UI health official: Woman didn't contract legionnella in workplace

Sara Langenberg
 The Daily Iowan

It seems unlikely that an employee of the UI Administrative Data Processing Service contracted Legionnaires' disease from her workplace, according to one official at the UI Health Protection Office.

"We have been looking at the ventilation system in the (old Northwestern Bell) building and, to date, have found no problems with it," said Jim Walker, HPO's industrial hygienist, Monday.

Walker and other HPO officials have been investigating the building, on the corner of Burlington and Linn streets, since a UI employee in the building was tentatively diagnosed with Legionnaires' disease two weeks ago.

But HPO officials have found no reason to believe the employee contracted the legionnella bacteria in the building.

The employee, Barb Hinkel, returned to work last Wednesday.

In an interview Thursday, Hinkel said she experienced several symptoms which may have been caused by legionnella bacteria before being admitted to UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"I had a severe headache, a high fever, nausea and vomiting," she said. "I just didn't feel right."

These and other symptoms similar to pneumonia are common among people who have contracted Legionnaires' disease, according to the director of the UI Occupational Health Service, Laurence Fuortes.

But Hinkel's symptoms cannot be attributed to legionnella unless a blood test conducted by her physician confirms it, according to ADP Director Andrew Wehde, who works with Hinkel.

"It can only be determined by a blood test after the fact," Wehde said. "They have to wait for the antibody to be built up in the body before testing to determine what it was (that made her sick)."

Wehde said the test may be done as soon as next week.

Hinkel's physician, Michael Massanari, could not be reached for comment.

Legionnella bacteria, which is often transmitted through ventilation and water storage systems, can be found in virtually every building though few people actually contract the disease, Fuortes said.

"Infection is not very common," he said. See Sick, Page 5A

Bush: Summit shows need for new thinking

Still too early to proclaim an end to Cold War

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President George Bush said Monday it's too early to proclaim an end to the Cold War, but added that Mikhail Gorbachev's acceptance of sweeping reform in Eastern Europe "absolutely mandates new thinking" by the West.

Wrapping up his weekend summit journey with a stop at NATO Headquarters, Bush also told reporters the United States would maintain "significant military forces in Europe as long as our allies desire our presence."

The president said he wants a treaty making initial cuts in superpowers' conventional forces in Europe "in the bank" before seeking deeper reductions. He told NATO leaders he hoped a multinational summit could be convened in Europe next summer to sign such an accord.

Conventional forces aside, the United States and Soviet Union are negotiating a proposed 50-percent cut in long-range nuclear weapons, as well as a proposed ban of chemical weapons.

Bush was in a buoyant mood as he neared the end of a journey that took him to last weekend's summit with Gorbachev.

Asked if it hadn't been risky to venture out in a small boat in the storm-tossed harbor in Malta during the weekend, he replied, "Hot dogging? ... No. You know these charismatic, macho, visionary guys. They'll do anything."

He arrived at the White House in Washington by helicopter from Andrews Air Force Base to be greeted on the South Lawn by his wife Barbara, who got a kiss, and dog Millie, who got a pat. The president waved to a small welcoming crowd and headed inside without speaking.

The president spoke as Gorbachev was convening a meeting of a radically reordered Warsaw Pact in Moscow to review the weekend summit.

The dramatic change in Europe continued uninterrupted during the day, as the Soviet Union and the four other Warsaw Pact nations condemned their own invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. In Leipzig, East Germany, about 200,000 demonstrators broke into wild rounds of applause as speakers called for German reunification.

Bush and Gorbachev leaders agreed at an unprecedented joint news conference before leaving Malta that their meeting heralded a new era of cooperation in East-West relations, including arms control and trade. They intend to meet again in the United States in the second half of June.

At his news conference, Bush said, "We stand at the threshold of a new era ... but declined to assert the Cold War has ended as Gorbachev suggested.

"That day hasn't arrived," the British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney talk before the beginning of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels Monday.

Warsaw Pact leaders condemn '68 invasion

MOSCOW (AP) — Warsaw Pact leaders met Monday amid rapid, bewildering political change in Eastern Europe and uncertainty about the 34-year-old military alliance's role and unity.

At Monday's session, the Soviet Union and pact members Bulgaria, Hungary, East Germany and Poland condemned their own action in invading Czechoslovakia in 1968 to crush a reform movement.

The Soviet news agency Tass also said the Kremlin and Prague will begin talks on possible reduction of Soviet troops still based in Czechoslovakia.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev indicated at the meeting that the Warsaw Pact and its Western opponent, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will someday become political rather than military alliances.

For leaders of four of the seven nations, it was their first meeting, underscoring how quickly old guard Communists have been swept from power. They heard Gorbachev report on his Malta summit with President George Bush.

Erstwhile diplomatic cover for the Kremlin's ideological policing of its allies, the seven-member pact faces unprecedented pluralism, from its first non-Communist head of government, Polish Premier Tadeusz Mazowiecki, to Romania's hardline Communist leader Nicolae Ceausescu.

Somehow, those men must agree on Eastern Europe's future and defense policy if the Warsaw Pact is to be an alliance in anything but name. Chastened by past interventions in their countries' lives, some reformers now in power also want guarantees that the pact's armed might will not be turned on them.

Having already ceased to make ideological demands on its allies, the Warsaw Pact should "stay out" of member nations' politics altogether, said Foreign Minister

Gyula Horn of Hungary, where legal groundwork was laid this fall for democratic, multiparty elections.

Horn's fears are not baseless: In mid-August, the Romanians reportedly requested joint Warsaw Pact action against Poland to preserve Communist Party rule.

In fact, under Gorbachev, the Soviets appear ready to accept virtually any sort of political change in Eastern Europe, provided allegiance is unshaken to the defense treaty written in 1955 at a time of tight, sometimes violent Kremlin domination.

"All the reforms which no one could have imagined a few years ago will be accepted in Moscow, unless they lead to the questioning of membership in the Warsaw Pact," the Polish newspaper Zycie said. See Warsaw, Page 5A

CAC holds meeting with minimal conflict

Group cooperated over an hour

Ann Marie Williams
 The Daily Iowan

For the first time in over a month, Monday's Collegiate Associations Council meeting was held with minimal conflict and apparent cooperation between executives and councilors in conducting routine business.

"This meeting went a lot better than I thought it would," said Vernon McKinley, president of CAC. "We got to the business of the day."

The meeting progressed with little interruption for over an hour until McKinley proposed an informal discussion with councilors after the meeting to talk about the recent controversy plaguing the CAC. Councilor Matt Wise proposed that instead of meeting informally, the council should discuss the problems in a formal executive session. The council passed the proposal with an informal vote.

McKinley responded by repeating his offer to meet informally rather than go into session, then adjourned the meeting and left the room.

Some of the councilors said they were angered by McKinley's actions, and maintained McKinley was continuing to act without respect for the council.

"Vernon does what he wants to do," said LeAnne Cabalka, adding that the administration's backing of McKinley gave him the power to act against the will of the council.

"The administration is calling all the shots," she said. "They're making the all the rules and then changing them."

Ozone hole over Antarctic closes, returns to normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Antarctic ozone hole has closed for this year, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported Monday.

The hole, actually a region of depleted ozone levels in the stratosphere over the South Pole, approached record levels in October, scientists said.

Ozone levels in that region have now returned to normal, said Walter Komhyr of NOAA's Air Resources Laboratory.

Ozone in the upper atmosphere helps screen the Earth from dangerous ultraviolet radiation from the sun. Scientists have been concerned that the hole over Antarctica could endanger marine life in that region and, if the depletion spreads, cause increased skin cancer and other health problems.

Scientists measure ozone in Dobson units, with a measurement of 270 to 300 considered normal for the area over the Antarctic.

When the ozone hole forms, levels drop drastically, setting a record at 125 Dobson units in 1987 and falling to 135 units this year.

Levels rebounded to 322 units by mid-November, then declined somewhat and are now estimated at near 300, Komhyr said in a telephone interview.

Mixing work, study requires planning

Mark Jarnagin

The typical UI working student is hard to define. Some may work a few hours on weekdays to pass the time, while others may forfeit weekends to earn money for school.

A survey of 30 Currier Food Service student employees found the typical student was a sophomore carrying 15 semester hours and working 8.5 hours a week. Seventy percent of the workers were sophomores or freshmen.

Fourteen student workers were surveyed at Iowa City's Godfather's Pizza. The typical worker at this establishment was a junior carrying 11 semester hours and working 24.5 hours a week.

UI student Lynette Chapman is a veteran working student; she's held a job ever since she arrived at the UI four years ago. She is in her fourth year as a Burge Food Service worker and her third as a night clerk for Clinton Street Residence Halls.

In contrast, Scott Vandenberg is new to the work-school balancing game. The sophomore engineering major works four afternoons a week testing water for chemicals. He said the job fits in well with his 15 semester hours.

UI Hospitals and Clinics, residence hall food services and the UI Physical Plant are among the largest on-campus employers. Most of these jobs have a fixed semester work schedule that can be arranged around a student's class load. Students are, however, limited to working 20 hours a week.

Chapman said she is glad to have

second of a two-part series

a set schedule.

"Fixed hours mean I'll know how much money I'll earn and when I'm going to get off work so I can plan my time," she said.

Other students, like Tim Shoppa, are employed as professor's assistants. Shoppa works about 10 hours a week in the physics department. His hours are flexible.

"This makes it easier to plan ahead of time if I have a test and I'll still have time for work," he said.

Traditional off-campus jobs range from restaurants and bars to retail and telemarketing. These jobs tend to have weekly schedule and hours that can vary considerably.

This type of situation has not been a problem for Mark Guthart. The junior French major works 20 to 25 hours a week at Godfather's Pizza and takes 16 semester hours.

He said his study habits have improved because of his varying job hours.

"Last year, when I worked at Quad Food Service, I spent all that free time procrastinating. Now that I don't know when I'll be able to study, I make better use of the time I do have," Guthart said.

Sam Cochran, director of UI Counseling Services, admits it's more difficult for students who work uncertain hours to set study

Schools help students 'at risk'

I.C. educators focus on retaining students who may drop out

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Community Schools are developing ways to help high-school students who may be considered to be "at risk" of failing or dropping out of school.

The American Association of School Administrators has published a report called "Students At Risk: Problems and Solutions" which brought attention to the problems, signs and solutions of students who are "learning to hate school."

"Since there is no one definition of 'at risk,' there is no one solution. The schools most successful are generally those that attack the problem on a holistic basis," said Ben Brodinsky, author of the AASA report.

State governors, legislators and school officers have been granting funds, setting up programs and passing legislation designed to help students at risk.

In Iowa, legislation has been proposed that may set state guidelines mandating that every school has an at-risk teacher, said Frank Carthey, guidance counselor at Iowa City City High. The district's Board of Directors has formed a committee to look into the situation.

According to Carthey, there are about 60 students at City High who may be in need of special services. The Special Education department because they don't meet the deadlines," he said. "They are still at risk of dropping out."

Carthey added that City High has proposed hiring an at-risk teacher for next year.

The Community Education Center Alternate Secondary School in

Iowa City is designed to give at-risk students a second chance at school once they have been dropped from the traditional schools.

CEC Principal Ted Halm said the students in their school have a teacher assigned to meet with them a minimum of one half hour per week to follow their attendance and progress.

"We really give students the feeling that we care about them," he said. "When there is a problem, we try to find the reason or the cause and do what we can to solve it."

Halm said signs that may identify at-risk students include: poor attendance, academic difficulty, failure to do homework, low self-esteem, discipline problems or problems with authority.

Students experiencing teen pregnancy or lack of direction in their life, students who come from a home environment without traditional middle-class values and students who are entirely independent of their parents are also likely at-risk candidates, he said.

According to the AASA report, the New York Alliance for Public Schools research findings state that extracurricular activities make a notable difference in retaining at-risk students.

The CEC school has an enrollment of 90 students including 12 seventh- and eighth-graders. The school currently has a ratio of one teacher to 15 students.

About 50 percent of CEC students make some sort of progress after attending the school, he said.

"We are dealing with students who have already had difficulties with school," Halm said. "We are starting with the stacks against us, but most students get some productivity about feeling positive about school."

'Santanonymous' program brings gifts to kids

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Based on previous years' success, Iowa City's Old Capitol Center is again collecting gifts for area organizations in its 'Santanonymous' program.

Now in its ninth season, Santanonymous aids organizations that are in need of Christmas donations by hanging seven large sackcloth "gift bags" from the second-floor balcony of the Old Capitol Center.

Contributors can place gifts of any kind in the bags, said Lisa Stevenson, Old Capitol Center marketing director.

Each bag carries the name of the local organization to which donations will be sent, and although donations seem to start slowly they pick up as the Christmas holiday nears, Stevenson said.

"At the beginning of the month last year, it was slow," she said. "Then it started to pick up closer to Christmas."

The seven Iowa City organizations who are participating in Santanonymous and will receive the gifts are: the Crisis Center, Domestic Violence Intervention Center, Willowcreek Neighborhood Center, Emergency Housing Project, Youth Homes, Association of Retarded Citizens and Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Donations include "mostly toys for the kids" in addition to items like stuffed animals, clothes, Bibles, books, hats and mittens, Stevenson said.

"People actually go out and buy these gifts for someone else," she said. "The organizations love it when we do this every year."

"Traditionally, we've gotten some pretty good donations," said Jill Kromminga, a caseworker for Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Kromminga added that while contributions to the Santanonymous program at the mall have been consistently generous, the extent of each season's donations are difficult to project.

"Still, it's a nice supplement to kids' Christmases," she said.

Since Big Brothers/Big Sisters serves about 100 children in the Iowa City area between the ages of six and 14 who don't get to spend time with one or both of their parents, every gift or donation is always appreciated, Kromminga said.

"It's always such a variety of things," she said. "Sometimes, kids even come and put in some of their own toys."

Public school enrollments increase after 20-year slide

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa public school enrollment has ended a 20-year slide.

Figures released Monday by the Iowa Department of Education show 478,210 students were enrolled in Iowa's public schools in September. That is an increase of 1,439 students from a year earlier.

"The increase is only 0.3 percent, but it is the first increase since 1969, and we feel it is a significant turnaround," Gov. Terry Branstad said as he announced the increase at his weekly news conference Monday.

However, the public school enrollment increase was nearly offset by a decline of 1,340 students in private schools. State figures show private school enrollment fell 2.8 percent to 46,033 this year.

Iowa public school enrollment has been declining since reaching a peak of 659,888 in 1969.

An upbeat Branstad announced the figures even though state Department of Education officials had not issued their annual report on school enrollment.

Army investigators find no proof of Ill. arsenal crimes

DAVENPORT (AP) — A criminal investigation of the Rock Island Arsenal's flight detachment by the U.S. Army found no substantiated crimes but raised questions about commanders' conduct, a newspaper reports.

The Army's Criminal Investigation Division concluded that it could prove no crimes at the flight detachment of the Army Armament, Munitions and Chemical Command, headquartered at the Arsenal in Rock Island, Ill., the Quad-City Times newspaper reported in a copyright story Sunday.

According to the final report from investigators at Fort Sheridan, Ill., AMCCOM's Fraud Team concluded in October 1988: "There was reason to suspect that criminal activity had taken place although there was insufficient probable cause to justify citing anyone for an offense."

The fraud team determined that the investigation was outside its jurisdiction and referred it to the Fort Sheridan Criminal Investigation Division field office.

Dan Trew, public affairs officer at Fort Sheridan, says the referral is normal because the fraud team is not part of the CID.

No extra hours added at library for finals

Rooms open in EPB, Schaeffer

Jennifer Glynn

Many students will feel an additional squeeze during the crunch of finals week as they try to find a place to study.

The UI Main Library, along with the 11 departmental libraries will be open regular hours during finals week.

Wayne Rawley, UI assistant librarian, said the libraries don't have the funding to keep extended hours during finals week.

"We don't have the staff or the funding to keep the libraries open for longer hours during finals week," Rawley said. "Library hours on the whole are 5-percent less than they were a year and a half ago due to funding cutbacks."

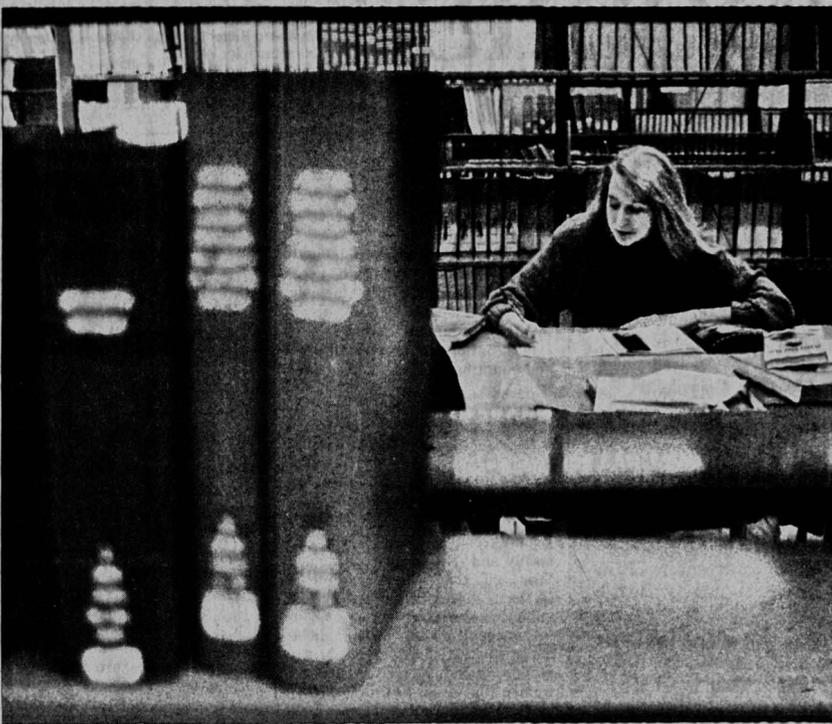

William Calvert, a UI freshman who lives in a residence hall, said he has trouble finding places to study.

"I think it's nuts to close the main library at 1 a.m. during finals week when most students study into the wee hours of the morning for finals," Calvert said.

"It is really hard to find places to study late at night. If your roommate is sleeping, you're screwed," he said. "I think the library should be open 24 hours during finals week so students can study whenever they want; after all, that's what we're here for."

The Hardin Library for the Health Sciences has a section of the library open for 24 hours that students can take advantage of during finals week.

UI student Nicole Morton, a French major from Tampa, Fla., was holed up Monday afternoon in the reference section of the UI Main Library studying. Finals week begins next Monday.

the English-Philosophy Building and in Schaeffer Hall to be open until midnight, today through Thursday, December 14.

LASA member Jennifer Wuggazers said it is important that students studying in these classrooms clean up after they are done.

"There is not supposed to be any eating or drinking allowed in the classrooms," Wuggazers said. "Students need to pick up after themselves, because if we abuse the privilege this semester, we won't have it next semester."

There are also classrooms available in certain UI buildings from 6:30 p.m. until the building closes on weekdays and during open-building hours on weekends. These buildings include: Engineering Building, rooms 5043 and 5407; EPB, rooms 212, 215 and 216; Gilmore Hall, Room 401; Jessup Hall, Room 203; Macbride Hall, Room 116; MacLean Hall, Room 217; Phillips Hall, rooms 472 and 476; Schaeffer Hall, rooms 113, 339, 362 and 354; Seashore Hall, rooms E310 and W205; and Spence Labs, Room 103.

The UI Student Senate will be organizing study breaks in the residence halls at which they will give out free doughnuts and orange juice beginning the Sunday of finals week.

Officials discuss 4-lane highway linking 'Saints'

Associated Press

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt will visit northeast Iowa later this week to meet with state transportation officials and supporters of a proposed four-lane highway linking St. Louis and St. Paul, Minn.

Rep. David Nagle (D-Iowa) said the Missouri congressman will meet Friday at 1 p.m. with Iowa officials at the American Legion post in Denver, just north of Waterloo.

The highway proposal, called "Avenue of the Saints," is projected to cost between $300 million and $500 million. If approved, it could pass through Nagle's 3rd District in Iowa.

Tom Welch, deputy director for planning at the Iowa Department of Transportation, said the project would be competing with other highway proposals in the 1990 transportation bill.

The route would be the first major north-south route in eastern Iowa and would be a boon to local economies, Nagle said. If Congress approves funding for the project, Nagle said it could be completed "before the next decade is done."

The Federal Highway Administration and state transportation officials in the region are working on a feasibility study to determine the best routes to connect the two cities.

Welch said the new highway could follow Highway 218 south of Interstate 80 into Keokuk, picking up U.S. 61 into St. Louis. Or it could be linked with highway 67 south out of Davenport and into St. Louis, he said.

UI to implement better degree-progress system with 1990 freshmen

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

UI students no longer need to fear being told on graduation day that they forgot to take a gym class and will not graduate.

Freshmen enrolling at the UI in fall 1990 will receive more sophisticated and individualized graduation progress reports than current students receive, which will allow them to more closely monitor their academic progress.

The UI recently purchased software for a new degree-evaluation system, according to Cherie Kingkade, coordinator of graduation analysis reports in the UI Registrar's Office.

The program will cost $15,000 and will be implemented next fall for incoming freshmen, according to UI Registrar Jerald Dallam.

"(The new program) will provide more information with greater accuracy earlier to the student," Kingkade said. "It won't be as much of a bits-and-pieces system."

Currently, the Registrar's Office sends graduation progress reports to students each semester, a preliminary graduation analysis after the student has completed 72 credit hours and a final graduation analysis after the student fills out an application for graduation, Dallam said.

The graduation progress report will be different under the new system.

Currently, the report documents the classes students have taken and the general education requirements they have yet to complete, but does not include the major classes still needed to graduate, Kingkade said.

Part of the reason the new system will be implemented is because the UI College of Liberal Arts would like its system to be similar to the UI College of Business advising system, Kingkade said.

UI senior Lisa Bartelt said she appreciated the graduation progress reports she received through the College of Business.

"(The report) tells you how many hours you need within your major and tells you exactly what courses you have to take, such as Finance," said Bartelt.

Bartelt said classes she has not yet taken are followed by stars on the report.

"You want to know exactly where you are and what you have left to take. When you walk out of the advising center, you don't have that security," Bartelt said.

The new report will provide more time for advisers to work with students on a more personal level. The report will not only list the remaining academic requirements but also a course-selection list of classes that fulfill those requirements, Kingkade said.

Seniors planning to graduate in May must complete an application for graduation by Feb. 23, 1990, although that deadline is different in other UI colleges. The College of Business does not usually allow applications after February 23, Kingkade said.

The new system should reduce the number of unfortunate surprises for UI graduates, who thought they had all the required hours by graduation time.

"Students deserve to be provided with this information as early as possible," Kingkade said. "Going to school is a job of sorts, and the more you know about going about that job, the better you'll be at it."

- A second summer of intensive language training at a more advanced level.
- One year of study abroad in the appropriate language area.
- One year of study at The University of Iowa to complete graduation and teacher certification requirements, including a semester of student teaching.

Scholarships are provided for the two summers of intensive language instruction and the year of study abroad. Other support based on eligibility available through the Office of Financial Aid.

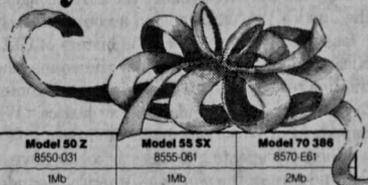

Students who participate in the program are obligated to teach in a cooperating Iowa school district for at least three years after graduation. School districts currently cooperating in the program are Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Iowa City, Marshalltown, Urbandale, and West Des Moines.

Who is accountable?

At the same time we're cheering demonstrations for democracy in Eastern Europe, a happening in this country shows U.S. momentum in the opposite direction. Another indictment of an Iran-contra player has been dismissed due to the defense's reliance on classified information for its case.

As long as secrecy prevents government officials from facing accountability, democracy is little more than a facade.

This time, the lucky inditee was Joseph Fernandez, the CIA station chief in Costa Rica. His defense relied on commonly known information, like the fact that the CIA operates stations in Costa Rica and Nicaragua. His lawyers, however, were able to persuade Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to investigate whether a public hearing of that information would jeopardize national security.

Thornburgh ran the evidence past senior members of the intelligence community, and they labeled it "secret." Though newspapers have been reporting on these "secrets" for years, the intelligence people will always protect one of their own kind. Their own power is at stake.

If the Fernandez decision holds, it will provide a license for any government official who operates in secret to behave however he chooses, with no fear of prosecution. The precedent is a frightening one.

Nonetheless, Thornburgh parroted the advice he received, the Justice Department ruled that the evidence was crucial for a fair trial, and Fernandez was freed. The prosecution has filed for a retrial.

If the Fernandez decision holds, it will provide a license for any government official who operates in secret to behave however he chooses, with no fear of prosecution. The precedent is a frightening one.

Like Oliver North, Fernandez was originally indicted for lying to Congress. He denied supplying arms to the Contras during a Congressional ban on such actions, and evidence indicates that he did indeed take part in the supply train. Next, Fernandez argued that he was just following orders. As The New York Times reported, "He said he was being made a fall guy for higher-ups who knew what was happening." Following orders is no excuse for breaking the law, though, and peers of Fernandez refused to participate in the supply operation. His defense holds little water. The worst part is that these same higher-ups are the ones advising Thornburgh on how secret Fernandez' defense actually is.

The result is a neat circle: Congress bans an action; a CIA operative disobeys the ban; the operative is indicted; the operative's lawyers argue that crucial evidence for the defense must remain secret; the Attorney General needs to find out if the evidence is indeed secret; he asks the CIA, who tells him yes; the charges are dropped.

In effect, this circle makes the CIA stronger than Congress or the Justice Department, and accountable only to itself. That's a frightening notion, given the history of CIA operations, from Nicaragua to My Lai. Consider the coups, the assassinations, the lies to Congress if the intelligence community is allowed to set its own standards for justice. What would have happened in Watergate had Nixon been able to claim secrecy?

When precedents like these arise, it's always valuable to look for guidance in the words of America's founders: Consider this lesson, from John Adams:

"A free people has an indisputable, unalienable, indefeasible, divine right to that most dreaded and envied kind of knowledge, I mean, of the character and conduct of their rulers."

May the Justice Department, as it hears the continuing arguments, keep Adams' gospel in mind.

Unique gift ideas

To the Editor:

The annual "what-can-I-get-them-for-the-holidays?" quandary is upon us again. I'd like to suggest a few unique gift ideas for those special people on your list. These gifts won't end up stuffed in a drawer or closet, but will touch the hearts and minds of those who receive them, and will help heal the Earth.

1) Buy an acre of rainforest for $50, to be preserved for us and for future generations, in a 110,000-acre park in Belize, Central America. The address is: Programme for Belize, P.O. Box 1088, Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

2) How about "adopting" a humpback whale for a year? For a donation of $15, the whale-lover on your list will receive an actual photograph of "their" whale, a certificate and newsletters during the year reporting sightings, research and news. Send to: International Wildlife Coalition, 634 North Falmouth Highway, North Falmouth, MA 02556.

3) CARE helps millions of people escape poverty and malnutrition through its food shipments, health care, education and assistance with small business and farming. A gift of any amount in honor of your loved one will carry the true message of the holidays around the world. CARE's address: 660 First Avenue, New York, NY 10016.

Our gift giving can really make a difference!

'Tis the season to be generous

Now comes the holiday season and with it, a decidedly uncomfortable thought or two about the limits of human kindness.

Look out on our country, blessed and bountiful as it is, and consider those for whom a small act of generosity would be something close to a miracle.

Consider the children who write to Santa Claus, asking for a warm coat, or a bed all for themselves, or money for the medicine their mother needs but cannot afford. What keeps us from saying to family and friends and colleagues: "Your gift this year is the gift of joy for a child who has felt almost none this year."

Consider the hungry who could be fed by the cost of a new video game system, or the shelter for battered women that could be strengthened by the money we did not spend on liquor for clients.

Consider... well, the point is beyond obvious, isn't it? Look at the Christmas catalogs, the endless profusion of gizmos and upscale playthings, and the observation of the late Westbrook Pegler comes to mind: We are offered each holiday season "a variety of dingbats for the immature."

So why, why each year this lemminglike rush to the nearest Inferno at the mall for the annual gathering of the Unneeded for the Unneeded?

And, of course, the answer is

almost as obvious as the question, and just as painful. There is something deep within most of us that loves acquisitions, that embraces the tangible, material possession in a way that is rarely equaled by the more abstract satisfaction of helping those in need.

When I get a card during this season, telling me that a donation in my name has been given to a worthy cause, I am happy. When I open a box and find a basket of gourmet cheeses or a small electronic toy, the pleasure is decidedly more visceral. I am not proud of these reactions, but they are there more than I care to admit.

I suppose this goes back to childhood, to the exquisite torment of waiting for Christmas morning, back to the brief glimpses into the Forbidden Closet with its near-erotic hint of tinsel and wrappings.

This sense is exacerbated, no doubt, by the promise that lurks behind every advertisement and sales pitch: the idea that somewhere out there is the perfect toy that will transport us into endless delight. The relentless lessons of Christmases past, with the new gifts all but abandoned by New

Year's Day, never seem to lessen the anticipation of Christmases future.

And even if we believe ourselves relatively immune from this acquisitiveness, do we have the same faith in those close to us? Have we raised our children to resist the temptation to say, at the end of the morning's accumulation, "Is that all?" What do we think our prospective clients, or co-workers, or subordinates, or superiors, or sources might say on being told that there is no bottle of champagne or scarf or pen this year?

Indeed, as one who has lucked into an occupation that pays me almost as much as I believe I'm worth, I wonder how fair it would be to a lot of overworked, underpaid people for me to indulge my conscience at the expense of a small, material, consumable gift to them.

Well, maybe it's a good thing in the long run that we do not abandon our less-noble impulses during the season. As I note with depressing regularity each year at this time, a mass outbreak of charity could be disastrous: the department stores, the toy manufacturers, the clothing industry, the wine and liquor distributors, and countless other enterprises would collapse, ushering in something between a recession, a depression and wholesale panic. America, literally, could not afford to embrace the true spirit of the season.

Still, I have made one commitment this year: For those friends of mine who are as materially blessed as I am, there will indeed be contributions made in their names to a variety of causes; they'll just have to get their barrels of popcorn and fruit baskets from somewhere else. And I'm hoping they'll do the same for me.

I may still feel a twinge of regret when the battery-powered eyebrow trimmer doesn't come. But I think I can learn to live with the grief.

VDT users may be running health risks

The use of video display terminals has become common among workers, students and almost anyone searching for information these days. The video display terminal (VDT) has a television-like screen and a keyboard that provides a link between humans and computers. As the technological age advances, estimates are that almost half of all workers in the United States will use a VDT during part of their workday.

As the use of VDTs increases, concerns have arisen regarding the safety of the equipment and whether there are health hazards associated with its usage. Clusters (groups of workers in a specific work area) who have developed similar health problems like cataracts and pregnancy problems have been reported.

Investigators of such clusters have concluded that there is no scientific evidence that the VDTs were the causative factors. Yet no other factors could be found in these workplaces. Indeed, when the principals of epidemiology are applied, the results reveal the incidence of the problems to be no more common than that which would be expected from chance. One should not, however, assume that this is the complete answer. The clusters were small in total numbers and a large number of cases would be needed to statistically prove an association.

Guest Opinion

A better answer to the question would be provided with a well-designed and controlled study comparing several thousand VDT operators with an equal and matched group of office workers who do not operate these machines. The pregnancy problems and health results of each group could be compared to see if there are statistically significant differences between groups. The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) has been doing such a study and is currently tabulating the results. NIOSH expects to release its report in the spring of 1990.

Other health concerns have been raised. Many symptoms are due to a lack of design planning. All workers are not the same shape and size. The ability to adjust the equipment used on the job is an important consideration for VDT workers. Controlled research has shown that performance, productivity and morale improve with a well-designed work area that the worker can modify for her/his own needs.

When equipment needs replacing, primary consideration should be given to the user. The cheapest option is often not the best choice in the long run if the person using it is not comfortable and productive. It's also important to remember that equipment and furniture don't last forever. Worn-out chairs that don't provide support or have wobbly backs and seats may cause lost worker-time and health problems for staff members. Annual budget projections should include equipment replacement expenses to insure that a healthy work area is constantly maintained.

The UI convened a Task Force on VDTs to demonstrate a good faith effort as agreed upon in the AFSCME contract. The committee has made recommendations about equipment, lighting and potential solutions to health-related complaints associated with use of VDTs. The Video Display Terminal Task Force has issued the recommendations to UI deans and departments.

Discussions should be held in all work areas to address concerns workers may have regarding these conditions. Although there are yet no known long-term effects from VDT work, tasks done with improperly adjusted equipment, poor lighting and few breaks contribute to job dissatisfaction, decreased efficiency and ultimately, productivity.

Sick

"Those at highest risk include elderly with chronic lung diseases and immunosuppressed individuals," HPO officials are now trying to determine whether any areas in the old Northwestern Bell building are conducive to breeding the bacteria.

In addition, investigators are trying to find out if any ADP employees are uncomfortable in their work environment, Walker said.

When many employees of a building complain of being uncomfortable or of frequent ailments, the building is classified by the EPA as a "sick building," Walker said.

There are about 60 ADP employees on the NWB building's fourth and fifth floors, Wehde said. U.S. West also has employees in other areas of the building.

Wehde said the number of sick leaves in the NWB building were not higher than the number at other UI buildings he's worked in.

"I've had complaints for the past 29 years at every building I've been in," he said. "We do have some hot spots here which don't get the right airflow, but we've asked the Health Protection Office to check these areas as well as the heating and cooling system."

"But as far as people having a lot of illnesses — sick leave is not any different here than anywhere else I've worked in the past," he added.

Walker said HPO receives and follows up complaints about UI buildings approximately once a week.

"When people feel they don't have control over their environment, they don't like it and they complain," he said.

The complaint he hears most often, he said, was that a building is too hot or too cold at times. Natural gas or sewer gas odors, which can cause headaches or eye irritation, are also the source of many complaints, he said.

At this point, Walker said, there is no reason to classify the NWB building as a sick building.

"We haven't found any obvious sources," he said, adding that the investigation will continue until a solution to the problem is found, if there is indeed a problem.

"So far, we've got a clean bill of health," Wehde added.

NATO

Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers said he was impressed by the United States' "extraordinarily positive attitude" toward events in Europe.

"It has nothing to do with a 'we are pulling out' attitude," he told reporters. "On the contrary, they are again promising a meaningful presence (in Europe)."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Bush's speech "was so full of meat that we really should consider it very carefully before we reply to it." She has urged a more cautious attitude toward some allies toward events unfolding in Eastern Europe.

The president began his news conference with a statement that said a "peaceful revolution" was taking place in Eastern Europe, where five hardline-communist regimes have fallen in recent weeks.

He said his goal was to see "individual freedom everywhere replace coercion and tyranny."

Bush, apparently referring to disagreements about Central America, said "all was not sweetness and light" at the Malta summit, but took pains to applaud Gorbachev's handling of the change in Eastern Europe.

"As I watched the way in which Mr. Gorbachev has handled the changes in Eastern Europe, it deserves new thinking."

Warsaw

Warsaw commented recently. Intriguingly, recent Soviet pronouncements indicate the Kremlin envisions the pact's future in a blurring of functions with the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, or COMECON, the notoriously ineffective socialist trade bloc that includes all Warsaw Pact members.

In October, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said the Kremlin would be interested in negotiating the abolition of both NATO and the Warsaw Pact by the year 2000, as part of the Kremlin campaign to create a "common European home." But later, in an interview with the official Polish news agency PAP, Shevardnadze noted:

patterns. His advice for such students is to get as much done before their work shift begins so as not to bring the added stress of school into their job.

For Guthart, this means separating his work from his studies. He views his job as a chance to escape academics; putting them off until later.

"If I sit at work worrying about when I'm going to get off," he said, "then that's a waste of time in itself. Don't worry about it, just do it."

Work

For the time being, the two alliances do exist and one should aim for their gradually being transformed into political-military organizations through developing civilian trends of their activity with a simultaneous reduction of all military elements."

What East bloc military leaders, traditionally subservient to their parties, think of such notions is unknown, but Warsaw Pact defense ministers sounded an apparent note of discord at a meeting in Hungary on November 27-29 by highlighting the NATO "threat."

But most councilors seemed to agree that the meeting was relatively successful.

"We got through the entire meeting without terrible controversy," said councilor Rafi Arbel.

Despite the problems at the close of the meeting, many councilors did attend the informal discussion called by McKinley.

Another possibility, said Komhyr, is that the depletion of ozone in the stratosphere in recent years has reduced the spring warming because there is less of that gas to absorb sunlight. The delay in warming could cause the vortex to continue for longer periods, he speculated.

The period of greatest ozone depletion this year extended from October 6 to October 9, Komhyr said.

CAC

During that period, temperatures drop to -125 degrees Fahrenheit and colder in the upper atmosphere, creating a situation in which man-made chlorofluorocarbon chemicals can react with the ozone, destroying it. Those reactions cease later in the year when temperatures warm to -70 degrees or so and the vortex breaks down, allowing polar air to mix once again with air from other areas and thus restoring ozone to more normal levels.

The breakup of the polar vortex winds has been occurring quite late in the last few years, Kom-hyr said, compared to the 1960s and 1970s, when it took place several weeks earlier. The cause of the delay is not well understood, he said.

It may be a result of a climate change affecting the southern hemisphere and delaying the breakup in some way, he said.

Another possibility, said Komhyr, is that the depletion of ozone in the stratosphere in recent years has reduced the spring warming because there is less of that gas to absorb sunlight. The delay in warming could cause the vortex to continue for longer periods, he speculated.

The period of greatest ozone depletion this year extended from October 6 to October 9, Komhyr said.

Navy tests missile despite protests

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The Navy outmuscled Greenpeace anti-nuclear protesters Monday, crippling their vessels and towing them out of an area where they tried unsuccessfully to halt the test launch of a Trident 2 missile.

The high seas drama took place in the Atlantic 50 miles off the Florida coast just before the nuclear-powered submarine Tennessee unleashed the $26.5-million missile on a test that put the Trident 2 program back on track after two explosive failures in the first three undersea launches.

"We did a perfect launch, just beautiful," Vice Adm. Roger Bacon, commander of the Atlantic Submarine Fleet, said at a news conference.

The Navy said its ships had to "shoulder" aside a large ship carrying protesters, and capture and tow away two high-speed rafts called Zodiacs from the launch area.

Greenpeace USA peace activists said the Navy rammed their ship, aimed fire hoses down its smoke stacks to stop its engines and that Navy divers had sliced the fuel lines and punctured the pontoons on the Zodiacs.

Bacon said hoses were used and that Navy sailors in rafts cut the fuel lines on one of the Zodiacs after the other broke down in heavy seas.

Summit to be held in Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — The next summit meeting of five Central American presidents will be held in Costa Rica December 10-12, sources close to President Oscar Arias said Monday.

The meeting, which had been scheduled for Nicaragua, probably will be in Heredia, nine miles from the capital of San Jose, according to the sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Plans to hold the summit in Managua were canceled because Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani refused to go to Nicaragua.

Cristiani suspended relations with Managua last week after two planes, allegedly smuggling arms from Nicaragua to leftist rebels in El Salvador, were found in Salvadoran territory. One crashed and the four crewmen perished, and the other was burned by its crew at a landing strip because the craft was out of fuel, according to Salvadoran officials.

The presidents of Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala, Nicaragua and El Salvador, at their meeting last August in Tela, Honduras, agreed to demobilize the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, by December 5. Next week's meeting is supposed to review the relocation of the Contras, thousands of whom live in camps across the border in Honduras.

Woman improving after transplant

PITTSBURGH — One day after a woman became the world's first recipient of a transplanted heart, liver and kidney, doctors talked Monday about the chances of weaning her from a respirator and how soon she could go home.

Cindy Martin, 26, who had already had a previous heart transplant, was in critical condition — normal after transplant surgery — in Presbyterian-University Hospital's intensive care unit Monday.

"Hopefully she will go home in three or four weeks," said Dr. John Armitage, who performed Sunday's heart transplant. "Right now her organ function looks encouraging. She's awake and writing us notes."

Doctors planned Monday to begin weaning her from the respirator that is helping her breathe. Infection is now her greatest risk, the physicians said.

U of Wisconsin faculty votes to ban ROTC

MADISON, Wis. — The University of Wisconsin's faculty approved a resolution Monday urging that ROTC programs be banned from the Madison campus in 1993 if the military continues to bar homosexuals.

The vote, which came at the first full faculty meeting since the Faculty Senate was formed in 1970, was 386 in favor to 248 against.

The resolution calls for the program to be moved off campus in May 1993 if the ban on homosexuals in the armed forces is still in place by then, and to keep the program off campus until it is lifted.

The action is not binding because only the Board of Regents, which governs University of Wisconsin campuses across the state, can terminate the ROTC contract with the federal government.

Diary shows Mencken was anti-Semitic

BALTIMORE — The previously secret diary of writer and social critic H.L. Mencken reveals virulent anti-Semitism, racism and pro-Nazi leanings, shocking even the sympathetic Mencken scholar who edited it.

The diary, type-written on 2,100 pages from 1930 to 1948, was sealed on Mencken's instructions for 25 years after his death in 1956. The Evening Sun (Baltimore), where Mencken once worked, published excerpts Monday.

On the subject of Jews, Mencken wrote in December 1943 that the Maryland Club had decided against admitting any more Jewish members after the only one on its rolls died. "There is no other Jew in Baltimore who seems suitable," he said.

The book, "The Diary of H.L. Mencken," was edited by Mencken scholar Charles Fecher of Baltimore and published by Alfred Knopf.

Mencken is revered by many writers and journalists for his erudite writing and often brilliant social and political criticism. The National Press Club in Washington has a library named in his honor and The Sun (Baltimore) bestows an annual writing award named for him.

Wall resigns as chief S&L regulator

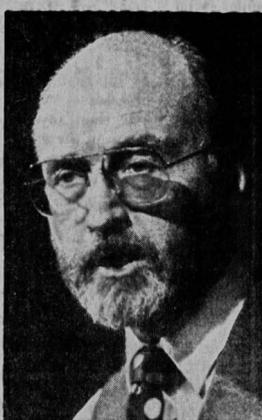

WASHINGTON (AP)—M. Danny Wall, under fire for his handling of what may become the costliest savings and loan failure in history, resigned Monday as the government's chief S&L regulator.

In his letter of resignation to President George Bush, Wall complained he was being made "a scapegoat" for the problems of the entire industry and denounced a "steady stream of one-sided information" from congressional hearings concerning the collapse of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association of Irvine, Calif.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez (D-Texas), chairman of the House Banking Committee, has blamed Wall for allowing Lincoln to remain open until last April even though government examiners had recommended in May 1987 that it be closed. The bailout of the institution is expected to cost taxpayers up to $2.5 billion.

In turn, Wall criticized Gonzalez on Monday, saying he "resorted to corruption of the truth" in trying to force the regulator out.

Wall's departure brought expressions of relief from Congress and the Bush administration.

M. Danny Wall

Gonzalez said in a statement, "I know this was a difficult decision, but I commend him for taking the action so that the air may be cleared and we may move forward in dealing with the savings and loan crisis." He made no mention of Wall's accusations.

Wall's mentor, Sen. Jake Garn (R-Utah), who brought him to Washington in 1975 as his chief aide, said Wall was "a man of unquestionably solid character and integrity" but was "a convenient target for the critics who sought a scapegoat for the serious problems in the thrift industry."

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, whose department oversees Wall's Office of Thrift Supervision, commended the regulator's decision to step down as "public spirited."

He added, "We are beginning the search for a new OTS director and are committed to a smooth transition and the uninterrupted continuation of the agency's important work."

Wall set no firm date for his departure, saying he would stay on for a transition period. He said he was looking forward to a job out of government.

For nearly two months, Wall has been the chief target of hearings by Gonzalez's panel. At first, only Gonzalez called for his resignation, but in recent weeks the committee chairman was joined by Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell (D-Maine), private groups and several major newspapers.

Rebels battle Aquino for 5th day; Shells explode in financial district

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A mortar shell exploded early Tuesday in a squatter's settlement near the Makati Medical Center in the embattled financial district, killing a girl and wounding nine people.

Hundreds of foreigners trapped in the Makati district awaited evacuation as rebels trying to oust President Corazon Aquino battled loyal troops for the fifth day.

At least 70 people have been killed and more than 500 wounded since mutineers seized several military installations and bombed the presidential palace Friday, according to the Red Cross.

A rebel spokesman, Capt. Albert Yen, telephoned news organizations in Manila Monday and said the insurgents would release the foreigners to dispel fears they were being held hostage.

He said the foreigners would be free to leave their hotels Tuesday morning and would be taken to the Manila airport aboard shuttle buses, but said too that the revolt would continue.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jerry Huchel said 215 Americans were believed to be in three hotels in Makati. Other foreigners caught in the Makati fighting included some 300 Japanese.

At least three people were killed in Makati Monday and 15, including one American, were wounded by sniper fire and shells.

Hospital sources identified the American as Jerome Weissburg. They said he was hit in the arm by glass when a bullet shattered the window of his room at the Peninsula Hotel. They did not know his hometown.

The Manila Chronicle quoted military reports as saying nine U.S. servicemen from Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila, were among the trapped Americans.

Loyal forces said the rebels were contained in 22 buildings in Makati.

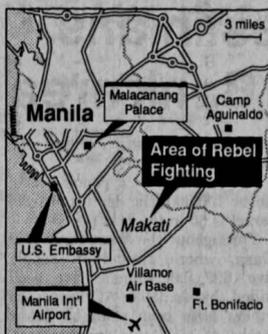

Snipers exchanged fire through the night.

Barbara Julich, a New York businesswoman trapped in the Intercontinental Hotel, was contacted by telephone and said, "Literally, we're in the middle. (We're) now low on food. There are babies in the building, and there is no baby food, and the mothers are hysterical."

About 400 rebels continued to occupy the Mactan air base in Cebu, 350 miles south of Manila. Their leader refused to surrender and threatened to blow up the base's planes.

The United States provided fresh military supplies to the government and promised $25,000 in assistance for civilian hospitals, said Richard Boucher, a State Department spokesman in Washington.

The city's international airport reopened Monday, but domestic air service was indefinitely postponed. Schools were closed, but government employees were ordered to return to work.

E. Germans try to keep evidence safe to prosecute former officials

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germans outraged by the corruption of ousted Communist Party leaders tried to storm secret police offices Monday to make certain evidence for criminal trials is not removed.

Prosecutors blocked former officials' access to evidence that could be used against them in the widening corruption investigation.

State television showed pictures of people joining police at luxurious government guest houses and at warehouses in East Berlin and Potsdam to block any efforts to remove documents.

Officials appealed for calm as people tried to force their way into secret police offices in Erfurt.

In Leipzig, where about 200,000 people attended a rally calling for German unification, 30 demonstrators were allowed inside the secret police headquarters, including opposition leader Wolfgang Schnur.

East Germany's official ADN news agency said the group was let in "after massive demands of demonstrators who had surrounded the building." It said the protesters presented their grievances and departed, but 200 other demonstrators who refused to leave were permitted inside later to tour the building.

Parts of the building were sealed off to prevent documents from being smuggled out, and Schnur said citizens would take part in making sure the papers remained there.

Wolfgang Schwanz, new chief of national security, ordered flights to Romania halted because of reports that sensitive material was being smuggled to the Warsaw Pact ally, whose leader, Nicolae Ceausescu, has rejected reform.

Officials said there was no proof documents were being sent there.

Premier Hans Modrow, who emerged as the leading political figure one day after the entire Communist Party leadership resigned, was not in East Germany. He led a three-member delegation to the Warsaw Pact summit in Moscow.

Military officials from U.S. detained in West Germany

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet military personnel in East Germany detained a team of U.S. military officers for 7½ hours on the eve of President George Bush's summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, the Pentagon said Monday.

"There were no U.S. or Soviet injuries. U.S. personnel were released later that day. The incident is under investigation," Pentagon spokesman, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Ken Satterfield said.

Satterfield said the U.S. team was "on their assigned mission" Friday which involved observing installations in East Germany. It was not immediately clear how many U.S. and Soviet personnel were involved in the incident.

The spokesman said the vehicle in which the U.S. team was riding was detained, and "a tire was punctured with a bayonet." Satterfield said the team was not threatened by the Soviets.

The incident, which was confirmed by several other Pentagon officials, has raised tempers among some military officers.

In March 1985, a Soviet sentry shot and killed an unarmed U.S. Army major, Arthur Nicholson Jr., and left him to die without medical aid, saying that Nicholson had been "caught red-handed" taking pictures in a restricted area.

Another Pentagon official, asked why the incident was not immediately announced, said that some officials believed the detention was due to a lower-level Soviet official "overreacting" to the presence of the military team.

'Resign! Resign!' chant Czechs rejecting gov't.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — More than 150,000 demonstrators chanting "They must go! They must go!" rejected the new Communist-dominated government Monday and demanded free elections in a roaring show of support for the opposition.

Also on Monday, thousands of tourists from Czechoslovakia freely visited the West for the first time in decades after the government lifted most travel restrictions.

Demonstrators massed in central Wenceslas Square for the first time since November 27, when a nationwide general strike forced the government to grant historic concessions. That demonstration capped 11 straight days of rallies in Czechoslovakia.

Monday's demonstrators waved red, white and blue national flags and applauded opposition demands for elections by July and a second general strike on December 11 if there is no new government by Sunday.

"Resign! Resign!" they chanted. The turnout at the rally and smaller ones elsewhere was a clear signal to the government that the opposition has massive popular support for its demands for real democracy.

They were protesting the new coalition government named Sunday, which brought only five non-Communists into the 21-member Cabinet and left Communists in control of all key ministries. Thirteen were holdovers from the previous Communist Cabinet.

In an indication the government may respond to demands for new ministers, First Deputy Premier Bohumil Urban met with two opposition representatives to negotiate a new meeting with Communist Premier Ladislav Adamec later this week.

Frantisek Pitra, the premier of the Czech republic government, asked for more time to consider changes at the republic level, postponing an announcement originally scheduled for Monday night.

The governments of the Czech and Slovak republics control key areas such as justice and education in their respective regions.

Eleven of the 17 ministers under Pitra in the Czech republic have submitted their resignations, including the unpopular ministers of education and justice, the state news agency CTK reported.

A parliamentary commission reported on its investigation into police brutality against student demonstrators on November 17. It concluded that police used inappropriate force and seriously injured peaceful demonstrators. It said some police on duty may face charges of assault and abuse of office.

According to CTK, the report blamed "high political figures" for the repression, which "was one of the decisive reasons" for subsequent mass protests. CTK listed no names.

The hourlong Prague rally, broadcast live on state radio and television, was a triumphant show of national unity in the fight for democracy. That unity was symbolized at the end, when protest singer Karel Kryl, who has lived in exile in the West for years, and Karel Gott, the nation's best-known officially sanctioned pop singer, led the singing of the national anthem.

The people loudly cheered Civic Forum spokesman Vaclav Maly when he announced that the opposition hoped to field its own candidates in elections.

"Thanks for your help and support!" Maly shouted. "We need it now more than ever."

"That's it! That's it!" the crowd chanted back in a roaring show of support for Civic Forum, the nation's leading opposition movement and its counterpart in Slovakia, called Public Against Violence.

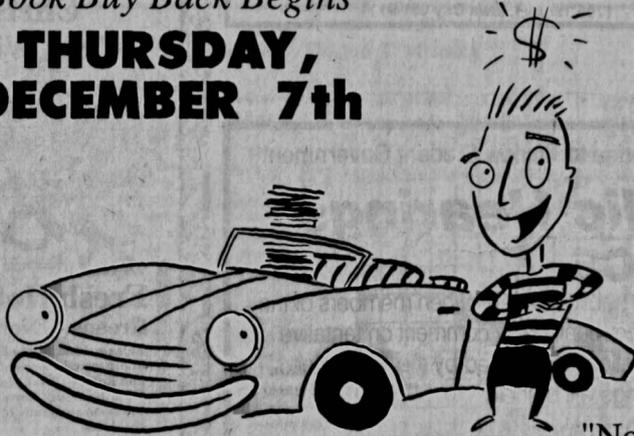

Adamec has promised "radical changes" with the new government but has given no specific pledge of free elections, which top Communists said last week were likely within a year.

Bitterness builds as Palestinians, Israelis struggle in West Bank area

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The stone plaque calling the Yasmina quarter the "neighborhood of the two martyrs" has not kept pace with the anger and bitterness built up in two years of the Palestinian uprising.

The neighborhood of 6,000 Palestinians, crowded into the old marketplace known as the Casbah, now has 14 "martyrs," men and teenage boys shot by Israeli soldiers along the narrow streets.

Yasmina has seen all the many sufferings and the few small triumphs of the "intefadeh," the uprising that began on Dec. 8, 1987, to demand Israel end its occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"He was trying to throw two firebombs," she said matter-of-factly.

Another son and a son-in-law are in jail, accused of taking part in the uprising, El Masri said. She complained angrily of dozens of visits by Israeli soldiers to question her other five sons.

Pulling her youngest son, 3-year-old Fuad, close to her, Masri said: "I hope he will grow up and avenge the death of his brother."

It's uncertain how much the defiance expressed by Masri and others in Yasmina is mere bravado. One former Nablus policeman, long familiar with the Casbah, was asked if residents were not worn down by the long revolt.

"We don't want the blood of our sons to go for nothing." — Yusra El Masri

Flag-waving demonstrations, stones, firebombs and the killing of suspected collaborators have been common in Yasmina, Arabic for the fragrant Jasmin flower.

The Israeli response has been tear gas, gunfire, arrests, the demolition of houses. The latest example came December 2, when soldiers shot to death four men blamed for killing fellow Palestinians accused of collaborating with Israel.

Some Palestinians and Israelis question whether the uprising is losing its steam after two years of suffering with no real political gains. But in Yasmina, the talk is of defiance, revenge, carrying on the battle for a Palestinian state.

"We don't want the blood of our sons to go for nothing," replied Yusra El Masri, 42, when asked if the revolt will persist. On the wall opposite hangs a blurry enlargement of a family snapshot that shows her son, Bashar, dead at age 20.

"They are tired, of course, but I'm not sure they admit it even to themselves," he replied, asking that his name not be used.

After two years, there is reason for weariness. The Palestinian economy, never well-developed, has been further hurt by the three-hour store hours and almost weekly general strikes ordered by the PLO-backed leaders of the uprising.

By army estimate, more than 40,000 Palestinians have been arrested and at least 8,900 injured in the uprising in the West Bank and Gaza. Palestinians say the numbers are higher.

In Nablus, with a population of about 100,000, the death toll from Israel is 66 in the past two years.

Throughout the West Bank and Gaza, where 1.7-million people live, 625 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis. At least 154 others have been slain by fellow Arabs as suspected collaborators. Forty-three Israelis also have been killed.

Scars of the violence are visible on Sharea Lulu — Street of the Pearl — where the El Masri family lives. Near their home stands the wreckage of a house partly demolished by the army after a concrete block was dropped from its roof last February, killing an Israeli soldier, Binyamin Meisner, 24.

An Israeli reservist who has served in Nablus said the city holds both dangers and frustrations for soldiers.

The 29-year-old corporal, whose name could not be used under army regulations, said patrolling the Casbah means staying alert to every motion atop the two- and three-story buildings.

"At any moment, you can have rocks or bottles all over you," he said, adding that troops also must constantly decide when they can open fire under regulations allowing use of live ammunition only if a soldier's life is in danger.

"It's a frustration. You're a soldier with a weapon," he said. "It's a very difficult thing. It's spur of the moment."

Despite the many deaths in Nablus, the soldier added, "the number of casualties is in line with the rules."

Hezbollah fighters drive Amal from 2 villages, shell 2 towns

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) — Militiamen allied with Israel shelled two south Lebanon towns Monday, and in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley, Hezbollah fighters drove Amal from three villages in house-to-house combat, police said.

Police said at least 15 people were killed and 48 wounded in the two flareups.

Hezbollah, or Party of God, is comprised of pro-Iranian fundamentalists. Mainstream Amal is allied with Syria. The two Shiite Moslem factions long have vied for control of the 1.2 million Shiites, the largest sect among Lebanon's 4 million population.

In Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, an Arab League committee accused Gen. Michel Aoun of blocking a settlement of the 14-year-old Lebanese civil war, but urged the Christian commander and Syria to avoid a new battle.

President Elias Hrawi said Monday he was delaying for a few days any decisive action to evict Aoun from the presidential palace in Baabda, east of Beirut.

The Arab League appeal came after a two-day meeting of its committee on Lebanon.

Aoun rejects a peace plan worked out at Taif, Saudi Arabia, in October and approved by the Lebanese Parliament. He also says Hrawi's election by Parliament last month was unconstitutional.

His 20,000 Christian army troops fought a six-month artillery war with the 40,000 Syrian soldiers stationed in Lebanon, which ended in September with a truce arranged by the Arab League.

The Syrians moved in additional troops, tanks and heavy artillery, but the United States, the Soviet Union, the Vatican and former colonial power France urged Syria to show moderation and counseled dialogue to resolve the crisis.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran sent a message to Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa reiterating Iran's support for Syria and denouncing "Michel Aoun's ruffianism," the Islamic Republic News Agency said Monday.

A police spokesman said five people were killed and 12 wounded in a seven-hour artillery barrage Monday against the town of Kfar Rumman by the South Lebanon Army, a predominantly Christian militia that helps Israel patrol the "security zone" just north of its border with Lebanon.

Six people were wounded in shelling of neighboring Nabatiyeh, police said. They said all casualties were civilians in the two towns, which have a combined population of 140,000.

It was the third day militia gunners shelled the towns. Total casualties there since Saturday stood at eight killed, 38 wounded.

Militia radio Voice of the South broadcast a statement saying the shelling was a response to two Shiite guerrilla assaults that killed three militiamen and wounded five.

Nabih Berri, whose Amal militia controls the towns, threatened to bombard northern Israel if shelling continued.

Opera Theater presents alumnus' works

The Daily Iowan

The UI Opera Theater will present portions of two original works of musical theater by UI alumnus Robert Nassif at 8 tonight in Harper Hall of the UI Music Building.

Works to be performed are Act III of the opera "Broadway" and excerpts from "Opal." Nassif will provide a narration, giving information from other acts of each work. Beaumont Glass, director of the UI Opera Theater, will be co-pianist for both works with opera coach and accompanist Darlene Lawrence.

"Broadway" is based on a play by noted director George Abbott. "Hoofers and Janes. Gumshoes and gangsters. Jazz music and mobster murders," Nassif writes about the show. "It's backstage at the sleazy Paradise Night Club in the Broadway district of New York during the dizzy/deadly heyday of Prohibition."

"Broadway" is entirely underscored with music and often, the actors and orchestra are heard in counterpoint against the offstage cabaret jazz band.

The lead roles are played by graduate students Kerri Rosenberg, Joseph Spann, Kirk Greiner and Barbara Buddin, and undergraduate Scott Muters.

"Opal" is based on the diary of seven-year-old Opal Whiteley. Whiteley was a French girl raised with a classical education in music and literature and then transplanted as a very young orphan to a northwest United States lumber town.

Glass called the result "a fascinating true story through her very unusual and creative point of view. When she didn't know the words for things she made them up, and the result is truly unique. 'Opal' is unlike anything I've ever seen in this popular music medium. There is a marvelous, spiritual message."

The lead roles in these excerpts will be played by graduate students Nancy Hagen as Opal, Barbara Buddin, Rosemary Lack, Kerri Rosenberg, Brian Burkhardt and Jann Degnan.

"Opal" was selected from more than 2,000 musicals to be produced as a New York Shakespeare Festival reading in 1989.

Nassif, who now lives in New York City, has worked on projects with noted stage and opera director Hal Prince and producer/director Joseph Papp. He also received a commission from Metropolitan Opera stars James McCracken and Sandra Warfield to compose an operatic concert duet.

Admission to tonight's performance of Nassif's works is free.

Television in December means one thing: incessant trips to Bedford Falls. Just when Jimmy Stewart is about to leap to his death, you should be sufficiently filled with holiday cheer to find the ensuing antics hilarious. Trust us.

Editors at work determining who's a who WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — Who's a Who?

That's the question the editors of "Who's Who in America" must decide as they prepare listings for the 1990-91 edition of the reference book.

Actor Eric Roberts will be listed in the new Who's Who. But Mr. T, star of the canceled "A-Team" TV series, will not be. Baseball slugger Jose Canseco of the Oakland A's is a Who, but National League rookie of the year, Jerome Walton, the Chicago Cubs center fielder, is not.

"Walton was rookie of the year, true," explained John Daniels, product manager for Who's Who In America. "But you don't know. What about his sophomore year? What if he fizzes?"

Once someone is listed, it's for life, or until retirement, or until conviction for a serious crime.

Sometimes the editors look the other way at a conviction, as in the case of Watergate convicts John Ehrlichman, H.R. Haldeman and Charles Colson, who continue to be listed.

Thousands of questionnaires were mailed out this fall from Who's Who headquarters in this northern Chicago suburb to those selected — Nobel laureates, federal judges, movie stars, Fortune 500 company officials, newspaper editors, junior partners in major accounting firms and up-and-coming lawyers in prestigious firms.

Researchers at the headquarters comb through newspapers, magazines and corporate reports for prospective listees.

"We try to be as objective as we can be in our standards," Daniels said. "We try to quantify quality."

Bittsney releases accompany Isrrew 'golden era' of animation

NABHOLLYWOOD (AP)—The debut (AP) is fall of two animated features the was inspired euphoric predictions borh that the cinematic art form is not facing a new golden era akin to the burst of creativity a half-century ago that produced such classics as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Fantasia."

Walt Disney's "The Little Mermaid" and Don Bluth's "All Dogs Go to Heaven" opened head-to-head in the nation's theaters November 17, in time for the lucrative holiday season.

More important, the twin releases — on the heels of the successful Roger Rabbit phenomenon — signal a resurgence of animation, once threatened with extinction because of huge production costs.

"I've never seen it as good as this. The future looks unlimited," said Andreas Deja, a Disney animator on "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" and "The Little Mermaid."

"I think the resurgence has been due to a return to good storytelling," said John Pomeroy, animator-partner with Don Bluth's production company. "Instead of an 80-minute showcase for dolls and products based on the characters, we're trying to grip the audience with good stories."

Ten years ago, the animated feature film was fast fading. Disney was the only keeper of the flame, and the studio was lumbering along with one new feature every three years. "The Black Cauldron" was a $30 million bomb in 1985.

The rebirth of animation can be traced to a pair of events. In 1979, Bluth led a dozen young animators out the Disney studio gates, proclaiming that management had lost Walt's creative vision. He set up his own shop to make a feature, "The Secret of NIMH," delved into video arcade games, then combined with Steven Spielberg for "An American Tail" and "The Land Before Time."

In 1984, the Disney management was overturned in a power play led by Roy Disney, Walt's nephew. Roy, along with the new production team of Michael Eisner and Jeffrey Katzenberg, beefed up the animation department and announced the goal of a feature a year. That schedule has been met with "The Great Mouse Detective" (1987), "Oliver and Company" (1988) and "The Little Mermaid," plus the semi-animated megahit "Who Framed Roger Rabbit."

A major reason for animation's return is something even Walt Disney could not have foreseen: the home video market.

Released in stores September 28, Disney's "Bambi" — which debuted in 1942 — has already sold 10.5 million cassettes at the $26.99 suggested retail price. "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" has sold 8 million at $22.99 since October 12. "The Land Before Time" has sold 7 million cassettes. The Christmas season will bring more sales.

Despite the industry's enthusiasm, Charles Solomon, author of "Enchanted Drawings," a history of the art, is skeptical about a new golden age: "It seems to me the same thing was said last year with the release of 'Oliver and Co.' and 'The Land Before Time.'"

While Solomon is critical of Bluth's storytelling abilities, he praises the developments at Disney.

"What excites me is that the new, young animators, who have been in the shadows of the 'Nine Old Men' who made the Disney classics, are now trying to do their own thing," he said. "They're beginning to emerge as artists, developing their own styles and approaches. They're not only influenced by Disney, but by Tex Avery, Chuck Jones and other Warner Bros. and MGM animators."

The 32-year-old Deja is typical of the new Disney breed. As a boy of 10 in West Germany, he saw Disney's "Jungle Book" and decided he wanted to draw cartoons. He applied to the Disney studio and was advised to study draftsmanship, anatomy and other subjects at art school. He did, and was admitted to the Disney training program in 1980.

He went to England to work under Richard Williams on "Roger Rabbit," drawing Roger, the gorilla, weasel and various Disney characters. Then he returned to California and created Triton for "The Little Mermaid." He is now working on a featurette based on "The Prince and the Pauper."

Animation may be thriving, but the upsurge isn't reflected at the Motion Picture Screen Cartoonists' Guild. Business agent Steve Hulett reports it has 750 members, compared to 2,800 a decade ago.

"Then we were hit by runaway production," he said. "Hanna-Barbera moved its ink-and-paint department and some animation abroad, and other studios followed."

Production first moved to Japan, then to South Korea, the Philippines and elsewhere as countries become more expensive. Some inking and painting of "The Little Mermaid" was done in China.

Despite the flight of jobs, Hulett still sees hope.

"More (animated) pictures in the marketplace brings more production into the marketplace," he said. "I like to think that good wages and good animation can go hand-in-hand despite producers' attempts to seek cheaper work abroad."

He estimated foreign animators earn $350 or less a week, compared to the Hollywood minimum of $900.

A new cost-saving element is computerization. Disney used computers for portions of "Oliver and Co." and "The Little Mermaid," and is expected to do more in the future.

"Computers may eliminate the entire function of ink and paint in the future," Deja said. "But the job of animation hasn't changed; it still has to be done the same way: by hand, 24 frames a second. So far no computer has been able to produce an animated character."

Meanwhile, Disney plans to surpass its once-a-year animation goal in 1990, releasing the new features "The Rescuers Down Under" and "Duck Tails," as well as the shorts "The Prince and the Pauper" and "Roller Coaster Rabbit," a Roger Rabbit adventure that will appear with Warren Beatty's "Dick Tracy."

Also next year, Disney will release "The Black Cauldron" and "Jungle Book."

Record promoter accused in cocaine/payola scam

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An independent record promoter pleaded innocent today to charges that he provided cash and cocaine to get songs played on several radio stations.

Joseph Isgro, who appeared before U.S. Magistrate Volney Brown Jr., pleaded innocent to 51 counts of making illegal payoffs, distributing cocaine, racketeering, conspiracy, obstruction of justice, tax fraud and mail fraud.

A second defendant, Jeffrey Monka, pleaded innocent to money-laundering charges today. Prosecutors say Monka set up a sham company to help Isgro launder the cash used for "payola" to employees of several radio stations.

Payoffs allegedly were made at stations in Los Angeles, Fresno, Calif., and El Paso, Texas.

Former Columbia Records executive Raymond Anderson was to be arraigned next week.

Harvard 'nerd' founds new geek group

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — It's the laugh. That obnoxious giggle that ends in a full-fledged snort. That's the mark of a true nerd.

Jeremy Kahn has it. Naturally. He is the founder, president and ideological spokesman for the newly formed Society of Nerds and Geeks — or SONG — at Harvard University.

If "Veritas" (truth) is the motto of Harvard and "Vanitas" is the motto of the Harvard Lampoon, then the slogan of SONG is "Veritas is more important than Vanitas," explained Kahn, 20, a junior majoring in math.

"The kind of people we're looking for are very interested in what they're studying. Not as worried about — like — what other people think about them," said Kahn who punctuates his sentences with "like" a lot.

"Truth is more important than to look good," he added.

Everyone knows or has known a nerd or a geek. A nerd was that brainy math major in college, the one with the thick glasses, the perpetual pocket calculator and plaid shirt. The geek is the guy or gal who wore mismatched socks or strange color combinations and walked to the beat of a drummer no one else heard.

Nerds, however, go on to invent amazing new machines and make millions on the patents. Geeks go on to found new companies and become the CEO featured on Fortune's cover for maverick style.

Will nerds inherit the earth? No, but they might just save it, according to Kahn.

With about 35 members, SONG meets weekly and fosters discussions on how to study better and improve academic standings.

"We talk about — like — why grades are important to us or how we see relationships, which may seem strange for nerds and geeks to talk about," said Kahn. And he laughed that nerdy laugh.

Future plans for SONG include lectures, off-beat dances for those slightly out of step and a special "procrastination hot line." This would involve a "kind, caring and generous counselor" to talk with students who simply can't get down to work.

There's a funny saying going around Harvard, "Blessed are the nerds and geeks for they will become trendsetters," Kahn said.

Seattle upends Buffalo 17-16

Steve Largent's heads-up play on an extra point conversion was the difference Monday night as the Seattle Seahawks turned back the Buffalo Bills 17-16 in the Kingdome.

Largent was holding for an extra point and, following a low snap, pulled the ball from the turf and scurried around the left end for one point.

With 5:00 remaining in the fourth quarter and Buffalo leading 16-10, a three-play 69-yard drive put the Seahawks on top. Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg tossed the winning strike to a streaking John Williams, who broke tackles en route to the endzone.

Baseball salaries on rise

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The average baseball salary rose 13 percent to a record $497,254 this season, the Major League Baseball Players Association said Monday.

Two arbitrators earlier had determined that collusion by owners against free agents following the 1985 and 1986 seasons had helped slow the salary spiral. The average declined from $412,520 to $412,454 in 1987, then rose 6.4 percent in 1988 to $438,729.

Huge raises given to many free agents in the last month should push the average well past $500,000 by opening day.

Capital Cities-ABC sues Treasury Dept

NEW YORK (AP) — Capital Cities-ABC Inc. filed suit against the Treasury Department on Monday, claiming the government was trying to block live television coverage of the 1991 Pan American Games in Cuba.

ABC agreed earlier this year to pay the Cuban Pan American Games Organizing Committee $9.5 million for the U.S. television rights to the games, scheduled for Aug. 2-18, 1991, in Havana.

According to Barry Frank of Trans World International, the television consultant for the Pan American Sports Organization, the Treasury Department denied the license application last Friday, but told ABC that it could purchase and air videotapes of the games as opposed to live coverage.

Yount in high demand

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Free agent Robin Yount held off making a decision Monday, putting several possible trades on hold at baseball's winter meetings.

The Chicago Cubs said they were told by Yount's agent, his brother Larry, that nothing was imminent. The Cubs are among the teams making multi-year, $3 million-per-season offers to Yount, the American League's Most Valuable Player.

It remained uncertain, however, when Yount and would announce his plans.

Yount is being wooed by big offers from Milwaukee, California, San Diego and the Cubs. He has played his entire career with the Brewers and they, along with the free-spending Angels, appeared to be the favorites to get him.

College

weeks ago, needs a win over Alabama and a Colorado loss to capture its third national championship of the decade.

Although Michigan is ranked third, it will be very difficult for the Wolverines to finish on top. They need an impressive win over Southern Cal, a Miami loss in the Sugar Bowl and a close Notre Dame victory in the Orange Bowl to have any chance. Even then, the Irish would probably get the nod because they would have beaten the No. 1 team and because they defeated Michigan 24-19 at the start of the season.

Colorado received 55 first-place votes and 1,492 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Miami got four first-place votes and 1,407 points, while Michigan received the other first-place vote and 1,374 points. Notre Dame's point total was 1,323.

U.S. Gymnastics Federation, said officials of the organization had flown to New York to speak with Comaneci but could not contact her.

"We're trying to locate her," Auer said, adding that the federation wanted to set up a meeting between Comaneci and her former coach, Bela Karolyi, who now lives in Houston.

Karolyi, who had been in Europe with the U.S. women's gymnastics team, was scheduled to arrive in Chicago today.

"We're hoping that she'll try to get hold of Bela or his wife, Martha, when she finds out that Bela is back in the country," Auer said.

In the newspaper interview, Comaneci said she and a friend, Konstantin Panit, left her parents' home in Bucharest in a rental car Nov. 26 and headed for the town of Timisoara near the Hungarian border.

Six other friends had also crowded into the car, and Panit dropped them off 10 miles from the Hungarian border at about midnight, the newspaper quoted Comaneci as saying.

"We were stumbling and often crawling through water and ice," Comaneci said in the newspaper.

Comaneci said the group encountered no border guards although they heard their dogs barking.

They reached the border after walking for six hours, having veered miles off their planned

Kansas continues climb in hoop poll

(AP) — Syracuse remained atop the Associated Press college basketball poll today with Kansas making the jump from fourth to second.

The Orangemen got 48 of the 63 first-place votes and 1,535 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters after winning four games in its first-ever week as a regular-season No. 1.

Syracuse beat Rutgers and Cornell and won the Carrier Classic with wins over Virginia Commonwealth and Temple and is now 4-0.

Kansas (6-0) had 17 first-place votes and 1,443 points, 18 more than Georgetown (3-0), which remained No. 3 and had five first-place votes.

Missouri (4-0) and UNLV (3-1) rounded out the top five and were followed by Duke, Illinois, Michigan, Louisiana State and Arkansas.

The Tigers had a first-place vote and 1,325 points, 60 more than the Runnin' Rebels as both teams improved one place from last week. Duke (3-0), which has broken the 100-point mark every time out this year, had 1,246, while the Fighting Illini (2-0) had 1,139. Both also moved up one place.

Michigan (3-1) moved from 10th to eighth with 1,080, 29 more than LSU (2-1), which stayed ninth. Arkansas (3-0), which had two first-place votes, moved from 11th to No. 10 with 1,031 points.

Arizona was the only team to drop from the Top Ten. The Wildcats fell to a 1-2 record after a disastrous three days in the state of Oregon. They dropped from No. 2 to No. 20 after losing at Oregon 68-63 and Oregon State 84-61, the latter the worst loss for the Wildcats since Luke Olson took over as coach. Both were conference games and Arizona, the two-time defending Pac-10 champion, already trails UCLA by two games.

The impressive win brought Oregon State (3-0) into the rankings at No. 24. Alabama (4-0), which beat North Carolina 101-93 on Thursday, also moved into the Top 25 at No. 21.

Notre Dame (1-1), which had been 19th, dropped from the poll after losing to Louisville 84-73, and Oklahoma State fell out with a first-round 102-90 loss to Pittsburgh in the Tournament of Champions. The Cowboys (2-1) had been 23rd.

The Second Ten was Louisville, Oklahoma, which has broken the 146-point mark in each outing, UCLA, Indiana, St. John's, Memphis State, North Carolina, Georgia Tech, North Carolina State and Arizona.

Alabama was 21st, followed by Pittsburgh, Temple, Oregon State and Florida.

Finally, national title down to 4 teams

(AP) — And then there were four.

Auburn's 30-20 victory over previously unbeaten Alabama dropped the Crimson Tide from No. 2 to No. 7 in the rankings and left only four teams in contention for college football's national championship — Colorado, Miami, Michigan and Notre Dame.

Colorado remained on top for the second straight week in today's Associated Press poll, while Miami rose two spots to second. Michigan remained No. 3 and Notre Dame moved up one notch to No. 4.

Miami, Michigan and Notre Dame each finished the regular season with one loss, while Colorado is the only undefeated team in Division I-A.

Because of the New Year's bowl matchups, those are the only teams with a realistic chance to win the national title. Colorado plays Notre Dame in the Orange, Alabama meets Miami in the Sugar and Michigan faces 12th-ranked Southern Cal in the Rose.

Colorado can claim the championship by beating Notre Dame. However, if Notre Dame wins and Miami and Michigan lose, the Fighting Irish would almost certainly be voted No. 1.

Miami, which snapped Notre Dame's 23-game winning streak two weeks ago, is now 1-1.

John Mackovic

Illini skipper named Big Ten Coach of Year

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — Illinois football coach John Mackovic has been voted Big Ten Coach of the Year for the second straight season, conference officials said Monday.

Mackovic, who is finishing his second year as head coach of the Illini, accumulated 103 points in voting by sports journalists, beating out Michigan's Bo Schembechler, who finished second with 93 points, the Big Ten conference said in a news release.

Ohio State coach John Cooper finished third with 73 points.

Mackovic led Illinois to a second-place finish in the Big Ten this year with a 7-1 conference record and a 9-2 overall record. It was Illinois' best finish since 1984, when the Illini also finished second in the conference.

Mackovic's Illini team relied on a strong passing game and the Big Ten's stiffest defense, allowing opponents only 285.1 yards per game. The team's defense against the pass was fourth in the nation, allowing an average of only 140.5 yards per game.

Last year, Mackovic led the Illini to a 6-4-1 overall record, a 5-2 Big Ten mark and an appearance in the All-American Bowl.

The Big Ten created the Coach of the Year award in 1972.

Women move up in poll despite loss

(AP) — Iowa (4-1), which came close to upsetting Louisiana Tech and overcame a 10-point deficit to down St. Joseph's 76-57 at Ruston, moved from 10th to seventh Monday with 1,174 points in The Associated Press women's basketball poll.

Tennessee widened its first-place lead as four of the top five teams stayed the same.

The 4-0 Vols, who play No. 2 Louisiana Tech in Knoxville Saturday night, received 54 first-place votes and 1,637 points from a nationwide panel of 66 women's coaches after easy weekend wins at Western Michigan and Notre Dame.

Louisiana Tech, also unbeaten, received 12 first-place votes and 1,593 points by holding off Iowa 85-82 in the title game of the Techsters' weekend tournament.

Stanford (2-0), which was idle, was third again with 1,509 points while Georgia (4-0) was fourth again with 1,434 points.

"The thing that's amazing is look at the poll and notice how few teams are still unbeaten after the second weekend," Georgia coach Andy Landers said. "When was the last time we've seen that happen to ranked teams this early?"

There were 14 losses by top 25 teams last week, though many were to each other. One that was not was unranked Providence's 112-111 win over North Carolina State (4-1) in the Friars' tournament title game.

The loss dropped the Wolfpack from fifth to ninth and enabled Auburn, 3-0, to move up to fifth with 1,401 points.

Texas (2-1) jumped to sixth place from No. 11 with 1,219 points after wins over Purdue and Long Beach State, both at home.

"Now, we'll see what happens when we go back on the road," Texas Coach Jody Conradt said.

The Longhorns travel to No. 18 Old Dominion on Friday and then visit Rutgers on Sunday in a game that will be nationally televised on SportsChannel America.

Long Beach State, which fell to 2-1 with the loss to Texas, dropped a spot to eighth with 1,095 points, ahead of North Carolina State, No. 9 with 1,072 points.

Stephen F. Austin, which opened the season with three wins, advanced to 10th with 1,063 points — the first time in eight seasons the Coach Gary Blair's team has been in the top 10.

Purdue's loss dropped the Boilermakers from eighth to 11th after the loss to Texas, although it came back to beat visiting Penn State.

Nevada-Las Vegas also dropped out of the top half of the poll — from ninth to 13th — after losing to Virginia 74-73 in the title game of the Cavaliers' tournament.

The win allowed Virginia to jump three spots from 15th to 12th. And Maryland (3-1), which upset host Old Dominion, moved from 18th to 14th while the Monarchs (3-1) dropped from 16th to 18th.

DePaul's upset of Washington brought the No. 22 Blue Demons into the poll for only the second time. They were last ranked two years ago. Ohio State came in at 24 after upsetting Louisiana St. in the title game of the Buckeyes' tournament.

London newspaper describes gymnast's sojourn

NEW YORK (AP) — Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci's journey to freedom in the West began with a cold, six-hour hike to Hungary, a London newspaper reported.

After Comaneci arrived Friday in New York City and held a brief news conference, the Olympic champion kept out of public sight. Her final U.S. destination was unknown.

Sunday's account in The Mail said Comaneci endured a muddy, nighttime trek through country terrain before reaching the Hungarian border.

"I could not bring anything else with me, not even my precious gold medals or a photograph of my family," she was quoted as saying.

She left without saying goodbye to her parents, she told the newspaper.

"I could tell no one I was escaping," The Mail quoted the 28-year-old Comaneci as saying. "I even had to lie to my brother. I was frightened, of course I was. I was scared of being picked up by the Romanian authorities."

The Mail said it interviewed Comaneci in New York on Saturday night, but the report did not reveal her whereabouts.

Some news reports said she was going to Miami, others speculated her destination was Indianapolis, Houston or Orlando, Fla.

Buckeyes pull hat trick, defeat Hawks at NCAAs

Despite 10 match-point sideouts in the third game, the Iowa volleyball team couldn't pull out a win over Ohio State in first-round action of the NCAA Tournament Friday in Columbus, Ohio.

"We had a chance in the third game, but we just could not win," Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said. "We could sideout but we couldn't score a point."

With the 15-9, 15-6, 15-13 win, the Buckeyes advance to the second round of the tournament next weekend against Illinois in Lincoln, Neb.

"It's real disappointing," junior Barb Willis said. "I think everybody was ready to play. But we were real flat and nothing clicked.

They played real well."

The Buckeyes were led by Big Ten Player of the Year Holly O'Leary with her 19 kills and attack average of .350.

It was an O'Leary kill that finally gave Ohio State the 15-13 win in the final game.

"I definitely thought I should have dug her kill," Willis said. "I saw a hole in the block and was going for the hole instead of the cross-court angle."

Hurricane receiver injured in crash

Bitson expected to miss bowl game

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa receiver Dan Bitson, who helped the Hurricane earn the team's first bowl trip in 13 years, was hospitalized with two broken legs Monday following a head-on collision near the university.

Bitson, who tied a team record this year with 16 touchdown receptions, underwent surgery Monday and was in serious but stable condition, Coach David Rader said.

Authorities spent about 45 minutes Monday morning trying to free Bitson from his car. He was admitted to St. John Medical Center and later transferred to St. Francis Hospital, where the team's doctor practices.

Hospital officials said Bitson had a broken wrist in addition to the broken legs.

"We feel comfortable that there were no head and internal injuries," Rader said. "It's going to take time for him to heal. The guys are really satisfied that Dan's OK."

Tulsa police spokesman Jerry Isaacs said the accident occurred at 8:12 a.m. near the university. He said the police report showed Bitson was westbound on a city street when a car driven by Scott Knobbs, 20, veered into Bitson's lane.

Knobbs was in fair condition at St. John with facial injuries, spokesman Steve Reynolds said.

"We're still trying to determine what caused" Knobbs to veer into the westbound lane, Isaacs said.

Monday's accident came 12 days before Tulsa, 6-5, meets Oregon in the Independence Bowl at Shreveport, La., the Hurricane's first bowl appearance since 1976.

"Dan's a big part of our football team," Rader said. "We may have to change some of our philosophies. There are ideas I don't know if I can answer right now. We'll just have to adjust."

It will be quite an adjustment. Bitson, a 6-foot-2, 185-pound junior from Tulsa, caught 73 passes for 1,425 yards, averaging 19.5 yards a reception.

"He's part of our family, and whenever one of your family gets hurt, it's depressing," quarterback T.J. Rubley said. "He didn't do anything. It just goes to show that you can be taken out anytime."
