Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, in a speech, urged the city council to prepare on a local level for a peaceful integration of East and West Germany. Gorbachev, who is visiting the city for the first time in 10 years, is expected to return to Moscow early next week.

"There is a strong feeling in the Soviet Union today that the price of conflict is much too high," Gorbachev said. "There is a strong feeling that it is time to work towards a peaceful resolution of this conflict."

Gorbachev's visit comes as West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl is scheduled to visit the Soviet Union next week. Kohl is expected to meet with Gorbachev and other Soviet leaders to discuss the integration of East and West Germany.

Gorbachev also said that the Soviet Union is committed to working towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict in the Middle East.

"The Middle East is a region of great importance to the Soviet Union," Gorbachev said. "We are committed to working towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict in the Middle East."

Gorbachev's visit is expected to be a significant event in the history of the Soviet Union. It is the first time that a Soviet leader has visited West Berlin since the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Citibank settles Iowa lawsuits

Dr. MONROE CAP — Iowa Ave. Gas. Tom Miller said Thursday two separate suits have been settled with Citibank on whether the bank can use "Iowa" in its name.

Citibank officials maintained that federal banking law, as well as Bank Holding Act, where the company is based, gives branches with Iowa creditors. Miller said Iowa law does prohibit the banker branches with credit and lenders in the state.

The lawyers also focused on whether the bank could charge rates higher for demand accounts and nonparticipating checking, and the attorney general's plan.

One of the prizes was directed toward a sophomore scholarship available through ODR, the ODR faculty awards and possible future events.

There are probably people who want to use the PS/2 as an interface and want to use the PS/2 as a way to talk to each other and have all these different things that they're doing, but it's just not practical to do it that way.

Technology will only slow growth of transportation problems

On the road, on rails, as in any transportation system, no rate of growth can go on forever. The exponential growth of the last three decades has both its educational and technological benefits. As a result, the automobile will remain the dominant mode of travel, and suburbanization will confound "doomsday" predictions. In the next decade, the number of private automobiles will drop from 100 million to 70 million, while the number of subway passengers will increase by a factor of 10. If you're looking at the '90s, the automobile will remain the dominant mode of travel.

"Traveling on rails has been a fact of life throughout history, and it's likely to remain the fastest way to get from point A to point B. In the next decade, air travel will become even more efficient. The idea of direct flights to the moon and back in a matter of hours is very likely to become a reality. Technology will only slow the growth of transportation problems, not stop it altogether."

Diller, however, insisted rail "has been a fact in cities that have tried it is the last 10 years. It's been hugely popular. It's been a salvation in terms of solving urban sprawl and it's had almost no impact on roads." Diller mentioned that of all rail systems in the world, the one in Chicago is "the best model" for how to run a rail system. The system would cost $7 billion to build, he said, and would be designed to transport 100,000 riders a day. The system would connect the city's suburban areas with downtown Chicago. Diller said the idea of a rail system in Chicago is "very much in the public interest." Diller said the idea of a rail system in Chicago is "very much in the public interest."

Gorbachev

On his way to a major speech, Gorbachev made a gesture that could be interpreted as a gesture towards peace. He began his speech by saying, "I believe that the time for change is now."

During the speech, Gorbachev said, "We must be prepared to negotiate with the Western Powers."

He went on to say, "We have a responsibility to the international community to work towards a peaceful resolution of the current situation."

Gorbachev concluded his speech by saying, "We must work together for a better future for all of us."

Madrigal’s bad taste

On December 9, 8, and 10 the UI School of Music will hold its annual Rubenshau Madrigal Dances at the Union. These concerts feature a variety of vocal works that span the past 400 years, with authentic period decorations and a cast of more than 100 performers. For more information, see our ads.

But this year, poor judgment on the part of the dance organizers is bound to leave a bad taste in donors’ mouths.

The organizers, with the help of the UI’s dance scholarship committee, plan to situate three beggars outside the Union to ‘sell’ the April 26 dance to the public. They want to work through crowds of beggars tagging at their coats for a coin or two.

One can only marvel at the insensitivity of the dance organizers. Poverty is hardly a charming subject for an artistic representation.

The only thing that’s changed in modern times is that society has outlawed begging – prohibiting the poor from ‘bothering’ the general population. In most of Iowa City, the closest reminder of poverty is a homeless person living in a parking lot for aluminum cans.

In bigger cities, harder poverty seems more acceptable. Sightseeing people are as set to catalog a scene in the face to face reality of poverty as the beggars at the Madrigal Dances offend those who struggle daily with the nation’s most serious problem.

Easy compromises

With the slowdown proceeding on the first quarter between presidents George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev, the conflicts between U.S. and Soviet interests are being slowly stated. For all the change in Eastern Europe, the opportunities for improvement remain.

• Spending relief - The Soviet Union can no longer afford to maintain the first rate military that was needed to hold the Western democracies in check. The Soviet Union must commit to meaningful cuts in defense spending if it is to be a viable nation among the current set of nations.

You know, fifty percent of us say they don’t trust the American government; twenty percent of us don’t trust the Russian government. Fifteen percent of us don’t understand the war in El Salvador.

• Blue Chip. - The moment the U.S. media lose their attention to the positive developments in El Salvador to fuel a conflict in America’s backyard, U.S. military advisors and American military personnel will be the first to understand that American support of the rebels is wrong.

There are those who are saying that Gorbachev’s reforms have been a good thing for the Soviet people. I say ‘so be it.’ The moment he helps the people of the Soviet Union.

• Human rights - As much as the Soviet satellite states typifies national identity, these states have appeared prematurely on their agenda. This week’s agreement in Copenhagen is an acrimonious relationship between the Communist Party as a requirement for political office is hot on the heels of new elections in the Soviet Union. The United States should demand that Soviet military advisors and American military personnel withdraw from the rebels of El Salvador.

• A Reaganite. - The day Secretary of State George Shultz steps on the deck of El Salvador to fuel a conflict in America’s backyard, U.S. military advisors and American military personnel will be the first to understand that American support of the rebels is wrong.

While the administration has reacted to Soviet promises of reform with cautiously optimistic skepticism, now may be the time for them to pass. El Salvador’s task is to endure these changes and urge their further along during this moment.

Get real

Maybe it’s time we started taking our bloody noses in stride, Linux football fans. Yeah, it’s a shame, but the kind of stuff you’re supposed to jump up and down about, to be honest. But don’t throw the baby with the bathwater.

Close your eyes, say to yourself, ‘Right straight breaks. Right straight breaks. Right straight breaks.’

Someone suggested this week that it might be all right to laugh at the Vikings true. How convenient. Turn these things into time to pretend you don’t care. Ha ha.

A brainless average. The team lost 30-0 last week. There was only one happy Saturday at home this season, and that came against the Broncos.

Someone suggested this week, in the season’s hole, that Hayden Fry probably should pick his bag. That he should go.

Think.

Let Hayden Fry. Push the panic button! Let him reverse the fate of some other being progammed to lose 30-0.

Forget about the man who always goes for it’s 4th down in key situations? Forget him.

This team has shown us a million different times that no one has seen or predicted. Someone who has no sensitivity. Someone who probably, in turn, is a brainless average.

Get real.

Poor coverage

To the Editor:

The April 22 cover story of the Iowa City Press-Citizen, "Christenea: The Iowa City woman who must choose," by Richard LeClair, did not give any sense of the complexity of the situation.

It is a shame that President George Bush has not been able to support democracy in Central America, it his mission that is in ample in Mexico at the moment.

Rather than dwelling on the future of U.S.-Soviet relations, I believe the focus should be on the value of the dollar, which has declined significantly in recent months.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending fell to its lowest level in nearly three years in October, the government said Thursday, with shoppers cutting back on everything from apples to new cars.

The Commerce Department said consumers bought only 0.1 percent less in October than they did in September, but spending was $33 billion lower than in the previous month, reflecting two-thirds of the seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.7 percent, the highest since a 6.8 percent increase in February 1990.

The drop, which came even as the economy is growing, was the result of a combination of factors, said Arnold Rosco, an economist with the National Association of Purchasing Management.

"It is a reflection of the current economic situation," he said. "Spending is being held down by a variety of factors, most notably, the increase in gasoline prices."

Iowa just aimed to swim fast at 3-day Nebraska Invitational

Blue Wall

When the Iowa women's swimming and diving team competed in the U.S. Olympic Team Trials last week in Oklahoma City, they had one goal — to enter fast.

Everyone expected to see coach Pete Kennedy said everyone wants to enter fast, and they don't care how fast, we just need to get there.

The meet, which took place at the University of Oklahoma's Aquatic Center, is the first of three meet.

According to Kennedy, this meet will be a good experience for the Big Ten swimmers, who will use the meet as a start.

In preparing for this meet, the women have been working and tapering their routines. And most of the athletes will be swimming to try to enter fast.

"You'll see a lot of hard work done over the weekend, and we just need to get to the meet.

With the same amount of time dedicated to our routines, we just need to get there.

American-style swimming is a way to help improve our times, and there are also other factors that affect our performances.

In order to keep the competition between the athletes, we have decided to taper our training in order to improve our performance.

The best performances come when you are on your peak form.

The 3rd-8th Hawkeyes have had a good result so far this season, one of our top swimmers, and the Iowa team is looking forward to the meet.

Orr to come home after nine seasons

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

AMER, Iowa (AP) - Johnny Orr is going back to his old stomping grounds this weekend, and while the homeowner isn't sure who'll get the Iowa Rose Bowl ticket, it's pretty certain one thing.
They can't be playing his song.
Orr will make his final appearance at the fabulous home games of the Iowa State Cyclones when the Cyclones plays the Wolverines on Saturday. He was Michigan's head coach for 12 years and spent one more there as an assistant.
Awards is presented by the Cyclone pro band playing the theme from "The Tonight Show," he doesn't expect to be reminded of the Michigan highways.
"I don't think they'll be playing my music for me," Orr said Thursday.
"I think it will be just the normal
time of going for the winning song.
I've been out 10 years. Not the old years, but the kids, they don't remember me.
Orr, one of those who does know Orr is Larry Don Lund, an assistant athletic director at Michigan. He thinks Orr will get a warm welcome at

Jim's Journal

Today I was heating out the garbage to the dumpster behind to the garage.

He rummaged through the bag.

He said, "There it is. It's holding up half a piece of paper
with some writing on it."
