Victim assistance programs receive grants

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Three Iowa City victim-assistance programs received more than $70,000 Wednesday to provide counseling and shelter for crime victims in this area. The $71,223 grant is the second highest amount awarded to a community in Iowa. The grants, derived primarily from fines and penalties paid by federal criminals, provide $850,000 to 32 programs in 24 Iowa counties. One-eighth of the funding, $100,467, went to three victim assistance programs in Des Moines. But three Iowa City programs — the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, United Action for Youth and the Domestic Violence Project — garnered a total of $71,223 to provide direct assistance to crime victims in this area. Jim Swaim, executive director of UAY, said the Iowa City programs may have received more funding than programs in other areas because the Iowa City programs are better. "Although we didn't lead the state in child abuse cases, we do a very good job dealing with victims," he said. Swaim attributed their success to two things: strong support from local organizations and a lot of collaboration between the programs. "We have received a tremendous amount of support from the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, area city councils and the Johnson County United Way," he said. "Other communities may have less community support and collaboration among them, which may be an inhibitive factor in their ability to get more grants," he added. Last year, UAY counseled 141 victims of child abuse, Swaim said. In addition, the program counseled 83 secondary or indirect victims of child abuse.

UI student Jennifer Reagen prepares to drop her elbow onto a dummy during a self defense class Thursday evening at the Delta

New self-defense program created at UI

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

The use of the body as a weapon is the most effective form of self-defense, according to Paul Enger, martial arts expert and creator of a new self-defense program created for women. "All of the techniques we teach are easy to learn, yet very effective and powerful," Enger said. "They're easy to learn with minimal practice." Enger is a UI student who has studied martial arts for 11 years and currently teaches a karate course through the UI. The program was created in Iowa City in response to the increasing number of rapes reported in the area, particularly acquaintance rapes, Enger said.

Enger teaches women to fight back

"Having mace or a rape whistle isn't practical for defending yourself in cases of date rape," said Jay Stockdale, who helps Enger teach the self-defense course. "With those methods, you're relying on something exterior for protection." This self-defense workshop is designed to be effective regardless of the size of the assailant or the defendant, according to Enger. The program adapts the martial arts into a self-defense program for the non-martial artist, he said. The course covers three main areas. The first part is learning control of the body by concentrating on balance and body dynamics. The second area teaches escape tactics and the third area teaches the attack techniques. The hands-on workshop involves participation as well as demonstration, Enger said. "We teach women the most powerful techniques, and how to use them on the most vulnerable target areas on the body, such as the neck and throat, groin and knees," Enger said. "It enables women to ruthlessly defend themselves." The workshop, which lasts from three to four hours and costs $10 per person, has been presented to two UI sororities, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Delta Delta Delta.

Stockdale said he is scheduled to return to the Kappa sorority for another workshop and expects more sororities to participate in the future. "The techniques are really simple," he said. "The women seem to think the program is very worthwhile." Mona Schuchmann, who attended the workshop, said she feels it is important to know how to defend yourself against rape. "I'm appalled by the statistics," she said. Enger designed the program specifically for women and said the techniques taught are the most useful and practical method of self-defense for women. "An attacker can't take away your weapons if they're on your own body," he said.

Man accused of killing wife in Coralville arrested

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

A man accused of murdering his wife in a Coralville motel room in early October was arrested Thursday in Ogden, Utah, Coralville police said.

Frank R. Chewning, of East Galesburg, Ill., is currently being held in Ogden's Weaver

County Jail on a first-degree murder warrant. Authorities here are awaiting his extradition. Officials found the body of Diane Chewning October 6 at the University Inn motel, Highway 6 West, Coralville. An autopsy revealed Chewning died from suffocation, according to Coralville police reports.

Frank Chewning was last seen with his wife on October 4 in the motel's lounge. He was seen the next day entering his motel room alone, Johnson County Atty. J. Patrick White said. Diane Chewning was in Iowa City to be treated for abdominal pain at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, White said earlier this week. Authorities suspected that Chewning fled from Coralville with his wife's car and belongings. These were later recovered in Kansas City.

Calif. lawmakers consider tax boost to fund state's earthquake relief

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — State lawmakers convened a special session Thursday to discuss ways to pay for earthquake relief, including boosting the state's sales tax in time for Christmas shopping. At the same time, Marilyn Quayle was headed to farming communities south of San Francisco that were among the hardest hit by the October 17 quake. The wife of Vice President Dan Quayle has made disaster relief her personal cause.

Her visit comes a day after the San Francisco Bay area was rattled by yet another strong aftershock, this one measuring 4.4 on the Richter scale. No serious damage or injuries were reported. Damages from the earthquake have been estimated at more than $7.1 billion. Gov. George Deukmejian wants to raise $800 million for the state's share of earthquake relief by raising the sales tax charged statewide by a quarter-percent, from 6 percent to 6.25 percent. "Our state has pulled together like a family during this period of pain and suffering, and I am personally very proud of the way our state has risen to the challenge," Deukmejian said in a written message to the Legislature. Lawmakers convened about midday to weigh dozens of other measures aimed at helping the quake victims. The session is expected to last two or three days.

Prison officers picket Oakdale holding facility

Guards resent overcrowding

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Correctional officers at the Oakdale holding facility will hold an informational picket at 8 a.m. today. Citing inmate overcrowding, unsafe staff-to-inmate ratios and an "unfair" retirement provision at the facility, the officers will picket on the north driveway of the Iowa Medical Classification Center on the Oakdale Campus, Highway 965. "We want the Iowa Legislature, when it goes back into session, to support a bill to help out with the situation we're in now," said correctional officer Marty Hathaway. "We'd like them to help us deal with the number of inmates in the system to alleviate some of this pressure in the future. In my opinion, that would be a new prison." Oakdale is a holding facility where every person sentenced to two or more years in an Iowa prison is sent for "orientation," said Hathaway, president of the correctional officer's union 2985 — the American Federation of State, County and Municipal employees. "The inmate population has increased while the staff levels have stayed the same," Hathaway said. "We feel the shortage makes the institution less secure for people in Iowa." The facility — designed to hold 300 inmates — was holding about 380 inmates when Hathaway left work Wednesday, he said. "We have way too many inmates and not enough staff," Hathaway said. From July 1983 to June 1984, the staff-to-inmate ratio at the facility was 1.66 staff to every inmate. Now, the ratio is .68 staff to every inmate, Hathaway said. With today's picket, the officers will ask for the ratios to be returned to the 1985 level of 1.19 staff to every inmate. "We are asking that the ratio be taken back to where we were in 1985"

Sandinista troops attack infiltrated Contra forces

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Sandinista troops launched attacks in Nicaragua's central and northern mountains Thursday to try to wipe out outnumbered Contra forces that have infiltrated from Honduras, according to reports. Lt. Col. Rosa Pasos, a military spokeswoman, said most of the action was concentrated on rebels sneaking into Nicaragua, but she would confirm only one attack near Quilali, in the border province of Nueva Segovia. President Daniel Ortega ended a 19-month cease-fire on Wednesday, saying the Contras had been stepping up attacks inside Nicaragua. He also blamed the United States for the renewed attacks and accused President George Bush of promoting "terrorism." The Contras announced Thursday they had accepted in principle a Sandinista offer to meet Monday and Tuesday at the United Nations to discuss demobilization. Roman Catholic Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo said he had also accepted an invitation. In a communique, the Contras said they were still awaiting an official invitation from a U.N. Organization of American States commission set up to verify Central American peace accords. The Sandinista party newspaper Barricada said Thursday that combat units in 14 towns in northern Nicaragua began operations overnight, but neither the newspaper nor Pasos gave details. The Contra communique, distributed by the Nicaraguan Resistance in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said the Sandinistas mounted attacks Wednesday with tanks, helicopter gunships and heavy artillery.

NBC News' chief White House correspondent and veteran Vietnam reporter John Cochran is slated to talk today on the UI campus.

John Cochran, chief White House correspondent for NBC News and veteran Vietnam reporter, will speak today at 2 p.m. on the UI campus. Cochran's lecture, "The After Vietnam Syndrome: Is the U.S. Still Trimming Its Sails?", will be held this afternoon in the Old Capitol Senate Chamber and will examine what Cochran called "the nation's recent fascination with remembering and romanticizing the Vietnam war." Cochran will draw on nearly 20 years' experience

Condom availability studied

Econofoods stocks a plethora of prophylactics in all hues

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Although the 24-hour-a-day service is what attracts most UI students to Econofoods, the store also has the best condom selection in town.

A recent Johnson County Health Department survey of eight local drug stores found that Econofoods, 1987 Broadway St., offered the most appealing condom display and the least expensive condoms.

The purpose of the survey was to determine which local drug stores had the best selection of condoms for the least cost, said Ellen Van Laere, Johnson County Health Department surveyor.

Econofoods sells the least-expensive packages of 12 condoms at $3.23, while the highest-priced 12-packs of condoms were found at Walgreen's for $5.10 or Pearson's for $5.71. Other stores' 12-pack prices were in the $3.50 range.

The survey was based upon a price comparison of condoms offered at the stores. Other stores included in the survey are Osco Drug, Old Capitol Mall; Revco Discount Drug Center, 1101 S. Riverside Dr.; Walgreen Drug Store, 1646 Sycamore St.; Pearson's Drug Store, Linn and Market streets; and branches of Drug Town, People's Drug Store and K Mart.

Econofoods lost survey points for positioning its condom display partly behind the pharmacy counter.

"It is important for condoms to be displayed where they are visible so people feel comfortable buying them," said Van Laere.

Most stores displayed their condom selection in either the feminine hygiene section or in the rear of the store with the birth control section, she said.

"Both of these places are acceptable as long as they are accessible to the customer," Van Laere said.

The stores were also judged on the exotic appeal of their displays and whether they offered condoms in bulk sizes. Most offered condoms with exotic appeal but lacked a complete colored-condom selection.

Except for Pearson's, the only available color besides natural was golden.

"I think (condom manufacturers) should do more with the exotic appeal of condoms," Van Laere said. "They should offer quality condoms that are fun at the same time. Different colors would be something that was fun for people."

Van Laere said K Mart offered the worst selection of condoms. The only available 3-packs K Mart offered were the more expensive lambskin condoms, she said.

Although many people prefer natural skin condoms, they are more expensive than latex condoms and do not necessarily prevent sexually transmitted diseases, Van Laere said.

"Because they are made of natural skin, by their very nature they are porous," Van Laere said. "You can't be sure the entire condom is of the same consistency."

All of the stores offered packages of 36 condoms, except Pearson's, where bulk condoms are specially ordered.

"Packages of 36 condoms are economical and can, by and large, be quite convenient," Van Laere said. "For people using condoms as their main source of birth control and for disease prevention, they may very well need more than packages of three or six."

Although some of the store pharmacies displayed racks of educational brochures on a wide range of health topics, none of the them included informational brochures about condoms in their displays, Van Laere said.

One advantage of the condom vending service offered in the UI residence halls is that they provide educational brochures next to the machines, she said.

But the residence hall vending machines are limited in selection.

One brand of plain latex and spermicidally lubricated latex condoms are offered in the residence halls for $.50, said Mary Carstens, UI assistant director of residence services.

"We wanted to stay away from (exotic condoms), because the point was not to sensationalize condoms, but just to get students to use condoms, so we didn't think they needed colors or anything," Carstens said.

Religious neutrality discussed by board

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Further attempts to develop guidelines for regulating religion in the classroom were debated Wednesday at a work session of the Iowa City Community School District School Board of Directors.

The policy, which attempts to ensure that the district will not favor one religion over another or religion over non-religion, was first presented to the board on September 19.

For more than an hour, the board reviewed the district's Religions in the Curriculum policy, originally titled the Religious Neutrality policy.

The policy attempts to provide a guide for the board when making curriculum and event schedule decisions.

There has been a great deal of confusion among community members and staff about the policy, said board member Jay Christensen-Szalanski.

"I think there's got to be an in-service for teachers and staff and for the public," he said. "The policy says about as much as we can say, but there are specific things that need to be addressed. "Education of the staff will not end with the policy," he added.

Ellen Widiss, board vice president, said there is a need for an in-service to explain the policy to the teachers.

"I believe we need a staff in-service to correct the misperceptions and the overreactions on the teacher's part," she said. "Students are certainly free to express themselves."

Board member Alan Leff said a statement permitting students to express their religious views in school should be added to the policy.

"Not that we are trying to get them to practice their religion at school, but so they will not be hesitant to express them," he said. "I would like to see something positive about feeling free to express beliefs."

Some teachers had been misled on what the policy entails as far as student activity, board member Connie Champion said.

"We certainly don't care if a child draws a picture of a Christmas tree or writes a poem about Hanukkah, but I think that's very hard to state," she said.

Board president Fran Malloy added that the board should stress policy clarity.

"We are not trying to stamp out religion, but people can receive things quite differently than how we express it," she said.

Champion said the board should leave some decisions up to the teachers.

"I think we will have to hope that at some time or another our teachers will have some common sense," she said. "I don't think we can cover all those details in the policy."

Part of the policy involved scheduling school events around "major religious holidays."

"I think we are opening up a whole new can of worms that we need to administrate," Laff said.

Christensen-Szalanski said the board should avoid conflicts when possible.

"It seems to me that if we accommodate for drama, debate and track, then we should accommodate for religion," he said.

Courts

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A UI student was charged with fourth-degree theft after he allegedly stole three electric exit signs from Currier Residence Hall by cutting the wires that attached them to walls and conduit pipes, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Todd A. Stocks, 19, 4423 Currier Residence Hall, allegedly tried to "ditch" two of the signs after learning that the man to whom he had given the third sign had been charged with fourth-degree theft, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 16, according to court records.

In Brief

Students in the composition and dance production classes of the UI dance department will present a fall Composition Concert at 8 tonight in the Space/Place Theatre of North Hall.

The concert will feature seven solo dances created in the upper-level dance composition class. Technical aspects of each performance are managed by dance production students.

The concert is free and open to the public.

"What's Happening to Your Water" will be the topic of discussion during the UI Museum of National History's Afternoon With a Scientist series Sunday, November 5, in Macbride Auditorium. The lecture by Carol Thompson, a research geologist for the Geological Survey, will begin at 2 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

UI professor David Forkenbrock will deliver a keynote address next week at the National Conference on Transportation and Economic Development in Virginia.

Forkenbrock, director of the UI Public Policy Center and professor of urban and regional planning will deliver the address at the conference sponsored by the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Science.

The conference will bring leading researchers together to explore ways that transportation investments can best contribute to state and regional economic development.

Forkenbrock said the key to efficient transportation investment is to build facilities where traffic levels are high enough to justify costs.

"Resources are too scarce today for ill-advised projects," he said.

Today

The UI Department of Geology

will hold a seminar, "Sequence Stratigraphy, Unconformities and Depositional Systems: A Case Study of the Gallup and Tooto Sandstones of the San Juan Basin, New Mexico," by Nag Nummedal, Louisiana University, at 4 p.m. in Trowbridge Hall, Room 125.

The Iowa City ZEN Center will hold meditations at 5:30 a.m., 6:20 a.m., 4:30 p.m. and 5:20 p.m., at 40 S. Gilbert St.

City Council Candidates

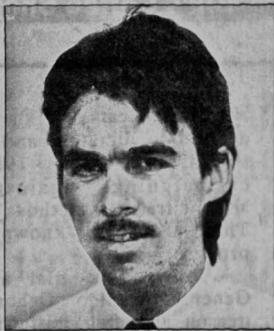

At-large Seats

Candidates share views

2 at-large seats open on council

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

Three candidates are vying for the two available at-large seats on the Iowa City Council in the upcoming November 7 election. The Daily Iowan's Tonya Feit talked to the candidates this week and asked them where they stand on city issues and what they plan to accomplish if elected.

Joe Bolkom

taining one of the finest public libraries in the state, if not the country, for a community our size.

DI: What impact can you make on the council's policies?

Bolkom: My past record demonstrates a willingness to work hard and work cooperatively with people to get things done. In addition to bringing energy and proven leadership skills to the council, I'm going to be willing to reach out to others that are obviously informed about issues that affect them. I will be most interested and willing to seek out information outside of the council process on issues as they come before the council.

DI: What do you hope to accomplish during your term as an Iowa City councilor?

Bolkom: In the next four years, I hope to see the development of a comprehensive recycling program in Iowa City including drop-off centers for all materials such as glass, aluminum, plastic and newspaper. I'm also interested in improving water quality in Iowa City and working on a long-term policy to address quality drinking water in our community. I would hope that in the next four years we could begin to make some strides to improve drinking water in Iowa City.

DI: How will your role in the Iowa City community translate into the role you hope to play on the council?

Bolkom: I've been very involved over the last couple years in civic activity principally related to Iowa City's environment. I'm concerned that recent Iowa City public policy has neglected the environment too frequently.

John McDonald
McDonald is in his second term as Iowa City mayor and has served on the Iowa City Council for eight years. At 45, he is president of McDonald Optical and attended Los Angeles City College.

DI: What do you think are the major issues facing the Iowa City Council in the next four years?

McDonald: The No. 1 issue will be solid waste management. Waste water treatment was the issue of the '80s, and solid waste management will be the issue of the '90s. There are several mandates coming down from both the state and federal level that municipalities are going to have to comply with. It's not an optional situation. It has to be addressed, and different methods have to be found to dispose of solid waste.

DI: What impact have you made on the council's policies?

McDonald: Fiscal stability. Fiscal responsibility. The '80s have been difficult times for municipalities because so many of the programs that cities relied on to operate various programs were discontinued. In order to maintain the same level of services that municipalities are expected to provide, we have had to become "leaner" in our operations. But I think that throughout the '80s we were able to continue the same level of services that people were expecting because of the policies that we adopted and our evaluations of our programs without having to put out large tax requests.

DI: What do you hope to accomplish

during your next term as an Iowa City councilor?

Novick: I think the environmental issues would definitely be somewhere at the top of the list. Also, I think that our sewage, water, waste disposal, transportation system — which includes public transit and parking, affordable housing, and the development of our last urban renewal parcel are all going to be issues faced by the city council. I think possibly the energy conservation issue may come up again because there are three state committees studying that issue. I also think that our urban environment policies that were adopted about three years ago are going to be part of the subdivision ordinances soon.

DI: How will your role in the Iowa City community translate into the role you hope to play on the Iowa City Council?

Novick: I'm a native Iowa Cityan, and I've been always been active in the community. I believe we have the responsibility to put something back into the communities we live in. The council is an extension of that. The council really sets a mood and the sets the direction for the city.

Naomi Novick

Novick classifies her career as professional volunteerism and currently serves on the Iowa City Design and Review Committee and the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce Local Government Affairs Committee. At 57, Novick is a Hancher Guild board member. She received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Illinois.

DI: What do you think are the major issues facing the Iowa City Council in the next four years?

Iowa City Council Elections

Tuesday, November 7

At-Large councilors represent all of Iowa City, unlike each of the three district seats.

Joe Bolkom - (challenger), is assistant for consumer affairs at the Johnson County Health Department. He is 33 years old and is a UI graduate.

John McDonald - (incumbent), is a two-time Iowa City Mayor. He is 45 years old and attended Los Angeles City College.

Naomi Novick - (challenger), serves on the Iowa City Design and Review Committee and other local committees. She is 57 years old and is a University of Illinois graduate.

DI: What do you hope to accomplish during your term as an Iowa City councilor?

Novick: Everybody realizes it takes a minimum of four votes to do anything. I would, though, feel strongly about getting the environmental policies into the subdivision ordinances. I am not anti-growth, but I think we have to somehow control where and when and how the fragile areas of Iowa City are developed. I would also hope that some of the human services issues, including affordable housing and helping the homeless, could be accomplished. Plus, I'd like to get some real recycling of solid waste. Source separation alone is not recycling. We have to go out and find people to use our solid waste.

DI: How will your role in the Iowa City community translate into the role you hope to play on the council?

Novick: My background as President of the League of Women Voters has given me a better understanding of the operation of city government than almost anyone else who is not currently serving on council. I have had contact with so many different community groups.

“When people want to buy a car they just go to their dealership...”

Not in Iowa!

Feel like kicking a few tires? Well if you're like 38.7% of the Iowans surveyed, you'll turn to a newspaper first. That's compared to 4.3% who sought information in shoppers or less than 1% who listened to the radio.

In fact the next closest source of information was the dealer themselves...34.7% turned there first.

So if you're in the market to buy a new car...or sell a car, turn to the medium that most people choose. Because...

In Iowa... People read newspapers!

Grants

The $24,906 grant will be used by UAY to pay the salary of a victim support counselor who specializes in counseling and crisis intervention, Swaim said.

Diane Funk, a volunteer coordinator at the Iowa City Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said programs in Iowa City probably received more funding because they are highly visible in the community.

"Good programs make it safer for more victims to come forward to seek assistance," she said. "We are a high visibility agency. We are seen as safe, knowledgeable people to report to."

In fiscal year 1989, RVAP had 521 in-office client visits and served more than 2,600 people with 98 educational programs, Funk said.

According to Marti Anderson, the administrator of the crime victim assistance program in the Iowa Department of Justice, Iowa City's RVAP is the oldest rape prevention and counseling center in Iowa. It was established in 1973, just one year after the very first rape counseling center in the United States was established.

"Iowa City may have somewhat higher rape statistics because it is a college community," she said. "There is a higher concentration of women here, which statistically makes the chances of rape higher."

The $35,317 funding will be used by RVAP to pay Funk's salary, as she trains RVAP's 25 to 35 volunteers, and the salaries of 1.5 office visit counselors, she said.

Pat Meyer, director of the Domestic Violence Program in Iowa City, said the program serves women from Johnson, Cedar, Iowa and Washington counties.

"One third of the people we serve are from outside of Johnson County," she said.

Meyer said DVP in Iowa City provides one of 10 shelters in Iowa for women and child victims of domestic abuse.

The DVP received an $11,000 grant.

"The shelter is for women and children while they figure out what they are going to do about the violence in their homes," she said.

Last year, 259 women and children used the shelter. In addition, DVP helps an estimated 900 women each year through counseling over the phone or in person, she said.

The grants are funded by three statewide sources: the Victims of Crime Act fund, the Family Violence Prevention and Services fund and the Domestic Abuse fund.

Over $530,000 came from the VOCA fund, which is accumulated in part from fines paid by persons convicted of federal crimes.

Twenty percent of the VOCA funding must be matched by the community which houses the program, Anderson said.

In addition, a $240,000 grant was approved by the Iowa Legislature for the Domestic Abuse fund to provide counseling, advocacy and shelter for battered spouses.

to make the institution a safe environment," Hathaway said.

A 120-bed enlargement planned for the facility will also require more officers, Hathaway said.

"There are 30 cells per unit," he said. "In some units there are beds in the middle of the floor and in side rooms — so there are close to 40 inmates in those cell houses."

This may create an unsafe situation if only one officer is stationed there, he added.

Some of the officers are also upset about a recent amendment to the retirement provisions for correctional officers in Iowa, Hathaway said.

The Iowa legislature's retirement bill allows state of Iowa correctional officers to retire at 55 years of age and with 25 years of service.

But the bill was modified by the state of Iowa Directors of the Department of Personnel and the Iowa Department of Corrections to exempt correctional officers in perimeter positions from the retirement provisions, Hathaway said.

Cochran

with NBC News and from personal experience as a freelance reporter in Southeast Asia during the height of the Vietnam War.

"I think it is very appropriate that I talk about Vietnam," Cochran said. "When I was at Iowa, Vietnam took over our lives — we incessantly talked about the war."

During the war, the state department put together a group of 30 students, including Cochran, to go and observe the "civilian side of the war."

These students, Cochran said, were to "hopefully come back with the message that the U.S. was doing a good job, and that we were helping them."

Cochran said exactly the opposite happened.

"I had gone over neither a hawk nor a dove, but I came back thinking that whether it was noble or not, it was never going to work," Cochran said. "We came back and we hated the war."

Cochran received his master's degree in 1967 from the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication. A native of Montgomery, Ala., he began his journalism career with a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alabama.

During his years at the UI, Cochran was the assistant news director at WSUI radio station.

Since then, Cochran has been instrumental in providing leading-edge news in world events.

During the Polish Solidarity movement in 1981, his efforts in Poland allowed NBC to be the first among worldwide news organizations to report the ousting of Prime Minister Pinkowski and the ensuing takeover by Defense Minister Jaruzelski.

Again in 1985 Cochran provided critical coverage of the Union Carbide gas leak in Bhopal, India, and later, the hijacking of TWA Flight 847.

Ten years ago, Cochran provided news coverage in Iran several weeks after all American journalists had been expelled from the country.

"The experience was extremely frightening at times," said Cochran. "I would have been able to stay there longer, but my cover was blown when Iranian officials read about it in the American newspapers."

Deukmejian and the Legislature's top four leaders agreed earlier this week to propose a 13-month sales tax increase. They want the tax to begin December 1 and end Dec. 31, 1990 — to take in two holiday shopping periods.

Any increase must be approved by two-thirds of each legislative house. While the state sales tax is 6 percent, the total sales tax charged in some counties is higher because of locally levied sales taxes.

"We have learned a lot, and we suffered a very severe blow on October 17. We need . . . to make ourselves whole again," said Sen. Leroy Greene as the special session opened.

Marilyn Quayle was scheduled to meet with civic and government leaders and residents in Hollister and Watsonville after her arrival Thursday afternoon.

Thirty years ago the Cuban people overthrew a brutal dictator and charted a course to socialism. Since 1986, Cuba has been campaigning against bureaucratic and administrative methods that have developed. This effort is known as the "rectification process."

Through the trial and execution of former General Arnaldo Ochoa on charges of high treason and drug trafficking in July of this year, a privileged and reactionary social layer inside the government came to light. This layer, whose existence had been known and resented by the mass of Cuban working people, is today being tackled by the rectification process.

Come to a discussion with Don Rojas where he will be addressing these important developments within Cuban Socialism.

(Don Rojas was one of the leaders of the Grenadian Revolution and was also the press secretary to the late Maurice Bishop, Prime Minister of Grenada.)

IS MARXISM DEAD?

With the crisis in the "socialist" countries and the decline of the far left in Europe and North America, writers have been busier than ever writing obituaries for Marx and Marxism.

Ahmed Shawki, editor of Socialist Worker, will argue that only Marxism provides a basis to understand these developments and to solve the problems confronting humanity today.

Energy projections over the past two decades have been astonishingly far off the mark, proving that the energy economy is too volatile to follow a predictable path. Even so, the consensus view is that oil prices, now $16 to $18 a barrel, will hold fairly steady in the early 1990s, and then move moderately higher.

Energy in the '90s

Petroleum to remain major energy source

EDITOR'S NOTE — Oil shocks. Nuclear scares. Pollution fears. On the energy scene, the '70s and '80s were rife with surprises and turmoil. What will the next 10 years bring? This is one of a periodic series of articles, "The '90s," looking ahead to the promise and peril of the upcoming decade, in the environment, medicine, technology and society.

Robert Burns
The Associated Press

The U.S. energy picture for the '90s is a blur of dark lines and bright signs: doubt about ensuring stable prices and steady supplies, but also promise of technological leaps toward a more secure energy future.

Such consumer advances as compact fluorescent light bulbs, "superwindows" that better insulate buildings, and more efficient refrigerator motors are just over the horizon. The efficiency of these new products should partly offset the expanded use of electricity in the '90s.

Energy projections over the past two decades have been astonishingly far off the mark, proving that the energy economy is too volatile to follow a predictable path. Even so, the consensus view is that oil prices, now $16 to $18 a barrel, will hold fairly steady in the early '90s, and then move moderately higher.

Analysts are quick to note, however, that the trend in oil prices over the past two decades has been determined largely by political events and market reactions almost no one foresaw.

Experts say forces already at work point to key energy themes for the '90s:

■ More automobiles will be powered by fuels other than gasoline, as the nation looks for environmentally safer alternatives that can lessen dependence on foreign oil. Some may use hydrogen gas made from natural gas, coal and grain are likely to become more common.

■ The federal government will push harder to revive atomic power. Tax dollars may be used to develop a nuclear reactor with added safety features, but public opposition to the atom is likely to persist. A key focus of debate: how to store growing tons of nuclear waste. Relatively "clean" energy from nuclear fusion will remain only a distant prospect.

■ Decisions about developing traditional U.S. energy resources — oil, natural gas and coal — will become more intertwined with worries about the harmful environment effects of finding, extracting, moving and burning these fossil fuels.

■ The nation will become more dependent on foreign oil and natural gas as domestic oil producers look abroad

■ Houses and commercial buildings will become more energy-efficient, with compact fluorescent lights and other advanced appliances, and "superwindows" whose glazing offers greater protection from the extremes of the air outside.

These trends suggest conflicting signals about American energy fortunes in the next decade: new possibilities for popularizing more benign fuels, but uncertainty about a commitment to move away from the most polluting ones, especially oil.

The Bush administration is already promoting a revival of nuclear energy, stagnant since the mid-'70s, but electric utilities say major changes in state and federal regulations will be needed before they will build more plants.

Complicating the outlook is a warning from the utility industry and many energy analysts that some regions — especially the Northeast — could face electricity shortages early in the '90s. Others foresee plenty of power if the government does more to push energy efficiency and conservation.

While energy sources favored by environmentalists — including "renewables," such as sunlight, wind, water, wood and geothermal steam — are likely to gain more favor in the next decade, America and the world still will run mainly on oil.

Modern economies, quite simply, are wedded to oil. Little could change that in the '90s.

"It is, and will continue to be, the critical commodity in all of our economic and strategic planning well into the next century," said Henson Moore, the deputy U.S. energy secretary.

Joseph Stanislaw, an analyst in the Paris office of Cambridge Energy Research Associates, said the United States will face an oil crunch sometime in the '90s if, as expected, U.S. oil production keeps falling and demand keeps rising.

"We're like a shark driving through the water wanting more and more imported oil," he said.

Critical, too, then, will be the actions of the OPEC oil cartel, which teetered on the brink of extinction in the mid-'80s but now seems poised for a comeback.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries engineered one of history's greatest transfers of wealth when it jacked up oil prices after the 1973-74 Arab embargo against the United States and again in 1979 when oil buyers reacted with panic to a shutoff of Iranian oil output.

Almost no one in the West had foreseen those events. Nor did many expect the crises to create an energy conservation "chic" that would quickly discredit the mid-'70s predictions that oil soon would shoot up to $100 a barrel.

After peaking at $40 a barrel in 1980, oil's price fell steadily, capped by a stunning — and largely unforeseen — collapse in 1986 to below $10 a barrel.

Although energy developments of the past decade were largely a reaction to the oil price pain of the '70s, trends in the coming 10 years are likely to be determined by still-emerging responses to the price declines of the '80s.

The key uncertainties: — Will the nation's rapidly growing dependence on foreign oil undermine its security?

— Will oil imports rise so rapidly as to give OPEC renewed power to dictate prices?

— If prices do stay low, will efforts to develop alternate energy sources be abandoned? Will that, in the longer run, make the country even more beholden to OPEC?

AIDS prognosis in '90s more hopeful

Cases to increase among urban poor

EDITOR'S NOTE — The frightening scourge of the '80s, AIDS, is not likely to be defeated in the '90s. But new weapons may give its victims a fighting chance. This is one of a periodic series of articles, "The '90s," looking ahead to the promise and peril of the upcoming decade, in the environment, medicine, technology and society.

Daniel Q. Haney
The Associated Press

In the '80s, AIDS in the United States was largely an untreatable disease of middle-class white homosexuals. In the '90s, it is likely to be a treatable disease of poor black and Hispanic heterosexuals.

And worldwide, by the end of the '90s, six million people may be ill with AIDS, the specialists project.

In the second decade of this epidemic upon the Earth, the face of AIDS will change:

■ It will be increasingly linked with poverty, passed through the nation's veins via needles and sex.

■ The number of people with AIDS will grow dramatically as those who were infected throughout the '80s fall sick.

■ Medical science will develop more tools to control HIV, the AIDS virus, perhaps slowing the lethal course of the infection.

As acquired immune deficiency syndrome spreads, the burden upon society will grow with it.

The U.S. government estimates the cost of taking care of AIDS patients in 1992 will range from $5 billion to $13 billion. Big-city hospitals, especially those in poor neighborhoods, will be hit hardest. Experts believe New York City will need 1,000 to 1,500 more beds by 1991 just to deal with AIDS patients.

The seeds of the epidemic's next decade have already been sown. An estimated 1 million to 1.5 million Americans are now infected. Most, perhaps all, will eventually become ill.

"Even if not another single person gets infected, which of course won't happen, there will be a steady increase in the number of people who get sick and die from AIDS over the next 10 years," said Dr. William Haseltine of Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

By the end of 1992, the U.S. Public Health Service projects, 365,000 Americans will have gotten AIDS, and 263,000 of them will have died. In 1992 alone, there will be 80,000 new cases of AIDS and 65,000 deaths.

The virus typically lingers quietly for a decade after the initial infection until it eventually destroys the immune system, causing AIDS.

The victims of the early '90s will be the legacy of the epidemic's silent but explosive start in the early '80s.

Most early victims were homosexual men. Because of safer sex habits, the rate of new infections has slowed to a trickle among this group. But the virus continues to spread through shared needles among drug addicts, largely poor black and Hispanic males in the big cities, and from them to their sex partners, mostly women.

The future of AIDS in the United States will depend, in part, on whether those who catch AIDS through sex with drug abusers will pass it on sexually to others. If this happens — there is no evidence of it yet — AIDS could become a sexually transmitted disease of the urban poor.

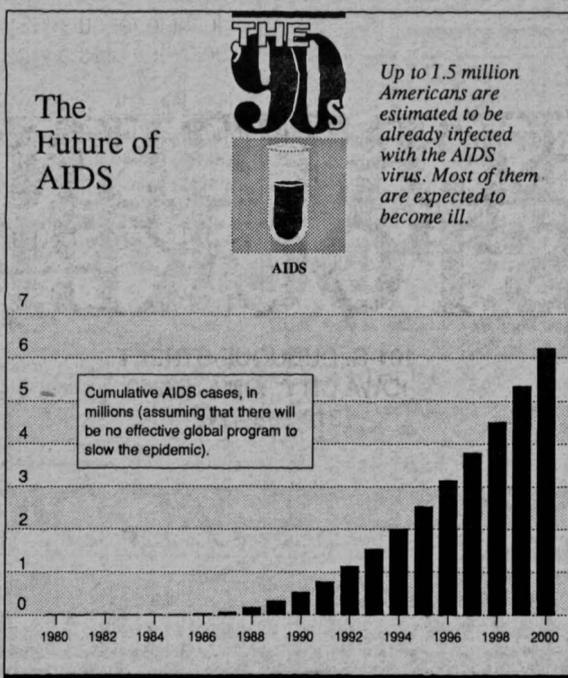

"That's the big question mark that hangs over the next decade," said Dr. Andrew Moss of the University of California, San Francisco.

The heterosexual transmission of AIDS is already a major problem in other parts of the world, especially Africa, where 10 to 15 percent of the people in some cities are thought to be infected.

"We expect that the decade of the '90s will be worse — and perhaps much worse — than the '80s," said Dr. Jonathan Mann, director of the World Health Organization's AIDS program.

The WHO has put together the educated guesses of many experts and projects that nine times more people around the world will get AIDS during the '90s than during the '80s. By the year 2000, there could be 6 million AIDS cases, and 18 million people could be infected.

Just how many people will have AIDS in the United States a dec-

WHO official warns about complacency

WASHINGTON (AP) — A World Health Organization official said Thursday that a "dangerous complacency" threatens to cripple efforts to counter an expected tenfold increase in AIDS cases over the next decade.

Jonathan Mann, director of WHO's Global Programme on AIDS, said the number of AIDS cases worldwide, now believed to be around 600,000, is still expected to approach 6 million by the turn of the century.

The number infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS but often lies dormant for years before symptoms appear, is estimated at between 6 million and 8 million worldwide and is projected to double or triple during the '90s, he told the National Commission on AIDS.

"Despite all efforts, the global epidemic is gaining momentum; major barriers to more effective action still exist, and dangerous complacency about AIDS is spreading," he told the panel.

He said a successful foundation for fighting the epidemic has been built around strategies to slow the spread of the virus and the development of treatment therapies.

"Yet if complacency, indifference or denial lead to relaxation of current efforts or to a decrease in future commitment to AIDS, we will falter and fall further and further behind the pace of the worldwide epidemic," he said.

Mann called for increased financial and political commitments by the United States to the Global Programme on AIDS.

The U.S. contribution to the WHO program was $25.5 million in 1989, about 30 percent of the program's budget, he said. Mann said he anticipated the U.S. contribution would be $21 million in 1990, funding 20 percent of the budget.

He said the United States could help most by increasing its direct financial support of AIDS programs in other countries, but he did not suggest how much.

Anti-drug ads prove effective

Bush praises Advertising Partnership for their voluntary efforts

WASHINGTON (AP)—Anti-drug abuse ads are making a big impact in areas where they are seen frequently, according to a survey released Thursday by a non-profit coalition of advertisers that sponsors many of the ads.

The results prompted President George Bush to praise media leaders who have donated time and space for the commercials.

"This group is at the leading edge of a powerful and moving effort to debunk the big myth about drugs by deglamorizing them and deglamorizing their users," Bush told a White House gathering of more than 100 media executives.

The survey, by Gordon S. Black Corp. — which was hired to conduct the poll by the Media-Advertising Partnership for a Drug-Free America group — found that marijuana use among adults in areas where the ads were shown frequently declined 33 percent in one year.

In areas where the ads were seen and heard more rarely, the use dropped only 15 percent, the survey found.

As for adult cocaine use, it declined 15 percent in high-frequency areas compared with 2 percent in low-frequency areas.

Black, who announced the findings to the media leaders, said the margin of error for various parts of the survey of about 7,000 people ranged from one-half percent to 4 percent.

Black said one of the survey's discouraging findings was that one of every six children aged 9 to 12 is approached to buy or use drugs, whether they live in the cities, the suburbs or rural areas.

However, the survey indicated that the percentage of such young people who said they had been offered drugs declined from 18 percent in 1988 to 16 percent in 1989, the same level as 1987.

The survey also found that the percentage of children aged 9-12 who had tried marijuana rose from 4 percent in 1988 to 6 percent in 1989, while the percentage of those who had tried cocaine or its smokeable form, crack, remained at 1 percent each for both years.

In addition, Black said, attitudes among teen-agers toward drug abuse showed "only marginal improvement." Such attitudes improved among 13-year-olds, but not among those 16 to 17, the survey found.

The partnership aims to air $365 million worth of anti-drug ads a year — which calculates both the costs of the ads and the donated media time — for a total of $1 million a day, Burke announced.

"What we're trying to accomplish is $1 billion over the next three years," said partnership spokeswoman Theresa Venet Grant. "That number provides about one anti-drug message a day for every American. Each person will see or hear, in one medium or another, one anti-drug message a day."

Some critics have questioned the impact of anti-drug ads.

Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, said in an interview Thursday that although she was heartened by some of the survey's findings, she was wary of them because the poll was financed by the group putting out the ads.

"I hope this is right," she said of the survey results. "I would be surer that it was right if the people doing the research had nothing to do with the people doing the advertising."

The Associated Press

President George Bush gestures during an address in Washington Thursday before the Media-Advertising Partnership for a Drug-Free America group to discuss new anti-drug abuse ads. The ads are making a big impact in areas where they are seen frequently, according to a survey backed by the non-profit advertisers' coalition that sponsors many of the ads.

Charren contends that the ads generally are "conscience money for a society that is not taking care of that part of the population that's most likely to get involved in drugs."

"This isn't all bad, but I would worry about thinking this was the solution to the drug problem." "For a child, it's not clear there's a distinction between one drug and another — a pill's a pill."

Police seek evidence in Palme case

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—An appeals court Thursday formally dismissed the case against the man convicted of killing Prime Minister Olof Palme, but left a cloud of suspicion hanging over him.

Police said they would continue to hunt for evidence against Christer Pettersson, a career criminal who was arrested in December for the 1986 shooting.

The State Attorney has until November 30 to appeal to the Supreme Court, but the court normally would agree to review the case only if a question of legal principle were involved.

The appeals court ruled that Pettersson likely was the man seen outside a movie theater where Palme was slain, and dismissed his alibi. But it said it had not been proved that he killed the Swedish leader.

Pettersson, 42, could be tried again if further evidence is discovered before the 25-year statute of limitations takes effect, legal experts said.

The Svea Court of Appeals was unanimous in overturning Pettersson's July 27 conviction by the Stockholm District Court, which had sentenced him to life imprisonment.

On October 12 the appeals court freed Pettersson from jail pending publication of the full written judgment on Thursday.

"It cannot be considered proved that the perpetrator is identical with Christer Pettersson. Therefore, the court leaves the indictment unsanctioned," the appeals court said.

Palme, who was prime minister for 11 years and Scandinavia's leading international figure, was shot while walking home from a movie with his wife, Lisbeth.

"Pettersson is still a suspect with us," Ingemar Krusell, a senior investigator, was quoted as saying by the national news agency TT.

He said the police had formed a special squad focusing on finding evidence against Pettersson, while two other teams pursue other possible leads.

Honecker's wife ousted from Cabinet post

BERLIN (AP) — The wife of ousted Communist Party leader Erich Honecker lost her cabinet post in a series of top-level resignations that swept through East Germany on Thursday as the pace of change gained momentum.

New party leader Egon Krenz said his government wanted closer ties with the European Economic Community and called for a quick trade agreement. He also discussed reforms with Poland's new prime minister.

Krenz promised to announce on Monday a new law allowing freedom of travel to the West, according to Martin Bangemann, an EEC commissioner from West Germany who spoke with the East German leader.

Thousands of East Germans weren't waiting, however, and poured into neighboring Czechoslovakia after Krenz lifted a month-old travel ban.

An opposition leader challenged the Communists to abandon their 40-year monopoly on power.

El Salvadoran peace talks falter

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Guerrillas on Thursday withdrew from cease-fire talks with the rightist government to protest the bombing of a union hall that killed 10 people.

In a radio broadcast, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front guerrillas said the group will not take part in the next round of negotiations until President Alfredo Cristiani's government offers better guarantees for the survival of leftist organizations.

Representatives of the two sides in the decade-old civil war were scheduled to hold their third meeting this year on November 20-21 in Caracas, Venezuela.

Earlier meetings in Mexico City and San Jose, Costa Rica, had deadlocked, but the two sides had agreed to continue meeting monthly until a cease-fire was negotiated.

There was no immediate government reaction. Government offices were closed for the Day of the Dead holiday, and an employee at the home of the government press secretary said he was out of town.

In the broadcast over private radio station YSU, the guerrillas said they had information the bomb attack Tuesday that killed 10 people and wounded 29 was planned and carried out by the military.

The statement read by Eduardo Sanchez, one of the front's five senior leaders, said the guerrilla group "has reliable information from its intelligence system" the attack was carried out in retaliation for a guerrilla attack Monday on the Defense Ministry.

It said Gen. Rene Ponce, military chief of staff, approved attacks "which were known and authorized by President Cristiani and were executed by Col. (Francisco) Elena Fuentes, commander of the shady 1st Infantry Brigade squadron."

The guerrillas gave no details to back up their assertion. No one claimed responsibility for the bombing, part of an escalating cycle of violence.

Military spokesmen have rejected the leftists' accusation and promised to investigate and punish those responsible.

The guerrillas said they were withdrawing from the talks in order not to legitimize the "government's responsibility for the massacre."

The downtown hall belonging to the National Federation of Salvadoran Workers, known by its Spanish initials as Fenastras, was partially destroyed by the blast.

Another bomb earlier Tuesday injured four people at the office of Madres, an organization of relatives of political prisoners.

On Wednesday, rebels fired two anti-tank weapons at the headquarters of the 1st Brigade, killing one civilian and wounding another.

Prosecution likely over ANC rally

PRETORIA, South Africa — Security laws apparently were broken at a rally honoring freed leaders of the African National Congress, and prosecution could result, President F.W. de Klerk said Thursday.

De Klerk also said the ANC "remains committed to violence and terrorism" and will not be legalized until it drops its commitment to an anti-government guerrilla campaign.

The president, addressing a military parade, said that at the huge pro-ANC rally Sunday "there occurred what appeared to be contraventions of existing laws," but he did not elaborate.

Speakers at the rally, including four of the freed guerrilla leaders, endorsed their movement's use of violence and some quoted exiled ANC officials — both violations of security laws.

De Klerk said police were preparing a dossier for the attorney general so he can decide whether to prosecute, an added: "Law and order will be maintained."

The seven freed African National Congress leaders were released unconditionally on October 15, but their guerrilla movement remains outlawed.

De Klerk said the freed prisoners "must guard against being misled by those seeking continued confrontation. They would also be wise to steer away from inflammatory rhetoric."

Nursing home aide gets life in prison

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — A former nursing home aide was sentenced Thursday to life in prison with no chance of parole for smothering five patients in a pact with her former lover.

Gwendolyn Graham showed no emotion and declined Circuit Judge Roman Snow's offer to speak before he sentenced her to six life terms.

Catherine Wood, Graham's former lover and also a former aide at the nursing home, was sentenced last month to 20 to 40 years in prison after pleading guilty to second-degree murder.

Graham, 26, was convicted September 20 of five counts of murder and one count of conspiracy to murder for killing the five incapacitated patients in 1987 at Alpine Manor Nursing Home in Walker, a northwest suburb of Grand Rapids.

Wood, 27, admitted she sometimes served as a lookout or diverted supervisors' attention while Graham suffocated the five with washclothes.

Most of the victims, who ranged in age from 60 to 97, suffered from Alzheimer's disease.

Jan Hunderman, a daughter of one of the smothered patients, said: "Now we can just get on with our lives."

Wood, the prosecution's key witness, testified the murders were part of a pact the two hoped would bind their love. She said Graham told her the killings helped her "relieve tension."

Maryland county sells own liquor

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Montgomery County, a Washington suburb, became the first county in the nation to have its own brand of booze when it introduced its County Crest line in liquor stores.

Gin, rum, bourbon, vodka and scotch have been sold since last month under the label, which features a knight's helmet and shield that the county director of liquor control described as a "knockoff" of the county crest.

The County Crest line was described by County Executive Sidney Kramer as a marketing move to better serve county consumers and to make Montgomery's county-run liquor stores competitive with neighboring jurisdictions.

However, Virginia Bright, head of the county chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, called the action improper and in poor taste.

"What kind of example are we setting for our young people by having the county's name, the county's crest on alcohol?" she asked.

"What's the big deal?" said Jerome Baylin, county director of liquor control, noting that it is common for a large liquor store to sell alcohol under a private label. "We don't get them to drink. They have already made the decision."

Montgomery County is the only local government in the nation that controls the wholesale distribution of alcoholic beverages. It provides beer and wine to retailers in the county and it has a monopoly on the sale of hard liquor. Four other counties in Maryland have a less strict form of liquor control, and 18 states have liquor control.

Democrats add fuel to HUD probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats formally asked the Justice Department on Thursday to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate former HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

The Democrats said evidence gathered by House investigators probing allegations of massive wrongdoing at the Department of Housing and Urban Development suggests possible perjury and conspiracy to defraud the government by Pierce or other former top HUD officials.

Their request to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh triggers a requirement, under the federal independent counsel law, that Thornburgh tell Congress within 30 days whether he finds grounds to open a preliminary investigation.

Thornburgh quickly issued a statement saying he would "report to Congress as provided for in that legislation."

But he also accused Reps. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) and Bruce Morrison (D-Conn.) who are leading the special prosecutor push, of injecting "partisan politics into this matter, which has until now been handled in a non-partisan, professional way by the Congress, HUD and this department."

"Even more distressing is the assertion by the congressmen that criminal acts have been committed before criminal investigations have been completed," Thornburgh said. Schumer said in announcing the request, "Sam Pierce, entrusted with programs for the poor and powerless, instead gave those programs to the very rich and the best politically connected."

"There is ample evidence of wrongdoing at HUD, but there is stonewalling at the top," he said. "The only way to get to the bottom of the mess at HUD is through the appointment of an independent counsel."

Robert Plotkin, one of Pierce's lawyers, criticized the action and said it would delay further any congressional testimony by the former secretary, who has invoked his constitutional rights and refused to testify before a House panel.

Pierce's lead attorney, Paul Perito, said he was confident the Justice Department would deny the request after reviewing transcripts of the House investigation, which he said "contain not one shred of evidence to form a basis that crimes have been committed or that Mr. Pierce was involved in commission of any crime."

Schumer and Morrison said 19 of the 20 Democratic members of the House Judiciary Committee had signed their letter to Thornburgh. The chairman, Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Texas), who is hospitalized, was the only one missing.

'Lion' sees record time in marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — As befitting a lion, Belayneh Densimo thinks he will be king of the hill in the New York City Marathon — in more ways than one.

The Ethiopian, who holds the world marathon best of 2 hours, 6 minutes, 50 seconds, said Thursday that not only would he win Sunday's race, but would break Alberto Salazar's course record of 2:08:13.

Densimo, 24, a police lieutenant in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa, explained through a translator that his first name means "on top" and his last name means "lion."

Meanwhile, he did not go so far as to predict he would smash his world best, set last year at Rotterdam.

"This is my first time here, so I am not familiar with the conditions," he said. "Though I have the capacity to break the record, I won't break it this time."

"I am not being cocky, but I am confident I can break the course record."

Densimo made his bold prediction about erasing Salazar's mark, even though he had not yet seen the undulating 26-mile, 385-yard course that traverses the city's five boroughs. Densimo, two other Ethiopian runners and their coach arrived only Wednesday night and had not yet had the opportunity to check out the difficult terrain.

But Densimo said he has trained hard for this important race, against an outstanding field, including defending champion Steve Jones of Wales, Olympic gold medalist Gelindo Bordin of Italy and two-time Boston Marathon runner-up Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania.

"I have a very strict training schedule," he said. "Even when I don't have a race, I train a lot."

He said he trains about 180 kilometers a week (nearly 112 miles), including runs of 45 kilometers (nearly 28 miles) — more than

He may seem a bit bored watching an Iowa men's basketball scrimmage before a football game earlier this year, but Iowa recruit Phil Chime is excited about becoming a Hawkeye next fall. Chime will receive the Hawkeyes' fourth, and last, scholarship available for next year.

Hawks lure Houston recruit away from Golden Gophers

Rita Heimes
The Daily Iowan

A month before basketball season officially begins, Iowa has already won a victory of sorts over Minnesota.

After considering Minnesota and other schools around the nation, Madison (Houston) High School senior Phil Chime has verbally committed to play for the Hawkeyes.

The 6-foot-7, 210-pound power forward accepted Iowa's last available basketball scholarship, though he said the decision wasn't easy. Chime also visited Missouri, Southern Louisiana, and Hawaii, but chose Iowa for the "country life" he found in Iowa City.

"The main reason I made the choice was because I always heard about Iowa and the corn, cows and country life," Chime said. "It's not boring, it's peaceful. (Iowa City) is a little bitty old city, but it's still lively."

Chime, who moved to Houston from his native Laos, Nigeria, at the age of 12, was also impressed by Iowa coach Tom Davis, and the recruiting methods used by him and his staff.

"The main reason I made the choice was because I always heard about Iowa and the corn, cows and country life . . . (Iowa City) is a little bitty old city, but it's still lively."
— Phil Chime

"Tom Davis is in a class of his own," Chime said. "He's a cool, calm guy with a heart of gold."

"(At Iowa) they don't want to recruit you because you're a basketball player," he continued, "they want to recruit you because you're a great person."

Davis also made a good impression on Chime's mother, Patricia, whom he met while recruiting Chime in Houston.

"Tom is a wonderful man," she said. "He has a wonderful sense of humor. He is very, very good. I know he will take care of Phil for me."

Chime, meanwhile, is busy thinking of how he can take care of the Hawkeyes. In his prep career, he has averaged more than 11 points and 9 rebounds per game.

His height and strength help Chime on the boards, and he sees his rebounding talents as being an asset to an Iowa team that will lose three key seniors after this year.

Michael Ingram (6-8), Matt Bulard (6-10) and Les Jepsen (7-0) are among the tallest players on the Iowa team, and will complete their last year of eligibility this season.

"I can contribute a lot, knowing Iowa is losing their post men," Chime said. "They will be in need of rebounding, and I like to come in and bang bodies around."

Chime plans to study communications or criminal law at Iowa, though his long-term dream is like that of nearly every college basketball player — to play in the NBA.

No. 8 Illini to test Fry's club

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Just like any other football game, both Iowa and Illinois have a lot to gain in their nationally-televised contest which starts at 2:35 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium.

But, both teams also have a lot to lose. Illinois is searching for their first league title in six years, while Iowa is trying to keep their string of consecutive bowl appearances alive, the chances of which they can greatly enhance with a win Saturday.

The eighth-ranked Fighting Illini, under the reigns of coach John Mackovic, comes into their showdown with the Hawkeyes boasting a 6-1 overall record, and are tied with Michigan at 4-0 in conference games. Illinois will clash with Michigan next week in a game that may decide the Big Ten championship.

But before they start thinking about the Wolverines, Illinois must think about the most recent obstacle standing in their way — Iowa.

And according to Mackovic, his team won't be looking past the Hawkeyes.

"There's no reason to be worried about anyone until it comes time to play them," Mackovic said about Michigan. "This week, it's Iowa. We have to be sharp this week and play a complete game. We can't have any letdowns."

Iowa hasn't played Illinois since the Illini downed the Hawkeyes 20-16 in 1986, and Mackovic sees that as being a possible factor in the game.

Iowa looks to remain undefeated

Ohio State and Northern Illinois are the only two things standing between the No. 4 Iowa field hockey team and an undefeated regular season.

The Hawkeyes, 15-0-2 overall and 7-0-1 in the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference, travel to Columbus, Ohio, to play the Buckeyes at 3 p.m. today and the Huskies at 1 p.m. Saturday.

"We just have to play relaxed and do the things we've been doing," senior defender Erin Walsh said. "We can't start thinking about all these records and things. We've gotten this far doing what we've done, so we don't want to change anything."

Iowa beat third-ranked Northwestern 2-0 Saturday at the Iowa Field Hockey Field and will undoubtedly move up in this week's NCAA rankings.

That would put the Hawkeyes in a position to host the NCAA Midwest Regional on the weekend of Nov. 11. Two wins would also assure Iowa of a first-round bye in the tournament.

"The bye isn't that important, but the home site is," Iowa coach Beth Beglin said. "Neither of these games are cakewalks, and we'll have to go out and play well."

Earlier this year, Iowa beat Ohio State 4-0, but needed a late goal in regulation before topping Northern Illinois 3-2 in overtime.

"It's not like we think we're going to slide by this weekend," senior forward Cherie Freddie said. "That was a great game with (Northern Illinois) and there's no reason to think it won't be tough this weekend."

The Hawkeyes have been to the NCAA tournament for the last seven seasons, taking the only women's national championship at Iowa in 1986.

Hawk swimmers, divers brace for big weekend

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

One week after opening its season with a 153-147 win over Minnesota, the Iowa women's swimming and diving team will host Brigham Young, Nebraska and Michigan in a quadrangular meet today and Saturday at the Field House Pool.

Tonight's competition begins with 1-meter diving at 5 p.m., with the swimming events scheduled to start at 6 p.m. Saturday's competition will begin at 9 a.m.

According to Iowa head swimming coach Peter Kennedy, this meet will provide good experience for the Hawkeyes since Nebraska was the Big Eight champion last season, Michigan finished the 1988-89 season in first place in the Big Ten and Brigham Young has been the WAC conference champion several times.

"It's a big weekend," Kennedy said. "It will be exciting. It's a good way to start the season, to let people know that we're out there."

The Hawkeyes' main objective for the meet, Kennedy said, will be consistency. He mostly like the team to perform the way they did last weekend against the Gophers.

"We had some people swim well last week," Kennedy said. "We're looking for improvements in certain areas, and we want to be competitive like last week."

Iowa is led by senior Becky Anderson in the sprints, senior Louise Keogh in the breaststroke, sophomore Katy Ktuff in diving, freshman Angi Todt in the distance freestyle and senior Katie Van Verst in the backstroke.

One of the top visiting swimmers at this meet will be Michigan senior Ann Colloton in the breaststroke.

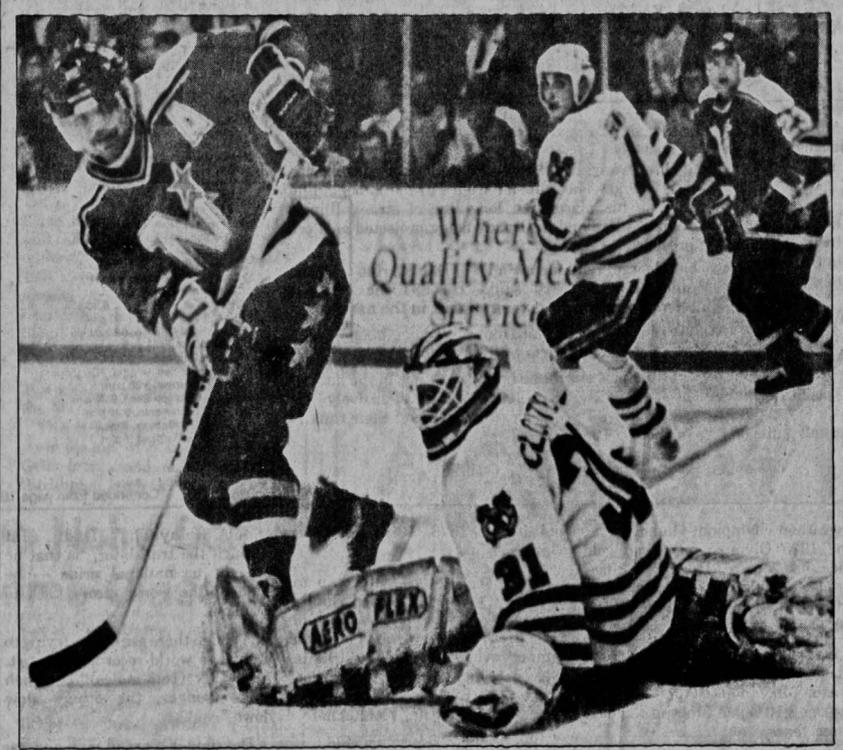

Colloton, who attended West High School in Iowa City, was the NCAA champion in the 200-yard breaststroke last year.

"Realistically we're trying to stay even with Nebraska and BYU," assistant swimming coach Jim Sheridan said. "Michigan is heads and tails above the rest. But we can be competitive with their depth people."

The diving competition will also be tough, according to Iowa diving coach Bob Rydze.

The Wolverines, who usually have Problems with Gator program spark reform efforts

Reports say Sloan spurred by indictment

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Norm Sloan had hoped to reach a settlement that would have allowed him to coach the Florida basketball team through the 1989-90 season, but agreed to leave this week after learning he might face a federal indictment, according to published reports.

Several newspapers on Thursday quoted unnamed sources as saying the threat of indictment played a role in Sloan's decision to retire Tuesday. He left behind a program that has been under NCAA investigation since June 30.

Meanwhile, state university system chancellor Charles Reed confirmed in an interview with the St. Petersburg Times that the tactic was one of the options considered by school officials in meetings with attorneys and Florida interim president Robert Bryan. However, he declined to get specific on the nature of any indictment.

"That was speculation we don't have to live with now," Reed said.

"It's a legal matter, and I'm not going to comment on it. I think we are on chapter seven of a 12-chapter book. With our own investigation and the NCAA investigation, we still have a long way to go to get to the end of the road."

At least three other newspapers, The Gainesville Sun, The Orlando Sentinel and the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale, also reported that Sloan and his lawyers were informed of the possibility of an indictment before the coach was asked to resign. It was suggested

Florida governor lobbies for agency

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Bob Martinez called Thursday for creation of a statewide athletic oversight office and other reforms and studies aimed at preventing a repeat of the University of Florida athletic scandals.

He warned that all state schools could be damaged.

"Nothing is more important to an academic institution than its reputation, its integrity, its ethical standards," Martinez told the state Board of Regents, saying his proposals would "help restore much of the public support and confidence that has been shaken by recent events."

He noted that while the much-publicized problems at Florida involve only one university, there are nine state universities (including Florida State, South Florida and Florida A&M) and "Florida appears in all their names."

Martinez said the image of all state universities could be tainted by the University of Florida scandals, which have seen the resignation of the football coach under pressure after admitted NCAA violations and the forced retirement of its basketball coach because of federal and NCAA investigations.

The governor said he was satisfied with efforts by the University of Florida to clean up its athletic problems, but he said the school's situation shows the need for "a preventive initiative" which calls for an Office of Athletics Standards and Practices within the state university system.

Big Red troubles

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mary Jane Visser testified Thursday she took confidential information on athletes from University of Nebraska-Lincoln files before she was fired as an adviser.

Visser, who claims she was fired because she was investigating student athletes' records, told a U.S. District Court jury she began keeping track of things she thought seemed irregular.

She said some NU players who participated in the 1988 Fiesta Bowl had flunked out of NU the previous semester.

Under questioning by university attorney David Buntain, Visser said she didn't know that NCAA rules allowed for such a situation but said she kept track of things that seemed "irregular."

When Buntain asked her to define "irregular" she said, "something that does not seem appropriate for a college."

Cities vie for expansion teams

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Denver and Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., are ahead of New Orleans in the competition for baseball's two expansion franchises, Kansas City Royals co-owner Avron Fogelman said.

"They are always at the meetings and they are the ones you hear the most of," Fogelman, a member of baseball's long-range planning committee, told a forum at Tulane.

The National League said earlier this year that it would announce a timetable for expansion by two teams after a new collective-bargaining agreement is reached with the Major League Baseball Players Association. The current agreement expires Dec. 31.

New Orleans is disliked by most baseball officials because its stadium, the Superdome, has artificial turf, a dome and a football team. Baseball officials desire stadiums with grass fields and baseball configurations.

Former AD wins court case

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A federal jury agreed Thursday that Bob Marcum was fired unjustly and awarded the former South Carolina athletic director nearly $250,000 in damages, a verdict Marcum said restores his reputation.

The nine-woman, three-man jury deliberated about five hours over two days before returning its verdict, ending the breach-of-contract lawsuit brought by Marcum against the university.

Marcum said it was the principle — not the $234,425 awarded him — that was uppermost in his mind.

"There's no doubt about that," Marcum said, fighting back tears. "The money's one thing. We've had a lot of expenses. But the most important thing is the verdict — it restores your reputation around the country."

Kentucky's Newton hospitalized

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — University of Kentucky athletics director C.M. Newton has been hospitalized because of an irregular heartbeat. The 59-year-old Newton was admitted to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington on Monday following an examination by a family physician. Newton was listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday and was undergoing diagnostic studies to determine the cause of the irregular heartbeat, according to Howard. He said Newton could possibly be released from Central Baptist today.

a strong diving corp, are not bringing their divers to this meet.

According to Rydze, Michigan diving coach Dick Kimball doesn't believe in having his divers compete before the middle of November.

"I don't think anything is wrong with that," Rydze said. "That's his philosophy. I feel personally that the season is too long the way it is."

"I'm disappointed that they're not coming," Rydze continued. "Ideally, it's not necessary who wins; it's just competing against other divers."

Brigham Young's top diver, Courtney Nelson, missed placing first in the 10-meter platform competition at the U.S. Diving Championships last summer by less than one point.

Nelson, Rydze said, is the "young, new rising star in American diving."

Ketoff and sophomore Kim Yager are the Hawkeyes' top divers.

"We only have three guys on our team that have ever been to Kinnick Stadium," Mackovic said. "We're playing our best football right now — we're solid both offensively and defensively."

Are they ever.

The Illinois defense is tops in the nation in defending the pass, giving up a mere 116.1 yards per game in the air. They also rank fourth in the country in both scoring defense and total defense, allowing just 12.6 points a game.

"We just wanted to be better than last year," Mackovic said. "We wanted our defense to be in the top one, two or three in the Big Ten."

But the Illinois coach added that Saturday's game with the Hawkeyes will not be cakewalk as far as his defense is concerned.

"Defensively, we have to play our best ball game of the year," he said, "because Iowa really plays well offensively."

Offensively, the Illini are led by junior quarterback Jeff George. The transfer from Purdue is beginning to take his place in a long line of strong Illinois signal-callers and is already being projected as a pro prospect.

"(George) reminds me a lot of Dan Marino with the quick release," Fry said. "He has the quickest release of any college quarterback in the nation."

Fry is equally as generous with compliments when it comes to the rest of the Illinois package.

"Illinois is one of the better ballclubs in the nation," he said. "They are very sound offensively and defensively. They're most deserving of their ranking in the top 10."

Densimo, the first Ethiopian to hold the world best since Bikila, who ran barefooted, called him "the greatest Ethiopian marathon runner ever," but he said Bikila was not his greatest inspiration because he ran too long before his time. Yifter, he said, was his hero.

"We are like family," he said.

While he admires Yifter, Densimo also has his followers. One is Tesfaye Dadi, 21, who also will run Sunday.

And one of his compatriots is Abebe Mekonnen, winner of the Boston Marathon in April, who has broken 2:10 seven times in the past three years.

Except for Yifter, though, the Ethiopians' Olympic success has been stalled in recent years because of political interference. Boycotts have kept the Ethiopians university, met on Monday with Sloan's lawyer, W. Dexter Douglass of Tallahassee, to discuss the situation. At the end of the meeting, Douglass said, the two university attorneys said Bryan wanted Sloan to retire.

Douglass said Sloan was given no guarantee against further action by federal authorities, but decided to leave after university officials refused to let him remain through this basketball season. Douglass refused to discuss what he knew about any federal indictment or his discussions with Moore.

Asked if he advised Sloan to retire rather than face a possible indictment, Douglass said: "If a prosecutor came to you and said, 'I will indict you, even if I don't have the evidence to indict, and it will cost you your good name to defend yourself,' what would you do?"

The indictment was to be sought based on documents mailed to the NCAA by Sloan declaring there had been no violations in his program, the Sun-Sentinel reported.

Sloan has repeatedly denied that NCAA violations occurred in his program, most recently in his Tuesday letter of resignation. He Perhaps only American Gladiators boasts a more formidable lineup than the DI OTL team.

Joe Levy. The leader. The gridiron mastermind. A man whose Michigan State lineage invokes exciting memories of the heroes of our generation's Spartan epics — the Tony Mandariches, Percy Snows, Lorenzo Whites and "Magic" Johnsons.

Kerry Anderson. The Big Guy. The ruffian. A man who resembles Kirk Gibson so closely that one can almost imagine the ill-fated hanging fastball coming slowly, ever so slowly, out of Dennis Eckersley's hand.

Erica Weiland. The sparkplug. The glue. The pure embodiment of everything that is Journalism.

And Bryce Miller. The dashing rogue. The ultimate ladies' man. A man whose stunning social presence and surging hormones make him highly sought after by seedy male dance troupes.

Together, maybe. But it would take up too much space, and who the hell knows what Henry Winkler is doing these days, anyway. Only the man behind all of those characters is hip enough to make that cut. We're talking about, of course, Garry Marshall.

Northwestern alumnus. Executive producer extraordinaire. The Man.

On The Line

What type of person, or persons, could crack that lineup?

Arthur Fonzarelli? Carmine "The Big Ragù" Raguso? Lenny and Squiggy?

Potsie Webber? Ralph Malph? Laverne DeFazio? Shirley Feeney? The entire Cunningham brood? Everyone who ever inhabited Inspiration Point? Hossenfeffer Incorporated?

No. Not alone.

Actually, it's a $25 gift certificate from Iowa City's Active Endeavors for our lucky winner. You probably won't be able to drink it and stumble around, but you won't get gas from it either.

For our top finishers, the usual pricey OTL T-Shirts.

Until next time.

Swimmers head to NU for low-key relays event

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Instead of opening its season at a dual meet as is customary, the Iowa men's swimming team will travel to Evanston, Ill., for the Northwestern Big Ten Relays Sunday.

According to head swimming coach Glenn Patton, the meet is simply lower-key than a dual meet.

"It's a fun meet," Patton said. "It's lower pressure than a dual meet, and it gets us ready for dual meets. It will also help in our relay selection for the season."

The meet begins at noon Sunday at Northwestern's new Olympic-size pool.

The events, which are scored 14-10-8-6-4-2-0, include the 3x100-yard relays in the butterfly, backstroke and breaststroke; 4x100 freestyle and individual medley relays; the 3x500 freestyle relay; and five other relays.

The only races that are actually part of collegiate lineups are the 400 medley relay, 400 free relay and 800 free relay.

Because of the unusual events, Iowa sophomore Artur Wojdat is a little skeptical about the meet.

"I'd rather stay home," Wojdat said. "It's an unusual meet; maybe it's purpose is just for fun. But I have a lot of work to do for school."

But senior Erik Bacon said that competing in the Big Ten Relays is an enjoyable way to start the season.

"It's more laid back," Bacon said. "It's competition, but it's not really scoring or anything. It's just relaxed."

Each swimmer may participate in an unlimited number of events and each team is allowed two relay squads per race. Only one squad is able to score, however.

The Hawkeyes will be looking to Wojdat and Bacon to help lead the team this year.

Both of them, along with 1988 all-American Tomasz Gawronski, are the top swimmers in Iowa's distance freestyle group. That squad is one of the few that returns strong this year.

The other events are lacking a little right now.

Artur Wojdat

The sprint groups, which have normally been quite strong at Iowa, graduated three swimmers, Dave Kohmetscher, Dan Dumford and Marc Long. They have also suffered misfortunes as the school's 100 free record-holder, Steve Grams, transferred to Southern California; UCLA transfer Mike Johnson isn't eligible to compete this season because of transfer rules; and top sprint recruit Scott Townsend has quit school to join the Marines.

The Hawkeyes officially started their season with their Black and Gold Intrasquad meet last night Burlington High School.

Hawks travel to Notre Dame for Golden Dome Classic

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

After dealing a 3-2 loss to 12th-ranked Minnesota Wednesday night, the Iowa volleyball team is ready to compete in the Golden Dome Classic at Notre Dame this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will take on Southwest Texas State today, while Notre Dame and Rhode Island will also play in the day's first-round action.

Volleyball

The consolation and final rounds will be held Saturday.

While Southwest Texas State only returned three starters from last year's 22-15 team, Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said she knows the Bobcats will be ready to play.

"I've coached against (Karen Chisum) before," Nelson said. "She's going to get her team fired up. And they have been playing some tough competition this season."

Nelson said that even though this weekend's competition is non-conference, the team can't take it lightly.

"If we do what we've been doing and won the conference, but had lost to Notre Dame, they would get a better game in the first round of the NCAA tournament," Nelson said. "Every single game is important."

This weekend provides a break from Big Ten action, but it's a break that the Hawkeyes don't need right now, Nelson said.

"We don't need to get on the road again," she said of her team that has traveled to Drake, Indiana, Ohio State, Iowa State, Michigan State, Michigan and Minnesota in the last month.

Nelson said that Iowa's 13-15, 10-15, 15-10, 15-9, 15-12 win over the Minnesota Gophers Wednesday at Williams Arena in Minneapolis came at just the right time for the Hawkeyes.

"We needed to get over a hump," Nelson said. "That's what we needed was a win like that. You get to a point where you have to know that you can beat a top team."

Before that match, Minnesota was tied with Ohio State for first place in the Big Ten, followed by Iowa and Illinois, which are tied for third.

With that win, the Hawkeyes brought their record to 24-6 overall and 9-3 in the league.

Henderson files for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Rickey Henderson filed for free agency Thursday, five days after leading the Oakland Athletics to their first World Series championship in 15 years.

Henderson, the Most Valuable Player of the American League playoffs, returned to Oakland on June 20, when the New York Yankees traded him back to his hometown. His agent, Richie Bry, said Thursday that Henderson's first choice was to re-sign with the Athletics, the team he began with in 1979.

Nine other players filed Thursday, increasing the number of free agents to 55. Also filing were Bob Brenly, Mike Krukow and Candy Maldonado of the National League champion San Francisco Giants; Bob Forsch, Greg Gross, and Dan Schatzeder of the Houston Astros; Frank DiPino of the St. Louis Cardinals; Sal Butera of the Toronto Blue Jays; and Don Aase of the New York Mets. A total of 116 players are eligible for free agency and they have until Nov. 13 to file.

Easy Goer highlights Breeders' field

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP)—Shug McGaughey will have two chances to win when he saddles the favored entry for the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Saturday, but he doesn't have the sure thing he had in the race last year.

Easy Goer was 3-10, but he finished second to Is It True on a muddy track at Churchill Downs. He still was voted the champion 2-year-old.

Saturday, Easy Goer can clinch Horse of the Year by beating Triple Crown rival Sunday Silence and six others in the $3 million Classic at Gulfstream Park. He is the 6-5 early favorite.

Easy Goer worked a half mile Thursday in 50 seconds, with the second quarter in 24.

While the trainer says he will win the 1 1/4-mile Classic, he thinks he could win the $1 million Juvenile with either Adjudicating or Rhythm, the Ogden Mills Phipps-owned entry that is a mild 5-2 early favorite.

Adjudicating won the seven-furlong Cowdin on Sept. 30 and the one-mile Champagne on Oct. 14 at Belmont Park. Rhythm, who has won half of his four starts, finished second in the Champagne.

McGaughey, however, said "I think you could put their names in a hat, draw one of them and you'd have the winner."

Ron McAnally, who will saddle two colts in the 12-horse Juvenile at 1 1-16 miles, agrees that "the race is probably wide open."

Trainer D. Wayne Lukas thinks he knows who the horse to beat is in the 1 1-16-mile race — his own Grand Canyon, the second pick at 4-1.

McAnally, who trains Single Dawn, who is the third choice at 5-1, disagrees even if his colt did finish second to Grand Canyon in the 1 1-16-mile Norfolk on Oct. 15 at Hollywood Park.

"To me, he's not the horse to beat," McAnally said. "He was staggering in the stretch (of the Norfolk)."

"If he wins, I don't think the calibre of the 2-year-olds here is that exciting."

Missing from the Juvenile are the highly regarded Summer Squall and Red Ransom. Both are recovering from injuries.

As for Single Dawn, McAnally said, "Off his last two races, I give him a shot. He's a big, long-striding colt. Hopefully, he'll be in the clear this time."

Single Dawn, who won one of his first two starts, finished third in the one-mile Del Mar Futurity before his runner-up finish in the Norfolk.

McAnally also will have English-bred Balla Cove, but because of different ownership that colt will not run an entry with Single Dawn.

It will be the U.S. debut for Balla Cove, who had two wins, a second and a third in six starts in England.

Another Juvenile starter noted by McGaughey is Slavic, the 6-2 third choice who on Oct. 13 won the 1 1-16-mile Breeders Futurity at Keeneland by seven lengths for his second victory in five starts.

Lukas has won three of the previous five Juveniles. His winners were Capote, 1986, Success Express, 1987, and Is It True in 1988.

Reading the line

Curtis Strange reads the putting line Thursday during the opening round of the Four Tours World Championship of Golf on the Yomiuri Country Club Course, west of Tokyo, Japan. Strange shot the best score of the day, 65, in gusty winds against competition from the U.S., Europe, Australia-New Zealand and Japan.

Retirement party starts after lengthy farewell

NEW YORK (AP) — After 223 extra days on the job while owners feuded over a successor, Pete Rozelle said farewell as NFL commissioner Thursday and prepared to head off into the California sunset where he will spend his retirement.

"I just want to say that after seven months of waiting, I feel like a combination of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Willie Shoemaker and Sarah Bernhardt," Rozelle said in a national telephone conference call.

"I've had more farewell parties and farewell press conferences than I can remember."

The 63-year-old Rozelle shocked the sports world when he announced his retirement last March 22. He has been living in a New York hotel since Aug. 1, when his wife, Carrie, left for their retirement home in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., near San Diego.

Rozelle will remain in New York until just before Thanksgiving, although he will officially turn over his job to Paul Tagliabue at midnight Saturday after saying farewell to the office staff on Friday.

It's a quick turnover from Rozelle to Tagliabue, who was elected just last Thursday, finally breaking a deadlock with New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks that had held since July 6, when a group of so-called "new guard" owners blocked what appeared to be Finks' almost certain election. That's largely due to Tagliabue's 20 years of experience as one of the NFL's top lawyers and one of Rozelle's top advisers.

Rozelle said he was aware that hard feelings remained among the owners from that split. But he said he didn't think it would impede league business under Tagliabue because owners split along different lines on different issues.

Nor does he believe that Tagliabue, who has worked with all the owners at various times, will be hindered by his identification with the insurgents who blocked Finks.

Rozelle took a subtle slap at new owners like New England's Victor Kiam and Seattle's Kenneth Behring, who have suggested that the NFL needs better marketing.

"I think a lot of owners come into the league having run their own businesses and immediately see new things they think they can do," he said.

"I just want to say that after seven months of waiting, I feel like a combination of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Willie Shoemaker and Sarah Bernhardt."
— Pete Rozelle

"Then after a couple of years you see they're not valid, that football is different. You have to recognize that you're not totally independent, that you have just a 1-28th say of a large business. It's a shakedown period and it's sometimes tough for them to get ahead."

But if he was subtly critical of his supporters, Rozelle was overwhelmingly positive about Tagliabue.

"I don't think the owners have any real idea of what a great commissioner they're getting in Paul Tagliabue," Rozelle said. "There couldn't be anyone better trained to be a commissioner in sports than Paul Tagliabue is coming in."

Nor does Rozelle think that Tagliabue will be bound to any one faction.

"If I was asked to give him advice, I'd say, 'Be patient and be your own man,'" Rozelle said. "But I don't think that's relevant because he's going to be his own man."

Baby Bruce Willis argument for or against power of choice

Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

I heard there was a new film in which a baby Bruce Willis gets carried off and mauled by wild dingoes. I was misinformed — he gets carried off by John Travolta. I'm not sure which is worse.

So suss this one out for me, all you abortion activists: Is "Look Who's Talking" pro-life or pro-choice? The film depicts a fetus that thinks and talks while still in the womb, which would support the life-begins-at-conception theory favored by the pro-lifers (or as Monty Python put it, "You're a Catholic the moment Dad came"). But the fetus in question has the mentality and voice of Bruce Willis, and if you knew your unborn child was going to turn out to be a balding actor-cum-blues singer you'd be at the abortion clinic so fast it'd make the pickets spin — kind of like Geena Davis in "The Fly" when she thought her child might be a maggot.

"Look Who's Talking" is perfect for its top box-office status: empty and inane; a one-joke concept wringing dry all possible burp, pee and poop humor from the demon-spawned Willis-child (actually George Segal-spawned, meaning the child would have a genetic disposition toward playing the banjo on "The Tonight Show" — waitamminute, Willis did play the harmonica on "Saturday Night Live," does that count?). Personally I was hoping for a graphic circumcision scene, but no such luck.

John Travolta as the perfect father? Kirstie Alley as the perfect mother? Bruce Willis as a food-throwing, diaper-fouling child? Well, one out of three... And what the hell is all this talk about the resurrection of John Travolta's career? Really, you guys are taking this Al Pacino-Marlon Brando-'70s-actors revival too far. Travolta's simian stream-of-semi-consciousness acting style doesn't run

Dancers present class solo projects

Krista Hiser
The Daily Iowan

Tonight the University public will have a chance to see the hard-earned results of the dance department's sweat, when Susan Dickson's composition students unveil a series of narrative and dramatic solos. The semester project will be presented, free of charge, at 8 p.m. in the Space/Place, an experimental theater on the second floor of North Hall. Performers need an audience, so Dickson urges the public to "come and take your chances."

The composition concert is the first time any choreographers have had the chance to see their works produced, albeit on a small scale. The concert is a result of class assignments, and according to Dickson, the pieces are "not highly polished, but well rehearsed."

Movies

any deeper now than it did in "Two of a Kind." The only difference is he's learned how to act silly, which makes him a talentless goof-ball as opposed to a talentless sex symbol.

But "Look Who's Talking" is a runaway box-office hit, meaning it'll plunge us right back into the Baby-Movie Hell-pit we've only just crawled out from after "Three Men and A Cradle." And of course there'll be the inevitable sequel: "Look Who's Going Through Puberty!" I just want to thank all of you for making "Look Who's Talking" such a hit, and believe me, Hollywood does too, as soon as they stop laughing at you. It warms the heart of studio heads everytime some empty, unoriginal, unfunny, easily and cheaply cranked out piece of theater fodder like this rakes in the big bucks — it makes their jobs so much easier.

Feffer wins National Playwriting Contest

The Daily Iowan

Steve Feffer, a student in the UI Playwrights' Workshop, has won the National Playwriting Contest sponsored by the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. Feffer's winning entry was a one-act play, "The Wizards of Quiz."

The award includes a cash prize and a production of the play on the Eau Claire campus in late spring or early fall. "The Wizards of Quiz," about the TV quiz show scandals of the late 1950s, was written in the UI decudrama class taught by Robert Hedley, director of the Playwrights' Workshop. The play was presented in a reading last spring at the Iowa Playwrights' Festival.

Feffer's play "Marilyn and Marc" was produced by the UI Theatres as the UI's 1989-90 entry in the American College Theatre Festival competition.

Fill it to the rim with Pepsi

Would you like some cream with your coffee? I'm not drinking coffee; this is America's new favorite morning drink, Pepsi AM.

Yes, the ad campaign has begun. Those primitive days of the coffee and donuts breakfast are over. Pepsi wants to convince the public that soda pop isn't just a snack drink anymore, but it also goes with breakfast. It's a strange time in advertising when products begin acting like jealous, overbearing lovers who can't tolerate being ignored. Pepsi isn't satisfied with being a refreshing between-meals snack drink; they want the public to consume their portable battery acid morning, noon and night.

Just how far will this trend in advertising gimmickery go? It's difficult to predict, but I wouldn't be surprised if we don't see a commercial with Robert Mitchum in bed, turning off his alarm clock and reaching for his favorite bottle of scotch. "Before I get out of bed, I get out of my head with Johnny Walker AM," he proudly states. Or maybe Brenda Vaccaro will pitch tampons with the line, "They're not just for that time, they're for all time."

This aggressive advertising has also seen commercials for TV shows, not only appear on other networks, but also in movie theaters. Turnabout is fair play, I suppose, but I wonder how many people leave the theater immediately to watch the advertised program — probably the same people who rush to the concession stand when the hot dog jumps into the bun in the cartoon food circus.

It is not just TV advertising that is overstepping its boundaries; Coca-Cola and McDonalds now merchandise their own clothes, probably made out of the same toxic materials they use in their other products. McDonalds, not content to sell its wares in K Mart or J.C. Penny, opened its own clothing stores. Should I buy a new suit from Armani or wait and see what the fall line looks like at McDonalds? They can't even make quality food, will anyone believe they can make quality clothing? Probably.

Can't you envision a Rugmaster-like commercial with a smart business man in his new McSuit and McTie and he drops a McRib sandwich on it. No problem, the McSuit is stain resistant, and the McRib is still in one piece, fake bone and gristle and all. The only other food I know with fake bone I usually put in a bowl for my dog.

So what does all of this have to do with Pepsi AM? Nothing more than that the prevalent style of advertising shows complete contempt for the consumer; they know that the public knows it's just a con game, but they convince the public to buy anyway. So next time you walk into the office in your McSuit, hold your head high and demand that the coffee pot be replaced by a Pepsi AM machine.

I.C. artists get involved in 'Help Shozo'

Mail art arises, giving artists a new expression

Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

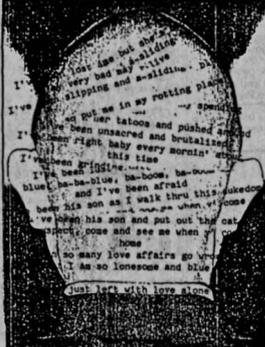

"There's a whole lot of shaking going on outside the mainstream world of art," according to Finnish poet and mail artist Arto Kytöhonka.

For the next month, Kytöhonka and the Iowa City Public Library are giving aspiring artists a unique chance to get involved in mail art through Kytöhonka's "Help Shozo."

"Mail art is not really an underground movement, but it is definitely out of the mainstream, out of the holy canon," Kytöhonka said. "It's a very wild and unpredictable movement in the art world, but you can certainly find it in contemporary books of art history."

Mail art begins with anything that can fit into an envelope. For this exhibition, which he describes as "visiopoetical," Kytöhonka (as well as many other artists around the world) received photocopies of the back of Shozo Shimamoto's bald head. Shimamoto helped found mail art in the 1950s. Kytöhonka used a photocopier to manipulate the images of Shozo's head in various ways.

Kytöhonka hopes those who visit his exhibition at the public library will also help Shozo by taking one of the blank copies of Shozo's head provided in a box next to the exhibit. "Help yourself!" the copies instruct. "Feel free to make copies of Shozo's hairless head and put your own favorite filling in the copies." Kytöhonka instructs participants to send their work to the Museum of Modern Art in Finland or to Shozo himself in Japan. The instructions promise that you'll get mail in return.

"Mail art is a very democratic art movement, so a public library is just the right place to have an exhibition," said Kytöhonka. "The holy canon of what is good art is terrible. In mail art you don't have to worry about art juries, critics or bureaucrats. Everyone can take part in this. It's nice to be in a community where you are really talking about art, and not about names."

The "seven unprinciples of mail art" include no juries, no galleries, some libraries, no money, no return and documentation to all participants. "You never get what you send back, but you will get a documentation of how it is used," Kytöhonka said. One mail artist is currently asking for people to send him two nails. He will work on one and send it back to the contributor, while he will use the other nail in a sculpture.

Part of the popularity of mail art among "the anonymous crowd" may be that it deals with everyday themes. One such theme is the face theme. "Everyone likes to draw mustaches on pictures of faces. There is something human about that," Kytöhonka said. "There is a long history of defacing the Mona Lisa. To experiment with the face, to play with the face — there is a deep philosophy there."

More than anything, Kytöhonka hopes his exhibit raises questions in the minds of the people who go see "Help Shozo." "I'm happy if someone asks, 'is this art, too?' or just thinks it is funny," he said. "A simple question is better than 1,000 good answers."

Although Kytöhonka is an accomplished artist, art is not his only vocation; he is at the UI to participate in this semester's International Writing Program. "I have to do something else besides sleeping and writing, because I'm a good Calvinist. This (International Writing) program gives you power and courage to experiment," said Kytöhonka.

On the literary side of things, Kytöhonka will be giving a poetry reading this Sunday at 7 p.m. at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. He is the author of five poetry collections, many mail poems and computer-aided poems. "What I'm reading Sunday handles the question of visual arts, too," said Kytöhonka.

Bernstein steps down from Random House

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who built Random House into an international publishing power is stepping down unexpectedly after 23 years as head of the nation's largest publisher of general interest books.

Robert Bernstein joined Random House in 1957 and is just the second president in the company's 64-year history. He succeeded Random House's founder, Bennett Cerf, as president in 1966.

The 66-year-old Bernstein, who three years ago asserted, "I want to be a publisher until I'm carried out," said Wednesday his decision to resign evolved out of talks with S.I. Newhouse Jr., chairman of Advance Publications Inc., which owns Random House Inc.

"There was no serious disagreement between Si and myself. It's not as though there was some incident. It just seemed the right thing to do," Bernstein said.

A successor will be announced soon, said William Loved, a spokesman for Random House.

Bernstein plans to continue his work in the international human rights movement, Loved said. Bernstein is the founder and chairman of the Fund for Free Expression and the Human Rights Watch, which monitors human rights in the Soviet Union, Asia, the Americas, Africa and the Middle East.

He brought to Random House the writings of such prominent dissidents as Andrei Sakharov, Yelena Bonner and Natan Scharansky, Loved said.

Bernstein also was a force in building Random House's juvenile department, Loved said.

He dealt with some of the nation's most prominent writers: John

During Bernstein's tenure as head of the company, annual sales volume increased to $800 million this year from $40 million.

The vast Newhouse publishing empire includes 26 daily newspapers, Newhouse Broadcasting, The New Yorker, Details, Parade and Condé Nast Publications. Condé Nast publishes magazines such as Vogue, Glamour, Vanity Fair and GQ.

Random House's divisions and imprints include Alfred A. Knopf, Crown Books, Pantheon Books, Villard, Vintage, Fodor Travel Guides, Times Books, Harmony Books and four British houses, known as the Random Century Group.

THE DAILY IOWAN ¹⁶ PREGAME

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1989

INSIDE

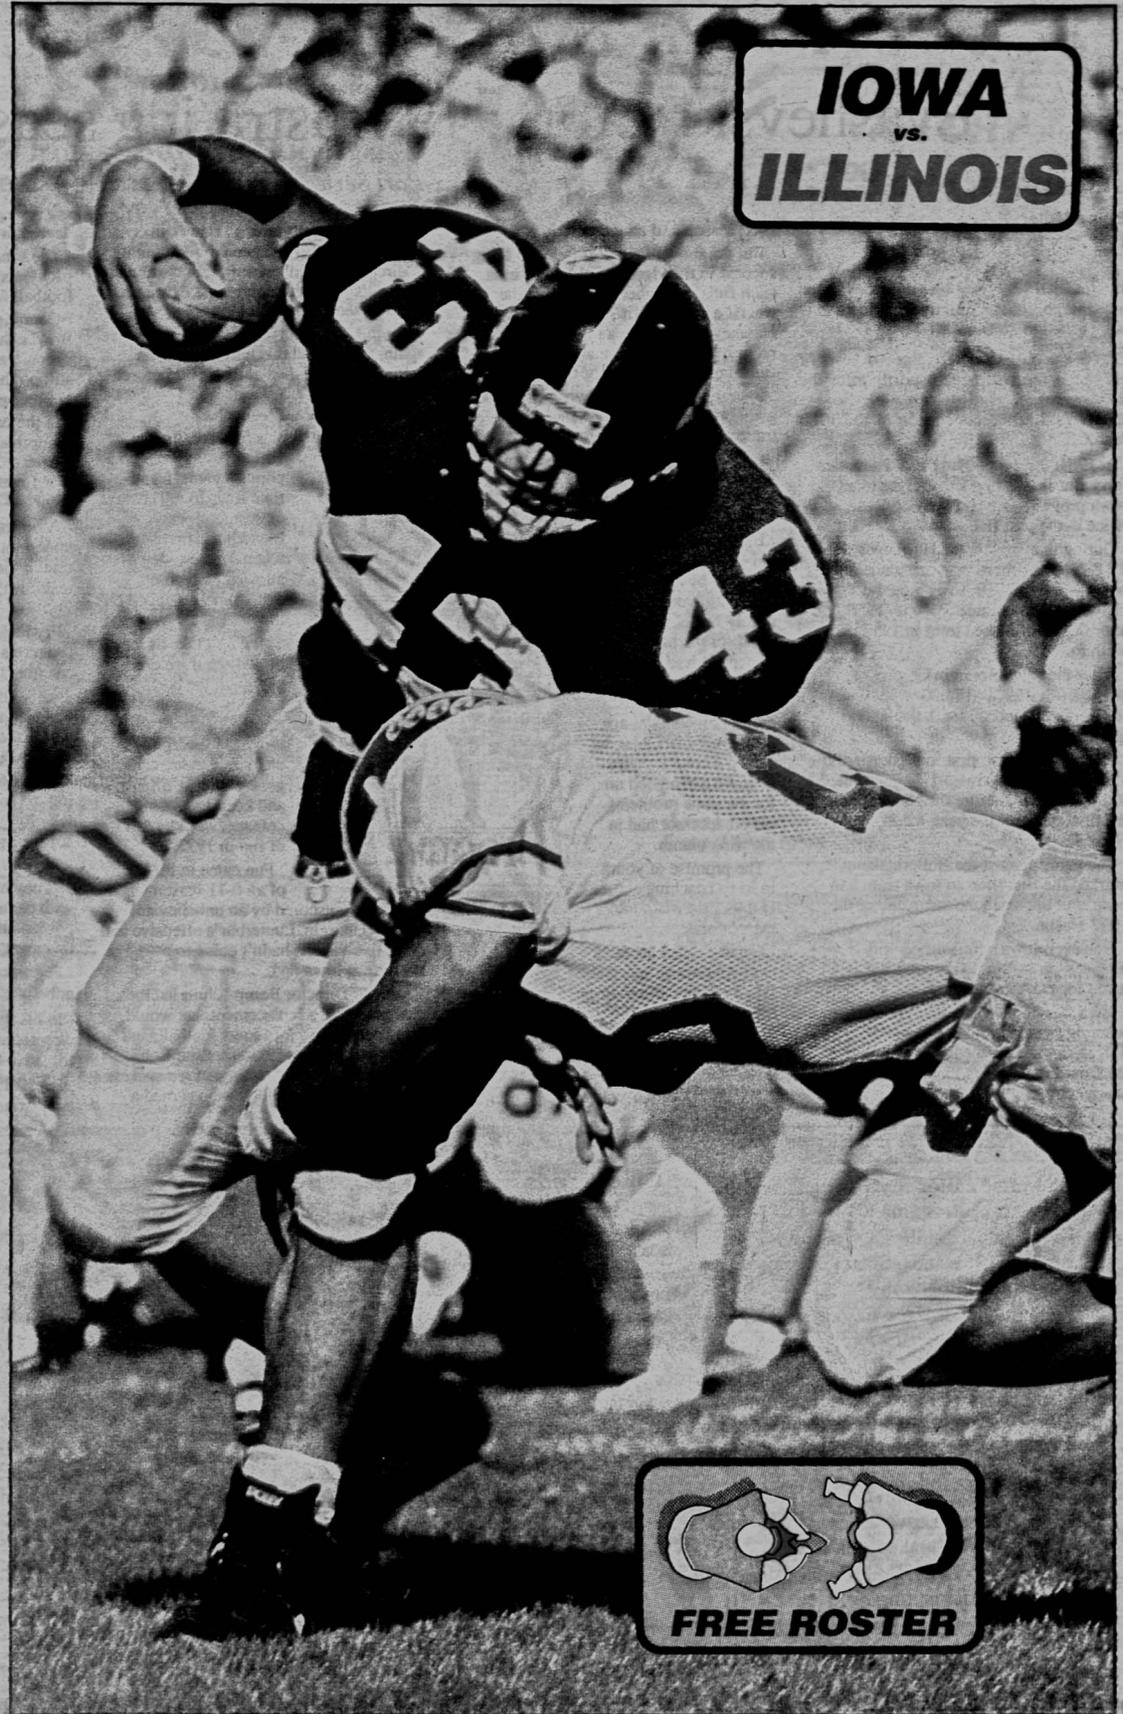

2 Sports Editor Bryce Miller continues his series on the first 100 years of Iowa football. Things haven't always been rosy for the Hawkeyes. This installment chronicles 20 non-winning seasons prior to the 1980s.

4 One of the biggest impact players on the 1989 Iowa football team is defensive lineman Jim Johnson. The Forest City, Iowa, native is Iowa's 3rd leading tackler & is coming off the best game of his career against Northwestern.

6 In a game that usually calls for loads of aggression and plenty of attitude, George Hawthorne is a surprisingly docile anchor to the Iowa offensive line. And he doesn't mind the lack of recognition.

12 Ed Gochenour is waiting for his chance behind Iowa linebacking stars Brad Quast and Melvin Foster. The theory of making the most of your chances is one that Gochenour has chosen to prescribe to and he's hoping to see dividends.

100 Years of Hawkeye Football

Evashevski to Fry: 19 frustrating seasons

Fifth of a Six-Part Series

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Nineteen years is a long time to wait for a winner, but that's exactly what Iowa fans were asked to do from 1962 until 1981.

One of the darkest eras in the 100 years of Hawkeye football began shortly after the departure of nine-year coach Forest Evashevski at the conclusion of the 1960 season.

In 1961, long-time Evashevski assistant Jerry Burns was given the reigns to an Iowa program that had won the Rose Bowl twice in the past five years.

During that stretch, the Hawkeyes were 37-8-2, losing more than one game only once — 5-4 in 1959. Iowa won the Big Ten championship in three seasons (1956, '58 and '60) and finished third in 1957 and sixth in 1959.

After the Iowa Board in Control of Athletics drafted a $15,000-a-year salary for Burns on Dec. 1, 1960, the tables quickly turned.

After winning the first four games of the 1961 season, a 9-0 loss to Purdue started a four-game skid, before the Hawkeyes took the final game of the year, 42-21 over Notre Dame.

The game against the Boilermakers marked the first time an Iowa team had been shut out since the last game of the 1952 season.

However, Iowa still finished with a winning season — but that wouldn't happen again for two decades.

Iowa was hot and cold in 1962, never winning two contests in a row, finishing 4-5. Despite the two mediocre campaigns, the Board renewed faith in Burns by announcing a contract extension after the 1962 season and an increase in pay.

But the show of support failed to bring success to the football field. No Burns team finished higher than fifth in the league and in his final season, 1965, the Hawkeyes limped to a miserable 1-9 record, losing all five games at home and finishing at the bottom of the Big Ten.

Eventhough the former years weren't great, Iowa had not experienced such frustration, particularly during the Burns era.

In 1963, the Hawkeyes had a 10-quarter stretch where they failed to score a touchdown.

Burns, only 33-years-old in 1961, was to be replaced by another comparatively young coach in Ray Nagel. When hired for the head position at Utah in 1958, he was the youngest Division I coach at a major university at age 30. Seven years later, he signed a contract with Iowa — and signed on for the same problems his predecessor had in the win column.

The promise of youth in Iowa coaching certainly didn't translate into a revitalization on the gridiron.

Nagel opened his tenure with a 31-20 win over Arizona at home; then, his team went into a tailspin. They dropped the next five ball games, squeezing by Indiana 20-19, then losing the remaining games for a 2-8 record.

The initiation was complete. Iowa finished 1-8-1, 5-5, 5-5 and 3-6-1 in the rest of Nagel's term as Hawkeye coach. Evashevski, who had been the Iowa athletic director since departing from the coaching ranks in 1960, supported a Board proposal to send Nagel packing.

But the change in leadership would, once again, fail — and this time, the results were even more dismal than ever before. The name, Frank X. Lauterbur. The three-year record, 4-28-1 — ouch.

In 1973, Lauterbur's final season, the Hawkeyes gave up 36.5 points a game, an all-time Iowa low. The next closest total was Lauterbur's first year, when the Iowa defense allowed 35.5 points every time it stepped on the field.

"It won't take us long to find out if we can play with the best," Lauterbur said before the 1973 season. "We're looking forward to the challenge. If we can generate some offense and keep improving on defense, we'll have a lot of fun in 1973."

Fun came in the form of an 0-11 season when Iowa was outscored by an unbelievable 401-140 margin. Lauterbur's offensive and defensive visions hadn't come to pass, but his time at Iowa had.

Athletic Director Bump Elliott led the charge to find a replacement that would bring success back to Iowa football, and the search ended with Iowa alum Bob Commings. The quest for gridiron success was placed on a graduate who earned a degree in 1960, Evashevski's final season. The sand in the hourglass had certainly trickled slowly since those days for Iowa football fans.

Commings was a guard on the 1956 Rose Bowl championship team, so Hawkeye supporters hoped the taste of success was still on the tongue of the former Iowa player.

In the two seasons following the Lauterbur departure, Commings compiled a 6-16 record. In 1976 and '77, Iowa finished with identical 5-6 marks. Commings went 2-9 in 1978.

After that season, the Board voted nearly unanimously to fire Commings and start a search for another football coach. The result was a fiery Texan named Hayden Fry.

Fry had a reputation for turning crippled programs around, and Iowa fell into that category.

At Southern Methodist (SMU) and North Texas State, the tables had been turned, and Fry was willing to take a chance with the Hawkeyes.

"I was fascinated," Fry said of considering the Iowa job. "I couldn't understand why Iowa couldn't win with all the fan support, great academics and the class program.

"They had all the ingredients. I sat down with the administration and made a seven-point plan that I thought was necessary for this team to win."

Fry wouldn't elaborate on the points, but nobody cared.

In his third season, Iowa had its first winning record in 20 years and a Rose Bowl trip, at 8-4 in 1981.

Fry had sharpened his spurs and put another notch on his gun.

Transfer affects quarterback off field

Scott Gregory
Special to The Daily Iowan

Illinois' Jeff George isn't as welcome in West Lafayette, Ind., as he used to be.

In 1986, George was considered to be a fixture at quarterback for Purdue. But when Leon Burnett resigned as Boilermakers' coach, and was replaced by Fred Akers, the freshman decided it was time to transfer.

"You choose a college mainly because of a coach," George said.

George chose to come to Illinois after the 1986 season. In order to join the Illini, George had to sit out the following year and, under Big Ten rules, gave up his scholarship.

George made his only return to Purdue's Ross-Ade Stadium as a player Oct. 14 when the Illini beat the Boilermakers 14-2. The Illini quarterback, playing with a sprained right knee, completed 24 of 42 passes in the game for 254 yards.

"It's kind of my second home field," said George, who is nicknamed "The Sheriff" because of his confidence and shotgun-like arm.

"I still have a few friends there ... not many ... but a few," he said.

Although George said the Purdue players and coaches don't hold any bitter feelings toward him for transferring, some of the fans and press have long memories.

The year George sat out, he made the trip to West Lafayette for the Illinois-Purdue game. The minute he arrived in town with his parents, George was greeted by the locals.

"We parked in a fraternity, and when we got out, the whole fraternity mooned us," the Illini quarterback said. "I don't know how they knew I was there."

"It's something you can expect, but maybe not that drastic."

Merchants in West Lafayette found a way to market the jerseys bearing No. 12, George's number at Purdue.

"They had the jersey number 12 with a Ghostbusters slash through it," George said. "You'd have to sell them somehow. You don't want to be stuck with all those number 12s."

The Indianapolis native, who now wears No. 11 for Illinois, also showed up for last year's Illini basketball game against the Boilermakers in West Lafayette. He wore his Illinois letter jacket, much to the chagrin of many Purdue faithful.

"I'm proud of that (jacket), I don't really care,"

George said. "I'm going to let them think what they want to think."

George said he didn't mind being verbally abused once again this year.

"That just makes me play better," George said. "You hear all the boos, and that just gets you pumped up."

Johnson puts pop in Hawkeye defense

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

As the 1989 football season evolves, so does the Iowa defense.

Especially on the line, where a corps of Hawkeyes are starting to make names for themselves by carrying on the tradition of hard-nosed Iowa defenses of the past.

In fact, Iowa coach Hayden Fry said his defensive front three has "become a real force" for the Hawkeyes — and tackle Jim Johnson has been a major reason why.

Johnson is currently leading the conference in quarterback sacks with seven for (-43) yards and is third in tackles for loss behind Illinois noseguard Moe Gardner and teammate Matt Ruhland.

He is also the third-leading tackler for the Hawkeyes, trailing only linebackers Melvin Foster and Brad Quast, with 72 total stops, and stands ninth on the Big Ten tackle list.

The 6-foot-3, 270-pounder has already started to taste the fruits of his labor by being named Midwest Defensive Player of the Week by the Associated Press for his efforts in Iowa's 31-21 win over Iowa State Sept. 23.

"I knew I was being considered (for player of the week), but I never thought I'd get it," Johnson said. "A couple days after the Iowa State game, one of the coaches came up to me and said, 'Congratulations,' and I didn't know what he meant. Then I realized that I had won the honor."

In Saturday's game with Northwestern, Johnson wreaked havoc on the Wildcat offense while, at the same time, adding to his already impressive statistics.

He sacked Northwestern quarterback Tim O'Brien three times and registered five tackles for losses of 33 yards. The number of stops equaled an Iowa game record set previously by Brad Webb, Tony Wancket and Jeff Drost.

Johnson said it was his best game he's had as a Hawkeye. "I was pretty happy with (my performance)," Johnson said. "Looking at the films, I graded out pretty high. I'd say it was probably my best game."

The 22-year old junior from Forest City, Iowa, started in Iowa's first nine games last season before suffering a knee injury. He was credited with 64 tackles in 10 games, including eight stops for loss, which ranked him fourth on the squad.

He also experienced some success as a redshirt freshman when he had two tackles for loss against Iowa State and five total stops.

But despite steady improvement in the past and his accomplishments this season, Johnson considers himself in the mold of a "non-athlete."

Coming out of high school, neither Johnson or the other two starting defensive linemen, Jeff Koeppel and Ruhland, were major recruits. Johnson was a third team all-state and first team all-conference selection as well as team captain for Forest City.

"None of us were recruited real heavily — probably Jeff the most by major universities," Johnson said. "In high school, I was a third-team offensive guard. I was always a defensive player."

"Most of the credit for our success has to do with Coach Mac (defensive line coach Dan McCarney). He's taken a lot of people I guess you can call non-athletes and turned them into good players. Coach Mac taught us everything we know."

Fry agrees that the defensive line play is one of the most pleasant surprises on his '89 team. But he says he and the rest of the coaching staff knew Johnson would be a strong link in Iowa's defensive chain.

"We knew Jimmy Johnson was a heckuva player," Fry said, "but we just didn't know how he'd come back off of major surgery to his knee. He's a big-play guy."

With Johnson as its anchor, Fry also attests that this year's front three may be one of Iowa's best overall units in his 11-year tenure as Hawkeye coach.

"When those three guys are in the ball game, they're three of the better package deals we've ever had here at Iowa," he said. "They've done a super job."

"I don't know when one ball club, from a defensive standpoint, has had two guys in the top four in sacks and tackles for losses that we have in Johnson and Ruhland. That's extremely unusual."

While preparing for Saturday's game with Illinois, the Hawkeye defense will be focused on stopping junior quarterback Jeff George. George has thrown for 1,371 yards and 10 touchdowns in leading the Fighting Illini to a 6-1 overall record and a 4-0 mark in the Big Ten.

George has been getting rave reviews from Fry, who says the Illinois signal-caller reminds him of Miami Dolphins' star Dan Marino.

"George probably releases the ball quicker than any quarterback in the country," Fry said. That makes him extremely difficult to get to."

However, George isn't what you would call mobile, and has been thrown for 142 yards in losses by opposing defenses ... and Johnson is definitely taking that into consideration.

"Hopefully we'll have great coverage from our (defensive backs) like we had last game and that will allow us to get some pressure up front," Johnson said. "It could be a good opportunity for us to get some sacks because George isn't that great of a scrambler."

Chance for limelight may be approaching for unheralded Hawkeye linebacker

Iowa defensive end Ed Gochenour joins teammates Leroy Smith (8) and Jeff Nelson (93) in blocking Northwestern Wildcats Bob Christian (34) and Stan Holsen (77).

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye linebacker Ed Gochenour is just waiting for a chance to prove himself.

"If I ever got my chance, I'd hope that I could make it," Gochenour said. "Like this week, (the game's) on ABC-TV. If (Melvin Foster or Brad Quast) happened to go down, I might be in there. I just have to make the most of it; I just have to wait for my chance. I can't sit there and regret coming here and have any doubts about my ability. I just have to wait for my chance and when it comes, I just have to make the most of it."

Gochenour (pronounced GO-kin-hour) may not be a name that is familiar to many people.

A transfer from Morningside College in Sioux City in 1987, the 6-foot-0, 232-pound backup for Iowa linebackers Foster and Quast has played in only three games this season, recording one unassisted and five assisted tackles.

But the senior from Sioux City knows he could do the job if he got in the game.

And Coach Hayden Fry said he believes it, too.

"Ed Gochenour and John Derby are our first substitutes for the linebackers," Fry said. "If Melvin Foster or Brad Quast goes down, then either Derby or Gochenour will go in and play."

"And Ed is a tremendous tackler. Last week against Northwestern, he had three, four tackles that were just outstanding."

Gochenour transferred to Iowa after playing Division II football at Morningside for two years.

Deciding to transfer was a big decision for Gochenour; had he stayed in Sioux City, he would have seen more playing time than he currently does.

But even if he doesn't have much opportunity to show it, Gochenour is a quality player, according to someone who's seen him in extensive action.

"He's done a good job," Iowa graduate assistant Jim Leavitt, who was the head coach at Morningside when Gochenour played there, said. "He's moved his way up to second team. He wouldn't be there if he couldn't do it."

Leavitt also said that while he would have like to have had Gochenour play at Morningside for the full four years, he understood why the linebacker wanted to transfer.

"I didn't feel bad," Leavitt said. "I played Division I at the University of Missouri, so I understand. He wanted to have a chance to be on one of the top teams in the nation ... That just happens at smaller schools."

"I played pretty much my freshman year, and I was a starting linebacker my sophomore year," Gochenour said. "I could have played and made all-conference ... And

"Here at Iowa, you're part of a great tradition. It's just being part of things that's really exciting. If you're part of the Hawkeyes, you're part of the team, and you're just as important as everybody else."

played every Saturday instead of sitting behind Brad Quast and Melvin Fosters and such like that. But that was a small-time college, a small-time league and stuff. Here, everything's first-class; we're flying every place, and we're going to bowl games and everything.

"So I've given up some minutes on the playing field, but I've gained a lot more of the field and stuff like that. It's hard, I don't think any football player wants to sit on the bench, but I try to balance it out and make myself feel as good about it as I can. I don't have any regrets or anything like that."

Playing at a Division I school was always an ambition of Gochenour's, but right after high school, having his education paid for was more important than which school he attended.

"I didn't think about playing for anybody really," he said. "When I came out of high school, I just went to where I was offered the most money. To me it didn't matter what school as long as I was able to play football and get an education at the same time. I could have gone to Timbuktu."

Gochenour also said that he felt he wasn't physically ready to play football in the first division.

"Coming out of high school, I wasn't big enough or strong enough and supposedly didn't have credentials," Gochenour said. "... So I went to Morningside College because they gave me a scholarship. But two years down the road I decided I'd try to walk on down here, and it worked out pretty good."

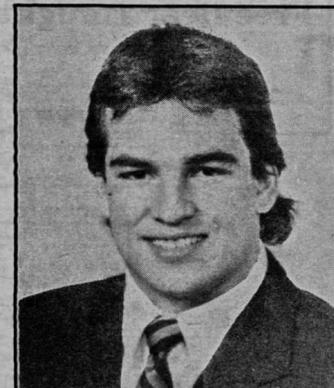

In order to be eligible at Iowa, Gochenour was red-shirted for the 1987 season. But in 1988, he totalled eight solo and 10 assisted tackles and earned an Iowa scholarship.

Since becoming a Hawkeye, Gochenour has not seen a lot of playing time. According to him, that is often frustrating, but he respects the playing abilities of Foster and Quast.

"That really comes in play on Sunday when we're watching film of a Saturday game, and I put myself into Melvin Foster's shoes and say, 'Well, I think I could have done better than that,'" Gochenour said. "He is a good linebacker, and I have no qualms about sitting behind him. But I do catch myself every once in a while saying that I know I could have done that. And there are times when I say, 'Jeez, there's no way I could have done that.'"

Although the team's "stars," like quarterback Matt Rodgers, might get more media attention, Gochenour said that each player on the team is treated well.

Ed Gochenour

"Here at Iowa, you're part of a great tradition," Gochenour said. "It's just being part of things that's really exciting. If you're part of the Hawkeyes, you're part of the team, and you're just as important as everybody else. And that's how everybody's treated."

"I'm glad I made the decision to come down here, and I've never had any regrets or anything like that," Gochenour added. "I was just glad to be part of it, and so

Hawkeye Profile: George Hawthorne

Hawthorne doesn't mind lack of attention

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

With every Hawkeye touchdown, one is quick to give credit to the quarterback and ball carrier. While this is justifiable, one is just as quick to forget the efforts of the offensive line.

But that's alright with Iowa lineman George Hawthorne.

"It's all part of the job," Hawthorne said. "There's always a behind-the-scenes person in every game or business. Sometimes that person is the most important, but it's self-satisfactory when we know we can do the job, even if we don't get recognized."

Modesty usually goes together with quietness, not football, but coach Hayden Fry feels Hawthorne has blended these qualities very well.

"He's a quiet guy on the ballclub who's done an exceptional job," Fry said.

A native of Chicago, where he attended Carl Schurz High School, Hawthorne decided to go out-of-state to Iowa for several reasons.

"I chose Iowa because it's a good academic school," Hawthorne said. "It has a great football tradition, good coaches, and nice people."

However, the senior right tackle did not begin his collegiate career as a Hawkeye. Hawthorne spent two years at Dupage Junior College in Illinois, where he led his team to an 11-1 record and the state junior college championship.

Hawthorne was also a member of the first-team junior college all-America, all-state, and all-conference contingent. In 1987 he redshirted and last season, Hawthorne appeared in eight games.

Going into Saturday's nationally televised game against eighth-ranked Illinois, Fry is skeptical as to whether or not Hawthorne will be able to play, due to an injury he sustained last week at Northwestern. But, according to Hawthorne, Fry shouldn't worry.

"What injury?" he asked. "I'll be able to play."

The 6-foot-6, 284-pound lineman also feels that Iowa will need all of its guns to stay with the Illini.

"We're going to have to come out intensely if we even want to stay on the field with them," he said. "It's going to be a tough game."

It would appear that Hawthorne has legitimate reasons to believe that Iowa has their work cut out for them Saturday. Illinois boasts the No. 1 pass defense, total defense, and scoring defense in the Big Ten. But Hawthorne is sure that won't stop him from preparing for this game in the way that he does every week.

"I just try to concentrate and think about my opponent," he said. "I try to prepare to play against his strengths and his weaknesses."

Family encouragement is a strength of a different type that Hawthorne feels has helped him out.

"My family has encouraged me the whole way even though they had very little effect on my athletic career," the sociology major said. "None of my family members were active in athletics."

Although Illinois does have impressive credentials, the Hawkeyes are not exactly far off from the Big Ten leaders either. Iowa is currently second in passing offense and third in total offense, which some would consider to be a tribute to the offensive line. But again, Hawthorne is quick to downplay his effects on the team.

"I always give credit to who's throwing the ball and who's running with it," he said. "Although I have great offensive linemen playing next to me such as Scott Davis, Mike Miller, Bill Anderson, and Rob Baxley, we can't take all of the credit. You would have to give credit to the quarterback, running backs, and the coaches for calling the right plays."

Fry not only feels that the Chicagoan has steadily improved over his years at Iowa, but that Hawthorne may even be an unsung hero for the Hawkeyes.

"George has really improved his run-blocking and pass-blocking," Fry said. "He's always given great effort but his techniques weren't all that good. Now, he's one of the better offensive linemen in the Big Ten."

Hearing that, Hawthorne's modesty took over again, as he began to sell himself short.

"There's great offensive linemen in the Big Ten like Anderson, and I don't know if I would be ready to rate myself up there," he said.

"Some people have been starting for three or four years and I have yet to do anything to prove myself on their level."

Hawthorne, who will celebrate his 22nd birthday on Thanksgiving Day, tries to turn his intensity on the field into perfectionism. Anything less is unacceptable.

As far as this year's Hawkeye team is concerned, Hawthorne feels, "You can never be satisfied unless you're perfect, and we're not perfect."

Despite the lack of notoriety that goes with being an offensive lineman, the man who wears No. 74 for the Hawks will get a chance to change that in front of 80 percent of the country Saturday afternoon.

In fact, one might wonder what the most memorable game has been for a senior here at Iowa. But to Hawthorne, it hasn't happened yet.

Hawkeyes vs. Illini

Iowa-Illinois puts Hawk air attack against league-leading Illini pass defense

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers has established himself as one of the top passers in the Big Ten; Michigan coach Bo Schembechler called him one of the brightest young prospects in the league after the teams met two weeks ago.

But with the number of times the Hawkeyes put the ball in the air, Rodgers will undoubtedly have his biggest challenge of 1989 Saturday when eighth-ranked Illinois comes to Kinnick Stadium for the 2:35 p.m. kickoff.

The Illini are at the top of the league in total defense — third against the rush, first against the pass — allowing only 12.6 points per contest.

"(Illinois) certainly has one of the best defenses in the nation," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said.

Coach John Mackovic's team has given up one scoring toss, a halfback pass in a 38-7 loss to second-ranked Colorado on the road. That was the only setback for a team that is 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the Big Ten.

Iowa is 4-3 after seven games and 2-2 in the conference.

The Illini are allowing just 116 yards per game through the air. But Rodgers is second in the league and 12th in the country in passing efficiency. He is tied with Illinois quarterback Jeff George for most touchdown passes with 10.

Junior noseguard Moe Gardner has already established the school mark for career tackles for loss with 38. And linebacker Darrick Brownlow, with a team-high 79 tackles, is considered one of the best in the country.

Fry said Brownlow is "every bit as good" as Michigan State standout Percy Snow. Snow is a top candidate for the Butkus Award given to college football's top linebacker.

Mackovic said he doesn't think his team's statistics will intimidate Iowa from passing the football.

"It will be an interesting matchup," Mackovic said. "They have thrown the ball well, and have a very talented and diversified offense."

And the Iowa offense will see the return of some key performers.

Running back Nick Bell, although he failed to make Saturday's trip to Northwestern, will definitely play, Fry said. He had a career-high 217 yards against Wisconsin three weeks ago.

"Our focus will be to put one foot in front of the other. We must step right toward Iowa. It will be a key game for us."

—John Mackovic

Bell was sidelined with a knee injury.

Jon Filloon, a projected starter at wide receiver in the preseason, will play Saturday after seeing his first action of the year Saturday against the Wildcats. Filloon had knee surgery before the season.

Senior linebacker Brad Quast will play despite breaking a bone in his left hand Saturday. Fry said he worked out Monday without any complications.

But starting defensive tackle Matt Ruhland is "very questionable," Fry said. Ruhland leads the Iowa defense in tackles for loss with 13.

The Iowa coach said he is on crutches and in an immobilizer for a re-aggravated knee injury. He's had the same knee operated on previously.

Saturday's game will be the first time the two schools have met since 1986, when Illinois won 20-16 at Champaign, Ill. The Illini lead the overall series 30-8-2 and the series at Iowa City, 14-11-2.

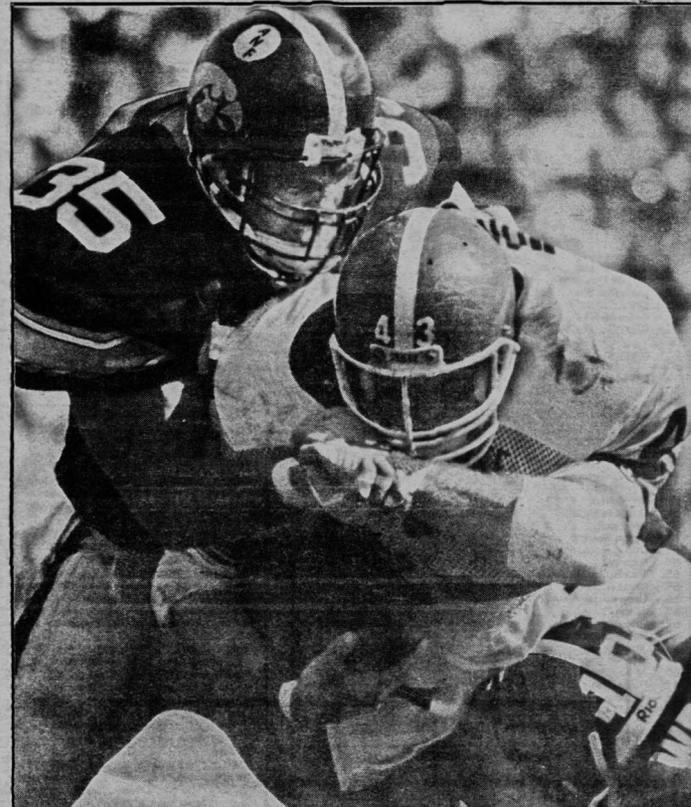

"I think it should be a game we play each year," Fry said. "To me, Illinois is no different than Minnesota or Wisconsin from a traditional standpoint."

"... Because of the geographical location, I think that we should play Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa State every year."

The Illini return 18 of 22 starters from a team that went to the All-American Bowl last season. In that game, Florida nipped Illinois 14-10.

This year, Mackovic's team is tied with Michigan at the top of the Big Ten, and that's where he likes to be.

"Our goal was to be undefeated at the end of this third stage, which is the first half of the Big Ten season," Mackovic said. "Last year we were 3-1 at this time and it was an uphill battle ... This year, being 4-0, we still find it being an uphill battle, but at least we know we haven't lost any games.

"We have to look at the second half of our season, which is our "stage four," as a complete block of games, with all four being vitally important towards winning the Big Ten championship. All four games are natural rivalries for us."

Iowa is first.

"Our focus will be to put one foot in front of the other," Mackovic said. "We must step right toward Iowa. It will be a key game for us."

For Fry, Bowl-talk is something he's not ready to do think about. His focus is on Saturday — and the Illini.

"I never do think about things like that," he said. "It's a ball game. I'm like an old mule with blinders on. I've got tunnel vision.

"The ball game's with Illinois this week. I know they have an excellent football team and I know that we'll have to continue to improve to have a chance against these people.

"I think we were greatly honored by the so-called experts in Las Vegas that only made (Illinois) 3 1/2-point favorites."

Illinois Style

The eighth-ranked Illini are 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the Big Ten primarily because of a strong defensive nucleus. They lead the league in total defense, allowing only 12.6 points per contest. No. 2 Colorado is the only team to score on the Illini through the air on a halfback pass. Junior noseguard

Moe Gardner has already established the school record in career tackles for a loss with 38. Linebacker Darrick Brownlow is the leading tackler for Illinois with 79 stops. Offensively, Purdue transfer quarterback Jeff George has sparked comebacks over USC and Michigan State, and has been tabbed by Iowa coach Hayden Fry as having the quickest release of any quarterback in the nation.
