Voters may reverse decision on plaza plan

Referendum involves 24-store construction

Tonya Felt The Daily Iowan

Voters Tuesday may reverse a controversial Iowa City Council Comprehensive Plan change that would allow construction of a new shopping plaza. Tuesday's referendum involves construction of a new 24-store shopping plaza on Highway 1 West anchored by a Wal-Mart discount center. Residents opposed to the comprehensive plan change gathered over 2,500 local signatures, forcing the council to place the issue on a referendum ballot. The effect the referendum will have on construction of the plaza is questionable, though. Before final approval for construction of the plaza was granted by the council, the comprehensive plan needed to be amended to classify the land as commercial rather than industrial and the 28 acres of land had to be rezoned for commercial use. The referendum, if passed, will only reverse the council's decision to change the comprehensive plan — not the zoning changes. Absent a reversal in the rezoning of the land, the developer, Joseph Co. of Peoria, Ill., will still have the right to construct the plaza, according to Iowa City Atty. Terrence Timmons. "If the referendum passes and nothing else is done, the referendum will probably have no effect on the project," Timmons said. "Something has to be done to the zoning of the land before the project will be affected." But even if council rezones the land back to industrial, the developer may still construct Westport Plaza if the company obtains building permits for the stores in the plaza — including a Wal-Mart discount store — before any council action is taken on the zoning. "If zoning changes are made after there has been construction on the property, we can't make them tear it down and take away their building permits," Timmons said. "The developer was proceeding on good faith." As of November 3, the developer had not applied for any building permits or started construction on the site. Joseph Co. representatives were not available for comment last week. Discussion of zoning changes on the 28 acres of land in question was not scheduled to be part of the council's agenda as of November 3. The issue, however, is no longer merely a matter of zoning changes for land use. The legal implications for the city will be a major concern if any further zoning changes are considered by council, according to Iowa City councilor Susan Horowitz. This is not a black and white picture," Horowitz said. "But unfortunately its being made to look like one."

According to Timmons, if the zoning doesn't change, Joseph Co. will probably not have reason to file suit against the city. "There is no reason that if the referendum passes and the zoning doesn't change, Joseph Co. would feel like it had been harmed in any way," Timmons said. "But there has never been a case in Iowa of the effect of a referendum on a change in a comprehensive plan or zoning. I can't predict the outcome." A possible legal conflict could arise See Vote, Page 4A

Cuts render UI libraries 'inadequate'

Brian Dick The Daily Iowan

UI Department of History members said "catastrophic reductions" in library acquisitions have prompted them to demand that UI administrators make the library budget an "urgent priority" in fiscal year 1990-91. Members in the UI's Faculty Senate and Faculty Council have recently discussed a UI Department of History resolution to approve the urgent needs of the UI libraries — libraries which the department said are being consigned to "second-rate" status. History professor Alan Spitzer commented at a September 26 Faculty Council meeting on what he and others in his department regarded as a catastrophic reduction in library acquisitions. The UI libraries are acquiring material at a rate adequate only for an undergraduate library, not a major research institution, Spitzer said at the meeting. Top faculty may not want to come to the UI because the libraries lack resources needed for research and graduate instruction, he added. "When we recruit we bring prospective faculty members to the library," he said. "Bringing them to the library is the equivalent of when scientific researchers show prospective faculty members their laboratory." See Library, Page 5A Correctional officers at the Iowa Medical Classification Center picketed the north entrance of the facility located on the UI Oakdale Campus. The officers were protesting what they said were staff shortages and low staff-to-inmate ratios at the center Friday morning.

Corrections center officers protest staff-inmate ratio

Sara Langenberg The Daily Iowan

Friday morning's correctional officer's picket at the Iowa Medical Classification Center drew a reaction from one state official later that afternoon. About 35 officers, chanting "More staff, less stress," picketed the center for an hour Friday morning claiming staff shortages and low staff-to-inmate ratios threaten their safety. The center, located on the UI Oakdale Campus, is a temporary holding facility for people sentenced to serve two or more years in an Iowa prison. The center is now 84 inmates above capacity, according to officer Marty Hathaway, president of the officer's union 2985 — the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. "This institution is less secure than it could be because presently of 384 inmates, 46 are sleeping on floors and in offices," Hathaway said. "We have no more cells to put people in," he added. Picketers are also concerned that an early retirement bill, approved by the Iowa Legislature and implemented by the Department of Corrections, may discriminate against some officers. The bill allows some correctional officers in Iowa to retire at age 55 with 25 years of service. Perimeter officers were exempted from retirement benefits when the See Picket, Page 5A

Greece thrown into another period of political uncertainty

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The conservative New Democracy Party led in national elections Sunday but narrowly missed a parliamentary majority, throwing Greece into its second period of political uncertainty in five months. With 96.2 percent of the votes counted, New Democracy, led by Constantine Mitsotakis, had 46.3 percent. It was followed by former Premier Andreas Papandreu's Panhellenic Socialist Movement with 40.7 percent and the Coalition of the Left and Progress, headed by Communist Harilaos Florakis, with 10.8 percent. The rest went to small parties. Official returns were broadcast by state television. New Democracy needed 151 seats in the 300-seat single-chamber Parliament to control the government after eight years of socialist rule and a brief coalition administration. Government projections showed New Democracy with 148 seats, 128 seats going to the socialists and 21 to the leftist Coalition. The other three seats would go to independents, including one environmentalist. A tough period of bargaining was expected to begin shortly on forming a new government. The leading parties are widely divided over such major issues as economic policy and the presence of U.S. military bases in Greece. Mitsotakis told a news conference his party would "act in a way that is best for the nation" but did not spell out his plans for working out a coalition. "Without a doubt our political life is entering a difficult phase," he said. Papandreu said, "It gives us special satisfaction that after the June elections we have had such a significant rise ... despite the unbelievable barrage of attacks made against us and despite the fact that we were out of the government." Papandreu's party did not appear to be damaged by its leader's indictment on corruption charges in September. Polls were open from sunrise to sunset, with voting compulsory for the estimated 8 million citizens aged 18 and over. Final results were unlikely before Monday. In Athens, motorists waving green socialist party banners or blue-and-white New Democracy flags sped through the central Syntagma Square, leaning on their horns.

American ship capsizes off Thailand; 4 rescued

SONGKHLA, Thailand (AP) — Thai fishermen Sunday rescued four crewmen from an American oil company ship that capsized in a typhoon the day before with 97 people aboard, the company said. The bodies of two others were found in the still-floating Seacrest, but the fate of the other 91 crewmen from 13 countries was unknown after two days of intensive search efforts in the Gulf of Thailand. Seven Americans were aboard. "We have not given up hope by any means, and the search effort will continue through the night," said Unocal spokeswoman Carol Scott in Bangkok. Two Thai fishing boats picked up three Thais and one Indonesian from the overturned oil drilling vessel, said officials of Unocal Thailand, a subsidiary of the Los Angeles-based company that owns the Seacrest. They were identified as Nico Mata-tula of Indonesia and Somchoke Noosuwan, Long Amphairit and Chavalit Duangpakdee of Thailand. Earlier, the company had said divers and pilots searching for survivors had failed to find any signs of life within the ship or in the surrounding sea. Rescue workers searched 600 square miles of the gulf. A remote-controlled underwater vehicle located the two bodies in the ship's living quarters. Divers will try to recover the bodies, Scott said. The Thai navy sent divers and the special undersea craft, which took videotape within the vessel. A section or all of the living quarters of the ship are submerged. The 351-foot vessel capsized early Saturday after being struck by 100 mph wind and high seas spawned by Typhoon Gay, described by Thai meteorologists as the country's worst typhoon in 35 years.

The Seacrest capsized in the gulf's Platong field, one of several being exploited for natural gas by Unocal. It is 270 miles south of Bangkok. After hitting the gulf, Typhoon Gay swept inland across the peninsula of southern Thailand, killing at least 26 people and causing extensive damage. About 30 fishing boats with an unknown number of crewmen aboard were reported missing.

UI alumnus John Cochran speaks of post-Vietnam U.S.

Jennifer Glynn and Jean Thilmann The Daily Iowan

The present generation of young Americans is not a lost generation, but a very lucky group of people living in a time of change sparked by the Vietnam conflict, said John Cochran, chief NBC White House correspondent and an UI alumnus. Cochran spoke Friday before about 125 people in the Old Capitol Senate Chambers. His speech was the first of the Distinguished Alumni Lecture Series, co-sponsored by the UI Alumni Association and Hills Bank and Trust Company. As a UI graduate student, Cochran spent two years in Vietnam studying the non-military side of the conflict with the help of U.S. State Department funding. He said no one understands the effect the Vietnam conflict has had on American politics and on Americans themselves. "After the Kennedy assassination, our confidence was shaken. But life goes on," Cochran said. "Lyndon Johnson was good as president, the economy was perking along pretty well, the U.S. was in control of its destiny and the world destiny, but Vietnam changed all that. There was other bad things at that time, drugs and the assassination of Robert Kennedy, but Vietnam was a constant in all these things," he added. "Money for social programs dried up. We had reached the high water mark for American liberalism. We went into a decline from which we have still not recovered." See Cochran, Page 5A

Lebanon OKs new peace plan

KLEIAT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese lawmakers Sunday elected a new Christian president and approved a peace plan designed to end 14 years of civil war, despite threats by a Christian general to punish them for "conspiracy." Parliament elected deputy Rene Mouawad, a 32-year veteran of Lebanese politics and a 64-year-old Maronite Christian. Legislators first stripped the president of some power, giving more authority to Moslem leaders. Fifty-two of Parliament's 73 surviving lawmakers voted for Mouawad in a second ballot of the special session. Six members abstained. Lebanon has had no president since Sept. 22, 1988, when President Amin Gemayel's six-year term expired with Parliament unable to decide on a successor. See Lebanon, Page 5A

UI alumnus: Job hunt can be surprising

Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

UI alumnus Larry Hershberger never thought he would work at the same company for 20 years, let alone just 50 feet down the hall from where he started.

Speaking from his experience as a senior vice president at Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association College Retirement Equities Fund — a non-profit service organization that provides retirement income for university faculty — Hershberger told about 30 people Friday in Phillips Hall that graduating seniors need not panic if they don't have a specific career in mind when beginning a job search.

After attending high school in Kalona, Hershberger graduated from the UI in 1966 with a marketing degree. Following a three-year stint in the Marines, he began work at TIAA CREF — his highest-paying job offer.

Hershberger said he could not have predicted his career path at that age.

It's not necessary that you know at age 25 what you want to do," he said.

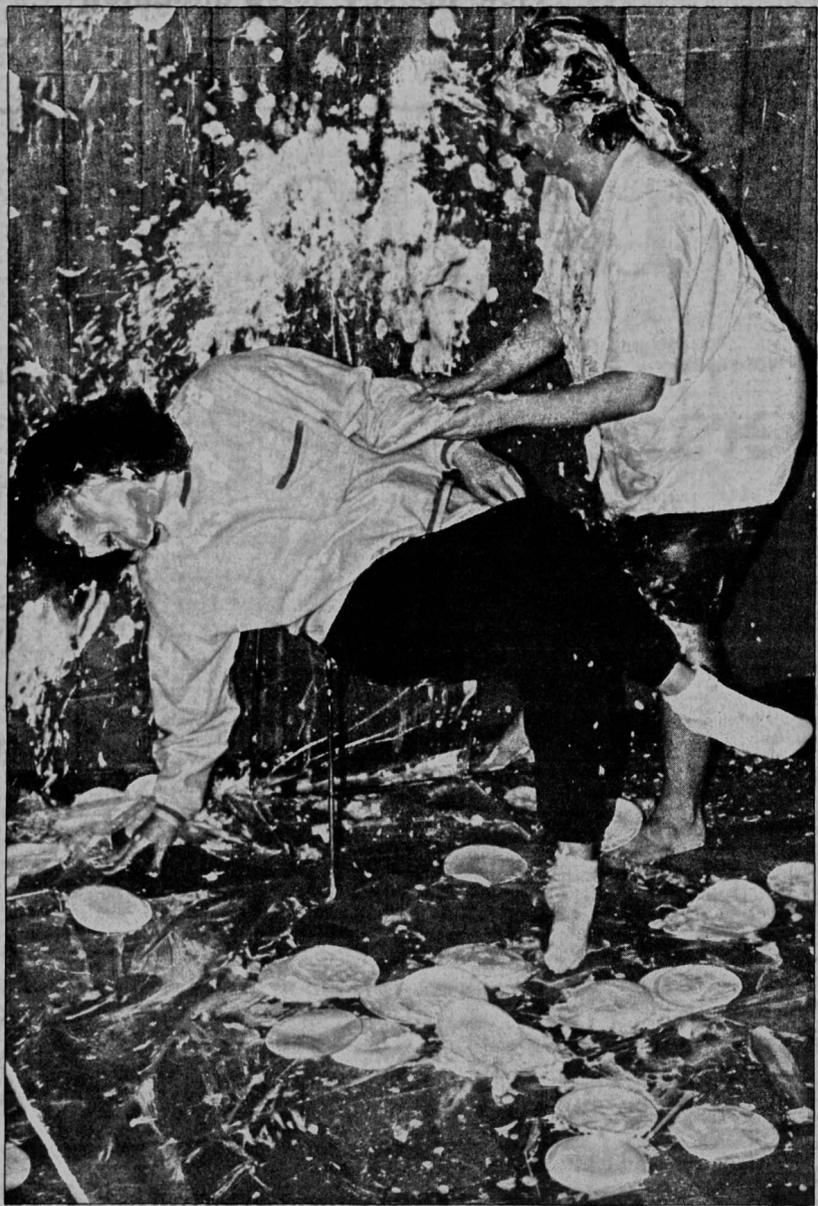

College graduates have to be willing to adapt and change short-term objectives while keeping in mind where they want to be in three years, Hershberger said.

During the interview process, researching the history of a company is essential because the culture of a company influences the way an interviewer perceives the interviewee, he said. TIAA CREF, for example, is looking for a more low-key, deliberate personality than other insurance companies might be interested in, he said.

An interviewee might be the most intelligent, qualified person for the job, but the interviewer is looking for who fits in best with the team, Hershberger explained. The bottom line in the hiring decision is whether the interviewer likes the person.

Textbook learning cannot fully prepare students for on-the-job experience, he added.

"I think it's your broad university experience that does as much for you as your specific area of study," Hershberger said.

Early plans for state budget mostly just talk

Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — There will be a lot of talk and commotion about the state's budget over the next month or so, and almost none of it has any basis in reality.

The grand schemes will have two things in common — the amounts will be large, and they won't happen.

Those funny round things, it seems, are trial balloons, and they're being floated for reasons that have absolutely nothing to do with state spending.

Some of the plans are designed to please voters, some are sparked by a desire to placate pesky members of a do-nothing advisory board, still others are aimed at making a point with disgruntled state workers.

Occasionally, it seems, they get floated just because it's fun.

As Gov. Terry Branstad begins developing his budget proposal, he's holding public meetings with his top bureaucrats to receive their Christmas list. Bureaucrats are very creative people when it comes to spending someone else's money.

For instance, if every building that General Services Director Jack Walters has requested over the years had actually been built, the Statehouse complex would resemble mid-town Manhattan at rush hour.

Bureaucrats have constituents, too, and they need to go back and make it clear that at least they asked.

A perfect example is Agriculture Secretary Dale Cochran, a Democrat who is elected statewide. Cochran is a veteran of 30 years in Statehouse politics and he understands how the game is played. He trooped in with a request for a modest 40-percent increase in his budget, suitably accompanied with a press release passed out by aides.

He won't get it, but at least he can go back to farmers who are the core of his constituency and say he fought for their cause.

Other state agencies have part-time advisory boards, which tend to be made up of well-heeled campaign contributors with time on their hands. Along with that time, those folks tend to have grand ideas about their role in state government.

They can be easily placated by putting their idea on a colorful chart and presenting it to Branstad along with a request for a few million dollars to pay for it.

The point is, budgets — and particularly this election-year budget — are political documents. They define which problems state government will face and which it will ignore, which interest groups are deemed worthy of buying off and which aren't.

It's also a phase of the state government cycle where lobbyists quietly earn their pay. A quiet dinner where a top official is persuaded to slip a line into a budget accomplishes more than all the rallies, news conferences and speeches that grab headlines during a session.

Democrats who control the Legislature and Republican Branstad have a luxury this year, with up to $100 million extra to spend without having to raise taxes.

Courts

An Iowa City man was charged with assault with intent to injure Friday after he allegedly hit a man in the face with a beer bottle at Vito's, 118 E. College St., according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Hung Tran, 19, 340 E. Burlington St., Apt. 3, was identified by the victim and several witnesses, according to court records.

Tran admitted to police that he was in the bar at the time of the incident, but denied that he had hit the victim, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 21, according to court records.

● An Iowa City man was charged with assault with intent to injure Tuesday after he allegedly struck a man in his right eye causing a laceration above the eye, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Roger Johnson, 20, 207 Myrtle Ave., Apt. 6, was identified by two witnesses, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 21, according to court records.

● A Davenport man was charged with fourth-degree theft Thursday after he allegedly stole a sweater valued at $92 from Von Maur department store, Sycamore Mall, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Frank Overbeck, 23, no address available, ran from the store with the sweater when a sales clerk approached him, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 21, according to court records.

KRNA's morning show brings music of '90s to Eastern Iowa

William Chinn
Special to The Daily Iowan

When the rest of the nation thinks about Iowa, do you think they see Dan Rostenkowski standing in front of a snow-covered barn commenting on how Iowa has picked the loser in the last three presidential caucuses?

Do people ask you if cows really sleep on their feet? Are you sick being asked if you know someone's cousin in Boise, Idaho?

Well, at least two Iowans are fighting back to this lack of Iowa lore.

KRNA radio's "Those Guys in the Morning," are tired of the stereotypes that persist about Iowa and Iowans. As hosts of Iowa City's highest rated morning radio show, and in the tradition of Coast, Jolt Cola and Mr. Coffee, Glen Gardener, 33, and Mark Vos, 34, have been waking Iowans up for more than four years with a non-traditional radio format.

When NBC's Bryant Gumbel referred to the Iowa Hawkeyes as the "Iowa Buckeyes," Gardener and Vos called and woke Gumbel up in his hotel room to tell him just how wrong he was. That is just one example of the unique blend of comedy and rock Gardener and Vos use to kick-start listeners into their day.

The show, which runs from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m., is "kind of an unusual music show," according to Vos, a native of Pella, Iowa.

"The interesting aspect of the show is we tend to be a reflection of the community. We get a lot of our ideas off the telephone lines," he said.

The "Morning Trivia Question" and "Stupid Question Day" are favorites with KRNA's audience, but most of the laughs are generated by the disc jockeys' improvisational reactions to callers and the morning's news.

When Gardener and Vos get behind the microphone, they become ambassadors for Iowa. They have built a reputation with record companies and rock bands that Eastern Iowa is the most receptive market in the country to new musical trends.

Vos claims they are conducting "fly-by-the-seat-of-your-pants radio," but a theme that runs through all their shows is their desire to be the first DJ's in the nation to premiere the latest music.

"A lot of people think if you want to hear the best new music, you need to be in L.A.," Vos said. "That couldn't be further from the truth."

Bands like Bon Jovi, The Delfuegos and Mary's Danish all aired on KRNA long before gaining national attention. Gardener, a native of Worcester, Mass., said KRNA's smaller, college-dominated market area allows them to take chances and play promising new bands.

"Iowa is the test market of the world. They market the new stuff here before they risk it in Chicago or Boston," he said.

"Those Guys" say they are committed to making sure Iowans are among the first in the nation to hear and evaluate the music of the '90s. Vos called 1989 an exciting time to be on the cutting edge of music.

"This is the most prolific time for music in the last fifteen years — the audience seems more receptive to (new music) now," he said. "In the

The Daily Iowan/Jack Coyier

Mark Vos and Glen Gardener host Iowa City's most popular morning radio show, "Those Guys in the Morning," and pride themselves on pulling off wacky early-morning antics.

late '70s and early '80s, we were living off oldies. For instance, if you ask someone what their favorite music of all time is, they're going to say, 'Stairway to Heaven' or 'Hey Jude,' but if you ask them if they want to hear it, they say they've heard it three times this week. They want to hear the new stuff."

To keep up with musical trends, Gardener and Vos spend a lot of time with the members of successful bands. Some of the more notable bands they have met include Huey Lewis and the News, REO, REM, Aerosmith, Van Halen, Heart and Journey.

But it's not all business with the bands: "Those Guys" claim to have finished off a bottle of Jack Daniels with Bon Jovi and golfed with Huey Lewis.

"The biggest bands are the most pleasant to deal with," Vos said. "Frank Zappa was the most cordial person you could meet. Ted Nugent, you would think, would be totally unmanageable. Ted would get the 'nicest guy' award, he is laid back and will talk about his kids. But when he gets behind the microphone, he is a total performer."

So the next time you're on vacation and someone from Cleveland, Ohio, asks if there are compact discs in Iowa, don't panic. Calmly ask for their hotel room number and what time they get up in the morning, and then call "Those Guys in the Morning."

UI building now reality in planning

Legislature allocates $1 million for project

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

A new UI business college building moved a few steps closer to becoming a standing reality Thursday.

The proposed building became more than just an idea when the Iowa Legislature allocated the UI $1 million to begin planning the new building.

Thursday recent developments of the building project were discussed at a student forum sponsored by the UI College of Business Administration.

Tentative plans for the project were explained at the forum and students were given the chance to express their views.

"(The forum) provided students with first-hand information about the college's plans and gave them an opportunity to express their interests and ideas," said Duane Thompson, associate dean for undergraduate programs in business.

"We encourage input because we want this building to be functional for everyone," he said.

Kevin Monson of the Iowa City architectural firm Neumann Monson explained the building plans at the forum.

"We told the students the basic things that are going to be in the building," he said. "We also let them preview the working drawings."

Located on the northwest corner of Clinton and Jefferson streets, the new building will have approximately 230,000 square feet, Monson said.

"At this point we are about 10 percent through with our plans," he said. "We are really just getting started with the design."

The building's construction is slated to begin next fall followed by an opening in the fall of 1993 or 1994, according to Richard Gibson, UI director of planning and administrative service.

A committee made up of business college administrators and other UI committees have been meeting to discuss various aspects of the project, Gibson said.

New definition of pornography affects 7 Sioux City stores

SIoux CITY (AP) — Woodbury County Atty. Tom Mullin is warning he'll prosecute seven Sioux City businesses unless they stop selling or renting pornographic materials, but he won't help them decide what is illegal and what isn't.

"I'm not the county censor, I'm the county attorney," he said. "I don't think it's my job to go into each store and tell them what to take off their shelves. My job is to enforce the law. The law is clear and understandable."

The law was amended last spring to expand the definition of pornography. Before, material was illegal if it showed sadomasochism, bestiality or excretory functions. The law now declares pornography to include oral, anal or vaginal intercourse, whether real or simulated, masturbation and lewd exhibition of the genitals.

Depicting these acts alone is not illegal. The acts must be "patently offensive" and the work in which they appear, taken as a whole, must lack literary, scientific, political or artistic value.

The businesses received hand-delivered notices on Friday that they were in violation of the law. Mullin said his office has received complaints of numerous violations of the law and that a preliminary check confirmed the complaints.

Bill Carter, manager of Video World, said he will temporarily stop renting 70 to 100 tapes that are labeled triple-X, but he said the law is unconstitutional.

Smith Corona presents three products that can help make schoolwork academic.

The Smith Corona PWP 2000 Personal Word Processor is in a class by itself. It's so compact it can fit in the most compact dorm room. Yet, thanks to features like a built-in disk drive, 100,000 character DataDisk capacity, and a crystal clear display, it makes it easy to transform B's into A's.

For those who prefer an electronic typewriter, the Smith Corona XD 4600 is the typewriter of preference. With its 16 character display and approximately 7,000 characters of editable memory, you can have the convenience of word processing features with the simplicity of a typewriter.

Of course, the pocket-size Spell-Right™ 300P also comes with impeccable references. In this case, a built-in electronic dictionary, a thesaurus, a calculator, even a collection of challenging word games.

So if you're thinking Magna Cum Laude at the end of this year, don't forget to think Smith Corona at the beginning of this year.

Incidence of child molestation increases

DES MOINES (AP) — Residents of Washington, Iowa, were stunned recently to learn of a preacher who used his position of trust to sexually molest children, but it is just the most recent of numerous abuse cases in Iowa.

Experts aren't sure if child sex abuse is on the rise or whether it just seems that way as more cases come to light.

"We're all asking the question of whether there's more of it going on now," said Virginia Barchman, an assistant Iowa attorney general who prosecutes child sexual abuse cases throughout the state. "I have the feeling that there has been sexual abuse of children ever since there have been people."

But Delphine Justin, a therapist in private practice in Mason City, said the trend is clear. "My guess is that it's a growing problem. I think it's becoming an epidemic," she said.

The most recent case involved the Rev. Robert Duane Schultz, 52, of Washington, who pleaded guilty to a string of abuses and was sentenced to 30 years in prison. The abuse was uncovered when two former victims, now aged 20 and 29, went to authorities after learning that Schultz was active as a foster parent.

There have been several other cases, including a St. Ansgar teacher who was sentenced last summer to six months in jail for having "indecent contact" with a female student, and a Charles City lawyer who a year ago was given a 10-year prison term for committing lascivious acts with a child.

In other recent cases, a Spencer police officer was sentenced to two months in jail for sex abuse of a 10-year-old girl, a funeral director in Tama was sentenced to five years in prison after pleading guilty of committing sex-related acts with four girls, a Glenwood resident and candidate for the Iowa Legislature was sentenced to 10 years in prison for sexually abusing an 11-year-old boy and a Catholic priest at Lone Tree was sentenced to two years in prison after pleading guilty of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse of a minor.

Nationally, the number of sexual abuse cases tripled between 1980 and 1986, according to Patricia Toth, director of the National Center for Prosecution of Child Abuse in Alexandria, Va.

Most of the cases involve people in positions of trust who cultivate relationships with their victims. "Very rarely is it a case of 'grab and molest,'" said Barchman. "It's a quiet seduction. It's not unfair to think of it as a seduction."

Justin said that in most cases, those who abuse children were themselves abused as children. "When invaded in a way in which they had no choice, they feel the need to gain power, so they do it to someone else. It's a way to get power back."

At his sentencing last August in Northwood, St. Ansgar teacher Paul Hannam, 39, testified that he had been sexually abused by an uncle more than 30 years ago. His father sexually abused his daughter, then committed suicide when that was revealed during family counseling sessions.

Vote

if Joseph Co. executives feel their business has been restrained in any way by the referendum, according to City Manager Stephen Atkins.

"If the zoning is overturned and the developer is proceeding in good faith, who is obligated to pay the damages?" Atkins asked. "There is a lot of money involved on the part of the developer in putting together a shopping plaza."

"If the developer goes to a bank, would they take the risk to loan the developer money if they knew there was the potential the development could be overturned, rezoned, or in some fashion litigation could occur that would constrain the development process?" he added. "If the city is found liable, all the taxpayers pay for it."

Jim Clayton, co-chairman of the opposition group, hopes that the referendum will force Joseph Co. to abandon the project.

"If you were a businessman and wanted to come Iowa City and the people held a vote and said they didn't want you to come, would you close your eyes and ears to that advice?" Clayton said.

Some confusion also exists as to whether the initiative and referendum process can be used to overturn certain city council decisions. Iowa City is the only city in Iowa that has an initiative and referendum process included in its charter, though its questionable whether the state allows the process to be included, Atkins said.

If any suits are brought against the city as a result of the referendum, Joseph Co. may already have the upper hand because the process by which signatures were collected for the petition that put the issue on the referendum ballot is in question.

The opposition group originally filed 2,104 signatures with the Iowa City Clerk by the July 14 deadline, 396 signatures short of the 2,500 needed to force the council to reverse a previous decision.

Five hundred and eighty-nine of those signatures were disqualified leaving the group 985 signatures short of the number needed.

After those signatures were rejected, the group was given a second chance to gather the needed signatures. They collected an additional 1,847 signatures.

Joseph Co representative Michael Wisdom said previously that according to the city's charter, the requirements to establish a referendum were not met because only 2,104 signatures were collected and filed by July 14.

But Timmons said the city had to accept the 2,104 signatures, adding the gathering of supplemental signatures is in accordance with Iowa City's charter.

Local citizens oppose the comprehensive plan changes for many reasons including land use, urban sprawl and adverse effects on downtown businesses, and the Wal-Mart store to be included in the plaza.

Some residents think that the 28 acres for the plaza should have remained classified for industrial use because light industrial jobs pay more than the part-time jobs offered by discount stores and could bring more families to Iowa City.

But, according to councilor Randy Larson, the land had been zoned industrial for several years without any development interest.

Clayton, the opposition group member, said he would welcome the development if it was located on land already zoned commercial.

"The development isn't interested in coming downtown and working to solve the problems that we worry about — parking, transit, and the environment. Its not solving an urban problem, its creating one," he said.

The largest parcel of land zoned commercial in Iowa City — besides the land reserved for the plaza — is four acres, so any land for large commercial development must be rezoned, according to Larson.

Additionally, commercial development on the fringe of Iowa City will contribute to urban blight, Clayton said.

"There's not enough dollars to go around in this shopping environment and that's when urban blight sets in. There's already empty space downtown and in Sycamore Mall," Clayton said.

Atkins said that downtown businesses will not be affected by the plaza because of the downtown area is near the UI and has consistent clientele.

Finally, Wal-Mart has had many discrimination suits brought against its hiring and employee policies. Some opposition members think the plaza should not have been approved because of Wal-Mart's litigation history.

Atkins said the city council must look at both land use and the proposed development when making zoning and comprehensive plan changes, but cannot look at individual stores within the development.

"They can't say, 'I don't want that store.' They can't do that; it is illegal," Atkins said.

Opposition group members have also expressed concern that the council rushed the rezoning without regard to public input.

"They were insensitive, arrogant and inflexible," Clayton said. "They knew we were opposing this development and they chose not to table it, to wait and see what would happen with the referendum."

Councilors, at the time of the decision, said the developer may have decided to locate elsewhere if the council didn't act at that time.

"The developer might have left and gone 600 yards down the road, outside of the city limits or two miles down the road to Coralville," Larson said. "Both expressed interest in the project."

"Moda Americana brings comfortable and affordable stylish clothing to Iowa City without being generic or trendy."

a career with a challenge

A Doctor of Podiatric Medicine (D.P.M.) specializes in the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of diseases and disorders affecting the human foot. A D.P.M. makes independent judgements, administers treatment, prescribes medications, and when necessary, performs surgery. The need for podiatric doctors is great and the income opportunities are excellent.

A recruiter from the College of Podiatric Medicine and Surgery, Des Moines, will be on the University of Iowa campus on November 14, 9:00 am to 2:00 pm at IMU/Hoover Room, 2nd Floor.

We invite all students, regardless of grade level, to explore our program. We are one of seven colleges of podiatric medicine in the United States and the only college located within a major medical university.

'NO CLIPS, NO JOB'

Newspapers: 'We're looking for experience'

Thinking about a career in journalism after graduation? Well, unless your family owns a newspaper, the post-graduation job search can be a frustrating experience. Aspiring journalists can't get a job without experience, but they can't get experience without a job.

At the University of Iowa, though, there's an answer: The Daily Iowan.

For more than a century, The Daily Iowan has provided an unparalleled educational opportunity for talented and dedicated young journalists. The Daily Iowan offers a unique newsroom environment that combines the latest technology with full student editorial control. Staff members gain valuable experience while producing a newspaper that is widely regarded as the nation's premier collegiate daily.

The Daily Iowan:

■ Has a daily circulation approaching 21,000, the largest circulation of any newspaper in the Iowa City area.

■ Is the nation's most frequent winner of the Society of Professional Journalists' "Best Overall College Newspaper" award.

■ Has twice been honored as Iowa's best newspaper by the Iowa Newspaper Association.

■ Has been the collegiate training ground for hundreds of top editors and writers, including several Pulitzer Prize winners. If you're serious about journalism, don't miss out on The Daily Iowan experience.

Cochran

Cochran said the conflict also changed Americans' view of their nation. Before troops were sent to Vietnam, Americans thought they were on the cutting edge of the civil-rights movement, he said.

"Vietnam forced people to conclude that America was not a classless society after all," Cochran said. "Blacks carried most of fighting and poor white men couldn't understand why college kids got out of the fighting."

The Vietnam conflict has continued to have an effect on U.S. domestic and foreign policy, Cochran said. "It seems to me we have not regained our confidence totally, but we have gained a certain amount of wisdom," he said.

Many Americans polled said they supported President George Bush's decision not to use military force to aid the recent Panamanian coup attempt. Cochran said lessons learned in the Vietnam era played a role in the poll results.

"We are not as trigger happy as a lot of people think we are," he said. Cochran talked about the hopes of the current generation which he said is living in a time of great change and challenges.

"I do think all of us are going through a time of searching, which is not a bad thing, to think before acting," Cochran said. "This is a time of historic change, a terribly exciting time."

"The present generation, I think, is a very, very lucky generation, not a lost generation at all," he said. "The best thing you can ask for is to live in interesting times."

Cochran has been a correspondent with the NBC news since 1972 and is currently chief White House correspondent. Prior to his assignment, he served as chief European correspondent and chief diplomatic correspondent between 1972 and 1988.

Picket

the director of the Department of personnel and the director of Corrections "modified the law as enacted," according to a union press release.

But Lee, who claimed to understand the union's concerns, said the picketing officers were not telling the whole story.

"The law was not 'modified' by the director," Lee said. "The director of personnel and the director of corrections must mutually agree about who qualifies for the early retirement."

In addition, Lee said the retirement package is now available to more officers than before.

"Seventy-some individuals who were not (previously) eligible for early retirement are now eligible," Lee said. "Not a single current employee who was eligible will become ineligible by this — they were grandfathered in."

Positions in which "there is not continual and immediate inmate contact in a secured setting" are excluded from the early retirement provision, Lee said.

Hathaway and the picketing officers claim the exclusion discriminates against some officers.

"(People in perimeter positions) are people who travel outside the fence — in vehicles stocked with weapons — to stop escaping inmates," Hathaway said. "We feel these people protect Iowa taxpayers from escaping inmates and deserve the same retirement package no matter where they work."

But Lee claims the exclusion was made because perimeter officers have less stress associated with their job than officers in other positions.

"You tell me which job you'd rather have: one driving around the perimeter of a unit all day or one where you're locked in a place with people urinating and throwing feces at you and swearing at you?" Lee asked.

"If there's a riot where people are taken hostage, who do you think the inmates are going to take — the guy outside or the guy locked up there with them?" he asked.

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out they're going to take the guy in the unit," he said.

Library

Staffing is also woefully inadequate. The libraries should be a UI resource that extends into the future, Spitzer said.

"Of course historians use the library all the time and we're generally aware of the decline in acquisitions," he said. "They just can't order to the extent they used to, but the library is the only legacy we leave to people who will use the library in the future."

In the last three years the libraries have cut 3,000 subscriptions to journals in the natural sciences and the professions, Head Librarian Sheila Creth said at the September meeting.

Creth said the acquisitions budget would need an extra $1 million or more to restore library acquisitions, adding that minimally adequate staffing would require at least another half-million dollars.

The libraries are in crisis, but their troubles range beyond the humanities and the social sciences collections, she said.

Prospective faculty members who examine the collections complain repeatedly that the collections are hopelessly inadequate. In the last five years almost all collections have lost substantial ground, Creth said.

William Sayre, assistant librarian, said the problem UI libraries are facing is not limited to this campus alone.

Libraries across the country are at the mercy of foreign publishers because devaluation of the American dollar has reduced purchasing power, meaning that libraries can afford to buy fewer items from the publishers, he said.

"Publishers have been raising their rates on materials we need to purchase. They basically have a captive audience," Sayre said. On the bright side, UI faculty members seem to be more involved in the libraries' needs for increased funding to curtail deterioration of the library system, he added.

"We've been talking about this issue for some time, but it seems we've been talking largely to ourselves," Sayre said. "Now, there seems to be much more faculty involvement."

In national rankings of research libraries between 1987 and 1988, the UI libraries fell from 27th to 29th in volumes held and from 34th to 41st in current serial subscriptions.

Although the inflation rate for acquisitions is now 12 percent a year, the UI's acquisitions budget for 1989-1990 remains less than 3.5 percent — an 8.5-percent funding differential.

Lebanon

The legislators also re-elected house Speaker Hussein Hussein, a Shiite Moslem, for a one-year term. He has held the post since October 1984.

Christian leader Gen. Michel Aoun, whom Gemayel appointed to head an interim Cabinet until a new president could be named, rejected Mouawad's election.

"What happened in Kleiat is an unconstitutional act and is null and void," Aoun said in a statement issued from his command bunker at the presidential palace in Beirut's suburb of Baabda.

"We are determined to thwart the conspiracy which is being hatched to eliminate what is left of Lebanon's sovereignty and territorial integrity," he said.

Aoun rejected the Arab League-brokered peace plan, first approved by the lawmakers at a session last month in Saudi Arabia, because it failed to guarantee a withdrawal of the 40,000 Syrian troops who control much of Lebanon.

Contra diction

Once again, President George Bush has disrupted his vocal Capitol Hill foreign policy critics with the announcement last week of a December meeting at sea with Mikhail Gorbachev. Those Congressional Democrats who have continually berated Bush for "losing Gorbachev" during the recent flurry of Eastern bloc reforms were sent scrambling by the president's decision to engage the Soviet leader prior to a formal summit.

For Bush, the maritime rendezvous buys valuable time. Gorbachev's recent reforms have been billed as revolutionary, but his agenda for the summit is likely to be predictable. He will unveil more drastic Soviet military cuts, propose additional "hands off" reforms, in Eastern Europe and suggest Western economic aid — all in an effort to salvage an ailing Soviet economy.

Bush's response is more problematic. The United States, by negotiating with Gorbachev, is in a position to help Gorbachev wage his economic battles. What, then, should Bush ask for in return?

For starters: Nicaragua.

Last week, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega unilaterally ended the cease-fire with the Contra rebels. Since the Bush administration "compromised" with Democratic Congressional leaders earlier this year to curtail aid to the Contras, Bush now finds himself in a perilous executive dilemma. If Bush resumes full aid to the Contras, whether humanitarian or military, Ortega may use renewed U.S. involvement to quash the upcoming democratic elections that are threatening to oust him. If he does not intervene, and Ortega purges the overmatched rebels, Bush will be guilty of abandoning his commitment to a democratic cause in the United States' own hemisphere.

Only one workable solution to the Nicaraguan problem remains: Gorbachev.

Gorbachev's massive reforms have so far allowed him to side-step accountability for critical contradictions in his initiatives. As yet he has not issued a substantive response to Bush's May proposals for conventional force reductions in Europe, explained last week's brutal put-down of demonstrators outside the KGB's Moscow headquarters, or addressed Soviet sponsorship, through Cuba, of Ortega's repressive regime.

The Bush administration has indicated its willingness to help the Soviet leader pursue his agenda of reform. When Bush meets with Gorbachev in December, he should ask him to make a move that will get Bush off the political hook and demonstrate the sincerity of Soviet reforms: Force Ortega to face democratic elections that will inevitably remove him.

Enough

There's a new situation comedy playing in the papers these days. It's called UI student government.

Last week Syd Smith, president of the Liberal Arts Student Association, invalidated 20 petitions for LASA membership. One of the petitioners, UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona, responded angrily that he and others had been discriminated against for personal reasons. Rojas-Cardona said Smith invalidated his petition because "she doesn't like me . . . If a student wants to get on LASA and she doesn't like the way they dress, should she have the right to discriminate against them?"

Certainly not, but the petitions were invalidated legitimately, because they contained signatures of people who were already members of LASA or not in the College of Liberal Arts at all. It doesn't take much to see what Rojas-Cardona was up to.

In a poorly-executed power play, Rojas-Cardona attempted to take over LASA and use it as a stepping stone to gain control of Collegiate Associations Council, six members of which come from LASA. Most of the petitioners were student senators or close friends of Rojas-Cardona. By placing friends in all three branches of student government, Rojas-Cardona hoped to acquire complete control.

Enough.

Petty political games do nothing to advance the goals that Rojas-Cardona advocated in last spring's election. If Student Senate spent as much time serving students as it does meddling in the affairs of CAC and LASA, UI students might actually vote in next year's elections. Last spring, turnout was less than 1,000.

It goes without saying that UI Student Senate shenanigans are jeopardizing responsible student government. The players better shape up and learn to exercise power judiciously — or this sitcom may be canceled.

TV cigarette ads return, sort of

You might have thought that tobacco companies were prohibited from advertising on TV. You might have thought that the government's ban on TV cigarette advertising was still in effect. You might have thought wrong.

While it's true that in 1971 the government did — and still does — prohibit tobacco companies from advertising cigarettes on TV, that ban does not exclude the tobacco companies from advertising on TV per se. But, you ask incredulously, why would a tobacco company spend the hundreds of thousands — nay, millions — of dollars necessary to produce and put on the air a TV commercial when they aren't allowed to identify, display or even refer to their product?

J.L. McClure

Well, the answer to that question was provided last week by tobacco giant Philip Morris Companies Inc., which unveiled a new two-year, $30-million-a-year advertising campaign purportedly designed to boost the company's sagging corporate image and name recognition. At the center of the megabucks campaign is a gripping, heart-rending, patriotic TV commercial celebrating (no kidding) the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

The 30-second commercial consists of a series of dream-like images, alternating between extreme close-ups of words written in colonial script on yellowed parchment and the interior of some appropriately marbled building oozing historical significance. Accompanying these images is a montage of very democratic voices — some recognizable (Martin Luther King Jr.), some merely sentimental (a cherubic but freedom-wise child) — all exercising or extolling their First Amendment rights of free speech.

Toward the end of the spot, as the camera moves in on the yellowed parchment, encased in glass and sitting on a pedestal in the middle of the appropriately marbled building, a somber male voice reminds us that we Americans enjoy the protection of the most sacred legal document ever composed by humankind — the Bill of Rights.

Then the screen goes black, except for the Philip Morris logo and name. The somber male voice says something about how proud Philip Morris is of America's Bill of Rights and the freedoms it ensures. And then another black screen appears, this time with a superimposed telephone number (1-800-445-5555) we can call if we would like to have our very own copy of the Bill of Rights, provided free by Philip Morris.

Maybe I'm just too cynical, but I can't help but be a tad suspect of Philip Morris's professed motives in launching this extensive and expensive advertising campaign. According to Guy L. Smith, the company's vice president of corporate affairs, "Most people — whether in Toledo, Tucson or Topeka — haven't a clue who we are. If they think well of the company through our support of the Bill of Rights, it follows they'll think well of our products."

At the center of the megabucks campaign is a heart-rending TV commercial celebrating (no kidding) the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

The "products" that spokesman Smith refers to does not include the cigarettes that made Philip Morris a corporate giant and still is at the heart (so to speak) of the company's wealth (if not health), but rather the multitude of other products — including Maxwell House coffee, Jell-O, Cheez Whiz and Miller beer — that Philip Morris has acquired over the past decade or so in order to diversify their corporate holdings.

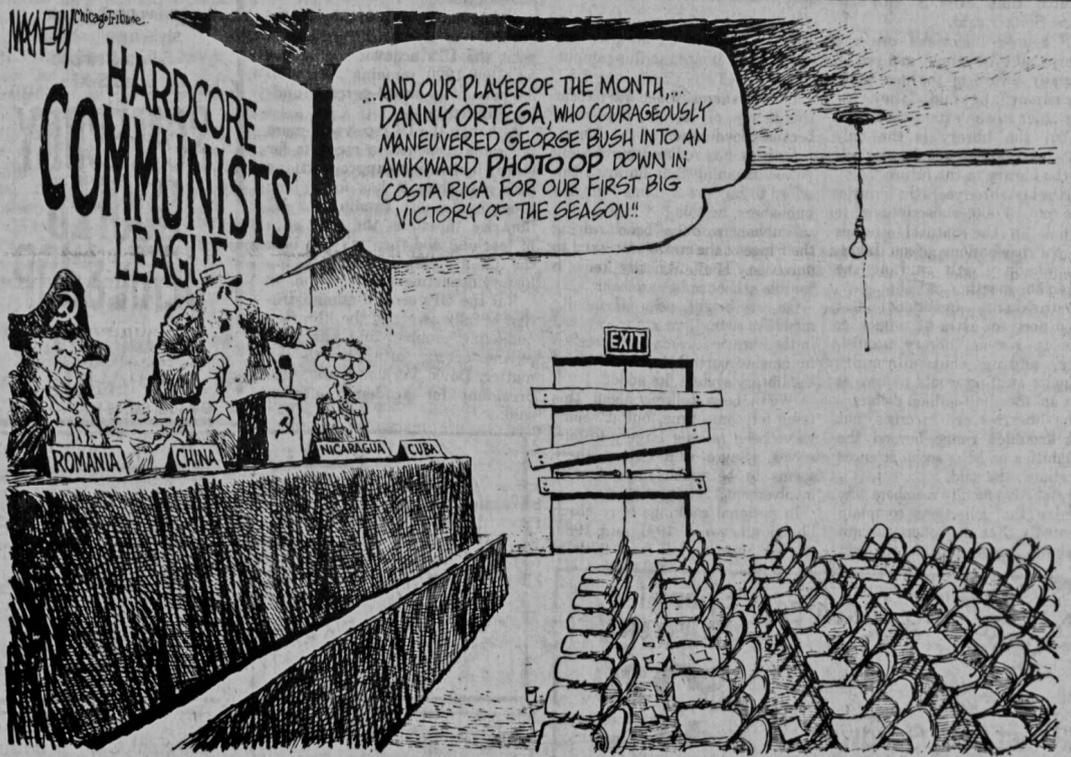

Again, perhaps I'm too much the cynic, but it seems that if Philip Morris really wanted to let the people in Toledo, Tucson and Topeka know that their company is responsible for Maxwell House, Miller, Jell-O and Cheez Whiz, and not just lung cancer and heart disease, that the best approach would be simply to emblazon the Philip Morris name on all of those subsidiary products and the advertising for those products. Why drag the Bill of Rights into it?

Could it have something to do with Philip Morris's interest in protecting its continued cigarette advertising in magazines and newspapers — advertising currently under fire in Congress? The tobacco industry's party line has always been that this is a free country in which people are provided the absolute freedom to ingest large quantities of nicotine and tar until their arteries congeal and their lungs collapse, and the companies that provide the means to this freedom of self-inflicted death are also protected by law in promoting this curious form of suicide. By wrapping themselves in the Bill of Rights, could it possibly be that Philip Morris just might be subliminally reinforcing its contention that liberty extends not only to self-destruction, but also to the promotional rights of those who would profit from it?

Well, maybe. That would be the cynical interpretation.

The problem with the cynical interpretation of just about anything is that it's most often correct.

For starters

To the Editor:

Abortion is not an act of despair. Legal abortion is not the sign of a society giving in to despair. There is no such thing as post-abortion syndrome. Abortion is not the taking of a human life. No amount of positive support and acceptance will stop women who want one from seeking an abortion. But Gregg Dourgarian ["Abortion is society's excuse not to act," DI, November 1] is right on one thing: Attitudes must change. A shift in his — for starters — would be nice. Maybe when he is faced with his own unwanted pregnancy he will see things differently.

Kids are all right

To the Editor:

In regard to Eric Shivers' letter complaining about the New Kids on the Block: SCOPE's job is to bring a variety of bands to Iowa City in order to satisfy a wide variety of musical tastes. By bringing New Kids, SCOPE is just doing its job. They're not a teenybopper band. They've had three No. 1 hits and only one of them is under 20 years of age. Friends of ours, both guys and girls, who've seen them perform, say they are one of the better concert bands.

Believe it or not, there are people on this campus who don't like U2 and would prefer to see a group like New Kids over them anytime.

Rick Graf is a committed activist. He has worked hard in this community in real-people issues like services for PWA's and affordable housing. A vote for Rick is a vote for caring, open, honest government.

No matter where you live in Iowa City, you can vote for Rick Graf for City Council on November 7.

Environmentalist Bolkom

To the Editor:

[The Daily Iowan]'s report of the [City Council] Candidate's Forum which occurred in the Iowa City Public Library on October 30 was accurate and non-partisan, I thought.

Today I encourage [people] to observe Joe Bolkom, president of Iowa City Environmental Advocates. He has been quietly, consistently, for the last five years at least, urging us to take care as we enjoy our natural environment. We are burying ourselves in our own accumulating toxic wastes. We have paid no attention to the way we pollute the water, air and Mother Earth. [Bolkom] has . . . studied methods we can use to improve the chances for the next generations to enjoy healthy lives

Please, registered voters, learn about Bolkom. He has little funds for newspaper ads, but many loyal friends. A vote for Joe is a vote for a healthier Iowa City for everybody.

Agnes R. Kuhn

Progressive candidate

To the Editor:

Does it bother you when you see rows of plastic garbage sitting curbside in Iowa City? Does it make you cringe to think of how much other plastic, reusable, and toxic refuse rests inside those bags, to be taken to the dump, where it will either be burned or buried, polluting our environment with chemicals or waste that just won't decompose?

When you go to K Mart or Target or any other store, does it bug you that virtually everything is made of and packaged in plastic? At fast food restaurants, does it trouble you when each hamburger, hot dog or order of French fries must be wrapped in styrofoam before it's served?

There's a city council election coming up November 7, and Joe Bolkom, who is bothered by these problems, is running for city council. If elected, he would work with Karen Kubby, another progressive member of the council, to institute further recycling and to improve water quality. People who have seen Joe at work, whether during the many community meetings organized by Environmental Advocates or testifying in Des Moines as a member of either Governor Branstad's Committee on the Environment or the Department of Natural Resources' Toxic Air Emissions Review Panel, say the same thing: "Impressive!"

Joe is a progressive candidate with a conscience. If you are progressive, with a conscience, get out and vote. You may not live on living here forever, but you live here now. Joe is one UI graduate who is making a difference. So can you.

Former Italian political leader dead

RAVENNA, Italy — Sen. Benigno Zaccagnini, who headed Italy's dominant Christian Democratic Party during its brief "historic compromise" with the Communists in the 1970s, died Sunday. He was 77.

Zaccagnini, whose political career spanned five decades and peaked during one of the country's most volatile post-World War II periods, died in a Ravenna hospital after suffering a heart attack.

Born in Ravenna on April 7, 1912, Zaccagnini served as secretary of the Christian Democrats from 1975 to 1980, replacing Amintore Fanfani as party chief after the Communists made strong gains in regional and municipal elections.

In 1976, the Communists drew almost even with the Christian Democrats in national elections, opening the way for the compromise for power sharing by the two parties.

Zaccagnini rejected a formal governing alliance with the Communists but said they could play a constructive opposition role to help Italy through its economic and monetary crisis.

The compromise was partially realized in 1978 when Christian Democrat Premier Aldo Moro worked out an arrangement giving the Communists a voice in government policies but no Cabinet seats.

Red Brigades terrorists kidnapped Moro the day the pact was going into force in Parliament on March 6, 1978. Moro was killed after 55 days in captivity and the pact collapsed after 10 months.

Zaccagnini, known by many Italians as "Zac," continued to be an influential member of the Christian Democrats until his death leading a leftist faction of the party.

NYC drug bust could be worth $1 billion

NEW YORK — The street value of the city's largest drug seizure could reach nearly $1 billion by the time federal agents finish digging cocaine from hundreds of drums in a warehouse, a drug agent said Sunday.

The work, which began with the raid of the two-story warehouse late Friday, was suspended Sunday because of the New York Marathon, which runs past the building's doors in the borough of Queens.

Police officers and firefighters were to resume assisting agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Customs Service on Monday in recovering the cocaine, which was buried beneath a caustic powder inside drums marked poison.

Drug smugglers apparently hoped the powder, which can open clogged drains and cause skin burns and lung damage, would keep authorities from detecting the cocaine.

"It just shows us how innovative the drug traffickers are," DEA agent Mary Cooper said.

Police had searched two-thirds of the 252 drums by late Saturday and uncovered 8,800 pounds of cocaine worth about $700 million on the street, Cooper said. Agents expect to find a total of up to 12,000 pounds — 6 tons — of cocaine worth up to $1 billion, she said.

President returns to prep school

ANDOVER, Mass. — President George Bush came back Sunday to his old school, Phillips Academy, and lauded "the rich values" it taught him in preparation for life in general and World War II in particular.

He referred to it as "a special, even wondrous place," and recalled a favorite history teacher, his own triumphs on the athletic fields and even where he was when word came that the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor.

"It was right about here where that guy in the red coat is standing that I heard our country was at war," said Bush, picking out a figure in a stadium jacket on the fringe of the crowd of 2,500 gathered to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the day another president, George Washington, visited the school called Andover.

"Andover's mission — excellence in education — remains as true in 1989 as it was" back then, said the Class of '42 alumnus.

"I loved those years. They did indeed teach 'the great end and real business of living,'" said Bush, borrowing words from the constitution that founder Samuel Phillips gave his academy.

Oregon court reopens drug, religion trial

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — An Oregon squabble over whether the constitutional right to religious freedom can stretch far enough to allow illegal drug use will be back before the nation's highest court Monday.

The case that's making an unusual second trip to the U.S. Supreme Court involves religious traditions substantially older than the U.S. Constitution itself.

The battle began after two members of the Native American Church were fired as counselors at a Roseburg drug and alcohol treatment center because they had used peyote, a hallucinogenic drug, in religious ceremonies.

Atty. Gen. Dave Frohnmayer sees unsettling implications in the idea of giving constitutional protection to drug use. Lawyers on the other side say the existence of an ancient religion could be at stake in the case.

Peyote, also known as mescal, comes from a small cactus that grows in Mexico and the southwestern United States. Indians have used it ceremonially for centuries and attribute spiritual qualities to the substance.

The drug is generally illegal. But the court case is a civil and not a criminal action because Alfred Smith and Galen Black were denied unemployment compensation on grounds they were dismissed for misconduct.

The Oregon Supreme Court in 1986 ruled that refusing to pay the jobless benefits violated the men's First Amendment rights to free exercise of religion.

The state appealed, and the U.S. Supreme Court last year returned the case to Oregon's top court with directions to address the criminal status of the drug under state law.

The state court again held that religious use of peyote is protected by the Constitution although the drug is illegal by state law.

Frohnmayer, who planned to personally argue the state's case before the nation's highest tribunal, says the Oregon Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court both overreached in injecting the criminal drug-law versus religious freedom issue into the case.

As a result, he said in a recent interview, he has little idea about what to expect.

"What they have in mind is somewhat baffling to all of us," he said.

Frohnmayer said he's worried about the court setting a cumbersome precedent. If an exception is made for peyote, he asks, what about religions that claim they need to use marijuana or other drugs?

"The concern the state has is the specter of engaging in a religion-by-religion, drug-by-drug examination," Frohnmayer said. "Putting the long arm of government into testing people's sincerity is troubling."

Mores slow Indian population control

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A gold-plated clock in a darkened hall of a government hospital quietly ticks. It isn't marking time, but the number of Indian babies born.

After a minute, the clock hits 50. Within an hour, 3,000. By day's end, 72,000 babies are born, 70,000 of them survive. At the year's end, 17 million.

"It's like adding another Australia," said Ashish Bose, a population expert and outspoken critic of the Health and Family Welfare Ministry, the godfather of India's birth control program.

Ironically, India was the among the first to launch a government-sponsored family planning program. Since 1951, when the program was set up, the

Such apocalyptic visions have little impact. "Doomsday warnings don't go down in India because of their philosophy of life and what they have gone through," said George Walmsley of the United Nation's Population Fund.

Family planning got a bad name in India during the mid-1970s when allegations of forced sterilizations caused a scandal and a backlash that still lingers.

When Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi took the helm in 1984, his government launched new programs with catchy slogans. Every year 800 million condoms are distributed in India and up to 5 million men and women are sterilized. But after five years, there has been no sign of dramatic change.

Opposition politicians trying to oust Gandhi and his Congress Party in this month's parliamentary elections have lofty proposals but shy away from discussing them.

"Talking about family planning is like singing the requiem at a wedding," said one opposition lawmaker, speaking on condition of anonymity. "If people don't want to adopt family planning and I force them, then I'm finished."

The problems go much deeper than the lack of public enthusiasm and manpower to implement a comprehensive family program in ethnically and linguistically diverse India.

Religious customs, traditions and teachings in the Hindu-dominated country reject the very concept of family planning. Most people believe the birth of a child is a gift from God and that to do anything against the natural course would displease God.

Male superiority and the importance of a son also are factors.

"I need two sons. Otherwise, who will carry on the family name, who will help me in the fields, who will look after me in my old age and who will lift my funeral pyre?" said Datta Mal Jain in his village in Rajasthan state.

Additional hands to work mean additional income for impoverished people, who do not know how many of their children will survive. One out of every 10 Indian babies dies within the first year of tetanus, diarrhea, diphtheria or whooping cough.

Improved health services and eradication of famines and major epidemics have lowered the country's overall mortality rate. The average Indian now lives to the age of 58, compared with 32 when India became independent from Britain in 1947.

To: Members of the University Community

From: David H. Vernon
Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs

Subject: Committee to Review Student Government-Composition and Charge

Date: November 1, 1989

Composition of Committee

President Hunter Rawlings has directed that a Committee be established to review and make recommendations about the future structure of student government at the University of Iowa. In an effort to carry out that directive in a way that results in a Committee of manageable size but one that represents a reasonable cross-section of the University community, the student members of the Committee will be:

- (1) two from the Student Senate, the President and a person designated by the Senate;
- (2) two from the Collegiate Associations Council, the President or someone designated by the Council;
- (3) one designated by the Student Bar Association, the President or someone designated by the Association;
- (4) one designated by the Graduate Student Senate, the President or someone designated by the Senate;
- (5) one designated by the Interfraternity Council, the President or one designated by the Council;
- (6) one designated by the Pan Hellenic Council, the President or one designated by the Council;
- (7) one designated by the Associated Iowa Honors Students, the President or one designated by the group;
- (8) one designated by the Associated Residence Halls, the President or one designated by the group; and
- (9) one designated by the Liberal Arts Student Association, the President or one designated by the Association.

In addition, the President of the Faculty Senate will be asked to designate two members and the President of the Staff Council to appoint one member to serve. Finally, Vice President Philip Hubbard will serve as a representative of the University administration.

Thus, the Committee will have fifteen members: eleven students, two representatives of the Faculty Senate, one of the Staff Council, and one administrator. One of the student members will be designated by the Vice President for Academic Affairs as Chair of the Committee. Ms Belinda Marner from the Office of Student Services will be administrative liaison to the Committee.

Charge to the Committee

The Committee should seek to develop a recommended structure for student government at the University of Iowa that takes into account the specific needs of the University and the broad purposes of student government. More specifically, the Committee is expected to make recommendations concerning the appropriate:

1. Structure of student government, e.g., to consider whether a unicameral structure is preferable to the current bicameral structure, or whether the latter is preferable, and if preferable, what mechanisms should be instituted to encourage cooperation and coordination of the two entities.
2. Jurisdiction of student government, including its responsibilities as well as its rights.
3. Method of electing representatives of the governing body or bodies of student government.
4. Relationship of student government to the University Administration, including the appropriate fiscal oversight of student government by the University.
5. Policies that should govern allocation of funds among student groups being supported by student government.
6. Functioning of the various committees and commissions charged with carrying out the policies of student government.

Outcome

The final work product of the Committee should be a recommended constitution establishing the structure and the rights and responsibilities of student government at the University of Iowa. If the Committee determines that alternatives should be presented to the student body because different structures would work equally well, it has the option of recommending alternative structures. The alternatives would then be put to a vote of the student body.

If ten or more members of the Committee recommend that the existing structure of student government should remain unchanged, the issue will be deemed settled and no further action taken. If six or more committee members dissent from such a recommendation, however, and they propose a different structure, both the majority and minority recommendations would be put to a vote of the student body.

If a single option is recommended that differs from the existing structure, it and the existing structure would be put to the student body for a vote.

Procedures and Timing

Unless the Committee decides otherwise, its meetings will not be open to the public. Shortly after its first meeting, however, the Committee will solicit written statements from members of the University community concerning the appropriate structure of student government. After receiving such statements, the Committee will proceed to develop and publish its tentative recommendations. It will hold at least two public meetings thereafter so that members of the University community may comment on the recommendations. A final report will then be completed and submitted to the Vice President for Academic Affairs. If possible, The Committee's report will be submitted on or before January 12, 1990.

If the recommendations of the Committee are such that a vote of the student body is called for, the Vice President will schedule the vote during the third week following receipt of the Committee's report if classes are being taught during that week. If classes are not being taught, that vote will be scheduled during the first week thereafter that regular classes are meeting.

Correspondence

Please submit the name(s) of Committee members in writing to Ms Belinda Marner, 114 Jessup Hall as soon as possible, but at least by Thursday, November 9, 1989.

Anti-U.S. rally by Iranian radicals falters

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Radicals' effort to turn the 10th anniversary of the U.S. Embassy seizure into a show of strength backfired badly, indicating widening support for President Hashemi Rafsanjani.

The 10,000 to 15,000 who turned up for a rally outside the former embassy Saturday is an insignificant number in Iran, where attendance at such protests is usually counted in the hundreds of thousands.

The failure of the rally to develop into a massive anti-U.S. demonstration was all the more telling since it had been preceded by a week of radical exhortations for people to mark the anniversary "more splendidly than ever."

Iranians had been urged to turn the event into "a day of hatred for world arrogance led by the United States" to hail the Nov. 4, 1979, storming of the embassy by militants.

They held 52 diplomats and other embassy personnel hostage for 444 days in what Iranians viewed as a revolutionary triumph that humiliated the United States.

The rally was addressed by radical leader Ali

Akbar Mohtashemi, the former interior minister whom Rafsanjani dropped from his Cabinet.

The climax came at the end of a 50-minute anti-American diatribe by Mohtashemi with the burning of 160 American flags.

Diplomats and other observers cautioned that the relatively poor turnout should not be interpreted as a lessening of still widespread anti-American sentiment in Iran or of inflexible Islamic doctrines.

These were imposed by the late revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. His death June 3 and the July 28 election of Rafsanjani raised hopes that Iran's leadership would move the country away to some extent from clerical domination.

Nonetheless, the slogan-covered banners carried by hundreds of students who marched from Tehran University across the city to the former U.S. Embassy compound underlined that Khomeini's spirit lives on.

The most striking slogan proclaimed: "Compromise with the United States is religiously forbidden, as the Imam (Khomeini) said," and "the Imam's line is to fight the United States."

This rejectionist approach contrasted with Rafsanjani's perceived policy of seeking rapprochement with the West to end Iran's isolation and help fund reconstruction, badly needed after the eight-year Iran-Iraq war.

At a news conference last week, Rafsanjani indicated readiness for better relations with Washington, anathema to the radicals.

His approach appears to have the backing of many people increasingly resentful of the continuing hardships they have to endure, resulting as much from the war as from the strict Islamic rules imposed by Khomeini.

Many people believe that last year's cease-fire in the war indicated a general improvement in Iran's relations with the rest of the world, particularly the rich Western countries that could help the postwar rebuilding.

This improvement has accelerated since Rafsanjani's election, as underlined by the flow of business and diplomatic contacts with Western European governments.

Memorial to civil-rights martyrs unveiled

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A generation after Medgar Evers and Martin Luther King Jr. were killed, the nation's first memorial to martyrs of the civil-rights movement was unveiled Sunday as relatives expressed hope that young people will carry on the spirit of that turbulent era.

Several people cried as they touched the cool water that flows across a circular black granite slab engraved with important events of the era, including the names of 40 people who died in the struggle for racial equality.

The memorial is of the same material and by the same architect as the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington.

"I hope this will vitalize the struggle, keep it fresh in the minds... for the youth," said Ollie Gordon, a Chicago schoolteacher whose cousin, 14-year-old Emmett Till, was shot to death in 1955 by whites angered that he had spoken to a white woman.

"I talk about Martin Luther King and ask why we celebrate his birthday, and many children don't know," Gordon said.

More than 400 law enforcement officers provided security for the dedication ceremony to be held after relatives viewed the monument.

"It's a very moving experience," said Myrtle Evers of Los Angeles, whose husband, Medgar, was the highest-ranking NAACP officer in Mississippi when he was assassinated in 1963. "It says to me that there's hope."

Julian Bond, the first black state lawmaker in Georgia, said it was important to remember others besides King and Evers who died in the struggle.

"Without degrading Dr. King, this was a lot more than a Martin Luther King movement," he said. "Many were ordinary, everyday people who rose above their ordinariness to make a difference."

The $700,000 monument also honors James Chaney, Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner, who were shot to death during the 1964 Freedom Summer and whose slayings inspired the recent movie "Mississippi Burning."

man's mother, Carolyn Goodman of New York City, described the memorial designed by Maya Lin.

"Nobody who sees it cannot feel that it's a moving, moving piece of art," Goodman said. "It brings that period so vividly alive that you can almost relive it."

The monument is in front of the Southern Poverty Law Center, a few blocks from the Alabama Capitol, where Jefferson Davis took the oath of office as president of the Confederacy in 1861, and near the Baptist church where King launched the Montgomery bus boycott in 1955.

The 9-foot-high granite wall is inscribed with words King chose for his first speech during the bus boycott: "Until justice rolls down like water and righteousness like a mighty stream."

Martin Luther King III, a county commissioner in Atlanta, said he thought his father's words were "very appropriate."

He said the memorial focuses attention on inequalities that still exist and will serve as a hands-on history lesson for young people.

"Perhaps they can get an understanding of why people lost their lives," King said.

The law center published a 104-page magazine that tells the story of each person named on the monument, and copies were sent to schools around the country.

Poll: Profs unsatisfied with educational standards

NEW YORK (AP)—College teachers are generally satisfied with their jobs but disdain autocratic administrators and lazy, grade-grubbing students who lack basic skills, according to a survey released Sunday.

Two-thirds of the 5,450 campus faculty polled by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching believe there has been a widespread lowering of standards in United States' higher education.

Three-quarters consider their students "seriously unprepared in basic skills," and 68 percent feel colleges spend too much time and money teaching students what they should have learned in high school.

"Public education, despite six years of reform, is still producing inadequately prepared students," concluded the survey, "The Condition of the Professoriate: Attitudes and Trends, 1989." It was the fourth survey of its kind since 1969.

Fifty-five percent agreed that most undergraduates at their schools "only do enough to get by."

Former Hawkeye recruit to redshirt at Illinois

Scott Gregory
Special to The Daily Iowan

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Illinois freshman basketball player Deon Thomas will redshirt this season, thereby clearing the way for his immediate return to practice, university officials announced Saturday.

Thomas and Illinois are awaiting word from the NCAA concerning accusations of wrongdoing during the school's recruitment of the freshman.

Thomas and school officials decided Oct. 14 the freshman would not practice with the team until it received word from the NCAA concerning the accusations. However, the amount of practice time Thomas has missed is a factor in the team's decision to redshirt the freshman, school officials said.

"We agree that this action is in the best interest of everyone," University Chancellor Morton Weir said in a prepared statement. "It will lessen the burden on Deon Thomas' academic, athletic and campus life while giving us time to resolve this matter."

"The hope was that we could quickly clarify the matter and make a definite decision. Unfortunately, despite the complete cooperation of all parties, the nature of the questions and the conflicting information have not lent themselves to early and definitive answers.

"Athletic Director John Mackovic and I, and Deon Thomas and his attorney, will continue to work in the spirit of cooperation in pursuit of a complete resolution of this matter."

Redshirting means Thomas will not be able to play in any regular-season games. However, when the matter is cleared up, the decision to redshirt the freshman could be reviewed, school officials said.

The NCAA announced July 3 it was collecting information regarding Illinois' recruitment to Thomas. Reports said Iowa assistant basketball coach Bruce Pearl has possession of tapes in which Thomas allegedly admits to accepting $80,000 and a Chevrolet Blazer as inducements to attend Illinois.

Allegations also involve a recruiting visit Thomas made to Illinois. Officials at Simeon High School said Thomas stayed with an Illini player during the trip, which is a violation of NCAA rules.

Illini basketball coach Lou Henson took assistant Jim Collins off recruiting until the situation is clarified.

Court action?

An attorney for Thomas said Thursday his client will seek court action if the university will not allow Thomas to practice with the team.

The University announced Oct. 15 it would keep Thomas out of practice until the NCAA responded to accusations of wrongdoing within the Illinois program. But Thomas' attorney, J. Steven Beckett, said in a release that the school is violating Thomas' rights by prolonging the situation.

"Deon will make a final effort with (school) officials to protect and insure his individual rights," Beckett said. "Failing relief from those officials, he will have no alternative but to seek vindication within our judicial system."

Beckett said Thomas asked the school for clearance to practice Oct. 26, but administrators asked the freshman to wait one more week.

"One more week has now passed, and it is the apparent position of the University of Illinois that when

Illinois tramples Hawkeyes, 31-7

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa football team went into its game with No. 8 Illinois Saturday with hopes of improving its chances for a ninth-straight bowl invitation. But those aspirations were greatly dampened as the Fighting Illini defeated Iowa 31-7 at Kinnick Stadium.

The win left Illinois undefeated after five games in the Big Ten and 7-1 overall. Iowa is 2-3 and 4-4.

The way Saturday's game started, it seemed as though the Hawkeyes would have a chance to come out with a close game. But three touchdowns by Illinois in the last five minutes of the second quarter quickly changed the complexion of the contest.

The offensive burst by the Illini at the close of the first half that turned a competitive game into a rout, has had an emotional affect on his team, Iowa coach Hayden Fry said.

"Our guys really are down now because we thought we had a legitimate shot to win — and we did," Fry said. "We just couldn't pull it off. It's going to be a real test of character."

"We went to a bowl game last year with six victories and three ties, and Illinois went to a bowl game last year with six victories," Fry said. "Not that we can win seven ball games, but we have three games remaining, and we've won four. So mathematically we still, I would think, have an opportunity. But I don't make that decision; that's up to the bowl people."

The Illini, who will battle Big Ten co-leader Michigan next week for a possible Rose Bowl berth, had 507 total offensive yards, 302 passing and 205 on the ground. The Hawkeyes totaled 291 in the air and 49 rushing.

Illinois started its scoring drive with a Howard Griffith 1-yard touchdown run with 5 minutes and nine seconds left in the second quarter.

Their next two touchdowns came within the last two minutes of the first half, off a pair of interceptions thrown by Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers.

"The two-minute drive at the end of the second quarter, I think, was especially good for us," Illinois coach John Mackovic said. "We made

Fighting Illini defense lives up to No. 1 ranking

Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers has been intercepted eight times in the Hawkeyes' last five Big Ten matchups. The Illinois defense can take credit for half of those.

The Illinois defense, ranked No. 1 in the nation against the pass before Saturday's 31-7 victory over Iowa at Kinnick Stadium, did nothing to tarnish that standing. They nabbed four interceptions from Rodgers, putting the Illini offense in great field position for much of the contest.

Rodgers' first interception came late in the second quarter when Illini defensive back Henry Jones leaped in front of a pass intended for Iowa running back Mike Saunders. Jones returned the ball 38 yards to set up Illinois' second touchdown with 3:19 left in the half.

On the Hawkeye's next possession, Illinois linebacker Steve Glasson swiped his first of two interceptions on the day, stepping in front of a pass intended for tight end Michael Titley. Glasson's 16-yard return eventually led to Illinois' third touchdown which came with 12 seconds remaining in the first half.

Another costly Iowa turnover occurred when Rodgers was again picked off by Glasson with 10:55 in the third quarter.

Not only did Glasson's interception set up the fifth successful Illinois scoring drive, it also marked a career high for the 6-foot-2, 233-pound senior who had never registered two interceptions in the same game.

"I'm just ecstatic," Glasson said.

"This was the best game I ever played. This is a real high for me."

Rodgers was credited with a career high of his own when Illinois linebacker Bill Henkel upped the Iowa quarterback's interception total to four with 1:06 remaining in the game. The sophomore signal-caller has now thrown 10 interceptions in his first year as a starter.

Glasson said that while Rodgers

U.S. sports two seconds in Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Martin felt calm before Sunday's New York City Marathon, and that was good. Kim Jones was too nervous to sleep, that was good, too.

The two Americans were each impressive second-place finishers Sunday. Martin, a two-time winner of the Pittsburgh Marathon, trailed Juna Ikangaa of Tanzania, while Jones placed runner-up to Norway's Ingrid Kristiansen just four weeks after winning the Twin Cities Marathon.

"When you're anxiety's high, you're economy is terrible," explained Martin, a former steeple-chaser at Oregon whose time of 2 hours 11 minutes and 38 seconds was 11 minutes behind Ikangaa.

"You got to be real loose, then you're at your premium. I thought, 'Alright, I'm just going to hang out, laugh and not worry about it.'"

While Martin went out Saturday night and enjoyed dinner with friends, Jones stayed in with her husband, nibbled on noodles and bread and avoided discussing the race.

"I tried to sleep last night but I couldn't, which was a good sign for me," said Jones, a resident of Spokane, Wash., whose time of 2:27:54 was the seventh-fastest performance ever by an American woman and the best by a U.S. runner since Joan Benoit Samuelson's American record of 2:21:21 in 1985.

NYC Marathon field

"It means I'm restless and anxious to get started. I just ate lightly and tried to stay away from people who would say, 'Are you crazy to run four weeks after the last marathon?'"

On the course, however, their styles reversed. Martin seemed to burn off energy quicker, tiring towards the end, breathing heavily and looking up and down. He said that he had wanted to run with defending champion Steve Jones of Britain, who finished a disappointing eighth.

"I had hoped that Steve and I were going to work together and catch Ikangaa," Martin said. "I was a little surprised when Steve dropped out. I don't like to run alone so those last 10 miles were kind of tough."

Kim Jones never threatened to catch Kristiansen, but maintained a smooth pace throughout as she glided ahead of the other runners.

Iowa ends regular season undefeated

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The regular season is over for the 1989 version of the Iowa field hockey team, and after 20 games, the No. 3 Hawkeyes didn't lose a game, at 18-0-2.

Iowa hammered Ohio State 7-1 Friday at Columbus, Ohio, then topped Northern Illinois 2-0, to finish as the first-ever champion of the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference. The wins should also hand the Hawkeyes the home site in the opening round of the NCAA tournament this weekend.

"This team should be recognized and congratulated for the things they've accomplished," Beglin said. "They've really worked hard to get where they're at."

The shutout over the Huskies was the 13th of the year for the Hawkeyes. That ties Iowa goalkeeper Eileen Moyer with the 13-shutout season of former all-American Donna Lee in 1981.

The Hawkeyes also became the first team in school history to go undefeated through a regular season.

Beglin said the only disappointment was that her team didn't get the shutout Friday.

"Friday's game was a great game," Beglin said. "Anytime you score seven goals, you've done well. We hit a high percentage of goals from the corners."

"We gave up a goal, and that's something we didn't want to do. We always emphasize going for a shutout."

Iowa breezed past the Buckeyes 4-0 earlier in the season, but needed a late goal in regulation and one in overtime to beat the Huskies 3-2.

Beglin said the Northern Illinois game was as difficult this time around as the first meeting. "Northern Illinois was much more of a struggle than Ohio State," Beglin said. "It's hard to play two real solid games in a row. It's tough to do against Northern Illinois."

"In the second half, we played a lot better offense. It was a total team effort."

In that game, senior forward Erica Richards scored at 5:30 of the first half on a penalty stroke. That gave her 23 goals on the season, but not the team lead.

Earl, Lookingbill impress at intrasquad

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR RAPIDS — One week has seemed to make a good deal of difference to the Iowa basketball team.

After putting on a lackluster display eight days ago at Valley High School in West Des Moines during the first intrasquad game of 1989, Sunday's display at the Five Seasons Center was a showing that coach Tom Davis could find a little more pride in.

"I think this was a good workout," Davis said of the black-shirts 110-69 win over the white-shirts. "This is a great place to play. It's more of a game-like atmosphere because it's more like a Big Ten arena."

This was the third scrimmage for Iowa. Last Sunday, the Hawkeyes played at Creston, Iowa, and will travel to Rock Island, Ill.,

Sunday for the last intrasquad tuneup.

Iowa plays exhibitions against the Soviet National team Nov. 14 and Athletes in Action Nov. 19. The Hawkeyes open the regular season with Texas Southern Nov. 24. All three games are at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The results of the scrimmage have a couple of Hawkeyes hoping that league play might hold the same kind of results.

Redshirt freshman Acie Earl paced the white-shirts and all scorers with 28 points, 18 coming in the second half. Earl also contributed eight rebounds, two blocked shots and three stealto the effort.

"As far as scoring, this is probably my best game," the Moline, Ill., native said. "I don't know if I can do this all the time. It depends on what the team needs."

Cowboys beat 'Skins for first win

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys gave Jimmy Johnson his first NFL coaching victory after eight losses as Paul Palmer rushed for 110 yards and the game's only touchdown in a 13-3 upset Sunday night of the Washington Redskins.

The Cowboys (1-8) won for only the second time in their last 21 games. Both have come against the Redskins at RFK Stadium. The 0-8 start was the second-worst in Cowboy history. They lost their first 10 games in 1960, their inaugural season under Tom Landry, the man Johnson replaced.

By winning, Johnson averted the embarrassment of losing as many games in consecutive weeks in the NFL as he did in five years at Miami, Fla., where he won a national championship.

Holyfield creeps closer to Tyson

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Evander Holyfield moved closer to a shot at heavyweight champion Mike Tyson with an eighth-round knockout of bloodied Alex Stewart on Saturday night.

Holyfield, the No. 1 contender, overcame a cold that affected his stamina and stopped Stewart's record run of knockouts when referee Tony Perez stopped the bout nine seconds from the end of the round. It was the 23rd straight victory and 19th knockout for Holyfield, the 1984 Olympic bronze medalist who is 5-0 as a heavyweight.

Holyfield also has held the WBA junior heavyweight and the IBF and WBC cruiserweight crowns. He is expected to fight Tyson sometime next year.

Canzoneri excels in ITCA

The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's tennis standout Liz Canzoneri defeated three consecutive opponents, including wins over the No. 9 and No. 3 seeds in the ITCA tennis tournament in Madison this past weekend before falling to Stephanie Reece of Indiana, the No. 1 seed, in the quarterfinals 6-1, 2-6, 6-4.

According to coach Micki Schilling, Canzoneri's performance marked the farthest an Iowa player has ever gotten at the ITCA competition.

two great catches, picked up the blitz well and Jeff George showed why he is special for us and for any team."

Iowa's only score came from a Nick Bell run into the end zone with 14:56 left in the fourth quarter.

Overall, the Illini intercepted four of Rodgers' passes and extended their streak to 28-consecutive quarters in which they haven't allowed a touchdown pass.

Even though Rodgers' performance was not quite up to standard, Fry said he didn't consider replacing him on the field.

"You never do that unless you want to cut the heart out of the man," the coach said. "I felt sorry for him. He got clobbered time after time."

"I just made some dumb mistakes again," Rodgers said. "There were a couple times I threw right to the guy."

The treatment of Iowa's signal-caller was simply commonplace for the way a team who is ranked first in the nation in pass defense and No. 4 in the nation in rushing defense.

"It's very obvious that Illinois has a tremendous defense," Fry said. "They were tougher defensively inside the 15 than any team I've seen in my college coaching career."

Before Saturday's game, Rodgers and Illinois quarterback Jeff George were tied in the league with 10 touchdown passes this year. But George, who transferred from Purdue to Illinois in 1987, increased his number to 11 after the Illini victory.

Overall, George connected on 28 of 44 attempts against the Iowa defense, for 302 yards and one touchdown, a 25-yard strike to Mike Bellamy just before halftime.

has a good arm, he "looked better on film," and didn't seem to throw with authority.

"I don't think he even saw me," Glasson said. "I think anyone could have walked in and caught those."

Illinois coach John Mackovic was pleased with both Glasson's performance and that of his entire defensive unit.

"Steve showed what he can do," Mackovic said. "We're happy he made those interceptions. He had some earlier this year that he dropped, so we're tickled he got those (Saturday)."

"Our defense did a good job of getting the ball back for us," he continued. Even in the third and fourth quarters, we yielded only one touchdown. They made two great stops when it looked like Iowa was going to make a run for it in the second half... it seemed the defense came up with the big play all afternoon.

Even in previous matchups, Iowa quarterbacks have helped enhance Glasson's statistics. Senior Tom Poholsky, now a backup for the Hawkeyes, threw Glasson the first pass interception of his college career when Iowa last played Illinois three years ago.

some person or entity makes an allegation about University of Illinois sports, that allegation should be believed and the burden rests on the person affiliated with the (university) sports program to disprove it," Beckett said. "This notion is contrary to principals of due process, and fair dealing inherent in our system, and specifically inherent within the (school) governance."

School officials declined comment on the situation.

The university received notice July 3 that the NCAA was collecting information on Illinois' recruitment of Thomas to decide whether an official inquiry was warranted.

Reports say Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl has possession of tapes in which Thomas admits to accept-

"Sometimes it might be rebounding or blocking some shots or defense."

Sophomore Wade Lookingbill led the winners with 24 points, hitting all his shots from the field and free-throw line, and producing a number of turnovers on the press.

"I played loose and relaxed," Lookingbill said. "I got a chance to start, and I went out and played a lot better than I had in the other scrimmages.

"My shot is usually a 15- or 16-footer on the break, and I got that tonight."

Davis said Lookingbill's offensive game hinges on his discipline as a shooter.

"Wade's shot looked better," Davis said. "He's learned what shots to put up and the ones he'll make a higher percentage of the time."

The battle between sophomores Troy Skinner and Brian Garner for the starting spot at point guard still remains undecided, Davis said.

He said the two will rotate throughout the preseason and exhibitions. Skinner has started all three scrimmages, but Davis said Garner will start in the final tuneup.

Skinner started Sunday for the black-shirts, teaming with Lookingbill, Matt Bullard, Les Jepsen and James Moses. Sophomore Ray Thompson was out of the lineup with a banged-up right knee.

"It's not that bad," Thompson said. "I just bumped it a couple of days ago, and I won't be out too long."

Moylan named MVP at Classic tourney

Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Iowa volleyball player Janet Moylan didn't expect to be named Most Valuable Player of the Golden Dome Classic at Notre Dame last weekend.

But, as the Hawkeyes defeated the Fighting Irish 15-6, 9-15, 6-15, 15-6, 15-6 Saturday, that was the honor the 5-foot-7 setter received.

"I was shocked a little," Moylan said. "My mom had her camera there, but she didn't even have it out. She was kind of upset that she missed the picture."

"For the most part they usually don't give that to setters. It's usually a big hitter or someone who is really seen. Setters just do their job."

The junior from Chicago did that job well for her team last weekend, tallying 45 assists, 18 digs, one solo block and three block assists and hitting .250 against Notre Dame.

Moylan also hit .200 with 25 assists, one service ace, six digs, one solo block and three block assists in the Iowa's 15-5, 15-12, 15-6 win over Southwest Texas State in the first round of the tournament Friday.

The Hawkeyes have now won eight straight matches, and stand at 19-6 overall.

"It's all coming together," Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said. "We've played very good at times in games, not in matches but in games, but we played perfectly in the first game against Notre Dame."

According to Nelson, juniors Jenny Rees and Ginger Lorentson were also key performers for the Hawkeyes.

Rees had a hitting percentage of .500 Friday with eight kills, six digs and two service aces. On Saturday, the 5-foot-10 outside hitter made 15 kills out of 38 attempts with five errors for an attack average of .263.

"I felt good," Rees said. "It was pretty positive. I came off a slump so it really helped me mentally."

"Jenny Rees had her two best nights ever," Nelson said. "She changed the whole momentum in the fifth game with five or six tips. That was the best that she has hit all season in any two matches in a row."

Lorentson totalled 12 digs, one kill and two service aces over the two matches. According to Nelson, Lorentson really excelled in her defensive play.

"Ginger played some defense that was unbelievable," Nelson said. "And (Saturday) was the first time that she hit .250, and she hadn't been serving tough, but she had two service aces against Notre Dame."

Green Bay Packers quarterback Don Majkowski signals a touchdown Sunday in the final seconds of the game against the Chicago Bears. Majkowski threw the TD pass to Sterling Sharpe which tied the game at 13-13, but the call was questioned and the replay official gave Green Bay the score. Packers kicker Chris Jacke kicked the winning extra point.

Vikings give Rams fourth-straight loss

(AP) — Never, in 16 years of overtime, had a game ended with a safety — until Sunday.

Minnesota's Mike Merriweather blocked Dale Hatcher's punt 2:14 into overtime for a safety after Rich Karlis had kicked seven field goals as the Vikings beat the Los Angeles Rams 23-21. Los Angeles has lost four straight games after opening with five straight victories.

Packers 14, Bears 13
Don Majkowski's 14-yard, fourth-down touchdown pass to Sterling Sharpe with 32 seconds left was disallowed by the referee, who was reversed by a replay official.

Falcons 30, Bills 28
Paul McFadden kicked a 50-yard field goal with two seconds remaining for Atlanta (3-6). The lead changed hands three times in the last 82 seconds before McFadden won it with his third field goal.

Jets 27, Patriots 26
Pat Leahy kicked a 23-yard field goal on the final play of the game for New York (2-7), which snapped a five-game losing streak.

Oilers 35, Lions 31
Warren Moon rallied Houston from a 10-point, third-quarter deficit with touchdown passes of 6 yards to Ernest Givins and 7 to Drew Hill.

Browns 42, Buccaneers 31
Cleveland intercepted Vinny Testaverde four times and returned two of them for touchdowns on successive plays in the first half.

Dolphins 19, Colts 13
Rookie Sammie Smith gained 123 yards on 25 carries, the first 100-yard rushing day since 1987 for Miami (5-4), which has won four of its last five games. The Dolphins won for only the second time in 14 games against the AFC East.

Chiefs 20, Seahawks 10
Christian Okoye, the NFL's leading rusher, gained 126 yards and quarterback Steve Pelluer scrambled for 69 yards and a touchdown for Kansas City (4-5). Okoye has run for 933 yards this season.

Raiders 28, Bengals 7
Bo Jackson, playing his fourth game since the baseball season ended, gained 159 yards on 13 carries and scored two touchdowns, including one on a Raiders' record 92-yard run.

Giants 20, Cardinals 13
Jeff Hostetler, subbing for the injured Phil Simms, threw for 177 yards in his second NFL start and also scored his first two career touchdowns as the Giants won their fourth straight. They are 8-1, their best start since 1930.

Hostetler completed 12 of 24 passes, rushed for 47 yards on 5 carries and scored on runs of 19 and 3 yards.

Hawk swimmers finish third in home meet

Erica Welland

When the Iowa women's swimming and diving team hosted Michigan, Nebraska and Brigham Young Friday and Saturday at the Field House Pool, the coaches knew they were in for some tough competition.

"We came up against two very experienced teams with Michigan and Nebraska being their conference champs," Iowa assistant swimming coach Jim Sheridan said. "I think we expected to just try to swim well . . . We handled the meet really well; we didn't let down."

Michigan won the meet with 199 points, followed by Nebraska with 137, Iowa with 94 and Brigham Young with 57.

"The main thing is we swam real tough," Iowa head swimming coach Peter Kennedy said. "We were real competitive. We faced up to the competition and never backed off."

Diver Katy Ketoff was a strong leader for the Hawkeyes, capturing both the 1- and 3-meter springboard competitions with 250.4 and 257.5, respectively.

The leading Iowa freshman was Gaeth, who timed 57.4 seconds in his part of the 3 x 100 breast relay and :26.1 in the 50-yard breaststroke leg of the 200 medley relay.

"I'm surprised everyone went so fast so early in the season," Kellner, who went :46.3 in the 100-yard leg of the crescendo relay, :20.1 anchoring the 200 medley relay, and :46.9 in his part of the 400 free relay, said.

Iowa takes 6 firsts in relay meet

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

There came a little hope for the Iowa men's swimming team Sunday when they participated in the Northwestern relays in Evanston, Ill.

After being hit hard by graduation and other circumstances which have depleted the team of some top swimmers, the Hawkeyes scored 122 points to take first place in Sunday's meet.

M. Swimming

Southern Illinois, the only non-Big Ten team at the meet, finished second with 108 points, followed by Michigan State with 92, Illinois with 62, Indiana with 48, Ohio State and Purdue in a tie for sixth with 22 points and Northwestern in eighth with eight.

"We still have holes," Iowa head coach Glenn Patton said. "But it was a real boost for the team's confidence level because to win you really have to have depth."

"We did pretty well," Iowa junior Roland Zschiegner said. "It gives an indication of what we can do; we can have a positive outlook on the season."

According to Patton, the biggest area in which the team is lacking is the sprints. That results from three of last year's top sprinters graduating, another transferring to Southern California and the number-one sprint recruit quitting school to join the Marines earlier this fall.

The Hawkeyes' claimed six first places en route to their first victory of the season. Those wins were by Rob Leyshon, Brad Gaeth and Doug Mencl in the 3 x 100-yard breaststroke relay; Tomasz Gawronski, Erik Bacon, John Wilson and Timur Wojdat in the 800 freestyle relay; Steve Mayes, Todd Kellner, Gawronski and Wojdat in the 500 free crescendo relay; Gawronski, Knut Landboe and Wojdat in the 3 x 500 free relay; Matt Smith, Gaeth, Bacon and Kellner in the 200 medley relay; and Kellner, Wilson, Gawronski and Wojdat in the 400 free relay.

Although this meet doesn't count in the records of the teams, Patton said it is a good way to open the season.

"It's laid back and not as high pressure," Patton said.

"It's a good entry meet for the season," Gawronski agreed. "It was a lot of fun without any pressure . . . And I was glad the freshmen did so well."

Indiana's Thompson sets touchdown mark

Thompson's record-breaker

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Blake Ezor, overshadowing an NCAA career touchdown record by Indiana's Anthony Thompson, rushed for 203 yards and four touchdowns Saturday as Michigan State beat the Hoosiers 51-20 in a Big Ten Conference game.

Thompson's 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter was his 60th, breaking the former career record of 59 he shared with Glenn Davis of Army and Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh. He also moved into third place in NCAA career scoring with 364 points.

But Ezor, who has rushed for 453 yards and scored seven touchdowns in the past two games against Indiana, dominated the Hoosiers' defense once again. He had 153 yards and two touchdowns as Michigan State took a 24-13 lead in the first half, then scored twice more in the third quarter as the Spartans made the game a rout.

Wolverines 42, Boilermakers 27
ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan was playing for history Saturday, but Purdue freshman Eric Hunter refused to be a mere footnote.

Fourth-ranked Michigan became the second school in NCAA history to win 700 games as Tony Boles scored three touchdowns, one on an 85-yard kickoff return, and the Wolverines held off Purdue and the red-hot Hunter 42-27.

Hunter, a true freshman making his first start, became the first quarterback ever to pass for four touchdowns in a game against the Wolverines. Hunter completed 27 of 42 for 344 yards, including three touchdowns in the fourth quarter. He was intercepted twice.

Buckeyes 52, Wildcats 27
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Freshman tailback Dante Lee scored three touchdowns and rushed for 157 yards to join teammates Carlos Snow and Scottie Graham as Ohio State's first trio to each run for more than 100 yards in a game since 1970.

But Lee said he had never heard of Leo Hayden, John Brockington or Rex Kern, who accomplished the deed 19 years ago.

Lee, Snow and Graham combined for 359 of Ohio State's 456 rushing yards Saturday in leading a 52-27 assault against winless Northwestern to keep Buckeye hopes alive for the Big Ten championship. The victory was the fourth straight and left Ohio State with a 4-1 conference record and 6-2 overall.

"No, never heard of them," said Lee when asked about Hayden, Brockington and Kern, the last Ohio State threesome to rush for 100 yards each against Duke 19 years ago.

Peay wasn't surprised that the three backs all reached a hundred yards.

"What else is new?" said Peay. "We haven't stopped the run all year. Their tailbacks did a great job of assaulting our defense and we got out-blocked, out-tackled and out-executed. We can't use inexperience as an excuse."

Gophers 24, Badgers 22
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Wisconsin was at Minnesota's 30-yard line with about nine minutes to play, driving for what would have been the go-ahead touchdown.

Lionell Crawford threw a quick swing pass toward running back Robert Williams.

Silence tops tough field in Breeder's

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Sunday Silence barely beat Easy Goer and Nightfall, winning the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic and clinching horse of year honors Saturday.

It was a sweet victory for 76-year-old optimist Charlie Whittingham, who trains and co-owns Sunday Silence.

On the other hand, it cast a pall over victories in two previous Cup races on the program for Shug McGaughey, who trains Easy Goer.

"Three out of four — what more can I say?" Whittingham said after Sunday Silence added the Classic to his victories over Easy Goer in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Then the trainer who has won more than 500 stakes paid Sunday Silence the ultimate compliment.

"Sunday Silence is much the best horse I've trained so far, and he's just getting going," Whittingham said.

Whittingham said the colt, who couldn't be unloaded at sales as a yearling and as a 2-year-old, would probably race again next year. Easy Goer will race next year.

"They'll run the Breeders' Cup again next year," Whittingham said. "So maybe we'll come back and try for another $3 million."

Sunday Silence's victory in the richest event on the seven-race, $10 million card was worth $1.35 million and made him the richest 3-year-old in history with earnings of $4,578,454.

Prized, a 3-year-old making his debut on grass, won the $2 million Turf. Jeff Siegel, one of his four owners who is a syndicated newspaper handicapper, admitted he picked another horse.

Another Weiland graces OTL contest

It is with no little trepidation that the OTL staff unveils the winners list from last week's prognosticating endeavor. Donning loud and pretentious exclusive "OTL Winner" T-Shirts are the following: Geoff Leatham, Diane MacWilliams, Denise Walter, Mike Crise, Gary Muchow, Mike Weston, Jean Lantz, Scott Paper and (gulp!) Jerry Weiland.

Ah, we can hear the collective wails of anger and shock now. Weiland! Not Jerry Johnson, or Jerry Jackson, or Jerry Smith. Jerry Weiland. As in Erica "Sports Journalism Dynasty" Weiland, our trusty Assistant Sports Editor.

You're right. There's an undeniable connection here.

But wait. Before you contact the NCAA, FBI, CIA, KGB, or DOT with wild allegations about the DI's lack of contest ethics and wild talk about inside connections, let's take a quick peek at Erica's overall OTL record this year: 57-22.

57-22. Not bad. Not embarrassing, by any means. But not great. Certainly not enough of an edge to propel Dad into the winners circle.

On The Line

More evidence, you say. Maybe the videotape will prove it. Although the clips are pretty grainy, and the bloody carcasses of wild animals are a little graphic, we can show clearly that Erica Weiland picked her slate of winners by lobbing bloody animal hearts into a circle of lighted candles at midnight just prior to OTL deadline.

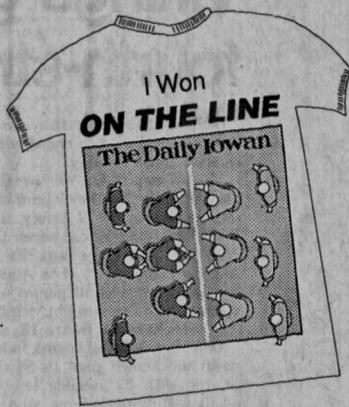

In stunning juxtaposition, Dad Weiland simply sat in an easy chair, innocently watching Sportscenter, and made his picks. Sure there was that ominous late night phone call, and the bloody footprints on the roof, and ... Go ahead, just try to prove anything.

Speaking of proving something, our Really Big Winner from last week is Josh Kunger, a UI freshman best known to UI students as Kiefer Sutherland's stunt double in "Lost Boys." Actually, Josh is a pre-business major whose Big Win was his first venture into the OTL elite circle. Josh claims he used "pure skill" to pick the winners, adding that he saw the teams "in a vision."

Sure, Josh. We'll be checking with the people at Active Endeavors to make sure that you really bought those "winter boots," instead of some Do-It-Yourself Satanic Rites tome published by Erica's Evil Death Cult.

Latin American rhythms please in 'Rei Momo'

Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

When the Talking Heads made their last album, "Naked," in 1988, much of the critical response centered around the band's use of African instruments and rhythms — a topic certainly worthy of discussion, but also one which drew attention away from David Byrne's ability to create conventionally catchy melodies under layers of "exotic" production.

On "Rei Momo," Byrne's first solo album (unless you count such diversions as "The Catherine Wheel" and "The Knee Plays"), the influence is Latin American music — a joyous revel of street-fair horns, celebratory Spanish chants and enough hooks to make Fine Young Cannibals green. Byrne recently described the record as "fun music," and that it is: Anyone who doesn't come away smiling must be on a steady diet of ugly pills.

Nobody in popular music has more fun singing than Byrne; he constantly stretches his voice, makes it wobble between registers — in short, he's not afraid to make himself sound goofy. The tack works especially well on "Rei Momo's" opener, "Independence Day," which begins as a mock-portentous takeoff on the Munsters theme and then takes a sudden, jubilant upswing in the chorus. Byrne is overcome with childlike glee as he sings, "We'll be lovers in the open/ We'll be lovers on Independence Day." That chorus — "Rei Momo's" keynote; it takes the entire album to blissful heights from which it rarely retreats.

The record's highlight is the ironically festive romp "Dirty Old Town," a story of slum dwellers of the future who manage to believe that "These days won't last forever/ These days won't last for long/ You know, somebody somewhere owes us a favor." The gradual adding of instrumental layers in the song gives it a kind of suspense; by the chorus' third repetition, the horn section has become a piercing, exultant welter that contrasts perfectly with the sardonic lyrics: "We wanna live in a dirty old town/ Building it up, tearing us down." For sheer melodicism, this song rivals any of Byrne's work with Talking Heads; it may be the most spontaneously real four minutes of music he's ever done.

It does take a while for some of the melodies to sink in; on first listen, all you really recognize is that the music is tightly constructed and pleasant to hear. Almost every song is propelled by a virtual army of players, and a stunning array of uncommon instruments (admittedly, I don't know what a coro, sencerro, iya, or shakere are, but it's nice to know they're being utilized). Byrne also throws in a string section on a few tracks, including the ethereal "Dream Police," a pretty, but frightening ditty which evokes the specter of dictatorial thought control.

David Byrne
Nancy Ellison

Records

Almost every song includes an array of uncommon instruments — I don't know what a coro, sencerro, iya, or shakere are, but it's nice to know they're being used.

Despite the instrumental uniformity, each song has its own unique character: "The Call of the Wild" gallops along to Byrne's stream-of-consciousness croon; "Lie to Me" contains stinging observations about modern culture ("Talk show religion/ And soap opera love/ Whatever happened to heavens above?"), punctuated by sharp volleys from the horn section; and "Marching Through the Wilderness" contains that rare and wonderful sort of chorus that the singer simply keeps repeating, for no other reason than that it's fun to hear.

Check it out, put it on, turn it up — this is the perfect, merry way for David Byrne, and us, to ride out the decade.

JC Landmark to feature variety of jazz styles

The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Landmark, the top jazz big band at the UI School of Music, will perform at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall.

The band, which is directed by School of Music faculty member Paul Scea, is the most select of three big bands in the school's jazz program. The 15 members include both graduate and undergraduate students, and most are music majors.

"The band is similar to groups we have had in the past, but the people have been in the program for a few years now. There is a higher quality of musicianship this year," Scea said.

The November 6 program will include music in a wide range of jazz styles. "There'll be contemporary music by students, old standards and even a little Caribbean music," Scea said.

The two student pieces are "And East Oon" by undergraduate Andy Parrott and "4 plus 1 equals 1" by undergraduate David Sulzberger. Parrott's piece was written especially for the band and was described by Scea as "a fairly contemporary jazz piece." Sulzberger's piece was written for a jazz arranging and composing class. "It goes back and forth from a swing feel to a funk groove, with a lot of solo space," Scea said.

A standard on the program is "Davenport Blues," composed by jazz great Bix Beiderbecke, a Davenport native. It was arranged by Gil Evans and adapted by Bob Washut. The performance will feature graduate student Jonathan Martin on trumpet.

The band will also play a piece by Scea, "Sir Real," which features soloists from each section of the band. The concert will finish with Gordon Goodwin's "Meet Me at the Carnival," a salsa-calyps number that will feature UI student Stuart Wood on saxophone.

Opening for Johnson County Landmark will be Jazz Omega Endorphine, a jazz trio from the small ensembles class in the School of Music. Members of the trio are undergraduate students Craig Macmillan, Tim O'Dell and Dave Pavkovich.

Forget Voguing! Let's Folk to the Indigo Girls

Only Exene Cervenka rises from the mire that is neo-folk corporate rock

Gregory Galloway
The Daily Iowan

Michelle Shocked, Indigo Girls and Tracy Chapman have all recently released albums, continuing the new folk craze. It is music that is geared toward the yuppie, CD-friendly buyer living on Fixation Street, who wants to keep both eyes on the bank and take only a brief glance at social consciousness. It's a "bad bad rock," this here revolution rock, and I ain't got no time for that.

Michelle Shocked began her career wanting everyone to believe that she hated studios and records when she released her first album, "Texas Campfire Tapes." She wore the guise of a purist, denouncing extraneous instrumentation and overdubs. Well, surprise; like a chameleon, Shocked has changed her tune, literally. She now wants to croon like a chanteuse; her new album "Captain Swing," is filled with pale imitations of dixieland jazz, with a few delta blues songs thrown in just in case you missed her eclectic diversity.

Shocked has moved from simply produced, acoustic-based songs to big band numbers à la Lyle Lovett. Except Lovett at least has a competent voice. Shocked's singing is filled with cracks and quivers, an advantage in the down-home folk approach, but an irritating nuisance in jazz and blues. Shocked is determined to be the new Sarah Vaughan, but she's not even close. No one ever said that Woody Guthrie or Bob Dylan had good voices, and at least they had sense enough to stay away from Sinatra's songbook.

"Silence is golden/ and words are lead," Shocked sings in "Silent Ways," and she proves it every time she opens her mouth, sinking "Captain Swing" straight to Davey Jones' Locker.

In an attempt to capitalize on inexplicable popularity, skeletons are frequently released from artist's closets. "strange fire" was the first album by Indigo Girls, independently released in 1987, and is the dentist, trying to extract all its teeth and turn it into a domesticated pet. She has successfully made music that is no bite and no bark, just a moan.

Her latest album, "Crossroads," has Chapman lifting lines from Robert Johnson, the bluesmaster who wrote constantly about his struggle with evil. It is rumored that Johnson sold his soul to the Devil; it is obvious that Chapman has sold hers to the Corporation.

It's a "bad bad rock, this here revolution rock," and I ain't got no time for that.

filled with songs that would get the duo laughed off the open mic in any folk club, but would easily land them a spot on "Star Search."

The songs are shallow pomposities, clichéd bravado posturings that are inoffensive but embarrassing. Do we need another love song that makes sophomoric comparisons between a lover and the moon? The true atrocity on the record, however, is a cover of the Youngblood's hit "Get Together." You might know this song from the "Freedom Rock" TV compilation, played while two hippies sit in front of their van. Imagine those two characters as women in front of a church and you have Indigo Girls, the '90s version of the Everly Brothers minus great songs and great voices.

Emily thanks "god's sense of humor," in the liner notes, and chances are He's having a good laugh over this mess.

Tracy Chapman has taken folk music to car to arrive, whereas the Clash demanded a brand new Cadillac, and if it wasn't delivered they were going to steal one. There is something to be said for aggressive non-violence, just ask Public Enemy. And while Chuck D and Co. might be reckless, at least they define a stance; Chapman timidly hides behind facile clichés, making her music nothing more than feckless.

All is not desperation, however; our critic in ad-land exile, John Shipley, has lurched unexpectedly into some worthwhile music. Shipley reviews the latest release by Exene Cervenka, "Old Wives' Tales":

"It was never a big X fan — like any good high-school alternative music buyer, I wanted to like them, but they just weren't very good. Kind of the Eagles of the underground; the critics liked them, but it was crap anyway.

"Maybe it was because Exene Cervenka didn't write enough of the material. Judging from her first solo record, 'Old Wives' Tales, this could well be the case. The album takes a deserved spot in the neo-female-folk-country-pop pantheon producing today's most consistently excellent material; and I do not speak of Tracy Chapman, Indigo Girls or Natalie Merchant.

"It's highly unlikely that you'll ever hear Tracy or Natalie singing about men tattooing their initials on their wives' ovaries, or hear Indigo Girls declaring 'every white trash wife deserves a romantic weekend in her life.' The world of 'Old Wives' Tales' is not the stuff of which hit records are made, and that's precisely why it's so endearing."

'Miss Daisy' drives point irresistably to audience

Play examines aging, prejudice

Jim Bernard
The Daily Iowan

"Driving Miss Daisy" is the story of a feisty Jewish woman (Rosemary Prinz) who becomes too old to drive, so her son Boolie decides to get a chauffeur for her, against her will. He hires Hoke (Ted Lange), a charming, elderly black man who pleases even Miss Daisy. As the play progresses Hoke and Miss Daisy build a friendship that remains strong even after she is unable to live at home and he is unable to drive.

Prinz dominated Saturday night's production of the play at Hancher Auditorium as the irresistibly ornery Miss Daisy, and Lange's Hoke was funny and sharp. But Fred Sanders' Boolie was weak throughout the show; delivering his lines in the same tone, he was easily overpowered by the other actors.

The play is presented as a series of vignettes spanning 20 years. Even without the textual and scenic cues, the passage of time was obvious from the acting as Miss Daisy and Hoke became visibly older in each scene. Forced to cope with their physical infirmities, the self-sufficient unit of Hoke and Daisy is broken.

Unfortunately the drama created by Daisy and Hoke's aging was the show's only clear tension. Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer Prize-winning script sets the stage for a very dynamic play that tackles major issues, but this production failed to realize the script's potential, and scenes; Hoke never gets angry with Daisy, and she never loses control. Martin Luther King Jr., the burning of Daisy's synagogue and "colored" bathrooms are discussed in much the same tone as they discuss Daisy's daughter, depriving their arguments any urgency.

"Driving Miss Daisy" was a "warm fuzzy" play. Saturday night the Hancher audience was given a satisfactory, easy to swallow performance, but it was a script filled with difficult ideas that weren't intended to be sugar-coated.

That Grammar Guy

Jake Stilgers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, Submitted today for your perusal is a coherent clarification of the oft-misunderstood differences between the verbs lay and lie.

Simply remember this apothegm: Lay is to place; lie is to recline. At the risk of inducing ennui, I endeavor to clarify. Lay is transitive and takes an object. Lie is intransitive and does not.

Therefore, I lay the pan flute (the object) on the table. Said pan flute does lie there.

The past tense of lay is laid, as is the past participle.

The past tense of lie is lay and the past participle is lain.

Hence, I lay the crayon on the radiator. Yesterday I laid one there. I have laid a crayon on the radiator once each day for the duration of my 36-count box. The carpet around the radiator is indeed resplendent with color.

Xanthippe, my delicate kitten, likes to lie in the scrambled eggs to keep warm. Yesterday morning she lay there for quite some time. The precocious and resourceful creature has lain in my breakfast every morning since we hired the new downstairs maid, who is in the habit of leaving the air conditioner touch-a-temp set at "glaciate."

The astute reader will notice, though no doubt having heard this abhorrent popular usage throughout the tanning season, that lay out, in reference to sunning oneself, is indeed quite wrong. At the risk of vexing ardent linguists, I must insist that if one says "lay out," as popular a phrase as it may be, one simply sounds, well, common. I humbly suggest "lie in the sun" as a more genteel alternative.

Oh, my intrepid language aficionados, I most gratefully thank you for your time and attention. Until next time, happy communicating.

Arts/Entertainment

'Media Culture' is now mainstream art

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine shampoo ads hanging in the Louvre, newspaper headlines in the National Gallery, television sets at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Advertising and Art. Soup cans and the Mona Lisa. Billboards and Michelangelo. Cable and Cubists. From November 9 through February 18 the Whitney Museum of American Art will present "Image World: Art and Media Culture," a wide-ranging exhibit of art and artifacts from the past 30 years, including posters, magazine montages and a stamp machine.

In a world where everything, even art, is for sale, "Image World" shows how commerce can be turned into art. "There's no way walking through the streets of New York one can avoid this visual culture of these popular images," said John Hanhardt, the Whitney curator who organized the show. "You can't even avoid television if you don't watch it. It influences the way people dress, what they buy, how they talk."

Media began creeping into art around 1912 when Braque and Picasso used newspaper bits in their Cubist collages. A few years later, Marcel Duchamp began appropriating actual consumer objects, such as a paint advertisement, into his art. The works of Berlin Dadaists John Heartfield and Raoul Hausmann consisted entirely of images cut from newspapers and magazines. Surrealist Salvador Dali directed segments of Hollywood movies, appeared in commercial advertisements and created "Dali's Dream House" specially for the 1939 World's Fair.

Also in 1939, Hollywood's most artistic and productive year ever headlined by "Gone With the Wind," an essay by art critic Clement Greenberg, "Avant-garde and Kitsch," warned that synthetic art had become "an integral part of our productive system in a way in which true culture could never be," and that its "enormous profits are a source of temptation to the avant-garde itself."

With the proliferation of television after World War II, cereal and toothpaste were being beamed into millions of homes every day. Philip Morris cigarettes were smoked on "I Love Lucy," quality theater was presented by General Electric and John Cameron Swayze was host for the "Camel News Caravan."

"Pop Art" was the response, an attempt to inject "truth" in advertising. It was created, ironically, by artists who had once worked in the advertising world. Warhol designed shoe posters; Rosenquist painted billboards in Times Square.

Starting in the late 1950s, Nam June Paik, Andy Warhol, James Rosenquist, Roy Lichtenstein and other artists attacked the onslaught of product and imagery, taking recognizable objects and placing them within the structure of the art world. That meant glossy portraits of cigarette ads, a television set coated in cement or a life-size porcelain sculpture of Michael Jackson and his chimpanzee.

"The show kind of tracks that response," said guest curator Marvin Heiferman. "You get a Warhol and wonder if it's critical or celebratory. You have a picture of an electric chair or Elvis Presley. Is he 'The King' or some tragic heroic figure? There's an enthusiasm and brashness which you didn't see before."

Technology. It's everywhere, and Pop Artists consumed it. Thanks to the portable movie camera, one didn't have to be a Hollywood director to make movies. Thanks to the silkscreen, a picture could be lifted off a newspaper and duplicated on canvas.

Anything can now be turned into art: manhole covers, toilets, subway signs. At the "Image World" exhibit, even the ticket booth can't be trusted. Dennis Adams, best known for his designs of bus shelters, has put together a special construction.

"It's the idea of a ticket booth, using images of homelessness instead," he said. "There are photographic images that create the walls of the ticket booth — large photographic images — and you'll be paying through the slot in the photograph."

"I love those structures. They bring capitalism to its most basic level, a small window with money being exchanged."

"Very simply, my work deals with the idea of taking a functional structure that everyone recognizes and using that as a kind of instrument for getting to another agenda," Adams said. "The functional element is just a kind of decoy, a way of making a viewer feel comfortable."

It may all seem, literally, a million miles away from the Sistine Chapel, but Rosenquist insists art and communication have always been linked.

"You go back to the gossip of the Renaissance paintings," he said. "Later on, printing started, and hand-in-hand with art, communication changed."
