UI honors King through Big 10 television linkup

Scott King discusses 'dream'

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Over 100 people gathered in the Union's Main Lounge Sunday to pay video tribute to Martin Luther King Jr. one day prior to his birthday and following an almost hourlong technical delay.

After pending video problems pushed the 3 p.m. tribute back to almost 4 p.m. and following a short address by Jesse Jackson from Atlanta, President Hunter Rawlings, appearing on two large-screen projection televisions, called Americans and students at other Big Ten campuses to reflect on King's much-fabled "dream."

"When we think of Martin Luther King Jr. we think of his dream for all Americans," Rawlings said. "That dream should come closer to reality on our campuses, but that's not the case."

Rawlings said everyone gathered at Big Ten universities who participated in the tribute need to make clear that education can combat social inequalities.

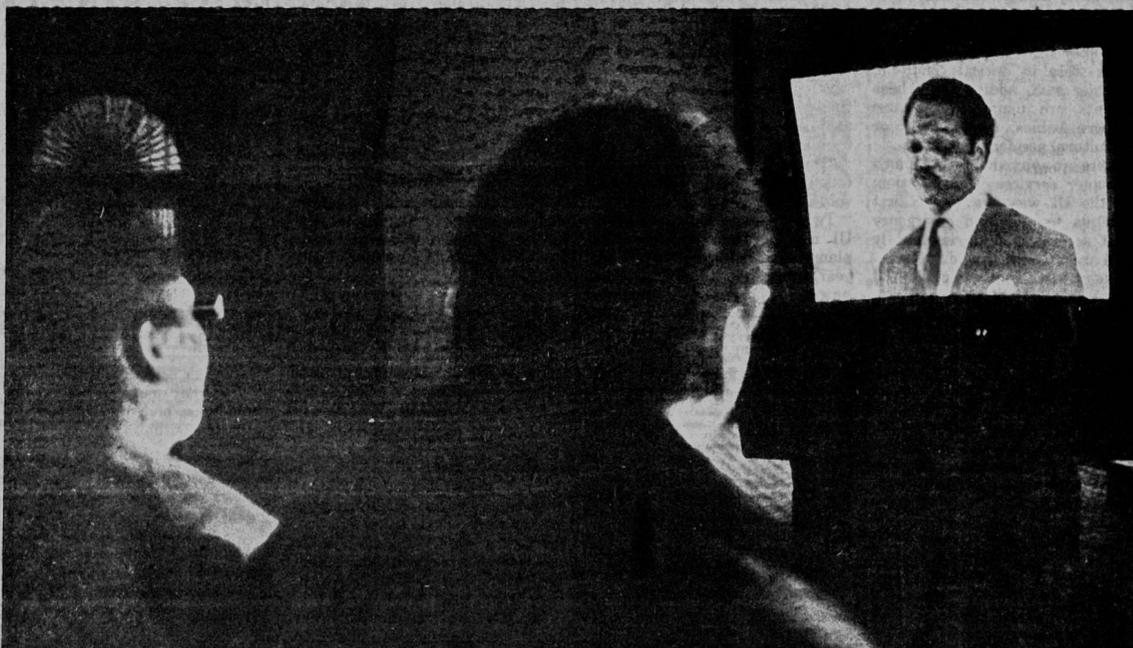

After Rawlings invited everyone to join together to "bring Martin Luther King Jr.'s dreams closer to reality" through active involvement, Jeno Berta, UI Student Senate Vice-President, introduced Coretta Scott King to offer her thoughts on the state of the dream.

"It is easy to forget (Martin Luther King Jr.) was more than someone who spoke out for what he thought was right," Berta said. "He was also a husband and a father."

Coretta Scott King, appearing live via satellite hookup from Atlanta demanded nonviolence be adopted as a theme for 1990. Today would have been Martin Luther King Jr.'s 61st birthday and is the fifth celebration of a national holiday.

"Now is the time to organize a global, nonviolent movement based on Dr. King's teachings to end poverty, hunger and racism," King said. "Nonviolence is and should be a way of life."

The "seeds of democracy" carried on in today's liberation movements in countries such as Hungary and Poland come as the results of the '60s civil rights movement, King said.

"But we must move quickly to follow the deterioration of the Cold War," she said. "We need a peace and development budget to provide housing, education, welfare and public-works projects that provide life-changing opportunities to the underprivileged."

King, after quoting from some of her late husband's books and speeches, said a worldwide bell-ringing ceremony held today will symbolize the Martin Luther King Jr. Center's goal to "realize the dream of a world without war and violence, without racism or hatred."

The bell-ringing ceremony, beginning at the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia, will invite students, Americans and others around the country and globe to join in a symbolic demonstration against inequality and oppression, King said.

"This symbolic act will usher in a new decade of peace, hope, opportunity, and decency," King said.

"We call on President Bush to let freedom ring all across the United States because we need jobs and educational opportunities to make the dream a reality."

Berta said Sunday's video teleconference, viewed by thousands at Big-Ten institutions in the Midwest, will provide a "sound founda-

Black activist Nikki Giovanni calls academia 'new lunch counter' in civil rights movement

Jean Thilmann
The Daily Iowan

Human beings are not sane, which means each person must create a life that will prove humans are smarter than they appear to be.

These are the words of Nikki Giovanni, 46, author of several volumes of poetry, a black activist, and a leader in the Black Arts movement of the middle 1960s. Giovanni spoke Sunday night — the eve of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday — to a standing-room-only crowd in the Union's Main Lounge.

But Giovanni insisted she was not present to deliver "the speech," meaning a revamped version of King's "I Have A Dream" speech. Though she barely made reference to King or to the civil rights movement, her speech commemorated the historical struggle of blacks and of all people as she encouraged them to take control of their lives and work for change.

"This is a screwy sort of country we live in. I didn't come here to pick on the country, but we are not a well people. You probably noticed that," Giovanni said. "I'm here to tell you the civil rights movement is not dead. The new lunch counter is academia."

"Black people thought if they explained to whites that we didn't care to be segregated they would understand that. It didn't work," she said. "Intelligence is necessary to carry us into the 21st century. I like the future. I recommend it."

She said prejudice very much exists in college classrooms, a fact that will not change until "you are the teacher."

Cities nationwide celebrate message, memories of Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Luther King Jr. was remembered in church services nationwide Sunday on the eve of what would have been his 61st birthday, and Haitian exiles in Miami honored the slain civil rights leader's beliefs by holding a peaceful rally.

"Dr. King took us to the dawn of a new era," New York Mayor David Dinkins, the first black to hold that office, told about 400 people who gathered at Judson Memorial Church. "It is up to us to push on into the bright light of day."

"Dr. King dreamed of an inclusive society, where people would be judged by their good will and their good deeds," he said. "That is my dream for our city."

In Atlanta, King's widow, Coretta Scott King, prepared to give her annual "state of the dream" speech at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where her husband was pastor.

In Cleveland, Roman Catholic Bishop Anthony Pilla presided at an afternoon prayer service at St. John's Cathedral.

Howard Moody, senior minister at Judson Memorial, expressed concern at Sunday's service that King's dream had not been fulfilled.

Racial strife shows that the "dream has been deferred and we haven't lived up to the promise," said Moody, who is white.

"Racism and prejudice is still alive and well in this country despite everything he did," Moody said. "I don't think white people have lived up to what he hoped we would. He was betting everything on us. He bet his life, finally, that we would change."

Azerbaijanis, Armenians clash; many killed in ethnic feuding

MOSCOW (AP) — At least 25 people died in the capital of the Azerbaijan republic after ethnic rioting broke out overnight, and dozens more people were killed or wounded as the unrest spread across the republic, official media said Sunday.

Extra internal security troops were flown to the southern republic to try to quell the violence, and a military commander of one besieged area called for a state of emergency, the television news program "Seven Days" reported.

A witness in the city of Baku, where the violence began, described a street awash in blood and said victims there included two women tossed from balconies.

It was the bloodiest clash in nearly two years between Azerbaijanis and Armenians, who are locked in a feud over Nagorno-Karabakh, an enclave populated mainly by Armenians but controlled by Azerbaijan. Most Armenians are Christians; most Azerbaijanis are Shiite Moslems.

The violence was set off by news that an Azerbaijani had been killed and another wounded by Armenians in Azerbaijan's capital, Baku.

Radio Moscow said the incidents were announced at a rally in Baku's central square that was attended by about 150,000 people

Saturday night.

"Calls were made at the rally to drive the Armenians out of the city," the Radio Moscow correspondent reported from the Caspian Sea port of 1.7 million people. "Among the crowd, anti-Armenian slogans were shouted, and then the most terrible thing of all began — the pogroms."

The official Tass news agency said 25 people were killed in Baku. Radio Moscow quoted local Interior Ministry officials as saying most victims were Armenians.

Late Sunday, Tass said the violence had spread to the Shaumyanovsk and Khanlar regions of Azerbaijan, near Nagorno-Karabakh, and that there were "tens of dead and wounded from both nationalities."

"Seven Days" said that thousands of armed Azerbaijani militants were massing in the two districts and that Armenians also bearing arms were being transported there.

The military commander in Shaumyanovsk, Maj. Gen. Yu. Kosolapov, called for the introduction of a state of emergency, "Seven Days" said.

Two helicopters were shot at with artillery guns, and a lieutenant aboard one was wounded. Highways and railroads to Nagorno-Karabakh were blocked and shipments of food and fuel were not reaching the district, according to Soviet TV.

It said four soldiers of the Interior Ministry, who are responsible for internal security, have disappeared since Saturday and that a fifth was killed.

The fate of Armenians taken hostage by Azerbaijanis, including the entire Communist Party and government leadership in Shaumyanovsk, was unknown, according to the reports.

A Russian resident of Baku told

The Associated Press by telephone she saw at least two Armenian women in torn, blood-spattered clothes hurled from the balconies of upper floors of apartment houses on Lenin Street.

In front of the office, she said, an old woman who looked like an Armenian was shot pointblank in the head and chest by a mob armed with shotguns and pistols.

Fire, poisonous smoke kill 43 in Spanish disco

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — A fire at a discotheque Sunday sent poisonous smoke pouring into a lounge where people sat listening to music, and at least 43 people were overcome by the fumes and died, officials said.

The fumes were so strong some victims had no chance to attempt an escape and died in their seats, police said. The victims included five members of a band that was playing in the lounge and the parents and wife of one of the dead musicians.

A U.S. military base is about 10 miles west of Zaragoza, but the discotheque was not frequented by U.S. servicemen, and authorities said all the victims were local residents.

The fire began at about 2:40 a.m. in the flying discotheque in a run-down section of Zaragoza when an electrical overload triggered a short circuit. It was put out in minutes.

By then, toxic smoke had funneled through air conditioning ducts to the basement, where the dance floor, bar and lounge are located, said a local government representative, Carlos Perez Anadon.

Investigators found traces of hydrocyanic acid in the lounge, said Ignacio Bruna, another government spokesman in Zaragoza.

Perez Anadon said the official causes of the fire and the deaths would not be determined until autopsies were completed but added that hydrocyanic acid is commonly mixed with water in Spanish National Radio said the chemical, used to produce acrylic fibers, may have been used in material for the discotheque's interior decoration.

But Perez Anadon said records indicated the club's owners had not used materials containing the chemical, which is prohibited by city fire laws.

Deputy Mayor Luis Garcia Nieto said firefighters arrived eight minutes after they received news of the fire, but he said rescue workers could do little to help those inside.

"Several people died in their seats. It was very fast," added Antonio Gonzalez Trivino, mayor of Zaragoza, a provincial capital 200 miles northeast of Madrid.

One woman remained hospitalized with serious injuries, doctors at Miguel Servet Hospital said. A firefighter and another customer were treated and released.

Damage in the lounge was caused only by smoke and water, said Bruna.

"Downstairs you can hardly tell there were flames," he said. "It wasn't a major fire. The problem was the toxic smoke."

Estimates of the number of people in the disco at the time of the fire ranged from 100 to 130, well below the maximum allowed. The legal capacity was not clear, but local officials gave it as both 200 and 300.

Perez and Gonzalez Trivino both said the disco appeared to be in full

1989 busy year for UI Hospitals

459,000 patients treated, from transplants to premature babies

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

More than 459,000 people, including 407,384 Iowans from every county, received care at the UI Hospitals and Clinics during Fiscal Year 1989.

"(The UI Hospitals and Clinics) stand out as something very special," said Jeff Gauthier, administrative associate for UI Emergency Medical Services.

There were 924 patients transported by UI Hospitals Air Care Helicopter Service last year, all of whom were in critical condition, Gauthier said, adding that these patients are usually premature newborn babies, car accident or agricultural accident victims.

There are approximately 160 such helicopter services in the nation, but the UI was one of the first hospitals to offer the emergency flight service in a predominantly rural area, Gauthier said.

Among transplant services, the UI has a "special interest" in transplanting pancreas, said Robert Corry, UI chief of surgery. The UI has been researching diabetes for years and has transplanted about 100 pancreas since 1984, including eight last year, Corry said.

Diabetics have defective insulin secretion, insulin is produced in the pancreas, Corry said. The success rate of pancreas transplants at the UI is about 70 percent, which is the national average, he said.

The organs needed for heart, liver and pancreas transplants are donated by "heart-beating" donors, which are usually brain-dead victims of automobile accidents, Corry said. Kidneys can be transplanted from living donors.

"There is an enormous shortage of organs," Corry said. "They are a very scarce resource."

Twenty percent of patients at the UI needing bone marrow transplants received the marrow last year, said Diana Lundell, associate editor of Hospital Information Services. A total of 95 persons received bone marrow transplants at the hospital last year.

The UI is one of few hospitals nationally that offers unrelated bone marrow transplants, which are donations by a person matched to the patient by blood type, not related to the patient, Lundell said.

Most bone marrow patients suffer from blood cancers like leukemia. In order to transplant bone marrow, the patient must undergo "whole body" radiation which kills off all functioning bone marrow. The donated bone marrow is then transplanted into the patient and "migrates into their bones and starts reproducing good red and white blood cells," Lundell said.

Patients from around the nation and world seek medical attention at the UI, including persons from Italy, Bolivia, and Mexico, Lundell said.

Study examines ethics issues of medical technology

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

Because of recent advances in technology, it is more important than ever that medical professionals communicate clearly with patients and their families about available options.

This, along with several other ethical concerns within the medical profession, is the topic of a new study by Martha Carpenter, UI assistant professor of nursing. Her study mainly focuses on the ethical dilemma nurses face when working in intensive care units.

Carpenter's pilot study will include interviews of approximately 20 staff nurses, nursing administrators and physicians. She will question them on ethical issues they face and their perceived solutions to those questions.

Carpenter's study is based on information she discovered while doing her dissertation — which investigated ethical problems in a psychiatric setting. She said several factors influence ethical decision-making by nurses.

The factors include communication gaps between patients and nurses — sometimes related to technology, concerns about lack of support by hospital administrators, and fear of jeopardizing one's own or a co-worker's job by reporting concerns such as drug or alcohol problems.

Carpenter said the communication gap might involve a patient or family telling medical professionals they want the hospital to do "everything they can" in a given medical situation.

"Most people don't realize that with today's technology, essentially we can keep a body going forever," Carpenter said. "Instead, there needs to be a selection of an option that enables patients to be free of pain and/or to die with dignity."

Her study will focus on whether or not nurses are effectively incorporated into that decision-making process. She said often nurses are not involved in the process, though they deal with most patients on a 24-hour basis.

Carpenter said she believes she will find that many nurses experience a sense of "powerlessness" in that type of situation.

The initial pilot study will be conducted with medical professionals from the medical and surgical ICUs at the Johnson County Veterans' Hospital. It is funded through an $8,500 UI junior faculty seed grant and will last approximately one year.

Following the study, Carpenter will begin a larger study with approximately 50 medical professionals from the surgical, medical and neonatal ICUs at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the ICU at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City.

Legislature to debate blood center licensing, truancy law

DES MOINES (AP) — The Legislature this week faces arguments about truancy laws and putting more restrictions on smokers but also takes the first steps to sorting out its budget snarl.

As committees in both the House and Senate kick off their work in this year's session, lawmakers will move to extend a partial moratorium on farm foreclosures that has been in place for years and debate whether blood centers ought to be licensed.

House members will open their week debating Iowa's truancy laws, reopening an argument over just how long the state should force its youngsters to attend school. Iowa's truancy laws apply only until youngsters reach 16, and critics say that needs to be raised to 18 to keep more youngsters in school. Other lawmakers — and some education groups — say that it does not make sense to keep youngsters in school for years after they want to leave.

The truancy bill was bouncing back from the House to the Senate and back when last year's session ended. The full House is scheduled to renew debate on the issue Monday.

Also in the House, a committee has cleared the way for floor debate of a bill toughening Iowa's indoor smoking laws. It would bring restaurants under the law for the first time and would increase the fine to $50 from $10. Supporters of the tougher law say $10 is not enough to deter smokers bent on violating the law.

Because of the structure of the Legislature, both the House and Senate will spend most of the week in committees.

Because this year's session is the second of a two-year biennium, most legislation introduced last year remains alive but requires another round of committee approval before either chamber can begin debate.

Men charged in marina burglary

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Two Cedar Rapids men were charged with second-degree burglary Friday after Johnson County Sheriff's deputies caught them burglarizing a marina, according to Johnson County Sheriff's reports.

The defendants, Howard E. Andrews, 26, and David L. Armstrong, 24, both of Cedar Rapids, were discovered at the Mid-River Marina, Rural Route 1, Highway 965, North Liberty.

The Coralville Police Department, the Iowa State Patrol and the owner of the marina helped catch the burglars. A Cedar Rapids police helicopter was also used to apprehend Armstrong and Andrews.

Armstrong was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $25,000 bond.

Andrews was released, according to sheriff's reports.

Riverboat casinos mean work for investigators

DUBUQUE (AP) — Riverboat casinos, promoted as being a bonanza for tourism, are more than a year away from the water in Iowa but they have already been a boon for business at the Division of Criminal Investigation.

The DCI has assigned more than 34 agents to conduct 137 background checks associated with the five applications for riverboat gambling licenses in Iowa.

Other agents are going to school so they can spot gambling cheats, while others are organizing river city police departments to help agents on board the boats handle trouble makers.

The background checks, including 128 on individuals, four on potential operators, and five on the non-profit corporations applying for gambling licenses, are extensive, according to Tom Ruxlow, chief of the DCI's gaming unit. Ruxlow said the length of time for each check "depends on what we find out." But he believes all of the investigations will be completed in six to eight weeks.

The checking will continue after the licenses are awarded because the DCI then begins probing the background of all riverboat employees, anyone who works on the boat as a distributor, and the companies that manufacture or distribute the gaming equipment.

The investigation begins with a 35-page form filled out by the person or business being investigated, covering everything from personal family data to business and social acquaintances, employment history, past civil or criminal investigations and even past motor vehicle violations.

Courts

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Two UI students were charged with forgery Thursday after they allegedly forged a blank check to buy two pairs of boots worth $119.53, according to Johnson County District Court records. The defendants, Bradley S. McCorkle, 19, 730 Rienow Residence Hall, and Olen McChee III, 18, 609B Mayflower Residence Hall, were given the blank check by another person, according to court records.

McCorkle admitted forging the check, according to court records. McChee admitted that he was involved in the forgery. Preliminary hearing in the matter for both defendants is set for January 30, according to court records.

• A UI College of Dentistry project that emphasizes awareness of oral health care for the elderly has received a second place award in the 1989 Geriatric Dental Health Care Award competition.

The award, sponsored by the American Dental Association Council on Community Health, Hospital, Institutional and Medical Affairs, was given to "Oral Health Training and Referral Program for the Frail Elderly Project." The UI project aimed to increase the awareness of Iowa's nurses, nursing-home aides and home health-caregivers about the benefits of oral health care for the elderly.

An initial survey found that nursing-home aides and home health-caregivers had limited training and knowledge of how to care for or recognize oral health problems, said Henrietta Logan, project director and associate professor of preventive and community dentistry.

"The materials we developed provide basic information about cleaning teeth and dentures, recognizing oral diseases such as gingivitis and cancer, and what to do when such conditions are discovered," Logan said.

Reference and training materials developed include a workshop training kit, slide show and videotape, and an office manual and quick reference guides for home health-caregivers.

• The Department of Iowa Ladies Auxiliary Veterans of Foreign Wars presented more than $7,000 to the UI Cancer Center on January 11.

The donations represent two years of fund-raising efforts by the Ladies Auxiliary VFW on behalf of cancer research at the UI College of Medicine, said Phyllis Wallace, president of the Iowa group. The money will be used to support research in tumor immunology by Drs. George Weiner and Ross Siemers, both UI assistant professors of internal medicine.

The Cancer Center, headed by Dr. Richard DeGowin, is an interdisciplinary center that coordinates the efforts of about 100 UI faculty and staff who are involved in cancer research, patient care and education.

The Iowa Ladies Auxiliary VFW has been raising funds for cancer research for more than a decade, said Elizabeth Kellogg, former president of the group.

UI senior gets job experience as disk jockey

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Playing songs over the radio or in clubs is second nature for UI senior Jon Anne Berard.

Berard has worked for KRNA-FM radio for two years. Her temporary gig as midday disk jockey last month on the station is just one of her many accomplishments.

Berard, 23, will work weekends at KRNA this semester as she pursues a communication studies degree and a future career in radio. "There are a lot of opportunities for women in radio now," she said. "There are fewer women applying than jobs available. It's a good time to get into the business."

She has worked professionally as a club disk jockey, a disk jockey at a country easy-listening station and as a radio news announcer.

Getting her start on the UI student-run station KRUI-FM in 1984, Jon Anne said love of music, natural desire and talent, and a willingness to work hard for little pay are all necessary to succeed in radio.

"It has to be a part of your life or don't even bother with it," she said.

To get ready for each shift, Jon Anne reads the newspaper to find new music information and concert news. She describes her style as casual and says she is able to laugh at her mistakes.

"I try to always sound like I am smiling, and I usually am," she said.

Berard said she was inspired to go into radio as a high-school student. She said a morning radio show — giving the weather, news and music that carry people into their day — motivated her to become a radio disk jockey.

"Ever since then I've just always known what I've wanted to do," she said. "It's been easy for me. I've been lucky."

Berard began channeling her musical interests into a career six years ago when she started working as a disk jockey and air staff coordinator on KRUI. She also worked part-time spinning records at Dooley's Dancin' & Drinkin', 1820 S. Clinton St.

She enjoys working in the Iowa City market area because KRNA's pre-formatted style allows her the freedom to play experimental music from groups including The Cure, The Smithereens and The Red Hot Chili Peppers.

At several of her first professional disk jockey jobs, she was the only woman on the air.

In 1986, she read the evening and weekend news for six months at KFMH—KWPC-AM in Muscatine, Iowa. She then worked at KCII-AM—FM in Washington, Iowa, as a disk jockey.

In December 1986, Jon Anne became a club disk jockey at Vito's, 118 E. College St., following the introduction of a dance floor and new sound system there.

At the same time, she was a part-time student during the day and worked as a cashier at a gas station.

"That's one thing, when you work a lot of hours it really teaches you to organize your time," she said.

Jon Anne was the first woman hired as a Vito's disk jockey and now works there two nights a week.

"I've gotten 200 times better than when I started. I've learned everything there — as far as being a club jock," she said.

Vito's manager Eric Johnson said Jon Anne is a good entertainer who is able to involve the crowd and have fun herself.

"She has taken a job that most people consider lightly and put a lot of time and effort into it," Johnson said.

Jon Anne began working at KRNA two years ago as an overnight disk jockey. Last semester, she worked full-time as KRNA promotions coordinator, took a UI course and disk jockeyed on the weekends.

Together with working at Vito's at night, Jon Anne had no free time. She has since resigned her full-time promotions job at the station.

Jon Anne's musical interest reaches beyond recordings. She worked as music director for Riverfest 1989 and would like to become involved in promoting live bands.

She plans to work at KRNA following graduation and to go to New York in August for an internship with a talent management firm.

"She knows so much about different types of music that it's going to be really hard to fill her shoes," Johnson said.

Accused I.C. burglar from Hope House

Local men allegedly robbed gas station

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with second-degree burglary Thursday after he was allegedly seen breaking into a gas station with accused burglar Christopher Carter, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Michael L. Bevins, 23, 1916 Waterfront Dr., was reportedly staying at the Hope House at the time of the burglary and had signed out to spend the weekend of the January 5 with Carter.

Carter, 23, of 720 E. Market St., Apt. 2, was charged last Wednesday with second-degree burglary, attempted second-degree burglary, possession of marijuana, and escape from custody in connection with a December outbreak of burglaries involving downtown businesses.

A witness reported seeing Carter entering Russ' Amoco Service, 305 N. Gilbert St., through a window on January 7 — the same weekend Bevins was with him. The witness also reported seeing a man hiding in the bushes near Russ' Amoco Service. He was wearing clothes similar to the ones Bevins had been wearing that night.

Additional charges will be filed against Carter as the result of a continuing investigation, said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

Iowa City Police Detective Paul Sueppel would not comment Sunday on whether Bevins is being considered as a suspect in the December business burglaries.

Bevins was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $10,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing scheduled for January 22, according to court records.

Carter is being held on $30,000 in the Johnson County Jail.

UI researchers awarded grants for radiation therapy, toxic waste projects

The UI has recently been awarded three grants to study the effects of radiation therapy on the immune system and the role bacteria play in toxic waste breakdown.

Elizabeth Field, UI assistant professor of internal medicine, recently received a $10,000 grant from the Lupus Foundation of Northern Illinois to conduct the study.

Field said the study's goal is to look at how a therapy used to treat a disease of the immune system — lupus nephritis — may affect different cells that act to turn on the immune system.

"The bottom line is that the therapy may affect different subsets in different patterns," she said.

Field's study will give physicians a clearer look at the positive and negative aspects of the radiation therapy.

Caroline Harwood, UI assistant professor of microbiology, was awarded a $72,000 grant from the U.S. Army to study the breakdown of toxic waste and the role of bacteria.

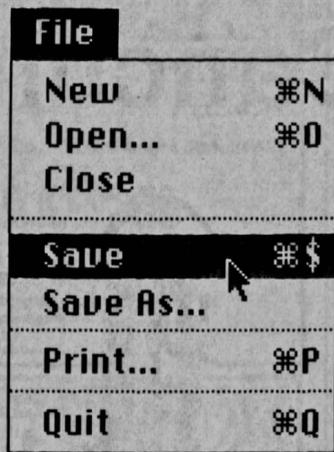

"It's to study how bacteria degrade a certain class of compounds. Among that class there are a lot of pollutants," she said.

The Eleanor Naylor Dana Trust has awarded Edy Soffer, UI assistant professor of internal medicine, a $100,000 grant to examine the effects of radiation on the esophagus. Radiation therapy that is given to patients in cases of lung cancer or other cancers may cause damage to the esophagus.

This study will look at how bacteria convert certain chemicals into harmless salts without oxygen, she said.

The world is in need of intelligent people, she added, and for that reason, students should never feel they live closed off from society or in a sheltered world.

She said that humans must "give back" to society, which they will not want to do unless they have overcome a sense of deprivation.

"If you don't have a sense of accomplishment, you won't have anything to give back, and giving back is what it's all about," she said. "It's important that your generation have a sense of accomplishment — be able to say 'I did it.'"

"The only successful ones of your generation to say 'I did it' are the athletes, and they're getting screwed because we treat them like meat. When we're sick of them we get some fresh meat," she added.

Giovanni said she teaches the works of D.H. Lawrence, Robert Frost and other white male authors in her classes.

"Why am I, a black woman, expected to teach (the works of) whites, but black (authors) are not being taught?" she asked.

"We have got to come together and I submit that academics is where it's going to happen," she said. "Something has got to change in the way we do business. Something has got to remind us that people are smarter than they seem."

non-violent marches in the South in the 1950s and 1960s in a quest to end discrimination against blacks and other minorities. He was assassinated on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn.

King's teachings were honored Sunday in Miami as about 100 to 150 Haitian exiles staged a peaceful demonstration for democracy in their Caribbean island nation. Demonstrators called for a halt in U.S. aid to Gen. Prosper Avril's government and that Avril, on a trade mission to Taiwan, be kept from returning home.

In Los Angeles on Saturday, hundreds of volunteers, including Mayor Tom Bradley, planted nearly 400 Canary Island Pine trees along a seven-mile stretch of Martin Luther King Boulevard.

At a banquet in King's honor at the University of Kansas in Lawrence on Saturday, Martin Luther King III said his father's dream is a long way from reality.

"The reality is that time has not arrived," King said. "We still have a long way to go... to try to achieve his unfinished work, to create a world where freedom, justice and equality becomes reality to all mankind."

King said black enrollment in colleges has been declining, and that black people are still denied advancement in business.

For the first time, the holiday falls this year on King's actual birthday, January 15. There were plans in all 50 states and 144 other countries for bells to ring and for a moment of silence in honor of King at 12:30 p.m. EST. The New York Stock Exchange also planned to pause, and the Liberty Bell was to ring in Philadelphia.

King's birthday became the 10th national holiday in 1986.

Forty-six states and the federal government mark the holiday. The four states that do not recognize the federal holiday are Arizona, Montana, Idaho and New Hampshire.

compliance with fire laws enacted in December 1983 after a fire at a Madrid disco killed 79 people.

Bruna said some customers were felled by "a curtain of toxic smoke" when they tried to escape up an emergency stairway. Those who used the other stairway, which led to the main entrance, escaped unharmed, he said.

One waitress who escaped up the main stairway told the Spanish news agency EFE: "I smelled something burning, and in seconds nobody could get out."

"While I was going up towards the main door, a group of customers, probably blinded by the smoke, were trying to get up the emergency steps. But I'm sure they couldn't get out, because the fire was there," said the waitress, who was not identified.

The discotheque's manager, Francisco Lacruz, told Spanish television he saw the basement ceiling glow red after he tried to switch on power to the band's instruments after an overload triggered the circuit breakers.

EFE said five of the six band members died. Other victims included the wife and parents of one of the dead musicians, EFE said.

Three days of mourning were declared for the victims, who authorities said were mostly 30 to 50 years old.

Garcia Nieto said the discotheque had been licensed Oct. 3, 1984.

It was the second catastrophic fire in Zaragoza in a decade. More than 70 people died in a July 1979 blaze at the Corona de Aragon hotel.

About 20,000 ethnic Armenians, mainly elderly people, live in Baku, although ethnic violence in the last two years has caused an exodus of Azerbaijanis and Armenians back to their home republics.

Alexander Argumanyan, a press officer for the Armenian National Movement, said at least 250,000 people gathered in Yerevan, the Armenian capital, Sunday after hearing of the violence.

He said Vano Syragedlyan, a member of the movement's directorate, urged Armenians who own firearms to volunteer to be flown by helicopter to two districts of Azerbaijan near the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Radio Moscow said the strife was kindled in Baku, a major petroleum-producing center, when two Azerbaijanis visited an Armenian family at midday and demanded they leave town. The Armenians had an ax, and the Azerbaijanis were hurt in a struggle and taken to a hospital.

One died and the other was in serious condition, the radio said.

The news enraged the crowd that gathered later in Baku.

Alesker Siyabov, a spokesman for the Azerbaijani People's Front, said the rally voted to establish a "council for national security" designed to protect Azerbaijanis.

Radio Moscow said police had 1,500 men on patrol.

"While it is important that the Board of Regents of Big Ten schools are constantly in contact, why shouldn't the students also be in contact?" Berta asked. "We thought we should do something more than just play each other in sports."

Phillip Jones, UI Dean of Student Services, said the theme of Sunday's tribute — hands across campus — and the broadcast of the inter-university satellite program can connect all universities and students in the Big Ten conference.

"We can use the technology as a way to communicate, educate and to agitate," Jones said. "You may think that's funny coming from the dean of students, but we urge students to agitate."

Commenting on the technical difficulties that temporarily waylaid the King tribute, Jones said the technical problems of putting together a satellite feed are similar to the obstacles of interpersonal communication that confront us all.

"You can't always plan when you're going to be on the air, so you've got to be ready," he said.

Politics strain 'friendship' between Jackson, Barry

WASHINGTON (AP) — They marched together in the civil rights army around Martin Luther King Jr. They call themselves friends. But whatever remains of the relationship between Marion Barry and Jesse Jackson is severely strained by today's political realities.

Barry is fighting for political survival as mayor of the nation's capital and sees his old friend Jackson as a formidable obstacle.

Observers of the byzantine local political scene in Washington speculate that whatever the mayor did or didn't say in a recent interview with the Los Angeles Times stemmed from his unease over the fact Jackson established residence in the capital in time to qualify for a campaign for mayor.

"Jesse don't want to run nothing but his mouth," Barry was quoted as telling a Times reporter. The mayor spent much of the past week trying to extinguish the political fires that his comments sparked.

Jackson has said he believes Barry's assertions that he never made any of the comments attributed to him in the Times profile.

But Jackson aides and top city officials said Jackson was angry enough to call the newspaper and ask whether Barry really made the remarks. He was told that the interview was tape-recorded.

It is easy to understand why Barry may frequently be thinking about his former civil rights colleague.

Barry and Jackson, who have been friends since both worked with King, have seen their relationship put under the microscope since Jackson's April relocation to the nation's capital fueled rumors that he would try to unseat Barry.

Jackson has said repeatedly he would never run against Barry, but he left open the possibility he would enter the race if Barry decided against seeking a fourth term.

"Given that Jackson has not eliminated the possibility of running, his presence has cast a heavy shadow over Barry's re-election effort," says Julius Hobson, a former city official who is now an adviser to Sen. Charles Robb (D-Va.) "He is not an announced candidate, but he is doing all the things that a candidate has always done in this town — like visiting the ministers — and that certainly makes it more difficult for Barry."

Barry, despite trailing several rivals in fund raising, is nonetheless predicting he can coast to re-election.

But federal prosecutors continue their investigation of Barry's ties to a convicted drug dealer, and an indictment of the mayor could cripple him politically.

GM agrees on joint Hungarian venture

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced Sunday it had reached a tentative agreement with a Hungarian government-owned automaker to jointly build cars and engines at a plant under construction in the Eastern European nation.

The deal makes GM the first U.S. automaker to invest in Eastern Europe, which has undergone tremendous political and economic liberalization in recent months, said R.L. Theis, GM's Detroit-based international spokesman. The company is to invest $150 million in the deal.

The agreement between General Motors Europe and RABA, Hungary's state-owned manufacturer of trucks, diesel engines and axles, could lead to a joint venture to build engines and cars at a plant in Szentgotthard, near the Austrian border, beginning in 1992, Theis said.

"The tentative agreement spells out the full intent of the joint venture. Now, both parties have to finalize all the details and actually form the joint venture," Theis said.

Although GM is the first U.S. automaker to announce an agreement, Japan's Suzuki Motor Co. announced Tuesday it would build a $138.9 million assembly plant near Budapest, Hungary's capital, to make Suzuki Swift subcompact cars beginning in 1992.

GM Europe President Robert Eaton and RABA Managing Director Ferenc Romvari signed the protocol Saturday in Budapest before Hungarian Deputy Prime Minister Peter Medgyessy.

"As these markets continue to open up, investing in plants there is becoming a more attractive business proposition," Eaton said in a statement. "This new strategic partnership would provide us with better access to the growing car market in Hungary and elsewhere in Eastern Europe."

Under the tentative agreement, GM would have a 67 percent interest in the Szentgotthard plant and would be allowed to appoint management staff. The plant would create about 880 jobs in the western Hungarian town, Theis said.

The world's largest automaker said about 200,000 engines would be turned out yearly, most of which would be exported for use in GM's Opel and Vauxhall cars. The rest would go into the Opel Kadett model to be built at the Hungarian plant.

100-yr.-old ophthalmologist to run for Congress in N.C.

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Henry Stenhouse says he started thinking about running for Congress when he saw all the young relatives and friends who turned up for his 100th birthday party last month.

"I got to thinking about the children of this country," Stenhouse said Friday as he sat in his small cluttered ophthalmology office. "I've been concerned about them for a long time."

"We've been doing a lot of bad planning in this country," he said. "And it's not us that's going to catch it, it's the children." Last week Stenhouse, who has never held public office, hitched a ride with a visiting son for the 60-mile trip to Raleigh to file as a Republican candidate for the 3rd Congressional District.

His life has not been the same since. "I've never been under such a siege in my life," he said, as he answered the third phone call in less than 30 minutes. "I've had calls from everywhere, people stopping by wanting to help with the campaign. It's been just wonderful."

Stenhouse said he hasn't worked much on a campaign plan yet, but expects to use a lot of word-of-mouth advertising and speaking to groups whenever he gets the chance.

Eating disorders

For many, dieting can lead to compulsive, destructive behavior

Heidi Pederson
Special to The Daily Iowan

Starting a diet or exercise program to lose weight and shape up is a resolution thousands of people make every day. But while most people can only stick to their vows for a few days, others take the prospect of weight loss too seriously and become candidates for developing an eating disorder.

For these people, dieting becomes a deadly serious business.

As much as 3 percent of the American population suffers from some type of eating disorder, according to Wayne Bowers, M.D., a clinical psychologist at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. Among 18- to 22-year-olds, the percentage is thought to be as high as 20 percent.

Anorexia nervosa is the most common and well-known disorder, typically developing during adolescence. Its sufferers usually have a deep fear of becoming fat, and dramatic weight loss is achieved by a sharp reduction in caloric intake and intense, sometimes obsessive, exercising. Victims will literally starve, and even though they are drastically underweight, they will continue to insist they are still overweight. Many anorexics say they "feel fat," although they are obviously emaciated.

Bulimia often occurs during the late teens or early twenties. It is a particularly painful disorder, involving routine episodes of bingeing on massive amounts of food — to the point of pain — and then purging the contents of the stomach through self-induced vomiting or large doses of laxatives.

Like anorexics, bulimics are obsessively concerned with body shape and weight, although their interest in losing weight is often not as extreme as that experienced by anorexia sufferers. However, the two disorders can easily become intertwined.

A symptom common to anorexia and bulimia — both of which develop mainly in females — is an overwhelming importance placed on food, including when it's eaten, what is eaten and how much is eaten. Dieting becomes an obsession and the numbers that appear on the scale are all-consuming, said Dr. William Yates, head of psychiatry at UI Hospitals.

"These people spend 60 to 80 percent of their waking hours thinking about the issues of weight, dieting, and how they eat or whether they will eat," Yates said.

Whether someone develops an eating disorder depends on a number of factors, said Bowers. He cites societal ideals as a small but important consideration that conditions females to think they need to become thin.

"There's a strong emphasis on being thin in our culture. It's probably to the point that being thin means you're capable, competent. The fact is, you can see quite a bit of it in advertising," Bowers said.

Although depression is probably a major factor in the development of eating disorders, Yates said at this point in medical research it isn't clear whether depression can actually bring on the disorder or is just a compounding problem.

A genetic propensity to be overweight is another factor Yates doesn't discount as a possible contributor. "If you look at two women, one (who has) a genetic propensity to be overweight and one who doesn't, the one with the propensity to be overweight and who tries to lose a lot of weight by excessive fasting or rigorous dieting may in fact be at much more risk than the person who can be a normal weight without dieting," he said.

Although there is no "typical" way an eating disorder develops, doctors have observed certain patterns in anorexia and bulimia sufferers. Often, it starts when the individual is concerned with being too fat and begins a diet with the intent to lose three or four pounds.

According to Bowers, "From the initial weight loss, their friends will give them a lot of praise ... They just sort of get caught up in it until it becomes a major part of their lives. Once all other factors fall into place, it's very hard to change it around."

When a person is in the grips of an eating disorder, the physical and behavioral changes are dramatic. The individual often becomes withdrawn and increasingly isolated, hostile or unusually cold to friends. Sometimes, sufferers will neglect their personal appearance, even if it was previously important to them.

From a physiological standpoint, Yates considers anorexia to be more dangerous than bulimia, because severe weight loss takes a heavy toll on the body.

"The body will respond to the loss of fat by burning off other structures, such as muscle. The body will become weaker, and other (risks) are hypothermia and a decrease in mental efficiency," he said.

Bulimia, depending on the method of purging used, can result in dental erosion, irritation of the stomach lining and electrolyte imbalances, which can lead to cardiac rhythm disturbances or sudden death.

According to Bowers, there is a wide approach to treating eating disorders, with the two main practices being psychotherapy and drug treatment, often in combination. Many bulimics have found relief in anti-depressant medications, particularly Prozac, a relatively new drug that has been producing encouraging results in bulimics. Medication is not as effective when used on anorexics, however, who find help primarily in the form of psychotherapy. Treatment can last from several months to years in severe cases.

Although the prognosis for eating disorder sufferers varies, Yates said it has been negatively exaggerated. With bulimics, the success rate is 70 to 75 percent — a rate consistent with other psychological disorders like anxiety or sudden mood swings.

"With anorexia, many times symptoms can be sort of a phase-of-life problem," he said. "Symptoms can last for a few months and with treatment, or sometimes even without treatment, with spontaneous remission, symptoms will go away. With others, symptoms can be more chronic. They can last for years."

The attention given to eating disorders in recent years has bolstered research on the problem. Medical experts are now looking into the prospect of not only helping those who are already suffering, but pinpointing the factors which predispose some people towards developing a disorder.

Therapy available for anorexia, bulimia

Heidi Pederson
Special to The Daily Iowan

When Jenny decided to go on a diet her freshman year at the UI, she never imagined that thinness would soon become an all-consuming obsession.

What started as a simple desire to "lose a few pounds" increasingly became the focus of her thoughts, until food and her weight were all that seemed to matter. It eventually made her so miserable that she began to think suicide was the only way out.

Like a large number of college-aged women, Jenny has developed an eating disorder. In her case, she has what is clinically known as bulimia nervosa, a combination of anorexia nervosa — or self-starvation — and bulimia, where sufferers eat large amounts of food and then purge the contents of their stomachs, either by vomiting or use of laxatives.

According to William Yates, M.D., head of psychiatry at UI Hospitals and Clinics, studies estimate that as many as 15 percent of college women display some form of bulimic or anorexic behavior.

Jenny, now a 22-year-old chemistry major, has been in and out of treatment programs for two years, but they have been largely unsuccessful. She said having an eating disorder is "hell."

"I didn't mean to develop anorexia, desperately wanted to," she said, adding that sometimes during a binge, she could consume as many as 10,000 calories.

Two years after developing the disorder, Jenny was finally confronted by her parents, who took her to see a psychiatrist. Therapy has helped, but it hasn't completely cured her. Jenny said she wonders if she will ever be completely free from the disorder.

Kathy, a junior nursing major who developed anorexia and then bulimia as a high-school freshman, said she first started worrying about her weight because she was concerned about what others would think of her at her new school. After starting a diet, her desire to lose weight quickly took over her personality, as it does to the majority of sufferers.

"I became really depressed," she said. "I isolated myself, and I was mean and nasty to everyone." There were many moments when she considered suicide.

Fortunately for Kathy, her mother confronted her about it when she was a senior in high school, and after admitting to a problem, Kathy was put in counseling. Like Jenny, Kathy has been helped by treatment, but she still battles the disorder.

Sara, a sophomore who has been bulimic for years, said that the only people who can really understand eating disorders are the people who suffer from them.

For Sara, bulimia became a way of reacting to things that upset or angered her, or even a way to relieve boredom. "When I binged, I buried my problems in the food," she said. "I didn't have to deal with them."

She began her recovery in a hospital treatment program, and with the help of a psychologist, Sara said she has learned to deal with her problems more effectively. She continues to attend group therapy meetings, realizing that she could easily revert to her old behavior if she doesn't take precautions.

Medical and psychological experts have yet to pinpoint the exact cause, or causes, of eating disorders, but theories suggest that everything from neurological imbalances to troubled family relationships can be contributing factors. Researchers agree eating disorders are a result of many factors — a crucial one being the high value American society places on physical beauty and thinness.

Whatever its causes, an eating disorder causes its victims considerable pain. Jenny describes the fear of food and of gaining weight as "paralyzing."

"To an anorexic," she said, "losing weight becomes the focus of almost every thought, and your feelings about yourself are based totally on how much you weigh. It's like almost constant anxiety."

The Daily Iowan/Lambert White

Sara's bulimic bingeing and purging became addictive. "For me, it started out as the perfect way to diet," she says. "But then I tried to stop and found I couldn't control it. It controlled me."

While therapy hasn't cured Kathy or Jenny, they both say that the process has at least helped them to understand themselves and the reasons for their behavior.

Sara, Jenny and Kathy all say that society needs to be better educated on the dangers of eating disorders, and the kind of people who suffer from them. "I have good friends — who don't know I have bulimia — who think people with eating disorders are crazy," said Sara, "when actually, your sister or a close friend could have one, and you might never know."

For her part, Jenny advises people who suspect they know someone with an eating disorder to confront them about it.

"That person most likely wants help desperately," she said. "But if someone doesn't reach out to them, they'll stay trapped."

L. Douglas Wilder elected nation's first black gov.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — L. Douglas Wilder became the nation's first elected black governor Saturday and said his inauguration at the spot where the Confederacy collapsed almost 125 years ago shows "oppression can be lifted."

"We mark today not the victory of party or the accomplishments of an individual, but the triumph of an idea," Wilder said in his inaugural address outside the Virginia Capitol, which was capital of the Confederacy in the Civil War. "The idea that all men are created equally."

Wilder, a lawyer and Democratic former legislator and lieutenant governor who turns 59 Wednesday, took the oath of office from retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell, a Richmond native who headed the city's school board during the period of resistance to school integration.

Wilder, who is divorced, was flanked by his two daughters and son as he took the oath. A largely black crowd estimated by police at more than 35,000 was more than double attendance at the 1985 inauguration.

Wilder said his inauguration represents a triumph for ideals expressed in the Declaration of Independence by Thomas Jefferson, a Virginia governor during the Revolutionary War.

"If these words about freedom are to be heard at all today, I hope they will be heard by the young people of this commonwealth," Wilder said.

"I want them to know that oppression can be lifted, that discrimination can be eliminated, that poverty need not be binding, that disability can be overcome," he said. "And the offer of opportunity in a free society carries with it the responsibility of hard work, the rejection of drugs and other false highs, and a willingness to work with others whatever their color or national origin," he continued.

Cheers interrupted Wilder's 15-minute address five times, once when he proclaimed "freedom is meaningless when a woman's right to choose is regulated outside the dictates of her own faith and conscience."

Wilder's support of abortion rights was a prominent issue in his fiercely fought campaign against Republican J. Marshall Coleman, who opposes abortion. A recount showed that Coleman lost by 6,741 votes, or less than half a percent, in the closest race for governor in the state's history.

Wilder became the state's 66th governor and the first black to be elected governor in any state. Black Lt. Gov. P.B.S. Pinchback served as Louisiana governor for 43 days in late 1872 and early 1873 after the elected governor was impeached.

Music for the inaugural ceremony included "God Bless America" and "America the Beautiful." But not a note was heard of the state's official song, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." As a freshman state senator in 1970, Wilder sought to have the song abolished because its lyrics contain the word "darkies."

The inauguration was preceded by a prayer service and the ceremonial presentation of the keys to the Executive Mansion by outgoing Democratic Gov. Gerald Baliles.

native, attended the prayer service. Wilder hadn't let Jackson campaign on his behalf, but Wilder's press secretary, Laura Dillard, said Jackson was invited to the inauguration because "it's appropriate. He's a leading national figure in Democratic circles."

Jackson described the inauguration as a historic moment.

"To go from the hull of a slave ship to governor is a great American story," he said. "It's a great world story."

Wilder said an economic slowdown would challenge his administration "but progress will be possible."

"Resources employed in the past for the finer things in life can be — and will have to be — deployed for the more serious of our needs. For we know that freedom is but a word for the man or woman who needs and cannot find a job."

Wilder said he will tell the state legislature on Monday his ideas for handling the state's projected $900 million revenue shortfall over the next two years.

The weekend, however, was devoted to celebrating his inauguration with a parade, public reception and inaugural ball.

About 12,500 tickets costing $50 or more were sold for the ball at the Richmond Coliseum. A protest sign at the inauguration, referring to the largely poor neighborhood in Richmond where Wilder grew up, read: "Is there a ball for Church Hill?"

"The eyes of the nation are on Virginia," said Mildred Swann, a Hampton social services worker in her 40s. During her four-hour wait for the ceremony to begin, she recalled how she evaded Klan gunfire as she tried to get fellow blacks in Mississippi to register to vote in the early 1960s.

"For me to see something like this in my lifetime — there's some hope for the world," she said. When Wilder was introduced, she bowed her head and cried.

Exxon spills 567,000 gallons of heating oil on East Coast

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — A half-million-gallon oil spill that one official dubbed Exxon's "mini-Alaska" has fouled one of the East Coast's richest spawning grounds, and environmentalists fear it will cause long-term devastation.

The Environmental Protection Agency said it was prepared to fine Exxon Corp. $10,000 a day starting Wednesday unless it received a detailed explanation of the January spill of home heating oil in the Arthur Kill shipping channel between New Jersey and the New York City borough of Staten Island.

New Jersey filed suit Friday against Exxon over the 567,000-gallon spill — which the company originally had pegged at just 5,000 gallons. But New York officials decided not to sue because the company agreed to pay for an environmental study and damages.

Carcasses of oil-coated ducks and dying seagulls have been recovered from the shores of Prall's Island, one of the Audubon Society's oldest urban sanctuaries. By midday Saturday, 369 birds had been counted, dead by the Coast Guard and dozens more were being cleaned and treated for injuries.

"The number we find dead are obviously very conservative numbers," said Bruce Freeman, administrator for the marine fisheries division of the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection.

"The ones you find aren't necessarily all the ones that died. Some of these may fly into another area and die weeks later or months later," he said.

Exxon's wildlife coordinator, John Launchi, said Saturday that the waterway is clean and the cleanup crew will focus on sopping up oil in the marshlands.

"The cleanup effort is lessening because we've recovered all the oil from the Arthur Kill," he said. "But the maintenance work will go on for a long time."

The fish and organisms that have evolved to survive in the long-polluted waterways may not be able to take this latest punch, said Judith Weis, a Rutgers University doctor of zoology who has studied the waterway for 10 years.

"They may not be able to produce as well; their eggs may not hatch properly," she said. "We are looking at the few survivors as it is. Think of them as the heroes who have managed to persist in this dreadful place."

"Now they could be pushed over the brink." Weis, who is on leave from Rutgers and working at the National Science Foundation in Washington, said: "I would certainly not predict that the populations will be totally wiped out. I can predict that their populations will be sharply reduced."

As the food supply becomes more scarce, birds will be forced to fly to areas such as the Hackensack Meadows to survive, said Peter Dunne, spokesman for the New Jersey Audubon Society. That will force birds that normally migrate there to make room for the Arthur Kill birds.

Bus-train collision kills 33

LEON, Mexico — A freight train struck a bus on the outskirts of the northern city of Leon, killing at least 33 people and injuring 26, a Red Cross official said.

"The bus tried to outrun the train, but it was overloaded," said Jose Luis Quintero, head of the Red Cross in Leon, 170 miles northwest of Mexico City. He quoted witnesses.

All the casualties were from the bus, Quintero said. He said at least 20 of the injured were in critical condition.

The accident occurred at a railroad crossing on the edge of the city less than a mile from the Leon train station, the official news agency Notimex said.

Quintero said the bus was from a line that runs from the countryside into town. Fifty-nine people were aboard the bus, which has a passenger capacity of 45, he said.

The 18-car freight train was on a run from Mexico City to Ciudad Juarez, a northern city on the Texas-Mexico border.

Quintero said the injured were taken to hospitals in Leon, a city of about 2 million in Guanajuato state.

Notimex said the bus driver was among those killed.

Women face high risk of heart disease

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — More than half of American women age 55 to 74 have elevated cholesterol levels that "pose a major risk of heart attack and stroke," the American Heart Association said Sunday.

In the annual update of its statistics, the heart association said that by age 55, women are as likely as men to develop high blood pressure. By age 65, women have a higher risk than men.

The most recent figures show that heart disease and strokes killed 976,706 Americans in 1987 — almost as many as died from all other causes combined. That amounts to one heart-disease death every 32 seconds.

Cancer, by comparison, killed 477,190.

The statistics were released at the opening of the heart association's annual science writers' forum, at which scientists report on recent heart-disease research.

This year's report focuses on the risks of heart disease in women. The tally shows that more than half of all women age 55 to 74 have blood cholesterol levels above 240, the level at which heart-disease risk increases substantially.

Only one-third of men in that age group have cholesterol levels over 240, the heart association said.

Compensation program awards $22 million

WASHINGTON — A unique federal compensation system has awarded $22 million to families with children who died or showed injuries after being vaccinated for whooping cough and other diseases.

Created by the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986, the system administered by the U.S. Claims Court provides families an alternative to time-consuming, sometimes fruitless lawsuits against pharmaceutical companies and doctors.

The claims court awarded $1 million to Joshua Schroeder, who experienced seizures after being given two shots of a childhood vaccine for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (whooping cough). Joshua, now 12, is developmentally retarded.

Banks extend grace period for Campeau

NEW YORK — A group of banks agreed Sunday to give troubled retailing giant Campeau Corp. a five-day extension before deciding whether it is in default on a $2.34 billion loan, a banking industry source said.

"The company asked for an extension and the banks granted that extension," said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The banks, led by Citibank, earlier granted a two-week extension for the Canadian company to prove that it was restructuring and would be able to repay the loan. That extension was to end Monday.

The source said Campeau requested the additional grace period Friday and that it was granted by the banks Sunday.

Columbia astronauts focus on experiments

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The Columbia astronauts soared past the halfway point of their 10-day space journey Sunday, focusing on experiments and photography as they spent a more relaxed day orbiting the Earth.

After releasing one satellite and rescuing another last week, the five astronauts turned their attention to the mission's secondary goals — several scientific and medical tests.

"Welcome on board Columbia on a Sunday afternoon," Commander Dan Brandenstein said while shuttle cameras beamed down sweeping views of the Earth. "Our Sunday, I think, was much like everyone else's Sunday around the country. It was probably one of our easier days during the mission."

Wm. Bryson appointed atty. in Noriega hearing

Prosecutor worked in North trial previously

MIAMI (AP) — A top Justice Department lawyer who played a role in the Oliver North case was named on Saturday to help lead the prosecution of ousted Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega on drug charges.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said Deputy U.S. Solicitor General William Bryson and two Miami assistants would lead the prosecution team, and removed himself from the case.

Lehtinen said at a news conference that he never planned to prosecute Noriega despite appearing as co-counsel at Noriega's arraignment.

"My approach has always been to assemble teams of experienced assistants to win the many long, complex cases we face here," the prosecutor said. "The Noriega case has been no different."

Noriega, who surrendered January 3 to U.S. troops who invaded Panama, is accused of using his country to protect shipments of cocaine, drug-processing chemicals and drug money. It is believed he is held in a basement apartment at the federal courthouse. The February, 1988 indictment named 15 other people.

Bryson will coordinate the drafting of briefs and argument of legal issues in the case, Lehtinen said.

Bryson is a former law clerk to Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall and has been with the Justice Department since 1978. He was named deputy solicitor general in 1986 after heading the criminal appellate section.

He was acting solicitor general last year, and during that time wrote the government's Supreme Court brief urging the justices to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision guaranteeing a woman's right to an abortion.

Bryson was also involved last year in the attorney general's effort to prevent leaks of classified information at former White House aide North's Iran-Contra trial.

Classified information is a concern in the Noriega case because of the fallen Panamanian ruler's long association with the CIA.

Dexter Lehtinen

"My approach has always been to assemble teams of experienced assistants to win the many long, complex cases we face here," — Dexter Lehtinen

Lehtinen said all information needed to successfully prosecute the case will be provided to prosecutors.

"The United States government has every intention of providing all material necessary for the prosecution," he said. "Mr. Bush has said that."

Defense attorneys already are asking for classified materials, Lehtinen said.

Also named to head the team were Assistant U.S. Attorneys Michael Patrick "Pat" Sullivan and Myles Malman, both longtime Miami prosecutors.

Lehtinen said Attorney General Richard Thornburgh did not order him off the case.

Lehtinen said it was his decision to not try the case.

COURTS AND CENSORSHIP

End of "fair use"

Scholars, beware. The days of "fair use" of primary sources may be over.

In the past, unpublished documents, such as the diaries and letters of public figures, have been available for direct quotation in critical and historical writing under the doctrine of "fair use." Though any original work is copyrighted (and therefore protected) the moment it is written, the law and the courts have long recognized the legitimate interest of scholars, biographers and critics in direct quotation of sources.

Now, all that has changed. A recent series of court cases has escalated the attack on "fair use," and in the last of these — a suit brought by the heirs of scientist and author L. Ron Hubbard against his unauthorized biographer, Russell Miller — the court swept away "fair use" entirely as a defense.

The court's ruling on Miller's book, like congressionally imposed restrictions on N.E.A. funding, has draped a wet blanket of self-censorship over the publishing community. As Newsweek reported last month, books from former New York Mayor Ed Koch's collected letters, to James Reston Jr.'s forthcoming biography of John Connolly, have seen sections omitted almost overnight. Other books, which rely foursquare on quotation, may never see publication at all.

Certainly this is not what the court intended when it chose to emphasize the rights of authors to be protected over the rights of scholars and biographers (also authors) to use another's words. It is the height of absurdity that a court's ruling protecting writers should result in fewer books being written and published.

It is not for championing the principle of authorial copyright that the court should be faulted, but for its thorough exclusion of one principle on behalf of another, and its failure to address the reality of historical record-keeping.

It is not, generally speaking, the design of scholars, critics, historians, biographers — and for that matter, reporters — to rob other writers of their words and the proceeds that may be derived from them. They quote in order to be accurate; they quote because they cannot proceed without doing so, and their undertaking is a noble one. "Fair use" was a reasonable practice — and legal principle — because it gave appropriate weight to the necessity of historical memory and critical synthesis, against the rights of authors to be protected.

If humanity has a moral obligation to know about its past, then scholarship deserves protected status in the courts. The sooner the recent ruling is challenged, the better.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Myopic tax cut

The Bush administration on Thursday announced its opposition to a proposed cut in Social Security payroll taxes, and despite the political appeal of the measure, President George Bush has made the right decision.

The plan, which was proposed by Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.), would repeal this year's scheduled tax hike and further cut the rate in January of 1991. Moynihan and other Democrats have described the measure as a tax cut for the poor and working people, and have said that they expected bipartisan support. The administration's opposition came as a surprise.

Bush's opposition to the measure is likely to draw fire from the political left, especially since he recently advocated deep cuts in the capital gains tax, which are beneficial mostly to the rich. But the president's opposition to Moynihan's plan does not stem from an alleged animosity towards working people. The tax cut is simply the wrong solution to current Social Security abuses.

Each year the Social Security system runs a surplus; that is, more money is collected in payroll taxes than is paid out in the form of benefits. Because members of the Baby-Boomer generation are currently in the workforce, there is a broader tax base from which to draw funds and fewer retired people to pay. The annual surplus is intended to be saved until the Baby-Boomers move into retirement, when the taxes of the workforce will not be enough to pay for guaranteed Social Security benefits.

But due to recent budget crunches, this money has been frittered away to pay for other programs, leaving Social Security solvent but incapable of handling the Baby-Boomer retirement years. The stated purpose of Moynihan's tax cut is to get rid of Social Security surpluses so taxes collected for Social Security will not be used for other programs.

Moynihan is right in opposing abuses of Social Security surplus funds. But to advocate a tax cut to get rid of the surpluses altogether is a grave mistake. It would make much more sense to simply restrict the use of the funds and thus build up the surplus as much as possible while the Baby-Boomers are still working. To support the proposed tax cut is to irresponsibly ignore the future of Social Security.

Why not exclude everybody?

Once again, the issue of women in combat has been raised to public debate. During the recent invasion of Panama by United States military forces, an attack-dog kennel, heavily guarded by Panamanian Defense Forces, was successfully captured by a platoon of American troops led by Capt. Linda Bray. Gunshots were fired on both sides. Three PDF soldiers were killed in battle. American troops — including Capt. Bray — could easily have been killed.

The next day, Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder, chair of the House Armed Services subcommittee on military installations, said that she was introducing legislation to adopt a Pentagon advisory committee's proposal that would allow women to enter all military specialties, including combat, for a four-year test period. Bray's experience, Schroeder noted, "showed how silly the whole combat exclusion is."

When asked during a press conference if he would support changes in the restrictions on women in combat, George Bush responded in his typically precise and unambiguous manner: "No, I think this is a matter of willingly accept — listen to recommendations from the Defense Department but these were not combat assignments. But anytime you have a highly trained gung-ho volunteer force, and they're caught up in some of the firefights that went on, a person, man or woman, can be inflicted — put into a combat situation."

And so the debate was on. Those in opposition to women in combat positions claim "historical experience, common sense and American social mores" as their general line of argument. Women are too frail, they contend, to handle the physical and mental stamina required to endure the stresses of battle.

Moreover, women on the front lines of war would distract male soldiers who would naturally seek to protect their female counterparts. This in turn would erode the group cohesion that has traditionally been the esprit de corps that makes for effective, disciplined fighting units.

Finally, the opposition argues, Americans simply would not accept seeing their daughters, sisters, wives or mothers returned home from battle in body bags. This national revulsion to seeing women killed in battle would make it virtually impossible to engage in war at all, no matter how necessary and just the cause. The United States would be, literally and figuratively, emasculated.

On the other hand, those in favor of allowing women in combat positions claim that "equal rights" is at the heart of the issue. Combat today, they argue, depends less on physical strength than it does on the ability to understand and operate complex, high-tech weapons. While certain minimum physical standards are necessary for anyone, male or female, who would go into battle, there's no more reason to deny women combat positions on this basis than there is to deny them similarly demanding positions in police and fire depart-

As to the claim that women in combat would somehow undermine the male bonding process that fighting units require, the proponents of women on the front lines point out that this is simply another version of the specious reasoning that kept black soldiers segregated from white soldiers throughout most of our country's military history. After President Truman ordered integration of the armed forces in 1948, the argument was proved false.

And to the argument that Americans would feel squeamish seeing women return home from war in body bags, the proponents counter with the rhetorical question: Why should we feel any less squeamish seeing young men return home in body bags? If equality is the absolute value we claim it to be, then why deny women the equal opportunity to give their lives — the "supreme sacrifice" — for their country?

And finally, those favoring women in combat roles argue that military custom requires combat experience as a condition for promotion to the upper ranks, despite the tenuous connection between surviving combat and the paper-pushing and ceremonial protocol that constitute most of the duties of the Army's high brass. Without the opportunity to serve in combat, the women who make up 11 percent of today's all-volunteer Army are effectively locked out of promotion.

Personally, I can't think of an issue that cries out more loudly for ardent ambivalence than the issue of women in combat.

My knee-jerk liberal inclinations make me instantly suspicious of all the arguments mounted against allowing women into combat roles. Given a common physical standard of acceptance for both men and women, equality demands the admission of women into those roles.

But yet I can't quite get myself to the point of going all out in support of a woman's equal opportunity to be blown away on some distant battlefield. I've spent too much of my life championing idealistic causes aimed at doing away with military combat altogether; it's not easy now to work up a head of steam over an issue that assumes the reality, if not necessity, of war.

Maybe it would be better if Congresswoman Schroeder would introduce legislation to rid the military of its nonsensical requirement of combat duty as a qualification for promotion. Perhaps then, women such as Capt. Bray might be able to make it up the chain of command without having to show the scars of battle. And perhaps then, women such as Capt. Bray might be able to provide the military with leadership that would help keep us out of wars rather than squabbling over who's best fit to fight the wars that we shouldn't be fighting in the first place.

Stuart case: Fault lies not with media alone

When Charles Stuart's body was fished out of Boston's Mystic River last week, it triggered this year's Great Media Debate: Did the press contribute to racial tension by too readily believing Stuart's dramatic tale of robbery and murder at the hands of a black gunman?

Last October, the country was riveted by audio tapes of Charles Stuart's call from his car phone to police, by TV tapes of him and his wife sitting bloodied in the front seat of their car, by the horror of what apparently happened to this "Camelot" couple.

Carol Stuart died of her wounds, as did their unborn son; Charles almost died from a stomach wound and was in intensive care for five weeks. The political establishment and the press of Boston went into overdrive.

Jeff Greenfield

Front page editorials called for a "get tough" approach to crime; politicians demanded a return to the death penalty; police swept through the black sections of the Mission Hill neighborhood where the crime occurred, detaining black men who seemed to fit Charles Stuart's description of his attacker.

Now that it appears Charles Stuart shot his wife, and that greed for insurance money and a possible romantic triangle accounted for the crime, much of Boston's black leadership has demanded accountability from the politicians and the press.

Why, they ask, did the press so readily believe a black man had committed the crime? Why were so many police detailed to solve the crime when similarly shocking crimes in the black community, including random killings of a young girl and a teenage boy, did not draw nearly as much attention and police resources? Why were the media so ready to describe black neighborhoods as dangerous, crime-ridden places?

And why did the press so eagerly point to a young black man named Willie Bennett as a "prime suspect" in the case?

In this case, I believe, the answers to these questions tell us more about human nature and about the nature of the urban crime problem than they do about the sins of the media.

First, the reason the police and press believed Charles Stuart's story is that it seemed impossible to disbelieve: A man who fakes an attack on himself is not likely to shoot himself in the stomach and nearly kill himself.

Had Charles Stuart shown up with a wound in the foot, by contrast, suspicion would have been immediate, especially since most murders happen between people who know each other. But to believe that a man would risk death is asking police and the press for an excessive measure of skepticism.

Second, Willie Bennett, a man with a 25-year criminal record and an IQ of 65, had boasted to at least one relative that he had in fact shot the Stuarts. At the very least, that gave police reason to think that he had done the crime.

Perhaps most significantly, beyond assuming that a crime victim would try to give police an accurate description of his victim, there is good reason why Stuart's lie was believed (indeed, the initial reaction among black leaders was not to discount Stuart's story, but to demand equal compassion for the black victims of black perpetrators: a completely justifiable response).

In Boston in 1988, 100 homicides were committed; 63 of the victims were black. In that same city, where 23 percent of the population is black, blacks account for 65 percent of violent crime arrests. As in almost every big city in America, blacks are predominantly perpetrators and victims.

This is where the real media failure lies: not in prominently reporting the plausible story of Charles Stuart, but in neglecting the daily horror of crime in the poorer neighborhoods of our cities; in recognizing the human horror of violent crime only when it happens to "us."

Day after day, night after night, this wave of violence oppresses the men and women and children of our neighborhoods; it is the single biggest threat to their lives and futures. The problem is not that the media "stigmatizes" these neighborhoods, but that it does not treat this condition as an urgent violation of the most elemental of human rights.

Soviet paper claims diplomat has been charged with spying

MOSCOW (AP)—The Communist Party daily Pravda said Sunday that a Soviet diplomat code-named "Donald" who spied for the FBI and CIA was caught, confessed and has been sentenced to death.

The newspaper said he was one of the most important of about 30 Western spies caught by the Soviets in recent years.

There was no independent confirmation of the report, which did not identify the spy's real name or say when he was arrested or whether he had been shot.

In Washington, an FBI press duty officer, Greg Jones, said he had no comment on the Pravda story.

CIA spokesman Bill Devine also refused to comment. "It's our standard procedure that we neither confirm nor deny such allegations," Devine said.

The Pravda report reserved a prominent role for a KGB official, Col. Alexander Dukhanin, who has been criticized by a legislative commission investigating charges of official corruption extending all the way to Politburo member Yegor Ligachev.

The article could only serve to help the reputation of Dukhanin, who freed a former Moldavian Communist Party official who reportedly may have been the sole link between Ligachev and Uzbekistan party officials convicted of taking bribes.

Ligachev, 70, reportedly the conservative force on the Politburo, has denied any wrongdoing.

Pravda claimed that "Donald" began spying for the Americans in November 1961, when he was a high-ranking Soviet representative at U.N. headquarters in New York. He supposedly met an FBI agent, "John F.," in the street after making his acquaintance at a party.

Information changed hands, and the man the U.S. intelligence services code-named "Donald" was recruited, Pravda said. It said the Soviet diplomat, with access to classified information on a broad range of topics, fed it regularly to the FBI and later to the CIA.

"Donald" gave the Americans political and economic information, data on chemical and bacteriological defenses, and even information about diseases of rice, corn and wheat, Pravda said.

He worked for the CIA in India, the newspaper said, where he was allegedly equipped by a U.S. spy with sophisticated espionage devices that enabled him to send information from unlikely places, for example a bus as it passed by the U.S. Embassy.

While in India, "Donald" was warned that a CIA leak to the media had informed them that a Soviet official at the U.N. had been recruited as a spy by the Americans in the 1960s, Pravda said.

The news put the man on his guard, but he failed to notice he was under heavy surveillance and was caught red-handed in an unspecified act of espionage, Pravda said. He confessed and was sentenced to death, the newspaper said.

Dukhanin, according to Pravda, spared no efforts to search for the man "like for a needle in a haystack."

Roman Chervontsev, an aide to Moscow prosecutor Telman Gdlyan, who lodged the charges against Ligachev, said in a telephone interview Sunday that the newly created KGB press center conducted a public relations campaign on Dukhanin's behalf before the commission on corruption reported to the Soviet Congress of People's Deputies in December.

Officers of the Soviet state security police distributed leaflets to Congress deputies lauding Dukhanin's service, specifically crediting him with unmasking Western spies, Chervontsev said. Whatever the truth about "Donald," Pravda's lengthy story could only give Dukhanin's prestige another boost.

Weak yen, high U.S. inflation make N.Y., Tokyo stock exchanges bearish

The Associated Press

Friday's big drop on world stock markets and increasing worries about inflation and interest rates gave investors a jolt, and analysts say the news isn't likely to improve soon.

In Tokyo, a weak yen and soaring interest rates caused the Nikkei average of 225 stocks to slide 653.36 points to 37,516.77 on Friday, the biggest one-day point decline in the index since November 1987.

Japanese markets could remain weak at least until elections for the lower house of Parliament next month, experts said.

News later Friday on Wall Street that U.S. wholesale price inflation hit an eight-year high of 4.8 percent in 1989 exacerbated the decline. The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 71.46 points, or 1.59 percent, the biggest one-day point drop since October's 290-point plunge.

Inflation fears also depressed stocks in London. Frankfurt's stock exchange avoided a selloff, but inflation worries have been pushing up interest rates in West Germany.

The global trend toward higher interest rates threatens to weaken a U.S. economy many analysts already believe is bordering on recession. High interest rates and a weak economy don't bode well for the stock market.

"It's a very good time to be cautious," said Robert Brusca, chief financial economist at Nikko Securities Co. International Inc. in New York.

Investors should get a respite Monday because Japan's markets are closed for a national holiday and the U.S. government bond market is closed for Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

That could limit selling in stocks because investors usually look to put their money in bonds when they unload stocks, said Kathleen Stephansen, senior economist at the brokerage Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp.

U.S. investors may have to wait several weeks for positive news, Stephansen said Sunday. The economy remains very weak, hurting the outlook for corporate profits. But the Federal Reserve can't lower interest rates to stimulate the economy because inflation remains stubbornly high, she said.

"That's the worst kind of situation for the stock market," Stephansen said.

Strength in the Tokyo market helped stabilize world markets in the aftermath of the 1987 crash and last October's mini-crash, but the news from Japan lately has been negative. The Nikkei average has fallen almost 1,400 points, or 3.7 percent, in the first seven sessions of the new year.

The yen has weakened because of concerns that the ruling, pro-business Liberal Democratic Party might lose its majority in the lower house of Parliament next month. The currency's weakness forces Japan to pay more for imports of fuel and raw materials, putting pressure on inflation and interest rates.

The United States is particularly vulnerable to higher interest rates abroad because the country needs big inflows of foreign capital to finance its trade deficit. But over the past year, U.S. interest rates have declined while rates overseas have risen, making investments abroad more attractive.

Keating says S&L losses avoidable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lincoln Savings and Loan executive Charles Keating said Sunday that taxpayers could have been saved half a trillion dollars in savings and loan losses if regulators had listened to the five senators for whom he raised campaign money.

Keating, who is a central figure in the S&L crisis and an accompanying congressional ethics scandal involving the five senators, blamed regulators for the collapse of Lincoln and hundreds of other thrifts.

"Had they listened to the senators and had they listened to me, there wouldn't be this mess today," he said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" show. "I'm convinced that the cost of this debacle is going to exceed $500 billion. . . . Never . . . as so much misery and economic disaster been caused by so few men."

Keating defended raising $1.3 million from associates for political campaigns and related causes of Sens. Dennis DeConcini (D-Ariz.), John McCain (R-Ariz.), Alan Cranston (D-Calif.), Donald Riegle (D-Mich.) and John Glenn (D-Ohio).

Edwin Gray, a former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and federal S&L examiners told a House committee last fall they were pressured by the senators in a pair of meetings in DeConcini's office in 1987 to ease their regulation of Lincoln.

"I wanted to be involved in the process," Keating said Sunday. "It was particularly important how the savings and loan industry went. It you want to support the system, you have to, in my case, it seems to me, raise funds and support the people."

Since the disclosures of the campaign gifts and the meeting with regulators, the five senators have tried to disassociate themselves from Keating, saying they didn't know at the time the nature of Lincoln's loans and investments.

All five are now the subject of a Senate Ethics Committee inquiry.

Asked Sunday if the meetings between the senators and bank board officials over Lincoln was unusual, Keating said his problem with the regulators was more than ordinary.

"It was a problem of taking down a savings and loan which was critical to the economy and employment in those areas in which the senators served," he said.

Claiming that the Irvine, Calif.-based Lincoln was being operated in an "unsafe and unsound manner," the bank board seized control of it last April, two years after examiners first recommended shutting it down.

Regulators now estimate that its loss of federally insured taxes through what the government claims in a suit were fraudulent loans and racketeering investment practices will cost taxpayers up to $2 billion.

Tobacco ads in video games spark criticism

NEW YORK (AP) — Signs advertising cigarettes and alcohol are appearing in children's video arcade games, with video motorcycles racing past Budweiser signs and race cars speeding underneath Marlboro logos.

One game, Super Monaco GP, manufactured by Sega of America, includes Marlboro race cars, billboards, banners and Marlboro signs in the crowd. Occasionally the cars race past a building in which all of the windows have been replaced by Marlboro logos.

In Sega's arcade game Power Drift, race cars pass Budweiser billboards.

Philip Morris, the maker of Marlboro, and Anheuser-Busch, which makes Budweiser, said Friday that they had not authorized the use of their brand names or logos. Philip Morris said it had asked Sega to recall the games.

Sega said in a statement that the inclusion of the logos was "simply a game designer's innocent attempt to mimic real-life locations." It said it was in the process of removing them. The statement did not indicate how many games were manufactured or how long they have been in use.

"Super Monaco GP is essentially one big Marlboro ad," says Dr. John Richards of the Medical College of Georgia, who has investigated the video game cigarette ads.

"A child playing Super Monaco GP is exposed to literally hundreds of Marlboro ads during the game, if he's good," Richards wrote last month in a letter of complaint to the Federal Trade Commission. Richards is president of Doctors Ought to Care, an anti-smoking group.

"If he's not good and doesn't reach 'extended play,' then he'll see only 50 or so Marlboro ads," Richards wrote. A copy of the letter was obtained by The Associated Press.

"I think it's regrettable at best, and scandalous at worst, that this is happening," said Dr. Ronald Davis, director of the Office on Smoking and Health of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

"It's a strong indication that the cigarette industry is interested in luring children to begin to smoke. Certainly with all the resources available to the cigarette companies, they'd prevent this obvious copyright infringement if they weren't interested in kids," he said.

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of over $200,000 and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1990 and ending May 31, 1991.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skill in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous news-writing and editing experience (including work at the DI or other daily newspaper) and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the U. of I. Deadline for submission of completed application is noon, Friday, Feb. 23, 1990.

QBs assault Browns, Rams through air

DENVER (AP) — The Drive. The Fumble. Now, the same old story. It doesn't matter how they do it, the Denver Broncos always beat the Cleveland Browns for the AFC Championship. They did it in 1987 with The Drive, a 98-yard masterpiece engineered by John Elway, and they did it in 1988 with the Fumble by the Browns' Earnest starting job to rookie Bobby Humphrey this season. While Humphrey rushed for 1,151 yards, Winder had 800 fewer.

"I wouldn't mind going into the game, no matter what the situation," Winder said beforehand. "If I get the chance, I'll try to make the best of it."

He got the chance when Humphrey eluded Minnifield's diving tackle and scored his first playoff touchdown, making it 10-0.

Winder's 39-yard reception came on a simple slant-in on which Minnifield was two steps behind.

After the final gun, the Broncos went into the locker room, then returned to the field, waving their helmets and saluting the fans. They were mobbed by photographers and reporters to thunderous cheers.

Montana takes 49ers to Bowl

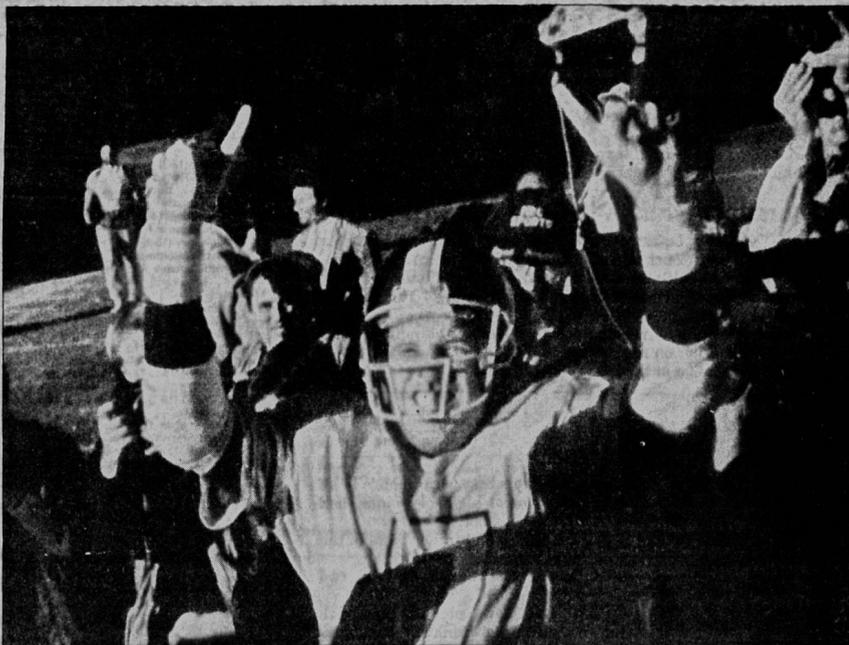

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Montana wrote his name in the all-time NFL record book Sunday and put his San Francisco 49ers within one game of claiming a special place of their own in Super Bowl history.

Behind an almost-flawless Montana, the 49ers beat their NFC West-rival Los Angeles Rams 30-3 for the NFC championship and a chance at becoming the first repeat Super Bowl winner in a decade.

Montana, who passed for 156 yards in a 21-point second quarter that broke the game open, had a 20-yard TD pass to Brent Jones and an 18-yarder to John Taylor, his 30th and 31st in postseason.

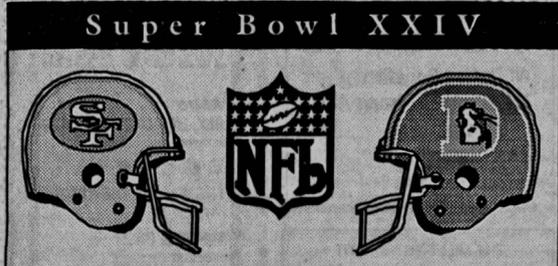

That broke the record of 30 by Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw and sent the Niners on to New Orleans, where in two weeks they will be trying to match another standard set by Bradshaw and the Steelers with their fourth Super Bowl victory. Pittsburgh was the last team to win two straight Super Bowls, in 1979 and 1980.

Montana, who finished 26 of 30 for 262 yards, got 93 rushing yards from Roger Craig, 63 from Tom

Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway shows the victory sign Sunday as he leaves the field after the Broncos' win over the Cleveland Browns in the AFC Championship game in Denver. Elway had his best game of the season in the playoffs, leading the Broncos to their third Super Bowl in four years.

Byner as he headed for the tying touchdown.

On Sunday, the Broncos earned their fourth shot at the Super Bowl with a 37-21 victory, and this time the only name the game needed was John Elway.

Elway enjoyed his best game of the season and his best ever in the playoffs, throwing for 385 yards and three touchdowns and taking Denver on scoring drives of 82, 80, 80 and 60 yards.

He had some big help from Sammy Winder, an eight-year veteran headed for retirement.

Winder scored twice, including a 39-yard reception from Elway that clinched it with 2:25 gone in the final quarter. It was sweet retribution for Winder, who lost his phrey went out with bruised ribs in the second quarter. He made the best of it.

As always, Elway got the best of Cleveland's defense, which surrendered 67 points in its two playoff games.

And he burned the man he said he wanted to get, cornerback Frank Minnifield. Both Winder and Michael Young beat Minnifield for touchdowns.

Young, signed away from the Rams as a Plan B free agent in March, escaped a bump by Minnifield at the line midway through the second quarter. He was not picked up when Minnifield slipped and was 10 yards behind the defense when he caught the scrambling Elway's pass at the 30.

Rathman and immense help from a defense that had three interceptions against Jim Everett and the Rams passing attack that had bedeviled it in the past. Everett completed 16 of 36 for 141 yards and was under pressure all day.

All that leads to a Super Bowl with several intriguing elements.

The 49ers' opponent in Super Bowl XXIV Jan. 28 will be the AFC champion Denver Broncos, who just happen to be the only team San Francisco didn't beat in the 1980s.

There also will be the duel between Montana, the NFL MVP this year after setting a record quarterback rating, and John Elway of Denver, which won the AFC title Sunday.

While the 49ers try to emulate the Steelers, the Broncos will be trying to avoid matching the negative record of four Super Bowl losses in four tries set by the Minnesota Vikings. Denver will also be trying to end a string of five straight NFC victories, and the Broncos will be up against a team that won its two playoff games by a combined 71-16 and was established as an early 10-point favorite.

Davis confident despite defeat

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl could only shrug his shoulders after the Hawkeyes' 87-80 loss to Michigan State Saturday.

"What do you do?" he asked. That remains to be answered after Iowa notched its fourth loss in a row, winless after three Big Ten games. It is the worst league start since 1963, and only Northwestern joins the Hawkeyes as teams without a conference win.

With Iowa 8-1, the tailspin began at Northern Iowa, moved home against Ohio State, hit the road at Wisconsin and continued at Michigan State. In all four losses, coach Tom Davis' club held a lead or was in striking distance late in the game.

But Davis isn't jumping ship after seeing his team winless in the 1990s.

"I've got confidence that this is going to be a real nice ball club by the end of the year," Davis said. "The question's going to be how many losses do we have when we get there."

Iowa battled back from 13 points down at intermission to take the lead, 68-67, with 5:07 remaining on free throws by guard Troy Skinner.

But the long-range heroics of Spartans Kirk Manns and Steve Smith put a stop to the comeback. Manns finished with 33 points, including a school-record 13 3-point attempts. He hit six in addition to seven of eight free throws in the final 3 1/2.

"Manns in particular, I thought, played a terrific game for them," Davis said. "He burned us in the first half, we tried every defense we had, and we still had trouble locating him."

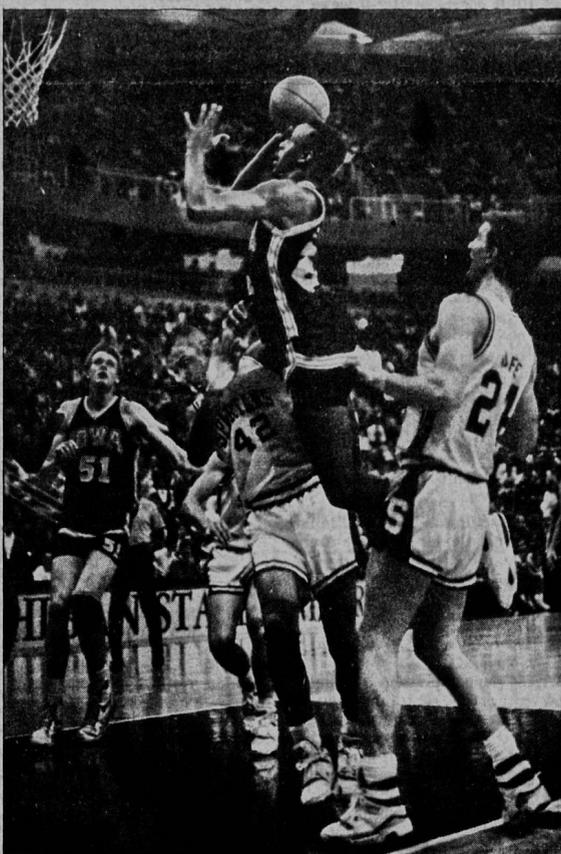

Smith was three of four from outside the circle, despite playing with a bandaged left hand.

Iowa forward/shooting guard, Matt Bullard continued to be uncanny from beyond the 3-point line. He stuck five of six shots from that distance Saturday, finishing with a team-high 19 points.

But when Iowa got hot from the outside, Smith and Manns answered. Davis thought his team's second-half effort was something to build on.

"We put a little scare in them there in the second half, and I was awfully pleased with that," Davis said. "After the way the first half went, to be able to come back and get ourselves back in the game was a real strong point for us."

33-point outburst paces Michigan State

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Kirk Manns doesn't think he shot very well Saturday night in Michigan State's 87-80 victory over Iowa.

But his game-high 33 points say he's probably wrong.

"I don't think I had the hot hand tonight," he said after his 10-for-18 shooting performance, which included six of 13 3-pointers. He also hit seven of eight free throws.

The 13 3-point attempts are a Michigan State school record. In the first half, Manns' five of seven marksmanship from the 3-point line paced the Spartans to a 49-36 advantage.

The 6-foot, 1-inch senior guard set the pace for his second-consecutive big game against the Hawkeyes by drilling a 3-pointer from the top of the key to open the scoring just 18 seconds into the first half.

In Iowa's last meeting with Michigan State, Manns hit for 22 points, including five-of-seven 3-point shooting, leading the Spartans to an upset 83-81 win at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Spartans' plan Saturday was to pick up where Manns left off in that win. Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote said the Spartans hoped to exploit Manns' long-range prowess right away.

"Manns had the hot hand in the first half and then cooled off a bit in the second half," he said. "Then we were able to convert some free throws down the stretch and get the win."

Heathcote said his team needed to take advantage of Iowa's zone defense to get the lead early. "When they went into what we call their sag zone we had to hit the outside shot, especially Kirk."

"We set up a lot of plays for Kirk early. And then the second half they adjusted well and kept a guy on him."

That guy was Iowa's Matt Bullard, whose hands-up, man-on-man defense held Manns to hitting just one of six 3-pointers in the second stanza.

Bullard, at 6-feet 10 inches, is nine inches taller than Manns, and was able to take advantage of that at the offensive end of the floor as well as on defense.

Bullard was true on five of six three pointers, which enabled the Hawks fall to Purdue, streak ends

Much was at stake for the Iowa women's basketball team when Purdue came to Carver-Hawkeye Arena Sunday.

A 46-game home win streak, possibly the conference championship, the pride of Coach C. Vivian Stringer and the expectations of the 6,102 fans who showed up to celebrate her 400th career victory teetered on the outcome of one game.

But hopes were dashed and the nation's second-longest home win streak ended as the Hawkeyes lost a nail-biter to Purdue, 66-63.

In order to win, Iowa needed to get steals, out-rebound the Boilermakers, and receive scoring from the inside players.

The Hawkeyes managed to succeed in all of those areas, nabbing 11 steals to Purdue's 7, snatching 55 rebounds to the Boilermakers' 39, and getting 11 points from reserve center Toni Foster.

But tenth-ranked Iowa was only able to connect on 25 of 74 shot attempts, shooting a sorry 33 percent from field goal range, and hitting just two of ten three-pointers. "I'm extremely proud of the team because they tried to take it one step at a time," Stringer said. "I really felt like we were executing shots, we just flat out weren't hitting."

Purdue shot only slightly better from the field (41 percent), but made up the difference by canning six tries, four by leading scorer MaChelle Joseph, who finished the game with 22 points.

The Boilermakers led 37-24 at intermission, their biggest lead of the game. They were able to main-

Looking at its overall performance at the National Collegiate Dual Championships this past weekend, the Iowa wrestling team ended up just about where they were supposed to be.

The No. 3 Hawkeyes lived up to their billing, finishing third out of 16 teams at the tournament held in Hampton, Va.

Iowa started out Friday by beating No. 17 Bloomsburg 37-3 in the first round.

That set up the quarterfinal meeting Friday evening between the Hawkeyes and the Iowa State Cyclones. The Cyclones picked up an easy first-round victory over Central State College of Oklahoma 31-6.

Just about everyone expected the Iowa-Iowa State showdown to take place, but most didn't foresee the eventual outcome.

Winning nine of ten matches, the Hawkeyes handed Iowa State a 32-2 thrashing — the worst defeat suffered by the Cyclones in 39 years. Not since Feb. 27, 1951, when Oklahoma State shut them out has Iowa State scored as few points in a dual as they did Friday against Iowa.

The only points given up by the Hawkeyes were at 158 pounds when second-ranked Cyclone Steve Hamilton drew with Iowa's Mark Reiland, who is ranked fifth at 167.

In a minor upset, Hawkeye 126-pounder Terry Brands upended Gary McCall 6-1. McCall is ranked fourth at his weight, while Brands is ranked fifth.

In semifinals action Saturday, Iowa met No. 2 Oklahoma State, who eventually gave the Hawkeyes their first dual-meet loss of the season,

Iowa men's track displays superior force

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Taking first place in nine out of 14 events, as well as setting a record, the Iowa men's track team dominated representatives from North- arn Iowa and Iowa State at Saturday's Cretzmeier Invitational.

Leading the way for Iowa was senior Paul Jones, who set a new UI Recreation Building record in the long jump. Jones soared to a leap of 24 feet, 11 1/4 inches. Team- mate Anthuan Maybank had a second-place leap of 24 feet, 4 1/4.

"I was almost surprised," Iowa coach Ted Wheeler said. "I didn't think Paul would jump close to 25 feet."

Jones also captured the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.37 seconds, while Maybank came in third.

"I run the 55-meters mostly for conditioning," Jones said, "and I had an alright day in the long jump." As for the rest of the season, Jones said he is "looking to stay consistent."

Wheeler said he was pleased with the overall performance of the Hawkeyes, particularly in the case of a couple of freshmen.

"Paul had a good day and Maybank had a great long jump. (Freshman) Kevin Herd ran a good mile and our high jumper (Freshman David Mohr) jumped 6-7."

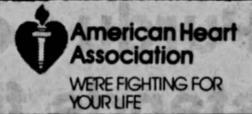

Herd, who posted a second-place clocking of 4:18.6, said he was also pleased with his effort.

"My time was a little slow, but technically I think I did what I wanted to," the miler said. "I feel that right now I'm searching for my event. I think (this meet) is a good strength-builder, and I'm hoping I can develop my mile."

If the Cretzmeier Invitational is any indication, it would appear that Iowa's main strengths lie in the long distance events. The Hawkeyes claimed the top four spots in the 800-meters.

Women's gymnasts place second; DeMarco optimistic about season

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

Florida's nationally-ranked women's gymnastics team took the top two all-around positions to outscore Iowa 184.8-177.5 Friday in Gainesville, Fla.

Georgia College finished third in the triangular meet with 169.55.

"On one hand we are disappointed because we know we can (score) over 180," Iowa coach Diane DeMarco said. "On the other, we are pleased; the errors that were made will be remedied very shortly with more repetition and increase in confidence with new sets. For the first meet of the season we did pretty well. It was a cohesive united meet."

Florida's Karen Brennalt captured first with the score of 37.35 while the Hawkeyes' Lori Cole finished third with 36.45, placing second on the beam (9.25) and third on the vault (9.10).

On the bar, Iowa's Michelle Cahal placed first, scoring 9.5 after changing her routine.

"I really surprised myself," Cahal said. "I didn't do the set I planned. Coach DeMarco said we needed the score so I did an old routine that wasn't as difficult."

"We were confident going into the meet. We knew (Florida) was nationally ranked. We had to fight the home-town advantage. I think we matched up to Florida. It was a good meet, although I was disappointed with the team all-around score."

Iowa's two freshmen handled the pressure of competition, with Julie Neubarth finishing as the second-highest Hawkeye in the vault.

Even though it was the first meet of the season, DeMarco said she didn't mind facing a team as tough as Florida.

"To build confidence (in gymnastics) you compare yourself with the competition," Demarco said. "I think it was a good scheduling move. If you want to be the best, you need to look at the best, if you have the mind set to do it."

According to the Iowa team, the large crowd of 3,000 spectators really helped their performance and made the meet more exciting.

Lori Cole

"The 3,000 Florida fans helped a lot," Cole said. "It made me wish we had that kind of crowd."

"It's great having a big crowd," Iowa's Tracy Junker said. "It got us more charged for the meet."

DeMarco said that one of the most encouraging things that happened during the meet were the individual successes.

"I could go through each person and find something that they did that was great," DeMarco said.

Foreman, Cooney to battle

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — George Foreman will get a chance Monday night to do something many fighters would like to do — punch a promoter.

Rest assured the promoter will be punching back.

In a scheduled 10-round bout, the 41-year-old Foreman will meet Gerry Cooney, who promoted two of the former heavy-weight champion's fights in his comeback.

The 33-year-old Cooney, also on the comeback trail, promoted Foreman's fourth-round knockout of Carlos Hernandez at Atlantic City and his second-round knockout of Ladislav Mijangos at Fort Myers, Fla., both in 1988.

Cooney hopes he has less trouble with Foreman than he did in his two promotional ventures with the punching preacher. Foreman threatened to pull out of both matches on fight day.

The bout is being criticized in some quarters as a shamless burlesque for exploiting both the fighters and the paying public. Each fighter is guaranteed $1 million. Foreman is the 9-5 favorite to win the bout at the Convention Center, where a crowd of 11,000 is expected.

Corrigan: League's image won't be hurt by probation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference says the league's image won't be tarnished despite the possibility of having three of its eight teams on probation.

North Carolina State's basketball program was recently hit with two year's probation, while the NCAA is currently investigating Maryland's basketball program and Clemson's football program.

"I hate that this happened," ACC commissioner Gene Corrigan said. "Sure, it's unfortunate. But you've got to look at the circumstances of what's happened. I don't think it hurts the ACC's image, as long as you consider the other schools that we have in the league. They're the reputation of the conference in many ways, anyway."

Corrigan's remarks came in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh at the NCAA Convention in Dallas.

A recent NCAA report revealed that Clemson had been accused of more than a dozen illegal recruiting contacts in its football program. The Tigers also were cited for giving players as much as $150 from 1984 to 1988.

Corrigan called Maryland's NCAA case unusual because of the behavior of former head basketball coach Bob Wade.

Clemson assistants may face sanctions

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Three former assistant coaches reportedly named in the NCAA's allegations against Clemson's football program may not escape sanctions even though they no longer are at the school, NCAA officials said.

In a letter dated Jan. 4, the NCAA alleges 14 rules violations against the program between 1984 and 1988 ranging from cash payments to players of up to $150 to improper recruiting tactics.

Friday, the Anderson Independent-Mail reported that an unidentified source said former assistant head coach Tom Harper, former quarterbacks coach Jack Crowe and former graduate assistant coach Steve Shaughnessy all were named in the list of alleged rules violations.

Atlanta hires Glanville

Former Houston Oilers head coach Jerry Glanville was all smiles Sunday as it was announced by team owner Rankin Smith that Glanville will be taking over the head coaching job of the Atlanta Falcons.

Glanville, who led his team to the AFC playoffs for the second straight season this year, was fired by the Oilers last week.

Thompson shines in Japan Bowl

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — The East capitalized on West fumbles for two touchdowns, including a diving catch by Tony Moss of Louisiana State on a 31-yard pass from Indiana's Dave Schnell, and beat a team of West college all-stars 24-10 Sunday in the Japan Bowl.

Heisman Trophy runner-up Anthony Thompson of Indiana scored twice for the East, on runs of one and 15 yards, and was stopped on a 1-yard plunge in the game's last minute.

Senior Michael Ingram arguably put in his best performance in an Iowa uniform. The senior recorded a career-high 14 points, had seven rebounds (six offensive), and a blocked shot.

Hawkeyes Dale Reed and Rodell Davis also had career bests in the scoring column.

Regardless of the hardships on and off the court in the last two weeks, the Iowa coach issued a warning.

"I think when you see us a month from now, you won't recognize this Iowa ball club," Davis said, "because I just think we're going to get better and better."

And for Pearl, it took just a moment of thought to answer his own question.

"We just have to keep playing this hard," Pearl said. "This group works so hard and gets so close, that it's just around the corner."

Manns

Hawkeyes to eat away and eventually overcome Michigan State's lead. His 22-footer with 7:04 remaining in the game erased what had been a 15-point Michigan State lead, tying the contest at 64.

Iowa Coach Tom Davis was more encouraged by the Hawkeyes' comeback in the second half than he was dismayed by the team's fourth-consecutive loss.

"I thought our ballclub put a little scare in them in the second half, I was awfully pleased with that. To be able to come back and get ourselves back in the game I thought was a real strong point."

"That's sort of been characteristic of this group of kids the whole season — the ability to bounce back."

Iowa did take a 1-point lead shortly after Bullard's jumper on a pair of free throws by Troy Skinner, but Michigan State guard Steve Smith immediately countered with a 3-point bomb that the Hawkeyes were not able to overcome.

With 3:07 remaining Bullard hit on a 3-pointer, cutting the lead to one, only to be answered by a Manns' 22-footer 12 seconds later.

Manns admitted that there wasn't much he could do to stop Bullard, and knows Bullard will be ready to play in the rematch in Carver-Hawkeye Arena February 12.

"We were in a zone a lot of the time," he said. "Mark and I really have a problem — he's 6 feet 10. It doesn't matter if we're there or not. He just shoots right over the top of us."

After Bullard tied the game, the Spartans moved Smith out to guard him. Smith, at 6-feet 6-inches, is the team's best leaper.

21-15.

Three Cowboy freshmen came out on top in pivotal matches to boost Oklahoma State in the win.

Redshirt freshman Troy Purler beat Iowa's Chad Zaputil at 118 pounds, while, in the middle weights, the Hawkeyes lost back-to-back matches to a pair of talented true freshmen.

At 158, Pat Smith dominated Reiland in a 14-4 match that put the Cowboys ahead 13-6. And at 167, Oklahoma State freshman Robbie Hadden took a 5-4 lead into the third period against Iowa's Bart Chelavsig before finally finishing the match with a 10-6 triumph. That win stretched the Cowboys' lead to 16-6.

"We didn't quite have the performance in this round (the semifinals) that I wanted," Iowa coach Dan Gable said.

"One-fifty was a pivotal match," he continued. And 158 and 167, I thought we could win those . . . and we got beat in both. We needed to be a little more intense in those matches."

One bright spot for the Hawkeyes against OSU was at 134 where second-ranked Tom Brands shocked top-ranked Chuck Barbee 2-1.

"There was a big scramble — I just came out on top," Brands said. "(Barbee) is pretty tough with his legs, and he's also a scrambler. I pretty much beat him at his own game, I think."

The Hawkeyes went back onto the mat in consolation semifinal action and rebounded strong with a victory over ninth-ranked Penn State 22-5.

In the consolation championships later Saturday, Terry Brands' victory by fall at 126 pounds helped Iowa defeat Iowa State 24-13 for the second time in two days to notch the third-place finish.

Oklahoma State went on to whip No. 1 Arizona State 24-19 in the championship match to win the tournament. Nebraska crushed Penn State 27-9 for fifth place and Oklahoma edged North Carolina 19-18 for seventh place.

Iowa and Iowa State will square off for the third time Saturday afternoon at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

tain a comfortable advantage until the last few minutes, when the Hawkeyes attempted a last-ditch effort to overtake the lead.

With 1:11 remaining in the game, Iowa was down by just five points. Joseph stepped to the free-throw line and hit one of two. Iowa 60, Purdue 66.

Joy Holmes of the Boilermakers then picked up her fifth foul of the game, sending Iowa's Stephanie Schueler to the line, where she scored a point. With 18 seconds left, Price fouled Donna Gill, who missed her free throw, and promptly fouled Price.

The cheering and at times hostile crowd hushed as Price stepped to the foul line. She hit both shots, pulling the Hawkeyes to within three.

Joseph brought the ball up the floor for Purdue, but was swarmed by four Iowa players and whistled for travelling. With four seconds on the clock, the Hawkeyes in-bounded to Price, who dribbled, set from far beyond the three-point line and let the shot fly. . .

The ball bounced off the rim at the buzzer. No good.

Wiping the perspiration from her brow after the contest, Purdue coach Lin Dunn said she was happy with the performance of her 11th ranked team, which moves to 11-2 on the season and 4-0 in conference play.

"We're very pleased to beat a fine Iowa team," Dunn said. "But I don't want Vivian pulling out the Kleenexes, because they're just as fine or finer than they've ever been."

Hawks top Indiana after trailing early

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

While the Indiana men's swimming team took first in both the 400-yard medley and 400-yard freestyle relays Saturday at Royer Pool in Bloomington, Ind., the Hoosiers couldn't take advantage of the 14 point lead, and fell 59-54 to Iowa.

"It's not easy to drop both relays and still win," Hawkeye graduate assistant Brad Flood said. "Our guys came through when they had to. We're just happy to be out with the 'W' and keep our undefeated record."

But Indiana coach Jim "Doc" Counsilman said it wasn't surprising to win both relays and lose the meet.

"Both teams were tired from the Christmas training trips, and a lot of things were unpredictable," Counsilman said. "This year they've got a very strong team. We're a good team, but we don't have the depth."

It was the first loss of the season for the Hoosiers, who are now 4-1 overall and 3-1 in the Big Ten. Iowa stands at 5-0 overall and 4-0 in the league.

The win changed the series record between these two Big Ten rivals to 15-11-0 in Indiana's favor, and was the fifth-consecutive win over Indiana for Iowa.

"I anticipated a victory for them," Counsilman said. ". . . We're pleased with our performances and hoped for an upset. But it just wasn't there."

The Hawkeyes and the Hoosiers traded off the individual first places, with Indiana ending with five top finishes and Iowa with six.

"It was a real good meet," Flood said. "We knew it would be close."

Hawkeye sophomore Artur Wojdat was the only double winner for Iowa. The Polish Olympian captured the 100 free in a time of 45.69 seconds and the 500 free in 4:29.41. He also placed second in the 1,000 free behind teammate Tomasz Gawronski.

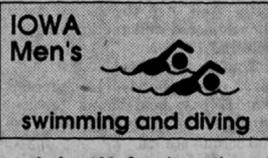

Iowa's only double winner was senior Mark Lenzi, who took first in both the 1- and 3-meter diving competitions.

Lenzi, the world champion on 1-meter, is the Hoosiers' only participating diver this year, while the Hawkeyes were represented Saturday by junior Jamie Morrow and sophomore Todd Smith.

Morrow is the Hawkeyes' only experienced diver since the squad's No. 1 competitor, senior Tomek Rossa, is out of action for the season with a knee injury.

"I think if we'd have had another diver, we could have been much more competitive," Counsilman said.

Iowa's other top finishers included junior Roland Zschiegner, first in the 200 individual medley; senior Mark Kohmetscher, second, 200 individual medley; senior Knut Landboe, first, 200 backstroke; and junior Rob Leyshon, first, 200 breaststroke.

'Nitwits': Cooking for the budget gourmet

Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

OK. So, you've just returned from K mart with a plethora of Martha Stewart products for fine living. The poly/cotton blend cloth looks spiffy with your new maven-of-good-taste approved Corelle china. Her collection of music to eat by emits non-confrontational (a little Vivaldi, some Pachelbel) murmurings from the stereo. But, aiiieeee! Something is amok. You try to convince yourself that frugality and good taste are not necessarily incompatible, yet you need reassurance.

"Cooking for Nitwits" provides just that.

"Cooking," written by Rosemary Wells and Joanna Hurley and published by E.P. Dutton/Dial Books, caters to the gourmet with enough possession of his wits to realize that exorbitance does not a pleasant meal make. It exhorts itself in providing economic short-cuts while not compromising the palate.

Take, for instance, "faux saumon mousse on a bed of tapioca caviar." Like it sounds, the "caviar" is tapioca with the thrifty addition of squid ink. It looks the same and probably improves upon the genuine article. It is indeed "good enough to fool the Czar."

The "saumon mousse" takes Yankee know-how and parsimony to its delicious extreme. Consisting of Spam, anchovy paste and clam broth, it is a sure bet in pleasing both the accountant and the artiste. Is that someone's stomach I hear grumbling?

"Nitwits" does not stop there. Those of you who find the new art of food styling too elusive entirely will find consolation in a bonanza of ideas. To add a little panache to Easter, try "Easter Island sorbet heads." Upon a bed of Easter grass, sculpt primitive heads (Caution: please do this to the mystery of those of the scaly southern-seas isle out of preferably pastel-hued sorbet. While satiating the family sweet tooth, the recipe allows for artistic expression. Remember, "each time we release a figure from the sorbet, we inch a little closer to the Truth."

Focusing on safety in the kitchen, the book cautions the reader against salmonella poisoning. The novice chef would do wisely to save his or her unused prescription antibiotics. When the time comes, simply powder the preparation surfaces liberally with "these multi-colored wonder drugs, and feel assured that you have protected your family. . . ."

The collection of recipes is rife with photographs. Beautiful pictures guide the reader every step of the way on the road to culinary Damascus.

In short, "Cooking for Nitwits" is for those who know the consumption of roughage and meat products is not merely a way of survival but a lifestyle. Food is an effective means of social intimidation. It is about time someone realized that. Or, at least made fun of it.

Actress attacked on Manhattan street

NEW YORK (AP) — Swedish-born actress Viveca Lindfors was slashed across her neck on a Manhattan street early Saturday by a marauding gang suspected in a similar random attack minutes earlier, police said.

The 70-year-old actress, whose stage and screen career covers a half-century, needed 27 stitches after the attack about 1:35 a.m. on a Greenwich Village street, said police spokesman Sgt. Peter Berry.

Lindfors was slashed on the neck below her left ear. When she arrived at St. Vincent's Hospital for treatment, she met the gang's other victim — Dennis Beal of New York, who was attacked shortly before Lindfors. Berry said the two attacks occurred five minutes and three blocks apart.

Police had no motive and had made no arrests but are theorizing the same group of men was responsible for both attacks.

Lindfors' films include "Four Men in a Jeep" in 1948, "No Exit" in 1960, "The Way We Were" in 1973 and "Welcome to L.A." in 1977.

Robinson performance honors King

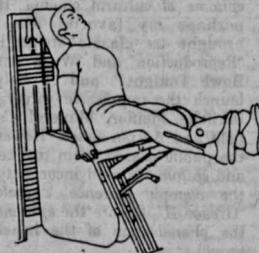

The Daily Iowan

For 15 years, Marie Hadley Robinson has performed to critical and popular acclaim throughout Europe. On Monday evening, the operatic soprano brings her artistic brilliance to the UI in a tribute to the late Martin Luther King Jr.

Robinson will perform opera standards by Verdi and Purcell as well as traditional gospel songs during the 7:30 p.m. performance in Clapp Recital Hall. Admission is free and open to the public. Her appearance on the federal holiday in his honor concludes a two-day convocation, "Pathways to Diversity," commemorating what would have been the slain civil-rights leader's 61st birthday.

Purdue defeats Hoosiers; stands first in conference

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Tony Jones scored 21 points as Purdue rallied from a 16-point deficit, tied cold-shooting Indiana on a basket by Ryan Berning with 35 seconds left in regulation and beat the No. 13 Hoosiers 81-79 in overtime.

The victory put Purdue (11-2 and 3-0) in first place in the Big Ten Conference.

Indiana (12-2 and 2-2) was held without a field goal for more than 13 minutes, getting only 12 free throws over the final 8:40 of regulation and the first 4:38 of the overtime. Purdue, meanwhile, got 11 points from Jones over that span, including a free throw that put the Boilermakers ahead for good, 74-73 in the opening minute of overtime.

Jones, a senior guard, put Purdue up 78-75 with 1:15 left and got his final point on another free throw with 39 seconds to go, giving the Boilermakers a 79-75 edge.

Michigan 87, Minnesota 83
Sean Higgins scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half Saturday, leading No. 3 Michigan to an 87-83 Big Ten victory over No. 16 Minnesota in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Wolverines (11-2, 1-1), who wasted a 20-point lead in losing their conference opener at Indiana on Monday, led by 10 points with 2:14 remaining. Minnesota (10-3, 1-2) cut it to 84-83 with 35 seconds remaining behind a pair of 3-point baskets by Walter Bond.

Terry Mills, who had 23 points — 11 at the foul line — hit two free throws with 27 seconds remaining for Michigan and Rumeal Robinson, who led Michigan with 26 points, made a free throw with six seconds left for the final margin.

Ohio State 68, Wisconsin 53
Jim Jackson scored 19 points and Perry Carter 18 — eight of them in a comeback from a late seven-point deficit — as Ohio State beat Wisconsin 68-53 in a Big Ten Conference game Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

The victory pushed Ohio State to 6-0 at home this year while improving its record to 8-5 overall and 3-1 in the Big Ten.

Wisconsin (10-6 and 1-3) trailed 23-18 at the half by making just four field goals in 19 attempts. But the Badgers hit six shots in a row to take a 32-31 lead early in the second half.

The Badgers took their biggest lead at 46-39 on a baseline jumper by Kurt Portmann with 7:57 remaining.

Ohio State, however, scored 14 of the next 16 points and outscored the Badgers 29-7 to the finish.

Illinois 85, Northwestern 78
Marcus Liberty scored nine of his 26 points during a 14-2 second-half run and No. 8 Illinois defeated Northwestern 85-78 in Big Ten basketball Saturday night in Evanston, Ill.

A three-point play by Liberty put Illinois (12-1 overall and 2-1 in the conference) ahead 50-48, and the junior forward started the streak that turned a nervous 54-52 Illinois lead into a more comfortable 68-54 Illini bulge.

Kansas remains unbeaten

(AP) — Number one Kansas held onto its undefeated record Saturday, beating Oklahoma State 91-77.

The Jayhawks (18-0) ran off 14 straight points for a 71-56 lead with 8:29 to play and rolled over Oklahoma State.

No. 2 Georgetown 74, DePaul 64
Mark Tillmon hit two free throws with 9:20 to play, giving Georgetown a 53-52 lead.

No. 4 Oklahoma 103, Texas 84
Jackie Jones had 22 points, 10 rebounds and eight blocks, leading a strong effort by Oklahoma's bench.

No. 5 Missouri 111, Nebraska 95
Doug Smith had 31 points and Anthony Peeler 29 for Missouri (15-1).

No. 6 Syracuse 81, Bost. Col. 66
Stephen Thompson scored 23 points, and Derrick Coleman had 20 points and 15 rebounds as Syracuse (12-1) broke open a close game in the second half.

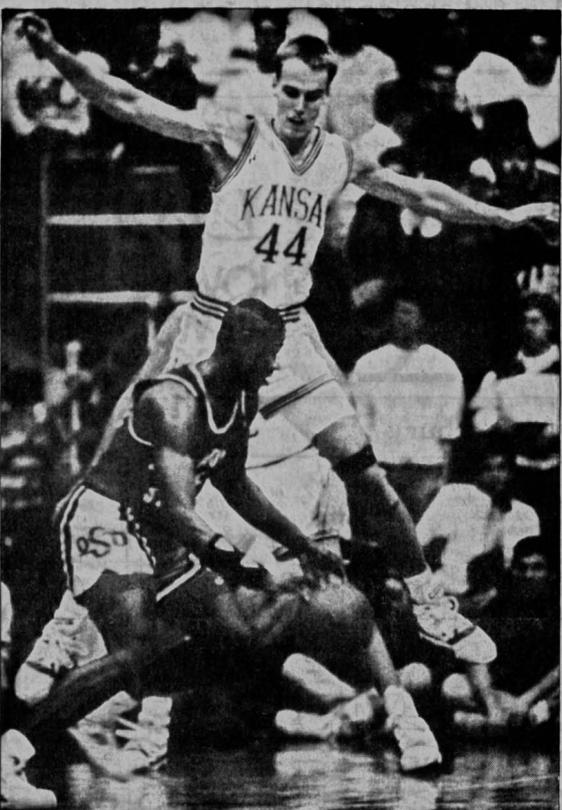

No. 7 UNLV 82, Temple 76
Larry Johnson hit four free throws that gave UNLV an 80-74 lead and clinched the victory.

No. 9 Ga. Tech 92, No. 17 N.C. St. 85

Brian Oliver scored 27 points and Tech (11-1) made 10-of-13 foul shots in the final two minutes to hold off North Carolina State (12-3).

No. 10 Duke 91, Maryland 80
Christian Laettner had 27 points as Duke (12-2) beat Maryland.

No. 11 Louisville 73, Fla. St. 66
Louisville scored the game's final eight points, beating Florida State.

Oklahoma State center Byron Houston, left, wheels around Kansas center Pekka Markkanen in Saturday afternoon's game. Markkanen had 11 rebounds and six points to help the Jayhawks rout the Cowboys 91-77. Kansas has now run its record to 18-0.

No. 12 Arkansas 93, TCU 79
Todd Day scored 17 points in the second half, and Arkansas (12-2) rallied from a 40-32 halftime deficit to beat TCU.

No. 14 LSU 94, Kentucky 81
Chris Jackson had 28 points for

LSU (10-2). With 4:48 left in the first half, LSU coach Dale Brown and Kentucky's Rick Pitino nearly came to blows in an argument over a referee's call at the scorer's table. The two coaches were restrained, and no punches were thrown.

Fiery Pitino shows Wildcat spirit

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The day after, there was peace.

"I have no animosity toward Dale," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said. "He knew it was just part of the game."

Countered Louisiana State coach Dale Brown: "I hold no grudges. I like Rick. Rick's an aggressive coach."

Two men who were supposed to maintain their cool lost it Saturday night when Pitino and Brown exchanged heated words and threatened each other. The confrontation occurred with 4:48 left in the half of 14th-ranked LSU's 94-81 victory over Kentucky.

After a scuffle for a loose ball, Kentucky's Jeff Brassow shoved Maurice Williamson, and Williamson retaliated with a forearm to the chin. LSU's Chris Jackson shoved Brassow and both teams clustered near center court.

Pitino raced onto the court as officials broke up the squabble, with Brown a few steps behind. Officials broke up the dispute, assessed fouls against Jackson and Brassow and called the coaches together for a sideline lecture.

Words were exchanged. "Street talk," Brown said.

Pitino charged Brown. Brown drew back to throw a punch. Officials restrained Pitino and assistant coach Craig Carse embraced Brown and hustled him back to the bench.

"I didn't know what Rick was doing," Brown said. "I think it was staged to get his team fired up."

"I wasn't acting," Pitino said. "I was really mad."

Ware gets award

FORT WORTH (AP) — Andre Ware, the NCAA record-smashing All-American from the University of Houston, on Saturday was named the winner of the ninth annual Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Award.

Ware, winner of the Heisman Trophy and the leader of the Cougars' run-and-shoot offense, will be honored Feb. 12 at a formal dinner at the Fort Worth Club.

Ware will receive a trophy and a gold Rolex watch. Houston will receive a $10,000 scholarship grant in his name.

Darian Hagan, the sophomore who led Colorado to the No. 1 ranking during the regular season, finished second in voting by media members.

Ware, the 6-foot-2, 205-pound junior from Dickinson, Texas, holds 26 NCAA passing and total offense records, and 15 Southwest Conference marks.

That Grammar Guy

Jake Stigers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, I failed to pen any columns in my hedonistic respite, but I did receive, in the form of Christmas presents, some fascinating tomes about the English language. While thumbing through them, I learned quite a bit of language trivia.

Did you know that animals do not suffer from epidemics? Demos is Greek for people. When there is an outbreak of, say, bad fashion among animals, they suffer from an epizootic. Really.

An educator from my alma mater brought to my attention that I have shamelessly misused hopefully more than once in this column. It would make sense that the definition of hopefully would be "it is to be hoped." Some dictionaries even offer this as a slang definition or as one coming into popular usage. However, the original definition — and the definition offered by more reputable and traditionalist dictionaries — is "in a hopeful manner."

Doodle-Loom tools arrived. Enormity has nothing to do with physical size. It deals solely with wickedness or outrageousness. Enormousness is the abstract noun people intend to use when they are wont to make comments about Leona Helmsley's ego, although the "tough bitch" could be regarded as a personification of unmitigated enormity.

I have been in the habit of peppering my speech and writing with pretentious and esoteric words like epitome. No, really, I have. Like many users of the language, though, I unfortunately have used epitome to mean ultimate or best. Epitome is actually a brief summary or a part aptly representing a whole.

This is wrong: "Grease II" is the epitome of cultural cinema. It is perhaps my favorite film. It brought us classic songs like "Reproduction" and "We're Gonna Bowl Tonight," and it helped launch the impressive careers of Michelle Pfeiffer, Maxwell Caulfield and Adrian Zmed. However, the public doesn't seem to like it, and epitome is used incorrectly in the example sentence. Therefore, "Grease II" is more the epitome of the phenomenon of the hopeless sequel.

I hope you learned as much over the winter break as I did. Until next time, happy communicating.

'Life in Hell' cartoonist debuts prime-time 'Simpsons' on Fox

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Life has never been more normal for the Simpsons: Dad gives Bronx cheers at the opera, mom hides valuables in her colossal hairdo and the sluggish son attempts to win Scrabble games with the word "kwyjibo."

Pushing all of the conventions of the domestic television sitcom through a paper shredder and then weaving the scraps into new and often peculiar tales, the makers of Fox's "The Simpsons" are trying to establish the first prime-time cartoon since "The Jetsons" and "The Bullwinkle Show" in the early 1960s.

take an audience and make them laugh in spite of themselves. It's a different kind of challenge. . . . This is a family entertainment show. It's not aimed at kids, though."

Groening said "The Simpsons" is "certainly harder-edged than any TV cartoon in recent memory."

Which isn't to say it's not funny in a strange, unpredictable way.

"The Simpsons are on the slow side," Groening said. "But one of the good things about it is that we can resist the temptation to put clever lines in their mouths."

"At the same time, I don't think that the show has any of that superior snottiness. We like the characters . . . they make dumb decisions and they act on whatever emotion occurs to them at the moment."

It's a new working environment for Groening, who writes and draws his comics in his Venice, Calif., home and works on "The Simpsons" on the busy Fox lot.

"I got very used to working by myself, but it got lonely, too," Groening said. "And it's really fun to be around people having a blast doing what they are doing. Almost all of the animators are obsessed with the medium — and they're passionately enthusiastic about their work when they're not exhausted."

"Life in Hell," Groening's weekly comic, is admittedly not a work of high cartoon art.

"It was really a struggle to get everybody lined up and facing the same direction, because every one of the animators can draw better than I can."

"In my comic strip I'm limited, because if I can't draw it, I won't do it. But with 'The Simpsons' I can think up ideas that I could never draw."
