Recent graduates of the University of Iowa self-defense program for women will be on hand to instruct the audience. The course covers three main areas: the first area teaches basic self-defense techniques and the second area teaches brush moves and the third area teaches the attack techniques.

The workshop is sponsored by the Iowa Women's Network and is supported by the United Way.

"This self-defense workshop is designed to be effective regardless of the size of the aggressor."

The workshop involves participants learning to use their own body, "he said. "We teach women how to be effective by using their own bodies.""The techniques are really simple, easy to do. The movement is simple, the technique is really effective," he said.

Engler designed the program specifically for women, with lots of new self-defense techniques. "The techniques work for women and men, and techniques you've never heard of before."

"Nothing should take place if you're not in your own body," he said. "Nothing should take place if you're not in your own body."

City Council Candidates

Candidates share views

2 at-large seats open on council

Joe Bolcomb

Bolcomb is running on the Iowa Party slate and has served on the Iowa City Council for eight years. He is president of Bolcomb Optical and attended Los Angeles College. "If you don't think we need another mayoral candidate," he said, "then you must be living in the past."

Bolcomb's past would demonstrate a willingness to work hard and work cooperatively with people. He also has long term experience in politics and government issues in Iowa City. "I'm willing to reach out to those who are already interested about issues that affect them," he said. "I will be the most committed and willing to fix these issues for Iowa City."

John McDonald

McDonald is a former Iowa City mayor and has served on the Iowa City Council for eight years. He is president of McDonald's Optical and attended Los Angeles College. "I'd like to see you think this," he said. "We need another mayoral candidate."

McDonald believes Iowa City has a lot of questions raised about the way it operates. "There are several new recommendations coming down from both the state and federal level that translates into a lot of work for the council."

John Novick

Novick is running on the Iowa Party slate and has served on the Iowa City Council for eight years. He is president of McDonald's Optical and attended Los Angeles College. "I'd like to see you think this," he said. "We need another mayoral candidate."

Novick believes Iowa City has a lot of questions raised about the way it operates. "There are several new recommendations coming down from both the state and federal level that translates into a lot of work for the council."

Nazeer Novick

Novick is running on the Iowa Party slate and has served on the Iowa City Council for eight years. He is president of McDonald's Optical and attended Los Angeles College. "I'd like to see you think this," he said. "We need another mayoral candidate."

Novick believes Iowa City has a lot of questions raised about the way it operates. "There are several new recommendations coming down from both the state and federal level that translates into a lot of work for the council."

Petroleum to remain major energy source

Energy projections over the past two decades have been astonishingly far off the mark, proving that the energy economy is too volatile to follow a predictable path. Even so, the consensus view is that oil prices, now $16 to $18 a barrel, will hold fairly steady in the early 1990s, and then move moderately higher.

The trend in oil prices over the past two decades appears to have been determined largely by political events and reactions almost no forecaster.

The Future of AIDS

Up to 1.5 million Americans may be infected by 1995, compared to the current figure of 300,000 infected in the United States, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

Cases to increase among urban poor

The seeds of the epidemic's next decade already have been sown. An estimated 1 million to 1.5 million Americans are now infected, and if the past pattern holds, many more will be infected by 1995. Just a few weeks ago, a prominent medical forecaster predicted that AIDS will become a predictable path. Letters that are perfect time

To the Editor:

The Asheville (N.C) Citizen-Times is pleased to announce the appointment of a new letter writer, James Cahoy. Cahoy, a longtime resident of Asheville and a former letter writer for the Citizen-Times, has been writing letters to the editor for many years. He is known for his insightful and witty commentary on local and national issues.

Cahoy's first letter, published today, discusses the recent controversy over the proposed expansion of the airport in Asheville.

Blizzard

The city of Asheville has been hit by a blizzard, with heavy snowfall and strong winds causing power outages and disrupt- ing transportation. The airport has been closed, and residents are advised to stay indoors if possible. However, some are already heading out to enjoy the snow, with many taking advantage of the opportunity to go sledding or cross-country skiing.

Whistleblower

To the Editor:

I am writing to urge you to consider the recent whistleblower case involving the government and a major corporation. The whistleblower, an employee of the company, revealed that the company had been engaging in illegal activity, and is now facing criminal charges.

The company has been打着r an underground operation for years, and the whistleblower's action is the latest in a series of disclosures of corporate malfeasance. The company's response has been one of denials and attempts to cover up the truth.

I am writing to correct an error in the recent article about the history of the city of Asheville. The article states that the city was founded in 1785, but this is not correct. The city was actually founded in 1786.

I urge you to correct this error in future articles to ensure accuracy and integrity in your coverage of local history.

Prosecution likely over ANC rally

Pretoria, South Africa - Security forces apparently were hesitant at a rally targeting foreign leaders of the African National Congress, but promises seemed real, President F.W. de Klerk said Saturday.

De Klerk said the ANC's resolution to commit violence and terrorism was a "sufficient" reason to cancel the rally.

"It will be unpredictable," he said. "It will be a dangerous rally... The main issue is to prevent violence... I believe it would be a murder." He added that it would be "too risky" for the president to attend.

Warning: Big-time producer inside

It's Friday again, the day when our fabulous producers work up all their courage, lay their life, and make it in print and get their salaries. More mundane troubles at the very end.

Perhaps the most important item on this week's agenda is the Weekly Weather Report. As with all our reports, the information has come directly from the Mississauga Weather Station. According to the report, our area is experiencing a high pressure system from the north.

Retirement party starts after lengthy farewell

NEW YORK (AP) - After 23 1/2 years on the job with six years of U.W. coaching, Bob Howsam brought to the Cubs an instant flair and style that helped to lead off to the Goldschmidt series when he was considering his retirement last March. 31. He has been in New York this week and will return home in March. Howsam will return to New York until after Thanksgiving. Although he will officially turn over the job to Paul Fregene at the end of the season, Howsam in his farewell to the office staff said: "It's a quick turnover from Bobst in Chicago to Howsam in New York, but Thursday, February 20."

I heard there was a new film in theaters and I was curious, so I went to see it. It was called "The Sixth Sense." The movie was about a boy who could see ghosts. I was wondering if the ghosts were real or just his imagination.

Bruce Willis is a great actor, and I thought he did a good job in this movie. He was able to convey the character's inner turmoil and his struggle with the supernatural events. The film was well directed and had a good script.

Overall, I enjoyed "The Sixth Sense." It was a thought-provoking movie that kept me engaged throughout. I would recommend it to anyone who enjoys a good mystery and wants to think about the nature of reality.

A new film called "The Sixth Sense" has been released. It stars Bruce Willis and is directed by M. Night Shyamalan. The movie is about a boy who can see ghosts and his efforts to uncover the truth about his paranormal experiences.

Bruce Willis is a great actor, and I think he did an excellent job in this movie. The production values were high, and the special effects were convincing. The story was well-crafted, and the characters were well-developed.

Overall, I enjoyed "The Sixth Sense." It was a thought-provoking movie that kept me engaged throughout. I would recommend it to anyone who enjoys a good mystery and wants to think about the nature of reality.

Bernstein steps down from Random House

NEW YORK--The man who built the Random House publishing empire will be stepping down unexpectedly after 20 years as chairman.

Robert Bernstein joined Random House in 1965 at age 32 as the firm's president. He succeeded Donald Kramer as publisher in 1966. In 1969 he was named chairman, a position he held three years ago. In a statement Monday, Bernstein said he was stepping down "due to health reasons." He did not rule out continuing in an advisory role.

Bernstein made Random House a publishing force to be reckoned with. "One of the first recognizable names to come off Random House is Bob," said J. Newhouse, who heads the Newhouse publishing empire. "He's a very fine man."

Bernstein is the founder and chairman of the International Human Rights Watch.

At Random House, Bernstein won a reputation as a stickler for quality and for fighting the good fight for authors. He helped build Random House into one of the nation's largest and most respected publishers, and he was known as the Random Century.

Bernstein played a major role in the success of books like "The Language of God," by biologist Richard Dawkins. After the book was published in 1986, Bernstein was appointed to the Federal Communications Commission.

Bernstein's plans to continue his work in human rights movements remain unclear. He said he would continue to be involved in the human rights movement, but he did not specify what form this might take.

Bernstein was a forceful presence in the publishing world, with a reputation for being outspoken and unafraid to take on powerful figures. He was known for his commitment to publishing books that challenged the status quo and for his dedication to human rights.

In 2001, Bernstein was awarded the National Medal of Arts by President George W. Bush. He was also a recipient of the National Book Award for Lifetime Achievement in 2000.

In addition to his work at Random House, Bernstein was a staunch advocate for freedom of speech and expression. He was a member of the board of directors of the Committee to Protect Journalists and served as a member of the board of the International Human Rights Watch.

Bernstein's legacy at Random House is one of innovation and commitment to quality. His presence will be missed by the publishing world, and his contributions will continue to inspire for years to come.

Sports Editor Bryce Miller continues his series on the first 100 years of Iowa football.

Things haven't always been rosy for the Hawkeyes. This installment chronicles 20 non-winning seasons prior to the 1990s.

One of the biggest impact players on the 1989 Iowa football team is defensive lineman Jim Johnson. The Forest City, Iowa, native is Iowa's 3rd leading tackler & is coming off the best game of his career against Northwestern.

In a game that usually calls for loads of aggression and plenty of attitude, George Hawthorne is surprisingly docile anchor to the Iowa offensive line. And he doesn't mind the lack of recognition.

Ed Gochenour is waiting for his chance behind Iowa's linebacking stars Brad Guess and Melvin Foster. The theory of making the most of your chances is one that Gochenour has chosen to prescribe to Md he's seeing.

In the fall of 1954, in a game that would soon become known as the "game of the century," Michigan's Wilber Fry had the Hawkeyes on the ropes. They were struggling through their second season under new coach Frank Nagel, then the youngest ever to lead a Big Ten team. Nagel had signed a contract with the university at age 36, promising to turn things around. Despite a 2-8 season in 1958, he was given another chance to lead the team in 1959.

In 1960, the Hawkeyes were looking to improve on their previous season's performance. They ended the year with a 4-7 record, including a loss to Ohio State that put an end to their hopes of a bowl appearance. However, the 1961 season brought new hopes for the program and included a win over the rival Buckeyes, a crucial victory for the young coach.

Despite the promising start to the 1962 season, Nagel's time at Iowa had come to an end. In October, he was fired after the Hawkeyes lost to Minnesota. The Hawkeyes finished the season with a 1-9 record, including losses to Top 20 teams like Purdue and Illinois. The departure of nine-year coach Forest Evashevski at the conclusion of the 1960 season left Iowa fans with a sense of déjà vu, as they had not experienced such frustration in years.

The Hawkeyes' defense, led by John Hanzekovich, performed well, but the offense struggled to find consistency throughout the season. Despite the team's struggles, there were bright spots, such as the win over Ohio State and the strong performance by quarterback Dave Key, who had a career-high 270 passing yards in the game.

After the 1962 season, the Hawkeyes were once again in a state of flux. The team finished at the bottom of the Big Ten, with a record of 1-9-1. The faithful fans of the Hawkeyes were left to wonder how much longer the program would be able to compete at the highest level of college football.
Illini Profile: Jeff George

Transfer affects quarterback off field

Scott Gregory
Special to The Daily Iowan

Illini's Jeff George isn't as welcome in West Lafayette, but, as he said to be.

In 1986, George was considered to be a burner at quarterback for Purdue. But when Lonie Burton resigned as Boilermakers' coach, and was replaced by Fred Akers, the freshman decided it was time to transfer.

"You choose a college mainly because of a coach," George said.

George chose to come to Illinois after the 1986 season. In order to join the Illini, George had to sit out the following year and, under Big Ten rules, give up his scholarship.

George made his only return to Purdue's Ross-Ade Stadium in a player Oct. 14 when the Illini beat the Boilermakers 42-14. The Illini quarterback, playing with a sprained left knee, completed 24 of 42 passes for 254 yards.

"It's kind of my second home field," said George, who is nicknamed "The Sheriff" because of his confidence and shotgun-like arm.

"I still have a few friends there... not many... but a few," he said.

Although George said the Purdue players and coaches don't hold any bitter feelings toward him, some of the fans and press do.

The year George sat out, he made the trip to West Lafayette for the Illinois-Purdue game. The rookie arrived in town with his parents. George was greeted by the locals.

"We parked in a fraternity, and when we got out, the whole fraternity mooned us," the Illini quarterback said. "I don't know how they knew I was there."

"It's something you can expect, but maybe not that drastic."

Marathons in West Lafayette found a way to market the jerseys bearing No. 12, George's number at Purdue.

"They had the jersey number 12 with a Ghostbusters slash through it," George said. "You'd have to sell them someday. You don't want to be stuck with all those number 12s."

The Indianapolis native, who now wears No. 11 for Illinois, also showed up for last year's Illini basketball game against the Boilermakers in West Lafayette. He wore his Illinois letter jacket, much to the chagrin of many Purdue faithful.

"I'm proud of that (jacket). I don't really care," George said. "I'm going to let them think what they want to think."

"George said he didn't mind being verbally abused once again this year."

"That just makes me play better," George said. "You hear all the boos, and that just gets you pumped up."

Johnston pops in at Hawkeye defense

Kerry Anderson

As the 1989 football season reaches the two-thirds point, one must wonder about the Joe Vaught defense. For much of the season, Iowa has been giving up an average of 412 yards per game. The Hawkeyes are allowing a total of 97 points through the first seven games of the season. Iowa's defense may be the only area of the team that is not performing to coaches' expectations.

Tim O'Brien, Johnson recorded three tackles in the Hawkeye defense, 32-27 win over the Wildcats.

Johnson is currently leading the conference in tackles with 72 total tackles and 10 stops. He is also the third-leading tackler for the Hawkeyes.

"I knew I was being considered for the position. The coach had spoken to me about the possibility of starting at linebacker. I was a little bit surprised, but I knew I had the ability to do it," Johnson said.

Johnson is a third-year starter for the Hawkeyes. He has started 10 games and has made 42 tackles so far this season. He is currently the team's leading tackler and is one of the Hawkeyes' top defensive players.

"Johnson has been a major factor in our success," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He's been a key to our defense all season long."

Johnson is a senior and is one of the team's captains. He is also the leader of the Hawkeyes defense.

"He's a great leader for us," Fry said. "He's a great player and a great influence on the team."

Johnson is a native of Minnesota and is a major reason why the Hawkeyes are in the running for the Big Ten championship. The Hawkeyes are currently ranked third in the Big Ten and are 6-1 overall.

Hawkeye Profile: Ed Gochenour

Chance for limelight may be approaching for unheralded Hawkeye linebacker

"Here at Iowa, you're part of a great tradition. It's just being part of things that's really exciting. If you're part of the Hawkeyes, you're part of the team, and you're just as important as everybody else."

--Ed Gochenour

Ed Gochenour is just waiting for a chance to show what he can do. "If I ever got my chance, I'd do what I could make," Gochenour said. "Like this week, the game's on ABC-TV. If Melvin Foster or Brad Quast happens to go down, I might be in there. I just have to make the most of it. I just have to wait for my chance." I can't sit there and worry about anything. I just have to wait for my chance and when it comes, I just have to take advantage of it."

Gochenour (projected 220-lb. senior) may not be a name familiar to many people. A transfer from Minnesota College in St. Cloud, Minn., in 1987, the 6-2, 220-lb. end and four-year varsity letterman has been a consistent and first-string tackle.

But before he transfers to St. Cloud, he said he'd like to do the job of being the right tackle. And Coach Hayden Fry said he believes in him. "Ed Gochenour and John Dobry are our first substitutions for the linebackers," Fry said. "If Melvin Foster or Brad Quast goes down, then either Dobry or Gochenour will go in and play."

"And Ed is a tremendous tackle. Last week against Northwestern, he had three, first-quarter tackles that were just outstanding." Gochenour transferred to Iowa after playing Division II football at Minnesota for two years.

Deciding to transfer was a big decision for Gochenour, but he's glad he made the move to Big Ten football. "It's kind of a new experience all around," he said. "Ed is a quality player, according to someone who's seen him in extensive action.

"You're a good back," Iowa graduate assistant Jim Lavioli, who was the head coach at Minnesota when Gochenour played there, said. "He's moved his way up seven years. He wouldn't be here if he wasn't."

Lavioli also said the white he would have to be good. Gochenour played at Minnesota for the full four years, but it just was not a place that had the Hawkeyes wanted to transfer.

"I don't feel bad," Lavioli said. "I played Division I at the University of Missouri, so I'm not one to be on top of his top teams."

"Even if you go to a smaller school, you can tailor your game to the college you like," Gochenour said. "I could have played and made all-conference. ... And played every Saturday instead of sitting behind Brian Saini and Melvin Foster and such like this."

Ed Gochenour is a name that may be approaching the limelight for the Iowa football team. The senior defensive end is one of the most versatile players in the Big Ten. And his role in the team, and you're just as important as everybody else.

Since becoming a Hawkeye, Gochenour has not seen a lot of playing time. According to him, this is often frustrating, but he respects the playing abilities of Foster and Quast.

"That really comes in play on Sunday when we're watching film of a Saturday game," he said. "I'm just excited to see what they can do."

"I could have done better than that," Gochenour said. "It's a good opportunity, and I have no quibbles about sitting behind them. But as long as they are successful, I don't have any complaints.

"As long as they get up some sort of interest in the whole secondary every once in a while saying that I could have done that, that's fine. That's the way I like it. They won't have any complaints about it."

"If you've given up some inattention on the playing field, but I've got a team used to the rest of the field and stuff like this. I don't think any football player wants to sit in the bench, but I try to use it only and make myself feel as good as I can."

"I don't have any regrets or anything like that."

"Playing at a Division school was always an ambition of Gochenour's, but right after high school, having his eligibility for more was more important than which school he attended."

"I didn't think about playing for anybody really," he said. "When I came out of school, I just went to where I was offered the most money. To me it didn't matter what school an athlete was just I was able to play football and get an education at the same time."

"Something I've said to Traylor."

"Gochenour also said the fact you (he) wasn't physically ready to play football in the first division.

"Coming out of high school, I wasn't big enough or strong enough and stuff."

"I didn't have any complaints," Gochenour said. "... So I went to Minnesota College, because they gave me a chance to do what I wanted to do."

"I played four years of football there, and played on one of the top teams in high school."

"Playing against high school's like this, I was thinking what kind of football you need to see now."

"I could play and made all-conference. ... And played every Saturday instead of sitting behind Brian Saini and Melvin Foster and such like this."

"Here at Iowa, you're part of a great tradition. It's just being part of things that's really exciting. If you're part of the Hawkeyes, you're part of the team, and you're just as important as everybody else."

Ed Gochenour is just waiting for a chance to show what he can do. "If I ever got my chance, I'd do what I could make," Gochenour said. "Like this week, the game's on ABC-TV. If Melvin Foster or Brad Quast happens to go down, I might be in there. I just have to make the most of it. I just have to wait for my chance." I can't sit there and worry about anything. I just have to wait for my chance and when it comes, I just have to take advantage of it."

Gochenour (projected 220-lb. senior) may not be a name familiar to many people. A transfer from Minnesota College in St. Cloud, Minn., in 1987, the 6-2, 220-lb. end and four-year varsity letterman has been a consistent and first-string tackle.

But before he transfers to St. Cloud, he said he'd like to do the job of being the right tackle. And Coach Hayden Fry said he believes in him. "Ed Gochenour and John Dobry are our first substitutions for the linebackers," Fry said. "If Melvin Foster or Brad Quast goes down, then either Dobry or Gochenour will go in and play."

"George has really improved his run-blocking and pass-blocking," Fry said. "He's always given great effort but his technique wasn't always the best. Now he's one of the better offensive linemen in the Big Ten." Hearing that, Hawthorne's modesty took over again, as he began to sell himself short again, "There's great offensive linemen in the Big Ten like Anderson, and I don't know if I would be ready to rate myself up there," he said.

"Some people have been staring for three or four years and I have yet to do anything to prove myself
