CAC passes motion to remove new officers

Ann Marie Williams
 The Daily Iowan

Monday night's Collegiate Associations Council meeting was characterized by personal insults and continued arguing before a majority of councilors passed a motion to remove the new executives appointed by Vernon McKinley.

The motion, which was presented by councilor Laura Lasky, called for the removal of the officers because "they were not approved by the council, which violates the CAC constitution," Lasky said.

"The need for executives doesn't supersede the obligations the council has to its constitution," said councilor Rafi Arbel.

The issue of the constitutionality of the appointment was debated at length during the meeting.

"We learn in law school that the constitution is just a bunch of words which are subject to interpretation," said councilor Melanie Davis, a CAC College of Law representative. But councilors disagreed, saying not following the constitution would be the downfall of the CAC.

"We got into this situation by not following the constitution," Lasky said. "It's illegal — we're disregarding laws."

The debate ended when the motion passed to remove the executives. McKinley's position as parliamentary chair of the meeting was also revoked because he didn't follow proper parliamentary procedures, said councilor Syd Smith.

"Read my lips, you're cutting your own throats," said McKinley in response to the motion to oust his executives. "As far as I'm concerned, it's business as usual."

McKinley left the meeting with his executive board, leaving behind the councilors to continue discussion on the CAC's future.

Smith said a recommendation from the council to impeach McKinley is possible.

"Of course it's completely out of the ordinary for a president not to comply with the body," Smith said.

Both executives and councilors seemed frustrated with the proceedings, and many expressed dismay about the continual confrontation between the executives and councilors.

Kristi Holcomb, acting vice president, agreed.

"We've got to decide when we're going to become a council again," she said. "We can't keep doing things to cripple ourselves."

Much rests on council elections

Citizens determine fate of Westport Plaza

Tonya Feit
 The Daily Iowan

The fate of an Iowa City Council Comprehensive Plan change and three city council seats are up in the air until voters make their opinions known in the Iowa City elections today.

In the referendum included in the election, voters may reverse a comprehensive plan change that allows construction of Westport Plaza, a new 24-store shopping mall to be anchored by a Wal-Mart discount center.

Polls open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

In Iowa City Council elections, Darrel Courtney and Rick Graf are vying for the District B city council seat and Joe Bolkom, John McDonald and Naomi Novick are competing for the two available at-large seats.

Courtney is completing his first term on the Iowa City Council and a second year as mayor pro tem. At 40, he is a stockbroker with Dain Bosworth Inc. and received a bachelor of arts degree from the UI in industrial relations and psychology.

Graf is active in civil-rights efforts for people with AIDS through the Iowa Center for AIDS Education, which he helped found, and through the Johnson County AIDS Coalition.

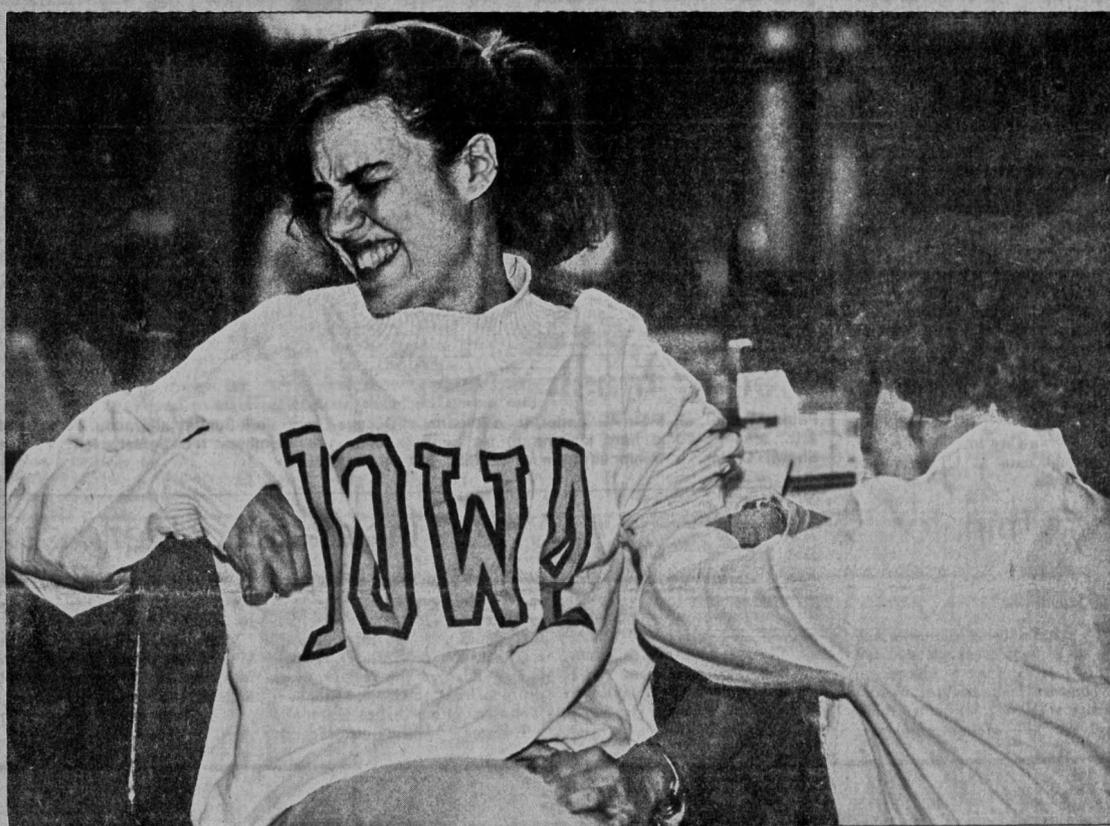

He is 40 years old and owns a residential and remodeling firm, Advanced Design Builders. He attended the UI for three years.

Bolkom is chairman of Environmental Advocates, serves on Gov. Terry Branstad's Environmental Agenda for the Nineties Committee, and is a member of the DNR's Toxic Air Emissions Review Panel.

At 33, he is the assistant for Consumer Affairs at the Johnson County Health Department. Bolkom holds a master's degree in public affairs from the UI.

McDonald is currently serving his second term as Iowa City mayor and has been an Iowa City Councilor for eight years. At 45, he is

Measles vaccine: UI rolls up sleeves

Deborah Gluba
 The Daily Iowan

When I got the letter from UI Student Health about getting a measles vaccine, I figured it was no big deal. As a graduating senior, the new requirement wouldn't affect me.

But after thinking it over for a few days and weighing the $22 moment of pain with the possibility of contracting measles during my last semester, I diverged from my typical ground floor Union path to the Main Ballroom.

Monday was the first day of five that the UI Student Health Service and the Iowa State Department of Public Health are giving measles shots.

The process is pretty simple, the most difficult part is getting past the Union catering workers enroute to the Old Gold Room registration area. Once you've made it that far, the only thing left to do is fill out several release forms and head to the Ballroom for the shot.

I went over the lunch hour on the first day and there was no waiting. I almost wish there had been because I felt I had to make a brave go of it and bee-line to the nearest available seat to get the thing over with as soon as possible.

The two nursing students that helped me, Allan and Peggy, were pretty at ease about the whole thing. Allan said he'd given shots many times before and the injection may sting for a second because it was cold.

"Little poke," he said, sticking me with a hypodermic needle in the back of my arm.

I let out a sigh, got a bandage and rolled down my sleeve. "No

Protesting E. Germans demand free elections

BERLIN (AP) — A half-million East Germans thronged the streets of Leipzig in a hard, cold rain Monday night to demand free elections and unlimited freedom to travel abroad.

More than 135,000 people rallied in other cities, including Schwerin, Halle, Cottbus, Dresden and Karl-Marx-Stadt, the news agency reported.

While East Germans at home protested, mass flight continued. The official news agency ADN said 23,200 citizens had gone to West Germany since the suspension of exit rules Saturday.

Lutheran Church sources said some marchers in Leipzig shouted "The Wall must go!" — demanding demolition of the Berlin Wall, symbol of East German repression for three decades.

ADN said banners demanding "Free elections" and "Travel law without restrictions" waved above the crowd, and others challenged Communist Party supremacy.

It said "several hundred thousand" people took part in the biggest rally so far in Leipzig, where some of the largest protests of the pro-democracy campaign have been held.

Michael Turek, a Lutheran pastor in the southern industrial city of 650,000, said by telephone about 500,000 people marched. A rally Saturday in East Berlin, where the crowd was estimated at 1 million, was the largest protest in the communist nation's 40-year history.

Members of New Forum, the largest pro-reform group, addressed the crowd in Leipzig, ADN said.

Protests have become Monday night events in Leipzig. Crowds at the last two were estimated at 300,000.

Dresden's march was authorized by authorities and led by Mayor Wolfgang Berghofer and the reform-minded local party chief, Hans Modrow. ADN said it was the first officially approved demonstration in the city.

Earlier Monday, the government published a new draft law that is expected to take effect before Christmas and will permit travel abroad for up to 30 days a year.

Flight through Czechoslovakia continued and people who stayed behind said they were unimpressed by reforms introduced by Egon

Candidate may become 1st black elected gov. in U.S.

The Associated Press

L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia and David Dinkins of New York campaigned to the finish line Monday in drives to shatter race barriers, one aiming to become America's first black elected governor and the other the first black mayor of the nation's largest city.

Democratic Rep. James Florio and underdog GOP Rep. James Courter sought last-minute support in New Jersey's gubernatorial contest, the other high-profile race in Tuesday's off-year elections that will be closely watched for signs of changing voter sentiment on abortion.

Ballots were also studded with hundreds of mayoral races, contests for other city and county offices and referendums.

J. Marshall Coleman, discounting polls that showed him trailing Wilder in Virginia, told a rally "the undecideds are breaking our way. ... We're absolutely on the eve of a great victory."

But Wilder, the lieutenant governor and grandson of freed slaves, countered that chances were "exceedingly good" he would win and lead a statewide Democratic sweep of three top offices.

There was no letup in Republican Rudolph Giuliani's attacks on Manhattan Borough President Dinkins, who has admitted failing to file income tax returns for four years two decades ago and has faced

Starck named director of J-school 2nd time

Jean Thilmany
 The Daily Iowan

Kenneth Starck, UI professor of journalism and mass communication, has been named director of the UI's School of Journalism and Mass Communications for the second time, officials announced Monday.

The announcement was made Monday by Gerhard Loewenberg, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts. Starck, who has agreed to serve for 3½ years in the position, will succeed Donald Smith, who is resigning as director effective at the end of this year.

This is Starck's second stint as director. He held the same position from 1975 to 1986. He won reaccreditation for the school while serving as director.

Starck said his top priorities are to restructure the administration of the journalism program and hire an associate director to coordinate the activities of the school.

"I look forward to this assignment with a great deal of enthusiasm," Starck said. "We have a strong journalism program and excellent faculty members. With support from the faculty and the dean, I am convinced that we have the resources to achieve distinction academically and professionally."

Among Starck's duties will be to prepare the school for its accreditation review scheduled for the fall of 1991. He has guided the journalism school through two reaccreditation processes in the past.

Starck has worked as a reporter and editor for newspapers in Illinois and Tennessee and has been a free-lance writer. He joined the UI in 1974 as an associate professor. Prior to that he taught at the University of South Carolina, Southern Illinois University and the University of Tampere in Finland.

He also was a Fulbright professor in Beijing, China.

The state Board of Regents must approve Starck's appointment.

Ambulance audit finds unaccounted $4,598

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan
and The Association Press

An Iowa state audit released Monday has discovered an unaccounted $4,598 in the Johnson County Emergency Ambulance Service accounts.

The audit calls for tighter accounting procedures, and a copy was turned over to J. Patrick White, Johnson County attorney.

The ambulance accounts from January 1986 to June 1989 came under close scrutiny when county officials discovered an unauthorized $11,971 checking account this summer.

The state auditors and county attorney began an audit to determine if funds had gone unreported or were misused by the ambulance service.

Dave Cole, Johnson County Ambulance director, allegedly controlled the unauthorized account, often receiving cash receipts from public funds, which superceded the county-approved budgeting procedure. About $545 reportedly was cashed in this manner.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will begin discussing the report and the future of the Johnson County Ambulance director at Tuesday's meeting.

Among the charges is that Cole or another ambulance employee on several occasions received cash receipts by endorsing checks written to the Johnson County Ambulance Department.

The county attorney and auditor aided the state investigators who verified the county findings and also discovered the missing $4,598.

About $1,400 was used for "questionable public purpose," said Tom Slockett, Johnson County auditor.

"We've cooperated with the state auditor in doing this report. Our involvement of this is finished," Slockett said.

According to the state auditor's report, disbursements from the account included "parties, entertainment, gifts, employee cash advances, donations and undocumented disbursements."

Slockett said the illegally expended funds include $928 for parties; $200 in cash; $160 for gifts; $10 in donations; and $102 undocumented expenditures.

Further, fees for cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes were deposited into the unauthorized account, along with some other collections.

The audit report noted that spending "may not meet the requirements of a public purpose" for which public money can be used.

"The line to be drawn between a proper and an improper purpose is very thin," according to the audit.

Alleged killer will stand trial in Iowa

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A murder suspect, who fled to Utah after allegedly strangling his wife in a hotel in Coralville, has waived his extradition rights and will be brought back to Iowa for trial within a few days.

Two Coralville Police Department officials traveled to the Ogden City Police Department in Utah Monday afternoon to make arrangements to transfer Frank Chewning from the Weaver County Jail in Utah — where he is currently being held — to the Johnson County Jail, said Ogden City Police Lieutenant, Mike Empey.

Chewning, 40, of Monmouth, Ill., was arrested Thursday in Ogden, Utah, by two foot patrol officers who were conducting routine checks on transients in the downtown area, Empey said.

After stopping Chewning with two other transients, the officers ran Chewning's name through the nationwide wanted list and found he was wanted in Iowa for murder.

"He did not resist, he was incarcerated without any problem," Empey said.

Chewning allegedly brought his wife to Iowa City to be treated for abdominal pain at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Exterminators plead not guilty in Village Inn manslaughter case

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

An exterminating company and one of its employees pleaded not guilty last Tuesday to charges of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of a Village Inn Pancake House employee, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The charges were brought against W.B. McCloud & Co. of Schaumburg, Ill., the exterminating company that fumigated the restaurant, and Stephen Plath of Davenport, a W.B. McCloud employee who supervised the fumigation that caused the death of a Village Inn assistant manager.

The victim, Terry Schneider, 19, was found dead in an employee restroom the day after the company fumigated the restaurant, 9 Sturgis Drive, on Oct. 5, 1988.

Johnson County Medical Examiner T.T. Bozek ruled the cause of death to be methyl bromide poisoning. Methyl bromide is a pesticide used by W.B. McCloud exterminators.

W.B. McCould and Plath performed the insecticide fumigation in a manner likely to cause death, according to court records.

The trial in the matter is set for April 23, 1990.

Courts

A Coralville man was charged with impersonating a public official Sunday after he allegedly identified himself as a Johnson County Deputy Sheriff who was checking a bar for minors, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Richard A. Duttlinger Jr., 18, 207½ Sixth St., Apt. 4, showed a badge to witnesses in the Hills Tap bar in Hills, Iowa, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 22, according to court records.

■ An UI student and his father were charged with assault resulting in bodily injury Saturday after they allegedly struck a woman who was trying to stop a physical fight between them, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The father, L. Charles Lentz, 44, 322 Sibley, Park Ridge, Ill., and the son, Corey A. Lentz, 18, 4518 Burge Residence Hall, were fighting outside of UI Hospitals and Clinics when they both allegedly struck the victim, leaving a bloody cut on her scalp, according to court records.

Corey Lentz was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $69 bail, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter for both defendants is set for November 22, according to court records.

■ A UI student was charged with third-degree theft Friday for allegedly stealing a UI couch valued at $250 on September 23, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Shawn K. Clausen, 18, 937 Slater Residence Hall, is scheduled to appear for arraignment on November 16, according to court records.

■ An Iowa City man was charged with third-degree sexual abuse Friday after he allegedly abused a five-year-old girl, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Rodney Frantz, 20, 2312 Muscatine Ave., Apt. 4NC, admitted touching the victim, according to court records.

A physical exam performed at St. Luke's Hospital's Child Protection Center, Cedar Rapids, confirmed she had been sexually abused, according to court records.

Frantz was placed in the custody of the Department of Corrections, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 22, according to court records.

■ An Iowa City man was charged with third-degree sexual abuse Friday after he allegedly forced a woman to have sex with him, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Gary L. Weatherly

20, 2120 Hollywood Blvd., admitted to sexually abusing the woman, according to court records.

Weatherly was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $25,000 bail and ordered not to contact the victim by phone or in person, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 14, according to court records.

■ An Iowa City woman was charged with second-degree theft Friday after she allegedly wrote $741.15 worth of checks to local businesses from a closed account, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Marie L. Grignon, 2430 Muscatine Ave., Apt. 28 allegedly wrote checks at Maurices and Best Buy, knowing the checking account was closed.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for November 21, according to court records.

Rawlings, Branstad join panel at global-climate symposium

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings and Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad are slated speakers at a symposium this month aimed at providing solutions for global climate changes in the Midwest.

The November 16 to 17 conference will be held in the Union and sponsored by the UI and Iowa State University.

"We want to make an assessment of global climate change and its possible effects on the Midwest region," said UI professor Jerald Schnoor, a symposium organizer. "Secondly, we need to discuss business and policy options for climate-change scenarios that will better prepare us to respond to or lessen the effects of global climate change."

Increased amounts of gas, especially carbon dioxide, that are released in the atmosphere through industrial processes contribute to higher global temperatures, said Cynthia Rosenzweig, symposium speaker and research associate with NASA Goddard Institute for Space Studies in Florida.

"Gases in the atmosphere can serve as a blanket around the Earth making the climate warmer," she said.

Rosenzweig said that solar energy, wind power and other alternative natural energy resources could increase efficiency by getting more energy from the fuel and wasting less energy.

The use of coal tends to emit carbon dioxide into the environment, wasting significant amounts of the fuel and causing the greenhouse effect, she said.

Another environmental hazard is chlorofluorocarbons. CFCs are used in refrigerants, aerosol sprays and packing materials and contribute to ozone depletion.

Researchers have found that the ozone depletion can cause increased incidence of skin cancer and crop mutations that may damage plants.

Rosenzweig said there is an international movement to phase out CFCs completely by spreading new technology — instead of the old environment-damaging technology.

"Prudent courses of action need to be initiated now to anticipate global changes and to formulate suitable policy actions," said David Forckenbrock, a symposium organizer and director of the UI Public Policy Center.

The UI is an attractive setting for the event in part because of its strength in medicine, climate and hydrology. The UI Public Policy Center will be a valuable asset because of the need to set forth policy proposals in response to ozone depletion, Schnoor said.

The symposium provides an opportunity to integrate scientific, Midwestern and business perspectives through involving various representatives in the presentations and panel discussions.

"On the same program, we will have scientists together with the people who have to deal with the problems of global change," said Gregory Carmichael, a symposium organizer and chairman of the UI Department of Biochemical Engineering.

Keynote speaker Noel Brown is the director of the regional office of the United Nations Environmental Programme, New York. Brown is a nationally recognized scientist who is known for a 1987 Antarctic expedition and confirmations of the development of stratospheric ozone "holes" over the Antarctic. Robert

AP/Martha P. Hernandez

Watson, NASA Ozone Program director, will also speak at the event.

Other scheduled speakers include Steven Schneider and Michael Glantz, senior scientists from National Center for Aeronautics Research; James Jenson, Congressional Affairs director for the Office of Technology Assessment, Washington, D.C.; and Daniel Botkin, professor at University of California, Santa Barbara.

Branstad: Meeting means cooperation

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday he will lead a delegation of governors to a United Nations meeting this week with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on global environmental issues.

Branstad said Wednesday's meeting signals a new understanding by governors that environmental and economic issues transcend state and national borders.

"The governors recognize environmental issues are some of the challenges facing the world," Branstad said.

Extra state funds open 7,000 seats in UI courses

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

State legislative appropriations of $900,000 opened 7,000 student seats in high-demand courses within the UI's colleges of business administration and liberal arts this academic year, UI officials said.

Many of the new sections of undergraduate courses — including those that satisfy general education requirements — are being taught by visiting faculty members and teaching assistants who were hired with the additional funding, UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said.

The addition of more sections of high-demand liberal arts GER classes in the areas of humanities, historical perspectives, and foreign civilization and culture allows courses that once filled shortly after the start of registration to be offered to more students, Dallam said.

"It's made creating their schedules and getting what they needed or wanted easier," Dallam said. "We're talking about an increase of 7,000 available seats, and that's a fairly significant number."

Whether or not the historic inability of students to register for classes they want or need to take has created a poor impression of the UI's registration process over the years is unclear, he said.

Dallam said that inadequate funding — and not the UI's registration system — creates many of the problems associated with a shortage of classes.

"I don't know how prevalent that stigma was, but over the past five or six years the university has not received the kind of money it needs to meet the growth of the student population," he said.

James Lindberg, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said the appropriation came on short notice and caused the UI administration to hire faculty and teaching assistants on a part-time basis. Current part-time positions will become full-time positions in the next academic year, Lindberg added.

"Because of the short time, we have had to hire faculty and teaching assistants on a part-time basis, but this will not be the case in the future," he said. "The additional funds will be added to the recurring budget of the university, and this means we will look to hire on a permanent basis."

The recent infusion of $900,000 will not be a one-time-only deal and hopefully will carry into the future, Dallam said.

"We're hopeful this trend will continue in the next academic years," he said.

Yes means no

Iowa City voters have the chance today to express their feelings about Wal-Mart coming to town.

But don't be confused. The way the referendum ballot reads, a yes vote means no to Wal-Mart, and no means yes. Sort of.

Voters shouldn't be deceived. The referendum calls for reversing changes made to the Iowa City comprehensive plan last spring to accommodate Wal-Mart. It says nothing, and can do nothing, about changes to zoning, and in urban development, zoning is everything.

That's not all. Even if the measure passes, and the Iowa City Council decides to change the zoning back from commercial to industrial, they can't stop Wal-Mart if the building permits have already been issued.

Voters are really voting on whether the builder should run or walk to the office of Housing and Inspection Services to file for permits.

Chances are, most voters don't really care one way or the other, and who could blame them? Wal-Mart was rammed down Iowa City's throat, but charges that it is a harbinger of urban sprawl are excessive. It won't add anything significant to the community, but it won't take much away, either. The stakes here are actually quite low, and the referendum measure both confusing and ineffectual.

Pity that, in addition to the two boxes marked "yes" and "no" there's no third box labeled: "Don't ask me, I shop at Target."

Forget fur

This is a bad time to be in the fur business. Industry profits have stagnated in recent years, and this month, animal-rights activists are preparing their most aggressive campaign yet against furriers and people who buy furs.

Starting on the busiest shopping day of the year — the day after Thanksgiving — the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals will stage dozens of anti-fur demonstrations all over the nation, including a parade down the middle of Fifth Avenue in New York City. The group hopes that their all-out assault will communicate the message that the fur industry is built on cruelty and vanity, and to buy or wear fur is to support those hollow principles.

The dedication of groups like PETA and Trans-Species Unlimited to the anti-fur cause is unwavering; they are completely committed to driving all fur retailers from the marketplace, drawing attention to the cause through organized civil disobedience.

The public needs to know the practices involved in ranching and trapping animals for their pelts. If the truth were publicized about the industry's disregard for the suffering that animals like the lynx, mink, racoon, sable and fox are subjected to, fur sales would be irreparably damaged.

Already, there is reason to believe people are grasping the social implications of buying a fur garment.

"Profits are plunging," says PETA spokesperson Chantal Hoffmann. "As people realize this is a business of cruelty and greed, furs will go out of fashion. It won't be long before all fur retailers are gone."

Passing of a great

Vladimir Horowitz, the world renowned pianist who charmed 60 years of audiences, died yesterday at age 86. With his departure, the last of the grand Romanatic pianists is gone.

His debut performance took place in Berlin in 1926, launching him on a tour of Europe, and then America, where his repertoire included over 200 pieces. A New York Times critic of the day called Horowitz' reception "the wildest welcome."

Over the next 50 years, Horowitz participated in nearly every significant classical music event in America, including the opening concert at Lincoln Center in New York and the recent reopening of Carnegie Hall.

His philanthropy was legendary. Though he was the highest paid classical performer in America in 1942, he appeared with Toscanini in a long series of benefit performances for war bonds. When Horowitz announced a concert to celebrate the end of a sabbatical from performing, and a huge line gathered in the rain outside Carnegie Hall to buy tickets, the pianist sent 100 cups of coffee as a tribute to his fans.

But good deeds aside, the man's genius was his playing. Harold Schonberg, his biographer, wrote, "As a technician Horowitz was one of the most honest in the history of modern pianism." In fact, Horowitz' dynamic range was so immense, his critics complained of excessive liberties in his interpretations.

Horowitz responded, "I play the way I feel at the moment. The head, the intellect, is only the controlling factor of music making. It is not a guide. The guide is your feelings... I take risks... I am never afraid to dare."

Horowitz' courage led him to play more than a musical role — he was an artistic ambassador as well. In 1986, after 61 years away from his native country, he returned for a series of concerts in Moscow and Leningrad that was hailed by Soviet and American critics alike. When the tour was completed, President Ronald Reagan presented him with the U.S. Medal of Freedom.

The gap Horowitz leaves behind is huge. Virtuoso skill comes only every few generations, and Horowitz took few students in his lifetime. The world is fortunate that he left a wealth of recordings, but the master of broad dynamics and incendiary interpretation is no more.

Quayle's wounds self-inflicted

A new California poll says that President George Bush is doing well among that state's citizens, but that only 22 percent rate Vice President Dan Quayle's performance in office as good or excellent; fully 31 percent rate him as "poor" or "very poor." Those are remarkably grim numbers given the relative contentment with the way things are going in the country.

Veteran sleuth Jack Anderson goes on national television to report that there is already talk within the White House and the Cabinet of replacing Quayle with HUD Secretary Jack Kemp come 1992.

Jeff Greenfield

There are three lessons to be learned from this:
 First, on a slow news day, anything can make the papers.
 Second, even in an age of "manufactured consent," when every official above the level of dog catcher has professional media advisers, it is not always easy to change a public perception — even with the resources of the vice presidency at hand to do so.

Dan Quayle stumbled onto the national stage last August in New Orleans when, as the surprise choice of George Bush for vice president, he gave a disastrous press conference in front of approximately 6 million reporters (OK, maybe it was a few thousand).

He got a tremendous boost when — by accident or by design — he held a free-for-all news conference in Huntington, Ind., just after his nomination in which the press looked like a bunch of sharks. Clearly, the country, in general, was disposed to give the young man another chance.

Instead, Quayle proceeded to go out and earn the bum rap with so many insertions of foot in mouth that, in the last days of the campaign, he was reduced to appearing before groups of Mouseketeers in the remotest ranges of the Wasatch Mountains. The slogan of the Bush campaign seemed to be: "Keep this man off the tube!"

The real shocker for me, however, came after the inauguration. In political journalism, the pendulum effect is very powerful; as soon as the pack has moved to one judgment ("Quayle's a moron"), there is an inevitable corrective movement ("Hey, Quayle's OK").

In fact, I was certain that a half-dozen or so serious speeches, combined with some self-effacing humor, would quickly rehabilitate the vice president.

It hasn't happened yet. Why? In the first place, there is a powerful constituency that needs Dan Quayle as a target: not the Democrats, but America's professional comedians.

There is no way that Jay Leno, who coined the classic line about the movie of Dan Quayle's life — "Full Dinner Jacket" — would let so juicy a punchline go quietly. Nor would Johnny Carson; nor would David Letterman.

Without inflating this beyond its natural borders, the constant use of a public figure as a source of humor imposes a substantial handicap on anyone trying to look good.

More important, Quayle himself continues to cooperate. He has appeared before small groups of journalists and been given good marks — only to go before the United Negro College Fund and, attempting to echo its slogan that "a mind is a terrible thing to waste," observe,

There is a powerful constituency that needs Dan Quayle as a target: not the Democrats, but America's professional comedians.

"What a terrible thing it is to lose one's mind — or not to have a mind at all."

He goes to observe the Bay Area earthquake and gets into a nasty political spitting contest with the mayor of San Francisco, and then describes the plight of the victims as "heart-rendering."

It is, in my view, significant that the last national figure to be caught in every mangling of the English language was Ted Kennedy, in the first, worst days of his 1980 run for the Democratic presidential nomination. Such critical rigor suggests that Quayle still finds himself in the cross hairs of the national media.

And what of the third lesson? That is yet to be played out, but it is connected with the fact that dumping vice presidents is a lot easier said than done.

Franklin Roosevelt got rid of John Nance Garner in 1940 because Garner actively tried to deny Roosevelt a third term; he was a political enemy. Henry Wallace was dumped in 1944 because party leaders simply could not tolerate the idea of a radical one heartbeat away from the White House — especially given FDR's health.

And in 1976, Nelson Rockefeller was "volunteered" out of office as the price of getting conservative support for President Gerald Ford in his nomination fight against Ronald Reagan.

Dan Quayle, however, remains George Bush's personal decision. How does he dump him without appearing to concede bad judgement in the first place? Unless it looks like a factor that will cost him the White House, don't start calling the moving van yet.

Test your Iowa City Council election I.Q.

The following is a short quiz that is designed to test Iowa City residents' qualifications for making the best decision about who will effectively represent them on the Iowa City Council.

The first section deals with issues. By knowing more about local concerns, voters will be able to choose more wisely.

- Many people are in the dark regarding the Wal-Mart referendum. This controversy is over...
 - maintaining a comprehensive development plan for Iowa City.
 - expanding Iowa City's tax base.
 - protectionism.
 - a discount store that sells more affordable walls.
- If Wal-Mart comes to our area...
 - the effect on the local economy will be devastating.
 - the physical principals that bind the universe will alter drastically, forever changing reality as we know it.
 - there may be some room to park downtown.
 - it will make a nice addition to the Coralville strip.
- According to some candidates, recycling has become the issue of the 1990s. Since it appears that landfill space is dwindling the best solution would be...
 - never throw anything away.
 - recycle everything right down to

Guest Opinion

Adam Kent

- coffeegrounds.
- open a new landfill somewhere in the millions of square miles of unused land surrounding Iowa City.
 - buy the landfill gatekeeper a color TV so he won't put up the "closed because of wind" sign every single day in order to make it home to watch "Gilligan's Island."
- The term "solid waste" refers to...
 - 1989 campaign issues.
 - some candidates' gray matter.
 - the Campus Review.
 - poop.
 - With the ever-increasing numbers of burglaries, auto thefts and incidences of vandalism, the council will likely solve the problem by...
 - passing out more parking tickets.
 - targeting the hundreds of Iowa City drug lords that are killing our children left and right.
 - rounding up all long-haired freaky people.
 - providing more funds for rhetoric.
 - Of the four most popular plans to provide affordable housing for lower-income residents, the one

- least likely to be chosen will be...
 - finger crossing.
 - wishful thinking.
 - clever talk.
 - rent control.
 - As ridership dwindles, the problems facing our mass transit system increase. To solve this crisis the council should...
 - tighten the screws on parking even more, so that it is impossible to find a space anywhere.
 - eliminate even more services to riders.
 - form another commission.
 - fire John Lundell.

The second section tests knowledge of the candidates and determines who, if any, will best represent voters' concerns.

 - Mayor John McDonald is considered a shoo-in for reelection. In the future residents will...
 - hear him speak intently about "this and that" while coherently covering "something else."
 - awaken when he accidentally declares December "Rape and Pillage Month."
 - petition him to wear hipper shades.
 - Darrel Courtney is the other incumbent. If re-elected he will crack down ruthlessly on...
 - untrimmed lawns.
 - unraked leaves.
 - unshovelled sidewalks.
 - The first new candidate to announce a bid was Naomi Novick. If elected she will...
 - take a firm stance in the middle of all issues.
 - give lengthy consideration to all points of view before rendering her decision at the turn of the 21st century.
 - flip a coin.
 - So far the most public and outspoken candidate has been Joe Bolcom. Since his campaign is based on environmental concerns, which of the following major changes face us if he is elected?
 - Iowa City water will magically taste wonderful.
 - Iowa City streets will see curbside receptacles for food, paper, aluminum, leaves, plastics, diapers, wood, glass, other metals and Dave Nagel congressional mailings.
 - The last candidate to file was Rick Graf. If the writer makes fun at this person he will severely be beaten by...
 - anti-Wal-Mart activists.
 - radical environmentalists.
 - Socialists posing as Democrats.

That's the end of the quiz. The answers will be determined today, depending on the results of the election. In order to pass, it is necessary that you vote. Meanwhile, the writer will be joining Salman Rushdie in seclusion.

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said he is expecting one of the three best voter turnouts of the 1980s, based on the number of absentee ballots received by the auditor's office so far. He said the number of absentee ballots is a good indicator of the overall voter turnout and that this election's numbers are competitive with the numbers of the highest Iowa City voter turnout ever. But the percentage of the population of Iowa City that votes in city elections is low, Slockett said. "We're talking in the 15- to 16-percent range," Slockett said. "Even a record turnout is dismal."

big deal," I thought. But as Dr. Mary Khowassah, UI Student Health Director informed me, the vaccinations are a big deal for the 16,000 UI students who need them. "Nationwide the biggest outbreak going on is at the college level," Khowassah said.

Further, pregnant women, people with immune deficiency disease, or who are in an AIDS-risk category, should not receive the shot without checking with a doctor. Khowassah said the mass clinic is offered to students in the hope of preventing an outbreak of the measles. She said the the Union location is the most convenient for students.

Appleton and several Iowa State Health Department staff members are in Iowa City to help with the clinic. There have been 13 reported measles cases in Iowa this year, with one college student and four to five college-age adults contracting the disease, according to Iowa State Department of Public Health records.

All students have to do is bring their UI student identification card and register. Student health officials will then check to see if the student needs the shot, and the $22 fee will be placed on his or her U-Bill. Students who have received a measles shot since 1980 are not required to receive the vaccination.

Appleton said, "If we prevent an outbreak, it will be a lot cheaper than if an outbreak had occurred."

Krenz, the president and Communist Party chief who last month replaced his hard-line mentor, Erich Honecker. Church sources said some marchers in Leipzig shouted, "Egon, who elected you?" This year about 175,000 East Germans — more than 1 percent of the population — have moved to West Germany by emigrating legally, escaping or failing to return from approved trips abroad. West Germany gives them automatic citizenship and help in starting over. Although the new law would allow travel abroad, East Germans pointed out it retains old provisions giving authorities the right to refuse passports for vague reasons. It also does not address the problem of financing such travel. The East German mark is not convertible and, lack of foreign currency could make a legal trip impossible.

"Who is going to pay for all this? Who has that much money?" said a cook in a restaurant on the Unter den Linden boulevard of East Berlin. East Germans poured into Czechoslovakia after their government lifted a month-old ban on travel to the neighboring Warsaw Pact ally, still the only nation East Germans can visit without official permission. By the time the ban was removed, 5,000 East Germans had gathered at the West German Embassy in Prague. Special trains took the East Germans from the embassy to the West German border and thousands of others drove through Czechoslovakia in personal cars.

questions about a stock transfer to his son. "David Dinkins has a history of getting away with things that others don't get away with. I don't know why," said Giuliani, a former U.S. attorney and underdog in the New York mayoral race. "He is less than candid. He hides, he evades."

Dinkins replied that his Republican rival entered the race like a "knight in shining armor on a white charger. I suggest that the armor is a bit tarnished and that charger is no longer white."

The unexpected decision to let the refugees out through Czechoslovakia created the first direct route to the West since the Berlin Wall was built in August 1961. Authorities have said the route will remain open until the travel law takes effect.

Elsewhere on the ballot, 11 Democrats went through their final campaign paces in Houston, where they were vying to fill the unexpired term of the late Democratic Rep. Mickey Leland.

New York aside, big city election campaigns were winding up in Detroit, Houston and Miami, where incumbents Coleman Young, Kathy Whitmire and Xavier Suarez sought new terms.

Many East Germans, including opposition leaders, reacted coolly to the draft law. Sebastian Pflugbeil, a founder of New Forum, said, "Travel is not the primary problem in East Germany. Too many have left the country already."

Cleveland's unusually nasty mayoral campaign neared an end, pitting City Council President George Forbes against state Sen. Michael White. Voters in 10 states will decide 56 referendums on Tuesday.

Among them was Michigan, deciding the fate of two competing plans to raise the state sales tax for education. One called for a halfpenny increase and the other a two-cent rise.

He said on the West Berlin radio station RIAS: "The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people. The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today."

In others, a proposal to raise $115 million for a new stadium for the San Francisco Giants faced a tough fight in light of huge costs from earthquake damage, while residents of Greensboro, N.C., where cigarette manufacturing is big business, were deciding whether to limit public smoking.

Interior Minister Friedrich Dickel said Sunday the law would be discussed publicly until November 30, then go to Parliament.

Freedom of travel has been a major demand at pro-democracy rallies. Krenz, who became Communist Party leader October 18, has promised sweeping political and economic reforms in addition to freer travel.

Democrats were hoping for a three-race sweep in Virginia, New Jersey and New York City to buoy the party in advance of 1990 elections that will fill 34 Senate seats, 36 governorships and 435 House seats.

Pro-choice and right-to-life groups also poured thousands of dollars into television commercials for Wilder and Coleman.

He said on the West Berlin radio station RIAS: "The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people. The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today."

President George Bush campaigned for Republican candidates in all three races.

Pro-choice and right-to-life groups also poured thousands of dollars into television commercials for Wilder and Coleman.

He said on the West Berlin radio station RIAS: "The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people. The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today."

Republicans said the results would prove of little use in handicapping next year's campaign. But all three races, particularly Virginia, were being watched closely for signs of shifting views on abortion.

Wilder has made Coleman's opposition to abortion a cornerstone of his campaign, challenging a decade of political wisdom that said pro-choice candidates should avoid the issue.

He said on the West Berlin radio station RIAS: "The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people. The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today."

Pro-choice and right-to-life groups also poured thousands of dollars into television commercials for Wilder and Coleman.

Giuliani and Courter both modified their opposition to abortion during the campaign, the first since the U.S. Supreme Court ruling last summer permitting states to impose greater restrictions.

He said on the West Berlin radio station RIAS: "The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people. The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today."

Ironically, perhaps, abortion largely overshadowed race in the campaign in Virginia, once the capital of the Confederacy. Coleman broached the subject indirectly late last week when he said Wilder was benefiting from a "double standard" in press coverage.

Aoun loyalists protest in Beirut streets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—A strike called by Gen. Michel Aoun, the Christian army commander, virtually closed down east Beirut on Monday, and his followers filled the streets to protest the election of a Syrian-backed president.

Rioting Aoun loyalists stormed the residence of Nasrallah Sfeir, the Maronite Catholic patriarch, who supported Rene Mouawad's election as president Sunday, and forced him to kiss a portrait of the general. Mouawad, 64, and Aoun, 54, are Maronites, the main Christian sect in Lebanon.

Aoun declared a "war of liberation" this year on the 40,000 Syrian soldiers stationed in Lebanon under a 1976 peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League. He issued a statement Monday urging supporters to "limit your protests to civilized and peaceful methods."

Schools, shops, restaurants, banks and government offices closed in Christian east Beirut and many parts of the Christian enclave north and east of the city.

Patriarch Sfeir, 68, fled to his summer home in an area of north Lebanon under Syrian control and said he would not return to his official residence on the wooded slopes of Bkirki "until peace prevails."

Lebanese police issued a statement saying they "ensured the patriarch's safe drive" early Monday to Diman, 52 miles north of Bkirki.

"We plead with God to forgive" the attackers, Sfeir said at Diman, where he was greeted by Mouawad, Parliament speaker Hussein Husseini, Arab League envoy Lakhdar Ibrahimi of Algeria and many legislators.

A police spokesman said 100 supporters of Aoun drove to Bkirki in 30 cars shortly after midnight Sunday and stormed the walled compound. A 40-man unit of Aoun's command assigned to protect Sfeir did not try to stop them, said the spokesman, whose name was withheld under standing regulations.

"The rioters broke into the patriarch's bedroom, dragged him out of bed, forced him to kneel with two senior aides who rushed to help him and forced them all to kiss posters of Aoun," the spokesman said.

Other Aoun loyalists broke into at least six churches in the Christian enclave to protest Mouawad's election. The spokesman said they fired automatic weapons into the air, "burned rubber tires at several churches and rang bells."

Pro-Aoun rioters went into the streets hours after legislators, forced out of Beirut by the general's threat to shell the Parliament building, convened in the Syrian-controlled north Sunday and elected Mouawad.

Nicaraguan Contras agree to hold peace talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Leaders of Nicaraguan rebels have agreed to meet Sandinista government representatives this week for the first direct peace talks in more than a year, U.N. officials said Monday.

When President Daniel Ortega canceled a 19-month-old truce last week, he also proposed a meeting at U.N. headquarters. Nadia Younes, a U.N. spokeswoman, said the two sides had agreed to meet Thursday and Friday.

Nicaragua's U.N. mission said Victor Hugo Tinoco, deputy foreign minister, probably would lead the government delegation.

A senior U.N. official said privately all issues will be on the table, including the voluntary disbanding of the rebels, known as Contras; security guarantees for those repatriated from rebel bases in neighboring Honduras and political reform in Nicaragua.

In Honduras, Contra military leader Enrique Bermudez told The Associated Press, "We have accepted the new proposal for dialogue from Ortega," and said he would lead a five-man rebel delegation.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, Roman Catholic primate of Nicaragua, has agreed to attend as an observer. He has been a go-between for the Sandinistas and Contras in the past.

Also present will be the International Commission for Verification and Support consisting of one official each from the United Nations and Organization of American States. The commission was established under the Central American peace plan of August 7 to help the Contras disarm and resettle in Nicaragua with their families.

The Contras are expected to insist on resuming the cease-fire. They also want a general amnesty and guarantees that they can visit Nicaragua to verify that reforms have been made, and it is safe for them to return.

The peace plan says the Contras must be disbanded by December 5, but also that their repatriation be voluntary.

So far, the rebels have shown no inclination to lay down their weapons and return home, although some have gone back to Nicaragua.

Ill-equipped planes interfere with detecting drug smugglers

WASHINGTON (AP)—The first plane in a Customs Service radar fleet has been plagued by problems that seriously compromise its ability to find and track drug-smuggling aircraft, according to agency documents.

One Coast Guard officer who went along on an early mission summed up: "A lot of 'Gee Whiz' gadgets and color displays — but a lot of the basic requirements for useful detection and tracking are absent."

Deficiencies have included an unreliable computer system that has trouble locating and tracking smugglers; faulty on-board communications for the crew and a problem with a spinning, metal radar dome, according to the documents, most of them written by crew members.

Some initial reports critical of the performance of the first, $27 million P-3 airborne early warning aircraft were ordered to be rewritten by an agency supervisor to stress success and not failures, according to the documents and Customs sources.

Some of the same problems have afflicted a second P-3 delivered last April at a cost of $30.6 million, according to the documents and sources. Congress has approved $35 million for a third P-3. All the planes are based at Customs' Surveillance Support Center at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Greece faces possibility of new elections

ATHENS, Greece — Voters Monday faced the possibility of going to the polls for the third time this year after elections failed to give any party a clear governing mandate.

According to the constitution, President Christos Sartzetakis must call elections within 30 days if political leaders fail to form a viable government that can win a parliamentary vote of confidence.

Constantine Mitsotakis' conservative New Democracy party won Sunday's election but fell three seats short of an absolute majority of the 300-member unicameral Parliament.

The Panhellenic Socialist Movement, or PASOK, led by former Premier Andreas Papandreu, came in second with 128 places and the Coalition of the Left and Progress led by Communist leader Harilaos Florakis took 21 seats.

The remaining three seats went to independents, including a leftist, a Greek Moslem and an environmentalist, for the first time in the nation's political history.

Students march in response to racial slurs

JACKSONVILLE, Ill. — Students at MacMurray College marched across campus Monday to show unity against racism after a campaign of anonymous threats and racial slurs against blacks hit the small, private school.

"We must come together," sophomore Ricky Bragg, told about 350 students, faculty and residents who marched to the college chapel.

"There is no way this can be a white problem, or a black problem or a Jewish problem. This is MacMurray's problem," said Bragg, who is black.

The student-organized march came four days after hand-written letters containing racial slurs and threats were found in campus mailboxes of the 35 to 40 black students at the 620-student liberal arts school, and in the box of the college's only black staff member.

The letters were addressed to students by name and campus mailbox number and contained slurs directed at the person, according to students who saw the letters.

D.C. mayor got cocaine, dealer alleges

WASHINGTON — A man convicted of drug dealing told a federal judge Monday that he gave crack cocaine to Mayor Marion Barry on repeated occasions last December.

Charles Lewis, 49, testified under oath in U.S. District Court that he gave Barry cocaine at least three times while Barry visited Lewis' room at a downtown Washington hotel late last year.

Despite many press accounts of investigations against the mayor, Lewis was the first on-the-record, under-oath accusation that Barry, the city's mayor for 10 years, was a drug buyer.

The federal investigation began when city police called off an attempt to make an undercover drug buy from Lewis on discovering that the mayor was in Lewis' hotel room.

Barry has acknowledged making at least six visits to Lewis' hotel during that period, but has steadfastly denied using, seeing or purchasing drugs during those trips.

Barry, who has described Lewis as an old friend, said through a spokeswoman Monday that he would have no comment on Lewis' allegations.

Picasso's granddaughter robbed of artwork

CANNES, France — Thirteen works of art worth about $17 million were stolen from the Riviera home of Pablo Picasso's granddaughter in what police called one of the biggest art thefts ever.

Police declined to reveal the titles of the works, which were stolen Sunday morning from Marina Picasso's villa in Cannes.

Picasso was on vacation in Megeve at the time of the break-in, which police said took place while a guard was out shopping.

Police estimated the value of the stolen artwork at $17 million and said it included two paintings by Henri Matisse, a bust by Auguste Rodin and seven paintings by Picasso.

Maurice Rheims, a Picasso expert who was appointed by the government to help divide up the multibillion-dollar Picasso estate after the painter's death in 1973, knew the collection and said he thought the value estimate was low.

"I don't know what the thieves will do with the paintings," Rheims said. "They all have been inventoried, catalogued and photographed many times over. No serious art dealer or collector would touch them."

Legalize? Shultz, yes Bush, no

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House poked fun at former Secretary of State George Shultz on Monday for suggesting that the United States should consider legalizing cocaine and other drugs.

"Whoa, he's been out on the West Coast too long, hasn't he?" quipped Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater. "The guy slips into retirement and right away he starts saying things that are strange."

"Clearly, we do not believe drugs should be legalized . . . it makes no sense whatsoever." — Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater

More seriously, Fitzwater said, "Clearly, we do not believe drugs should be legalized. President Bush feels very strongly that that is the wrong direction at the wrong time; that it is not a moral position for the United States to take; and that it makes no sense whatsoever."

Shultz's views on legalizing drugs were published in The Wall Street Journal October 27 in an adaptation of remarks he made to an alumni gathering at the Stanford Business School in Palo Alto, Calif., on October 7.

Shultz said, "It seems to me we're not really going to get anywhere until we can take the criminality out of the drug business and the incentives for criminality out of it."

"Frankly," he added, "the only way I can think of to accomplish this is to make it possible for addicts to buy drugs at some regulated place at a price that approximates their cost."

"When you do that you wipe out the criminal incentives, including . . . the incentive that the drug pushers have to go around and get kids addicted, so that they create a market for themselves. They won't have that incentive because they won't have that market."

" . . . We need at least to consider and examine forms of controlled legalization of drugs," Shultz said.

The former secretary acknowledged that his views would be controversial. "No politician wants to say what I just said, not for a minute."

Shultz served as secretary of state for President Ronald Reagan from July 1982 until January 1989, when he returned to the faculty at the Stanford Business School.

During the Nixon administration, he was budget director and secretary of the treasury with jurisdiction over the Customs Service.

Catholic leaders take stronger abortion stand

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Catholic Church is mounting an offensive against legalized abortion in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing states more freedom in setting limits on the practice.

"Don't forget the baby. That's all the Catholic Church is saying to America," Archbishop John May, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said Monday in a speech opening the conference's fall meeting.

Leaders of the 53 million-member church are scheduled to vote Tuesday on a policy statement on abortion calling on Catholics to "give urgent attention and priority to this issue" to counteract efforts by abortion-rights advocates galvanized by the court ruling in the Missouri case.

Abortion-rights advocates said the bishops' new activism was expected in light of the court ruling and the recent "backstepping" by some politicians challenged by pro-choice groups.

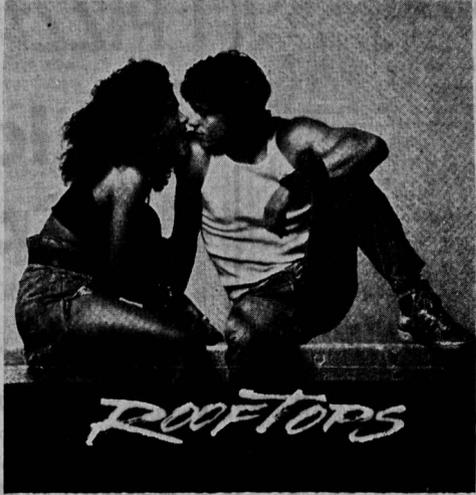

"I think this meeting marks their re-emergence as a political force on this issue," said Frances Kissling, president of Catholics for a Free Choice. "They're ready to go."

At the opening session of the four-day meeting, representatives of the U.S. Church and the Vatican celebrated the bicentennial of the U.S. hierarchy by noting how the Church was shaped by the American principles of religious liberty and democracy. The Rev. John Carroll was appointed the first U.S. bishop on Nov. 6, 1789.

Award-winning Japanese violinist comes to I.C.

The Daily Iowan

Japanese violinist Asako Urushihara, winner of the Young Concert Artists International Auditions, will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Clapp Recital Hall. The concert is part of the Young Concert Artists Series, presented by Hancher Auditorium.

With pianist David Korevaar, Urushihara will play the Sonata in F Major, K. 301, by Mozart; the Sonata No. 3 in D Minor, Op. 108, by Brahms; Sonata No. 6, Op. 27, by Belgian violin virtuoso Eugene Ysaie; Debussy's Sonata No. 3 in G Minor; and "Tzigane" by Ravel.

Urushihara will make several appearances on campus and in the Iowa City area. She will offer a masterclass for UI string students and present informal concerts and demonstrations in the UI residence halls, at Project Art in the UI Hospitals and Clinics, City High and West High. The residency activities are coordinated by the UI Arts Outreach program.

At the age of 22, Urushihara appears to be on the road to a stellar concert career. Before she came to the United States to study at the Juilliard School she was a frequent soloist with prominent Japanese orchestras, beginning with her debut at the age of 13 with the NHK Symphony.

As a result of her success in the Young Concert Artists competition, she made her New York debut as the opening performance of the 1988-89 Young Concert Artists series to rave reviews. In February 1989 she opened the Young Concert Artists Series at the Kennedy Center with her Washington, D.C., debut.

Urushihara performs on the "Ruby" Stradivarius of 1708, made during the master violin builder's "golden period."

Tickets for the November 8 concert are $6 ($4.50 for UI students and $3 for children) and are available in advance from the Hancher box office.

This event is sponsored, in part, by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Daguerreotype exhibit opens

The Daily Iowan

Jo-Ann Conklin will present "When America Seized the Light" at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday as part of the weekly Museum Perspectives series at the UI Museum of Art.

Conklin is assistant curator of graphic arts at the museum and curator of the exhibition "Sun Paintings: Daguerreotypes from Iowa Collections" which is currently on display at the museum. Her presentation, a slide lecture on the introduction of and response to the Daguerreotype 150 years ago, will use works from the exhibition as illustrations.

"Sun Paintings," which will be on display through December 31, is part of the museum's celebration of the 150th anniversary of photography.

UI jazz bands play downtown

The Daily Iowan

Two bands from the jazz program at the UI School of Music will appear at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

The bands, Jazz Bands II and III, will play contemporary big band music and some originals from the Woody Herman library. The bands try to stress a balanced ensemble and give musicians a chance to improvise. The members are all undergraduate students at the UI.

A combo from the small jazz ensembles class at the School of Music will open the concert.

There will be a $2 admission charge for the concert. Proceeds will benefit the UI jazz program.

Over $230,000 raised to aid Mullins

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — More than $230,000 has been collected to pay for a health care plan for University of Mississippi football player Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins, who was paralyzed during an Oct. 28 game against Vanderbilt, school officials announced Sunday night.

Don Fruge, vice chancellor for university affairs, said the grand total is $231,563, with $53,395 mailed in and $178,168 plus some uncounted coins donated by fans at the LSU-Mississippi game Saturday at Oxford.

Illini 'backer tabbed week's best

CHICAGO (AP) — Linebacker Steve Glasson of Illinois has been named Midwest Player of the Week on defense by the Associated Press for his efforts in Saturday's 31-7 victory over Iowa.

Glasson, a 6-2, 222-pound senior from Palos Heights, Ill., intercepted two passes that he returned for 43 yards. He also had 11 tackles as the Illini limited Iowa to 49 yards rushing.

U.S. soccer team suffers setback

FENTON, Mo. (AP) — The United States, trying to advance to soccer's World Cup for the first time since 1950, received a severe jolt Sunday when winless El Salvador held the Americans to their second straight scoreless tie.

The United States, which has gone without a goal for 208 minutes, needs a victory at Trinidad and Tobago in its final game on Nov. 19 to qualify for the 24-nation World Cup finals in Italy next June.

49ers are decade's best

The Daily Iowan

The San Francisco 49ers became the National Football League's "Team of the Decade" Monday night with a 31-13 pasting over the New Orleans Saints at Candlestick Park in San Francisco.

With the win, the 49ers have compiled the best regular-season record out of all other NFL teams in the 10-year period spanning from 1980 to the present, giving them the title as the decade's best unit.

San Francisco moved to 8-1 on the season, while the Saints fell below .500 at 4-5. The 49ers are tied with the New York Giants for the best record in the NFL in 1989.

The 49ers host the Atlanta Falcons Sunday. New Orleans will travel to New England to play the Patriots.

wrong race marked and some penciled-in grades on an otherwise computerized form.

Visser, a 19-year-old student at the university who often counseled student athletes, is suing the university for lost wages, damages and reinstatement to her job.

The jury has heard testimony that Martin Bradley Munn, the university's affirmative action officer, warned officials that they were in "a full-scale war" with Visser.

Parts of a letter by Munn read in court also indicated that Visser was in touch with a woman in Georgia who had been involved in a similar case. Exhibits are sealed and the full letter isn't public record.

In 1986, however, Jan Kemp, a

University of Georgia instructor who claimed she was fired for protesting academic favoritism for athletes, won a lawsuit and later settled for $1.08 million in damages.

In Visser's case, an instructor who chaired a Faculty Senate committee testified that he was warned by Osborne that people could be fired for improperly making public students' confidential records.

At issue was a much discussed high school transcript of a student athlete that Visser said had what she considered irregularities, including the wrong race listed and some penciled-in grades on an otherwise computer-generated form.

overall. Before last week's victories, the Hawkeyes were tied with Illinois for third in the conference.

Looking at the statistics, Iowa seems to have an advantage over the Panthers. The Hawkeyes have totaled 1,390 kills, 170 service aces, 1,644 digs, 327 block assists and 71 solo blocks on the season.

The Panthers have amassed 1,076 kills, 177 service aces, 1,067 digs, 282 block assists and 47 solo blocks.

But even though Iowa has made over 300 more kills than Northern Iowa, the attack percentages are hardly close. This year Iowa is hitting .203 overall and .198 in conference games, while the Panthers have been averaging .310 overall and .319 in their league.

But Nelson said Iowa's low attack average, however, may not accurately show how the team is doing.

"In hitting percentages, we're fourth to last (in the conference)," Nelson said. "But that is very deceptive because we have people with negative percentages that don't play a lot."

What could be a big difference between the teams is the type of playing experience they have gotten this year. While Northern Iowa has played just two regionally-ranked teams, Iowa has taken on 15 regionally-ranked and five nationally-ranked teams.

Junior Barb Willis has been leading the Hawkeyes in hitting efficiency with an attack average of .315 in Big Ten matches. She has also had 207 kills in league games this season.

The Panthers' top player this year has been Bobbi Becker, who has tallied 750 total kills and boasts an attack percentage of .339.

The two teams will clash tonight at Northern Iowa's West Gymnasium, which Nelson said is a difficult place for some teams to play. But she said she feels her team could excel there.

"It's a small gym, and they usually have big crowds," Nelson said. "But we love big crowds; we just play like they are yelling for us."

Expensive horse

Cooper, red-hot Buckeyes wary of Iowa passing game

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State has won four games in a row and in a month's time has gone from a team headed nowhere to one headed for a warm and sunny climate over the holidays.

But Buckeye coach John Cooper hasn't made any reservations just yet.

"I think it's important for us to win at least one more game" to lock up a bowl bid, Cooper said Monday at his weekly news conference. "Obviously, I'd like to win this week."

Iowa (4-4 overall and 2-3 in the Big Ten) invades Ohio Stadium Saturday and the Buckeyes would prefer to play any of a half-dozen other teams on their schedule rather than the Hawkeyes.

Why? Because Iowa isn't afraid of something that has been the bane of the Buckeyes so far: the forward pass.

Despite the Buckeyes' 6-2 record (and 4-1 mark in the Big Ten), defending the pass has been about mystifying as the theory of relativity.

Opposing teams have completed 63 percent of their passes against Ohio State, for 230 yards a game and nine touchdowns. The Buckeyes battered Northwestern 52-37 Saturday, yet still allowed Wildcat quarterbacks to complete 18 of 26 passes for 208 yards and two touchdowns.

More of the same is in store with Iowa. Hawkeye quarterback Matt Rodgers has completed better than 60 percent of his passes for 223 yards a game. As a team, Iowa is passing for 241 yards a game.

Is it strength against weakness in Saturday's 12:36 p.m. nationally televised (ESPN) game?

"Contrary to what (Iowa coach)

Hayden (Fry) will tell you, they've got some horses. They throw deep almost as well as Jeff George from Illinois."

— John Cooper

John Cooper

Hayden (Fry) will tell you, they've got some horses," said Cooper with a laugh. "They throw deep almost as well as Jeff George from Illinois. They do a good job on all the deep routes."

He added, "It'll be how well (Iowa plays) offensively against our defense. I think we'll play better on defense. Right now, we're sitting back, we're too cautious and we're reading too much on defense."

The tonic for that passive restraint system on defense is the return of inside linebacker Derek Isaman, according to Cooper. Isaman, the team's leading tackler, was held out of the Northwestern game because of a variety of bruises and pains. But Cooper said he is expected to return to the lineup Saturday.

"Isaman means an awful lot to this team," Cooper said. "Now's the time of year when you start talking about the all-conference team. I know there are a lot of great linebackers in this league, but I don't know of anybody who means as much to his team as Isaman does to us."

While another victory is paramount for Ohio State to assure itself of a bowl trip, Cooper said Iowa is in a similar position.

"It's a key game for Iowa, as well. They play Purdue and Minnesota after they play us. For them to have any realistic chance of going to a bowl game, they have got to win Saturday," Cooper said.

A year ago, the Buckeyes and Hawkeyes fought to a tie at 24. The year before, Iowa scored on a miraculous 29-yard touchdown pass on the last play of the game to pull out a 29-27 victory. Cooper expects another struggle Saturday.

"Iowa is the best team we've played since Illinois (the fourth week of the season)," Cooper said. "We've still got a chance of winning the conference championship. Our goal is to win them all."

The Buckeyes finish the home season against Wisconsin before hitting the road for their annual struggle with Michigan Nov. 25.

Kumerow arrested for felony

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Miami Dolphins defensive end Eric Kumerow faces two felony counts of assaulting a police officer after allegedly punching an officer outside a sports bar, police said Monday.

Kumerow, his sister Cheryl and a friend were arrested Sunday night after police were called following a fight inside Koz's bar, said police who initially misidentified Cheryl Kumerow as Kumerow's wife. The Kumerows, also charged with trespassing, were released Sunday night after posting bond.

The felony of assaulting a police officer carries a possible maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment.

Police who found the group outside the bar "described them all as being drunk," Fort Lauderdale Police spokesman Ott Cefkin said. The 6-foot-7, 268-pound Kumerow punched one officer twice, Cefkin said.

The bar is operated by former Dolphins safety Mike Kozlowski.

Kumerow's agent, Herb Rudy of Chicago, said "the story as relayed by police is not true."

"Eric came to the rescue of a friend of his who was badly beaten at the bar," Rudy said. "Eric was pounced on by about 10 bouncers and later by police officers."

Dolphins officials were investigating the matter, team spokesman Harvey Greene said. He declined further comment.

According to Cefkin, Kumerow and his sister were asked to leave Koz's after a fight and were in the parking lot at about 10:40 p.m. EST when police arrived and found them "highly agitated."

Their friend, Robert Sean Skelton, 24, of Chicago, had been in the middle of the fight inside and began kicking one of the police officers, Cefkin said.

The Kumerows also battled the officers, Cefkin said. Kumerow was hit with a nightstick but wasn't badly hurt, he said.

The officers "were banged up some" but didn't require hospital treatment, Cefkin said. The arrests were made after more officers arrived, police said.

Three other people who were with the Kumerows but weren't identified left when the officers arrived, police said. Fifteen officers were called to the scene, Cefkin said.

Skelton was taken first to Broward General Medical Center and was later charged with two counts each of assault on a police officer, trespassing and an additional charge of escape.

Moseby files for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Lloyd Moseby, Toronto's starting center fielder since 1980, filed for free agency Monday and might not return to the Blue Jays.

"It's not over yet," said Moseby's agent, Jim Neader. "They've told us if he does come back, it could be for left field, right field or DH, but it wouldn't be in center."

Also filing Monday were California right-hander Dan Petry, Detroit outfielder Fred Lynn, Cincinnati catcher Bo Diaz, Montreal second baseman Damaso Garcia and left-hander Bob Knepper and third baseman Ken Oberkfell of the National League champion San Francisco Giants.

A total of 75 players have filed and approximately three dozen more are eligible. The deadline to file is Nov. 13. Knepper and Oberkfell raise to nine the number of free agents from the Giants, the most from any team. The World Series champion Oakland Athletics, the Boston Red Sox and the Houston Astros are next with six each.

Pat Gillick, Toronto's vice president for baseball operations, told Moseby during the World Series that the outfielder should look around and see what other offers there were. Moseby, who made $1.375 million in 1989, batted .221 with 11 homers, 43 RBIs and 24 stolen bases last season. He was hitting just .199 at the All-Star break.

"Lloyd Moseby sells himself," Neader said. "Everyone knows what he can do, even though he didn't have a banner year this year. He's a well respected player, both on and off the field, by people in major league baseball. He's a tremendous asset to the game and he's just turned 30."

Neader said that if Moseby leaves Toronto, his priority would be to sign with a team that plays in a stadium with grass. The agent said that "Oakland isn't likely" but that the Los Angeles Dodgers were "a possibility."

"We won't be doing anything for a couple of weeks," Neader said. "We're going to see who calls. We're not making the calls."

Neader said Moseby hasn't ruled out playing in Japan.

Karlis' 7 FGs earns quick friends

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Whether he's setting records or just hanging around with the guys, Rich Karlis is growing in popularity with his Minnesota Vikings teammates.

On Oct. 22, he made two field goals in a game. The next day, he was strung up from the goal posts after practice by the Vikings' offensive linemen, who posed with him for a photo as if he were some kind of prized marlin. One of the perpetrators was Kirk Lowdermilk, Karlis' brother-in-law.

Sunday, he became the first kicker in NFL history to go 7 for 7, helping the Vikings beat the Los Angeles Rams 23-21 in overtime. A 40-yarder, his longest of the game, sent it into OT. Only St. Louis' Jim Bakken in 1967 had ever made seven field goals in a game, but Bakken missed two that day.

Coach Jerry Burns gave him team Monday and Tuesday off before preparations begin for next Sunday's game at Tampa Bay.

Considering he didn't arrive until Sept. 26 — when Burns had already shot through two kickers and was desperate for someone who could see straight — Karlis is finally starting to feel at home.

"It's always tough for a kicker to feel like he's a big part of a team," said Karlis, who spent seven seasons scoring 655 points for Denver before the Broncos released him in a preseason contract dispute. "I don't sit in on meetings and I don't go through all the practice plays, so I'm not a part of things."

If he keeps kicking seven field goals in games, though, his teammates will make him feel even more at home.

The seventh didn't come easily Sunday. With the Vikings' offense moving the ball but failing to execute from inside the 20, Karlis made kicks of 20, 24, 22, 25, 29 and 36 yards for an 18-7 Minnesota lead.

But after Jim Everett rallied the Rams to a 21-18 lead with 28 seconds left in regulation, Karlis got a chance for his 40-yarder when Hassan Jones made a sensational catch of Wade Wilson's 43-yard desperation pass.

Bucky Scribner, the team's punter and Karlis' holder, got the ball down just fine, but Karlis hit the ball "a little thin" and it began drifting to the right.

"I thought it took a little paint off the right upright, but Bucky said it was in by six inches," Karlis said.

Osborne testifies in Visser-Nebraska case

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska coach Tom Osborne testified today that he was upset about the circulation of an athlete's high school transcript, but was not "jumping up and down."
 "I was concerned and I was upset. I wasn't beside myself, but I was angry," Osborne said. "I was under the impression there was more than one transcript."
 The head football coach testified in the U.S. District Court trial on Mary Jane Visser's lawsuit against the university. Visser claims she was fired in September 1988 because she was investigating student athletes' records. University officials have said she was late for work, made personal phone calls and had been cautioned about her work habits.

 In his 22-minute-long testimony, Osborne acknowledged he spoke with Fred Wagner, chairman of a Faculty Senate committee, about the transcript's circulation.
 "I conveyed my concern (that) this may be against the law ... if anybody in the athletic department ever changed a grade, etc., that could be grounds for dismissal," Osborne testified.
 When Visser's attorney, Thom

Cope, asked the coach to describe his anger during that conversation, Osborne said, "I don't get too angry, sometimes when officials make a bad call, but I wasn't jumping up and down."
 Under cross-examination from university attorney David Buntain, Osborne said he spoke with Wagner because he "simply wanted to find out what the source" of the circulation was.
 But Osborne said he first learned who had provided the transcript to the faculty senate committee "when I read about the lawsuit in the paper."

The coach said he also spoke with university Vice Chancellor James Griesen, who indicated that "he thought I needed to do some fence mending." Afterward, Osborne called Wagner again and another Faculty Senate member to explain his position on the matter, Osborne said.
 Osborne said he never told Griesen that he wanted the employee terminated and never attended a meeting to discuss that termination.
 Osborne said Griesen told him that the vice chancellor had "talked to the person that had indicated there was some problem with the transcript of Broderick ... whatever."

 Attorneys and witnesses have been referring to student athletes by number rather than name under an agreement. Earlier, Visser also referred to a student as "Broderick."
 The only Broderick listed on NU's football in recent years was Broderick Thomas, a defensive end in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.
 Visser had testified that she found a transcript with what she considered irregularities, including the

Fighting Irish, Buffs rule top 25 grid poll

Associated Press

Notre Dame stayed on top but Colorado is No. 2 and gaining in the Associated Press Top Twenty Five college football poll released today.

The Fighting Irish, who crushed Navy 41-0, got 56 first-place votes and totaled 1,496 points. Colorado, boosted by its 27-21 victory over then-No. 3 Nebraska, received four first-place votes — two more than last week — and have 1,441 points.

Michigan, Alabama and Florida State all moved up one spot into the next three positions with victories. Nebraska fell to No. 6, followed by Miami, Illinois, Southern California and Arkansas.

Texas Tech, taking advantage of five additional teams in the rankings this season, made its first appearance in the poll since Nov. 14, 1977. The Red Raiders moved to No. 23 after beating No. 22 Texas 24-17, knocking the Longhorns out of the poll.

No other teams moved in or out of the rankings.

Virginia made the biggest advance, going from No. 24 to No. 18 with a 20-9 victory over then-No. 18 North Carolina State. The Wolfpack fell to No. 22 with the loss.

Arizona and West Virginia took the biggest tumbles. West Virginia slipped from No. 13 to No. 19 after losing to 16th-ranked Penn State 19-9 and Arizona dropped from No. 15 to No. 25, with a 29-28 loss to California.

Tennessee, which was idle, went from No. 10 to No. 11. Rounding out the Second Ten: Auburn, Penn St., Pittsburgh, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, West Virginia and Florida.

Brigham Young is 21st, followed by North Carolina State, Texas Tech, Fresno State and Arizona.

Tech climbed into the national rankings for the first time in 12 years by beating the Texas Longhorns on Saturday in Austin. The Red Raiders are going into a home game Saturday against Texas

AP Top 25

The Top Twenty Five teams in the Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Nov. 4, total points based on 25 points for first (Notre Dame) and one point for last (Arizona) and last week's ranking:

Team	Record	Pts	Pts
1. Notre Dame (56)	9-0-0	1,496	1

Other receiving votes: Ohio St. 117, Hawaii 105, Michigan St. 58, Oklahoma 52, Air Force 41, Washington St. 23, Duke 21, Texas 21, Arizona St. 11, Georgia 7, LSU 1, Syracuse 1.

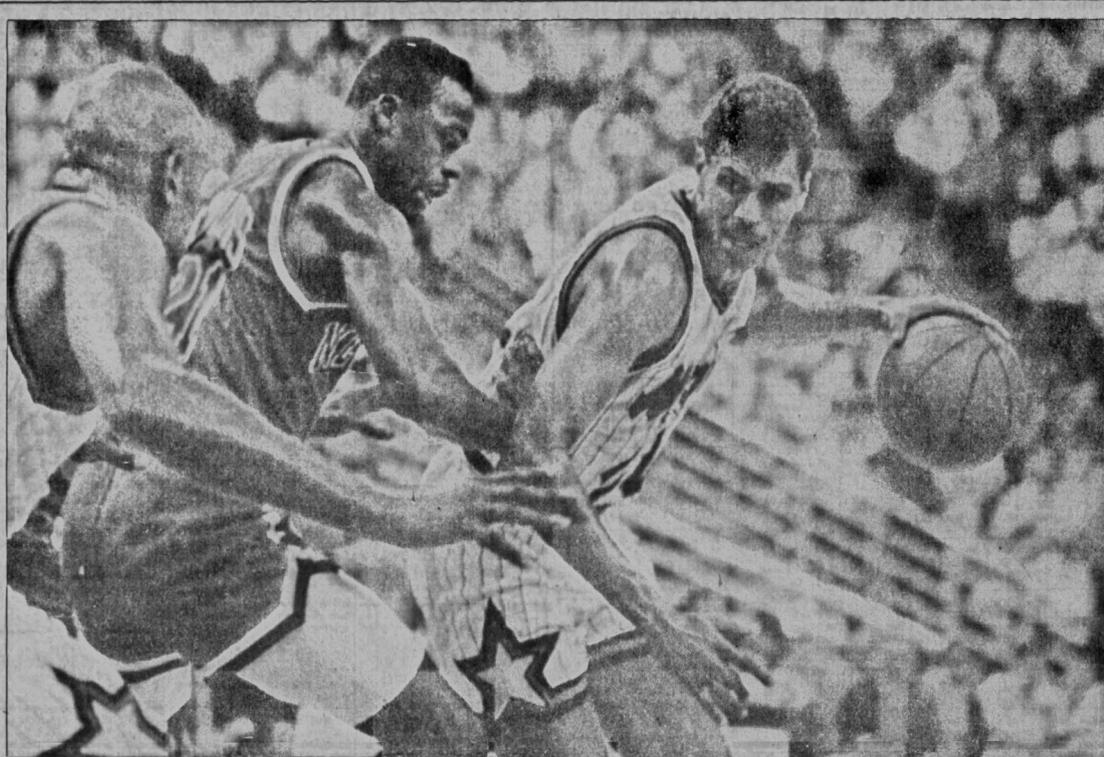

Christian, and Coach Spike Dykes said Monday he wants to stay in the Top 25 for a while.

"We don't need to get kicked out of the big black-tie ball the first chance we get to go," he said. "We need to dance a little bit."

Notre Dame and Colorado each are 9-0. The Fighting Irish play Southern Methodist this Saturday and the game figures to be such a mismatch that Notre Dame offered to call it off. Colorado may have a tougher time, playing at Oklahoma State.

Michigan, beat Purdue 42-27 and has won seven straight since an opening loss to Notre Dame. The Wolverines, who got 1,343 points in the poll, play this weekend at Illinois game that could decide the Big Ten title.

Alabama, 8-0 after beating Mississippi State 23-10, has 1,310 points and plays at Louisiana State on Saturday night. Florida State, 7-2, defeated South Carolina 35-10 and is idle this weekend with 1,220 points. Miami (7-1) beat East Carolina 40-10 and plays at Pitt.

Mack released from jail after one month

CLEVELAND (AP)—Fullback Kevin Mack was released from prison Monday after serving one month of a six-month drug term, and was immediately welcomed back by the Cleveland Browns.

Just when he would be able to play again in the NFL, however, remained unclear.

Judge Richard J. McMonagle of Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court granted Mack shock probation, or release after a short period of incarceration in the belief further imprisonment would serve no valid purpose.

Mack, 27, began a two-year probation, effective immediately, along with several requirements that included regular urine testing for drug abuse.

"There's something I want you to know. You have one dirty urine (test result) and I'll send you back to prison," McMonagle told the two-time

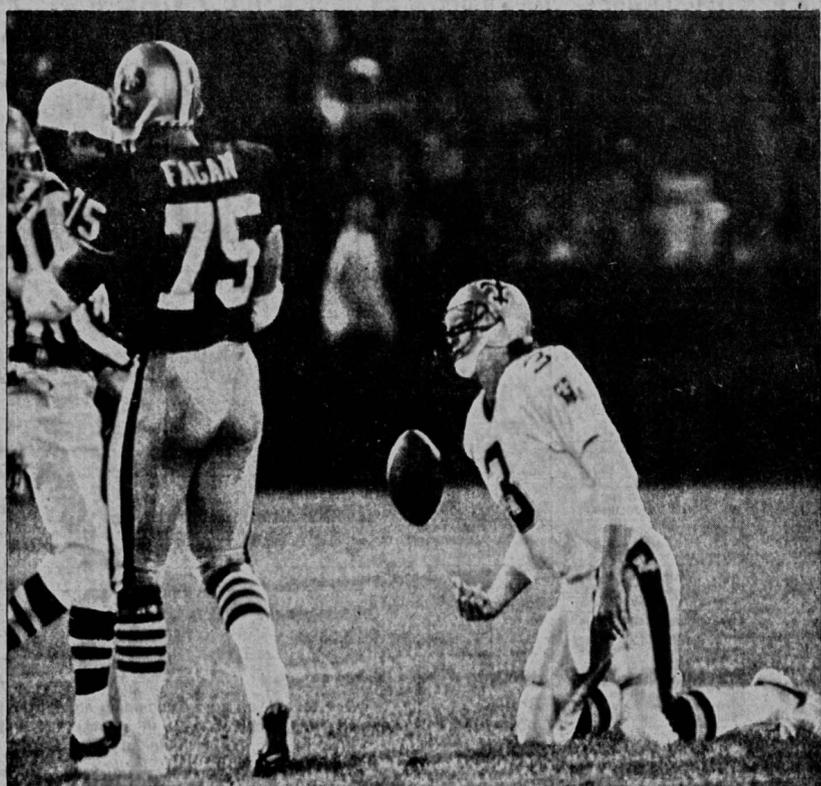

Pro Bowl player.

Mack smiled and shook hands with defense lawyer Gerald S. Gold after the court hearing. He was then ushered out of the courtroom back to the jail area to change clothes and complete probation release paperwork.

Mack's wife, Ava, sitting in the courtroom gallery, wept as the judge released her husband.

Art Modell, Browns majority owner and president, said, "I'm happy for Kevin and Ava, and the best of their lives is now ahead of them. We welcome Kevin back to the Browns family, and I'm confident he'll do whatever is necessary to put his life back in order."

Coach Bud Carson said: "I want Kevin Mack to get back to normal and I hope part of being normal is playing."

Road to the Final Four: Pairings

Hawks hoping for 4th-straight final four trip

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

With aspirations of a fourth-consecutive trip to the NCAA final four, the No. 3 Iowa field hockey team is setting its sights on No. 6 Providence and unranked Pacific.

Pairings were released Monday morning for the four regional home sites, including Iowa City. The Hawkeyes get a first-round bye Saturday, while Providence and Pacific face off at 1 p.m. on the Iowa Field Hockey Field.

The winner of that contest takes on Iowa at 1 p.m. Sunday. Whichever team comes out of that game will advance to the final four in Springfield, Mass., Nov. 18-19.

"We don't know a whole lot about either of these team," Iowa coach

Beth Beglin said. "But that doesn't matter. We'll be happy to play anyone at this point."

Providence was 20-2-0 during the regular season, while Pacific was 9-5-1.

The Hawkeyes finished the regular season at 18-0-2, the only undefeated team in the country. During the course of the year, Iowa players found their way into league record books.

Freshman Kristy Gleason tied teammate Erica Richards' mark for most conference goals in a season with 13. Richards had 13 goals in the Big Ten in 1988. Gleason also had 26 points, one behind Richards and former Hawkeye Liz Tchou.

Senior Aileen Trender is second in assists with 11, five behind leader Jennifer Averill of Northwestern in 1984. And goalkeeper Eileen Moyer moved into a four-way tie for fourth in league shutouts with six.

"I've played with a lot of players from Pacific and they're pretty good," Iowa forward, and San Diego native, Kris Fillat said. "They have a lot of aggressive players."

"We're just excited to be at home," Gleason said. "Our regular season ended successfully and we're just hoping the trend will continue in the tournament."

Hawkeyes won't overlook Panthers

Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Even though it will be playing against the top team in the Big Ten Friday, the Iowa volleyball team will not look past its match with Northern Iowa tonight at 7 p.m. in Cedar Falls.

"It's another match," Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said. "We have to use it to prepare for our match with Ohio State this weekend, but we're not overlooking it. We don't overlook anybody."
 "UNI is just like any other

match," she continued. "Now (the matches) are all important."

If Iowa comes out with wins in all three of their matches this week, Nelson said, they would be almost guaranteed a spot in the nation's top 20. They've been receiving votes in the poll for several weeks and have defeated Minnesota, which was tied with Ohio State for first in the league, Notre Dame and Southwest Texas State last week.

The win could mean a lot to the Panthers, too. Since they are currently first in the Gateway Conference, they will automatically receive a bid for the NCAA tournament. But if they defeat the Hawkeyes tonight, Nelson said, they would get a higher seed in the NCAAs.

"It would be a positive win for both teams," the coach said.

The Panthers are now 7-0 in their league and 20-3 overall, while Iowa stands 9-3 in the Big Ten and 19-6
