Veto override

Nagle thinks senate will follow suit in rejecting Bush's political asylum veto

Margo Ely
 The Daily Iowan

Today, the U.S. Senate will decide the fate of the almost 32,000 Chinese students in the United States when it votes on whether to override or sustain a presidential veto of the Emergency Chinese Immigration Relief Act.

The Emergency Chinese Immigration Relief Act provides procedures whereby a Chinese student can seek permanent political asylum in the United States. Some of the criteria for granting political asylum, in this case, include forced abortions and sterilization, economic deprivation, and any form of judicial retribution by the Chinese government, according to Rep. Dave Nagle, D-3rd District.

The U.S. House of Representatives voted 390-25 to override President George Bush's November 30 pocket veto of the bill Wednesday.

"The odds (of the senate voting to override the veto) are pretty good in part because of the margin we got today," said Nagle. "The fact that only 25 Republicans were willing to vote with the president on this policy is a good signal to the Senate."

Nagle was an original co-sponsor of the bill which waives the requirement that students return to China after two years of study in the U.S.

If 67 senators, the required 2/3 majority, vote in favor of overriding the veto, then the Chinese students currently in the U.S. will be able to remain here until 1994.

Advocates of the bill, including Nagle, felt that Bush's proposed executive order would not send as strong a message as a law would.

"We must send a very clear message to the butchers of Beijing," said Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., on the house floor during debate yesterday. Pelosi is the original author of the bill.

Nagle also expressed concern about the legitimacy of an executive order and said he was compelled to make a law protecting the students.

"An executive order can be revoked at any time," Nagle said. See Nagle, Page 4A

House rejects veto on laws protecting Chinese students

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to override President George Bush's veto of legislation protecting Chinese students from deportation, while Bush appealed to Republican senators to resist and help him keep open ties to the world's most populous nation.

The House vote of 390 to 25 sent the matter to the Senate, where both sides said the outcome of Thursday's scheduled vote was in doubt.

House Speaker Thomas Foley declared, "I don't think what's most on the minds of the members of Congress is the sensitivities of the present Chinese leadership. . . . This is a leadership that has, in our judgment, failed to respect the rights of its own citizens."

"On the issue of China, the president has lost his credibility," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Asia subcommittee.

Bush pinned his hopes on the Senate, where both Democratic and Republican senators predicted a cliffhanger. The president, along with Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser, and James Baker, secretary of state, were all telephoning senators through the day.

Bush was publicly appealing to GOP senators to support him in the face of what he termed "crass politics" played by some supporters of the override.

The legislation would affect as many as 32,000 Chinese students now in the United States on "exchange visitor" visas. The bill would waive a legal requirement that those students return home for two years after their visas expire before returning to the United States or going elsewhere.

Bush hopes Gorbachev 'survives, stays strong'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush expressed hope Wednesday that Mikhail Gorbachev "not only survives, but stays strong" in the face of "enormous" problems. He declined comment on whether the Soviet leader has gone too far in trying to quell civil strife in Azerbaijan.

"Any time you have a use of force and the loss of life, we are concerned. But I don't believe I can judge that question right now," said Bush of the Soviet crackdown on rioting in the largely Moslem Soviet republic.

The president, at a news conference, also announced support for elevating the Environmental Protection Agency to the Cabinet, castigated a "sleight-of-hand" plan to cut Social Security taxes and mounted a last-ditch effort to prevent an override of his veto of a bill protecting Chinese students from deportation.

Bush also presided at a full-dress military welcome for the president of North Yemen, Ali Abdullah Saleh, who was returning for a state dinner Wednesday night. Gorbachev ordered thousands of Soviet troops into Azerbaijan last week to stop anti-Armenian rioting and restore order. The military killed dozens of people Saturday in storming the capital city of Baku. After 11 days of violence, the official death toll stood at 170.

With the strife in Azerbaijan and demands for independence from the Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, Bush said Gorbachev is "faced with an ethnic problem here and an internal problem of enormous dimensions."

Bush said he "can't make predictions" about Gorbachev's chances of surviving the challenges, but added:

"I hope he not only survives, but stays strong. Because I think it is in our interest that perestroika succeed and go forward."

The United States regards the Soviet Union's annexation of the Baltic states a half-century ago as illegal, and Bush said he and Gorbachev discussed the U.S. position Wednesday.

Florence (Carolee Carmello) watches over rivals Freddie (Stephen Bogardus) and Anatoly (John Herrera) in the national tour of "Chess."

The musical opens at Hancher Auditorium tonight after a two-week run in Miami Beach, Fla., in a new, revised version.

'Chess' player finds Iowa City refreshing

Jennifer Weglar
 The Daily Iowan

A new city, a new hotel room and a 40-degree temperature drop — that's what was in store for the national touring company of "Chess" as they left Miami Beach for their three-night engagement at Hancher Auditorium.

For Gregory Jbara — who plays Walter DeCorsey and describes the character as an operator, a huckster and an opportunist — being in Iowa City has some advantages over being in Miami Beach. "It's nostalgic and refreshing to be in the collegiate environment, where beers are 85 cents and you can get a sandwich for two bucks — and that includes the fries!"

"This is great. In Florida we literally spent every free hour in the theater in rehearsal learning rewrites — even including Sunday's (January 21) matinee we were getting rewrites."

Carolee Carmello — Florence Vassy in the show — says that though the constant packing and unpacking of suitcases on tour can get trying, she likes to find out what the rest of the country feels about theater.

"In New York, it's such a small community that everybody knows what everybody's doing — at least in musical theater," she says. "When you get outside you get a better feel of what the country is looking for and what people enjoy and what's entertaining. You really can't get a good sense of that in New York."

The Iowa City respite for the cast will not last long — by the St. Paul stop in mid-February, director Des McAnuff and Robert Coe, who did the book revision, have what Jbara calls "a slew" of rewrites.

"I think we're heading in the right direction putting more of the emphasis on the love story and less on the geo-political intrigue," says Carmello. "I think that the more they emphasize the love triangle, the better."

Jbara agrees that the rewrites will strengthen the show. "I think the show is still at an early stage . . . I think (the book has) been on the back burner. The past month a lot of time has been spent to keep the set from falling on the actors."

While a recent survey found more than 70 percent of UI students are sexually active, only about one in 10 students said they always wear condoms when engaging in intercourse or oral-genital sex.

The results came almost one year after UI Student Health officials administered a questionnaire to 1,101 UI undergraduate students, and — in light of the rising incidence of AIDS — were "very disappointing," one health official said.

Bush to increase funds in drug war

WASHINGTON (AP)—The second phase of the National Drug Control Strategy, to be unveiled today by President George Bush, will call for spending more than $10 billion on the war against drugs in 1991, at least $1.2 billion more than this year, sources said Wednesday.

Money for the Pentagon's effort to battle drugs would rise about 50 percent, from $880 million this year to $1.2 billion in fiscal 1991, a draft of the strategy said.

Congress has allocated about $8.8 billion for the drug war this fiscal year, about $900 million more than the $7.9 billion sought by Bush in the strategy unveiled last September.

The new strategy will also intensify the war on drugs.

Discrimination suit upheld against Hy-Vee Food Stores

DES MOINES (AP)—The Iowa Supreme Court on Wednesday upheld a discrimination case against Hy-Vee Food Stores, with justices citing former employment practices that "cannot be justified."

The justices pointed to company policies posted at stores that had listed reasons women should not be promoted. The case, which has been in the courts for years, sparked an affirmative action policy from the company, which operates three grocery stores in Iowa City and several others throughout the Midwest.

"Hy-Vee came forward with no evidence to justify the use of the discriminatory practice," the court said in an opinion written by Justice Louis Lavorato. "Nor does Hy-Vee even argue any business justification for the practice."

The court sided with Hoa Thi Blood, a Vietnamese woman who worked as a checker in one of the company's stores in Cedar Rapids. She said the company failed to allow her to work more hours and failed to grant promotions because of her race and sex.

The complaint was filed in 1984 with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission and the Cedar Rapids Civil Rights Commission. She was granted $25,000 in damages and back pay in Wednesday's opinion.

At the time of the hearing, Hy-Vee operated 159 stores, 115 of them in Iowa and the rest in five other states.

Help has arrived for all smoke-aholics

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

If you are one of the estimated 40 million people in the U.S. who want to quit smoking, you can get some help. Starting today, Health Iowa is offering a free smoking cessation class. The class will help people understand why they are addicted to cigarettes and prepare them to quit, said Carol Horwitz, a health educator at Health Iowa.

"This class draws out the best of all the (stop-smoking) programs we've seen," Horwitz said. "We'll try a 48-hour 'quit' during the program so people can practice quitting. The more often you practice the better you are at it, because you know what to expect."

Being addicted to smoking doesn't just include nicotine addiction. Smokers are also addicted to smoking both habitually and psychologically, Horwitz said. The class will discuss methods of quitting and stress management, explore individual smoking habits and sponsor a 48-hour quit. Participants will also discuss why their "practice quit" was successful or why it was not.

The class will meet Thursdays from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Steindler Building for four weeks, beginning today.

Another program sponsored by Health Iowa will help students evaluate the behavior that leads to their eating habits, according to Ann Shetler, student health services dietician.

"The Weight off Wisely program puts the responsibility to initiate change on the individual," Shetler said. "We evaluate eating habits, because to go on a diet implies going off a diet."

Beginning February 5, the class will meet in the Burge private dining room twice a week for four weeks to develop new eating strategies, exercise, and to assess individual attitudes.

Use of hog contractors increases

DES MOINES (AP) — About one out of every 10 hogs raised in the United States is being fattened for market by a contractor, and the practice is likely to expand, an Iowa State University economist told pork producers Wednesday.

Jim Kliebenstein said contract feeding provides a way for young farmers with limited means to get into the pork industry and limit their risk.

But he also told farmers at the Iowa Pork Congress that they may be surrendering some of their independence by agreeing to raise hogs for someone else and that they need to closely examine and understand provisions of their contracts.

"Don't take this too lightly. Ask questions," Kliebenstein said.

A common practice in contract feeding is for a farmer to provide the labor and facilities for fattening hogs and the owner to provide the pigs, feed, veterinary care and marketing.

The farmer gets either a fee or a share in the profit or a combination of the two. There may be bonuses or penalties assessed on the farmer, depending on the death rate of the hogs and the rate of weight gain.

Des Moines lawyer James Long advised farmers that the biggest single problem in contract feeding is the condition of the hogs, since most contracts give the owners absolute control over supplies.

He recalled some farmers who told him "horror stories" of shipments of "comingled, stressed-out travelers with lots of stamps on their passports" being delivered to their farms.

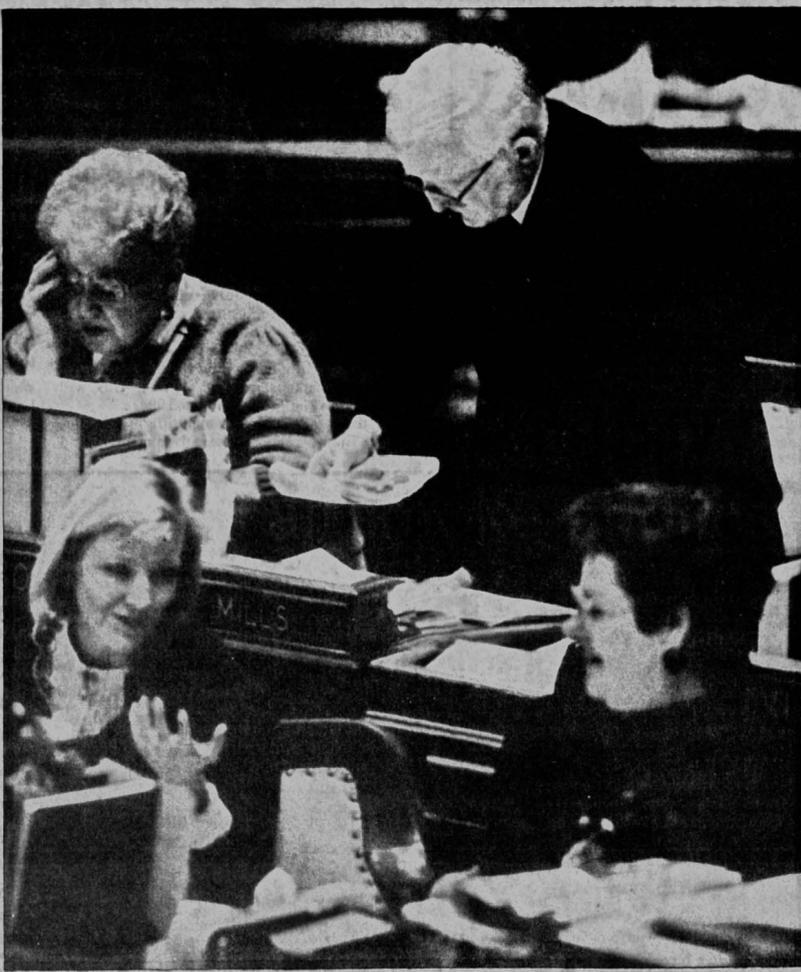

In one case a load of hogs from 10 different farms was delivered, something that increased the risk of outbreaks of disease, he said.

Long also advised farmers to pay attention to the people they will be working with as well as to the fine print in the contracts.

"An onerous contract can be administered in good faith and operate very well," he said. "Arrangements are as good as the field man assigned" by the owner.

Among the major businesses offering hog production contracts in Iowa are Murphy Farms of Rose Hill, N.C.; Central Soya of Fort Wayne, Ind. and its BG Management Co. subsidiary in Ames; Land O'Lakes of Minneapolis, Minn. and Fort Dodge, Iowa; Continental Grain of Chicago; Pork Purveyors Ltd. of Parkersburg; Farmland Industries of Kansas City, Mo.; Louis Dreyfus Corp. of Stamford, Conn.; and Benson-Quinn of Minneapolis.

Long and Kliebenstein said that while big agribusinesses get the focus of attention in contract feeding, a large percentage of the arrangements in Iowa are between farmers.

Biotechnologists implant corn with gene that can be passed down to new plants

MINNETONKA, Minn. (AP) — A biotechnology company says it has successfully implanted a gene into corn plants that can be passed down to new plants, an achievement they say could have major economic implications.

BioTechnica International Inc. declined to say what gene it had inserted into the corn plants and what technique it had used, The Wall Street Journal reported. The company filed patent applications Monday and "we kind of want to catch our breath before we determine how much we can say," said Roger Kleese, president of Plant Research, Inc. a subsidiary of the Cambridge, Mass.-based BioTechnica. The genetic experimentation was conducted at Plant Research in Minnetonka.

The genetic engineering of fertile corn, so far unsuccessful, would allow researchers to add insect, drought and herbicide resistance to the most economically important crop in the U.S. It could also improve the nutritional value of the biggest livestock feed crop.

"We see this breakthrough as a technological and commercial milestone."

John Hunt
BioTechnica CEO

Other researchers at U.S. units of Swiss-owned firms have inserted new genes into corn plants but the mature plants have not been able to reproduce.

A company that produces a genetically altered fertile corn plant would be able to sell its seed to corn growers, probably at a premium price.

"We see this breakthrough as a technological and commercial milestone that will allow us to enter the $1.5 billion U.S. seed corn market with genetically engineered hybrids," John Hunt, chairman and chief executive officer of BioTechnica, said.

The BioTechnica claim may have implications beyond corn. Until now, most plant genetic engineering has been in such plants as tomatoes, tobacco, rapeseed, and others known broadly as "dicots," referring to the two leaves that grow when the seed sprouts.

Corn, however, belongs to the broad class of plants known as "monocots."

AP series uncovered abuse

Fred Bayles
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Agriculture Department is re-checking some payments made under the 1988 drought relief program and congressional leaders are urging policy reviews after The Associated Press found widespread misapplication of funds in the $3.9 billion emergency effort.

One New Jersey farmer has been asked to repay $100,000 after a federal agent read AP reports that checks went to corporations and farmers ineligible for disaster aid. Entire counties in California and New Mexico are being investigated as well, according to the Agriculture Department.

The AP found that the program became a one-time windfall for thousands of farmers outside drought areas whose losses were due to normal quirks of nature. Claims were approved for such common perils as insects, sand, wind, cold and fungus, and even "ineffective herbicide" — all of which were outside the bounds of the drought effort.

Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., a member of the House Agriculture Committee, called the AP series "a needed story" and said Congress must try to establish safeguards to prevent problems in future agriculture disaster programs.

"We have to set up some structures," Roberts said. "That's why I think the AP series and other examples have been very beneficial. They point up the road we should not take."

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said his department's Office of Inspector General probably will investigate the 1988 relief program and likely will study the AP series, which appeared in December.

"The fact is, these kinds of programs are exceedingly difficult to administer, and they have inherent shortcomings," said Yeutter, who was interviewed recently at a wheat growers' convention in Texas. "It's not that people avoided their responsibilities or were cavalier in the implementation; it's simply that it's just not an ideal way to deal with this problem."

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the arm of the Agriculture Department that administered the program, is already checking specific misdeeds spotted by the AP, deputy administrator Dan Shaw said in Washington.

The ASCS says, however, that it won't check beyond the 22 counties in eight states the AP examined in its investigation.

"Those few that I was concerned with, we are checking to make sure corrections will be made," Shaw said.

Shaw said other counties won't be studied because ASCS officials don't believe serious problems exist nationwide. "I think (the AP) did a pretty good job," he said. "I think you came up with the same problems we were having administering the program."

But Dennis Prysak, the New Jersey lettuce grower who was ordered to repay the aid he received, said it's unfair to single him out just because he was mentioned in an AP story.

"There's 50,000 other guys out there in the same situation and we got caught," said Prysak.

Yeutter said he hoped to avoid future big-buck bailouts, either by improving the federally subsidized crop insurance system or creating a permanent, efficient disaster program.

"We simply cannot afford a combination of the two," Yeutter said. "The combination of mousetraps that we're using to deal with natural disasters in this country is not a very desirable combination."

If Congress chooses to finance disaster programs rather than subsidize crop insurance, the Agriculture Department will go back and examine the problems the AP found, he said.

"One could put in place permanent disaster legislation that would be a potential substitute to crop insurance," Yeutter said. "Once the administrative system was put in place, we wouldn't have the kinds of problems that were cited in your articles, or at least they'd be dramatically minimized."

The AP stories appeared amid an intensifying debate in Washington over the value of crop insurance vs. year-to-year disaster relief. Earlier this month, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, senior member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, renewed his call to strengthen crop insurance and clean up excess in farm disaster programs.

"We were begging for disaster help for Kansas wheat farmers (last year) and there were other senators fighting for the watermelon and pickle growers," said Dole spokesman Walt Riker.

"What he's saying is, let's clean up crop insurance and make it attractive for farmers to participate in. Let's not have these whole programs where the country is paying for 'ginseng root relief,'" Riker said.

Ginseng root was among the many crops eligible for disaster assistance in 1988.

Indeed, the AP study, conducted over seven months, found that payments went far beyond the initial intent, supported by almost everyone, to save Midwestern grain growers from bankruptcy. Growers collected on everything from kiwi fruit in California to Christmas trees in Connecticut. Checks were written for rain-bloated tomatoes in New Jersey and washed-out bird seed in Colorado.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, defended the disaster relief program and contended the benefits to truly drought-stricken areas were "camouflaged" by abuses found by the AP.

"Legislation at best is an imperfect endeavor," de la Garza said. "Therefore there are those (mistakes) that for one reason or another fall through the cracks. That always happens when we do legislation in an emergency situation.

"I would have liked to have taken more time. I would have liked to have done more study. But there was no time. Something needed to be done."

Some problems the AP found, such as farmers "triple dipping" by collecting disaster aid, crop insurance and growing a replacement crop all on the same acreage, were corrected in the 1989 relief program, de la Garza said.

The House committee, de la Garza said, will look into the reported abuses and ask the Agriculture and Justice departments to see if fraud or other illegal acts were committed.

Two weeks ago, the ASCS asked Prysak to return his $100,000 in assistance within 30 days. The AP had reported that his business exceeded the $2 million revenue limit.

In addition, the bill would permit any Chinese student whose visa has expired — as many as 8,000 others — to remain in the United States as long as danger exists at home, and would allow Chinese students to work while in this country.

Bush vetoed the measure on November 30 after it had passed unanimously in the House and by a voice vote in the Senate. Chinese student groups have lobbied hard for an override of the veto, saying many of them would face political persecution at home because they supported the pro-democracy demonstrations that brought a violent government crackdown last June.

At the time Bush vetoed the bill, he ordered government agencies to adopt what he contends are essentially the same safeguards. The veto was simply an effort to preserve executive branch foreign policy prerogatives, he said, and to keep open the door for future student and cultural exchanges.

"I will not break faith with the Chinese students here. . . . They were safe then, and they are safe now, and they will be safe in the future," Bush told a White House news conference Wednesday.

To the 37 GOP senators who attended a breakfast at the White House, Bush hit hard on his contention that a veto override would mean a total cutoff of the flow of students to the United States, and he appeared to be winning a few converts.

"The price of the Pelosi bill is lost opportunity for the Chinese scholars of tomorrow," the president told reporters later, referring to the legislation sponsored by Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

"The bill is totally unnecessary. The long-term policy consequences are potentially great. And Congress, in my view, will have only itself to blame."

Bush listed steps the Beijing government has taken which he said justified his policy toward China: the lifting of martial law in the capital; the release of jailed dissidents; a promise not to sell medium-range missiles to Syria; acceptance of Peace Corps volunteers, Fulbright scholars and a Voice of America correspondent back into the country, and the muting of anti-U.S. propaganda.

But critics have countered that the missile promise was nothing more than a repeating of assurances given months before the crackdown.

time," Nagle said. "We were unwilling to grant the president that authority."

Nagle said Bush's argument — that it is the president's prerogative to conduct foreign policy — was legitimate, but that Bush's premature efforts to normalize relations with China "undermined our confidence in an executive order."

"Beyond China, there will be no lasting impact in our deference (in foreign affairs) to the president," Nagle said. He added that the U.S. Congress will "generally continue to approve the president's policies" in the international sphere.

Although the policy may slow down the flow of Chinese students to the United States, Nagle said the first concern should be for the safety of students already here.

The UI has about 300 Chinese students on campus who would be affected by the new law.

"I don't want to go back, because we do not like that government," said Xiao Ping Xu, an Iowa City resident. "The government might put us in jail."

Xu said after she called her brother following the June 4 massacre in Tiananmen Square, police came to his home, asking him questions about her. She added that her brother is afraid she may be in danger if she returns to China.

"He is very scared about when I'm going to come back," Xu said of her brother. "He said it is very dangerous."

"If the government changes, maybe we would like to go back, but not now," Xu said.

Drugs

sify federal anti-drug efforts in five areas immediately, said the sources, all of whom requested anonymity.

Those areas — metropolitan New York, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and virtually all of the Southwest border — will be designated as high-intensity drug-trafficking regions and will benefit this year from $25 million previously approved by Congress to fight drugs in the worst-afflicted regions and from as much as $21 million from the federal asset-forfeiture fund, the sources said.

By and large, the strategy's focus will remain as it was in the original plan:

- harsh, state-imposed penalties for drug users.

- intensified treatment and prevention efforts.

- bigger budgets for law enforcement at all levels.

One source said that the targeting of five areas in the war against drugs this year will not mean more money for local governments.

Those governments "won't see any checks," said the source. "What they will see is increased awareness and cooperation from the feds, that type of thing. The money is going to the feds for them to increase their efforts . . . to highlight their presence in those areas."

The federal anti-drug effort will also target regions surrounding designated cities, the source said.

The updated strategy also will propose a broadening of federal drug crimes for which the death penalty can be imposed, in line with changes Bush said last year

Those proposals call for allowing the death penalty to be imposed on drug kingpins even when they or their organizations have not killed anyone.

Hy-Vee

In filing the discrimination complaint, the woman cited a 1974 company memorandum that said "most women are or will be married and must live where their husband is employed. They thus are not willing to accept a transfer."

The memo went on to say, "in our experience many men and some women find it difficult to accept supervision from women and said women were excluded from some positions at the stores."

The court cited a statistical study of the company's work force that said in 1980 98.9 percent of the women were in non-managerial jobs and 48.2 percent of the men held managerial posts.

The three Hy-Vee stores operated in Iowa City are located at 501 Hollywood Blvd., 1201 N. Dodge St., and at the intersection of 1st and Rochester avenues.

A shift manager at the Hollywood store said he was not aware of the discrimination case. He declined to comment further.

Hy-Vee President Ron Pearson could not be reached for comment at their headquarters in Chariton, Ia. Wednesday afternoon.

tion at last month's Malta summit.

But he said he did not want "to fine-tune all that," emphasizing instead that what "we want to do is to encourage Mr. Gorbachev's stand that peaceful change is the order of the day."

On other topics, Bush:

- called Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's idea of a rollback in the Social Security tax "a disguise for increased taxes around the corner." He called it "odd that a Republican president . . . is the one that is protecting the sanctity of the Social Security benefits."

But Bush also said a proposal by conservative House Republicans to allow workers to shift part of their payroll taxes into private retirement accounts "has some interesting ingredients," and is worthy of study.

■ said he "can't confirm" reports of deep division within the Bush family on abortion, denying a magazine account that disagreement surfaced at a family meeting but stopping short of saying there is no such division.

■ said he wants the EPA in his Cabinet because of the magnitude of environmental problems confronting the United States and the world.

problem is they don't always match up what they know with what they do."

Results of the survey were broken down by the respondents' sex.

Of the 890 respondents, 628, or 72 percent of the men and 69 percent of the women described themselves as being sexually active over the past 12-month period.

About half of both male and female groups surveyed said they had sex with more than one partner during the same 12 months. Researchers found that 57 percent of the males said they engaged in sex with more than one partner, while 41 percent of the females said they'd had more than one partner in the past 12 months.

Although Chuck Fallis of Atlanta's Center for Disease Control said the incidence of contracting AIDS among heterosexuals has stabilized, he cautioned against participating in sexual activities without regard for contracting the disease.

"Our main concern would be to use condoms if you're engaging in high-risk sexual activity," Fallis said. "Practicing safe sex means avoiding multiple sex partners and avoiding I.V. (intravenous) drugs."

Frequent sexual activity, having more than one partner and failing to use a condom contribute to an ideal environment for the transfer of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, Fallis said.

"But if someone practices safe sex, there shouldn't be a problem," Fallis said.

Still, the cumulative incidence of AIDS is on the rise in the United States, with 115,158 cases reported as of Nov. 30, 1989, according to Center for Disease Control records.

The UI survey indicates alcohol has a role in the sexual decision-making of students and has important implications for the risk of transmitting sexually transmitted diseases and the HIV virus, Broek said.

Forty-three percent of the men said they had unintended or regretted sex after drinking alcohol, while 31 percent of the women responding said the same.

Broek said alcohol can cloud people's judgment and prompt them to make choices they otherwise wouldn't.

"You make decisions after drinking alcohol that you didn't want to make," she said. "If you're serious about sexual activity, you may want to think about how it combines with alcohol use."

Sometimes, a person may make an impromptu decision that puts them in a high-risk situation for catching or transmitting AIDS, Broek said.

"Are you making these decisions (to have sex) on the spur of the moment when you're at a bar, or are you deciding ahead of time this is what you're going to be doing?" Broek said.

Of the males surveyed, 11 percent said they always use a condom, in comparison to nine percent of the females who said the males always use a condom.

An equal distribution of both males and females, 29 percent, said the females never used contraceptives, the survey found.

"We also found out that the condom is still used more as a birth control method than as STD prevention," Broek said. "There's a general sense of invulnerability; you don't see AIDS around . . . in a college population."

Those who develop "full-blown" cases of AIDS generally are in the 35- to 40-year-old category, and the course from infection to actual manifestation takes about ten years, Broek said.

"What this means is that people are becoming infected at the college age," she said.

Soviets strengthen policies in Azerbaijan

40-minute battle in Caspian Sea ends as soldiers force down sea blockade

MOSCOW (AP) — Azerbaijanis fired on Soviet forces in Baku harbor from merchant ships Wednesday but were routed and forced to lift a five-day-old sea blockade of the city, Soviet media and residents reported.

Soldiers rounded up 43 activists and held rallies in Baku, where ethnic violence began November 13 between Moslem Azerbaijanis and the Armenians, most of whom are Christians. Soldiers' families and thousands of Russians were evacuated Wednesday.

State television said the port terminal came under attack from ships of the Caspian Sea Oil Fleet and two soldiers were wounded.

Tankers and other ships with Azerbaijani crews had blocked the harbor because they suspected military authorities of planning to smuggle out bodies of people killed by Soviet soldiers, said Tunzala Kasumova, a journalist in Baku, a city with 1.8 million residents.

Captains of the oil tankers and barges were said to have threatened to blow up their vessels if military vessels tried to break through.

Red Army soldiers moved into the Azerbaijani capital Saturday to quell a nationalist uprising and anti-Armenian riots.

Kasumova said the 40-minute harbor battle began when a military cutter tried to break through the blockade, and troops near the terminal joined in to help the cutter.

"I could hear the thunder, the shooting and cannonade," the journalist said of what she described as an exchange of artillery and automatic weapons fire. Kasumova spoke by telephone from her home near the harbor.

Soviet television said several people detained in connection with the fight had weapons and drugs in their possession.

It was the first involvement of ships in the conflict, which began with Azerbaijani attacks on Armenians but has become an armed confrontation between the Azerbaijani republic and the central authority in Moscow.

Izvestia, the government newspaper, reported Wednesday that clashes between Azerbaijanis and Soviet troops were taking the form of a partisan war, including frequent night attacks on patrols.

Violence began January 13 with rioting by Azerbaijanis in which dozens of ethnic Armenians were killed.

An estimated 16,000 Armenians left the city and ethnic war began in the hills around the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh and on the border between the Armenian and Azerbaijani republics. At least 171 people have been killed.

Baku residents said the city was quiet Wednesday for the first time in weeks, except for the harbor and some shooting around an army barracks. A general strike continued.

Leila Yunusova, an Azerbaijani activist, said people observed the ban on mass meetings but many attended small gatherings to renounce their Communist Party memberships and protest the Soviet military presence. She said 100,000 of Azerbaijan's 380,000

Azerbaijanis angered by the Soviet government's use of troops tear up their Communist Party membership cards in Baku Tuesday. Soviet troops stormed the capital city Saturday attempting to stop ethnic violence between Azerbaijanis and Armenians.

Communists had torn up their party cards.

Tass said demonstrations and strikes were banned in Baku beginning Wednesday and activists were told they could be sent to jail for 30 days if they tried to organize such protests.

Soviet media reported growing threats against the Russian population of Baku from Azerbaijanis reacting to the army's attacks on militants and attempts to restore order. About 100,000 Russians live in Baku.

Many Russians left the city and Tass said the Soviet military evacuated more than 16,000 wives and children of soldiers.

Trud, a labor newspaper, reported attacks on the apartments of Russians and said Azerbaijanis were refusing to sell bread to Russians.

Militants continued storming weapons depots in Armenia and Azerbaijan and had stolen more than 5,000 guns and other materiel in two days, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said in Moscow.

Officials have blamed banned groups for inciting violence, but Sivinich Abdullayev, an editor at republic's official news agency Azerinform, said leaders of the Azerbaijani People's Front apparently were not included in the round-up. Authorities have been particularly critical of the front.

Soviet TV suggested Wednesday night that the government meet with all groups in Azerbaijan, including the People's Front.

Jefferson's monumental tree may become a table

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A tree planted at the University of Virginia the year school founder Thomas Jefferson died has been given a reprieve from becoming a woodpile, but not for long.

The majestic but moribund McGuffey ash, planted in 1826, was to have been taken down during the Christmas holiday break but will continue to stand in a garden until late next month.

Then its trunk and limbs, weakened by decay and lightning, will be cut up and stacked under a protective cover while a subcommittee of the university's faculty arboretum and landscape committee decides what to do with the wood.

J. James Murray, the committee chairman, said he hopes "at least one piece of ceremonial furniture for the university... a table, a lectern or a chest" is made from the tree's remains.

The delay occurred because bidding for the job of removing the 164-year-old tree was redone to include preserving the wood for some time, said Jeffrey Ertle, the university's assistant vice president for landscape.

"I suspect that while we may use some of it right away, a lot of that wood is going to sit around for a while, so we're going to have to do a good job of preserving it," Ertle said.

Albemarle Tree Co. won the contract with a bid of $6,480.

The tree, which will be replaced with one of its offspring, was named for the Rev. William McGuffey, who lived near where the tree was planted.

Burned boy wary of father's release

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Rothenberg will never forgive his father for setting him on fire, saying Wednesday's release of the man who disfigured him leaves him terrified despite unprecedented measures to keep the felon away.

"Obviously, he is very concerned, and he has every reason to be," said Tipton Kindel, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections in Sacramento.

Rothenberg, 49, wearing blue jeans, a blue chambray shirt and an electronic leash to monitor his movements during his three-year probation, "was escorted out of the prison by motor vehicle" at 12:40 a.m., said Kindel.

"He is out on parole, and he has reached his destination," the spokesman said, declining to even disclose whether Rothenberg was paroled within the United States.

The older Rothenberg "said he was afraid and upset, but he didn't elaborate," Kindel said.

David Rothenberg, who is now 13, said he keeps a BB gun by his bed just in case. "I'd shoot his eye out if he ever came over. I'd blind him," he said in a recent interview.

David lives in Orange County with his mother, Marie, and stepfather, Buena Park police Lt. Richard Hafdahl, who helped investigate the fire. "He has nightmares that his dad is chasing him down the street," Hafdahl said.

Asked what is being done to protect David, Kindel said that if Rothenberg is ever "not where he's supposed to be, then the family, David, will be notified immediately," Hafdahl said he's also taken security measures.

"He's under the most restrictive parole ever for a California parole," Kindel said. "He will be accompanied by a parole officer 24 hours a day. We want to make sure that he is where he is supposed to be and that he has no opportunity to come into contact with his son."

Rothenberg's parole will cost California taxpayers $18,000 a month. Rothenberg set fire to his 6-year-old son in a Buena Park motel room in 1983 after a telephone argument in which his estranged wife said Rothenberg would not be able to see David again.

Rothenberg had taken the boy on a holiday to Southern California from New York, where the boy was living with his mother.

"If I can't have him, nobody else can," Rothenberg said when arrested six days later. Wearing a lapel pin reading "Kids are the nicest people," he told arresting officers he was going to kill himself but was too much of a coward.

David, dragged from the inferno by motel guests, suffered third-degree burns over 90 percent of his body.

Rothenberg was convicted of attempted murder, arson and other charges and got the maximum penalty, a 13-year prison term. The sentence was cut in half because of good behavior.

If convicted today, Rothenberg would have faced up to life in prison. But sentencing laws at the time required his release after less than seven years.

Prison officials tried to keep relocation plans secret, fearing a repeat of the hysteria surrounding the 1987 release of Larry Singleton. Singleton, who had raped a teen-ager and left her for dead after hacking off her forearms with an ax, had to be moved repeatedly from Northern California communities.

Woman needs bone-marrow donor to save life

NEW YORK (AP) — For the sake of a 20-year-old leukemia victim, about 9,600 people have undergone blood tests in the past three months, hoping that they will be able to give her the bone marrow that might save her life.

Allison Atlas is still waiting. But as a result of her search for a compatible donor, eight other patients have found potential donors, and a data bank that collects information about possible donors is nearly 10,000 names richer.

The Atlas family of Bethesda, Md., is among about 15 families around the country who have gone public with marrow searches, helped by a national organization.

The families travel, talk to reporters, hold donor drives and raise money to cover the $75 blood test fee for each volunteer they bring in. Public relations and fund-raising pointers come from the Life-Savers Foundation, the recruiting arm of the National Marrow Donor Program in St. Paul, Minn.

"Help Save Allison's Life," entreats an advertisement that has brought volunteers to synagogues and Jewish community centers in Washington, Baltimore, Boston, New York, Harrisburg, Pa., Norfolk, Va., and other cities.

"Several people have come up to me and said, 'I hope I'm the one,'" said Atlas. "It's reinforced in my mind that we are going to find someone."

"It's been a very emotional experience for the whole family to see all these people waiting in line," said her father, Alvin Atlas.

"We're private people; it's been a very difficult thing to do," said Atlas, a clothing store owner. "But one of our goals is to save our daughter's life. The doctors don't know how much time we have."

Doctors told Atlas in August that her type of leukemia can only be cured by a transplant to replace diseased marrow, which produces new blood cells. Members of her family and 75,000 listings at the National Marrow Donor Program did not match her tissue type.

The odds of a match are usually about 1 in 20,000.

OXFORD

Several colleges of Oxford University have invited The Washington International Studies Council to recommend qualified students to study for one year or for one or two terms. Lower Junior status is required, and graduate study is available. Students are directly enrolled in their colleges and receive transcripts from their Oxford college; this is NOT a program conducted by a U.S. College in Oxford. 3.2 minimum index in major required.

An alternative program which is sponsored by a U.S. University is available for students with minimum indexes of 2.7. Students will have social and athletic rights in an Oxford college and the fees are substantially less.

"Once Upon A Time..."

And so it came to pass that a great sadness fell upon the Land. For the Great Lords who sat in Washington had caused a snafu to be laid upon the People, to cause them much Pain and Suffering. Throughout the land, there was much wailing and gnashing of teeth. For all believed that all was lost, even unto their Mercedes and Cadillacs.

"Times are Bad!" cried the Media. "You are all about to go down the tubes!" And, lo! the People so hearing did so believe. And they donned sackcloth and ashes, and spoke with lowered voices and much wringing of hands.

But there was amongst them one named Mark the Idiot at M.C. Ginsberg Jewelers, who was weak of mind, hard of hearing and dim of sight, so that he was not able to see, hear, nor understand how bad times were, so stupid was he.

And Mark fashioned for himself a small shield and emblazoned upon it the words "Business is Good," and bound it to his mantle, that all might look upon it.

And as he traveled through the land, the people raised their heads and they mocked at him, saying, "Wherefore do ye wear such a sign upon your breast saying 'Business is Good?'" But Mark of M. C. Ginsberg replied, saying, "I wear this sign because Business is Good."

And one who wailed mightily spake, saying, "Wherefore is your business good, but we are in such distress?" and Mark replied, "Thou knowest my eyes fail me, therefore I cannot read the newspapers that proclaim misery in the land. Thou knowest I hear dimly, therefore cannot I hear the mighty warnings of McNeil and Lehrer. Thou also knowest I am slow of mind, and therefore do not comprehend what Wise Men say in New York and Chicago. So is my heart not burdened, and my work joyful."

Hearing this, the multitude raised their voices, and cried aloud, "Mark, Mark! Make for us one of your Magic Buttons, that we might also shed of our despair." And Mark spake humbly saying, "It's not magic, people, You just gotta believe."

If you would like one of Mark's Magic Buttons, just come into M. C. Ginsberg Jewelers. We'll be glad to share the magic.

10 migrant laborers die in van plunge

CLEWISTON, Fla. (AP)—A farm labor van plunged off a curve and into a canal in heavy fog Wednesday in rural Hendry County, trapping and drowning 10 migrant workers from Mexico, authorities said.

"Some of them had stuck their arms out trying to get out, but they didn't make it," said sheriff's Bill Chamness. "When the deputies dove in to get them, they were already dead."

The driver and one passenger escaped through windows with minor injuries as the panel van sank in 12 feet of murky water, he said. Nine men and one woman couldn't get out, he said.

"We think it was probably due to dense fog," Chamness said. "In the accident area, there's a curve. Evidently they got on the curve quicker than they thought, and instead of turning they went straight into the canal."

The driver "made no attempt to turn, and he's driven this road many times," he said.

But the driver told investigators he lost control of the van when the steering failed, said Florida Highway Patrol Maj. Mike Kirby inallahassee.

"That van will be meticulously scrutinized in the next day or two," Kirby said.

Chamness said the privately owned van went straight for 50 yards instead of making the curve on a county road about six miles south of this Lake Okeechobee farm community, which is about 10 miles northwest of Miami.

The road cuts through a sugar cane district intersected by numerous irrigation and drainage canals, Chamness said.

The accident occurred at about 10 a.m. EST, but the sheriff's office didn't receive word until 7:46 a.m. The first deputies to arrive dove into the water in a fruitless rescue effort.

Officer gets 7-year term for shooting

MIAMI (AP)—A police officer was sentenced Wednesday to seven years in prison for the deaths of two black men in an incident that lasted three days of racial violence last year.

William Lozano, 31, was convicted last month on two counts of manslaughter for fatally shooting an armed black motorcyclist on a street in the Overtown section, sending the vehicle crashing into a canal and killing the motorcycle's passenger.

"This court cannot do perfect justice in this case," said Dade Circuit Judge Joseph Farina, who called the deaths and resultant trial a "tragic incident."

The Colombian-born officer showed little reaction as the judge read the sentence, but his supporters cheered when Farina said the officer could remain free on $100,000 bond pending appeals.

On Jan. 16, 1989, deaths led to the city's fourth round of racial unrest in the 1980s, all linked to killings of blacks by white officers. In two of those cases, indictments of the policemen had been dropped for racial violence, and police were ordered for renewed rioting as Lozano's trial neared an end last month. But on December 7, a racially mixed jury convicted Lozano.

Police said the city was quiet after Lozano's sentencing.

"Everything is good, there's no disturbance, no nothing," said the spokesman George Law.

After the sentence, Lozano stared at lead prosecutor John Fauntroy, but said nothing.

Outside the courtroom, Patricia Lloyd, sister of slain motorcyclist, said only, "I wish it had been longer."

Fauntroy, head of the South-Central Christian Leadership Conference here, said he was disappointed with the sentence.

Lozano "get seven years just for eating a loaf of bread," Fauntroy said. "This officer was just given a slap on the back. He'll be out in two or three years."

DOLE PROPOSAL

Israel off the Dole?

Senator Bob Dole's controversial suggestion last week that the U.S. redirect a small percentage of foreign aid to five nations to bolster fledgling democracies in Eastern Europe reaffirmed the minority leader's national political status: Dole remains one of the most outspoken, aggressive and efficient legislators on Capitol Hill, and precisely for that reason, he will never be president.

Dole proposed that the U.S. cut five percent of the aid it annually ships to Egypt, Pakistan, Turkey, Greece and Israel and give the money instead to newly democratic nations in Eastern Europe. That suggestion makes perfect foreign policy sense, apart from the looming fact that Israel is among the nations on the losing end of Dole's deal.

Almost immediately, the countless PACs that defend Israel's interests, along with the countless legislators whose hands rest comfortably in the pockets of those PACs, began howling. They contend that Israel's open door to thousands of Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union and its precarious position on the West Bank necessitates more, not less, U.S. economic aid.

And, as usual, the massive clout of Israel's PACs will almost surely prevail.

But Dole's proposal was masterful not because it ever had a chance of success, but because it provided essential leverage for the Bush administration to muster added economic support for European nations freshly severed from the Soviet sphere.

So, while Congress will continue to ignore any call to cut into aid for Israel or the four other major recipients, Dole's aggressive posturing will help secure the short-term goal of developing the new democracies of Eastern Europe.

Bush Administration officials gave guarded public responses to Dole's proposal last week, but were reportedly "delighted" at the senator's vocal stance. Dole's proposal may well provide the Bush administration with the best of both worlds: No cuts to major U.S. aid recipients, and a nice economic package for potential allies in Eastern Europe. And all at practically no political cost.

Dole's proposal, however, may eventually cost him. Dole's intention was to establish a bargaining position, not damage Israel. On Capitol Hill, where brash proposals are meant to yield negotiated, not immediate, results, Dole's actions amounted to brilliant execution of a grand legislative game. But, if the dour senator from Kansas still harbors any presidential ambitions, he will likely see this episode resurrected, and be remembered as an enemy of Israel by its PACs.

MCMARTIN TRIAL

A proper fiasco

What went awry in the now infamous McMartin Preschool trial will never be fully known, and last week's acquittal of Ray Buckley and his mother, Virginia McMartin Buckley, on 52 counts of child abuse has certainly left egg on the faces of nearly everyone involved in the abortive prosecution: on the D.A.'s office, which failed to build a convincing case after six years; on the police, who tainted the case from the outset with a provocative letter to parents with children at the McMartin school; on the judicial apparatus of Los Angeles County, which allowed Buckley and his mother to sit in jail for seven years between them before they could raise bail; and yes, on the media, which turned the McMartin case into a proper circus of public hysteria.

Altogether, it ought to remind those whose business is information — as the Stuart murder case did recently — that the job of reporters is to report, not to accelerate the public's rush to judgement.

It must remind the public that justice is weighed and dealt in courtrooms, not in the pages of newspapers and on nightly newscasts.

And it must remind everyone, especially those who argue before the bench, that there is little wisdom — or justice — in building a case of size and not precision of evidence. Six years, $15 million and 60,000 pages — approximately twelve cubic feet — of testimony later, nothing was proved except that too much is always too much.

All over Manhattan Beach, Calif., where the abandoned McMartin Preschool sits amidst weeds, and the nearby towns of Redondo and Hermosa, one sees the same sticker in windows and on the bumpers of cars. It states, simply, "I believe the children."

Doubtless, many across the nation still do. By their own admission in a post-trial news conference, a majority of jurors did, too; over half raised their hands when reporters asked if, despite the verdict, any believed some molestation had taken place. Fortunately, that belief clouded neither their judgement as jurors, nor their patience with a trial that, after 30 months, must have seemed more trouble than it was worth.

There exists no small irony in the fact that the McMartin case, which heightened the public's awareness of child abuse and brought a secret national shame into the light, should end in such a costly fiasco.

Ray Buckley and Virginia McMartin Buckley may have, as co-prosecutor Lael Rubin said, gotten "lucky"; the judicial system may indeed have "worked well for them."

But a nation that will not tolerate child abuse should not tolerate injustice of any kind — including circus acts like the McMartin trial.

No easy win for Sandinistas

"It does not cross the FSLN (Sandinista) members' minds that the opposition will win the elections. . . . This would be a return to the Middle Ages. It would be a return to the cave," Nicaragua's Interior Minister Tomas Borge commented last October.

The Marxist military junta that has ruled Nicaragua for a decade does not intend to lose the upcoming election. It has organized every phase of the election to favor its candidate. It wrote the election laws. It controls the election commission, the police, courts and the media. It has the power to decide who will and will not be permitted to observe the election. The Supreme Electoral Council, which will administer the election, was created by the government and is largely stacked with its supporters.

Almost none of the preconditions for an honest election exists in Nicaragua, and we should not fudge that fact. Yet, the Sandinistas and Daniel Ortega could lose. UNO and its candidate, Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, could win.

Any fair election requires that opposition parties enjoy equal protection of the law, equal access to media and equal freedom to organize meetings, solicit funds and spend them. It requires an adequate opportunity for voters to register and vote, to have their votes counted honestly and to participate in a campaign without fear of reprisal.

Few of these conditions exist in Nicaragua. The registration process was too brief. It was marked by bureaucratic delays and complications, and worse, by harassment and violent intimidation. An UNO rally at Masatepe was attacked so viciously that one person was killed and several injured.

Chamorro has received anonymous death threats. Her vice presidential running-mate, Virgilio Godoy, has been subjected to repeated death threats and other pressures to withdraw from the campaign. Some of UNO's candidates for the National Assembly and municipal offices have been forced to resign. Others have been heavily pressured to withdraw.

The government, which enjoys a monopoly of television and radio, saturates both media with "news" favorable to its candidate and its case, and unfavorable to the opposition. There are two wholly state-controlled television channels. UNO gets 10 minutes every three days on Channel 2, a weak black-and-white channel that can be received only in the Managua area. Channel 6 is a strong color channel, received throughout the country, and is saturated by Sandinista campaign propaganda throughout the day.

But all this may not be enough. Daniel Ortega just might lose the election anyway, much in the way Communist candidates were swept to defeat in Poland.

It has been more than a decade since the comandantes of the FSLN seized power in Nicaragua. During that decade, the Nicaraguan people have learned firsthand hard lessons about "the dictatorship of the Proletariat." Of a total population of fewer than three million, more than 600,000 have gone into exile. Thousands who remained have spent time in jail for political offenses. The economy is in shambles. There are shortages of bread and beef, rice and beans and even coffee. Above all, there is a shortage of hard currency.

If the voters judge the government by its economic policies, Ortega will be defeated, despite the lack of a fair campaign.

The economy of Nicaragua has been virtually destroyed — not by the contras, but by the mismanagement of young comandantes who imagined they were competent to direct it.

The president of Nicaragua's private sector, Gilberto Cuadra, said last week the Nicaraguan private sector had lived through a tragic year in 1989, and that the future had "disappeared." The production of milk, he said, is one-sixth what it once was because Sandinistas have heedlessly slaughtered cows to get hard currency.

By 1989, Nicaragua had also become heavily dependent on the charity of neighbors. In that year, 39 percent of the rice consumed by Nicaraguans was donated. (And later sold by the government to its people.)

Ortega said in his year-end address that "Democrats" cannot be separated from economic issues. "If the voters judge the government by its economic policies, Ortega will be defeated, despite the lack of a fair campaign, adequate registration and election procedures, and protection of citizens."

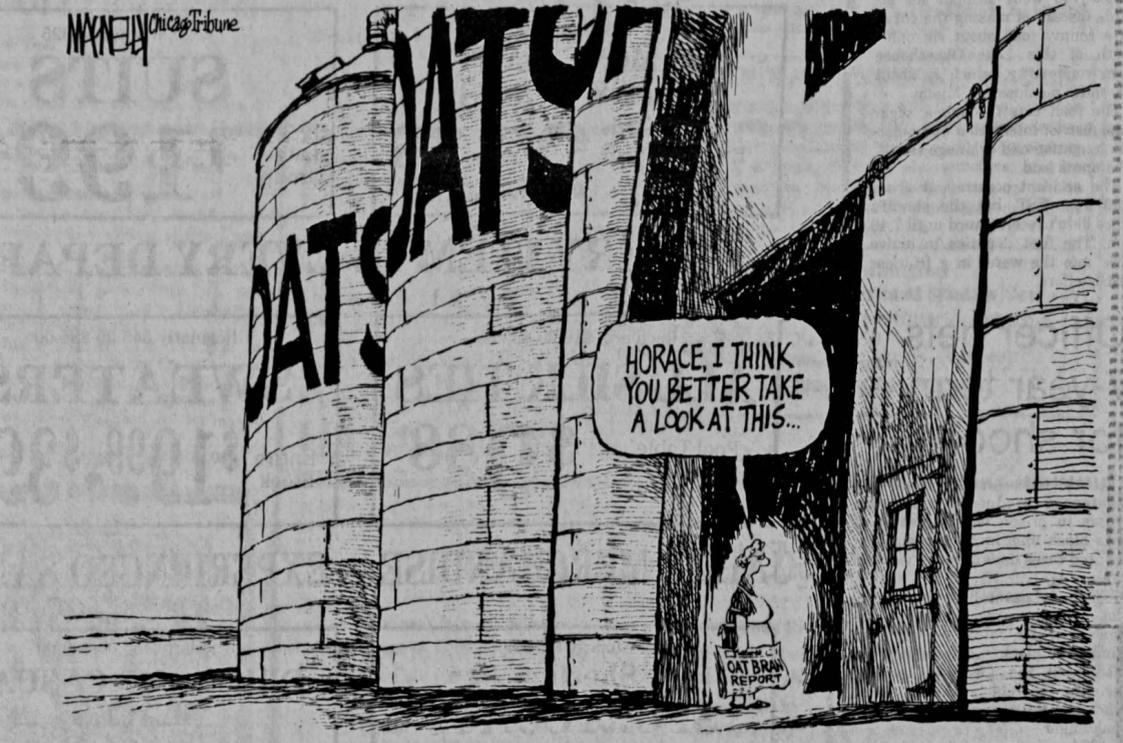

But for this to happen, there will have to be an honest count. And if it is not honest, will the world know the difference? The government of Nicaragua has so far refused to number ballots, so there will be no way of ascertaining if ballot boxes have been stuffed. No measures have yet been taken to prevent multiple voting.

Freedom House's representative, John McAward, has written: "Many of the concerns . . . about the election can be allayed by the presence of large numbers of observers from democratic groups and governments in the United States and around the world. . . . This is the key to a successful election."

So far, however, it appears that the government is determined to use visas as an instrument to screen out "provocative" and "negative" observers.

We should not be surprised that a government ready to rig an election is also eager to rig its observers. The world must not let it succeed.

Falwell, Meese . . . and Kurtzahn?

To the Editor:

Leslie Kurtzahn's moralistic review of Re/Search magazine ["A silent public is an accomplice to pornography," the DI, January 22] was one of the most disgusting pieces of reactionary ideology and defense of the status quo that I've read in a long time.

[Kurtzahn] calls for "historically tuned judgement" on works of art, saying that it should be "criticized in cultural terms"; it terms of "past culture." What does that mean? All it tells me is that we should always apply old values to things new.

I think the best candidates for the job [Kurtzahn] is asking for are Jerry Falwell and Ed Meese, and indeed, they're doing just that, with the usual stifling results.

Re/Search and the people they interview are disgusted with history and the "culture" it has produced. They're aware of the dehumanization inherent in daily life, and are trying to force others to wake up to that reality. If you don't like it, then go back to your pretty pictures, because it doesn't make sense to define artists' work with the very values they're attacking and trying to change.

The issue here is censorship. If you can label something as "pornography," then you can shove it off into a corner with all the other naughty stuff, and not . . . deal with the ideas it presents.

Derek Cadwell

OK, forget Falwell but leave the others

To the Editor:

Leslie Kurtzahn, in her submission to "Her Perspective," states, "Research Magazine looks and acts like pornography because it is." This subjective view cannot more clearly demonstrate a lack in understanding the purpose of Research Magazine.

It is a publication in which each issue deals with different elements that would be of interest to the contemporary "counter-culture." Research is not an outlet for images of gratuitous sex and violence. The "Modern Primitives" issue, which she mentions, deals with tattooing, body-modification and many other practices which would be viewed by the majority of Americans as strange and primitive in appearance. This issue takes an objective cultural/anthropological look at why one can find such practices continued in modern culture. There is no pretense made by the editors that they are covering what the majority would recognize as art.

The pictures themselves are often disturbing, but this in itself does not make [Research Magazine] pornography.

Kurtzahn argues that "Criticism serves a moral function." With this I cannot disagree. However, there are many moral perspectives from which Art (with a capital 'A') can be viewed. In Kurtzahn's article it is assumed that there is only one unifying cultural litmus test for what passes for a work of art, or whose critical slant is justified. Kurtzahn myopically views the institution of Art from a traditionally and academically parochial viewpoint, a view which many of the artists given a form in Research violently object to.

I find the close-minded tone of [her] argument . . . frighteningly close to the censorship measures currently favored by Sen. Jesse Helms.

Heartless reporting

To the Editor:

I would like to direct a question to

Kelly David and the editor of the DI, regarding the January 23 article, "Vehicular homicide trial opens."

Exactly what purpose was served by printing Debra Bell's description of Martin Davies' body at the scene of the accident? It is difficult enough for Martin's family to deal with the traumatic death of their only son and brother; for [the DI] to make them relive the horror of the accident by including needlessly vivid, graphic details, under the guise of "informing the public," is reprehensible.

It would have been quite sufficient to simply state that Martin was dead at the scene. In fact, that is precisely what the other local newspaper deemed adequate and appropriate. I quote from the January 23 Press-Citizen: "Robinson pointed to a body of a boy, Bell said, and when she looked, she knew the boy was dead."

The Press-Citizen somehow managed to communicate to the public in a subtle manner that Martin died immediately, while still fulfilling the journalistic criteria of informing the public. How about that.

Japan to deport 378 Chinese

TOKYO — Japan will deport 378 more Chinese who entered the country posing as Vietnamese refugees, bringing to 679 the number to be returned involuntarily to China, the Justice Ministry said Wednesday.

Yoshinori Sato, an official of the Immigration Bureau at the Justice Ministry, said the Chinese to be deported are among 2,804 boat people who made their way to Japan in 22 landings last year.

The government has determined that about 2,000 are Chinese, Sato said. Other officials indicated the government intends to deport all 2,000 as soon as it can work out details with the Chinese authorities. The government has said the Chinese boat people were only seeking economic opportunities.

Sato declined to specify when the 378 will be deported.

FDA threatens American Heart Association

NEW YORK — The Food and Drug Administration threatened legal action Wednesday against an American Heart Association food labeling program it said could mislead consumers, but the heart association decided to go ahead with the program.

The FDA said in a letter that the food labeling program could be "risking regulatory action." It said there is a "very real possibility that the FDA would find one or more foods under your program to be misbranded," meaning they might carry misleading labels.

The program, known as Heartguide, is an ambitious effort by the heart association to make consumers smarter shoppers by identifying products low in saturated fat, total fat, cholesterol and sodium.

Products tested and approved by the association, for a fee, would carry a symbol made up of a red heart and a check mark.

Promotional tambourines pose danger

WASHINGTON — A manufacturer is recalling more than 20,000 tambourines sold nationwide as a novelty promotion item by two restaurant chains because of sharp points and small parts that could cause injuries to children, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Wednesday.

The orange and white tambourines have a red, black, yellow and gray picture of "Chuck E. Cheese" and were sold since 1987 at pizza restaurants under that name.

The items were also sold at Showbiz Pizza Restaurants, according to a statement issued by the CPSC.

In agency testing, the plastic tambourines broke along with the wire holding metal cymbals attached to the side of the instrument.

Secord gets 2 years' probation for lying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran-Contra arms middleman Richard Secord was placed on probation for two years Wednesday for falsely telling congressional investigators he was unaware any money in the affair had benefited Oliver North.

After his sentencing, the retired Air Force major general accused former President Ronald Reagan of failing to support loyal subordinates and operatives in the worst foreign policy debacle of the Reagan administration.

"I think former President Reagan has been hiding out; I think it's cowardly," Secord said when asked about Reagan's role in the affair.

In 1986, when the Iran-Contra operation erupted, "I think that he should have stood up and taken the heat . . . just as previous presidents have done (in failed covert operations)," Secord told a news conference. "But instead of that they built a wall around . . . him."

Secord said then-Attorney General Edwin Meese acted "in panic and out of ignorance" on Nov. 25, 1986, when he announced that the Justice Department would examine possible violations of criminal law in the affair. That was the day Meese disclosed that some funds from the secret Iran arms sales had been diverted to the Contras. Reagan maintains he didn't know about the diversion, and Secord said it would be "speculative" on his part to suggest otherwise.

But "the president did not stand up and say this (the Contra resupply operation and Iran arms sales) was 'done on my authority,'" said Secord.

Secord said he didn't think there was "anything illegal . . . I thought at the time we were doing the president's bidding."

The president told the Tower Commission on Jan. 26, 1987, that he did not know the National Security Council staff was engaged in helping the Contras. "The Board is aware of no evidence to suggest that the president was aware of Lt. Col. North's activities," said the Tower Board's final report.

Secord was enlisted by then-White House aide North to airlift weapons and other supplies to the Nicaraguan rebels and assist the Reagan administration's secret arms shipments to Iran.

Secord, who paid for North's $13,800 home security system from proceeds of the Iran-Contra operation, told congressional investigators in 1987 he was unaware of any money going to North from the scandal.

"I deeply regret not being more candid," Secord told U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey Robinson. "If I could correct this I certainly would. I will regret it for the rest of my life."

Secord could have faced up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for the false statement, but Robinson said it was his judgment that there has already "been punishment in this case."

Secord is the fifth person to be sentenced in the Iran-Contra affair. The others were North, former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, Carl Channell and Richard Miller.

North was convicted of three crimes, including aiding and abetting an obstruction of Congress, altering and destroying National Security Council documents and accepting an illegal gratuity from Secord, the security system. He is appealing.

Secord said his life since the Iran-Contra affair began has been "pure hell."

Central planning may topple economy in E. Germany

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's economy may collapse within a year unless the Communist government discards central planning and embraces radical market reforms, a prominent economist said in an interview published Wednesday.

"The house is on fire, and the government is wasting time posturing. Every attempt to shore up a planned economy must be resisted," Siegfried Schiller said in an interview with the newspaper Die Union, distributed by the official news agency ADN.

Schiller, the Communist deputy director of Dresden's economic research institute, said East Germany must adopt investment incentives that will allow West German businesses profit from joint projects. He called the government's expressed fear of a sellout "demagoguery."

Pressure for conversion to a market economy has been building in recent weeks. East German economic performance last year was the worst in a decade — growth of only 2 percent, less than half the goal set by planners.

Much of the poor showing resulted from the flight of more than 340,000 East Germans to the West, a trend that has accelerated this year and could bring the total to 1 million by the end of 1990.

Lothar de Maiziere, leader of the Christian Democrats, predicted up to 30 percent of East Germany's 16 million people would leave if free elections planned for May 6 did not remove the Communists from power.

An abrupt break with the economic network of the Soviet bloc has its own perils: East Germany gets much of its energy and raw materials from the Soviet Union through barter or with non-convertible funds, and lacks the hard currency to buy from the West.

Schiller said half-measures could make matters worse by ending supplies of raw materials from the Eastern bloc before they could be obtained from the West.

The interim government of Hans Modrow, the Communist premier, has resisted total renunciation of the old economics and seeks a "third path" between communism and capitalism.

West German politicians are jockeying for position in case East Germany gives up on an independent recovery effort and opts for reunification.

A spokesman for Willy Brandt said the former chancellor would be willing to be honorary chairman of East Germany's newly created Social Democratic Party.

Party ends as Gophers wait

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The celebration is over, or at least it should be. After Iowa upset defending national champion Michigan Saturday, 78-76 in overtime, Carver-Hawkeye Arena resembled a city that had captured the pennant. But it takes more than one game to earn a title. The win snapped a five-game losing streak, and the Hawkeyes face No. 21 Minnesota tonight in Minneapolis at Williams Arena — a place where the Gophers seldom lose.

"They're as tough as any team at home," Iowa assistant Gary Close said. "At home, Minnesota just gets the job done."

The Gophers are 12-4 overall and even at 3-3 in the Big Ten after a heartbreaking loss to Wisconsin on the road Monday night.

Minnesota trailed by 21 points in the second half of the contest before clawing back, and losing on an inbounds alley-oop play with one second left in the game, 77-75. With the unpredictability of the league race, the Gophers figure to still be among the leaders, but a loss tonight would do serious damage to that.

All three conference losses came on the road, and coach Clem Haskins knows the importance of winning under his own roof.

"The people that beat us played good basketball," Haskins said. "We got beat by three fine ball clubs. So now, we must take advantage of being at home."

A year ago, the two teams split, with both clubs winning at home. See Basketball, Page 2B

Wrestlers coast in 31-7 win

Kerry Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Another big meet, another big win. The No. 3 Iowa wrestling team boosted their Big Ten mark Wednesday night to 3-0 with a 31-7 thrashing of No. 11 Minnesota in Minneapolis.

The Hawkeyes, seemingly back to their dominating ways of old, won seven of 10 matches to bury the Gophers in front of 2,764 fans at Williams Arena.

Iowa improved to 14-1 overall, with the lone loss coming to Oklahoma State Jan. 13 at the National Dual Meet Championships in Hampton, Va.

Minnesota was on the winning end of just two matches as fifth-ranked Chuck Heise edged out No. 6 Troy Steiner at 142 pounds 3-2, and No. 2 Marty Morgan controlled Don Finch 10-1 at 177 pounds.

The Hawkeyes picked up six more team points when the Gophers forfeited their match at 126.

"There were some big matchups tonight, and it was a big meet for us," Iowa coach Dan Gable said. "We probably won't have matchups like this again until we wrestle Arizona State and Oklahoma State."

Iowa came out on top of all the big matches but one — the Steiner-Heise contest at 142 — and Gable praised the efforts of Tom Brands at 134; saving special mention for heavyweight John Oostendorp.

The unranked Oostendorp avenged his only loss of the season by outgunning No. 5 Jeff Balcom 12-7 in one of the most exciting matches of the night. Balcom defeated Oostendorp earlier this year 15-5.

"I feel real good about John Oostendorp," Gable said, "that was a big win for him."

The victory raised Oostendorp's season record to 24-1.

"I've owed (Balcom) for two months now... since the last time I wrestled him," Oostendorp said. "It's a great feeling."

"I felt good going in, and I told the coaches that," he continued. "I kind of took a back seat to him in the first period. But then I looked over at (assistant coach Mark Johnson) and he gave me a dark look, so I thought I'd better crank 'er up."

Brands also registered a key triumph with a 5-3 decision over Dave Zuniga. Zuniga, who was previously unbeaten in the regular dual-meet season, had recently beaten top-ranked Chuck Barbee of Oklahoma State 19-4.

Brands is now in the No. 1 spot at 134 in the newly-released rankings compiled by the Amateur Wrestling News.

Grace: Iowa holds good memories

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Chicago Cubs first baseman Mark Grace has good memories of Iowa. After all, Cedar Rapids was the place where Grace hit his first home run in the Midwest League, playing for the Cubs' A team Peoria.

So when he arrived in Iowa City Wednesday as part of the annual Cubs Caravan, with teammates Les Lancaster and Joe Girardi and Cubs President and CEO Don Griesko, it was a trip down memory lane for the 6-foot-2, 190-pound left-hander.

"You're pretty used to this highway, aren't you," a reporter asked, gesturing toward Interstate 80.

"Yep, that's for sure," Grace said, laughing. "I spent a short time in Des Moines (with the Cubs' AAA farm team), and also spent a full year in Peoria, going through Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Clinton, playing in plenty of places."

"It was three years ago. I've grown up a lot since then; matured a lot since then. But still, those are some of the best memories I'll have, my first professional season. There's a lot of great things to remember."

Born in North Carolina and raised in San Diego, Grace found himself with the American Association's Iowa Cubs located at Des Moines in 1988.

For him, the weather wasn't the only thing to adjust to. The keen interest in football, and many Iowans' attitudes differed from the West Coast.

"In San Diego you're dealing with beautiful weather all the time, an ocean, Sea World and baseball year round where it seems like Iowa is football," Grace said. "You've got your great football and even great basketball here, but one thing about it that's different are the people.

"The people are much more down to earth here in Iowa than they are in California, much more personal and care a lot more about you here than they do out in California. And there's less problems with drugs."

On May 2, 1988, when Grace's contract was purchased from the Iowa Cubs, the 25-year-old left Iowa for the Windy City.

According to Grace, there's nowhere else he would like to be and no other team he would like to play for than the Chicago Cubs.

"Some people, not just ball players, but everyday people, are more loyal to their jobs than other people," said Grace, who was selected by Chicago in the 24th round of the 1985 June draft. "It's the same in baseball... I love where I am. I'd love to have a 20-year contract if I could, but they don't dish those out too often."

Grace said that the Cubs fans, who are present all over the country, are a big plus for the team.

"They're everywhere. We played at Cincinnati and Atlanta this year and it was just like playing home games," Grace said. "They would score and there would be boos; we would score and there would be cheers — in the opposing ballpark. The loyalty of Cub fans is astonishing."

"The important thing to me is winning and having fun, and the fans are all part of that. When you have 40,000 people screaming at you, that makes it a lot of fun... The fans are all part of the season. We couldn't have (won) the National League East title) without them."

This year marks the third that Grace has participated in the Caravan, and he said he likes being part of the group.

"I wouldn't do them if I didn't enjoy them," he said.

Grant tries to finance hoop trip

Rita Helmes
The Daily Iowan

Dr. Christine Grant, the Iowa director of women's athletics, met Wednesday morning with selected businessmen and women from Iowa City to present corporate sponsorship opportunities for the 14-day "Friendship Tour" of Japan by the Iowa women's basketball team.

The tour, currently scheduled for May 16-30, is a joint venture between Iowa and Japan Airlines (JAL), which made a donation to the university a year ago of 25 round-trip tickets from Chicago to Tokyo.

Grant spoke at the 7:30 a.m. coffee, fruit and pastry breakfast in the Chamber of Commerce building in an effort to gain donations from Iowa City businesses that would help fund the on-ground expenses for the basketball team.

The 12-member team, lead by coach C. Vivian Stringer, will play six games in Japan; one against the JAL team, two against the Japan "B" team, and three against the national "A" team.

"The Japanese have an interest in increasing the level of basketball in their country," Grant said. "The (Iowa) students are on cloud nine. Some still don't believe they're going. I think it's going to be very, very exciting for the entire state."

Ray Muston, executive director of Iowa City Area Development, joined Grant in seeking to explain to community businesses the industrial opportunities in Japan.

Dr. Christine Grant

"The Japanese have a tremendous interest in buying American products and in joint ventures," Muston said. "We're looking for the industrial leaders in the state to join us."

Grant stressed that the tour is not just for the basketball team, but also for the university, which will be represented by President Hunter Rawlings with university and business researchers, who will explore "scientific and economic development" in Japan.

According to Diane Murphy, assistant to Grant, businesses that make the sought-after contributions of $5,000 or $10,000 will not automatically travel with the two-week tour. They and other private citizens are invited to purchase their own tickets and fly with the team, for a yet undetermined price.

Private travel arrangements for the "Friendship Tour" are being made through Meacham Travel in Iowa City, Murphy said.

Kabat, Bautel add depth to No. 3 Hawks

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

The core of the Iowa men's gymnastics team may be the three seniors, but freshman Chris Kabat and sophomore Paul Bautel supply the added depth the team needs to pull out wins in the tough meets.

"Our team has pretty good depth and it's good quality depth," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said. "Paul and Chris are looking good in practices. We're anxious to get them more consistent in competitions. We are going to need (good performances) in the next couple of weeks from them."

Last year Bautel was selected as co-winner of the Big Ten Freshman of the Year Award. In this season's competition, he placed third in the all-around at the San Jose meet, posting a score of 102.85.

And in the national rankings for 12th on the still rings with his season-highest score of 9.40.

At last weekend's Windy City Invitational, Bautel had to withdraw from all competition except for rings due to illness. A combination of illness and difficult routines has made his performances less consistent than he would like.

"I have new routines that are more difficult that I'm working on now," Bautel said. "I want to get real consistent in my routines. Hopefully I'll stick to my new routines the rest of the season."

Kabat stands at 19th in the national all-around competition with a score of 53.05, and has a third-place national ranking in the vault at 9.40.

This season he competed in the Winter Nationals after finishing fourth at the Wisconsin Open. He also placed fourth in the all-around at the Spartan Open and seventh at the Windy City Invitational.

Although Kabat has been having a good season so far he also is not happy with his consistency either.

"I'm going to show everyone I can and hit six for six (of my routines)," Kabat said. "I have to prove to myself I can do it. I haven't done it so far this season."

"Our team has pretty good depth and it's good quality depth. Paul and Chris are looking good in practices."

but it's a great feeling to know the coach has confidence in me."

When the seniors graduate they will leave some holes in the lineup, but Kabat and Bautel should be ready to fill the gaps.

"It's quite possible they will be able to take (seniors Jeff Dow's and Keith Cousins's) place in the lineup," Dunn said. "The real question is, will we be able to find the people to replace Paul and Chris."

While the Iowa men's gymnastics team relies greatly on leadership from its three seniors, sophomore Paul Bautel, left, and freshman Chris Kabat have been adding depth to the third-ranked Hawkeyes this season.

Thomas will sit out

CHICAGO (AP) — Freshman center Deon Thomas, whose recruitment by Illinois is being investigated by the NCAA, says he has decided not to play with the Fighting Illini basketball team this season even if school officials say he can.

"It's a tough decision, but I've got to live with it," Thomas said Tuesday. "The NCAA is saying it (the investigation) won't be over until Jan. 28 at the earliest. By then, we'll be into the second half of the Big Ten season and I'll have very few games left to play."

The university's own decision on Thomas' eligibility was expected to come today or Thursday, said Chancellor Morton Weir.

School officials have been working to decide the cases of Thomas, who has been kept out of competition, and assistant coach Jimmy Collins, who has been restricted from recruiting on the road, since the investigation began in July.

Collins heads recruiting for the Illini. "We don't have the matter fully clarified," Weir said Tuesday, "but it is important we tell them (Thomas and Collins) something as soon as possible."

Illinois coach Lou Henson on Tuesday said he was not aware of Thomas' decision to sit out the remaining 12 games of the season. "We have not discussed that, but you know, Deon is intelligent," Henson said. "He knows we don't have many games to go."

Thomas' inactivity stems from allegations made by University of Iowa officials, who also recruited him when he played at Chicago Simeon, that Illinois offered Thomas $80,000 and a Chevrolet Blazer.

Hawk gymnasts place high

The Daily Iowan

Based on the highest scores recorded this season, the Iowa men's gymnastic team ranked third in the nation with a 272.40.

Big Ten schools Minnesota (274.65) and Ohio State (274.50) took the number one and two positions.

Iowa's Keith Cousino (9.70) is tied for the top position on parallel bars with Minnesota's John Roethlisberger. Also receiving third place rankings are Erik Heikkila (9.55) in the floor exercise, Rich Frye (9.65) on the pommel horse and Chris Kabat (9.40) in vaulting. In the all-around, seniors Jeff Dow (55.25) and Cousino (55.12) placed fifth and sixth.

Spartans crush Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Kirk Manns scored 25 points and Michigan State beat No. 12 Indiana 75-57 Wednesday night, making the Spartans the winningest visiting team ever at Assembly Hall.

Michigan State won for the sixth time at Assembly Hall, where Indiana is 229-31 overall and 134-25 in Big Ten play.

The Spartans (15-3, 4-1) overcame an 8-0 deficit by scoring eight straight points during a 29-11 surge that put them ahead to stay. Indiana (13-3, 3-3) trailed 29-19 after Mann's 3-pointer with 4:14 left in the half and was down 35-27 at halftime.

Indiana scored the first point of the second half, but the Spartans responded with a 10-2 streak that put them ahead 45-30 on a rebound layup by Ken Redfield with 17:22 remaining.

Eric Anderson, who played with the flu and led the Hoosiers with 12, capped a six-point spurt that pulled Indiana to within nine with 15:40 remaining. Redfield then scored four points and Manns, who won an Indiana high school scoring championship before going to Michigan State, had three in an 11-3 streak that broke the game open.

Michigan State, which pulled to within a half-game of Big Ten leader Purdue, led 56-39 with 9:46 to go after that streak and the Hoosiers never drew closer than 12 points again.

Manns, who was averaging 20.8 points in conference play heading into the game, made 10 of 14 shots. Michigan State shot 56 percent, 30 of 54. Indiana, meanwhile, shot 44 percent from the field (23 of 52) and made just 8 of 18 free throws.

Cyclones let Sooners slip past

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Damon Patterson and Skeeter Henry sparked a late 10-3 run that finally gave ninth-ranked Oklahoma control of the game and the Sooners went on to beat Iowa State 107-96 in a Big Eight Conference game.

Henry scored the first four points in the run, then Patterson added the next four as the Sooners stretched a 91-90 lead to 99-93 with 2:20 remaining. Iowa State got no closer than three after that.

The Sooners (13-2 overall, 2-1 in the Big Eight) had no success with their usual pressure defense and were able to gain control only after going to a zone in the second half. Iowa State (6-9, 1-2), led by as many as five in the second half but couldn't hold on.

in the lineup, Kabat said it is a good, but scary, thought.

"Jeff and Keith, they're awesome," Kabat said. "It will be tough but I think Dillon (Ashton), Don (Scarlett), Paul and I will be able to take over."

Both Kabat and Bautel have the same goal for the season: to win the Big Ten Championship. Kabat not only wants to win the conference championship but also to place in the top five in the all-around.

"To win Big Tens we are going to need good preparation and confidence by having good meets," Kabat said. "We need to take it one step at a time and pull together as

But the two games weren't similar at all. At Williams, a last-second 3-pointer by senior Roy Marble was disallowed, leaving Iowa an 80-78 loser.

When the Gophers traveled to Carver, the Hawkeyes thumped Haskins' club 99-61.

But Haskins said the win in Minneapolis was a major driving force in spurring his team on to an NCAA tournament appearance.

"That probably turned our season around," Haskins said. "This year, it's a tough Iowa ball club. We have our work cut out for us."

Minnesota is led by forward Willie Burton and guard Melvin Newbern. Both average about 16.5 points per game, and trigger the Gopher offense.

The Hawkeyes will try to get a big game from last week's Big Ten Player of the Week, Les Jepsen. The senior center is averaging 14.5 points per game and 10.5 rebounds.

"We need to get the ball into Les," sophomore forward Wade Lookingbill said. "He has been so tough inside that we have to work to get him the ball."

Haskins and the Gophers are expecting just that.

"Jepsen is playing as well as anyone in the conference," Haskins said. "They're getting great play from a lot of people. Lookingbill has grabbed some big rebounds. (Jepsen and senior Matt Bullard) also concern us a great deal."

The game is the beginning of a tough five days for the Hawkeyes. Saturday, Iowa travels to No. 13 Purdue, for a game with the league-leading Boilermakers before hosting No. 10 Illinois Monday.

"This is going to be a grueling week," Jepsen said. "We're going to have to play our best basketball."

Intramurals running again after layoff

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Intramural basketball returned to action this week, with games taking place in several divisions.

In the men's independent division, 27 teams won including UCS, Wonder Bread, Sixers, Iowa Greeks, Gravity Slaves, Doomed and Broiled Muppets.

The eight winners in the men's residence hall division were All Over It, Dark Horse, Slater 7, Fight 23 Revenge, "V", S. Intellectuals, Taste Buds and Bad Boys.

In the men's social division, nine teams came out victorious, including Sigma Alpha Epsilon's 89-8 thrashing of Alpha Epsilon Pi and Sigma Phi Epsilon's 66-17 destruction of Alpha Kappa Lambda.

Nine teams also won in the men's recreation division, including Bone Heads, Men of Tink and Free James Brown.

Ten teams notched their first wins in the women's league. Shreddah's escaped Going Nowhere 26-25 and Team From Hell blewout Kappa Alpha Theta 56-4.

In men's 3-on-3 hoops, 22 teams won while six teams won in the women's 3-on-3.

Meanwhile, signups will begin on February 5 for 3-point shooting and free throws, while the 5th also marks the entry deadline for wrestling. Signups take place in E216 of the Field House.

In other news, the UI fencing club swept the top three spots in the mixed foil and mixed epee competitions last Saturday, according to club vice-president Bob Rosenberg. In mixed foils, Rosenberg took first, followed by Ron Herman and Fred Metzger.

In the mixed epee, Herman came in first while Stefanie Rosenberg came in second and Carla Zeilaman claimed third. In foil competition, scoring is determined by which fencer can hit the other fencer's torso while in epee, the entire body is the target area.

"We are very active and growing rapidly," Rosenberg said. New members are welcome for $10 per semester and no experience is necessary. For more information, call Rosenberg at 351-1325 or club president Ken Baker at 351-2657.

Finally, the Iowa gymnastics club took first place at the Spartan Open in San Jose, California during the first week in January. Iowa's team score of 272.40 was well above second place San Jose State (256.45) and third place Cal-Berkeley (255.30).

First place finishers for the Hawks were Jeff Dow, with a personal best score of 9.60 on the still rings and Keith Cousino, who tied for first on the parallel bars with a score of 9.5.

Grid independents ponder new league

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Officials with nine football independents in the East and Southeast conducted a private conference call Wednesday to discuss forming an all-sports conference, University of Miami athletic director Sam Jankovich said.

Schools represented besides Miami were Boston College, Pittsburgh, Rutgers, South Carolina, Syracuse, Temple, Virginia Tech and West Virginia, Jankovich said.

Florida State has also expressed interest in the conference, but Athletic Director Bob Goins was unable to participate in the conference call, Jankovich said.

The talks were the latest in a series in recent years. When asked if the likelihood of a new conference was changed by the meeting, Jankovich said, "Not any different, really."

"We were discussing the various ways to take it and all the important issues we must address," he said. "We will continue to pursue and discuss the feasibility."

No further talks were scheduled. When asked about obstacles to such a conference, Jankovich said, "We all come from different places. We have different criteria."

"Some schools are strong in football, some have great associations with basketball conferences. Then there's travel and television to consider."

Of the nine schools, all but Miami are already in a basketball conference. Syracuse, Boston College and Pittsburgh are in the prestigious Big East.

"I think at this time it'd really be premature to really get into the discussions," South Carolina athletic director King Dixon said.

"We're really still talking ... in general about the possibility of an affiliation on the East Coast and to see generally what is the future in remaining as an independent or becoming part of a football conference or an all-sports conference."

Harris puts decision on back burner

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Major Harris won't decide whether to turn pro until next month, but the quarterback has decided to skip West Virginia off-season workouts.

The Mountaineers' weightlifting and running are optional, but most players participate. Harris said he's not taking part so he doesn't give anyone the impression he definitely will return for his senior season.

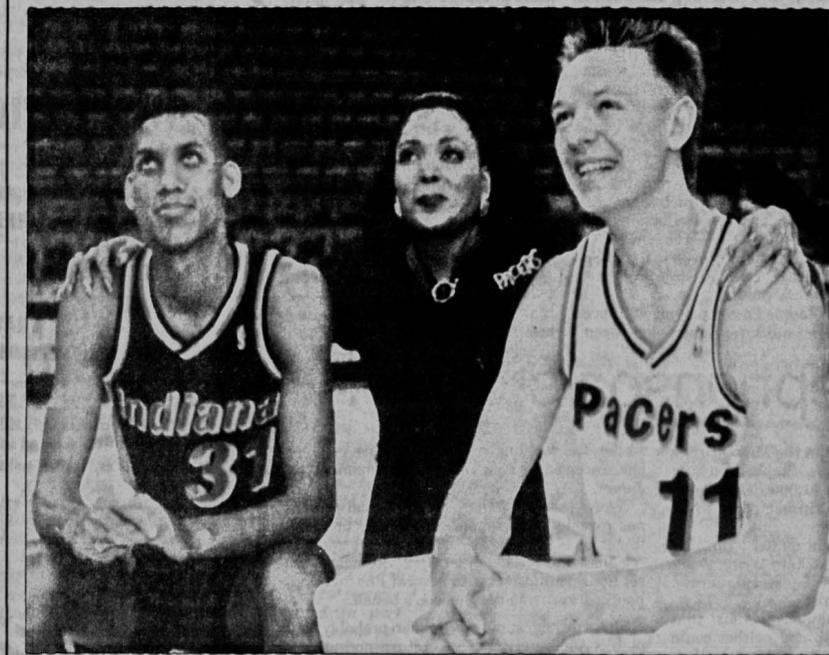

Harris, of Pittsburgh, also said he doesn't want backup quarterback Greg Jones to decide on his future yet. Jones, a fourth-year junior, will stay at West Virginia for his senior season if Harris turns pro. If Harris returns, Jones said he will apply for the NFL draft.

Some scouts think the 6-foot-1, 205-pound Harris would make a mistake by passing up his final year of college, since he is smaller than most NFL quarterbacks and probably wouldn't be drafted on an early round.

"I wouldn't care if I went in the eighth round, ninth round or free agent," Harris told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. "They're just numbers and they don't really matter to me."

Harris, the first college quarterback to pass for 5,000 yards and rush for 2,000 yards, said he hasn't discussed his situation with West Virginia coach Don Nehlen.

Harris, who was third in the Heisman Trophy balloting last season, said he doesn't have an agent. If he did, he would be in violation of NCAA rules and would be ineligible this fall.

Dressed for success

Indiana's Reggie Miller, left, and Dettlef Schrempf model new team uniforms designed by Olympic track star Florence Griffith-Joyner, center, as they were unveiled Wednesday at Market Square Arena in Indianapolis. The Pacers plan to begin wearing the new-look uniforms next season.

Players respond slowly to MLB offer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Baseball officials spent five hours Wednesday trying to convince three dozen players that the game's financial structure needs to be overhauled. They were met with skepticism but not rejection. "It was interesting," said Frank Viola of the New York Mets, the 1988 American League Cy Young Award winner. "Not much happened, though."

After the bargaining session, union head Donald Fehr repeated that he would tell players not to work out on their own if clubs locked them out from spring training camps, scheduled to open Feb. 15.

Sports

San Francisco 49ers physical development coach Jerry Attaway helps reserve defensive end Pete Kugler with neck-stretching exercises Wednesday during a practice session in New Orleans.

All-Pro safety will get Lotts of notice

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — When Ronnie Lott yells, the 49ers listen. When Lott plays, other safeties watch.

But mostly, when Lott hits, receivers grimace.

"He should put together a highlight film of his greatest hits so people realize all the awesome hits he's put on people," said Denver safety Dennis Smith, Lott's close friend, who calls him "the Michael Jordan of defensive backs."

A year ago, headlines during Super Bowl week referred to him as the "aging Lott." This season, there's been a lot of talk about the "old man," who turns 31 in May.

But despite missing five games with a right ankle sprain, Lott has shown more than ever in the postseason that he remains the standard against which other safeties — and team leaders — must be measured.

His recent play even inspired San Francisco coach George Seifert to invent a word.

"Ronnie Lott is playing with even more quickness than I've seen,"

Seifert said. "He seems to have had a 'fresh' is the way I might describe it — a fresh in his body."

There will be a lot of Lott fans on the Broncos sideline Sunday.

Lott, according to Seifert, seems more committed than ever this season. The prime motivating force has been the 49ers' chance to repeat as Super Bowl champions.

But what separates Lott from his peers is that he's never fully satisfied — not with his three Super Bowl rings, not with a 16-2 record, not with his reputation for hard hits. Even his memory of his greatest hit — a fullspeed bullseye on Atlanta's William Andrews on a screen pass in 1982 — carries that moral.

"I was playing cornerback and I had at least a 15-yard head start on him," Lott recalled Wednesday. "He didn't see me coming. I hit him and slid off of him, and he ran another 20 yards."

"I swear to God, it was the best hit I ever had on a person. It's a constant reminder that on your best hit you can still get beat."

Mugging may end Stephenson's career

PHOENIX (AP) — Jan Stephenson's golfing career may be in jeopardy after she sustained a double fracture of the left ring finger when she was mugged and robbed in Miami.

Stephenson, who has won 16 titles in her 15-year pro career including the U.S. Women's Open in 1983, told reporters after Tuesday night's incident that she likely will undergo surgery this week and may miss at least two months of the LPGA Tour.

Stephenson, 38, was en route from Florida to Phoenix on Wednesday and could not be immediately reached for comment. She owns a home in Paradise Valley, Ariz.

Elaine Scott, a spokeswoman for the LPGA headquarters in Daytona Beach, Fla., said Stephenson may issue a statement or make herself available for comment on Thursday.

Stephenson and her husband, Eddie Vossler, were guests of Phoenix Suns owner Jerry Colangelo at Tuesday night's NBA game against the Miami Heat.

As she got out of her car in the Miami Arena parking lot before the game, Stephenson said an unarmed man ripped a $1,000 Rolex watch off her arm, then tried to rip her purse away and take her wedding ring.

The purse strap got caught on her left finger and "he twisted my finger so hard trying to get the ring off that the bones just splintered," Stephenson told The Phoenix Gazette.

She said the incident happened so fast that her husband could not help and neither could arena security people "not 40 feet away when it happened."

The assailant fled, but was taken into custody by Miami police a short time later in the parking lot.

Police said the man — identified as Kevin Jefferson, 25, of Miami — was charged with strong-arm robbery and was being held at Dade County Jail.

However, Stephenson said she has yet to recover her watch, money taken from her wallet, the wedding ring or a sapphire pendant she received for winning a tournament in Japan.

X-rays taken by Miami Heat medical personnel revealed the double fracture in her ring finger.

Suns team physician Dr. Paul Steingard has set up consultations with several Phoenix-area hand surgeons on Stephenson's behalf.

She said she has been told it probably will require pins and screws to return normal use to the finger "and that's an important finger in my golf grip."

Stephenson, a native Australian, joined the LPGA in July 1974 and became the tour's ninth millionaire in 1985.

Colangelo said that after Stephenson had her fractured bones reset and taped, "she came back out and watched the second half of the game with her finger wrapped in ice. She's a great Suns fan."

Revised version of 'Chess' appears tonight at Hancher

The Daily Iowan

A brand new production of "Chess," the hit rock musical from London, will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and Friday, January 25 and 26, and at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday, January 27, in Hancher Auditorium.

"Chess" is a contemporary love story set against the background of an international chess competition between American and Soviet players. It is also a behind-the-scenes struggle between CIA and KGB agents. The play features lyrics by Tim Rice ("Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Evita") and music by Benny Anderson and Bjorn Ulvaeus of the Swedish pop/rock group ABBA.

One of the songs from the show, "I Know Him So Well," became a No. 1 hit in Great Britain and was later recorded by Whitney Houston on the album "Whitney." Another of the show's hits is "One Night in Bangkok," which became a top-five single worldwide.

The new production is directed by Des McAnuff, who won a 1985 Tony Award for his direction of "Big River." McAnuff was also nominated for a Pulitzer for direction of the 1988 Broadway musical "A Walk in the Woods."

The Broadway and national tour veteran cast includes John Herrera, a Tony Award nominee for his Broadway role in "Drood," and played Che in "Evita"; Stephen Bogardus, who appeared on Broadway in "Les Misérables" and "West Side Story"; and Carolee Carmello, who toured in "Big River" and "Les Misérables."

As in his collaborations with Andrew Lloyd-Webber, "Jesus Christ Superstar," "Evita" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," Rice first produced "Chess" as a recording.

The album, released in 1984, was so successful — outselling both the "Jesus Christ Superstar" and

With the recent dramatic changes in Eastern and Central Europe, "Chess" has become a period piece, a Cold War rock musical about the games that people — and nations — play.

While the surface events are a chess confrontation and a love triangle between a bratty American, a sensitive Russian defector, and a woman orphaned in the Hungarian uprising of 1956, they all are pawns in a high-stakes game of pre-Glasnost intrigue.

In the world of "Chess," super-power politics leave humanity, romance and international relations in a perpetual and dangerous stalemate.

The Providence Journal called "Chess" a musical "... that a thinking adult can see without embarrassment ... London has actually sent us a show with a solid, even wonderfully old-fashioned story that still has a bittersweet, rough-edged view of the world ... 'Chess' is exciting, dynamic theater."

Theater

"Evita" albums in Europe — that work began to bring "Chess" to the stage. "Chess" opened in London in 1986, where it was a major popular and critical hit. A controversial Broadway version was unveiled in 1988.

The successful national tour of "Chess" is produced by Tom Mallow and his American Theatre Productions. Mallow also produced several acclaimed musical productions that have appeared at Hancher in past years, including "Amadeus," "Big River" and "Nunsense." He will also produce "Into the Woods," which will come to Hancher during the spring.

"Chess" marks a new step for Mallow in that the show is a new version of the musical, rather than an adaptation from a Broadway hit.

Designed by Tony Award winner David Mitchell, the new "Chess" has a high-tech contemporary set, featuring Pani projectors, video cameras and a stage deck implanted with 64 light boxes.

The show will come to Iowa City directly from its premiere in Miami, so Iowa audiences will be the second in the country to have an opportunity to experience this version.

Tickets for "Chess" are $28, $26 and $22.50 (UI students receive a 20 percent discount) and are available from the Hancher Box Office.

The box office is open 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and 1-3 p.m. Sunday. Iowa residents can also call 1-800-HANCHER. Iowa City residents and persons outside Iowa should call (319) 335-1160.

These performances are supported in part by the National Endowment for the Arts. Events in Hancher's Broadway Series are supported by First National Bank of Iowa City.

Pink Floyd may keep Expo out of Venice

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Even as Venice enjoys a winter hibernation that allows the echoes of footsteps to resound in the nearly deserted squares, the specter of Pink Floyd refuses to go away.

A summer concert by the British rock group that drew more than 100,000 young people and left the city awash in garbage is a recurring nightmare.

It is being used as ammunition in a battle over a bid to make Venice the site of an international fair in the year 2000, and has led officials to bar carnival celebrations from famed St. Mark's Square.

Pink Floyd was allowed to perform on a floating stage in the Venice lagoon in July after the rock group agreed to reduce its decibel level to protect the colonnaded square and 9th century basilica.

But the trash left behind by the concertgoers and the sight of thousands of people sleeping in the streets proved too much for many Venetians.

St. Mark's, said fine arts commissioner Margherita Asso in banning the annual carnival from the massive square, "was attacked by vandals and there wasn't, and still isn't, sufficient police protection."

So the carnival will go on in other parts of the city judged less fragile. It will be inaugurated February 10 by a procession up the Grand Canal led by a 75-foot-long floating bottle of Italian bubbly.

Pre-Lent merrymaking is not the only talk of Venice. There is also the bid, put forward by the Veneto region, to make Venice and nearby cities the site of Expo 2000.

Backers include such powerful figures as Venetian-born Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis, who also supported the Pink Floyd concert. The Socialist official, the author of a guide to discos in Italy, had said Venice must be open to all forms of culture, including rock music.

The fair is seen as a way of breathing new life into this city of canals and marble palaces, whose year-round population has dwindled to 80,000 from 130,000 over the past 25 years. Exhibitions would feature science and culture.

With the proper controls, Expo 2000 would be "the right way to bring Venice into the new century," De Michelis said.

Those in favor insist the fair could attract new businesses and lead to the renovation of housing and neighborhoods that have decayed as young people have gone to the mainland in search of jobs.

They have left Venice to the summer tourists and to the lament of many locals, cheap souvenir shops and pizza parlors catering to day-trippers with backpacks. Such tourism has inspired calls for daily quotas on the number of visitors.

"I am one of those who believe the idea (of a fair) should be examined, not just written off," said Venice's cultural commissioner, Fulgenzio Livieri, sitting in his office looking out onto St. Mark's Square which is frequented by almost as many pigeons as people this time of the year.

He sees it as an opportunity to attract two industries "ideally suited" to the lagoon city — film and fashion.

But Livieri admits the "Pink Floyd effect" is still running strong.

Graffiti and posters declaring "No to Expo" have gone up in the distinctive narrow lanes near the Rialto bridge while someone has scrawled "De Michelis, repent" on the causeway linking Venice to Mestre on the mainland.

In December, a small group of Venetians took their protest to Paris, holding up signs outside the offices of the international committee that will select the host city. The other candidates are Hanover, West Germany, and Toronto, Canada.

The committee is expected to make its decision in June.

For a city so dependent on outsiders, even Venetians catering to tourists seem to have had their fill and hope Venice is kept out of the plans.

The newsweekly Panorama reported that one study predicts a fair would attract more than 100,000 people a day during its four-month run.

Metropolitan Museum loses loaned van Gogh to auction

NEW YORK (AP) — Director Philippe de Montebello says he's not surprised the Metropolitan Museum of Art is losing a valuable van Gogh that has been on loan there since 1984.

"Portrait of Dr. Gachet" was from the collection of Siegfried Kramarsky, a German-born New York banker who died in 1961. It will be offered at auction — for an estimated $40 million to $50 million — by a trust created under Kramarsky's will.

"The reduced tax advantages to collectors and the increased sale potential are a combination that is irresistible to collectors and fatal to museums," said de Montebello.

The auction at Christie's is May 15.

The portrait of Dr. Paul-Ferdinand Gachet was painted six weeks before van Gogh committed suicide in 1890.

Gachet — a practitioner of homeopathic medicine who was both van Gogh's physician and a friend to van Gogh and other impressionist painters of the time, and also an artist himself — is shown seated at a table, head in hand, his face bearing what van Gogh called "the brokenhearted expression of our time."

Van Gogh painted a second, slightly larger version of the portrait. It lacks the details of the Kramarsky painting, and its colors are flatter. It hangs in the Musée d'Orsay in Paris.

Another van Gogh from the Kramarsky collection was auctioned in 1987 for $20.24 million. It too had been lent to the Metropolitan.

Van Gogh's "Irises" was sold for a record $53.9 million in 1987 by Sotheby's auction house. That sale, however, was made partly with money lent by Sotheby's; when the buyer failed to pay what was owed, the painting was moved to an undisclosed location, and it is rumored to be on the market once more.

Monkey goes ape over death rumor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's no truth to the rumors that Michael Jackson's chimpanzee Bubbles has died, Jackson's publicist announced, and "when Bubbles heard about his demise, he went bananas."

"Like Mark Twain, his death is grossly exaggerated, and he's alive and doing well," publicist Lee Solters said Tuesday.

A fire in Jackson's Santa Barbara menagerie last month destroyed a giraffe barn, but the animals were evacuated safely. Jackson's private zoo includes ostriches, llamas and boa constrictors.

Bowie sings old hits for last time

LONDON (AP) — Rock star David Bowie announced a six-month world tour and said it would be the last time he sang his smash hits on stage.

Publicists will advertise telephone numbers and ballots for fans to choose the tour's songs — from hits like "Young Americans," "Rebel Rebel," "Changes," "Suffragette City" and "Let's Dance."

"I won't be doing them ever again," Bowie told reporters Tuesday.

"There's no point continually doing songs and reflecting on a past."

The 42-year-old Bowie, whose real name is David Jones, will appear in Canada, Britain and Holland in March before going to the United States, Australia, Japan and the rest of Europe.

The British-born musician said he will be accompanied by a four-piece band in simple stage settings but added: "Knowing me, there will be a fair amount of theatricality about it."

It's eeze tu use nu Canadean

TORONTO (AP) — You spell it easy, he spells it eezi. You want quick results, he wants kwik rezults.

If you want to call the whole thing off, language buff and activist Ted Culp probably would tell you to wait becuz victori is inevitabel in this linggwistic endeavor.

Culp is the president and founder of the International Union for the Canadian Langwaje, which campaigns for reforming English into Canadian — he says Canadean — as an international language.

"Half the battle is already won because people know that reformation needs to be done," he said. "There's a universal recognition that there's a problem with the English language."

Culp declined to say exactly how many people belong to his admittedly small organization, but he insisted that he has members and contacts scattered around the world.

And, if you're wondering why a reformed English should be called "Canadean" — well, why not?

"All the other languages of the world are linked to a nation," Culp said. "When they're linked to a nation, it removes any sense of fear. The world needs an international language, but it needs one that's rational."

Talking over coffee at a neighborhood fast-food restaurant, Culp detailed why he thinks the soft "c" in English should be changed to "s" as in "sentense," why Czechoslovakia should have been changed long ago to Checkoslovakia, why "Fast as Flite" on trucking slogans reads just fine to him and why the large American toy-store chain should change its name to "Tois Ar We."

He puts out regular nuzepapers and has started a small nuzepaper, The Times Ou Toronto, that has made it through three four-page issues.

"We urj all ovr reeders tu abandon the obsolete, anoying english langwaje, and tu adopt the emergjng, rasional canadean langwaje," an editorial calling for linggwistic chanj said. "It iz so eezy...."

Culp, a gray-haired secondary schoolteacher, said he always was interested in language and created his Canadian in 1987, the centenary of the artificial language Esperanto that had been touted as the way to an international communication.

"There's no sense creating a language that no one speaks," he said of Esperanto and its late founder, the Polish philologist Ludwig Zamenhof. "That's the fatal weakness from which it will never recover... it was just the wrong strategy."

"Canadean," on the other hand, would take advantage of the prominence of English as an international language but make it easier for foreigners learning English who often are confused by its spelling and grammar.

"Using the world's No. 1 language, you can read and understand this," he said. "In 'Canadean' you must say what's there."

Culp said the rules for Canadean appeal to those who have problems spelling as well as those with scientifically educated minds who prefer their systems to be rational. The increasing use of computers and computer languages can only help the move to develop a more rational language, he said.

Among the rules for "Canadean" are an alphabet with 25 letters, eliminating "q" from the current Latin-English alphabet; the addition of a verb "tu must" as in "yu must tu work," and the elimination of all silent and extra letters.

UI wins acting, costume competition

The Daily Iowan

Graduate students in the UI Department of Theatre Arts won the acting and costume design competitions at the regional American College Theatre Festival (ACTF), January 17-21 in St. Louis.

As winners in Region V of ACTF, actor Cheryl Graeff and costume designer Kaoime Malloy will represent the UI in competition at the national festival, held in April at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

Graeff was one of two regional winners in the Irene Ryan Acting Competition, where she was selected from a field of 180 actors representing colleges and universities in the Midwest. Her scene partner was UI theatre arts student Rick Kurschner.

For Graeff, a master of fine arts acting student from Hershey, Pa., the April festival will be her second trip to the ACTF acting finals. She was an Irene Ryan finalist as an undergraduate student at West Chester University in New York.

Malloy won first place in the regional ACTF costume design competition for the costumes that were seen in "Oh What a Lovely War," which opened the current University Theatres season.

Her work was seen last season in the University Theatres production of "Galileo," and she is designing the costumes for the upcoming UI production of "Mr. Fugue," which will be performed February 28 through March 11. Malloy is originally from Phoenix, Ariz.

Several other UI Department of Theatre Arts students did well in the regional ACTF competition.

Designer Lani Apperson, a graduate student from East Moline, Ill., finished second to Malloy in the costume competition for her costumes for the University Theatres production of Chekhov's "Three Sisters" that will run February 14-25. Other UI productions featuring Apperson's costumes were "Owners" during the Caryl Churchill summer, "On the Verge" last spring and "Sunday in the Park with George" in the fall of 1988.

Frank Ludwig took second place in the scene design competition for his "Oh What a Lovely War" sets. Ludwig, a graduate student from Algona, also designed the sets for "On the Verge" last season.

In the Irene Ryan competition, Michael Kachingwe, a graduate student from Zimbabwe who attended high school in Iowa City, was one of the 36 semi-finalists, and Greg Jackson of Council Bluffs was one of the 18 finalists. Both actors have appeared in many UI productions, and Kachingwe is the director of the upcoming production of "Born in the USA," which will be presented February 22-25 as part of the UI African/American Theatre Festival.

The UI Department of Theatre Arts boasts an unparalleled record of success in the ACTF competition, including previous national winners in acting, design and playwriting competitions and the showcasing of four UI productions at the Kennedy Center.
