3rd day of Salvadoran rebel offensive raises death toll to 245

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Rebels held large parts of several poor neighborhoods Monday and battled soldiers in a third day of the worst fighting the capital has experienced in a decade of civil war.

At least 245 had been killed and 378 wounded since the rebels attacked Saturday night in their biggest offensive since 1981, according to the armed forces mortuary, civilian morgues and hospitals, and unofficial military figures.

Thousands of civilians were trapped in their homes by exchanges of gunfire between the army and guerrillas of the leftist Farabundo National Liberation Front. Helicopter gunships and military planes flew over the city to attack rebel positions.

Few of the city's 1 million people were on the streets, and nearly all downtown stores were closed. People went to the armed forces mortuary looking for missing relatives.

Fighting also was reported outside Usulután, a major city in eastern El Salvador, but not in the city itself.

The army press office stopped providing information Monday, and whether combat continued in the provinces was not clear. Telephone calls to provincial cities did not go through.

No new official counts of dead and wounded were given, but the armed forces mortuary had the bodies of 55 soldiers, 29 more than the army included in its official count.

President Alfredo Cristiani announced a state of siege and a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew Sunday, and legislators were considering more restrictions on civil rights. A photographer who tried to reach the legislature's building Monday was turned back by gunfire.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Barry Jacobs said an army counteroffensive had been slowed because soldiers were ordered to avoid civilian casualties.

The Bush administration said Cristiani's government had not requested U.S. assistance in repelling the rebel attack.

"It's our belief that they are in control of the situation at this point," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. Asked whether he would rule out U.S. involvement in the fighting, he said: "We can never predict the future, but at this point it's not anticipated."

East Germany picks premier

Hundreds still rally for reforms

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's Parliament elected a leading reformer as the new premier Monday night, but hundreds of thousands of protesters took to the streets of Leipzig to say Communist reforms are moving too slowly.

After an historic weekend in which millions of East Germans took advantage of their new freedom to travel West, Parliament also picked a non-Communist speaker in the chamber's first secret ballot and urged accelerated changes.

And the government said it was dismantling internal barriers that for three decades formed a notorious "death strip" between the Berlin Wall and the city's sealed-off eastern sector.

Deputies appealed for truly free elections, a coalition government and removal from the constitution of language declaring their nation a socialist state.

The parliament, known as the People's Chamber, then approved the Communist Party's nomination of Politburo member Hans Modrow to lead a new government as premier. The government traditionally has been subservient to the party.

Modrow is a well-known reformer within the party, which has been led by Egon Krenz since October 18. Krenz has promised some reforms, including free elections.

As deputies argued into the night in East Berlin, pro-democracy activists in Leipzig pressed for continued change to prolong the spirit of hope sweeping the nation after the festival of freedom over the weekend. West German television estimated the number of protesters at between 200,000 and 300,000.

The protesters urged the government to live up to its promise of free elections and questioned the commitment of the new leadership.

"The question is, are you (the new government) really different from the others?" one speaker said at the rally.

At the session to approve Modrow, the first secret balloting in the Communist-dominated Parliament elected a new speaker, Guenther Maleuda, who told the assembly it was duty-bound to heed the calls of the reform movement.

Maleuda, 58, is the chairman of the Democratic Peasants party, one of the four small parties allied with the ruling Communists. The Communist Party did not propose a candidate for the post.

In addition to the parliamentary session, the party's 163-member Central Committee set December 15 for an emergency party congress that will elect a new leadership and rewrite its political platform. The party, which has had a monopoly on power in the 40 years since East Germany was created, is struggling to meet the pent-up demands of 16.5 million citizens who have watched their Communist neighbors restore democracy while they were denied the same freedoms.

Modrow is an anti-establishment Communist who enjoys broad popular support. He was nominated to replace Willi Stoph, who resigned last week along with his entire 44-member cabinet.

Soviet official speaks at UI on glasnost

Ann Marie Williams
 The Daily Iowan

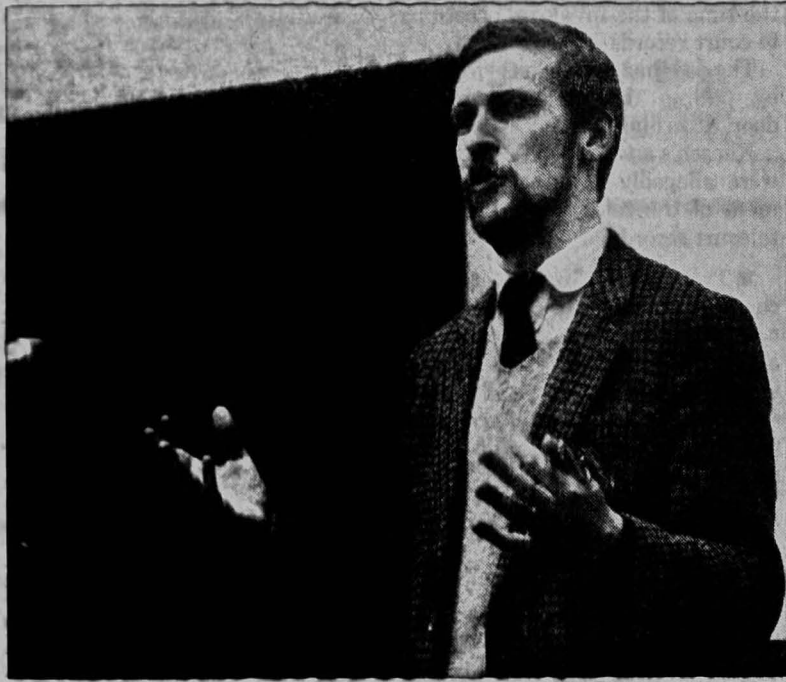

Only 12.6 percent of Soviet citizens feel military action is the most important means of preserving Soviet national security, according to Alexander Nikitin, director of the Moscow Center for Political and International Studies.

Nikitin spoke in Gilmore Hall Monday about glasnost's impact on the Soviet Union. He was integral in conducting the first Soviet national opinion poll.

Nikitin spoke of the vast changes which have resulted from the reforms affecting every aspect of Soviet life, from politics to culture. He said that the result of the public opinion poll shows the changing political attitudes in his country.

The majority of people polled by Nikitin and his colleagues said that preventing nuclear war — as opposed to spreading socialism — should be the main goal of Soviet foreign policy.

Even more significant, Nikitin said, was the large percentage of people who said that complete Soviet demilitarization is necessary — 74 percent of those polled. But only 45 percent of the respondents thought it was possible, he added.

Multicandidate elections, political campaigning, and dealing with local problems without the guidance of the central government are other areas in which the reforms have had a real impact on Soviet domestic policy, he said.

He added that Soviet Union residents are having a difficult time adjusting to the less stringent governmental policies.

"People still ask for permission for things they don't need permission for," he said.

City Council to plan future waste disposal alternatives

Brian Dick
 The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa City landfill on Melrose Avenue will not be full for another 25 years, city councilors are asking residents to learn about solid waste disposal alternatives before there is no dumping space left.

Iowa City councilors will discuss a draft plan to handle solid waste management in East Central Iowa at a November 20 informational meeting.

"While we can educate our city's residents, we don't have a way of regulating waste flow from other jurisdictions in Johnson County," said Iowa City councilor Susan Horowitz. "If haulers start bringing in refuse that has yard waste in it next year after yard waste is prohibited from being dumped in landfills — it will be turned away."

The Iowa Legislature issued landfill closing guidelines in July 1988 that required communities to construct plans to deal with solid waste in environmentally safe ways.

The legislature's guidelines act in accordance with the 1978 Iowa Groundwater Protection Act, which required landfills like Iowa City's to prepare for their ultimate closure, Horowitz said.

Hume speaks at UI on press coverage

All reporters dream of a "Deep Throat," an inside informant who will assist them in their quest to uncover the Watergate mega-story of the day.

But such cloak-and-dagger reporting has now become a mainstay of modern journalism, often at the expense of ethics and fair play, according to Brit Hume, chief White House correspondent for ABC News.

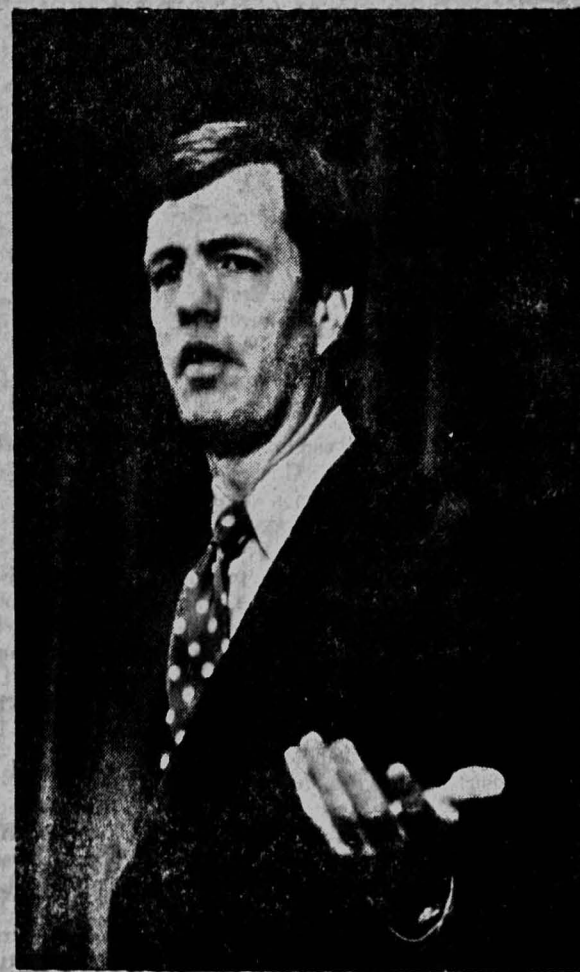

"We tend to always be covering the last story," Hume said. "What we fail to recognize is that things have changed, that we've reached an era in which we are not saddled with dishonorable people permeating the high levels of government."

Hume, who spoke to a packed audience at the Union Ballroom Monday, is in a place to know. As an investigative reporter for legendary White House columnist Jack Anderson during Watergate, he was instrumental in uncovering the Dita Beard-ITT scandal in 1972.

Watergate and the Vietnam War were at once tragedies for the nation and goldmines for the press — leading to what Hume called "the romance of journalism."

"We have an entire generation of journalists who want to relive those experiences," he said. "They

Newspapers will merge in Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Free Press Executive Editor Heath Meriwether walked out into his newsroom Monday and looked at smiling faces.

Meriwether told the 70 or so employees what they already knew, but were waiting to hear from him: The U.S. Supreme Court, by a 4-4 tie, had cleared the way for the Free Press and The Detroit News to partially merge their operations.

"Whoever said a tie was like kissing your sister didn't have it quite right," Meriwether said.

Since 1986, Knight-Ridder Inc., owner of the Free Press, and Gannett Co. Inc., owner of the News, had been seeking to merge their business, circulation and advertising departments. Editorial departments would remain separate.

"We're joined at the wallet but not at the heart," said Joe Swickard, a Free Press court reporter.

The tie vote meant that earlier court decisions upholding the joint operating agreement, or JOA, would stand. Justice Byron White had excused himself from the case for undisclosed personal reasons.

The Michigan Citizens for an Independent Press, an organization which challenged the arrangement, will not ask the court for a rehearing, said group Vice President Matt Beer.

However, Beer said, giving up the Detroit fight didn't mean the door was open for other newspapers to form such mergers. "We've created enough thin ice that anyone else who applies for a JOA will do so carefully," he said.

CAC members question cancellation of meeting

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Several members of the UI Collegiate Associations Council found themselves without a place to meet Monday night after a Union security representative told them their room reservation had been canceled.

The representative informed the CAC councilors who were present that she was instructed to require CAC President Vernon McKinley's approval for all room reservations.

McKinley issued a memo to all the councilors postponing the next CAC meeting until December 4. He said he changed the meeting schedule because of the non-productive atmosphere of the past three CAC meetings.

He also added that the CAC constitution only requires meetings be held once a month.

"As far as I know, that's correct procedure," McKinley said. "The president sets the agenda."

Some councilors contested McKinley's right to cancel a regularly scheduled meeting and his authority to prevent the council from reserving meeting space.

"The (CAC) constitution requires council approval to cancel a scheduled meeting," said councilor Syd Smith. "McKinley doesn't have the authority to do it."

The 12 councilors present Monday night met in another location without the presence of McKinley or any other CAC executives, although McKinley said all business conducted at the meeting would be void. He added that he and his appointed executives were continuing to keep up the budgeting process to facilitate student groups dependent on the CAC for funding.

But several councilors and former CAC members expressed their concern that the autonomy of the council was in jeopardy due to McKinley's actions.

"The Wall came down in East Germany and came up in Eastern Iowa," said former CAC executive associate Jerry Miller.

Election wins force hard choice

SPENCER, Iowa (AP) — A Gillett Grove woman must decide whether she wants to be the mayor of that Clay County community or a member of its city council.

In write-in balloting in last week's municipal elections, Gerri Hale was elected mayor over incumbent Roy Burger, but she also received the fifth highest vote total in the race for five at-large seats on the city council.

The results were not reported that way because election workers assumed that if Hale was elected mayor, votes for her for council would not matter.

Clay County Election Commissioner Phil Hurst said Hale has until 5 p.m. Tuesday to make her choice.

If she takes the mayor's job, the next highest vote-getter in the council race — Carol Gustin — will get the seat on council.

President of Venezuelan university visits UI, extends exchange tradition

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings and the University de Los Andes of Venezuela President Nester Lopez formally signed their 11th exchange agreement Monday.

Marking 10 years of cooperation between the two universities, the UI continued a relationship began in 1980. It is the only affiliation the UI has with a Latin American university.

"(The exchange agreement) is to celebrate 10 years of collaboration and cooperation between the two universities," said Steve Arum, UI director of international education and services.

Lopez visit to the UI — along with UI professor of economics Miguel Rodriguez — marks the first visit of a ULA president to the UI.

"Our prolific exchange will continue to aid us by making us aware of the bonds that unite our nations," Lopez said through a translator. "We hope to continue to broaden our horizons."

The UI has graduated seven students from Venezuela who are now professors at the ULA and presently hosts six graduate students from ULA.

After exchanging gifts, the two presidents signed the agreement that will expand the universities' exchanges into the health services. "Clearly it's been a vital agreement that has been beneficial to both institutions," Rawlings said. "It's a two-way street."

The two universities have had faculty exchanges in engineering, economics and mathematics. Economists from both universities were involved in collaborative economic research supported by a grant from the U.S. Information Agency. "We not only want to continue the relationship, but accelerate the exchange between the two institutions," Rawlings said.

Lopez addressed the severe economic pressures the university has felt as an effect of the Latin American foreign debt.

"We express gratitude for the extensive cooperation we've received from the University of Iowa considering the difficult situation of the University de Los Andes," he said.

The two institutions are making plans for a UI- and ULA-sponsored international mathematics conference on the Banach space theory in 1992.

ULA is a 204-year-old university that has 35,000 full-time students in 10 colleges. It is located in Merida, a city of approximately 100,000.

Study: Distribution of sexes in medical advertising more equal

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

As more women enter health-care professions, medical journals are responding by portraying more women in their advertisements.

The UI College of Pharmacy found that medical drug advertising contains a more equal distribution of women. Researchers examined medical journal advertisements since 1963 to reach their conclusions.

"All industry has been sensitized over the last 10 to 15 years to be more representative because of affirmative action," said Clayton Rowland, associate professor of socioeconomic pharmacy.

The study focused on advertisements for oral hypoglycemic drugs, which are used by patients with diabetes. The researchers selected these drugs as a representative sample because they are commonly prescribed to both men and women, unlike birth control pills.

More gender-neutral advertisements may be related to the increase in the number of women in the medical field and advertisers need to attract female consumers.

Women now make up about 60 percent of the UI College of Pharmacy.

The study found that, in the past, men were depicted more often than women in medical journal advertisements but now they receive close to equal space.

"There is more of a social awareness that women fulfill all the roles that men fulfill. In the 1940s and 1950s the roles of women were strictly limited," said Bernard Sorofman, college of pharmacy assistant professor.

The advertising reveals a clear trend toward gender-neutral characters in advertising, he said.

The trend toward even representation of gender in advertising may be the pharmaceutical industry's response to past claims of sexual bias in medical advertising, said

Kumar Mehta, college of pharmacy graduate assistant.

Although some advertisements in medical journals may be giving women more equal representation, local awareness of the change appears minimal.

One doctor said she has never noticed any revisions in advertising because she does not read the ads.

"I look in the index for articles, but do not go through the whole magazine," said Dr. Patricia Hicks, UI Student Health Services.

Other pharmacists said advertising in medical journals is often overlooked and sometimes explicitly ignored.

Sorofman said the influence of medical advertising in prescription patterns was not addressed in this study but may be the subject of future research.

The study also reported more colored graphics are used in drug advertising as a result of technological advances. The additional color and graphics reportedly results in less text for the reader and attracts more attention.

Pictures, instead of words, can explain what the drug does by highlighting the body parts being affected, Mehta said.

"Using more color and graphics reduces the number of words, because you don't have to spell it out," he said.

Pilots seek retirement age raise

Claim: Evidence shows competency maintained

DES MOINES (AP) — Older pilots, including the one who brought United Airlines Flight 811 to a safe landing after part of its fuselage ripped away, said Monday the government's retire-at-60 mandate will lead to a shortage of skilled commercial pilots.

They also accused their union, which supports the Federal Aviation Administration policy, of double-crossing older members in the name of career advancement by younger pilots.

The pilots joined Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot, a Republican representing southwest Iowa's 5th District, at a news conference in Des Moines to show support for a bill to raise the mandatory retirement age to 65.

"I kind of like to look up in the cockpit and see a guy with a little gray hair and another younger guy who's learning from him," said Lightfoot. Lightfoot is a private pilot with some 3,000 hours of experience.

He said it does not make sense to declare that a pilot is competent until midnight on the eve of his 60th birthday.

Lightfoot prefers no age limit, with physical and mental tests being the only variables. But he said that idea would not have a chance in Congress.

"We want this to pass," he said. "Without putting some date on it, our chance would be slim to none."

The retire-at-60 limit was imposed by the FAA in 1960. The agency has successfully withstood several court challenges and remains opposed to change, saying older pilots are likely to be less safe.

Opponents of the rule said the FAA has no statistics to back up the rule and said recent cockpit heroics by two older pilots shows the provision to be baseless.

United Airlines Capt. Al Haynes, 58, guided crippled Flight 232 to the airport in Sioux City last July 19 after an engine explosion made its hydraulics system useless. A crash as the crew attempted an emergency landing killed 112 of the 296 people on board.

David Cronin steered Flight 811 to a safe landing in Hawaii after a large hole ripped in its skin, sucking nine passengers to their deaths.

After one more flight, Cronin turned 60 and he was forced to retire.

"You've got a 700,000-pound airplane coming down at 1,500 feet per minute, with two engines on full power and a hole in the side big enough to drive a semi-truck through," said Cronin. "I'm sure there are some younger pilots who could have (landed successfully), and some who couldn't."

He said he feels more competent now than when he first earned his pilot's stripes years ago.

Read-In day: Turn off the tube, take a good book off the shelf

Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

From 10 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. Wednesday, many area residents will put down whatever they are doing and pick up a book, in honor of the second annual Community Read-In.

The read-in is sponsored by the Hills Bank and Trust Company as part of their Children's Reading Project.

"We first envisioned people pulling cars over to the side of the road and whipping out books," said Margaret Cox, Read-In co-coordinator. "This year's Read-In will be better than last year's because this year we know where the problems are."

Cox said the first Read-In was successful mainly in area schools, but this year many local businesses are participating in the event.

Organized events include a "Read-In Party" at Old Capitol Center, readings at Sycamore Mall, and a short story broadcasted on radio station WSUI. Inmates, staff members and patients at the Oakdale prison facility will also be taking part in the event.

"We hope to involve as many staff, inmates and patients in the Read-In as possible and we plan to have close to 100-percent participation," said Lowell Brandt, treatment director.

He said readings will be held in the gymnasium and in the resident library. Patients and inmates will also read from their works during the designated 15 minutes.

"We're aware of the community commitment that's gone into doing this," Brandt said. "We thought this was a great opportunity to stress the value and importance of reading."

"We like the notion that it's a community activity and, with the nature of our business, it's hard for us to get involved with these things," he added.

Elizabeth Rawlings, wife UI President Hunter Rawlings, is a spokeswoman for the Read-In. She will be reading to fifth-graders in the Old Capitol.

"Librarians and teachers need help from the community to make children aware of reading," Rawlings said. "We all talk about how much less TV we'd like our children to be watching, but we never really do anything about it. This is a way of doing something about it."

Reading has been a part of my life, both as a child and a parent," she added. "Reading aloud is a wonderful activity."

She said the Read-In will also help call attention to the need for adult literacy programs on the local level.

John Trelease, author of the "Read Aloud Handbook" will be speaking Thursday at the Highlander Inn, Highway 1, as part of the event. The handbook is a guide to books from which children of various ages enjoy being read aloud.

6 more charge Branstad exceeded veto power

DES MOINES (AP) — Six Democratic legislators filed suit Monday charging Republican Gov. Terry Branstad repeatedly exceeded his authority this year in vetoing parts of spending bills approved by the Iowa Legislature.

"This governor has been exceeding his authority for years," said House Majority Leader Bob Arnould (Davenport) one of those filing suit.

Monday's suit is the latest of many filed by Democrats and Republicans in a struggle for power over Iowa's purse strings.

The Democrats suit said Branstad's vetoes are "beyond the scope of the governor's powers" and should be overturned. A similar case is awaiting a decision by the Iowa Supreme Court.

Filing the suit in Polk County District Court were Arnould, Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins (D-Audubon), Sen. Joe Welsh (D-Dubuque), Sen. Thomas Mann (D-Des Moines), Rep. Tom Jochum (D-Dubuque) and House Speaker Don Avenson.

All in good time

On November 9 in East Berlin, the impossible was made possible. The dream of destroying the Berlin Wall is now a reality.

Amid the giddiness and celebrations following the first hammer blow on that hated concrete structure, a universal feeling of goodwill and hope for the East German people has sprung up — hope for a nation forcibly divided for so many years, for a society desperately in need of economic and social reform, and for a people never before permitted to travel beyond their own borders.

Now that the Wall is no more, these reforms are being enthusiastically heralded by democratic nations as signs that the two Germanys are coming closer together. Inevitably, the question of reunification has arisen.

Given the rapid pace and astonishing degree of change in the entire Eastern bloc, the reunification of the two Germanys certainly sounds like a reasonable expectation. But the merging of West and East is a daunting prospect that, while welcome, involves matters more complicated than simply bulldozing a concrete divider.

The reunification of East and West Germany is impossible without a radical change in the military situation in the two countries: To this end, there has been talk about abolishing NATO and the Warsaw Pact. But East Germany remains an important, if not the most important, member of the Warsaw Pact, and the Soviet troops stationed on East German soil and NATO troops in West Germany are still very real. Both Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov and U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney are saying an abolition of either military pacts is unthinkable at this point.

East Germany has answered its citizens' calls for reform. And there are more than a few East Germans who plan to stay and see what their government has in store. They want to be around for the change, to see the promised improvement, and possibly to play a part in their nation's betterment.

There is every reason to believe that East Germany will continue to reform itself. The question of reunification should not be forgotten, but it also shouldn't eclipse the more important issues of East German economic, social and political change that need to occur first.

Economic wall falls

While the world celebrates the opening of the Berlin Wall, much of the enthusiasm has been directed at the destruction of the Cold War's greatest symbol. But there are benefits that haven't been discussed yet, foremost among them the economic opportunity the opening presents.

Although East German party leader Egon Krenz has vowed that political unification of the two Germanys "is not a matter of debate," the integration of their economic forces is well under way. Only a few hours after the announcement opening the wall, East German taxi drivers were seeking fares on the other side.

The implications are far grander on a national scale. The East German economy has been struggling for some time, with the 1988 GNP at about half of what it was in 1985. Recently, the country's greatest export has been humanity, with roughly an eighth of the population crossing the borders, if only for a look. Meanwhile, as antiquated factories have turned the nation's industry into a rust pile, the labor force has faced lower buying power and poorer working conditions.

That's where West Germany comes in. The powerhouse of the European Community, West Germany needs skilled workers. At the same time West Germany has excess capital, and the Eastern plants provide an excellent investment opportunity.

These mutual contributions are more than pipedreams. Volkswagen, for instance, operates a plant 10 miles from the East German border. The potential for an influx of labor was enough to drive the Volkswagen stock up considerably last week.

The benefits are far from limited to Germany, too. France's Industry Minister Roger Fauroux has called on his country's businessmen to "rush" into Eastern European markets. The United States has a positive posture as well. Outstanding loans by U.S. banks to East Germany total only $247 million, which means we can invest, too.

Not everyone is entirely happy about the economic picture. Japan is afraid Europe will turn inward as a result of these changes, becoming protectionist. And some skilled workers in West Germany are afraid their pay will drop as a result of an influx of new workers. Some members of the EC are also mumbling about a Fourth Reich.

These nay-sayers are out of line. The euphoria on the stock exchange in Frankfurt explains why: Values are surging. There are new investment opportunities, new labor pools, new markets for goods and services.

And on the eastern side, there is an opportunity to rebuild factories, increase workers' wages and enjoy the goods available across the border.

This weekend, West Germany welcomed Eastern visitors with gifts of 100 marks, about $55, to spend while they were celebrating. That money went straight into West German coffers, while the goods went back across the border. Let such events, like the ingenuity of the taxi drivers seeking fares on both sides of the city, set the norm for the future — renewal and prosperity, fueled by growth.

Their success is Jackson's, too

A mainstream black moderate has been elected governor of Virginia. A moderate-talking black liberal had been elected mayor of New York City. And some Democrats see in these victories a threatening omen for Jesse Jackson. In my view, this comes under the heading of wishful thinking.

Both Doug Wilder and David Dinkins are pin-striped, courtly men who speak softly and carry little shtick. Wilder ran a middle-of-the-road, tough-on-crime campaign where concepts such as "empowerment" were as invisible as Jesse Jackson himself.

Dinkins, who was Jackson's New York co-chairman in the 1988 presidential primary, surrounded himself this year with an economy-sized sample of national Democrats, but kept an arm-and-a-half-length distance from Jackson during the general election: a politically understandable move given the size of the Jewish vote in New York and the long-standing antipathy of many Jewish voters toward Jackson's Middle East position and his infamous "Hymietown" remark.

Given the success of Dinkins and Wilder, some Democrats are attempting to argue that Jackson's season in the sun has come and gone; that a new generation of black elected officials will render Jackson irrelevant; that his best option is to run for something — perhaps mayor of Washington, D.C. — and get some experience.

This is an attractive scenario for Democrats, since Jackson's position on the Democratic left is seen by many as an impediment to a renewed appeal to moderates and conservatives within the party. If Jackson no longer has a lock on the black presidential primary vote, the argument goes, it will put the party in a much more favorable political position.

The only problem with this scenario is that it has already been proven wrong. Back in 1984, when Jackson entered the presidential race with a skeleton staff and little planning, dozens of important black officials had already signed on with Walter Mondale's front-running campaign.

For instance, Richard Arrington, the mayor of Birmingham, was so strongly behind Mondale that he helped deliver Alabama to Mondale in the primary, very probably salvaging Mondale's then-faltering campaign.

But did that fact keep Jackson from winning the plurality of the black vote? Hardly; indeed, by 1988, Jackson was virtually uncontested within the black community, and with rare exceptions (such as Detroit Mayor Coleman Young), black officials flocked around Jackson.

Why? Because Jackson's ties to his essential constituency are so powerful. The very attributes that are seen as political liabilities — the spice of his rhetoric, his lack of conventional political experience — are what make him so appealing a figure.

Jackson does not play by the normal rules of the political game. He does not cut his sartorial or rhetorical style to fit existing fashion. And his followers know it and embrace him for it. Whatever private discontents exist among elected black officials toward Jesse Jackson — and they do exist — remain private.

Moreover, Jackson's position is strengthened by the fact that, at least in 1988, no white presidential candidate dared to compete with Jackson for black votes, nor attacked Jackson for holding ideas with which they disagreed strongly. They saw Jackson as the figure who would deliver black votes to the ultimate nominee, not as a rival whose position, especially in foreign policy matters, would have been held by a white rival.

If the presence of Andrew Young, Tom Bradley, William Gray, Wilson Goode, Charles Rangel, John Conyers and dozens of other black elected officials did nothing to deter Jackson's political fortunes — and considering that just about all of these officials publicly backed Jackson for president — why would the addition of a black mayor of New York and a black governor of Virginia prove any different?

My guess is it won't be any different. If Jesse Jackson runs in 1992, either as a private citizen or mayor of Washington or whatever, his power will wane only if and when other Democrats begin to challenge him on his beliefs, his programs, his ideology.

Absent that unlikely possibility, Jackson will remain a powerful presence within the party no matter how many blacks win high office in the next three years.

It's his country

To the Editor:
 Daniel Ortega has received a lot of criticism recently due to his decision to end the 19-month-old cease-fire. But this criticism is largely unjustified.

Since the cease-fire went into effect, the Contras have reportedly murdered 736 Nicaraguans. Recently, on Oct. 21, 19 army reservists were ambushed and killed while working on a national voter registration drive. This appears to be a deliberate attempt by the Contras to undermine the upcoming election.

Besides simply defending his country, Ortega is compelled for political reasons to end the cease-fire. For example, he would appear very weak in the eyes of the voters if he did not take action against armed attacks on his country. How would U.S. voters view Bush if he allowed nearly 1000 Americans to be killed by enemy forces during a cease-fire without retaliation?

Obviously, Ortega has grounds for taking drastic measures. Whether or not ending the cease-fire is the right action to take, it is the expected action of a leader who is truly concerned about his country and his people.

Myopic youth

To the Editor:
 Kelly David's excellent article concerning reverse culture shock felt by American students returning from study abroad ["Students return from abroad, see American lives differently," DI, Nov. 10] was certainly worthy of its front page position.

It is no surprise that American students returning from their studies abroad find themselves disgusted and "irritated" by the culture in which they were raised.

Conveniently, I had only to look two inches down the page to find that these students' pessimism is well founded and embarrassingly proven by Margo Ely's article, "50th anniversary of WWII's end celebrated on Veterans Day."

United States veterans "celebrating" the 50th anniversary of the end of WWII? The anger and frustration I felt having read this... must have been little compared to the emotions felt by veterans. [They] could only feel disheartened and insulted having read this article to discover (though most already have) that they live in a society that has only a vague recollection of their sacrifices, a society in which youth (college students included) is concerned with triviality and either too arrogant or too lazy to develop a further understanding of their present world, let alone the past.

How possible?

To the Editor:
 I am writing in regard to the article about the continuous bloodshed in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip ["Youths killed during violent protests in West Bank," DI, Nov. 8]. Being an Egyptian American gives me some insight to the tragic problems of the Middle East conflict.

As [it said in the] article, "at least 612 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis since the uprising against occupation of the West Bank and Gaza began 23 months ago." In addition, hundreds have been wounded, maimed, or permanently disabled. The thousands more [left] homeless are more tragic casualties. Each day I read about a dead child, killed during rioting against an occupying force often supported by the United States government. The many children who could have been the future and hope of a lost generation of Palestinians even now lie angry and disappointed in their sandy graves, wondering what happened to the souls of mankind.

I too question and ponder. How can the American government, which publicly fights for human rights all around the world, conveniently decide to support an Israeli government that repeatedly violates human rights?

Prison contradiction

To the Editor:
 In reference to the DI's story about the prison officers' picket, Nov. 6:

I can't believe Chuck Lee trivialized a perimeter officer's job and then stated, "All correctional officer posts are very important."

He is not telling the whole story.

House authorizes anti-drug programs

WASHINGTON — The House on Monday approved a series of anti-drug bills giving legal shape to President George Bush's war on narcotics, from the Andean countries where coca is grown to schools and neighborhoods where it is consumed.

The legislation provides the authority for a list of programs carrying out the drug war and putting Congress' imprint on the initiative Bush announced earlier this year. The government will spend some $8.8 billion on its anti-drug efforts this year, and the money itself is provided for in other legislation.

One of the measures the House passed authorizes $125 million in military aid in fiscal 1990 for Colombia, Peru and Bolivia to train and equip anti-narcotics forces in their law enforcement, interdiction and eradication battle. Another $115 million is authorized for the State Department's international anti-drug operations.

"We cannot let (Colombian President Virgilio) Barco, and the people of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia twist in the wind until next year," said Rep. Lawrence Coughlin (R-Pa.), arguing for quick action on the bill.

Senator: No more drug planes for now

WASHINGTON — The Customs Service should not buy any more frontline radar planes for detecting drug-ferrying aircraft until electronics problems are resolved, the chairman of a Senate appropriations panel said Monday.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that funded the purchase of P-3 airborne early warning aircraft, said Customs must get the two planes already in service operating fully by March or refuse delivery of a third plane in April.

"If they don't fix it, I'm going to come down on them hard," said DeConcini (D-Ariz.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on treasury, postal service and general government.

DeConcini said Customs Service aircrews have told him that problems in tracking and locating suspect planes are not being addressed. "What we may have is a breakdown where supervisors have not responded to these complaints," he said in an interview.

"If they don't adhere to the suggestion (to fix the problems or postpone delivery), I'll have a hearing and it won't be pleasant. I'm very interested, being the chairman of the funding committee, in not letting a new contract when we don't have one that works."

Water fills coal mine in India; 73 trapped

NEW DELHI, India — More than a million gallons of underground water flooded into a coal mine in eastern India on Monday after blasting operations, trapping at least 73 miners, news agency reports said.

The miners were safe but their survival depended on the availability of oxygen, United News of India said. Authorities had set up six pumps to flush out the water, but the operation was likely to take at least two days, the news agency said.

The mine is near the eastern city of Burdwan, 60 miles northwest of Calcutta.

The news agency said the mine was flooded when underground blasting operations breached a hidden reservoir of water. At least 1.5 million gallons of water cascaded into the mine, it said.

Man attacks gorillas at Melbourne Zoo

MELBOURNE, Australia — A man shouting "I've come to kill a gorilla" jumped into an enclosure at the Melbourne Zoo on Monday and attacked a 220-pound primate before officials locked him in a cage, a zoo spokeswoman said.

The man kicked and punched Betsy, an adult female, who screamed in fear while protecting itself and a 5-year-old male named Mzuri, said spokeswoman Judith Henkey.

The attacker, identified only as a man in his twenties from Tasmania, jumped down a 15-foot enclosure and starting attacking the animals, she said.

"They were genuinely frightened and screaming in fear," Henkey said. "He kicked and punched Betsy and snatched a plastic toy from Mzuri, saying he had come to kill a gorilla."

She said the man, who suffered minor injuries from his jump, apparently had a history of mental illness. He was under observation at the Royal Melbourne Hospital.

Betsy sustained a small cut on her arm.

The episode ended when a zoo worker enticed the primates into a night pen. The man tried to follow and was locked in another pen until police arrived.

Court allows random drug tests for Boston police

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday permitted random drug testing for Boston police, offering new evidence the justices condone widespread testing of government employees in jobs affecting public safety.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that forcing police officers to undergo the random tests — even when there is no reason to suspect drug abuse — does not violate their privacy rights.

"I'm disappointed in the fact that the Supreme Court has said that police officers in this city and in this country have different constitutional rights than other citizens." — Robert Guiney

A Boston police union official panned the action. "I'm disappointed in the fact that the Supreme Court has said that police officers in this city and in this country have different constitutional rights than other citizens," said Robert Guiney, president of the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association.

The court's action came within minutes of President George Bush's naming 27 citizens, including medical pioneer Dr. Jonas Salk and former Atty. Gen. William French Smith, as advisers in the war on drugs.

With drug policy director William Bennett at his side, Bush urged the advisory panel to encourage private employers to keep workplaces drug-free and to coordinate anti-drug efforts.

The high court last March upheld drug and alcohol testing for railroad workers involved in accidents and for U.S. Customs Service agents who apply for drug-enforcement posts or jobs requiring that a gun be carried.

Weeks later, the justices silently let stand a ruling that allowed administering random drug tests within the Washington Township, N.J., police department.

The court never has ruled definitively in a case involving random drug-testing of government employees, and its approval of such tactics is not a certainty.

Until the court agrees to tackle the issue, however, there is nothing to deter other police forces or government employers involved in protecting the public safety from requiring such tests.

Far more uncertain is how the justices would react to random testing of public employees whose jobs do not directly affect the public safety.

In other matters Monday, the court:
 ■ Split 4-4 in upholding the planned partial merger of Detroit Free Press and the The Detroit News, the city's two daily newspapers.

■ Agreed to decide in a Florida case whether students who say their rights were violated may sue school boards and officials in state court, not just in federal court.

■ Said it will use cases from Massachusetts and Rhode Island to consider making it easier to collect all federal taxes owed by bankrupt corporations.

■ Let stand a ruling in a West Virginia case that states may ban door-to-door and telephone solicitation for pre-arranged funerals and burials.

In the Boston drug-testing case, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last May relied on the justices' rulings in March in upholding random urinalysis tests for Boston police officers who carry firearms or enforce drug laws.

Soviets forge first plan to solve economic crisis

MOSCOW (AP) — Top Soviet economists struggled Monday to forge a consensus on their first plan to offer a step-by-step proposal for pulling the country out of its economic crisis.

"We cannot wait for reform. The time is such that it will not wait for us," said Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin, an economist who has emerged in recent months to lead President Mikhail Gorbachev's economic braintrust.

"The value of time has grown enormously, and we must make our steps forward shackled by very heavy weights on our legs," he said.

Gorbachev, who urged economists to come up with a unified plan of action, listened somberly and without comment along with other Communist Party Politburo members in the white marble Hall of Columns in downtown Moscow's House of Unions.

Despite Gorbachev's previous appeals for unity, it was apparent that the plan developed by Abalkin faces opposition from other leading economists. Abalkin told the academics and managers that after four years of reforms, the public also is deeply suspicious.

The government has vacillated on price reforms for about two years in the face of stiff opposition from consumers. But Abalkin said the time had come to take unpopular measures to right an economy plagued with shortages, hoarding, a near-worthless currency, a top-heavy bureaucracy and an increasing number of strikes.

Hoss designated prime minister of Lebanon; Aoun rejects choice

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's new president designated veteran Moslem politician Salim Hoss as prime minister Monday and Gen. Michel Aoun, the Christian army commander, rejected the choice.

Hoss and Aoun have led rival Moslem and Christian governments since the six-year term of President Amin Gemayel ended in September 1988 with Parliament unable to agree on a successor.

Aoun issued a statement Monday saying the Hoss nomination was "as unconstitutional as the election" November 5 of President Rene Mouawad.

The session at which Parliament elected Mouawad and endorsed a peace plan was held in Syrian-controlled north Lebanon because Aoun threatened to shell the parliament building in Beirut. Mouawad, a Christian, instructed Hoss to form a national reconciliation government with the mission of ending the 14-year-old sectarian civil war, in which more than 150,000 people have been killed.

Police reported exchanges of artillery and small-arms fire across Beirut's sectarian dividing line between Aoun's Christian army units and Moslem militias backed by Syria. Each side accused the other of starting the battle, and no casualty reports were available.

A six-month artillery war between Aoun's men and a Moslem alliance led by the Syrians killed at least 930 people and wounded 2,744 before a truce arranged by the Arab League ended it in September.

Bulgaria: More 'housecleaning' expected soon

SOFIA, Bulgaria — The ruling Politburo restored Communist Party membership to 11 advocates of reform Monday, and sources who follow Bulgarian politics predicted a purge of top party ranks within weeks.

The sources, Bulgarians and diplomats, said a housecleaning also was expected in the top levels of government as a result of the removal Friday of Todor Zhivkov, 78, who led the party with rigid orthodoxy for 35 years.

He was succeeded by Foreign Minister Petar Mladenov, 53, who served 18 years as foreign minister and is considered more open to reform.

Parliament is to meet Wednesday to choose a new president to replace Zhivkov, and the party Central Committee is expected to order other personnel changes soon.

BTA, the official news agency, said most of the activists whose party memberships were restored were members of the Independent Club for the Support of Glasnost and Perestroika, which incorporates Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's Russian catchwords for change.

The Politburo also proposed that those who lost their jobs as a result of unorthodox views be reinstated.

Among those taken back into the party were Ivan Dzhadzhiev and Koprinka Chervenkova, the club's chairman and spokeswoman respectively.

Dzhadzhiev, a professor of esthetics at the Higher Institute of Theatrical Art in Sofia, said in an interview Sunday the group was thriving despite intimidation and repression.

He said its "unifying aim" was "democratization of our society."

Boeing admits obtaining gov't. papers

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The Boeing Co. pleaded guilty Monday to two felony charges of illegally obtaining secret Pentagon budget documents and agreed to pay more than $5.2 million in fines and restitution.

Before accepting the plea worked out between the Justice Department and Boeing, U.S. District Judge T.S. Ellis III grilled lawyers for nearly an hour about whether "the penalty is appropriate to what I consider to be a serious violation of the law."

Ellis also criticized Boeing's decision not to send "someone here to accept responsibility as officer of the company" for what the judge termed "a very serious breach of security discipline."

At one point Ellis said he was considering scheduling another proceeding "so that the court can impose sentence in the presence of an officer."

Instead, he ordered Boeing's board chairman and chief executive officer, Frank Shrontz, to write a letter expressing remorse and acceptance of corporate responsibility for the crime.

The company pleaded guilty to felony counts of unauthorized conveyance of government documents. The charge carries a maximum fine of $10,000. An individual convicted of the crime could be sentenced up to 10 years in prison.

"The court regards this as a very serious matter," Ellis told defense attorney Robert Bennett. "I am looking for an awareness on the part of Boeing for the same thing."

Boeing officials realize "this is a very serious matter and they view and should be prosecuted for the receipt of the information" provided by former Boeing senior marketing analyst Richard Lee Fowler.

Fowler, who worked as a civilian Air Force budget official before investigation by Boeing and Defense Department security officials determined that secrets were not compromised by Boeing employees who saw them.

"How do you know it?" the judge asked.

"I only know it by the absence of evidence" that secrets were leaked, Bennett said.

Under the plea agreement, Boeing was fined $20,000 and paid $5 million as restitution and to cover the cost of the investigation.

Bellows said Boeing has cooperated with the investigation since 1986 and obtained admissions from Fowler that were more complete than Pentagon investigators could get.

In Seattle, Boeing spokesman Paul Binder said that "from the time it was discovered, we strengthened our procedures and internal controls and enhanced training to assure that similar incidents do not occur."

Binder said the company "relied on advice from counsel and followed court rules" when it decided not to send a corporate officer.

Bellows said the Justice Department is still trying to "identify the individuals within the Pentagon who gave Mr. Fowler these documents."

Fowler gave documents to employees of other defense companies.

it as such," Bennett replied. "Today, as far as the company is concerned, is a very sad day in its history," he said.

During the hearing, Ellis repeatedly questioned whether individual Boeing employees or officials were guilty of criminal wrongdoing and if the company had taken proper steps to ensure it would not continue to receive Pentagon documents it was not supposed to see.

"For a group of people in a company to know that it has these documents and takes no action is fairly arresting," Ellis said.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Randy Bellows said "we were not able to establish to our satisfaction that other individuals were criminally culpable

He is accused of giving Boeing 107 classified Pentagon documents between 1979 and 1985, including studies of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative.

The judge expressed concern about the security breach, saying: "If those documents were to appear in Aviation Week or were sold to a foreign power, they would be the subject of a serious criminal prosecution."

Bennett conceded "there is no question Boeing should not have had these documents." But the defense attorney said an

Fraud threatens private pension funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fraud and mismanagement could wipe out the retirement nest eggs of millions of working Americans in private pension programs and saddle taxpayers with a multibillion-dollar bailout, according to government officials and agency documents.

An Associated Press investigation found that at least one of every four private pension plans audited by the government is violating the law — yet the odds of any individual program being checked are barely 1 in 100.

In some cases, pension administrators have siphoned off millions of dollars by underreporting earnings. In others, employers never made required contributions, with pensioners discovering only upon retirement that the money was missing. Still other companies have simply dumped their pension obligations on a government insurance program that already is $1.5 billion in the red.

The most alarming reports come from the Labor Department's inspector general's office, which warns that failure to shore up the laws and bolster enforcement will result in a taxpayer-funded bailout that could dwarf the recent savings and loan crisis.

"There's an insidious and steady siphoning off, which ultimately affects the employees," says acting inspector general Raymond Maria. "I am convinced there is substantial fraud and abuse, the extent of which no one knows."

What makes the private pension system most vulnerable, officials say, is its size.

Frequently described as "the largest lump of money in the world," the nation's 870,000 pri-ivate pension plans hold assets of $2 trillion, or roughly $8,000 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Those funds cover some 76 million participants.

The inspector general's comparison to the S&L crisis coupled with recent scandals at the Department of Housing and Urban Development have set off alarms in the nation's capital.

Congress is investigating, and the Office of Management and Budget recently put the pension insurance system on a list of high-risk programs.

The Labor Department audited 1,553 plans in 1989, with violations found in 492, or almost one-third. Violations were found in about one of every four programs investigated from 1985 through 1987.

The government is the final insurer of many private pension assets through the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. The PBGC, which receives most of its funds from pension plan premiums, posted a $1.5 billion deficit in 1988, and a 1987 General Accounting Office study predicted that the corporation would be insolvent by 2001.

Most PBGC claims have come from the beleaguered steel industry. But executive director James Lockhart recently cautioned the corporation's deficit could double if the agency has to bail out major airlines.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi
Founder of the Transcendental Meditation program

What Is TM?
TM is a simple, natural, easily-learned mental technique that is practiced for 15 to 20 minutes twice daily sitting comfortably in a chair with eyes closed. During TM, the mind enjoys a settled state of inner wakefulness, pure consciousness, while the body gains a unique state of deep rest. The TM program, founded 30 years ago by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, is a practical technique. It does not require any specific beliefs or lifestyle.

Eighteen Years of Research
More than 350 scientific studies conducted in the past 18 years at 160 independent research institutions have shown that TM benefits all areas of life: mind, body, behavior, and environment.

Waste Hume

Iowa City approved a contract for the Waterloo consulting firm of Brice, Petrides-Donohue Co. to initiate a study of solid waste management. Benton, Iowa, Johnson, Linn, Jones and Tama counties, as well as Cedar Rapids and Iowa City will participate.

Bob Bamsey of Brice, Petrides-Donohue Co. said that if the ECICOG approves his company's recommendations, local government in Iowa City and the participating areas would probably make a timely response.

"I'd say the council would move on implementing our recommendations within the next 12 months," he said.

The dust of the recommendations made in the draft plan made to the ECICOG hinge on composting and recycling solid waste, Bamsey said.

"One of the initial alternatives would be the construction of a compost facility to handle yard waste," he said.

The compost facility would produce a final material that could be used as a soil enhancer, in parks, in county roads or could be used in landfills, he said.

Until the plan's implementation, Bamsey said certain environmentally damaging waste materials will be prohibited from being dumped according to the following timetable set forth in the 1987 Iowa Groundwater Act:

- Waste Oil — July 1, 1990.
- Batteries — July 1, 1990.
- Unprocessed Tires — July 1, 1990.
- Yard waste — Jan. 1, 1991.

"Another alternative would be a detailed inventory of industrial and commercial waste 'streams,' Bamsey said. "We're looking at ways to reduce the output of waste by increasing industrial recycling."

While Iowa City is "ahead of most of the region there," the city needs to consider voluntary recycling mediums to minimize its waste output, Bamsey said.

"Then, the city and the region needs to consider some sort of approach to market the recycled product," he said.

Robin Woods, a spokeswoman for the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C., said that while the problem of finding a universally viable method to dispose of solid waste is difficult to prescribe on a national level, citizens must confront the problem quickly.

"Everyone's going to deal with the problem differently," Woods said. "The biggest problem we are facing now is that we're running out of landfill space."

One-half of the 6,000 landfills in the United States will close in the next five years because they can't meet the new EPA standards or because they have run out of space, she said.

Many communities, including Iowa City, are looking into incineration and recycling as ways to meet the challenge that stricter laws and landfill shortages now pose, Woods said.

Technology has evolved dramatically over the years, improving incineration methods to the point where carcinogenic output has almost been negated, she said.

look to stories like the Iran-Contra affair and say, "A-ha, here's our chance."

Hume used the Iran-Contra scandal as an example of how an adversarial press can turn on itself. He said the affair's media coverage, along with the highhanded dramatics of the congressional investigation, were major factors in creating the public image of Oliver North as a hero who had been railroaded by the establishment.

"I actually got letters that said 'Thank you for being fair,'" Hume said. "I was very disturbed by that, because being fair isn't some great achievement we're all supposed to reach or some heroic act. It is the most basic and fundamental obligation we have."

He jokingly described a common scenario among reporters discussing their closely guarded clandestine sources: "Well, my guy tells me this. 'Who's your guy?' 'I can't tell you.' 'Oh, well he must really be someone reliable.'"

Most reporters would rather attribute an important story to an unnamed source than to a government official like Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater, Hume said.

"Now that's nuts, but that's the way it works," he said. "Great play will be given to people whose names we do not know, whose credibilities we can not imagine. Well, I think that corrupts the process."

"We are not living in an era where we have to doubt the word of the U.S. government on everything that's said, but I think a lot of journalists do," he added.

vals were a trickle compared with the wave of 3 million visitors that went west over the weekend after travel restrictions were lifted.

The East German news agency ADN said more than 5-million visas were issued since Thursday, and that only about 10,000 had asked for emigration papers. They seek to join more than 200,000 who have resettled in West Germany this year.

Fewer than 1 percent of the weekend visitors stayed behind. Most people returned to their jobs and homes in East Germany.

"I really don't know whether I should be happy or pensive," said Michael Werner, an East Berliner who made his first trip to the West this weekend.

Some returned bitter over the contrast between the overflowing store shelves seen in the West and the barren ones at home.

"This is what socialism looks like!" an East Berlin man exclaimed after standing in line for oranges and being told they had run out. "We still have a long way to go, despite the weekend."

In West Berlin, where the weekend bash had thousands dancing on the wall and chipping out souvenirs from the doomed Cold War symbol, street crews swept up seas of broken glass, crumpled paper, lost gloves and other debris.

On the other side, the East German government said it was dismantling the "death strip" that rings the wall around the city and runs along the 854-mile border with West Germany. It ranges in width from 70 feet to three miles and was the scene of 191 deaths since 1961, when the Berlin Wall was built.

East Germany's official ADN news agency said the zone would be dismantled, but did not say when the barriers would be removed or what would happen to the freed property running through the densely populated city center.

White House officials hailed the "glorious" traffic of East Germans streaming west but said financial assistance would have to await further reforms.

Vice President Dan Quayle said reunification with West Germany was inevitable.

"East Germany is East Germany because of the Communist system," Quayle said at Hilton Head Island, S.C. "Do away with the Communist system, and it's Germany."

Nikitin

to do," he said. "This is not an easy change."

The development of a wider range of political attitudes is another side-effect of the reforms, he added.

Nikitin spoke of the development of both right- and left-wing radical movements and their use of violence to achieve political goals.

"Extremes are not welcome in any society," he said, adding some citizens are concerned that more clashes, if not civil war, may occur as various political groups fight for or against domestic reform.

Nikitin said political struggles are expected to occur during times of political transition.

"The Soviet Union is becoming just a normal country," he said. "It is a country which is becoming self-critical, a country which is hoping to have a more democratic future."

Nikitin said it is important for the United States to dismiss the stereotypes about the Soviet Union as a strange and dangerous nation.

"I hope someday I can come (to Iowa City) and say I came from Russia with love and peace and you would believe it," he said.

E. European writers to speak

Topic: Changes in foreign literature climate

Krista Hiser
The Daily Iowan

The UI International Writing Program will present "Eastern European Literature Today," a panel featuring five well-established writers from eastern Europe, at 3 p.m. today in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 304. The panel, which is free and open to the public, will focus on the dramatically changing situation of foreign literature.

Three of the participants are members of the International Writing Program this fall, which gives them an opportunity to participate in the literary and intellectual life of the UI, as well as meeting colleagues from around the world. The panel members will be discussing fundamental events in their own countries and how they influence the political and literary climate of the times.

Katarzyna Borun-Jagodzinska from Poland will talk about independent culture and the experience of publishing under martial law, as well as the particular situation of the Polish writer. Borun-Jagodzinska is a screenwriter and the author of four collections of poetry.

Grzegorz Musial, also from Poland, will be speaking with Borun-Jagodzinska, focusing on the guidelines of Polish culture and the "identification of the spirit of Polish people with Catholicism and Christianity," he said. Musial is a poet and fiction writer, returning to the IWP this year as a Fulbright Foundation Fellow. He is the author of five books and an editor of the highly respected Polish literary magazine Res Publica.

Rumanian fiction writer and poet Stefan Agopian is a member of the Rumanian Writer's Union and a former journalist for the union's major publication. He is interested in post-modernist American writing and is currently at work on his fifth novel.

A former IWP participant, Bulgarian writer Georgi Belez, will also contribute to the panel. Belez is visiting the UI on a reading and lecture tour of the United States.

The poetry of Russian Pyotr Veghin has been published in 11 volumes and has been translated into 14 major languages. Veghin will speak about the position of the poet in Russia, and the real state of contemporary Russian poetry. He is currently at work on a novel, "Olympus Upturned," about the life and mores of the Moscow artistic circles between 1960 and 1980.

Fiction writer, poet and critic Yuri Miloslavsky, originally from the Soviet Union, is now an Israeli citizen. Though he will not be participating in the panel due to a scheduling conflict in New York, he captured the spirit of the exiled or traveling writer thus: "It is something Thomas Mann said 40 or 50 years ago; 'German literature is sitting in exactly the same place where I am sitting.' Of course I am not Thomas Mann, but I can say something like this. So Russian literature can be in my room, if I am a really good writer. If this room is in Iowa City or in Jerusalem or in Paris — is not important. It is the literature."

Writers' Workshop sponsors reading by poet Gregg

Gregory Galloway
The Daily Iowan

Poet Linda Gregg will read from her work at 8 tonight in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Gregg has published two books of poetry, "Too Bright To See" and "Alma," and her poems have appeared in journals including American Poetry Review, Plowshares, The New Yorker and the Paris Review. Her work is represented in anthologies including "American Poetry Anthology" and "Ardis Anthology of New American Poetry."

Gregg is a poet of essentials, relying on sparse language in order to convey and clarify emotion. It is a poetry of silence and omission, knowing what to leave out, as if the experiences within the poems are too intense to be shared in full and can only be evoked by reduction.

A bachelor and master of arts graduate of San Francisco State University, Gregg has taught poetry writing at several colleges and has been a visiting professor at the UI Writers' Workshop. In the past Gregg has been awarded first prize from the Poetry Society of America as well as the Frank Stanford Memorial Prize and a Guggenheim Fellowship.

Gregg's reading, sponsored by the UI Writers' Workshop, is free.

UI bands show off their stuff

Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

The UI Bands will showcase their top ensembles in the 21st annual Band Extravaganza at 7:30 tonight and tomorrow night in Hancher Auditorium.

Director of Bands Myron Welch says that music lovers can expect "a cavalcade of three very fine and different groups from the School of Music."

The Band Extravaganza, one of the UI's most popular annual performances, features the Symphony Band, Johnson County Landmark and the Hawkeye Marching Band.

Welch says the main part of the program is geared towards the marching band, which will be performing "in sit-down fashion," as they do on Saturdays prior to football games. But the band's performance, under the direction of Morgan Jones, will be anything but sedate. Flags, twirlers, band skits, and percussion and sousaphones marching down the aisle will add plenty of life to the party.

Welch says a new feature this year is the marching band drum line. They have just returned from a competition in Nashville, Tenn., and will be showing off their new routine.

The Symphony Band, the most select of the UI's concert bands, will be opening the program in this, their first performance of the school year. Welch will be conducting the band in three pieces, including "Toccata Marziale" by Ralph Vaughn Williams and the Overture to "Euryanthe" by Carl Maria von Weber.

Johnson County Landmark, the UI's premier jazz band, rounds out the bill. In addition to giving several performances a year in the Iowa City area, JCL has captured top awards at jazz competitions in both the United States and Europe. It is also one of a handful of college bands that has performed by invitation at Switzerland's prestigious Montreux Festival.

Under the direction of Paul Scea, JCL will present "And East Oon," an original composition by UI undergraduate music major Andy Parrott. Scea describes the piece as a "contemporary modal piece for big bands." The band will also perform an arrangement of John Coltrane's "Giant Steps" and "Milesian Web" by Bob Washut.

Welch says the two-hour concert has already been sold out for a week. "We're bringing in busloads of high-school students. I'm sure we will be very enthusiastically received," Welch said.

World-record swimmer dies

MONTREAL (AP) — Victor Davis, a former world-record swimmer and 1984 Olympic gold medalist, died Monday, two days after he fell into a coma after being struck by a car outside a bar. Davis, 25, was declared clinically dead and taken off life support systems after showing no response to tests by doctors, said Jacques Charbonneau, a Notre-Dame Hospital spokesman. Funeral services were to be held in Guelph, Ontario, Davis' hometown. No date was set because the family, who requested his organs be used for transplants, was uncertain of when the body would be available.

Tony Zendejas booted a game-winning, 28-yard field goal that capped a wild and crazy fourth quarter as Houston beat Cincinnati at the Astrodome in Houston. Zendejas' field goal with no time left was the fifth lead change in the last quarter.

Dravecky finally forced to retire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dave Dravecky, who made a brief but valiant comeback from cancer in his pitching arm this year, announced his retirement from the San Francisco Giants on Monday. The 33-year-old left-hander said he didn't want to risk further injury. Dravecky told Giants president and general manager Al Rosen from his home in Boardman, Ohio, that doctors are carefully monitoring a new lump in his left arm and have expressed concerns that a resumption of his baseball career could further jeopardize his already weakened arm.

Lookingbill, Davis said. "Every scrimmage, you get a little more evidence of what you can or can't do," Davis said. "I think all the players are learning more about themselves. And I think a lot of players have made good progress."

Notre Dame, which clobbered Southern Methodist 59-6, received 57 first-place votes and 1,497 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Colorado, which beat Oklahoma State 41-17, received the other three first-place votes and 1,439 points.

Michigan defeated Illinois 24-10, Alabama downed Louisiana State 32-16, Nebraska routed Kansas 51-14 and Miami beat Pittsburgh 24-3. Florida State did not play.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Southern Cal, Tennessee and Arkansas. Southern Cal moved up one spot after beating Arizona 24-3. Tennessee went from No. 11 to No. 9 after crushing Akron 52-9 and Arkansas remained No. 10 following a 19-10 win over Baylor.

Auburn is No. 11, followed by Illinois, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, Penn State, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Texas Tech, Brigham Young, Ohio State and Fresno State. Ohio State moved into the Top 25 after blanking Iowa 28-0, while Florida, N.C. State and Arizona dropped out following losses.

Of the teams still ranked, Illinois, Pitt and Penn State fell the farthest. Illinois dropped from No. 8 to No. 12 after losing to Michigan. Pitt plunged from No. 14 to No. 19 after losing to Miami and Penn State went from No. 13 to No. 17 after tying Maryland 13-13.

It is on Price's shoulders the leadership role has fallen this year, and she says she's trying to live up to the billing.

"I try to demonstrate in practice how, in order for the team to be successful and to compete in the top ten, we have to play a certain way," Price said.

Her way has netted Price averages of 14.3 points, 5.6 rebounds and 3.3 steals per game, and she is currently sixth on Iowa's all-time leading scorers list.

As the Hawkeyes' highest returning scorer, Law will also be a major contributor to the squad this season. The 5-foot-4 guard averaged 14.4 points per game last year, reaching double figures in all but two contests.

But Law says this year she will focus on defense.

"I will try to address rebounds, steals and increase my assists," Law said. "I'm going to stress defense. Eventually my offense will come."

Though not a starter last year, Abrahamson did see some action in her first season since transferring to Iowa from Georgia. She will play more minutes this season as one of the tallest players on the squad and the most likely to replace Berry at center.

Budget, football woes drive out Wis. AD

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin athletic director Ade Sponberg, whose department has struggled with a budget deficit and a losing football program, announced Monday he will resign effective May 15, 1990.

Sponberg, who came to Wisconsin in 1987, announced his resignation after meeting with Chancellor Donna Shalala, saying Shalala and athletic board members "believe that the department would benefit from fresh leadership."

"That's their belief, and I respect it," he said. An athletic board study commission recommended last week a change in administrative supervision of Wisconsin's intercollegiate sports program, citing a multimillion dollar budget deficit and a losing football program.

An unidentified member of the study commission was quoted last week as saying the panel felt administrative changes were needed to restructure fund-raising for sports.

But Sponberg said Shalala "initiated discussions with me about the future of the department and my role a month ago. Since then, we have been working out the details of my departure."

When asked whether his relationship with embattled football coach Don Morton played a role in his departure, Sponberg said, "No, I certainly hope not."

Sponberg was athletic director at North Dakota State when Morton coached there during the early 1980s.

After Sponberg succeeded Elroy Hirsch as athletic director in 1987, it was announced the athletic department faced a budget deficit that could reach several million dollars.

An audit last year said the budget deficit could be blamed in part on a slowdown in sales of football tickets and on a diversion of alumni donations to an indoor practice field for football players.

"The financial crisis that was developing was far worse than most people realized," Sponberg said. "I feel I've made a contribution toward righting the ship, but it's time for someone else to take up the challenge."

Wisconsin Athletic Director Ade Sponberg, right, announced his resignation Monday in Madison, Wis., effective on May 15 of 1990. The leave was prompted by deficit problems and a losing football program.

Graf slowed by ankle injury at Virginia Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — Steffi Graf said Monday she has only a 50-50 chance to play in the Virginia Slims Championships after spraining her left ankle last week.

Graf revealed she sprained her ankle in practice last Thursday while running to the net for a volley. Because of the injury, she was unable to practice until Monday.

Graf is scheduled to play Czechoslovakia's Jana Novotna in a first-round match on Wednesday.

"I practiced 45 minutes today (Monday) and my ankle seemed OK," Graf said. "I'll wait to see how it feels tomorrow and I look forward to playing."

In first-round matches Monday night, Gabriela Sabatini successfully began the defense of her Virginia Slims Championships title, while Monica Seles wasted no time getting acquainted with the indoor carpet at Madison Square Garden.

The 15-year-old Seles raced through her first-round match, needing only 49 minutes to crush Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-0, 6-1 in the opening match of the season-ending tennis tournament.

Sabatini struggled a bit more, but was never really in trouble as she downed Gretchen Magers of San Antonio 6-4, 6-1.

In a late match, French Open champion Arantxa Sanchez took on Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist.

It took a little while for Sabatini to find the range with her heavy topspin shots. But when she did, she erased any chance Magers may have had to move easily into the second round.

With the crowd solidly in Sabatini's corner, the two held serve until the seventh game of the opening set. Then, in a game that went to deuce five times, Sabatini got the ad point with a backhand down the line.

A double-fault by Magers gave Sabatini

the service break and sent the Argentinian racing off to the second round.

Seles played with a ferocity that left the 17-year-old Martinez dispirited. Hitting both her forehand and her backhand with two hands and grunting loudly on every shot, Seles found every line on the blue Supreme Court.

Martinez would hit what appeared to be a clear winner, only to have the ball come whizzing back, most of the time at an unreachable angle.

The Spaniard only held serve in the fourth game of the second set. And she had reached game point a total of eight other times in the match.

Teams making reservations for New Year's Day matchups

(AP) — Unlike millions of procrastinators, many of college football's top teams already are making reservations for New Year's Day. Bowl bids can't officially be extended until Nov. 25, but the matchups for the major games apparently are set.

It should be top-ranked Notre Dame vs. No. 2 Colorado in the Orange, Alabama vs. Miami in the Sugar, Tennessee vs. the Arkansas-Texas A&M winner in the Cotton and Florida State vs. Nebraska in the Fiesta.

Other likely matchups on Jan. 1 are Southern California vs. Michigan in the Rose, the Big Ten runner-up vs. Virginia in the Citrus and Ohio State vs. Auburn in the Hall of Fame.

The Notre Dame-Colorado game probably will decide the national championship. But Michigan, Alabama, Miami and the Florida State-Nebraska winner still have an outside shot at the title.

Notre Dame is expected to go to the Orange even if it loses its final two games to Penn State and Miami. That's because Notre Dame still would be 10-1 going into the Nov. 25 Miami game, and that won't be over until after the bowl bids are announced. Colorado seems certain to enter the Orange Bowl with an 11-0 record because its last regular-season game is against 1-9 Kansas State.

Although he wouldn't come right out and reveal it, Orange Bowl president Tom Wood left little doubt Monday about the matchup in Miami.

"If you read the polls, you'll see who my favorite teams are," he said.

Alabama, the only other national title contender with a perfect record, clinched a tie for the Southeastern Conference championship Saturday by beating Louisiana State 32-16. Auburn could create a three-way tie for the title by beating Alabama on Dec. 2, but the Sugar Bowl won't wait that long to pick its SEC team. That means Alabama will play Miami, which wrapped up the other Sugar bid Saturday with a 24-3 victory over Pittsburgh.

The Cotton Bowl had to scramble for its visiting team after Nebraska players voted to go to the Fiesta. As of Monday afternoon, Tennessee appeared to be the most likely opponent for the SWC champion, which should be the winner of the Arkansas-Texas A&M game Nov. 24.

"We want to match up Florida State with the next highest-ranked opponent we could get. And the next highest-ranked team that would be available would be Nebraska."
— Don Meyers

A Nebraska-Florida State pairing in the Fiesta would be a rematch of the 1988 game, which the Seminoles won 31-28.

"That's our best matchup," said Don Meyers, the bowl's selection chairman. "We want to match up Florida State with the next highest-ranked opponent we could get. And the next highest-ranked team that would be available would be Nebraska."

Michigan has the inside track for the Big Ten's spot in the Rose, but the Wolverines have to beat Minnesota and Ohio State to clinch it. If they don't, Illinois probably would play Southern Cal, which won its third straight Pac-10 title Saturday by beating Arizona 24-3.

If Illinois doesn't go to Pasadena, look for the Illini to play Virginia in the Citrus. But if the Cotton doesn't take Tennessee, the Citrus might choose the Volunteers instead of Virginia.

Auburn and Ohio State, both 7-2, appear to be heading toward a meeting in the Hall of Fame.

In non-New Year's bowls, the most likely pairings are Clemson-West Virginia in the Gator, Penn State-Brigham Young in the Holiday, Georgia-Duke in the All American, Hawaii-Michigan State in the Aloha, Air Force-Mississippi in the Liberty, Texas Tech-Tulsa in the Independence and Pitt vs. the Arkansas-Texas A&M loser in the John Hancock.

Also, Syracuse vs. the Florida-Kentucky winner in the Peach, Indiana vs. the Washington-Washington State winner in the Freedom, Fresno State vs. Ball State or Central Michigan in the California and Arizona vs. Georgia, Indiana, North Carolina State or Syracuse in the Copper.

Boston waives Rice after 15 years, Sox feel 'it was time for a change'

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice, one of baseball's premier power hitters during his 15 seasons with the Red Sox, ended his career in Boston on Monday, when the team placed him on waivers.

Rice, who had 382 homers, 1,451 RBIs and 2,452 hits, will become an unrestricted free agent Thursday if he clears waivers. The Red Sox last month indicated he had no future with the team when they refused to exercise a $2.4 million option in his contract for 1990.

"Jim Rice has been a very good player for us through the years, but we felt it was time to make a change," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "Jim had asked us to consider giving him release. He's a Type B player, and any team signing him would have had to give up a first- or second-round draft choice, making it difficult to sign him."

Rice batted .234 this season with three homers and 28 runs batted in. He had midseason surgery to remove bone chips in his elbow and saw limited action after that. He refused the team's offer to have a day in his honor, insisting he planned to play next season.

"I hope he goes on to play well, and I hope to someday have him back for a special day,"

Gorman said.

"The only thing he can't do is re-sign with the Red Sox until May, but given the fact that they made it adamantly clear they have no intention to sign him, that's not a possibility," Rice's agent, George Kalafatis said.

Rice was part of the golden rookie duo, along with center fielder Fred Lynn, that helped the Red Sox win the American League pennant in 1975. Rice had impressive numbers that season, .309 with 22 homers and 102 RBIs. But Lynn won the Rookie of the Year award, and injury forced Rice to miss the World Series, won by the Cincinnati Reds in seven games.

Rice was the AL Most Valuable Player in 1978, when he batted .315 with a league-leading 46 home runs and 213 hits. The Red Sox blew a 14 1/2-game lead and lost the AL East to the New York Yankees 5-4 in a one-game playoff.

Between 1977 and 1979, Rice became the only player in baseball history with three consecutive seasons with at least 200 hits and 35 homers.

In 1986, Rice batted .324 with 200 hits and 20 home runs, helping the Red Sox reach the World Series, where they lost in seven games.

Budget, football woes drive out Wis. AD

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin athletic director Ade Sponberg, whose department has struggled with a budget deficit and a losing football program, announced Monday he will resign effective May 15, 1990.

Sponberg, who came to Wisconsin in 1987, announced his resignation after meeting with Chancellor Donna Shalala, saying Shalala and athletic board members "believe that the department would benefit from fresh leadership."

"That's their belief, and I respect it," he said. An athletic board study commission recommended last week a change in administrative supervision of Wisconsin's intercollegiate sports program, citing a multimillion dollar budget deficit and a losing football program.

An unidentified member of the study commission was quoted last week as saying the panel felt administrative changes were needed to restructure fund-raising for sports.

But Sponberg said Shalala "initiated discussions with me about the future of the department and my role a month ago. Since then, we have been working out the details of my departure."

When asked whether his relationship with embattled football coach Don Morton played a role in his departure, Sponberg said, "No, I certainly hope not."

Sponberg was athletic director at North Dakota State when Morton coached there during the early 1980s.

After Sponberg succeeded Elroy Hirsch as athletic director in 1987, it was announced the athletic department faced a budget deficit that could reach several million dollars.

An audit last year said the budget deficit could be blamed in part on a slowdown in sales of football tickets and on a diversion of alumni donations to an indoor practice field for football players.

"The financial crisis that was developing was far worse than most people realized," Sponberg said. "I feel I've made a contribution toward righting the ship, but it's time for someone else to take up the challenge."

Wisconsin Athletic Director Ade Sponberg, right, announced his resignation Monday in Madison, Wis., effective on May 15 of 1990. The leave was prompted by deficit problems and a losing football program.

Graf slowed by ankle injury at Virginia Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — Steffi Graf said Monday she has only a 50-50 chance to play in the Virginia Slims Championships after spraining her left ankle last week.

Graf revealed she sprained her ankle in practice last Thursday while running to the net for a volley. Because of the injury, she was unable to practice until Monday.

Graf is scheduled to play Czechoslovakia's Jana Novotna in a first-round match on Wednesday.

"I practiced 45 minutes today (Monday) and my ankle seemed OK," Graf said. "I'll wait to see how it feels tomorrow and I look forward to playing."

In first-round matches Monday night, Gabriela Sabatini successfully began the defense of her Virginia Slims Championships title, while Monica Seles wasted no time getting acquainted with the indoor carpet at Madison Square Garden.

The 15-year-old Seles raced through her first-round match, needing only 49 minutes to crush Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-0, 6-1 in the opening match of the season-ending tennis tournament.

Sabatini struggled a bit more, but was never really in trouble as she downed Gretchen Magers of San Antonio 6-4, 6-1.

In a late match, French Open champion Arantxa Sanchez took on Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist.

It took a little while for Sabatini to find the range with her heavy topspin shots. But when she did, she erased any chance Magers may have had to move easily into the second round.

With the crowd solidly in Sabatini's corner, the two held serve until the seventh game of the opening set. Then, in a game that went to deuce five times, Sabatini got the ad point with a backhand down the line.

A double-fault by Magers gave Sabatini

the service break and sent the Argentinian racing off to the second round.

Seles played with a ferocity that left the 17-year-old Martinez dispirited. Hitting both her forehand and her backhand with two hands and grunting loudly on every shot, Seles found every line on the blue Supreme Court.

Martinez held what appeared to be a clear winner, only to have the ball come whizzing back, most of the time at an unreachable angle.

The Spaniard only held serve in the fourth game of the second set. And she had reached game point a total of eight other times in the match.

Teams making reservations for New Year's Day matchups

(AP) — Unlike millions of procrastinators, many of college football's top teams already are making reservations for New Year's Day.

Bowl bids can't officially be extended until Nov. 25, but the matchups for the major games apparently are set.

It should be top-ranked Notre Dame vs. No. 2 Colorado in the Orange, Alabama vs. Miami in the Sugar, Tennessee vs. the Arkansas-Texas A&M winner in the Cotton and Florida State vs. Nebraska in the Fiesta.

Other likely matchups on Jan. 1 are Southern California vs. Michigan in the Rose, the Big Ten runner-up vs. Virginia in the Citrus and Ohio State vs. Auburn in the Hall of Fame.

The Notre Dame-Colorado game probably will decide the national championship. But Michigan, Alabama, Miami and the Florida State-Nebraska winner still have an outside shot at the title.

Notre Dame is expected to go to the Orange even if it loses its final two games to Penn State and Miami. That's because Notre Dame still would be 10-1 going into the Nov. 25 Miami game, and that won't be over until after the bowl bids are announced. Colorado seems certain to enter the Orange Bowl with an 11-0 record because its last regular-season game is against 1-9 Kansas State.

Although he wouldn't come right out and reveal it, Orange Bowl president Tom Wood left little doubt Monday about the matchup in Miami.

"If you read the polls, you'll see who my favorite teams are," he said.

Alabama, the only other national title contender with a perfect record, clinched a tie for the Southeastern Conference championship Saturday by beating Louisiana State 32-16. Auburn could create a three-way tie for the title by beating Alabama on Dec. 2, but the Sugar Bowl won't wait that long to pick its SEC team. That means Alabama will play Miami, which wrapped up the other Sugar bid Saturday with a 24-3 victory over Pittsburgh.

The Cotton Bowl had to scramble for its visiting team after Nebraska players voted to go to the Fiesta. As of Monday afternoon, Tennessee appeared to be the most likely opponent for the SWC champion, which should be the winner of the Arkansas-Texas A&M game Nov. 24.

"We want to match up Florida State with the next highest-ranked opponent we could get. And the next highest-ranked team that would be available would be Nebraska."

— Don Meyers

A Nebraska-Florida State pairing in the Fiesta would be a rematch of the 1988 game, which the Seminoles won 31-28.

"That's our best matchup," said Don Meyers, the bowl's selection chairman. "We want to match up Florida State with the next highest-ranked opponent we could get. And the next highest-ranked team that would be available would be Nebraska."

Michigan has the inside track for the Big Ten's spot in the Rose, but the Wolverines have to beat Minnesota and Ohio State to clinch it. If they don't, Illinois probably would play Southern Cal, which won its third straight Pac-10 title Saturday by beating Arizona 24-3.

If Illinois doesn't go to Pasadena, look for the Illini to play Virginia in the Citrus. But if the Cotton doesn't take Tennessee, the Citrus might choose the Volunteers instead of Virginia.

Auburn and Ohio State, both 7-2, appear to be heading toward a meeting in the Hall of Fame.

In non-New Year's bowls, the most likely pairings are Clemson-West Virginia in the Gator, Penn State-Brigham Young in the Holiday, Georgia-Duke in the All American, Hawaii-Michigan State in the Aloha, Air Force-Mississippi in the Liberty, Texas Tech-Tulsa in the Independence and Pitt vs. the Arkansas-Texas A&M loser in the John Hancock.

Also, Syracuse vs. the Florida-Kentucky winner in the Peach, Indiana vs. the Washington-Washington State winner in the Freedom, Fresno State vs. Ball State or Central Michigan in the California and Arizona vs. Georgia, Indiana, North Carolina State or Syracuse in the Copper.

Boston waives Rice after 15 years, Sox feel 'it was time for a change'

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice, one of baseball's premier power hitters during his 15 seasons with the Red Sox, ended his career in Boston on Monday, when the team placed him on waivers.

Rice, who had 382 homers, 1,451 RBIs and 2,452 hits, will become an unrestricted free agent Thursday if he clears waivers. The Red Sox last month indicated he had no future with the team when they refused to exercise a $2.4 million option in his contract for 1990.

"Jim Rice has been a very good player for us through the years, but we felt it was time to make a change," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "Jim had asked us to consider giving him release. He's a Type B player, and any team signing him would have had to give up a first- or second-round draft choice, making it difficult to sign him."

Rice batted .234 this season with three homers and 28 runs batted in. He had midseason surgery to remove bone chips in his elbow and saw limited action after that. He refused the team's offer to have a day in his honor, insisting he planned to play next season.

"I hope he goes on to play well, and I hope to someday have him back for a special day,"

Gorman said. "The only thing he can't do is re-sign with the Red Sox until May, but given the fact that they made it adamantly clear they have no intention to sign him, that's not a possibility," Rice's agent, George Kalafatis said.

Rice was part of the golden rookie duo, along with center fielder Fred Lynn, that helped the Red Sox win the American League pennant in 1975. Rice had impressive numbers that season, .309 with 22 homers and 102 RBIs. But Lynn won the Rookie of the Year award, and injury forced Rice to miss the World Series, won by the Cincinnati Reds in seven games.

Rice was the AL Most Valuable Player in 1978, when he batted .315 with a league-leading 46 home runs and 213 hits. The Red Sox blew a 1 1/2-game lead and lost the AL East to the New York Yankees 5-4 in a one-game playoff.

Between 1977 and 1979, Rice became the only player in baseball history with three consecutive seasons with at least 200 hits and 35 homers.

In 1986, Rice batted .324 with 200 hits and 20 home runs, helping the Red Sox reach the World Series, where they lost in seven games.

Soviets will test Hawkeyes

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa basketball team takes the floor at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for the first time in the 1989-90 hoop season, the visitors won't be the stereotypical early-season cupcake.

The Soviet Nationals play their fourth exhibition game in the United States tonight at 7 p.m. against the Hawkeyes.

In two of those games, the Russian squad faced the two top-ranked teams in the country, losing by a total of 10 points.

No. 1 UNLV won 107-102 in Las Vegas Nov. 7 and second-ranked LSU needed 40 points out of pre-season All-American Chris Jackson to trim the visitors 114-109 Friday.

"They've really had a good schedule," Iowa coach Tom Davis said Monday. "They gave Vegas a really good game and LSU had to pull it out the other night."

"They've gotten a few nights off between games, so they should come in here fairly rested and that's what we want. We want them to be healthy and ready to go."

Davis said the Soviets rely heavily on the experience of its guardcourt. Point guard Tiit Sook is considered the play maker on the club, while Gundars Vetra is an accomplished shooter.

The balance was evident against UNLV, when both players pumped in 23 points. And the scores, Davis said, are indicative of an up-tempo game that the Soviets prefer to play.

That would seem to mesh with Davis' philosophy about Iowa's transition game.

"We've been running pretty well in the scrimmages," Davis said, "so I would guess it's going to be a good game."

Davis lands four recruits

Over the weekend, the postman brought Iowa basketball coach Tom Davis all the mail he was looking for.

"It went real well," Davis said Monday. "All four letters are in."

Signed to play for Iowa in 1990 are Chris Street of Indianola, Iowa; Phil Chime of Madison High School in Houston; Paul Lusk of Wesclin High School in Trenton, Ill.; and James Winters of Joliet, Ill.

"I think both Chris Street and Phil Chime give us some solid, frontcourt help," the Iowa coach said. "Winters is more of a small forward who is going to play some second guard as well as small forward."

"And Lusk is more of a second guard. But we thought we needed a little help in the backcourt as well."

"We're hoping that this group will take care of some of those concerns."

Las Vegas clear pick for No. 1

(AP)—UNLV, which added junior college player of the year Larry Johnson to a deep, veteran roster, was the easy choice on Monday as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press' Top 25 college basketball poll.

The Runnin' Rebels, which finished last season 29-8 and one victory shy of the Final Four, received 30 of 65 first-place votes and 1,555 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters to easily outdistance Louisiana State for the top spot.

"I just hope they're all right," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said when told of the No. 1 ranking. "I like our team very much, I like our kids very much. They've got a great ethic and they want to win."

Iowa's Stephanie Schueler, left, and Jolette Law run past Franthea Price and Katie Abrahamson at the Hawkeye women's basketball media day Monday. Schueler and Law's quickness are expected to be a key to Iowa's success in 1989-90.

Hawks begin 1989-90 with key injuries

Rita Heimes
 The Daily Iowan

The mighty may have tilted a bit, but they haven't fallen.

The Iowa women's basketball team, co-champions of the Big Ten last year, has suffered key losses from graduation and injury that have dropped them from the conference lead in preseason polls.

The 1989-90 Hawkeyes will be playing without All-Big Ten performers Shanda Berry and Robin Christian, both of whom graduated after last season. The loss of Berry leaves a hole in the Iowa offense where height should be, and Christian's absence represents a loss of speed and versatility.

More vacancies in Iowa's lineup have been created by injuries to several players. Sophomore Trisha Waugh has discomfort from the heels of her feet and is on crutches, and 6-foot-4 center Jill Taylor, also a sophomore, is coming off a case of mononucleosis and has yet to participate in a full practice this season.

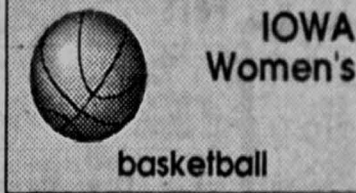

A third sophomore, forward Becky Shrigley suffered a stress fracture in her hip, while freshman guard Laurie Aaron is making rapid recovery from reconstructive knee surgery she had last June.

"We've been having some devastating injuries to the inside," Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said at her annual preseason press conference Monday. "I can't really tell you where our rhythm is at."

Two intrasquad scrimmages have been called off and Stringer has even resorted to advertising in an effort to bolster her roster.

Stringer ran an ad in the Daily Iowan about two weeks ago looking for any college female over 5-foot-9, and about eight girls answered. But Stringer said that while she appreciated their effort, none of them could help the Hawkeyes.

Despite the small number of players (nine) she currently has practicing, Stringer refuses to throw in the towel on this season. In fact, the Hawkeyes have been ranked as high as 12th in some preseason polls, and are picked to finish second in the Big Ten behind Purdue.

"This team gives me a real confident feeling," Stringer said. "They are a pleasure to work with. For them to keep up the high spirit is remarkable. When we get everyone back, we'll be fine."

Much of the confidence in the Hawkeye lineup centers around three returning seniors — Franthea Price, Jolette Law, and Katie Abrahamson.

Price, a 5-foot-9 forward, has been starting for Iowa since her freshman year. This fall, she was named a Street & Smith's Basketball first-team preseason all-American, only the second Hawkeye in the

Darville says Minnesota gridders were paid

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—A system of cash payments to University of Minnesota football players that began under Coach Joe Salem continued after Lou Holtz took over, former university administrator Luther Darville testified Monday.

Darville, who is being tried on swindling charges, said he thought

Holtz knew of the payments, but could not be certain.

"I didn't have to discuss it with him. Certain things were in place," said Darville, who headed the Office of Minority and Special Students until he was fired in April 1988.

Darville was asked by defense attorney James Lawton if Holtz, who left Minnesota in 1985 to become head coach at Notre Dame, had direct knowledge of the payments.

"I don't recall," Darville said. "He did not give it and encourage it directly... He didn't want to be involved in certain things," he said, adding, "He was very cautious."

Both Holtz and Salem have denied any knowledge of payments to athletes.

Darville said he was assigned to the university athletic office for the first six months of 1984 because Holtz was concerned with academic and morale problems and reported racial tension between white and black athletes.

Jury finds in favor of Nebraska in Visser suit

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—A U.S. District Court jury returned a verdict Monday afternoon in favor of the University of Nebraska in the case of a fired University of Nebraska-Lincoln academic adviser.

The jury of four men and three women returned the verdict in favor of University General Studies supervisor Dr. Donald Gregory and Vice Chancellor James Griesen in the suit filed by Mary Jane Visser, a 19-year employee of the university who claimed she was fired for investigating the records of student athletes.

University attorney David Buntain said he was informed of the verdict at 4:20 p.m. The jury received closing arguments from Buntain and Visser's attorney, Thom Cope, last Thursday. Friday was a federal holiday and the jury opted not to deliberate that day, but convened at 9 a.m. Monday.

Buntain said the verdict vindicates Gregory and Griesen, "both dedicated public servants, and it shows the strength of our jury system that they were able to wade through eight days of testimony and 200 exhibits and come to a just result."

Cope was not immediately available for comment. A secretary in his office said he was expected to return, but he did not immediately return a phone call from The Associated Press.

Strangers find way back to Top 25 poll

(AP)—Duke is better known for basketball and Hawaii is better known for sunshine, but this week they're both in the college football limelight.

Duke broke into the rankings for the first time since 1971 and Hawaii for the first time since 1981 in Monday's Associated Press poll. The Blue Devils, 7-3, gained the final spot in the Top 25 while the Rainbows, 8-2, are No. 24.

"One of our goals was to be in the Top 25 this year," said Duke coach Steve Spurrier, whose team beat North Carolina State 35-26 Saturday. "It's an honor for our program and a credit to our players that we made it. But what we really want is to be ranked at the end of the season."

Hawaii moved into the rankings for only the second time in school history following a 34-26 victory over Pacific.

"We're certainly happy to get national recognition — it's something we've been striving for," Hawaii coach Bob Wagner said. "If we can continue to play good football, hopefully we'll get even more attention."

While there were changes at the bottom of the rankings, the top seven remained unchanged — Notre Dame, Colorado, Michigan, Alabama, Florida State, Nebraska and Miami.
