One in jail, one dead

While the DI was on vacation, the U.S. invaded Panama and cornered strongman Manuel Noriega into that country's Vatican embassy. Ten days later he surrendered. Now he faces trial in the United States.

Manuel Noriega: Ten days in exile, courtesy of the Pope, weren't enough.

Nicolae Ceausescu: Bloodily murdered Christmas day by his own people.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush's national security adviser and an attorney for Manuel Noriega said Sunday they didn't know what — if any — sensitive U.S. documents could aid the fallen dictator's defense against drug charges, but the lawyer ruled out plea bargaining to prevent their exposure.

"The government chose to bring General Noriega to trial and they shall have their trial," said Frank Rubino, one of several attorneys defending the former Panamanian ruler against U.S. indictments in Miami.

He said he would "absolutely not" plea bargain. Such action normally results in a guilty plea to lesser charges in exchange for information the government can use in other cases.

A plea bargain would prevent a trial and possible release of documents sensitive to national security or embarrassing to the government. The potential threat of documents being released could hamper U.S. prosecutors.

Last week, Bush refused to rule out a plea bargain, although one of his aides indicated Sunday the administration was comfortable with the idea of a trial.

Presidential chief of staff John Sununu, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said the administration wants to make sure Noriega gets a fair trial.

"We ought not to do anything that creates a different category for the defendant once he enters the judicial system," Sununu said in response to a question

Nicolae Ceausescu, one of Europe's most oppressive dictators, met the ire of his countrymen when he was removed from power and executed last month. Now that country is faced with a power vacuum.

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Thousands of anti-Communists marched and prayed Sunday for the martyrs of Romania's bloody revolution, and students rallied in several cities for educational reforms and a greater say in national affairs.

Marchers carried white cloth banners with letters in blood-red paint proclaiming, "The martyrs want liberty and bread." They knelt repeatedly on the ice-covered sidewalks during their slow, half-mile procession.

At sites of particularly heavy fighting, they halted to chant the Lord's Prayer and cross themselves. Many women wore black scarves, and some demonstrators carried lit funeral tapers.

The march was called by the Peasant and Christian Democratic parties to honor those who fell in the battle against loyalist forces of executed Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

The once-banned parties, which have joined forces in preparation for promised elections in April, have warned against a renaissance of the Communist Party, which has been in de facto dissolution since Ceausescu's downfall.

The opposition groups also have expressed concern that the April election date is too soon to allow parties other than the provisional government, the National Salvation Front, sufficient time to

Regennitter requests new trial

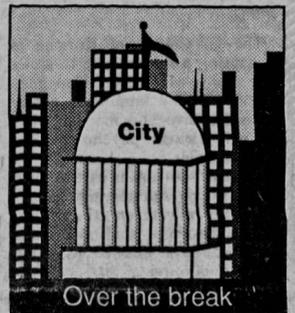

Claims his case should be heard separately

Jean Thilmany
 The Daily Iowan

Former College Street Club owner Larry Regennitter, convicted last month on charges of conspiracy to possess cocaine with the intent to deliver, asked Thursday for a new trial.

Donald Carr and David Grinde, Regennitter's attorneys, filed a motion Thursday in U.S. District Court in Cedar Rapids asking that the drug conviction be set aside or that Regennitter receive a new trial.

Harold Ambrose, 42, of Iowa City, Regennitter, 41, of rural West Branch, and Thomas Vogt, 33, of Cedar Rapids, are currently being held without bond pending sentencing. The three men were arrested in April on federal cocaine charges.

Carr said the motion concerning Regennitter was filed for several reasons, including the facts that the three men were tried together and that Regennitter was convicted only on conspiracy to distribute cocaine, while Ambrose and Vogt were also convicted on a number of other drug-related charges.

"We didn't want to be tried with Ambrose because he had the obstruction of justice charge," Carr said.

Carr said the three men were charged together and were therefore tried together. Although each had filed a motion to sever their charges, U.S. District Judge David Hansen overruled those motions. He added that because of a "spill over" effect, evidence presented against one of the men may have affected jury members' rulings against the other men.

He added that the court also did not allow evidence which should have been presented.

Carr said Hansen may now choose either to have an in-court hearing on whether to grant Regennitter a new trial or may rule in writing on the request. The prosecuting attorneys also have the chance to file a response to the motion.

Bias in Noriega trial concerns int'l law profs

Brian Dick
 The Daily Iowan

Professors of international law from around the country, including one UI faculty member, appealed to the Vatican for assistance before Gen. Manuel Noriega's surrender last week because they claim it will be difficult for him to receive a fair trial in the United States.

Burns Weston, UI professor of law, said finding an impartial jury with which to try the former Panamanian leader would not be impossible but would be "very difficult."

Noriega, who surrendered to U.S. military forces late Wednesday evening in Panama, was flown to Miami and is now awaiting trial on drug trafficking charges.

"We had serious questions as to whether Noriega would get a fair or actual trial," Weston said. "All of us perceive the U.S. fundamentally violated international law."

The Vatican embassy in Panama City harbored Noriega for 10 days under diplomatic protection, and Weston said the joint effort of about 20 colleagues of his in the U.S. was "in effect trying to give (the Vatican in Rome) a way out that was face-saving."

"We regret that he was turned over to the U.S.," Weston added.

Instead of being tried in the United States, Weston suggested Noriega should have been turned over to an international ad hoc body of experts, which could try Noriega not only on drug trafficking charges but on human-rights violations as well.

In their collective letter to Secretary of State of the Vatican State Cardinal Casaroli, Weston and colleagues urged the Vatican "to consider establishing... an international investigative body of distinguished persons publicly known to be of high integrity and

Economist, philosopher, former UI Pres. Bowen dies

The Daily Iowan

Former UI President Howard Rothmann Bowen, 81, of Claremont, Calif., died early Dec. 22, 1989, in his home. His health had been failing in recent months.

Bowen served as the UI's 14th president from 1964 to 1969, having previously been a member of the UI College of Commerce faculty from 1935 to 1942.

During Bowen's tenure, he pursued a Center of Excellence Award from the National Science Foundation, which landed a $6.7 million grant for seven College of Medicine departments. Five of those departments are now located in the Bowen Science Building, named in Bowen's honor in 1981.

Prior to accepting the UI presidency, Bowen was president of Grinnell College for nine years.

The noted economist and educational philosopher was born Oct. 27, 1908, in Spokane, Wash. He was married to Lois Bertine Schilling, who died in August of 1988.

During World War II, Bowen worked for the U.S. Department of Commerce and later was chief economist for the U.S. House of Representatives Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees.

In 1945, he became economist of Irving Trust in New York City. From 1947 to 1952 he was a dean and a professor at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, and from 1952 to 1955 he was a professor of economics at Williams College, Williams, Mass.

After holding the UI presidency, Bowen returned to the classroom as an economics professor at Claremont Graduate School in California. He was named President and Chancellor of Claremont University Center in 1970. Four years later he was named R.

Stanton Avery Professor of Economics there, a position he held for 10 years until retirement.

Bowen received a doctorate degree in commerce and science from the UI in August 1935. He earned a bachelor's and a master's degree from Washington State University in Spokane, Wash.

Survivors include two sons, Peter Bowen of Vail, Colo.; and Thomas Bowen of Fresno, Calif.; and two grandchildren.

The Bowens previously established the Howard and Lois Bowen Fund at the UI Foundation.

Van Allen repair leaves water dirty

The Daily Iowan

A waterpipe-replacement project in Van Allen Hall has caused UI officials to prohibit people from drinking water found on the east side of the building.

Water on the east side may not be safe to drink until the new pipe installation is completed in March, according to Engineering Services project manager Hugh Barry.

"We can't disinfect the new pipes until they are completely installed," Barry said.

Barry said the pipes may get dirty during the installation process.

"We're just taking this extra step to make sure nothing happens," he said.

The project to replace the pipes in the east side of Van Allen Hall began several months ago. Water in the rest of the building will not be affected by the project.

Drug war difficulties

U.S. warships make waves with Latin nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials acknowledged Sunday they have had "some difficulties" with Colombian authorities over plans to deploy U.S. warships near Colombia to help intercept drug smugglers' supply routes.

But national security adviser Brent Scowcroft blamed the problems on "some premature and... probably inaccurate leaks" about U.S. intentions and predicted officials in Colombia and other Latin American nations will come around.

President George Bush himself, jogging after church Sunday, turned aside a question about whether he was positioning the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy off the coast of Colombia to help interdict drug supplies by sea and by air. "I will address myself... to that question at a future date," the president said before an outing on the towpath of the historic C&O Canal above the Georgetown section of Washington.

When a reporter said Colombia doesn't want U.S. warships off its coast, Bush injected, "We don't know all that."

On ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," Scowcroft said "We are looking at ways we might be able to improve interdiction across the Caribbean." However, he said discussions with Colombian authorities have not begun.

"There have been some difficulties," said Scowcroft, who blamed them on "some premature and... probably inaccurate leaks about what we had in mind."

"The term that was in the paper, for example, is 'blockade.' Now, that's a very — that's a warlike, negative term. What we would be doing is — if we did anything down there — would be a cooperative effort in conjunction with the countries there to help get better control of the drug traffickers," said Scowcroft.

"I think it'll work out," he predicted.

Pentagon sources said Saturday the JFK has been chosen to lead an anti-drug interdiction effort off the Colombian coast, but final decisions about when the warship may be put to work have not been made.

The JFK and an accompanying guided missile cruiser, the USS Virginia, left Norfolk, Va., on Thursday for what the Pentagon said were routine training exercises in the Atlantic.

The White House acknowledged December 28 that Bush had instructed the U.S. military to draw up plans for interdicting drug supply routes from South and Central America.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said then the final plans were still being made, but added, "We have

College of Nursing study to focus on self-disclosure by HIV-positive men

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Nursing is instituting a new project to study how males who have tested positive for Human Immunodeficiency Virus perceive and manage their status within psycho-socially oriented fields.

This includes men in careers such as counseling, nursing, psychology, medicine, religion or other "helping professions," said Bob Kus, project director and UI associate professor of nursing.

"These are fields where the practice of self-disclosure is essential to the therapeutic process," he said. "It is used to establish trust and in turn get patients to share themselves."

Twenty HIV-positive males from across the country will be interviewed for the study. The participants will be asked with whom they've shared their HIV status, the factors involved in their decisions to disclose or conceal this status and consequences evolving because of disclosure or concealment, Kus said.

Kus said he hopes the information from this study will establish basic patterns of HIV-positive males in these professions, benefiting not only these people, but their colleagues, clients and the general public.

"Hopefully it will make us all more sensitive to our HIV colleagues," he said.

The study, which is funded by a $2,700 grant from the American Nurses' Foundation, is being conducted to obtain pilot information for a larger study Kus hopes to direct beginning next fall on the same topic.

Persons interested in participating should be HIV-positive males and can contact Kus through the UI College of Nursing, Iowa City, Iowa 52242, or call (319) 626-6263.

New S.D. hog count: More farmer profit?

BROOKINGS, S.D. (AP)—Overreaction is possible due to a report that indicates South Dakota farmers are continuing to keep their hog numbers down, Gene Murra, an economist at South Dakota State University, says.

"The hog and pig report was viewed as very bullish, and all of the futures contracts were up the maximum" after it was released, Murra told the Watertown Public Opinion.

"I'm a little concerned that we might overreact to the hog and pig report. That would be good for producers who use the futures market" but could cause a downward correction in market prices, he said.

Some futures prices might rise above $50 per hundredweight, according to Murra.

"I think most producers can make a profit when the market reaches $50, so there are opportunities to lock in a profit," he said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said last week that as of December 1, there were just over 1.7 million head of hogs and pigs in South Dakota, which was 5 percent less than a year earlier.

Because of negative forecasts for the hog industry, farmers have not added to their herds, Murra said.

"I think in general we weren't expecting very much positive to happen in terms of prices during the latter half of 1989. The forecasts for the fall of 1989 that were made in the spring and summer were fairly low" with prices expected to dip below $40.

Although prices started rising before dropping that low last fall, the forecasts were "discouraging for expansion, and that's what I think happened," the economist said.

Higher market prices since October and the forecast for continued high prices mean the seeds exist for expansion, he said.

School bombing

3 students suspended, face possible charges

DES MOINES (AP)—Three Des Moines Hoover High School students have been suspended indefinitely and likely will face criminal charges in the wake of a fire and a pipe bombing at the school last week, authorities said.

Des Moines school officials said they believe Thursday's pipe bombing in a boys' restroom in the school and Friday's fire in its gymnasium are unrelated incidents.

The suspects' names have not been released, but officials said they have been identified as students at Hoover.

Des Moines police said they obtained a search warrant in connection with the pipe bombing and used it to seize several items Friday night at the home of a 16-year-old. They said the student will appear in juvenile court Monday and could be charged with first-degree arson.

School administrators said another juvenile and an adult are believed responsible for the fire, and police said those two have been referred to the county attorney's office.

The Polk County attorney's office said charges have not been filed

School officials said the pipe bomb caused about $1,000 damage to the restroom, and the gymnasium fire caused damages estimated at a minimum of $100,000. The fire forced cancellation of classes Friday and had crews working throughout the weekend to repair and clean up the gymnasium.

yet but are likely.

School officials said the pipe bomb caused about $1,000 damage to the restroom, and the gymnasium fire caused damages estimated at a minimum of $100,000. The fire forced cancellation of classes Friday and had crews working throughout the weekend to repair and clean up the gymnasium.

Gene Clark, a school spokesman, said engineers had determined the gymnasium roof and structural steel were intact, but wooden planking and seats must be replaced. Officials said classes would resume Monday but the gymnasium would not reopen for at least a few days.

All three students will remain on suspension until district administrators consider their case, and Hoover's administration is recommending that two of the students be expelled.

Mark Horstmeyer, a Des Moines school spokesman, said Hoover's recommendation will be sent to the school district administration.

"A hearing will be held, and a recommendation from that hearing will be sent to the board of education, who will make a decision," he said.

The Crisis Center needs volunteers for both the Crisis Intervention Program and the Food Bank.

Crisis intervention volunteers provide short term counseling, suicide intervention and information and referral. Volunteers in the food bank program are needed for a variety of tasks, including interviewing clients, stocking shelves, sorting produce, doing statistics, and acting as receptionists.

An information and screening meeting will be held on Sunday, January 21. For further information, call the center at 351-0140.

David Green, a 1976 UI graduate, has been appointed assistant director of the UI Alumni Association. He will be responsible for organizing alumni clubs and programs in cities and states west of Des Moines.

A Chicago native, Green obtained a bachelor's degree in general studies from the UI. He worked for two years as an Iowa City police officer and then was assistant coordinator of the Union at the UI before leaving Iowa in 1980.

For the past eight years, Green has held various positions with State Farm Insurance companies in Illinois and Washington, D.C.

Green's wife, Rosalyn, is director of the UI Special Support Services. They have two children.

Doctors, nurses and mental health care workers will learn the latest information on the diagnosis and treatment of depression in a series of workshops to be presented by the UI.

A series of two-day continuing education workshops will be offered at six sites across the state beginning this month, thanks to a $95,703 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

The impetus for the program comes from studies showing that while depression is common, many cases are never recognized and treated, according to Michael O'Hara, UI associate professor of psychology and director of the project. The purpose of the program is to make health care professionals aware of new information on the diagnosis and treatment of depression.

Iowa was chosen as the site for the continuing education program on depression because of concern that people in rural areas may still be suffering from psychological effects of the farm crisis, O'Hara said. But depression is also a common problem among the general public, he added.

The workshop will include 12 hours of instruction presented over two days through lectures and video presentations.

Companies give financial aid to UI students in D.C. program

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

Three UI students were awarded scholarships last semester to help finance their attendance in Washington Center's Fall Semester Internship Program in Washington, D.C.

The certificates were presented to them by Representative Fred Grandy (D-6th district) in his Capitol Hill Office in early November.

Michael Vega, UI senior, was awarded $1,000 by the IBM Corporation. He spent the semester working as an intern in the United States Department of State, Office of Legislative Affairs.

Burlington Northern Railroad awarded UI senior Teresa Reinking a scholarship to contribute to her internship at the Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus.

Kelli Willard, UI senior, received $1,100 from IE Inc. Industries in Cedar Rapids, which helped pay for her housing while she was in Washington. She served her internship at the National Immigration, Refugee and Citizenship Forum and participated in a conference on African and Haitian Refugees as part of her internship.

All interns participating in the Washington Center Program live in an apartment building about one mile from the White House while they work and live in the capitol for a semester, earning credit hours from their university.

"The nice thing about the (Washington Center) program is that they don't cut you loose out there," Vega said.

The Washington Center individualizes the internship by placing students in jobs they are interested in and by assuring that 80 percent of the students' time is spent doing professional, non-clerical work.

Vega said one important option offered by the Washington Center is that students can switch their job placement if they are not happy at their original location.

After being in Washington, D.C., only two weeks, Vega met Secretary of State James Baker and his wife at a reception in the Department of State building.

"Actually I talked to his wife longer than him," Vega said, "She was interested in my experience and a little bit about my background."

One of Vega's responsibilities was to help Department of State witnesses prepare their testimony for congressional hearings.

"(In an administrative agency,) you want to make sure everyone is singing the same song," Vega said. "You want to make sure the administration is providing a unified approach to any policy issue."

Vega said one of the benefits of his internship experience was to be resourceful and to deal with the high-pressure situation of a more than 40-hour work week.

The cultural experience and uniqueness of the city also impressed Vega.

"The currency that makes the difference (in Washington, D.C.) isn't money but the knowledge or information (one possesses)," Vega said. "The most influential people aren't the richest."

UI senior Michael Vega is awarded a $1,000 scholarship to help finance his Washington internship. Awarding the scholarship are William Burke, Lou Durden and Iowa Rep. Fred Grandy.

Vega, a political science major, will graduate in May and plans to attend law school before starting a career overseas in the foreign services.

Willard received a $1,000 stipend, in addition to her scholarship, after being accepted into the Washington Center's Independent Sector Program. The Independent Sector chooses 25 students to intern exclusively in non-profit organizations on the basis of their volunteer and extra-curricular experiences.

Each student in the Independent Sector is awarded a $1,000 stipend.

Willard has participated in the UI marching band, pep band and university band. She is treasurer of Alpha Phi Omega, a philanthropic coed service fraternity which sponsors various volunteer projects.

Willard, a global studies major, will graduate in May and plans to work in the non-profit area of human rights.

Legislature session to be cut short

Prof: Officials to work on positioning for campaign

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Members of the Iowa Legislature, gathering today for the first day of the 1990 session, can expect a shorter session during which no major issues will be debated, according to a UI professor.

The session has been scheduled to adjourn early this year in order to give legislators more time to campaign for the November elections. The legislators hope to wrap up the session by early April.

House Speaker Don Avenson's campaign to win the Democratic gubernatorial nomination is very significant to the workings of the Legislature, according to UI political science professor Peverill Squire.

"With Avenson running for the Democratic nominations, all sides will be looking of the issues in terms of how they will affect the campaign," Squire said. "Basically, this session is going to be legislators positioning themselves for the elections."

Squire said he expects no issue of major importance to come before the legislators and senators this session, although there will be some "important and contentious" debate over issues such as distribution of lottery funds and perhaps abortion.

Although this is the first session in which certain restrictions against abortion are being debated by state legislatures, Squire said that the issue may not even reach the legislative floor for consideration.

"The leadership of both parties, as well as the governor, want to avoid bringing it into the Legislature, although some members want to see it on the floor for debate," he added.

Lottery funding also seems to be a big concern for Iowa legislators, he said.

"They will probably haggle over how to spend the money from the lottery," Squire said.

Iowa legislature resumes

Reapportionment, elections and gubernatorial race make for tough session

DES MOINES (AP) — The pomp and ceremony of a return to the Statehouse will dominate the opening days of the Legislature after leaders formally convene this year's session Monday.

House Speaker Don Avenson and Lt. Gov. JoAnn Zimmerman — rival Democratic gubernatorial candidates — will pound gavels at 10 a.m. to open the second session of the 73rd General Assembly.

It's a Legislature dominated since 1982 by Democrats, who hold a 61-39 edge in the House and a 30-20 margin in the Senate.

With reapportionment looming, a heated gubernatorial primary progressing and legislative election fights shaping up, leaders of both parties predict a tough, but brief, session.

First, however, lawmakers will have to get a few amenities out of the way.

The first order of business will be the swearing in of two new House members and a new Senator.

Since this year's Legislature is the second session of a two-year General Assembly, such details as legislative parking slots and procedural rules are already in place.

That will free lawmakers for the next order of business — meeting in party caucuses to plot election strategy, so they adjourn for the day and attend a reception sponsored by the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce.

The first major event comes Tuesday when Gov. Terry Branstad delivers his Condition of the State speech and budget plan, which will set much of the agenda for debate. He is combining the two as part of a bipartisan effort to speed the session.

"I'm kind of going to give an overview of the decade of the 1980s," Branstad said. "It's going to be more than the traditional state of the state speech."

Branstad has made it clear he will sound an optimistic note after a decade of harsh, farm-based recession that strained state government throughout the 1980s.

"I think there's very good reason to be optimistic," Branstad said. "Iowans were up to the challenge. It was a tough time, it was a time of stress, difficult and challenging. I think Iowans proved they were up to the challenge."

At the same time, he warns that economic growth has its limits, and virtually all of the $200 million in new dollars it is expected to provide is already committed.

Elementary and secondary schools will automatically get $101 million of that, and state workers are due a $65 million pay increase.

By the time the two sides are finished in the spring, they will have written the state's first $3 billion budget.

Those themes — and probably many of the phrases — will be incorporated in Branstad's campaign for a third four-year term, which he is expected to announce formally in March.

"Iowa is on the road for a decade of growth," Branstad said. "As you can see, I'm enthusiastic about the future."

In a rare move, legislators have dispensed with many formalities and gotten a running start of the session.

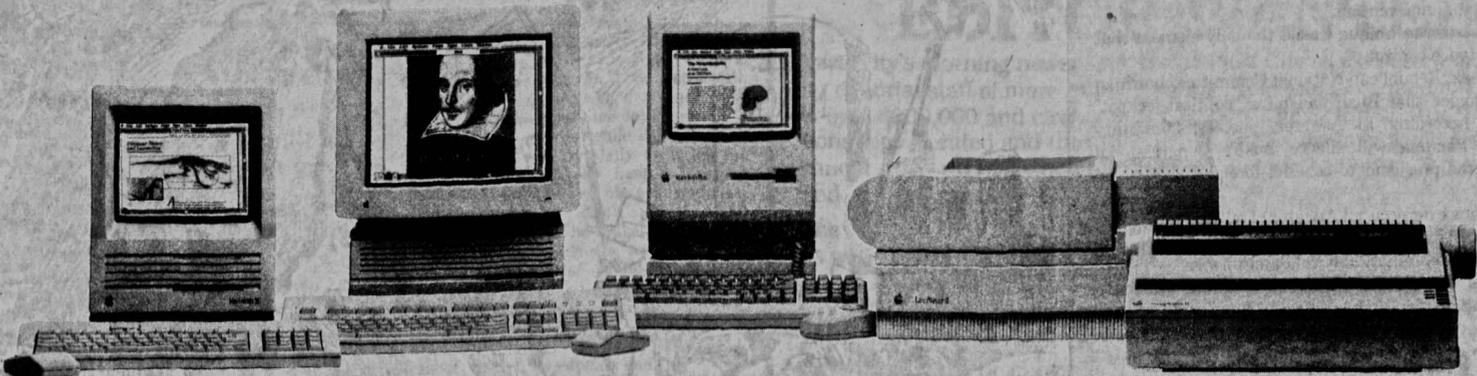

Chief Justice Arthur McGiverin has already delivered his Condition of the Judiciary speech pleading for more money for judges, and the committees that craft the details of the state budget have been meeting for weeks.

"We have, in a bipartisan way, started a new budgeting process," Avenson said. "So far, it has worked very well. The days spent now will abbreviate the session by a week to two weeks at the end."

It's all part of a plan to end this year's Legislature well before it ordinarily would close.

BOSTON RACISM

Cleaning up a city

The suicide of Charles Stuart, one day after he became the prime suspect in the October shooting death of his pregnant wife, virtually guarantees that the full facts of the case will never be learned, much less understood.

But it does leave the racially divided city of Boston with a full investigation in the offing, probably some heads to roll, and much searching of conscience to do.

The death of Carol Stuart horrified the nation. According to her husband, the Stuarts were leaving a natural childbirth class when they were abducted and robbed by a black male. The assailant shot Carol Stuart in the head, wounding her mortally. Charles Stuart sustained a gunshot wound to the stomach.

After the suspect had fled, Charles Stuart called police from his car telephone. A tape of that call was played on nightly newscasts all over the country, and Charles Stuart became, in the words of The New York Times reporter Kirk Johnson, a "national symbol for the horror of urban lawlessness." Carol Stuart's child, delivered by Caesarean, died 17 days later.

It was a ghastly crime to begin with, and one which the public endured with terrifying intimacy. Responding to the outcry, Boston Mayor Ray Flynn called on all off-duty police officers to report for duty, and a dragnet was thrown over the Mission Hill district of Boston.

And so one crime was followed by another: The violation of Boston's black residents on a massive scale, and the selection of a suspect, William Bennett, who was never charged with any crime but was rushed to judgment in the public eye.

Even if Bennett had been the assailant, the Boston Police Department, Office of the District Attorney, and the mayor's office would be guilty of impropriety. Laying siege to a community to flush out one criminal is the stuff of a police state. Doing it because the victim is white and the suspect black compounds the crime with the spirit of a racist lynch mob.

But Bennett, as it now appears, wasn't guilty at all. There was no black assailant. There was only Charles Stuart, banking successfully on the public's willingness to believe the word of a white man that a black man had killed his wife and unborn child.

City officials from the city council to the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office have vigorously denied that racism played a part in their zeal to flush out a suspect in Mission Hill. They blame the media, who prematurely named Bennett as a suspect, and press leaks in the police department.

Certainly members of the media must bear some of the responsibility for incautious reporting. They didn't question Stuart's story closely enough. They believed what they were told. They failed, in short, to do their jobs.

That does not address the original sin, however, which was both Stuart's and everybody's. He almost got away with murder, as Tawana Brawley almost got away with her monstrous hoax, because racism thrives and controls public expectation. The public hears of a black woman abducted and raped by a gang of white men, and they believe it unquestioningly, because such things happen; the public hears of a white couple senselessly shot down on the edge of a black neighborhood, and they instantly convict a black man in their minds, because that is the easiest thing to think.

PANAMA INVASION

No jackpot

Operation Just Cause completed its principle objective last week with the surrender of ousted Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega to U.S. forces in Panama City. The U.S. has now accomplished all of the mission's stated goals, but the operation has also sparked two unnecessary embarrassments for President George Bush.

In terms of both strategic foreign policy goals and public support, the use of U.S. military force to remove Noriega was successful. At a Friday press conference, however, Bush was busy smoothing over incidents that made his use of military power appear callous and calculated.

Bush was upset by the use of split-screen techniques by several networks that juxtaposed a poorly timed presidential news conference with simultaneous coverage of the arrival of the bodies of four Americans killed in action. Unaware that the somber arrival ceremony was progressing in silence on split-screen, Bush made several "frivolous comments" that made him seem uncharacteristically insensitive to the grave repercussions of the intervention.

But the split-screen technique wasn't the only element that escaped White House control.

Earlier last week, Republican National Committee chairman Lee Atwater bragged that Bush had hit a "political jackpot" with Panama. According to Atwater, successful military intervention in Panama will silence Bush's Congressional critics and free the president to conduct foreign policy as he sees fit.

While no one has ever accused Atwater of putting tact before politics, his discussion of what Bush would gain politically from the invasion was remarkably cold and unwise.

Obviously, the success of the Panama operation will have positive ramifications for Bush politically. But openly analyzing a mission that cost many lives in terms of popularity polls and Congressional leverage wrongly suggests that the president was more concerned with engineering a political boost than accomplishing the critical strategic goals of the intervention.

Not everyone can be president

Tonight at nine on public television there will air a 90-minute special that you can bet I won't be watching.

The program is "A Gathering of Men," and according to the show's producer and host, the erudite Bill Moyers, the purpose of the program is "to understand what is singular in our roles and to come to terms with our emotions in a way that will affirm the positive side of what it means to be a man today."

I can't imagine what "the positive side" of being a man today could possibly be, beyond the fact that we don't have to shave our legs, but Moyers evidently thinks he can find it. But instead of proceeding by interviewing the usual insensitive male suspects — athletes, truck drivers, rock-and-roll stars and other manifestations of the male affliction — Moyers will be speaking to the sage and sensitive poet Robert Bly.

"The primary experience of the American man now," Bly explains to Moyers as if it's some sort of revelation, "is the experience of being inadequate. In your work, you can't achieve what you want to. ... You feel inadequate as a husband because your wife is always saying you don't talk about your feelings enough, and you don't know what your feelings are."

I, for one, am an inadequate male who doesn't talk about my feelings — not because I don't know what my feelings are but precisely because I do. I feel that I got robbed.

Through whatever magic involved in DNA or RNA or whatever NA determines gender, I was born male. More troubling than that, I was born a white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant, American male. You can't get any more white bread than me.

J.L. McClure

For those of you fortunate not to have been born a white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant, American male, let me explain the burden of the anyone-can-grow-up-to-be-president myth.

From the first day I toddled off to nursery school, until that proud moment when I tripped on the stage stairs en route to receive my high-school diploma, it was drummed into my consciousness that I had been born in a country so wonderfully full of opportunity that "anyone can grow up to be president."

Of course, not all of my schoolmates were, like me, white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant, American males. Probably a good half of them were female. And maybe one-fourth of them were black. And my two best friends, Chris Christian and Gary Matassarini, were Greek Orthodox and Jewish, respectively. We enjoyed a fairly broad mix of both gender and culture.

However, even though the teachers spoke generally to all of us

when they celebrated the notion that in America "anyone can grow up to be president," we knew that "anyone" meant only those of us who were white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant and, most important, male.

I can't recall that anybody ever came out and actually spoke that truth, but no one had to. It was right there in our history books. Every president's name we had to memorize was definitely white and male, most were Anglo-Saxon and only one was not Protestant, and that was John F. Kennedy, who could be excused because he at least promised that he wouldn't be Catholic while he was president.

Probably because this presidential motto was so insistently a part of my educational development, sometime early on the idea of becoming president shifted in my mind from opportunity to promise. I simply assumed that I would someday become president.

Whenever some adult would ask me what I was going to be when I grew up, I would answer with absolute certainty, "I'm going to be president." And I was reinforced in my delusion by a hearty "Good for you!" in response, as if that was all there was to it.

Not until I went to college and came under the influence of the more liberal, even radical, teachers there did I finally learn that beyond the basic requirements of whiteness, maleness, and an Anglo-Saxon/Protestant ancestry, the President of the United States must also be either obscenely wealthy or under the influence of those who are. I discovered that the primary function of the office of president, unstated in the Constitution but entrenched by tradition, is to keep the wealth of the country where it belongs — with the already wealthy.

It was a bitter lesson, better learned late than never, I guess. But from that moment, I have felt helplessly inadequate. I went through a midlife career crisis when I was only 18 and still haven't recovered from it. I don't need a poet to tell me what I already know.

So you won't find me watching "A Gathering of Men" tonight. Instead, I'll be among my own gathering of inadequate male cohorts, sitting on a bar stool drinking beer and watching the Michigan-Indiana game on ESPN.

prepare. The Front's chairman and interim president, Ion Iliescu, said late Saturday they could be postponed, the national Rompres news agency reported.

The Peasant and Christian Democratic parties also have accused the Front, which includes several former Communists, of being a front for communism. Those fears were in evidence Sunday.

"They are calling for a new Communist Party," said Constantin Dimitriu, alluding to tentative calls by some Communists to reform as a Democratic Socialist Party. "We say to that — the wolf has changed its fur but not its morals."

Less than two miles away, about 2,500 students met for a rally at the Polytechnical Institute to press for reform of Ceausescu's heavily indoctrinated education system.

Students read an 11-point program addressed to Premier Petre Roman, demanding autonomy for universities, more student say in determining the curriculum and postponement of examinations scheduled for January 25.

"We believe the prime minister will listen to our opinions because he, too, is one of us," Bogdan Constantinescu, a mechanical engineering student, told the cheering crowd.

Roman previously taught hydraulic engineering at a university before his appointment last month as government head.

"We don't want to waste time on subjects such as political economy ... (and) Marxism — instead we should be able to choose the subjects we want to take," Constantinescu said.

During Ceausescu's 24-year reign, all students were required to take political subjects extolling the virtues of "scientific socialism."

Slogans reading "Freedom to the Students," "No Politics," and "University Autonomy," were draped across the rally hall, where Constantinescu announced the formation of a free students trade union. It will press student demands within Romania's newly established free trade union federation.

Razvan Rusovici, a 21-year-old aeronautical engineering student, expressed hope for the future. "We want to be more like our Western brothers, and study what we really need and not what some ignorant dictator imagines we need," he said.

Thousands of other students held gatherings in Braila and Galatia, about 120 miles northeast of the capital, and in Timisoara, the cradle of the revolution, about 300 miles northwest of Bucharest.

Nicolae Costel, an official of the Christian Democratic Party, described the pro-democracy demonstrations as among the most widespread since Ceausescu's overthrow December 22 and execution three days later. Costel said in an interview that the rallies outside Bucharest were called to demand greater student representation on the National Salvation Front.

The Front has decided to run on a democratic platform in the elections, despite initially saying it would not field candidates.

Sunday's newspapers continued attempts to determine what happened to the bodies of hundreds of protesters believed killed December 16-17 by pro-Ceausescu armed units in Timisoara, site of the first major demonstrations against Ceausescu.

Romania Libera, in an article headlined "Where are the dead people from Timisoara?" said most of the bodies were missing, including 70 bodies in the Timisoara Departmental Hospital morgue it said had disappeared after being loaded onto refrigerated trucks. The paper quoted Lorin Furuta, president of the Timisoara council of the National Salvation Front, as saying he is convinced that many bodies were taken to Bucharest and cremated.

Foreign Minister Sergiu Celac told visiting Helsinki Watch representatives he was disappointed that the U.S. government was so slow in responding to Romania's situation, said Gary Laber, executive director of the U.S.-based human rights organization, on Sunday.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze visited Saturday, and French Premier Roland Dumas and West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher are scheduled to visit this month. But despite considerable food and medical assistance from the United States, the highest-ranking U.S. official to visit so far has been Rep. Frank Wolf (R-Va.)

Noriega Charges

Manuel Antonio Noriega could receive up to 145 years in prison and more than $1.1 million in fines if convicted of all charges returned by a Miami grand jury.

The Miami indictment charges Noriega with 12 counts of conspiracy, racketeering, importing drugs and traveling to further the conspiracy.

Specifically, it accuses him of:

- Accepting a $4.6 million bribe from Colombia's Medellin drug cartel to protect shipments of cocaine, launder money, supply drug laboratories and shield drug traffickers from the law.
- Allowing smugglers to use Panama as a way station for U.S.-bound cocaine.
- Utilizing his official positions both before and after he took power in 1983 to provide protection for international criminal narcotics traffickers.
- Arranging for the shipment of cocaine processing chemicals, including those seized by Panamanian police.
- Laundering cartel narcotics proceeds in Panamanian banks.
- Allowing cartel leaders to shift operations to Panama to escape a crackdown in Colombia after the assassination of that country's anti-drug minister of justice.
- Traveling to Havana so Cuban President Fidel Castro could mediate a dispute with the Medellin cartel after Panamanian troops seized a drug laboratory that Noriega had been paid to protect.
- A grand jury in Tampa also indicted Noriega on three counts of marijuana trafficking. That indictment alleges he attempted to import more than 1.4 million pounds of marijuana into the United States and accepted a $1 million bribe from drug dealers for allowing them to smuggle drugs and launder cash in Panama.

about plea bargaining.

Rubino, appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," said he hadn't started looking for federal records of U.S. involvement with Noriega that would clear his client, saying it would be "speculation" to discuss what might exist.

"One thing I have never done in 16 years of practicing law is to guess what may happen," he said.

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, also on the ABC program, said the government would not try to block release of documents simply because they could be embarrassing to the White House.

But he said he didn't know if any documents existed relevant to the case that might be injurious to national security.

"As far as I know there aren't any," said Scowcroft. "You had the attorney general saying he didn't anticipate any problems of that character. I don't know whether the files have been searched to the ultimate."

He emphasized that the case against Noriega was based on drug trafficking.

"That's a fairly narrow part of his whole relationship with the United States," said Scowcroft.

Noriega, while a student at the military academy in Peru in the 1950s, began providing intelligence information about Latin America to the U.S. government.

Questions about Noriega's drug dealing began while Richard Nixon was president, and have arisen repeatedly through both Republican and Democratic administrations ever since.

However, Noriega's usefulness as an intelligence source always appeared to overshadow the suspected drug dealing, and no action was taken until the recent indictments.

Rubino said he would argue that the case should be dismissed on grounds that Noriega could not get a fair trial in the United States.

"Pretrial publicity is amazing in the amount," the attorney said. "Not only the amount but the type of publicity."

"The president of the United States said he was a thug and purveyor of drugs to children," Rubino said. "Obviously, how can someone strike that from their mind and give this man a fair trial?"

Rubino said he also would argue that the case should be dismissed because Noriega was "maximum leader" of Panama when he was seized and therefore should be immune from a U.S. prosecution as head of state in a foreign country.

As for possible similar use of U.S. force against other unfriendly leaders in other countries, Scowcroft said Panama was unique.

"I would not say this is a precedent for any other action," he said. "I would not draw conclusions from it."

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger concurred when asked on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" about possible similar action against Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

"I think it would be highly unlikely that we would act in Nicaragua in the way we acted in Panama," Eagleburger said. "The Panama situation is a very specific case which depended upon a number of circumstances at the time."

fair-mindedness ... designed to perform a grand jury-type function.

"Such an international criminal court system does not currently exist, and Weston said if it were established, its functions would be "akin to the proceedings at Nuremberg following World War II."

University of Illinois law professor Francis Boyle added that according to the 3rd Geneva convention of 1949, Noriega is entitled to be treated as a prisoner of war.

"The U.S. government has ignored this fact and has breached the Geneva Convention," Boyle said.

In light of the United States' initial judicial misstep, the trial is "going to be downhill from here," Boyle said.

"Whatever you think of Panama or the invasion, (Noriega) is not going to get a fair trial," Boyle said.

Boyle, who has been involved in numerous international trials including the Iran-Contra affair, said the people who drafted the letter to the Vatican represent members of the international law profession who have been willing to depart from the U.S. government's traditional party line.

"It's a case of lining up the usual suspects," Boyle said. "There aren't too many U.S. law professors willing to say what the United States government did was wrong."

But for now, finding an impartial jury is only one of the concerns of the U.S. Justice Department, West-ton said.

"It would be hard to have a fair trial in Florida with its fairly large Panamanian exile community," he said. "The justice department could move the trial to another jurisdiction, but exactly where they'd try him, I don't know."

In bringing Noriega to the United States to stand trial on drug charges, Weston also said he didn't know if Noriega would be extradited to Panama to face charges on human-rights violations.

"Presumably, he has to be punished. He's not going to get the death sentence, but there is the possibility that he could be paroled," Weston said. "The business of getting him back to Panama is going to a very difficult matter."

The New York Times reported in Sunday's editions that officials in Colombia were balking at the stationing of U.S. vessels off its coast and had refused to meet last week with an American team sent to explain the plan.

The Times said the Pentagon wants to put ground-based radar in the mountains of Colombia and Peru, to be run by U.S. and military officers from those countries.

The U.S. invasion of Panama on December 20 to topple dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega has rekindled old fears in Latin America about U.S. intervention in the region.

Afterwards, while Barbara Bush went for her daily swim in the White House's heated, outdoor pool, Bush and his younger sister drove to the C&O Canal where she walked and he walked and jogged.

"Three-mile run, two-mile walk," Bush boasted as he finished his nearly hour-long regimen beside the nearly frozen canal. He was clad against the 39-degree chill in a blue Houston Astros baseball jacket, sweatpants and cap.

Weather threatens Shuttle countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA officials decided Sunday to continue the countdown toward a launch of space shuttle Columbia today, although forecasters gave only 1-in-5 odds that the weather will permit it.

"There is a chance, and we'd like to be ready to take that chance," said William Lenoir, the head of NASA's space flight program. As long as there was more than a zero possibility for liftoff today, he said, the shuttle's huge fuel tanks would be filled beginning late Sunday.

"There is a 20-percent chance we will get off," Lenoir told reporters. "We've all been here often enough to know that what is predicted does not always happen, and sometimes good things happen when bad is predicted."

The Kennedy Space Center has been socked in by fog for several days.

Trident program faces opposition

WASHINGTON — The Trident submarine program is sailing into rough seas in 1990 with the Pentagon considering halving the production rate, and with congressional critics poised to divert its funding into a peace dividend.

The program is a key element in the nation's three-pronged nuclear defense system. Each submarine, armed with 192 nuclear warheads, costs $1.2 billion — money that critics contend could be spent on domestic programs or on reducing the federal deficit.

Opponents argue that the 17 Tridents already in the water or under construction are enough to hold up the seagoing leg of the nuclear triad of missiles, bombers and submarines. Those arguments are expected to return to Congress with renewed energy at the end of January when the debate on next year's federal budget begins.

Police protect crumbling Berlin Wall

WEST BERLIN — Tourists have chiseled so many souvenirs out of the Berlin Wall that some sections are in danger of collapsing, and police have had to cordon off one especially hard-hit area near the Brandenburg Gate.

The East German government plans to eventually tear down the entire wall and replace it with normal border markings, President Manfred Gerlach disclosed in an interview last week. But free-lance demolition work has already proceeded on the 100-mile border barrier, especially on the West Berlin side.

West Berlin police, citing danger of collapse, put up crowd-control barriers Saturday around the most damaged sections to keep adults and children from climbing inside giant holes carved out of a double-walled segment.

Actor dies after fight with AIDS

LONDON — Actor Ian Charleson, who starred in the film "Chariots of Fire" as an Olympic runner whose religious faith took precedence over his desire to compete, has died of complications from AIDS, his agent said Sunday. He was 40.

The Scottish actor, who recently played "Hamlet" at London's National Theater, died at his home in London on Saturday evening "following a courageous struggle with the AIDS virus," Michael Whitehall said. He said the cause of death was septicemia, a disease caused by microorganisms in the blood.

Charleson, who received critical praise for a series of stage roles, achieved international fame in the 1981 film "Chariots of Fire" in which he played Eric Liddell, a Scottish missionary and runner who refused to compete on a Sunday. The film won the Academy Award for best picture.

Mark Fisher, an opposition Labor Party spokesman on the arts, said his widely acclaimed performance as Hamlet "indicated that an enormous career lay ahead of him. This is a terrible tragedy for the British theater."

Lundgren arrested for killings; police find cache of weapons

NATIONAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Federal agents Sunday arrested a religious cult leader wanted in the slayings of a family of five, and numerous weapons were seized, including an AR-15 assault rifle, authorities said.

Jeffrey Lundgren, 39, a former Sunday school teacher and tour guide in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was arrested outside a motel here by agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and members of the San Diego Sheriff's Department.

Also arrested were his wife, Alice Lundgren, and their 19-year-old son, Damon. Three other Lundgren children — Kristen, 10, Caleb, 9, and Jason, 15 — were taken into protective custody, said Andrew Vita, special agent in charge of the ATF office in Los Angeles.

Officials say Lundgren broke away from the church and persuaded other members to follow him. The group lived on a 15-acre farm near Kirtland, Ohio, where investigators last week unearthed five bodies, which authorities believe to be those of Dennis Avery, his wife, Cheryl, and their three children.

Nurse's aide goes to trial for murder

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — A slightly built former nurse's aide goes on trial today for first-degree murder in the death of one of seven elderly patients he's alternately confessed to and denied killing.

Lawyers will begin today with jury selection for Jeffery Feltner's trial. If convicted, Feltner could go to the electric chair.

Feltner, 27, stands 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs barely 100 pounds. When he made anonymous phone calls to officials saying the seven patients did not die of natural causes but were strangled, some people didn't believe his tale.

Although investigators were initially skeptical, authorities now say they believe Feltner asphyxiated the seven patients over an 18-month period to ease their suffering.

The trial will look only at the death of Sara Abrams, 75, at New Life Acres nursing home in Melrose on Feb. 10, 1988. Feltner also faces a murder charge in Volusia County for the July 11, 1989, death of Doris Moriarty, 83, at Clyatt Memorial Center in Daytona Beach.

Prosecutors say they are continuing their investigation of the remaining five deaths: four at New Life Acres from February 7 to April 6, 1988, and one at Bowman's Nursing Center in Ormond Beach on July 27, 1989.

In June 1988, Feltner anonymously called a Gainesville television station and a mental-health crisis center and told them he had killed five patients.

But when questioned by detectives, Feltner denied it.

He eventually pleaded guilty to making harassing phone calls, trespassing and making a false statement. He served a 127-day sentence and was freed Nov. 19, 1988.

Owners, 5 others escape unharmed

CLAYTON, Ala. (AP) — Fire swept through a private foster home in a rural area early Sunday, killing a 66-year-old woman and six children placed there by state welfare authorities, officials said.

Barbour County Coroner David Childs said the owners of the house, Robert and Lois Mitchell, escaped the 2 a.m. blaze uninjured, as did their three children and two other foster children.

Alabama Fire Marshal John Robinson said the cause of the fire that destroyed the large one-story house near the Bakerhill community was not immediately known. An investigation was continuing, he said.

Childs said Lois Mitchell told him she thought the fire started in an area around the hot water heater, adding that the home was not being heated. The victims' bodies were badly burned and would be sent to a state forensics laboratory, he said.

The fire was initially reported as a possible explosion, but Childs said there was none.

He identified the children killed in the fire — two girls and four boys — as Kimberly Gilbert, 8; her brother Jessie, 10; Kimberly Walker, 5; and her brothers Larry, 10; Jessie, 7; and Marketta, 4.

The seventh victim was Florene Burgess, 66. The Mitchells had taken her in "just out of the goodness of their hearts," Childs said.

The children who died in the fire had been assigned to the home, one of 4,000 private foster homes in the state, by the state Department of Human Resources, he said.

He said initial reports from the scene indicated the Mitchell home may not have had detectors, but Mike Gibson, a spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources, said he understood there were detectors there. All private foster homes in the state are inspected before they are certified, he said.

E. German coalition separates

WEST BERLIN (AP) — A coalition created by six East German reform movements to challenge the Communists crumbled Sunday just three days after being formed, underscoring the difficulties pro-democracy forces face in May elections.

While Communist Party leader Gregor Gysi kicked off his party's campaign in Potsdam, one of the pro-democracy groups announced it was leaving the coalition, and the largest group said it preferred to run candidates independently.

The Communist Party has been stripped of its constitutional mandate to rule and has been tarnished by corruption scandals, but the lack of a credible alternative has left it in control of the government and better positioned for the election than the fractured opposition.

Massive street demonstrations and the exodus of thousands forced the Communists to grant historic concessions last year, including the promise of free elections May 6.

Dozens of citizens' groups pressing for social, political, environmental and economic reforms have sprung up since the October 18 removal of Communist leader Erich Honecker and the nation's turn toward democracy.

Social Democratic leader Steffen Reiche said Thursday his party had joined with New Forum, Democratic Awakening, Democracy Now, the Initiative for Peace and Human Rights and the United Left to form Election Alliance 90.

But the United Left announced Sunday it had withdrawn from the coalition, telling East Germany's official ADN news agency that the group had been "misleadingly presented" in the announcement Thursday.

Bernd Gehrkes of United Left said his group was open to other alliances "if suitable common policies can be worked out."

New Forum, the largest of the pro-reform groups with more than 200,000 members throughout East Germany, held a strategy congress in Leipzig over the weekend and announced its union with the other groups was limited.

The 150 New Forum delegates said the election of individual, independent candidates was preferable to voting for political parties or alliances, and that New Forum candidates would rather run alone. Regulations on campaigning and balloting are to be set out under a new election law, a draft of which is expected to be published before Parliament meets Thursday.

Differences among opposition groups also have become apparent during the weekly negotiations among the various reform movements, the Communists and other political parties.

The confrontation between the fractured opposition groups and the Communists could result in collapse of the talks and further destabilization of Premier Hans Modrow's transitional government.

The talks began December 7 to provide a forum for drafting reforms and airing the views of citizens' groups that have no representation in the government.

Bulgarians protest ethnic decision

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Demonstrators protesting the restoration of ethnic and religious rights to the Turkish minority on Sunday shouted down Communist officials and demanded they resign.

"Bulgaria — a one-nationality country," read banners carried by some of the 10,000 ethnic Slavs who rallied outside Alexander Nevski Cathedral.

Standing in zero-degree weather, the protesters booed, hissed or chanted "Resignation! Resignation!" as Premier Georgi Atanasov and Interior Minister Atanas Semerdzhiev tried to address them.

In an apparent attempt to appease the protesters, Atanasov said Bulgarian would remain the official language. But both his and Semerdzhiev's speeches were drowned out.

"A hard time will befall the country whose people is divided," the official Bulgarian news agency BTA quoted Semerdzhiev as saying. He appealed to the crowd not to undermine "the tendencies towards democracy in the country."

The demonstrators were demanding the repeal of a December 29 order allowing Bulgaria's 1.5 million ethnic Turks and Moslems to use their Moslem names and practice their religion without restrictions.

That decision reversed the assimilation policy introduced by ousted Communist leader Todor Zhivkov, who forced ethnic Turks to change their names to Bulgarian ones and barred them from speaking Turkish in public.

Nationalists among the Slav majority fear the Turkish minority is growing too fast and poses a threat to the country of nearly 9 million.

BTA said residents from the southern town of Kardzhali, where almost half the 50,000 inhabitants are ethnic Turks, said Turkish flags had been seen on public buildings.

Atanasov, in a television address Sunday, said it was "inadmissible to raise the flag of a foreign state at demonstrations and rallies in public and private places."

He said the interior minister had been told to maintain public peace and "neutralize any anti-constitutional and extremist acts under the framework of law." He did not elaborate.

In an evening radio broadcast, Parliament President Stanko Todorov proposed a seven-day "social forum" to open Monday and to discuss "several aspects of the national question."

Todorov invited representatives of the Bulgarian and Turkish-speaking populations from north-eastern and southern regions to join the forum.

Computer 'worm' creator goes to trial

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A graduate student charged with crippling a national computer network goes to court this week, and win or lose, his showcase federal trial will mean more stringent computer security laws, say industry experts.

Robert T. Morris Jr., 24, of Arnold, Md., a graduate student suspended from Cornell University, is the first person to be tried criminally under the 1986 federal Computer Fraud and Abuse Act. Jury selection begins today.

Morris is accused of designing and setting loose in 1988 a rogue program that replicated itself, mobilizing an estimated 6,000 computers linked to a research network, including computers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility at Moffett Field, Calif., and at the Air Force Logistics Command at Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio.

The program was originally described as a computer "virus," but experts said it was more properly called a "worm," which unlike a virus does not need to be in a host program to duplicate itself.

Morris, a first-year doctoral student in computer studies, has never admitted creating the worm or introducing it into the Internet system. But a Cornell commission concluded Morris created the program and was guilty of "reckless disregard" in doing so.

Morris, whose father is chief scientist at the government's National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md., faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted.

"It's a no-lose situation because the trial will showcase the weaknesses of computer security and current computer security law," said Harold Highland, professor emeritus of computer science at the State University of New York and editor of Computers & Security, a trade journal.

If the government loses, he said, computer security advocates "will say there is a need for stronger laws. If the government wins, they'll say he did it because the system is weak and we need to tighten up the system."

Christopher Breceda of American Computer Security Industries Inc., a Nashville, Tenn., maker of security systems, agreed.

"Either way it goes, the pure attention is going to fuel the cry for tougher laws and better security," he said. "Whether Morris is convicted or not, we win."

The 3-year-old federal law makes it a felony to "intentionally access a federal interest computer without authorization and alter, destroy or damage information" or "prevent access" to such computers.

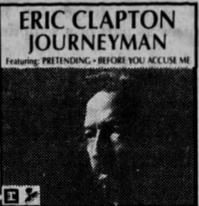

The law applies only to U.S. government computers, computers of financial institutions and networks covering more than one state.

Joseph Tompkins Jr., chairman of the American Bar Association's Task Force on Computer Crime, is one of numerous computer crime specialists who have appeared before Congress to urge passage of an even stronger law.

Artist aborts scheduled rat-smashing

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — An artist called off his plan to squash a rat between two canvases Saturday when the 55-pound concrete block he intended to use was missing. Angry onlookers chased him from the scene.

Rick Gibson of Vancouver told a crowd of about 300 people that had gathered for his stunt that someone — he believed animal-rights activists — had stolen his concrete block after he loaded it onto a truck at his home earlier Saturday.

He said he had taken "Sniffy the Rat" back to the pet store where he had bought him and had no plans to try to re-stage the event. Sniffy probably will be eaten by a snake — the reason he was kept at the store, Gibson said.

Gibson then suggested that the crowd in front of the Vancouver Public Library disperse. Some onlookers then rushed toward him and chased him to a nearby hotel.

"Where did the bastard go?" cried one woman. At the hotel, Gibson could be heard telling another to "Let me go!"

Animal-rights activists earlier had tried to have the event declared illegal. But the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had said there was nothing illegal about killing Sniffy, provided he died a quick and painless death.

Before the event, Gibson had said Sniffy's remains would create a "thought-provoking dip-tych."

Gibson created a stir in London in 1987 when he made earrings out of two dehydrated human fetuses as part of a sculpture.

Moving to Vancouver earlier this year, Gibson was prevented from staging an artistic act of cannibalism when police closed his gallery show that featured part of a human testicle

UI alumna Pryor receives motion picture fellowship

IOWA CITY — Deborah Pryor, a graduate of the UI Department of Theatre Arts, is one of the winners of the 1989 Don and Gee Nichol Fellowship in Screenwriting from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Pryor was one of five winners from among more than 1,400 entrants who were awarded cash prizes of $20,000 each. The awards were presented by actors Jack Lemmon and Eva Marie Saint at a ceremony December 7 in Los Angeles. Pryor, who received an MFA in Playwriting from the UI in 1980, won for her screenplay "Briar Patch."

"This is an opportunity for me," Pryor said. "I've written a number of plays and had stage productions, but this was my first experience in screenwriting. It's an introduction into a new world for me that I don't really know yet. It's like a peek in the door."

She explained that she will have an obligation to complete another script. "The purpose of the award is to support work on new scripts," she said. "They want to know you are very serious about screenwriting. I'm expected to send in some new work when I get the quarterly checks (from the award), so that will give me a lot of motivation to keep working."

Pryor also said winning the award had brought her script to the attention of a number of potential producers in Hollywood.

Soviets stage protests, strikes for purchase of imported VCRs

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of people clamoring to buy imported VCRs surrounded stores in a Russian city for five days, and some even staged a hunger strike and protests demanding the chance to buy the precious goods, a newspaper said Sunday.

It was the latest show of discontent among Soviets, who are deprived of many consumer goods.

The newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya described the incident in the Russian city of Yaroslavl as a "video uprising."

The disturbance began when word went out that imported VCRs for workers who had earned foreign currency had been delivered to a store in Yaroslavl, an industrial city about 125 miles northeast of Moscow.

About 200 people immediately surrounded the store and sat through the night, demanding they be given the chance to buy the VCRs as well.

At dawn of the fourth day, the angry residents launched a protest on the central town square. Eventually, city authorities persuaded the workers who were to receive the VCRs to share some of their spoils with the public.

But when the store at the center of the turmoil did not immediately begin selling some of its 158 VCRs to all customers the next day, a group of citizens declared a hunger strike.

Finally, after five days of turmoil, a happy buyer walked out of the store with the first VCR, called the local TV station and declared: "Victory! The Panasonic is in my hands!"

Sovietskaya Rossiya said this was the first time in Yaroslavl history that videocassette recorders were sold freely to the public.

Traditionally, imported electronic goods have been quietly distributed only to the party and government elite or sold on the black market, where a VCR can cost as much as $6,400.

These days, under the Kremlin's economic reforms, factories that earn foreign currency are generally allowed to decide for themselves how to spend it, and they frequently buy Western consumer goods for their workers.

Residents of the central Russian city of Sverdlovsk took their frustration to the streets in similar unrest December 29, when a crowd upset by the shortage of vodka gathered downtown and halted city transport.

Arthur Kennedy

Arthur Kennedy, award nominee, dies of cancer

BRANFORD, Conn. (AP) — Character actor Arthur Kennedy, a five-time Academy Award nominee who won a Tony Award for his stage portrayal of Biff in "Death of a Salesman," died of cancer, a family friend said Saturday. He was 75.

Kennedy died Friday night at a Branford hospice, where he was admitted in October, said Allan Nixon, a longtime friend.

Kennedy was at home on both stage and screen, and among his most memorable roles was the crusty foreign correspondent Jackson Bentley in the 1962 film classic "Lawrence of Arabia."

Kennedy was nominated five times for Academy Awards, but he never won. He earned a Tony in the Broadway production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" and a New York Film Critics Award for best actor in the 1951 movie "Bright Victory," Nixon said.

Born John Arthur Kennedy on Feb. 17, 1914, in Worcester, Mass., Kennedy attended the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh. He was brought to Hollywood by James Cagney, who saw him perform on stage in Los Angeles. He made his film debut in 1940 as the prodigy brother for whom Cagney sacrifices all in "City for Conquest."

Kennedy worked with Ronald Reagan at Warner Bros. Inc. during World War II, appearing with Reagan and Errol Flynn in the 1942 film "Desperate Journey." Among his other film credits were "The Glass Menagerie," "Peyton Place," "Elmer Gantry" and "High Sierra."

Kennedy received Academy Award nominations for his film appearances in "Champion" (1949), "Peyton Place" (1957), "Some Came Running" (1959), "Trial" (1955) and "Bright Victory" (1951).

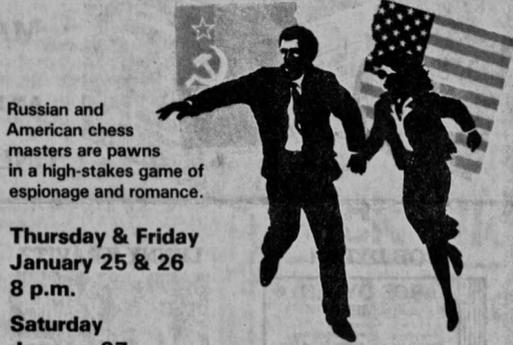

Kennedy once told reporters he did not have much interest in contemporary films and did not admire the actors of today, although his daughter, Laurie Kennedy, works as an actress in New York.

"I think they're accomplishing nothing, playing the same part over and over again, generally speaking," Kennedy said. "It has nothing to do with acting, and it doesn't add up to much. They don't gamble with their careers."

Kennedy, who is survived by his daughter, was to be buried alongside his late wife, Mary, at his farm in Nova Scotia, Nixon said.

Oilers oust colorful coach, begin search for successor

Jerry Glanville

HOUSTON (AP) — Jerry Glanville, the man in black, is gone. He packed away his Elvis tapes, jumped into his vintage Mercury called the "James Dean Special" and screamed away from his job as Houston Oilers head coach.

Houston general manager Mike Holovak, the reason for part of Glanville's unhappiness, stood quietly in the back of the room as owner Bud Adams announced Glanville's departure late Saturday.

Holovak hopes, above all, Glanville's successor won't draw as much attention — and just coach football.

"We'll look for someone whose No. 1 thought is just the football team," Holovak said. "My emphasis is just on this club and the rest will fall into place."

"Naturally, you'll want someone who's just a football man. But other than that I'd like to talk with Bud first."

Glanville left a colorful legacy that included his all-black sideline costumes, his banterings with the media, and battles with coaches Sam Wyche at Cincinnati and Chuck Noll at Pittsburgh.

Glanville's departure leaves Houston to compete with Atlanta, Phoenix and the New York Jets in their searches for a new coach.

The early list of Oilers possibilities includes former Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill, although Adams said he may be more interested in opening a car dealership; Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz; Denver defensive coordinator Wade Phillips, son of former Oilers coach Bum Phillips; Washington assistant head coach Joe Bugel, a former Oiler assistant; and University of Houston coach Jack Pardee.

Giants find problems in back yard

Orangemen, Illinois dumped in conference

(AP)—Beating up the C.W. Posts and the Wisconsin-Green Bays is easy. Beating up bigger teams is more difficult.

Top-ranked Syracuse and fourth-ranked Illinois each failed to survive the first week of conference play and were beaten decisively Saturday.

"We had some good shots, we just didn't make them," Syracuse's Richard Manning said after the Orangemen lost 93-74 to Villanova. "You can't shoot 28 percent and win in the Big East."

The defeat ended Syracuse's 15-game winning streak at the Carrier Dome. The Orangemen (10-1 overall, 1-1 in the Big East) barely won their conference opener, prevailing by two points at Pittsburgh a few days ago.

Villanova is 9-6, 2-1 after its first victory in Syracuse since 1982.

In Minnesota, Illinois fell behind by 11 points at halftime and never caught the No. 24 Gophers, eventually losing 91-74.

Illinois is 11-1 overall and 1-1 in the Big Ten. The Gophers are 10-1, 1-1.

"We had all kinds of difficulty stopping them," Illini coach Lou Henson said. "If they play like that all the time, they won't lose a game."

Villanova 93, No. 1 Syracuse 74
Villanova led 39-31 at halftime and increased its margin to 67-46 with 8:25 left. Syracuse scored 10 straight points and later got within seven, but the Wildcats stayed ahead by making 19-of-21 free throws in the final 4:14.

Sophomore Greg Woodard scored 27 points, including 16-of-17 from the foul line. Villanova made a school-record 43 free throws in 49 attempts.

Stephen Thompson scored 20 points for Syracuse, but shot just 6-for-20 from the field. The Orangemen made only 23-of-82 shots.

No. 2 Kansas 94, Winthrop 51
Terry Brown had 24 points, including six 3-pointers, as the Jayhawks became the first Kansas team to go 15-0 since the 1935-36 squad was 21-0.

The Jayhawks have not been ranked No. 1 during the regular season since 1957 when they had Wilt Chamberlain.

Kansas led by 19 points at halftime and pulled away at home. George Henson scored 13 for Winthrop (8-3).

No. 3 Georgetown 93, Providence 91
Mark Tillmon scored 39 points, a school record in a Big East game, and his 3-pointer with 52 seconds left put Georgetown ahead 91-90.

Tillmon was 11-for-22 from the field, including four 3-pointers. Georgetown (11-0, 2-0) trailed by six points with 5:32 left before rallying for its 26th straight home victory. Eric Murdock scored 20 for Providence.

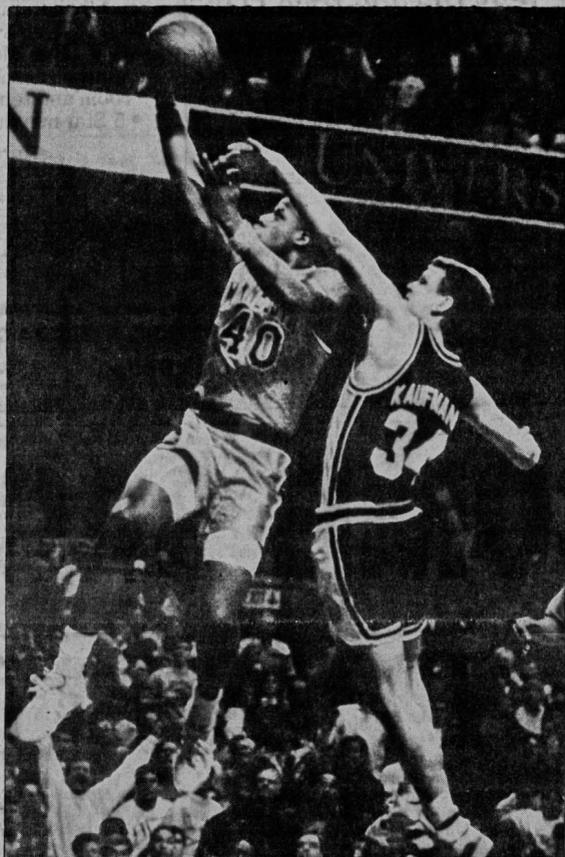

Minnesota 91, No. 4 Illinois 81
Melvin Newbern scored 27 points and Willie Burton had 21 as Minnesota won its 10th straight game.

The Gophers out-rebounded Illinois 36-29, led by Richard Coffey's 12.

Illinois trimmed its deficit to seven points midway through the second half, but Minnesota bounced back and opened an 81-61 edge.

Andy Kaufmann had 21 points and Marcus Liberty 18 for the Illini.

No. 6 Oklahoma 66, Colorado 61

Hawkeyes take Invitational

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

Seven West Coast teams could not come close to the Iowa men's gymnastics team's score of 272.4, as the Hawkeyes captured the team title at the Spartan Open in San Jose, Calif., Jan. 5-6.

The Hawkeyes, who took five of the top six places, finished 15.95 points ahead of second-place San Jose State, which scored 256.45. California-Berkeley took third with 255.3, Santa Barbara scored 254.35 for fourth place, and Stanford finished in fifth with 246.65.

"These are the best teams in the West, with the exception of UCLA," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said. "We totally outclassed the competition. I was pleased with the performance especially considering the layoff and the caliber of teams at the meet."

Conrad Voorsanger of Stanford won the all-around title with 111.15.

The Hawkeye's top finishers were Keith Cousino in second with 103.75, Paul Bautel in third with 102.85, Chris Kabat fourth with 102.45, Dillon Ashton fifth with 101.6 and Adrian Besancon in sixth with 101.4.

Individually, Hawkeye Jeff Dow won the still ring title with a score of 9.60 and Cousino won the parallel bars competition with 9.50. Cousino also placed second on the high bar with 9.45 and third on the vault with 9.25. Kabat tied for second with Cousino on the high bar.

Other top placers for Iowa were Besancon in second on the still rings with 9.50 and Erik Heikkila in third in the floor exercise with 9.20.

"(The team) is real psyched, we killed everyone," Dow said. "We weren't expecting a win this big. It really pumped up the guys, especially the underclassmen."

Iowa excels in meets over break

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

While the main goal for the Iowa men's and women's swimming teams was to train during the winter break, each squad participated in competitions.

The women's swimming team had two meets in Hawaii — the Rainbow Invitational Jan. 2 and 3 and a dual against Hawaii Jan. 6.

Team scores weren't kept for the Rainbow Invitational, but according to Iowa coach Pete Kennedy, the meet was "clearly dominated by Michigan."

The highlight for the Hawkeyes, Kennedy said, was Becky Anderson and Colleen Thome finishing first and second respectively in the 50-yard freestyle.

"(The training) is going real well," Kennedy said. "The kids are working hard. (Thursday) was the only day we took off; we've worked doubles the whole way."

Saturday Iowa upped its dual-meet record to 5-3 with a 73-70 win over the Rainbows.

The Hawkeyes were led by six individual first places and three top finishes in relays.

Meanwhile, the men's swimming team won all five events at the Air Force Invitational in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Iowa junior Roland Zschiegner took first place in the only individual race — the 400 individual medley.

The four relays were the 200 free and 200 medley races and the unconventional 1,650 free relay and the tower relay.

In the 1,650, 16 swimmers swim 100 yards each and one swims 50 yards. The tower race has four swimmers per squad and each swimmer jumps off the 10-meter diving platform and swims down and back in the 75-yard pool.

The men's team usually travels to Hawaii for the winter break, but decided to try altitude training in Colorado this year.

According to assistant coach Rich Draper, it has really made a difference.

Hawks return to Stringer's lineup

The Daily Iowan

Two players who have been out with injuries have returned to the lineup of the Iowa women's basketball team.

Sophomore forward Becky Shrigley, who was unable to start the season due to a stress fracture in her hip, saw action for the first time this year in the Hawkeyes' Dec. 17 game at Iowa State in which she scored two points.

Waugh, another sophomore forward, has been sidelined with knee problems and has required the aid of crutches. Waugh finally made an appearance in uniform and on the court for Iowa, seeing three minutes against Michigan State, and six minutes Sunday against Michigan.

Price grabs league honor

Hawkeye forward Franthea Price was named Big Ten Player of the Week last week for the second time this season. The 5-foot-9 senior pumped in a career-high 34 points against 20th-ranked South Carolina in the opening round of the Hilton Head Super Shootout Dec. 29-30.

Price ended the tournament with 59 points, 14 rebounds, nine steals and six assists in two games, and was named to the all-tournament team.

fantastic relationship and that had a lot to do with it.

"Also, to be a coordinator at my age, 36, in the Big Ten is a tremendous opportunity."

Wyatt spent 16 years with the Hawkeyes, and also cited his friendship with Alvarez as a reason for leaving.

"Barry's a dear friend, and that's one of the main motivations," Wyatt told an area newspaper. "I had a great many ties at Iowa, but changes are good for you sometimes."

Bullard

amazing... I think you can see why we were so high on him going into this year. My hat is off to Matt for doing such a terrific job."

"Matt works hard, he got the leg back in shape," Ohio State coach Randy Ayers said. "... I was very surprised. After being out, that's the thing you have to get back is your shooting rhythm, and he can shoot the basketball. He's a great player."

According to Bullard, being out of action for so long helped his shooting ability.

"I wasn't really expecting that good of a shooting night for myself," the Des Moines native said. "But when I came out, I just had the confidence. If all you do is shoot for five weeks, hopefully that will sharpen it up a little bit. It just felt really good, and that's the best I could hope for as far as shooting performance."

Although he performed well against the Buckeyes, leading the Hawkeyes with 23 points, Bullard said he only feels about 60 percent right now.

"I can't jump, don't run very fast and can't get down and play defense very well," Bullard said. "It's still a long ways away, but it will come back quicker now that I'm playing. You can do all the biking and stuff like that that you want to be in shape, but it's a lot different being out in the court."

After undergoing surgery, Bullard had a goal in mind for his return—the Big Ten season. His doctors, however, didn't agree with him.

"When I had surgery on Dec. 1, I wanted to be back for the Big Ten season, and I just worked as hard the youngest coach in the league and in his rookie season at Ohio State. "But we got great play out of Jackson and Davis. This is a good start for us because we're such a young club."

Earl suspended

Redshirt freshman Acie Earl wasn't in uniform for the game with the Buckeyes.

The 6-foot-11 reserve center was charged early Friday morning for possession of alcohol under age. He was picked up at the intersection of Highway 6 and 10th Avenue by Coralville police.

Police reports indicated Earl passed sobriety and breath tests. A court date was set for Jan. 24.

"We just won't even get into it," Davis said when questioned about the incident. The Iowa coach wouldn't discuss whether Earl's suspension would continue.

It was the second time this season that an Iowa player had been involved in an alcohol-related incident. Sophomore Ray Thompson had been arrested the night before a Dec. 1 game with Ohio University.

Thompson was charged with public intoxication, interference with official acts and assaulting a police officer.

Slater remains away

Hawkeye freshman Ray Slater, who hasn't returned from the holiday break because of what the team quotes as "personal reasons," wasn't in Iowa City Saturday, and Davis didn't know when he would return.

Davis said Slater attended his grandmother's funeral Saturday, and wouldn't elaborate on when he would, or would not, return.

"The kid has had some family problems and the last thing we want to do is pressure him," Davis said. "We'll just let him take the time he needs, and we'll go from there."

Playoffs

beaten 34-7 during a regular season in which it finished 11-5, the best record in the AFC.

It put the Broncos into the AFC title game here next Sunday against the Cleveland Browns, whom they defeated in two dramatic games to get to the Super Bowl in the 1986 and 1987 seasons.

But it wasn't easy against a team that had been outscored 92-10 in its first two games but won five of its last six games to finish 9-7, then beat Houston in overtime in the AFC wild-card game.

Pittsburgh scored on five of its first seven possessions, taking leads of 10-0, 17-7 and 23-17 as Bubby Brister threw for one touchdown, Merrill Hoge rushed for more than 100 yards against a team that hadn't allowed a 100-yard rushing game all season and Tim Worley and Louis Lipps raced through the defense all day.

In fact, Pittsburgh had more than 400 yards after gaining only 170 in the first game here.

The Steelers, last in the league in offense during the regular season, shocked the Broncos by taking a 17-10 halftime lead as Brister, Hoge, Lipps and Worley wreaked havoc with a Denver defense that allowed the fewest points in the NFL. In fact, Pittsburgh had 251 yards, its per game average in the regular season in the first half alone against a team that had allowed just 275 per game.

Hoge had 75 yards on just five carries in the first quarter as the Steelers chewed up ground yardage against a team that hadn't allowed a 100-yard game all year. He hit the 100 mark at the 2-minute warning of the first half.

Pittsburgh took the opening kickoff and used the first 7:47 with Worley and Hoge bullying the ball 65 yards in 13 plays to set up Gary Anderson's 32-yard field goal. There was only one pass on the drive, an 11-yarder from Brister to Lipps.

Hoge, Worley and Brister went at it again as the Steelers took just five plays and 2:27 to take a 10-0 lead 1:38 into the second period.

The Steelers started the second half as they did the first, holding the Broncos on their first possession, then completing a 23-yarder from Brister to Weegie Thompson on the first offensive play. But on the second, Rich Kragen stripped Worley, Tyrone Braxton recovered at the Steelers 37 and one play later, Elway hit Johnson wide open on the goal line to tie the score just two minutes into the second half.

Hawks top Wolverines in league tilt

Rita Heimes
The Daily Iowan

The seventh-ranked Iowa women's basketball team picked up its first Big Ten Conference win of the season with a 65-54 victory over Michigan Sunday.

The Hawkeyes relied on the scoring of their leader, forward Franthea Price, who tossed in 23 to lead all scorers. Iowa guards Jollette Law and Stephanie Schueler added 13 and 11, respectively.

The matchup in Ann Arbor, Mich., saw Iowa's conference-leading offense, averaging over 80 points per game, face the league's top defense in Michigan, which had held its opponents to an average of 60 points per contest.

The Hawkeyes led by as many as 17 points in both periods, entering the intermission with a 37-25 advantage. But Iowa was unable to maintain the margin as the Wolverines cut the lead to as few as seven points in the second half.

"Our offense executed beautifully in the second half and we were coming up with the shots we needed," Michigan coach Bud VanDeWege said. "The free throw and rebounding in the second half are what made the difference."

Price, who was benched with four personal fouls, re-entered the Iowa lineup with 6:16 remaining in the contest to score her 19th and 20th points and save the Hawkeyes from an 11-point Michigan surge. Law tossed in two free throws three seconds before the buzzer to give Iowa its final winning margin.

Iowa also moves to 1-1 in conference play and 9-3 overall. The Hawkeyes lost their Big Ten opener against Michigan State 62-61 in East Lansing, Mich., Friday.

Iowa went into its winter break schedule of road games with a record of 7-1 and ranked fifth in the nation. A 75-55 victory over cross-state rival Iowa State December 17 upped the Hawkeyes to 8-1, before they dropped to South Carolina 82-76 in the first round of the Hilton Head Island Super Shootout.

The Hawkeyes bounced back with a 106-81 trouncing of North Carolina in the consolation game of the tournament, tying Iowa's record for the most points in a game and handing coach C. Vivian Stringer her 400th career win.

"It's good to have the numbers on the winning side," the 18-year coach said of her 400-90 record. "I very clearly remember the losses; every single one of them, but I'm happier for the wins. It's good to know that after all of these years, I smiled more than I cried."

Stringer must have felt like crying last Friday as her Hawkeyes lost the conference opener for the first time in her career at Iowa.

Michigan State took a 9-8 lead at the 14:07 mark in the first period, and never lost it in the nationally-televised matchup. Iowa's Law was held to nine points, breaking her 25-game double scoring streak, and fouled out with 5:21 remaining in the game. Price was the only Hawkeye in double figures, leading all scorers with 27 points in the loss.

The Spartans out-rebounded the Hawkeyes 50-32, a factor which both teams' coaches said was a key to the Michigan State victory.

"The key was our controlling the boards and stopping the transition game," Spartan coach Karen Langeland said. "This is a great way to break a four game losing streak. We are fortunate to have beaten such a great team."

Schembechler linked to Tigers' presidency

DETROIT (AP) — Bo Schembechler, who turned Michigan's football program into a national powerhouse, will now try his hand at baseball.

Schembechler, whose 27-year football coaching career ended with Michigan's 17-10 loss in the Rose Bowl last week, will become president of the Detroit Tigers early this week, informed sources told The Associated Press on Sunday.

Schembechler, 60, will resign as Michigan's athletic director and succeed Jim Campbell as chief executive officer of the Tigers.

A high-ranking Tigers official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Campbell will remain and become chairman of the board, replacing John E. Fetzer, who will become chairman emeritus.

The official announcement could come as early as Monday but may be held up until midweek, according to one official who called it, "the worst-kept secret in town."

The appointment would make Schembechler the 12th president of the Tigers since the franchise entered the American League as a charter member in 1901.

Schembechler, who finished with the fifth-best Division I-A record in history (234-65-8), could not be reached for comment. Coaches said he had left his office and calls to his home went unanswered Sunday.

But he said the day after the Rose Bowl loss to Southern California that he would continue to live in Ann Arbor.

"I will never be far away from Michigan," Schembechler said. "I will always be available for consultation. I will forever be a Michigan man."

As coach and athletic director, Schembechler was in charge of an $18 million budget, nearly $8 million of which was produced by football. He also raised nearly $12 million for a nearly-completed football building to be called the Center of Champions.

It was those organizational skills which made Schembechler attractive to the Tigers, whose 59-103 record was the worst in the major leagues.

"When I first came here (following graduation from Ohio State in 1949), one guy did everything," said Campbell, who will be 66 in February. "Baseball's not that way anymore. When you walk into a league meeting, you're lucky if you recognize three people anymore. All the departments are specialized now."

"The key element to this job now is organization."

Tigers owner Tom Monaghan, who bought the club from Fetzer in 1984, named Schembechler to the club's six-member Board of Directors on Jan. 12, 1989. He is a board member of Domino's Pizza Inc., also owned by Monaghan.

Schembechler became head coach at Michigan in 1969, following six years at Miami of Ohio, and led the Wolverines to a 194-48-5 record and 13 Big Ten Conference championships.

He was named Big Ten Coach of the Year seven times. Although he led Michigan to bowl games and top 10 national rankings in 17 of his 21 seasons there, Schembechler never coached a national champion. He selected Gary Moeller, his longtime assistant and Bo Schembechler friend, to succeed him as coach.

Lohaus injury hampers trade

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Brad Lohaus, acquired by the Milwaukee Bucks from Minnesota in a trade Thursday, has a slight knee ailment that caused the Bucks to consider rescinding the deal, according to Milwaukee coach Del Harris.

The Bucks announced that a physical examination had revealed the small cartilage tear in Lohaus' left knee, and the discovery caused a clause in the trade to be amended to compensate for the injury.

Harris said the Timberwolves were aware of Lohaus' condition but did not reveal it before the trade.

"We had three options — rescind, let it stand where it was or get a little bit of relief just in case he would happen to go down with that particular injury during this current season," said Harris Saturday.

"He's been playing on that for a number of years. He first probably did that possibly at Iowa. They were aware of it in Boston and aware of it in Sacramento. They were aware of it in Minnesota," said Harris.

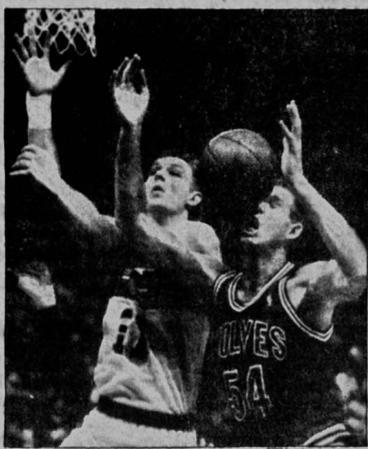

"It was not brought up because they (the Timberwolves) felt that — since he'd never missed a practice or a game — it was not a matter that we should have to be concerned with. We have a very thorough medical crew. They picked it up. Quite frankly, they didn't like it."

Lohaus dressed for Saturday night's game with the Chicago Bulls and has been practicing with the Bucks since Friday, although the knee stiffened up during one workout.

Bucks spokesman Bill King said that because of Lohaus' condition, an original clause in the trade has been amended.

If Lohaus' injury should require arthroscopic surgery this season or in the playoffs, the Bucks would receive the right to Philadelphia's second-round draft pick in either the 1991 or 1992 draft.

That pick is currently held by Minnesota as part of a trade that sent Rick Mahorn to the 76ers.

Associated Press

Originally, if Philadelphia's second-round pick was lower than the Bucks' second-round pick, Minnesota had the option to take the Bucks pick in 1991 or 1992 and send Philadelphia's pick to Milwaukee.

Breuer passed his physical with the Timberwolves and was scheduled to play Saturday night in San Antonio.

Harris said it's common for teams to inform other teams of injuries when trades are made.

"But in their defense, they (the Timberwolves) are new and they thought it was not an issue."

Davis to receive record salary

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds made outfielder Eric Davis the highest-paid player in baseball Sunday, signing him to a three-year contract worth at least $10.8 million.

The signing of Davis, 27, sets a new benchmark for baseball salaries, which have leap-frogged over the $3 million-per-year mark this winter.

Davis will make $3.1 million a year in base salary, with a $1.5 million signing bonus that "We trust that the signing of Eric Davis speaks for itself and becomes a bellwether of things to come and indicates to the baseball world that the Reds are in the hunt," General Manager Bob Quinn said.

Whether the Reds would sign Davis was their biggest off-season question. Davis, the team's top offensive player the last three years, was eligible for free agency after the 1990 season, and had mixed feelings about staying in Cincinnati.

Last year, Davis complained during a protracted contract negotiation that he didn't feel appreciated. Owner Marge Schott stepped in at the last minute before salary arbitration and granted Davis his wishes. He also has complained about having to play on artificial turf at Riverfront Stadium.

Davis, a Los Angeles native, said Sunday he wanted to stay in Cincinnati all along, as long as he could get an agreeable contract.

"It's something I wanted to do deep down in my heart, to stay in Cincinnati," Davis said.

The outfielder's contract was announced at a news conference attended by Schott, who has publicly called other baseball owners "nuts" for driving salaries above the $3 million mark in recent months. She also has suggested publicly that no player is worth $3 million.

"So now I'm sure I'll get calls tomorrow (to other owners) saying, 'You've gone nuts, too,'" Schott said. "But I'll say, 'Yeah, but you guys started it.'"

Schott was rapidly criticized by Reds' fans and questioned by her players for trading reliever John Franco to the New York Mets last month for reliever Randy Myers in what was viewed as a money-saving move.

Ingram said that Curry planned to reveal his future plans later. It is strongly believed by people at Alabama that Curry will take the head coaching job at the University of Kentucky, where Jerry Claiborne recently resigned.

WKYT-TV in Lexington attributed the report to an unidentified source, who also said Newton was in Tuscaloosa, where Curry met with Alabama players.

Ingram said he expects to have a coaching staff in place at Alabama by the end of the week.

"I have confidence in the people that I have in mind" to succeed Curry, Ingram said at a news conference immediately following Curry's meeting with his players at 5 p.m. CST. Curry did not appear at the news conference.

Highest Baseball Paychecks

NEW YORK (AP) — The top 10 baseball contracts by average annual values. Figures were obtained by The Associated Press from player and management sources and include all guaranteed income but not income from potential incentive bonuses.

brings the package to an average of $3.6 million a year over the three years. He also can make an additional $250,000 per year in performance bonuses — $100,000 each for Gold Glove and Silver Slugger honors and $50,000 for team Most Valuable Player selection.

Davis won all three honors last season by batting .281 with 34 homers and a career-high 101 runs batted in. He won his third consecutive Gold Glove, Silver Slugger honors, and was chosen the team's MVP for a season in which he made roughly $1.5 million.

Alabama coach expected to join Kentucky

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama coach Bill Curry announced Sunday he is leaving the Crimson Tide amid reports he is heading for Kentucky.

Curry, who spent three controversial football seasons at Alabama, however, told Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton on Sunday that he will coach the Wildcats, a Lexington television station reported.

Curry, the Southeastern Coach of the Year, told Alabama athletic director Hootie Ingram and then his players and staff of his decision to leave Alabama.

"I feel if someone's not comfortable, maybe it's best to change situations," Ingram said. "I'm sorry this thing got blown up so big. Nobody at this university tried to run anybody off."

Rams, Broncos advance

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Jim Everett hit Flipper Anderson with a 30-yard touchdown pass 1:06 into overtime Sunday, lifting the wild-card Los Angeles Rams to a 19-13 victory over the New York Giants and into the NFC championship game.

The Rams, who won their third-straight road game in the East, face the defending champion San Francisco 49ers next Sunday, with the winner earning a berth in the Super Bowl.

The Rams took the overtime kickoff and Everett hit Pete Holohan for 12 yards and Henry Ellard for 13. That brought the ball to the Giants' 47, where Everett threw down the middle for Anderson. The ball sailed past the receiver, but interference was called on Sheldon White at the 25.

After a five-yard penalty, Everett passed down the right sideline to Anderson, who had gotten behind Mark Collins, for the winning touchdown.

Everett, who was 25 for 44 for 315 yards, led the Rams 77 yards in four plays to win it. Late in the fourth quarter, he took them 75 yards in 13 plays before Mike Lansford's 22-yard field tied it with 3:01 remaining.

New York's offense was led by Otis Anderson.

Anderson had only one 100-yard game this season, against Washington in the sixth week. But he accumulated 1,023 yards in his best season in five years after being in danger of getting cut before starting in training camp.

When Joe Morris broke his foot in the last preseason game, the starting job was Anderson's. He never let go.

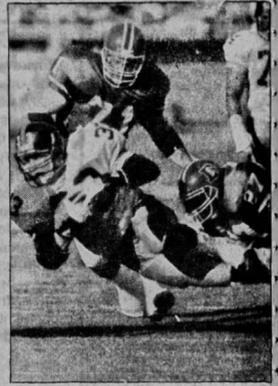

Against the Rams, who held him to seven yards during the season, Anderson was New York's main weapon. He had 69 yards in the first half and 51 in the second for a season-high 120 yards.

Defensively, Lawrence Taylor was in charge for New York. He had two sacks early in the game and pressured Everett throughout.

Elway leads Broncos to win

DENVER (AP) — John Elway overcame a startling offensive performance by Pittsburgh on Sunday, passing the Denver Broncos to within a game of a third Super Bowl trip in four years with a 24-23 come-from-behind victory over the Steelers.

Elway, shackled for most of the game by an aggressive Pittsburgh defense, had completions of 18 and 36 yards in a 71-yard drive that led to Melvin Bratton's 1-yard touchdown run for the winning score with 2:27 left. Bratton's second TD of the day. Elway also had a 37-yard TD pass to Vance Johnson during a run of 2:28 bracketing halftime in which the Broncos rallied from a 17-7 deficit to tie the score.

It was the first lead of the game against a team that Denver had Outscoring their opponents 131-11, the third-ranked Iowa wrestling team improved their dual-meet record to 8-0 this weekend with three lopsided wins over Lehigh, Illinois and Northwestern at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa coach Dan Gable incorporated a new lineup against the Engineers as redshirt freshman Pat Kelly made his debut at 177 pounds, replacing Chelesvig who dropped to 167. Mark Reiland, fifth-ranked at 167, also went down a weight to 158.

Terry Brands, Troy Steiner and Bart Chelesvig each registered falls at 126, 142 and 167, and three other Hawkeyes recorded technical falls as Iowa coasted to a 47-3 win Saturday afternoon against No. 23 Lehigh. The Hawkeyes' only loss came when fourth-ranked Brooks Simpson dropped a 6-1 decision to No. 2 Matt Ruppel in the 190-pound match.

Sunday, Iowa opened their Big Ten schedule with a double-dual against Illinois and No. 13 Northwestern, in which the Hawkeyes first crushed the Illini 51-0, then surrendered only two matches to the Wildcats in a 33-8 victory.

Pins by Chad Zaputil at 118, Terry Steiner at 150 and John Oostendorp at heavyweight powered the Hawkeyes to their fifth shutout of the season and their 28th-consecutive defeat over Illinois.

Northwestern boasted three ranked wrestlers in 118-pounder Jack Griffin, Brad Traviolia at 167 and Mike Funk at 177. The match at 118 was tabbed as one of the highlights of the afternoon with No. 3 Griffin going head to head with Iowa's fifth-ranked Martin.

But Griffin beat Martin 15-5 in a matchup that wasn't even close. In fact, it was the battles at 177 and heavyweight that gave the Hawkeye faithful the most to cheer about.

Oostendorp capped off a stellar weekend performance with his third victory in two days, electrifying the crowd of about 4,000 by pinning Northwestern's Roger Williams with a throw in just nine seconds. Oostendorp also pinned Wade Rome of Illinois in 6:00 and defeated John Morris of Lehigh 6-3 the day before to boost his overall record to 16-1, including seven falls.

Chelesvig's match with Traviolia was a pleasant surprise for Gable and Iowa fans as the Hawkeye sophomore upset the third-ranked Traviolia 10-4.

"I wasn't surprised at the way my match turned out at all," Chelesvig said. "I'll be getting recognized now. I needed to beat somebody good. I want to wrestle the good wrestlers because I know I can beat them."

It spread like the plague. So contagious was the affliction, that no one was safe. Les Jepsen and Brian Garner caught the bug, and Michael Ingram had it worst of all.

Free throws. Iowa didn't make them, and the Hawkeyes had their first back-to-back losses of the season after Ohio State won the Big Ten opener 79-73 Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Wednesday, Iowa was a 77-74 upset victim of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. "I don't think it's ever going to be great," Iowa coach Tom Davis said after his team went 10-28 from the line, falling to 8-3 overall. "I think we've got too many guys that are struggling free-throw shooters to have it ever be a great night-in, night-out performance."

The Hawkeyes had opportunities to come back late in the second half after trailing by as much as 12 points, but inability to hit free throws allowed the Buckeyes to escape.

Ingram was 1-8, while Jepsen hit 3-8 and Garner missed both of his attempts.

But the game that put Ohio State alone atop the Big Ten standings wasn't a total wash for the Hawkeyes. The return of senior Matt Bullard was story-book, to say the least.

To say the most, Bullard kept Iowa in the game throughout, hitting his first six 3-point attempts, before finishing with a team-high 23 points.

"I was hoping to come back and help the team win," Bullard said. He had been on the bench since injuring a knee in practice just days before the season opener against Texas Southern. "I guess when all you do is shoot for five weeks, you get the hang of it."

Ohio State coach Randy Ayers was impressed with a couple of things. One was Bullard, and the other was Buckeye freshman Jimmy Jackson, who went 12-16 from the floor, finishing with a game-high 28 points. Baskets by Jackson and teammate Alex Davis continually held off Iowa runs.

"Bullard was tremendous," Ayers said. At 33, he is Iowa forward Matt Bullard's return to basketball Saturday night against Ohio State was perfect, except for one small detail — his team lost.

"I was hoping to come back and help the team win," the 6-foot-10 senior said. "That was my biggest goal, to just do whatever I could to help the team win. We didn't get that accomplished, but we played all right."

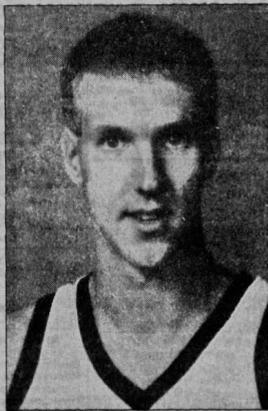

On Dec. 1, Bullard underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee. Saturday night was the first time he has faced an opponent since the operation.

In his 16 minutes on the court, Bullard went 8-12 from the field, including six three-pointers. He also went 1-2 from the line, had two assists and one steal and grabbed four rebounds.

"The one real positive sign was the return to action of Matt Bullard," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "How he can come back and shoot the way he shot and play as well as he played handling the ball and all the things he was able to do is just

Over the Break

Talks begin for Big Ten, Penn State

Talks begin today between Penn State Athletic Director Jim Tarmann and representatives of the Big Ten over the long-time independent's entry into the conference, as the parties meet at the NCAA Convention in Dallas.

"This is the initial step in what will be a long series of discussions," Penn State president Bryce Jordan said. "We are excited and very, very pleased about the opportunities that lay ahead."

Tarmann will sit down with league commissioner Jim Delany and other conference officials to initiate steps that will allow the East Coast school to start working toward a permanent addition to the conference.

Penn State and the Big Ten came to an agreement about the school's inclusion in the league in December. For now, the major task involves phasing in sports based on schedule availability — something that puts football five or six years down the road, Jordan said.

"I think the so-called minor sports can get underway rather quickly," Jordan said. "But because football schedules so far in advance, it won't be as soon."

Stanley Ikenberry, chairman of the Big Ten conference board of directors and president of Illinois, said the league is very satisfied with the decision to accept Penn State.

"It was generally unanimous (among board members) that the academic quality of Penn State is consistent with what we try to accomplish in the Big Ten," Ikenberry said.

Ex-Hawk assistant raids Fry's cupboard

Three years ago, Iowa assistant football coach Barry Alvarez left the Hawkeyes to become an assistant at Notre Dame. And while his recent appointment to the head coaching position at Wisconsin doesn't directly affect the Iowa football program, it does give off repercussions.

Two of Iowa coach Hayden Fry's assistants, defensive line coach Dan McCarney and defensive end coach Bernie Wyatt, announced during the winter break their intentions to leave Iowa and join Alvarez at Wisconsin.

Another of Fry's 11 assistants, offensive line coach Kirk Schumacher, is leaving the Hawkeyes after nine years to become the head coach at Maine.

"All three got advancements from the professional standpoint," Fry said. "I've been extremely fortunate in keeping my staff together through the years. The coaches all get offers every year, but unfortunately this is all happening at the same time... I've got a lot of work in front of me to replace them. They represent a lot of experience on the staff."

"I think (Fry) has mixed feelings," McCarney said. "We spent 11 years together, and we were very close... We've done a lot for each other and we have a lot of mutual respect."

"He always said he never wanted us to make a lateral move... and this is definitely a promotion."

McCarney, who has been with the Hawkeyes for 13 years, was offered positions at UCLA and Notre Dame, but decided on Wisconsin because of the friendship he had with Alvarez.

"It's a great opportunity for me," McCarney said. "Barry Alvarez, Bernie Wyatt and I think a lot alike, coach a lot alike... We had a
