to eliminate the debt problem.

Gramm-Rudman is, at the same time, too accommodating and too limiting.

The formula which determines how much of a deficit can be run each year doesn't even consider such factors as GNP and unemployment.

But when the economy is struggling, it allows the government to overspend in efforts to stimulate the economy. When the economy is strong, it's a good time to pay off debts. But scheduling a deficit or surplus without regard for the status of the economy is foolish.

At best, the Gramm-Rudman automatic spending cuts are like Yosemite Sam trying to stop his camel by whacking it over the head and knocking it unconscious.

Not even the U.S. government can run an infinite debt; it must reduce spending at some point. The answer lies in responsible budgeting at all levels of government, not in sequestration.

Education dollars

It's time to discuss education.

Actually, it's time to do more than discuss education. It's time to raise teacher salaries, to increase state spending for education and to make it a primary issue in campaign races everywhere.

Government officials seem slowly to be realizing this. In September, they held a national summit to "discuss education." Each political leader at the conference claimed to want to improve the nation's schools and colleges, but lobbyists at the event were skeptical. One called the summit "dueling press conferences."

"I don't know anybody who thinks this will have much of an impact," the lobbyist said.

Leaders settled for talking about education issues in September, but now they need to take concerted action on those same issues.

It seems that Iowans also want their leaders to do more than just discuss education. The results of a recent survey indicate 77 percent of Iowa voters want the state to spend more money on public schools and that 44 percent of voters think state teachers should be paid more.

They should. The Iowa State Education Association will push for a $2,000-a-year pay raise and a starting salary increase to $22,000. But along with that pay raise must come a push for a decrease in teacher work load and an increase in respect for the profession.

Iowans have said, via the survey, they want the state to put education first in terms of state appropriations. 1990 is an election year; by taking their concern for education into the voting booth, Iowans can influence future legislation to free up education dollars.

'Misconceptions' prompt veto

There are two kinds of women who need an abortion: your sister, and everybody else.

Your sister made a mistake, or was taken advantage of, or even worse, attacked. This doesn't have to spell the end of her life, does it? We could make this all go away, couldn't we? Just this one time?

It's not like she's one of those women who misuse abortion. You know, those girls these days who use abortion as a means of contraception. Half of them aren't in school anyway, so no big deal if they stay home on welfare and raise one more kid.

Or those girls who get pregnant on purpose so that they can trap some guy into marrying them. But it doesn't work, so she decides to dump the kid. And then she cries rape, you know?

Or incest. Can you believe it—she would blame her own father?

Yes, that's why the abortion rate is so high these days. It's a crime, what these women will say. They ought to be forced to have those babies. That would teach them responsibility. What do they think? That they can run out, get pregnant, and the government will pay the bill? I think that's wrong. I'm not paying for any of those abortions.

There seems to be a lot of fuzzy thinking going on these days about how exactly women get pregnant. From recent discussions in the news, one would think that getting pregnant is strictly a mental act—mostly a matter of attitude. The woman's moral stance toward a possible pregnancy, in this view, is the surest indicator of her ability to conceive.

Women with the proper moral attitude don't get pregnant unwillingly. Where have we heard this kind of claim before?

Rape victims have long labored under the assumption that somehow, they asked for it. If it weren't for something they planned, or they said, or they wore, or they did, they wouldn't be in this position. That's why courts like to see blood and bruises as evidence of a bona fide fight against an alleged rapist.

It's the same with a problem pregnancy. We want to see evidence of a fight. Otherwise, we assume that somehow the woman is morally at fault.

Bonehead ideas like these seem to be lurking somewhere in the collective consciousness of the U.S. House of Representatives. For the last nine years, there has been a ban on government funding for abortions, with the single exception of those performed to save a woman's life.

A week ago, the House voted 216-206 to restore government funding of abortions for poor women who have been victims of rape or incest. Most interesting here is the thinking of our representatives as they struggle to justify their positions. No fewer than 29 members of the House changed sides since the last time they voted on this issue. Especially telling was the confusion in their minds between morality and biology.

From recent discussions in the news, one would think that getting pregnant is strictly a matter of attitude.

Take Rep. Richard Durbin (D-Ill.) This Sunday, the Chicago Tribune reported that Durbin had changed his vote to favor government funding of abortion in cases of rape or incest. Why?

"He said he had regretted his previous vote, which he had cast in the mistaken belief that most women victimized by rape and incest could prevent pregnancies if they got to a hospital quickly." How exactly did Rep. Durbin think these quick trips to the hospital would prevent pregnancy? I would very much like to hear our legislators spell this out. If this one worked, it would mean brisk business for taxi drivers. "Hello, Yellow Cab? We'd like a round trip to the hospital, please—and make it quick."

Or was it supposed to be something that happened at the hospital itself? Something about denouncing the sexual act that brought her there. If a woman vehemently denounces sex—and quickly—somehow she won't be pregnant.

That's the part I'd ask us to think about carefully. Because coming up again—this time in the President of the United States.

President George Bush is expected to veto legislation that would permit Medicaid to pay for the termination of pregnancies resulting from rape or incest. It's not that he has any moral qualms about such abortions, his press secretary explained on Monday. It's a matter of the money—and a matter of control.

Women will lie, thinks President Bush. They'll say they were raped just to get the government to pay for the abortion.

Bush might have compromised on a "quick trip" loophole. If a woman reported the rape or incest within 48 hours, then she would later qualify for an abortion.

But otherwise, no go—because women will say anything, you know, especially if you give them time to make it up. And plenty of people suspect women already have too much power when it comes to pregnancy. It's downright close to magic.

This is quick-trip-to-the-hospital thinking all over again.

Does this make any sense? Of course not. But it would once again put the burden squarely where too many men think it belongs—on the shoulders of those highly dubious creatures, women.

Marlena Corcoran's column appears Wednesdays on the Viewpoints page.

New Hampshire. He left behind a great many accomplishments, foremost of which is a hole north of the Union that someday might be a laser center.

You might say he pushed the $27 million facility through the state legislature just in time to get it on his resumé and get the hell out of here.

And now—two years after he left us high and dry—Freedman is still haunting us. In fact, just when it looked like we were getting over him, he's come back bigger than life.

He is the "100 Years of Iowa Football" logo.

There's just no denying it. The damn thing looks exactly like the man—more than a little ironic, since Freedman himself doesn't know the difference between a football and a Sesame Street Ernie puppet.

The logo, two years in the making, serves to remind us that football has been an Iowa institution for a century. But, once you take a good look at it, it's hard to envision an Iowa great like Nile Kinnick. All I see is James Freedman, All-American. (Don't wait for the movie. It's already been done about a fellow named Knute.)

Take a look for yourself. The hair.

James Freedman?

The droopy eyes. The ears—oh, those ears—and that smirk. Indisputably Freedman.

"That's simply a coincidence," says Rick Klatt, the UI's director of athletic promotions. "When Dick (Huber) did that first design for us we told him to put an old-time football player in the 'I'."

Apparently, that's what Huber did. His second draft passed over the desk of Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliot, who recognized the player in the logo as Bronko Nagurski, who lettered in football at Minnesota in the late '20s.

Huber, a graphic design supervisor at the UI Hospital School, undertook five revisions to get the logo to its current form.

The creator says he doesn't think the drawing looks anything like Jimmy O. "I didn't illustrate off of him. I illustrated off of an old picture," Huber said.

That leaves the possibility that a relative of Freedman's—say his father—was a former Iowa star halfback. It could be true, but given Freedman's athletic prowess, I sincerely doubt it.

But it shouldn't bother us that the "100 Years" logo resembles an esteemed academician like Freedman. Since the thing is painted bigger than life in the end zones at Kinnick Stadium, it might just serve to undo the image of Iowa athletes that Ronnie "Watercolors 101" Harmon painted in court last spring.

And certainly it's better having the logo resemble an Iowa man than a Minnesota man named Bronko. That would set a dangerous precedent.

I'm going to send a blown-up copy of this logo to Freedman in New Hampshire so he can hang it in his office. Then he can tell all of his Ivy-covered colleagues about the time he broke open a really long one.

Student government injustice

To the Editor:

There is a lot of injustice at the UI... vile in the face of the amount of money that the 29,000 UI students pay for their education.

The latest injustice foisted upon the students by our oh-so-benevolent administration [has been] the purging of the elected executives of the Collegiate Associations Council. The story goes that Dan Shanes and his cohorts "stole" the election from other suitors for office in a manner that was unjust. Yet the "stolen" election was illegal because of the academic ineligibility of one of the candidates. So the administration, in their normal, paternalistic wisdom, removed the most experienced council executives from their posts, and forbade the current execs from being active in CAC until May.

Yet isn't it an injustice that a man who forgot to tell the CAC that his running mate was academically ineligible and was legally removed by the council, should rule the body now, and with more power than any previous CAC president, simply because the administration wanted to meddle in UI student government?

Why is it that CAC should be co-opted and destroyed? It seems that the CAC has been too successful in fighting tuition increases... The CAC has balanced books while the senate has squandered money.

Academic substance

To the Editor:

I would like to congratulate [Justin Cronin] on his editorial "Core learning" [DI, October 12]. We need not agree with all the details of the NEH recommendation, or approve of all the questions in the Gallup survey, to which it is a response. What matters is that we have a clear understanding of the difference between academic substance and academic accident, and that we recognize that there is far too much of the latter in most institutions of higher learning.

Much too often, in the name of "innovation," "unfettered inquiry," and "interdisciplinary studies," faculty talent and time are wasted, and students are cheated.

Politburo deciding ruler's fate

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's ruling Politburo held a meeting Tuesday that could determine the fate of Erich Honecker, the 77-year-old leader whose stern rule has been challenged by mass emigration and pro-democracy protest.

Demonstrations were reported in five cities on the eve of the regular weekly meeting, including a march by 120,000 people in Leipzig that was the largest protest since East Germany was founded 40 years ago.

In West Germany, the mass-circulation newspaper Bild reported late Tuesday that a special session of the Communist Party Central Committee had been called for Wednesday.

Quoting party sources it did not identify, Bild said Honecker would be "pressured" to turn over leadership of the party "to younger hands." Honecker also is East Germany's head of state.

Secrecy surrounded the Politburo meeting, and there was no indication when news might emerge from it.

The flight of tens of thousands of East Germans and protests that began early this month have been the most visible signs of growing opposition to Honecker, who has presided over an authoritarian regime for 18 years.

Pro-democracy activists estimated the Monday night throng in Leipzig at more than 120,000, but West Germany's ZDF television network quoted witnesses Tuesday as saying the number of marchers was closer to 150,000.

Chants of "Freedom!" and "Democracy now!" rose from the throng, and marchers shouted, "We're staying here!" Most protesters in East Germany have been people who do not want to emigrate and demand reform at home akin to those being pursued in the Soviet Union, Hungary and Poland.

ARD television of West Germany said thousands also marched Monday night in Magdeburg, Plauen and Halle.

About 3,000 pro-democracy activists held a vigil in an East Berlin church Monday night. Security on the capital's streets was increased, but no incidents were reported.

Three men were given prison terms for vandalism, illegal assembly and resisting arrest October 4-5, when thousands of people tried to board trains at Dresden that carried East German refugees to West Germany from Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Two got more than three years and the third received 4½ years, said the official news agency ADN, which reported the convictions and sentences Tuesday.

Mayor Wolfgang Berghofer of Dresden told 10,000 protesters from a City Hall balcony Monday night, speaking through a megaphone, that he was prepared to continue dialogue with reform-minded groups.

He refused, however, to talk with the pro-democracy New Forum, a relatively new organization that has united the East German reform movement.

At last week's regular meeting, the 21-member Politburo expressed willingness to talk about possible reform.

That increased interest in this Tuesday's session, which many people felt might indicate the political futures of Honecker and his aging colleagues.

Power rests in the hands of the Politburo, which is dominated by hardliners, but leadership changes need formal approval by the Central Committee.

A tram is blocked by East German demonstrators in downtown Leipzig Monday night. About 120,000 took part in the peaceful protest march for political reforms. It was the first time that demonstrators carried banners with them.

Assassin kills judge 'calmly' in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An assassin apparently sent by drug barons stepped from a motorcycle Tuesday and calmly killed a federal judge with six gunshots as he waited outside his home in Medellin for a ride to work, witnesses said.

An anonymous telephone caller to Caracol radio in Medellin, base of the most notorious cocaine cartel, said "the Extraditables" killed Judge Hector Jimenez Rodriguez in retaliation for the extradition of Colombians wanted on drug charges in the United States.

Jimenez, 55, is among scores of judges and court employees slain by the drug gangs. After his murder, the 14,000 members of a court workers' union, which includes federal judges, called a three-day strike that virtually shut down the judicial system.

Union spokeswoman Consuelo Hererra said about 3,000 of the estimated 9,000 non-union court employees had decided to join the strike.

A union executive in Bogota said none of Medellin's 42 federal judges had police protection. He spoke anonymously to avoid becoming a target of drug dealers.

"The Extraditables" refers to alleged traffickers wanted in the United States. Colombia has extradited four suspects since a government crackdown on drug gangs began August 19.

A newspaper bombed Monday brought out a slim edition Tuesday despite destruction of about 80 percent of its facilities at Bucaramanga in northeastern Colombia. Vanguardia Liberal published 16 pages instead of its usual 24.

An official police report Tuesday said the car bomb killed four people and wounded nine. Some broadcast and newspaper reports had said as many as six were killed and 20 injured.

Predict on AIDS: 14 mil. will be infected by year 2002

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what it called "a dark view of the future," the Hudson Institute predicted Tuesday that 14.5 million Americans will be infected with the AIDS virus by the year 2002 unless strong measures are taken by government and society to control the epidemic.

"If the nation shrinks from taking responsible action now to contain the ... epidemic, it tacitly will be accepting a disaster of immense proportions," the Hudson study says.

"Unchecked, AIDS will kill more Americans in the next decade than have died in combat in all of the nation's wars since our founding," the study said. "Already AIDS has claimed the lives of as many Americans as did the Vietnam War."

The Centers for Disease Control reports that AIDS has been diagnosed in more than 100,000 Americans, and that almost 60,000 have died. These numbers do not include Americans who are only infected with the AIDS virus and are not experiencing symptoms that would classify the case as AIDS. The Hudson study estimates are based on all people who are infected with human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

William Johnston, co-author of the study and vice president of Hudson, a well-known think tank, said the report studied three possible scenarios and then drew up a mathematical model to project possible consequences.

In the worst case, which Johnston called a "muddle through," the report said there would be some 1.4 million new HIV infections annually in the United States.

This worst case assumes no vaccine is developed, and there are no major changes in current social-sexual attitudes, he said.

But even with the best case, which Johnston said would include a vaccine by the middle of the 1990s and "remarkable behavioral changes throughout society," the report predicts there will be 30,000 new HIV infections annually by 2002. The total number of Americans with the disease that year under this scenario, the report said, would be about 1.6 million.

"The middle case, which is the most reasonable," said Johnston, "gives us about 6 million" cases of HIV infection.

The "middle case" assumes some changes in social-sexual behavior with a vaccine available by the year 2002.

Johnston said the primary factor in controlling the epidemic will be widespread, voluntary, free HIV tests for all people between the ages of 15 and 65. This will help establish the "HIV status" of all sexually active people, he said.

"By encouraging massive, routine, voluntary testing, we can enable society voluntarily to segregate itself sexually into two groups: Those who carry the virus, and those who do not," the report said. "No other means is likely to alter the course of the HIV epidemic."

Because of the "biological dynamics" of HIV, the report said, the disease can be controlled "in a society that is not universally monogamous" only by limiting sexual contact between the infected and the uninfected.

The study said it is "equally important," however, to protect the rights and privacy of all people in society.

"At the least, this means free or inexpensive testing and treatment and aggressive defense of the civil employment rights of those who carry the virus," the report said.

In all three scenarios, the AIDS epidemic would be most disastrous to black Americans, the Hudson study said.

Under the worst case, the researchers forecast that by the year 2002 almost 42 percent of the black population aged 15 to 50 would be infected with HIV. Under the best case, infection among that same group would be 1.5 percent, while the rate in the middle case would be 15.5 percent.

Quake puts halt to Game 3 of World Series

Candlestick Park bears reminders of land shift

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The World Series was postponed Tuesday night when an earthquake shook northern California shortly before gametime, damaging and forcing evacuation of crowded Candlestick Park.

A decision on when and where Game 3 of the first-ever Bay Bridge series between the Oakland Athletics and the San Francisco Giants will be played will not be made until Wednesday. A section of the Bay Bridge itself collapsed.

Baseball commissioner Fay Vincent said there were cracks in the stadium and the extent of damage would not be known until later in the night. No major injuries were reported.

One possibility was that the series would be moved back to Oakland, where the A's won the first two games Saturday and Sunday.

A section in the upper stands in right field separated by about six inches, and several cracks ran down the concrete aisle and broke off. Fans were carrying them home as souvenirs.

"The people two to three rows in front of me had big pieces of metal several inches, fall on their heads," said David Guzzetti, a city council member from Chico, Calif. "The light towers were just rocking back and forth. I couldn't believe it."

The quake registered 6.5 to 7.0 on the Richter scale 10 miles north of Santa Cruz. It shook buildings in Sacramento, 95 miles to the north-east, and was felt as far away as Reno, Nev., 225 miles to the east.

Aftershocks continued at least 45 minutes after the quake struck at 5:05 p.m. PDT. Players stayed on the field for 30 minutes before the game was postponed. Many of them left hand-in-hand with their families.

"I was sitting on the bench and at first I thought it was the fans stamping (their feet)," said Oakland manager Tony La Russa. "Then right away I realized what was happening."

"You can't stop concrete," Oakland outfielder Dave Henderson said. "Forget the World Series."

"I try to be a big tough guy," said 6-foot-3 umpire Eric Gregg, "but I was scared senseless. I couldn't fit under the table and finally I went to stand under some arches."

Oakland slugger Jose Canseco was standing with his wife when the tremor hit. He said he looked up at fans yelling at him and thought, "Jeez, look at that. They still want us to play."

An hour after the earthquake was felt, about two-thirds to three-fourths of the sellout crowd of 60,000 were still in their seats, but police began evacuating the upper deck about 5:40 p.m., 10 minutes after the game was scheduled to start and moments after a second aftershock was felt at the ballpark.

The power in the stadium was knocked out and phone lines were disturbed.

"The game couldn't be started because a power transformer is out," Vincent said. "We have to wait to see if the power comes back on. We are not going to start the game unless we get lights."

ABC, which was on the air from Candlestick Park at the time, announced it lost the feed from its truck at the stadium.

The network was doing its pre-game show when announcer Al Michaels said: "There's an earth . . ." and the picture was lost.

The first aid station at Candlestick reported a few people were hit by falling debris and were being treated. None of the injuries was said to be serious.

Oakland Athletics pitcher Storm Davis (14) takes a baby from an unidentified woman Tuesday in the stands at Candlestick Park in San Francisco following an earthquake that jolted the Bay Area prior to the third game of the World Series. The quake registered 6.9 on the Richter Scale.

However, a 30-foot section of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge collapsed and there were reports of fires and damage in the city.

The press box in Candlestick Park shifted as the initial tremor hit. There was an announcement to clear the upper deck, but most of the fans remained.

At the time of the tremor, a band was playing on the outfield grass and hundreds of balloons were set to be released as Candlestick prepared for its first World Series game since 1962.

A few minutes after the first aftershock there was another brief tremor at about 5:10 p.m., but the fans remained calm and stayed in their seats.

Candlestick Park, which opened in 1960, has a capacity of 60,000. At the time of the initial tremor, the stadium was almost full.

Fans shaken, . . . but not stirred

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There was no rioting, no panics at Candlestick Park when an earthquake rocked the stadium and forced postponement of Tuesday night's third game of the World Series.

Fans in the sellout crowd of about 60,000 remained calm when the tremors struck. Nor was there any booing or complaining from fans when the game was postponed.

Giants star first baseman Will Clark was through a similar situation last year in Los Angeles.

"We had one in LA last year, but this was more scary because we have a packed house here," Clark said. "It could have been a catastrophe."

Ken Oberkfell was sitting on the Giants bench when "I felt everything shaking, so I made a mad dash for the middle of the field."

Umpire Al Clark was still in the umpires' dressing room when the earthquake hit.

"It was one of the scariest situations I've ever been in. As soon as it started, my legs went numb," he said. "I looked up, and the walls were waving. I became frightened, and I realized it was an earthquake."

Athletics pitcher Todd Burns wasn't thinking about himself. He was carrying a baby girl on his shoulder as he left the park.

"I just want to find out if the kids are OK," he said.

Teammate Rickey Henderson knew what was happening immediately.

"I've been through these before," said Henderson, who grew up in Oakland. "I knew immediately that it was an earthquake, but I thought it was just a little one."

'Classic' rivalry resumes Saturday

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry isn't saying his biggest concern is beating Michigan, but taking care of Bo Schembechler.

"I want to cut the cord to his headset so he doesn't strangle himself going on the field," Fry said Tuesday at his weekly press conference.

Schembechler isn't the only one who has found excitement in the series that has its 41st meeting Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in Kinnick Stadium. The Hawkeyes, 3-2 overall and 1-1 in the Big Ten, and Wolverines, 4-1 and 2-0, have had some classic battles in the last decade.

In 1985, the last time Iowa won a meeting in Iowa City, Rob Houghtlin kicked a field goal on the game's final play to boost Iowa to a 12-10 win.

Since then, the Wolverines took two in Ann Arbor, Mich., and ended in a 17-17 tie last fall in Iowa City. In the last eight years, five of the games have come down to the final minutes.

But Fry doesn't see this weekend's games as one that could fall in that category.

"It would be wishful thinking or dreaming to think that we're on the same level as Michigan," Fry said. "They win, they win big, they're extremely well coached, play great defense and are more diversified on offense (than past Michigan teams)."

The Wolverines, traditionally powerful on the ground have been putting the ball in the air more in 1989. One of the reasons for that is the play of Elvis Grbac, a redshirt freshman quarterback for the Wolverines.

Schembechler has left the door open for Grbac or senior Michael Taylor to start Saturday.

"I'm positive in my mind that he'll play both," Fry said. "It's like getting ready for two offensive teams. Taylor's got different weapons. Both are excellent passers, but Taylor's a better runner and runs the option."

"It doesn't really matter because you're not going to start for Michigan unless you're a winner."

The Wolverines have beaten UCLA, Maryland, Wisconsin and Michigan State. Their only loss came in the season opener to top-ranked Notre Dame, 24-19.

Iowa also dropped the first game of the season, to Oregon, then beat Iowa State, lost to Michigan State and topped Wisconsin.

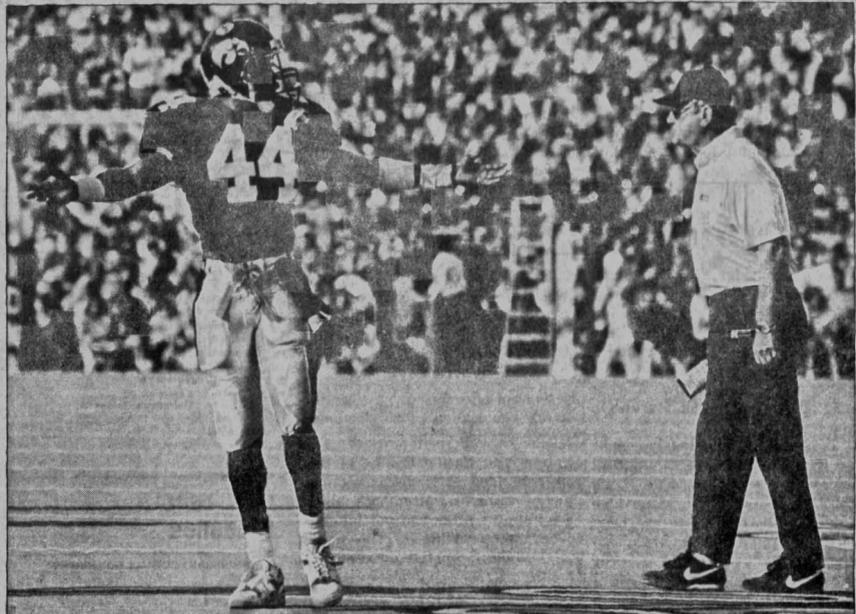

Fry said Iowa will likely have to fill in for senior wide receiver Travis Watkins again. Watkins had problems with an ankle and didn't play against the Badgers in Madison, Wis., Saturday.

Michigan will be without standout linebacker J.J. Grant. He re-injured a knee in the final series of the game with the Spartans last week.

But the loss of Grant on defense hasn't given Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers a chance to breathe a sigh of relief. Rodgers had a string of 89 pass attempts without an interception before throwing two at Wisconsin in his first season of play.

But that statistic hasn't clouded his vision when

Hawks fall to seventh on 2nd day of Invite

Rita Heimes
 The Daily Iowan

"Pitiful day. Pitiful." Iowa women's golf coach Diane Thomason used that expression to describe the Hawkeyes' performance in the second round of the Edean Ihlandfeldt Invitational in Seattle, Wash., Tuesday.

After a hooting a team score of 324 in the second 18-hole round, Iowa dropped to seventh place out of 15 teams, down from Monday's sixth place standing.

Arizona is still in first place with a two-day team score of 604, far ahead of Iowa's 645. Southern Cal, New Mexico State, Stanford, Brigham Young and U.S. International are the other teams currently leading Iowa in the tournament.

Thomason had predicted the Hawkeyes would play better Tuesday than they had Monday, and was disappointed with the

"We didn't play very well. We have a lot of potential, but we just have to believe in ourselves."
 — Becky Fuglestad

performance of her players.

"I didn't see what I wanted to see today," Thomason said Tuesday. "We're having a hard time getting it going. We got off to a bad start Monday, and today we didn't come out of it."

Only two of the five Iowa golfers improved their scores in the second round.

Hawkeyes gain revenge over 'Clones'

Record crowd inspires Nelson's squad

Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler said that playing at Iowa is difficult because the crowd is too loud.

Iowa volleyball coach Ruth Nelson said that her team doesn't mind playing in front of noisy crowds on the road.

In fact, she said, the record-setting crowd of 765 people may have helped her team defeat Iowa State 15-12, 16-14, 6-15, 15-9 Tuesday night in Ames.

"Our team can play anywhere," Nelson said. "The crowd kept us up. I think that (the Cyclones) were actually a little distracted by the noise. But we're used to playing in big crowds."

Along with the motivation from the crowd, the Hawkeyes were given incentive by the importance of the intrastate rivalry.

Five weeks ago, the Cyclones defeated Iowa at the Carousel Classic All-Iowa Championship at

Volleyball

Carver-Hawkeye Arena. That win granted Iowa State the state's bragging rights. But Tuesday night in Ames, the Iowa volleyball team took it upon themselves to get those rights back.

"We had a few times when we weren't real good, but we came back," Iowa middle-hitter Barb Willis said. "We got the state bragging rights back."

The game started out well for Iowa, with the Hawkeyes capturing the first two games, 15-12 and 16-14.

But, in losing the third game 6-15, the Hawkeyes were rudely reminded of their match with Ohio State last weekend. In that match, Iowa started out with 15-9, 16-14 wins over the Buckeyes. But after losing the third game 15-10, they could not come back, and ended up losing 3-2.

"We just weren't there (during the third game)," Willis said. "But we decided that we wouldn't have another Ohio State."

Willis, who is from Camanche, Iowa, has been a strong leader for the Hawkeyes all season. And Tuesday night was no different.

The 6-foot-0 junior made 19 kills out of 49 attempts for an attack percentage of .208. She also had five blocks and seven digs.

Outside-hitter Jenny Rees was the overall hitting leader for Iowa with an attack percentage of .310, making 13 kills off 29 total attempts. The 5-foot-10 junior from Chicago, Ill., also notched 12 digs and two of the Hawkeyes' 11 service aces.

The Cyclones were led by Jill Sharp, who hit .346 with 11 kills, 14 digs and two blocks; and Tracy Graham, who tallied 18 digs.

As a team, Iowa State hit .240, while the Hawkeyes had a team attack percentage of .253.

"We hit well," Nelson said. "We did the things we practiced this week."

"We should have won 3-0," the

Barb Willis

coach continued. "But it's another win. We don't worry about how pretty it was."

According to Willis, a big help was just the fact that the match did not take a long time.

"It was pretty quick, only an hour and 43 minutes," Willis said. "We needed something like that, a little boost."

Hawks move up poll

The Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa women's field hockey team jumped two spots to fourth place on this week's NCAA coaches poll.

The Hawkeyes, 13-0-2, are the only undefeated team in Division I women's play. Top-ranked Old Dominion suffered its first loss at the hands of No. 2 North Carolina last weekend. Northwestern, previously ranked fifth, moved into the third position after defeating the Tar Heels 2-1 October 13.

Iowa beat No. 9 Massachusetts and No. 11 New Hampshire last weekend, 2-0 and 4-2 respectively. Iowa, 4-0-1 in Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference play, shares the league lead with Northwestern.

The two will square off in Iowa City Saturday, Oct. 28 at 1:00 p.m. in the Hawkeyes' regular season finale. The contest will not only declare a frontrunner for the MCFHC title, but also aid the winner in securing an NCAA regional bid and home berth at season's end.

The two teams played to a 2-2 double overtime deadlock earlier this season. The Hawkeyes take on No. 18 Northern Illinois this Saturday, Oct. 21 in Ann Arbor, Mich. Iowa plays at Michigan, Friday, Oct. 20.

Cubs' Dawson has knee surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson underwent knee surgery, but was expected to be ready to play for the Chicago Cubs when spring training begins in less than four months.

Dr. Michael Schaefer removed a cyst from lateral cartilage on Dawson's right knee at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said Cubs spokeswoman Sharon M. Pannozzo. Dawson was expected to be hospitalized for the next few days, and will be in a cast for four weeks before undergoing rehabilitation therapy, she said.

Benjamin goes Italian

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Benoit Benjamin spurned a contract offer with the Los Angeles Clippers and signed with Italian league champion Philips Milan.

The 7-foot center would not discuss terms of the contract, but sources in Italy said it was a one-year agreement for $1 million. Benjamin, a four-year veteran who averaged 16.4 points, 8.8 rebounds and 2.8 blocked shots last season, was seeking $1.7 million from the Clippers, who reportedly had countered with an offer of one year at $1.25 million.

Boxer dies of gunshot wound

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Todd Hickman, a former Olympic boxing hopeful who won 221 amateur fights, died of a gunshot wound to the head suffered last week, the Summit County coroner's office reported.

Hickman, 23, had been in intensive care at Akron General Medical Center after he was wounded Wednesday in what police said was a drug-related shooting.

Hickman, a 119-pounder, lost out in the 1984 Olympic trials in Fort Worth, Texas. He had 221 victories in 238 amateur bouts.

Joke turns to profit

GRAND ISLAND, N.Y. (AP) — A little joke on the Monday night football game turned into big business Tuesday for a company that specializes in belly dancers and "exotic apes."

The ABC telecast pitting the Los Angeles Rams and Buffalo Bills showed a classified ad placed last week in the Buffalo News that was designed to recharge the Bills' sluggish defense.

But the camera shot also took in an ad that appeared just above it in the paper. "BELLY & hula dancers, exotic apes, male dancers," the ad said, also including the phone number.

ABC announcers Frank Gifford and Dan Dierdorf joked about the belly dancers and emphasized they weren't advising people to call the number. That, of course, caught the attention of a nationwide audience looking for some thrills during what had been a dull game up to that point.

As of Tuesday, at least 75 people phoned the Showbiz Entertainment Service run by Nick and Marlene Sidoti out of their home in Grand Island, located just north of Buffalo.

Mark Dandridge, 26, of San Francisco, a Giants Security guard, was standing in the upper deck behind home plate looking at one of the light towers "and I saw it shake. And then I looked down to the luxury boxes and I saw all that starting to shake, and I said 'Oh God help us.'"

"I guess it lasted only 20 seconds, but it seemed like 20 minutes," said David Sanderford, a Long Beach, Calif., resident, who added he felt only one more powerful earthquake in a lifetime in California. "It happened just as the players ran on the field, and I thought people were stomping in the upper deck. But then as it got a little stronger, I knew it was a quake. People jumped up and gave each other some high fives. They thought it was an omen for a good game."

Gay Callan of San Andreas, who was dressed in the Giants' colors, black and orange, said as she was leaving, "If it's true that it was a 6.9 (on the Richter scale), you don't hang around for an aftershock."

Several aftershocks hit after the game was called. That hastened the evacuation of the stadium.

Carl and Bernie Epolite of San Jose decided to leave as soon as they felt the first aftershock, about 35 minutes after the earthquake. They were sitting in the upper deck under a concrete overhang.

"We saw the overhang starting to ripple," Carl said. "It rippled all around the stadium, but we kind of took it in stride, and people started cheering. Some people took it as a good sign for the Giants, that it was a sign from God that the Giants would start winning."

thinking about who the Wolverines will line up on the other side of the ball this week.

"The Michigan defense runs around a lot," Rodgers said. "They do a lot of different things out there. We might have to audible a lot this week as in previous weeks."

"I'm getting a hold of it pretty well, it's not as hard as it was the first three games."

Jon Filloon, projected to start for the Hawkeyes at a receiver slot at the onset of the year, practiced for the first time this week. Knee surgery kept him out until this point, and Fry said he has "an outside chance" to play Saturday.

Illinois, Minnesota and Michigan are all 2-0 in the Big Ten, with Iowa bunched among three others at 1-1, but Fry refused to say the Hawkeye had to win against the Wolverines Saturday.

"There's no such thing as a must-win in my vocabulary," he said.

Michigan leads the overall series 29-7-4 and 10-3-1 in Iowa City. The Wolverines' last win in Iowa City was a 29-7 blowout in 1982.

three strokes better than Monday's 81, while senior Kelley Brooke's 79 on the par-72 course was one shot lower than her first round score of 80. Both players are tied for 20th place in the individual standings, the highest position of all Iowa players.

Thomason said the scores that hurt the Hawkeyes were those of senior Shirley Trier, junior Kristi Heatherly and sophomore Becky Fuglestad, who shot 81, 86 and 86, respectively.

"That hurts us," Thomason said. "We need to be better than that today." Fuglestad echoed her coach's disappointment with the Hawkeyes' performance.

"We didn't play very well," she said. "We have a lot of potential, but we just have to believe in ourselves."

As Thomason discussed Iowa's strategy for today's third and final round, she worried that a poor finish in the Washington invitational, the Hawkeyes' last tournament this fall, would be all her players would remember about an otherwise successful

Former Red Wing sentenced

DETROIT (AP)—Former Detroit Red Wing Bob Probert was sentenced Tuesday to three months in prison and fined $2,000 for smuggling cocaine into the United States from his native Canada.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Duggan announced the sentence after testimony from top Red Wing officials, including Coach Jacques Demers and team president Mike Ilitch. At least eight of Probert's former teammates also were in the crowded courtroom.

Demers said he reluctantly visited Probert during substance abuse treatment a few months ago and the player admitted to having a problem. "I felt there was something in him that seemed sincere," Demers said, asking Duggan to forgo a prison term.

Probert, arrested March 2 by U.S. Customs officials in Detroit with 14.3 grams of cocaine in his underwear, will spend three years on probation after being released from prison, with the first three months of that to be spent in a community center selected by the court.

Before being sentenced, Probert asked Duggan not to send him to prison.

Bob Probert

"I felt I let a lot of people down with what I did a few months ago — the organization, my family and my fans," Probert said, pausing several times to gather his composure and fight tears.

"I don't want to be incarcerated," he said. "I want a chance to prove to you, myself and the people who have stayed behind me through this ordeal that I can be a positive role model for young kids and that I am committed to a life of sobriety."

Probert, 24, told Duggan he is "working on how to... live within the values and norms of society."

Probert, of Windsor, Ontario across the Detroit River from Detroit, pleaded guilty July 18 to one count of importation of cocaine, a felony carrying a maximum 20 years in prison and $1 million fine. In exchange for the plea, the U.S. attorney agreed to recommend a six- to 12-month sentence, $2,000 fine and a two- to three-year probation.

The former Red Wing has been at Holly Gardens substance-abuse clinic in Holly for about seven months.

Duggan said he was impressed with Probert's progress in treatment for alcoholism, but said he felt he had to impose prison time because the charge involved importation, not just possession, of cocaine.

He said Probert will be allowed to continue his treatment for alcoholism when he reports to serve his sentence on Nov. 7. Duggan added that Probert will have to pay $1,210 for each month he spends behind bars.

Reds look for boss to follow Rose

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds have about a dozen names on their list of possible managers for 1990, including Dallas Green, Hal Lanier, Doc Edwards and interim manager Tommy Helms, new Reds general manager Bob Quinn says.

Quinn hopes to have the new manager selected before baseball's winter meetings Dec. 1-7 in Nashville, Tenn., if not much sooner, he said in interviews published Tuesday in Cincinnati newspapers.

"We prefer it much sooner, but not at the risk of making a mistake," he said during interviews in San Francisco, where Quinn is attending the World Series to represent the Reds. "We would hope to have this thing wrapped up by the first week in November, if we can make it go."

"We need to put a field manager and his staff in place as soon as is prudent," he said. "We have a list of several candidates, and I underscore it could be as many as 10 or 12."

He told reporters that among those who will be considered are Helms, who took over after Pete Rose was banned from baseball Aug. 24 for alleged baseball gambling; Lanier, the former Houston Astros manager; Edwards, the former Cleveland Indians manager, and Green, the ex-New York Yankees manager.

Quinn declined to rank one candidate above another, or to reveal other names of those being considered.

Court refuses tennis judge case

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—New York's highest court on Tuesday refused to hear an appeal filed by the family of a tennis judge who died after he was struck by a ball hit by Sweden's Stefan Edberg in the 1983 U.S. Open junior final.

The decision by the state Court of Appeals essentially ends the case between Richard Wertheim, of Lexington, Mass., and the United States Tennis Association.

The seven-member court ruled without comment.

Wertheim, 60, died after he was hit in the groin with a ball, fell backwards and fractured his skull on the hard tennis surface. Wertheim was the center service linesman and was stationed behind the baseline of the court.

Wertheim's family sued the USTA for $2.2 million. A trial judge ordered the USTA to pay at least $156,000 in damages but the entire award was thrown out by the mid-level Appellate Division of state Supreme Court. The family then asked the Court of Appeals to hear the case.

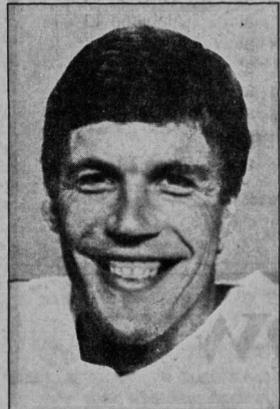

Jacob Fuchsberg, whose law firm represented the Wertheim family, said he wasn't surprised by the decision. He said the Court of Appeals has ruled in the past that professional athletes are at their own risk during sporting events.

"If a professional baseball player turns his ankle, he can't sue," Fuchsberg said.

But Fuchsberg said Wertheim's case was different because as a tennis linesman, he was ordered to stand rigidly and not move until the tennis ball was past him. He said the USTA was forcing Wertheim to take extra risk.

The lower courts had ruled that Wertheim had assumed all the risk from his job.

Steve Pelluer

Cowboys dish Pelluer to Chiefs

IRVING, Texas (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys traded holdout quarterback Steve Pelluer to the Kansas City Chiefs today for draft picks in the 1990 and 1991 seasons, and gave a late pick in 1990 to the Detroit Lions for running back Paul Palmer.

Pelluer, a five-year veteran who started for the Cowboys in 1988, had been on the trading block all year and at one time nixed a deal that would have sent him to the Atlanta Falcons.

After the abortive Atlanta trade, Pelluer changed agents from Joe Courage to Leigh Steinberg.

The Cowboys signed Pelluer today and then traded him to Kansas City to beat the 3 p.m. NFL trading deadline.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said the 1990 draft pick is solid and the 1991 selection depends on Pelluer's performance.

"Kansas City is where Steve wanted to play and it's a good thing for Steve, and the picks will help us in the next couple of years," Johnson said.

The Cowboys went after Palmer because Darrin Nelson, one of five players obtained from Minnesota in a trade for Herschel Walker, said he didn't want to play in Dallas.

Badger coach used loan to pay assistants

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Don Morton, whose Wisconsin Badgers have struggled through three straight losing seasons and budget troubles, confirmed Tuesday he took out a personal loan to pay part of his assistants' salaries.

Morton said he didn't violate NCAA rules when he took the 90-day personal note for $14,100 this summer to pay the part of his nine assistants' salaries which were cut from the department's budget.

"There was no violation," Morton said. "The rules say money can't come from an outside source. I'm not an outside source."

The Wisconsin State Journal published a story in its Tuesday editions citing Morton's payments. The newspaper had asked school officials if the payments were proper in light of Galen Hall's resignation last week as head coach at Florida.

It was revealed that Hall had supplemented the income of several of his coaches with money alleged to be from an outside source.

Morton's assistants said on Tuesday they were upset by any implication that Morton's actions violated any NCAA rules.

"We're just appalled by it," defensive coordinator Mike Daly said. "It's ridiculous. We feel sorry for Morton and we're sorry for our players that there's another distraction."

"We're lily white," he added. "We don't do anything wrong."

Dickerson says he might retire after 1990 season

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Eric Dickerson intends to fulfill his current contract with the Indianapolis Colts but says he may retire when it expires after the 1990 NFL season.

"Football is a sport that takes a lot out of you mentally and physically. The media take a lot out of you, the fans take a lot out of you," said Dickerson, slowed by a sore hamstring the past three weeks and coming off a frustrating 35-yard performance in Sunday's 14-3 loss at Denver.

"I've been thinking about it a while," Dickerson said Monday night on the Arsenio Hall television talk show. "After this season, I have one year left. I'll play that for sure. But even if they offered me a new contract, I don't think I'd sign it right now."

Dickerson, 29, has never missed a game because of an injury, although he did not start two weeks ago against Buffalo. He came into the game late in the first quarter and finished with 92 yards in the Colts' 37-14 victory over the Bills. He has carried the ball 115 times for 481 yards and three touchdowns so far this year, well below the six-game total of 630 yards he had at this time a year ago.

Mojo Nixon brings his zany fun to I.C.

Gabe's hosts this Father of Debbie Gibson's Love Chile

Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

Mojo Nixon is coming — are y'all ready? Well, probably not, but it's doubtful anything could completely prepare you.

Nixon, whose hilarious down-home lunacy is cut a twisted swath through TV and radio airwaves, will be swerving dangerously close to our area as he and his musical partner, Skid Roper, appear at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., Thursday night with Evan Johns and the H-Bombs.

Whatever happens at the show, Nixon will be doing what he loves best: "My highest priority is to have fun," he says. "It's kind of my job to go crazy onstage."

If by chance you're not familiar with Nixon's style, the titles of a few of his recent songs should give you an idea: "Louisiana Liplock," "Elvis Is Everywhere" and the infamous "Debbie Gibson Is Pregnant With My Two-Headed Love Chile." Nixon describes his approach to songwriting as a combination of mysticism and procrastination: "Usually I have one idea that is the unifying force field for the whole thing," he says, "and I always put off writing the chorus and bridge and stuff until the last possible moment, because it's too much like work."

While his records have generated plenty of laughs, Nixon doesn't characterize himself as simply a musical comedian. "There's a difference between having fun and being funny," he says. "You know, being funny can be construed as, like, Weird Al or something. ... I try to be very musical and humorous at the same time."

For a few months last year, Nixon appeared as a guest VJ on MTV (as anyone who's seen his hyperactive plugs surely remembers). The association, however, appears to have come to an inimicable halt due to the network's skittish refusal to air the "Debbie Gibson Is Pregnant ..." video (starring Winona Ryder as Gibson). "They should have told me from the beginning that they wouldn't play it," Nixon says. "The weird thing was, they kept running all these things about the making of the video, and then when it was done they started giving me all these reasons why they wouldn't play it. So finally I just told them to kiss my ass!"

In retrospect, though, Nixon sees his MTV work as profitable. "They were using me to appear hipper than they were," he says, "and I was using them to get across to all the people who didn't know who I was."

Has Nixon gotten any feedback from Debbie herself on the song? "I heard that she was indirectly flattered, because I assumed she was such a nice girl," he says. Nixon feels that Gibson — whose videos he likens to "Doris Day trying to be sexy" — was the perfect target for his lyrical jibes.

While he says that he wasn't "a child prodigy," Nixon was introduced to a wide range of music at an early age as a result of his father, who ran a soul music radio station. His latest album, "Root Hog Or Die," was recorded in Memphis, the home of many of Nixon's musical influences. "Elvis went to Memphis," he says, "Howlin' Wolf, Otis Redding went to Memphis ... I figured, 'Hell, I might as well go too.'" He says that he wanted to "make a more musical record, but also to maintain that psychotic edge, and I think we did that."

"My highest priority is to have fun — it's kind of my job to go crazy onstage ... the Mojo thing is a very delicate balance."

Nixon has a burgeoning acting career as well. Last summer he played Jerry Lee Lewis' drummer in the movie "Great Balls of Fire," and currently plans to start work on a film of his own (tentatively titled "Citizen Mojo") early next year. Nixon would like to write the screenplay himself, so as to infuse the entire project with his personality: "The Mojo thing is a very delicate balance," he says.

As one might imagine, Nixon's opinion of today's popular music is less than rhapsodic. "Music is the same everywhere now," he says.

"You don't have local hits anymore. It's like McDonald's. ... There used to be little hamburger stands all over the country, and some had more onions, some had less — but now it's all McDonald's. Same with music — these sound-alike, look-alike Fabian rockers. ... Most of them ought to just go home!" And Nixon feels he's doing his part to alleviate the scourge: "I've been put here on the planet," he says, "to fight this." Amen and hallelujah.

Week Four:
Something Unusual and Biblical

The Reverend Ewing Miracle Watch

Gregory Galloway
The Daily Iowan

Rev. Ewing and I are going to share. He wants me to do something for him, and then he's going to do something for me. Only Rev. Ewing won't tell me exactly what he is going to do; the man who once offered me the afterlife by mail is now tempting me with "Holy Surprise Blessings."

The instructions for this spiritual swapmeet are more complicated than previous offers, however. I have to sleep with a "special green anointed Bible prayer cloth" for two days, return it to Rev. Ewing with the omnipresent Andy Jackson bill, then the Rev. sleeps with the cloth for two nights after which he will "do something very unusual and Biblical" for me. Is it just me, or does the whole transaction sound a little exotic, ecclesiastically speaking? The Rev. might be lonelier than I thought.

Rev. Ewing also shared a little of his private life with me, enclosing a picture of his mom (a stern, Ma Barker-like woman) and related a story about his family. Pa Ewing was a drunkard, and his son (the Rev.) decided to send "Mama" the magical prayer cloth. Pa Ewing was drinking his usual fill — and judging from Mrs. Ewing's photo, I don't blame him for spending so much time in taverns — when Pa "heard a strange voice call his name. As he looked looked (sic) up, there in the ceiling of that beer joint he saw Jesus." Needless to say, the old man swore off liquor and has been a devout supporter of his son's fine work ever since.

It was a heartfelt fable, sure, but this personal sharing could get out of hand. What if the Rev. wanted me to meet his folks? I mean, first the Rev. and I share a tiny piece of fabric and a personal story, and the next thing you know he's got a picture of me under his pillow.

Chase Twichell

Russell Banks

Team to read new works Husband, wife cover common themes

Tom Barbash
The Daily Iowan

The wife/husband team of poet Chase Twichell and fiction writer Russell Banks will read tonight from their new works, in what Twichell calls "our first joint gig."

The writers, married earlier this year, will read at 8 p.m. in the Illinois Room of the Union. The event is sponsored by the Iowa Writers' Workshop and Prairie Lights Books.

"We've gone to readings together, and we've read on separate nights," she said. "But this is a first for us. Two for the price of two."

Twichell and Banks, who live and teach writing in Princeton, N.J., have both recently finished books that concentrate — perhaps obsess — on societal themes. Bank's novel, "Affliction," published recently by Harper and Row Publishers Inc., focuses on a recurring core of his work: the generational cycle of male violence.

Twichell, who attended the Iowa Writers' Workshop from 1974 through 1976, will read from her just-finished collection, "Perdido." The book, which hasn't been sent to publishers yet, is about sex and death, Twichell said.

"It's a departure for me. It's the first time I've had a dominating obsession in a book," she said during a telephone interview Tuesday.

Twichell's previous books, "Northern Spy" and "The Odds," have been marked by their formality of style and vivid imagination.

"Her writing is incredibly brilliant and vigorous," said poet and workshop teacher Jorie Graham. "It's extremely formal, but that shouldn't be mistaken for a lack of passion."

Banks' latest book, and his other six novels and four short story collections, are also not lacking in passion. He's been published in several best story collections and was nominated in 1986 for a Pulitzer Prize.

"Affliction" tells the dark, angry story of Wade Whitehouse, a part-time policeman in a depressing New England town who is beginning a fast trip to self-destruction. It begins

Readings

"This is the story of my older brother's strange criminal behavior and his disappearance," and it creates a disturbing mindset that makes Wade's actions seem horrifying, yet unavoidable.

"You will say that I should have known terrible things were about to happen, and perhaps I should have. But even so, what could I have done to stop them?" says Banks' narrator, Rolfé later in the book.

Much of the book, Banks said, stems from his own New Hampshire childhood. Banks was born in Massachusetts in 1940 and was raised by his father, who Banks says was an alcoholic and prone to periods of violence.

Writing, telling stories, is a form of redemption for Banks and his characters, he says.

Now it is something to share with his wife, Twichell, who said she loved "Affliction," acknowledged the themes of their latest works had some similarities. "They are dominating themes, but they're dominating themes in the world too," she said.

Quintet performs Bach, Scheidt tonight

The Daily Iowan

The UI Brass Quintet will perform a concert of music from the 16th through the 20th centuries at 8 p.m. Friday, October 20, in Clapp Recital Hall.

Playing in the quintet are: David Greenhoe and Barbara Deur, trumpets; Kristin Thelander, horn; John Hill, trombone; and Robert Yeats, tuba. All are faculty members at the UI School of Music except Deur, who is a graduate of the school. For one number, they will be joined by trombonist George Krem, who is also on the UI music faculty.

The program includes quintets and quintet arrangements of music by J.S. Bach, Samuel Scheidt, Edward Gregson, Morley Calvert and Thomas Frederickson. "It's a fun program covering a broad spectrum of music, and it is all very accessible," Yeats said.

Krem joins the five members of the quintet for the final work on the program, the Sextet in E-flat minor by Oskar Bohme. This work features instruments not usually found in a brass quintet, including a cornet, a bass trumpet and a euphonium. "The idea is to get a more mellow kind of 19th-century sound, rather than the usual bright sound of brass quintets," Yeats said.

The concert is free and open to the public.
