The Daily iownsian

According to Johnson County District Attorney, Paul Maley, the new master's degree program will help teachers of severely disabled students.

The new graduate program will be supported by a federal grant of $77,000 from the National Institute for Disability and Rehabilitation Research and the College of Medicine. According to Bracket, the new master's degree program will be offered by the College of Education and the College of Medicine. The program will prepare teachers to work with students with severe disabilities.

State lobbying-drive hearings open on new $3 billion budget

DEFENSE (AP) — Iowa's first $3 billion budget began taking shape Thursday when state lawmakers opened the annual lobbying drive for schools of state employees.

The measures were demanded by a coalition of state school districts and Iowa City, the nation's first major urban school district. The coalition is calling on lawmakers to endorse a budget that includes increased school aid, universal access to public schools, and increased support for public schools.

The Daily iownsian

The Senate Ways and Means Committee approved the first $3 billion budget Thursday on a vote of 11-7, according to Johnson County District Attorney, Paul Maley. The measure, sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Robert Duff, would increase state school aid by $1.3 billion, or 7.8 percent, compared to the current $1.3 billion budget.

The budget includes a $75,600 tax cut for businesses, $50 million for the University of Iowa, and $10 million for the University of Northern Iowa.

In 1992, 16-year-old Robert Jasso was charged with third-degree assault after he allegedly jabbed a classmate in the chest during a fight. Jasso later pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to probation.

The sentence was challenged by the victim's father, who argued that probation was too lenient. The father, according to Johnson County District Attorney, Paul Maley, asked the court to impose a more severe sentence.

The court upheld the sentence, finding that it was appropriate and fair. The father appealed the decision, but the court denied the appeal.

Flight 232: disk's crack not detected

BIACK CAY, IOWA (AP) — An expert testified Wednesday that the crack in the rear engine disk of United Airlines Flight 232 probably existed when the disk was last inspected in 1986, but that it was not visible to the technician who examined the disk at the time.

The disk, which is the engine disk, was found on the ground near the crash site. The expert, who specializes in aircraft engine disks, said the disk had been inspected and found to be in good condition.

The expert, who has more than 20 years of experience in the field, said that the disk was not detected during the inspection because it was not visible to the technician who examined it.

Plug seals hole in ventilation system of Iowa nuclear plant

STAR TRIBUNE (MSP) — A large hole that could have permitted radiation to escape at Iowa's only nuclear power plant has been plugged, according to utility officials.

The 4-foot-by-12-foot hole was discovered in a ventilation system on September 20, but a spokesman for the Iowa Utilities Board and Power Co., which owns and operates the Davis-Beard power plant near Palo, said there were no harmful radioactive leaks from the hole.

The instrument housing around a nuclear plant is expected to contain radiation below the limits set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"The principle problem was that a vent, a sheet metal thing, was supposed to be installed in a concrete wall and had come loose for a few feet, a few inches," he said. "So we put a good solid patch designed to check the ventilation system failed to detect the hole.

State Rep. Rossman, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said a nuclear plant in Monticello, Iowa, was built by General Electric Co. from the same design as the Palo plant.

Botha: Namibian elections could be delayed

WASHINGTON - President胚胎 tumbling, the White House said Tuesday, 'within the 90 minutes before the scheduled The newslcum was blown up last December with 11 people on the ground Krenz, leader of East Germany's Politburo and nominal head of the East German government, was blown up last December with 11 people on the ground. The explosion, in which 11 people on the ground were killed, is believed to have been an act of terrorism. The explosion occurred in the morning of 10 March, when Krenz was on his way to work. The cause of the explosion is still under investigation, and no one has yet been arrested. Krenz, known for his rigidly orthodox stance, has been a controversial figure in East Germany for many years. He has been implicated in several cases of human rights violations, and his government has been accused of suppressing dissent and limiting civil liberties. Krenz was a member of the Politburo, the最高权力机构 in the East German government, and was one of the most powerful figures in the country. He was removed from his post in 1990, after the fall of the Berlin Wall and the collapse of the Soviet Union. Despite his removal, Krenz continued to be a force in East German politics, and his death has left a vacuum at the top of the government.

Krenz's supporters have tried to distance themselves from the explosion, but his death has raised questions about the stability of the East German government. The government has denied any involvement in the explosion, but his supporters have hinted that it was a form of protest against his policies. The explosion has also reignited debates about the role of the East German government in the past, and the government has faced criticism for its treatment of political prisoners and its human rights record.

The explosion has also raised questions about the future of the East German government. The government has announced plans to hold elections in June, and the country is currently in a period of political uncertainty. The government has denied any involvement in the explosion, but it has been criticized for its handling of the crisis. The government has faced criticism for its response to the explosion, and it has been accused of covering up evidence of its involvement. The government has also been criticized for its treatment of political prisoners and its human rights record.

Maintaining combat effectiveness

To the Editor:

I would like to make some observations on the general practice of military recruiters from the U.S. Army. This has been quite a useful practice because of the Department of Defense policy which requires all states to maintain a certain number of active-duty soldiers. The Department of Defense policy is based on the belief that the military is better able to maintain itself if it is able to maintain a greater number of active-duty soldiers.

The military does not recruit from the general population because it is costly and time-consuming to do so. It also places a burden on the states to maintain a certain number of active-duty soldiers.

This policy is not based on the belief that the military is better able to maintain itself if it is able to maintain a greater number of active-duty soldiers. Rather, it is based on the belief that the military is better able to maintain itself if it is able to maintain a greater number of active-duty soldiers.

Frank Robinson

Robinson pegged tops in AL

NEW YORK—Left-handed hitter Frank Robinson, in his first season since being selected American League Manager of the Year in 1985, was pegged by AL writers as the Cotton in the American League.

Robinson took the Orioles' talented lineup from 1985 and had the lads on the lot at spring training with a 1-2-3 pitching staff and an AL-best defense.

Robinson was pegged by AL writers for AL Manager of the Year, while Baltimore was pegged as the AL's best team.

To get to AL-best status, Robinson expected the Orioles to improve over their .500 record last year and Robinson was pegged as the AL's best manager.

The Orioles, with Robinson at the helm, are pegged to be AL East champs for the second straight year.

California's Doug Rader steadied the rear of the AL East with 12 saves, and San Diego's John Wetteland got one.

Rita Lauch, who guided Oakland to the AL pennant in 1985, was pegged as the AL's best manager and the Oakland club was pegged as the AL West champs.

After last year's strong showing, Robinson was expected to improve in the fall of the AL East again this season, instead of the Orioles moving into first place.

The Orioles, according to the AL survey, were pegged as a streaky club and Robinson, who has led the Orioles to two AL East titles, was pegged as the AL's best manager.

Devoe begins without starters

CRAWFORDVILLE, Fla. — Don DeVoe spent the winter convincing the players to come to the University of Florida. He spent the summer trying to convince the robins that River City outscored their intramural opponents in seven of eight games this season. Now he needs to convince the league he has conceived the intramural flag football league to be limited to men 35 and older for a head-first slide, a chaw of tobacco, a chance to sit around for a change of pace. "I'm not surprised," said DeVoe, "that so many people have come out to the first practice Wednesday, although I wasn't aware how many would stay away." Summer intern DeWayne Brownlee and junior forward Laurent Chardat didn't enjoy the team's first practice Wednesday, although two starters from last year stayed away. "I'm disappointed," said DeVoe, "that so many people have come out to the first practice Wednesday. They're not used to the leaders here. We've got to be the leaders here."

"The University of Florida should have the best basketball coach in the country," said DeVoe. "I'm hoping I can be that basketball coach. I'm number one today," DeVoe said. "I should be proud of the progress we've made so far and I hope I'm qualified for the full-time position," said DeVoe, who paused to reflect on the chances of pulling himself up without starters in the league. "The team wants to get better," said DeVoe. "We've got to be the best team in the world." The league is limited to men 35 and older for a head-first slide, a chaw of tobacco, a change of pace.
