Heavy snowfall turns Iowa City area into a winter wonderland

Deborah Grote
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City students experienced the Iowa blizzard and subzero temperatures during the winter by walking to the Pentacrest on Thursday. Many students were stranded on the way back to their dorms because there was too much snow to safely get off campus.

"It's really neat. I'm glad that I don't have to walk in snow," said Steve Whalen, UI student.

But most students were not as lucky as Whalen. Students who were new to Iowa City were stranded in the snow for hours, waiting to be rescued.

The blizzard also stranded many students who were trying to get off campus for the weekend. Some students were forced to spend the weekend in their dorms, while others were forced to stay in Iowa City for the week.

University Town uses new wholesaler to avoid past problems

Julie Clevenger The Daily Iowan

With 1990 spring break just around the corner, UI students are filling orders and planning events in preparation for the annual tradition.

But last year, many students who planned an overseas trip were disappointed when their travel plans were derailed when their airline tickets were not delivered on time.

Des Moines Register Secretary Angie Brunsman says the state legislature has passed a law that will provide travelers with protection against the very problems that derailed the students' plans last year.

Our main problem last year was that we didn't have any backup tickets, said Susan Gust, coordinator of the UI Study Abroad Program.

We had no choice but to cancel the trip, she said.

To avoid similar problems this year, Gust said, the UI Study Abroad Program is in the process of acquiring a new wholesaler.

We are working with a new wholesaler to avoid any problems last year. They will be able to deliver the tickets in a timely manner, said Gust.

Sen. Harkin pushes for drug plan

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President George Bush announced a $5 billion drug war package unveiled Thursday that is designed to wring the necessary support. in both houses of Congress for heavy sanctions they need to win this war. I'm ready to work with my colleagues to push a rural drug plan through Congress," he said.

Earlier in the day, Bush announced a plan to increase the federal budget to $6 billion next year, for increase of $1 billion per year.

Teale said in a committee call with reporters Thursday that he hopes to add a stratagem to the plan which includes rural America.

But Bush said he was "discered" to announce that the president's National Drug Clearing House is doing its job. He said that some members of Congress will disagree in the military, but the "reality is that the primary purpose of defense in this country is to enable our children, as is the step in the right direction."

Bush also said he was "disvered glad to announce the president's Second National Drug Clearing House, which has been in operation for the last 10 years, and that it has been a great success."

Violent storm wreaks havoc in Europe

LONDON (AP) — A fierce storm with torrential rains drove by winds of up to 110 mph caused a wall of destruction across southern England and the Channel Islands, and spread through much of western Europe.

A death toll was down at the Palace weather point in France, but heavy rains and strong winds were expected to continue in at least three countries.

A rescue mission was down at the Fal confident area in France, but the region was still being battered by gale-force winds and heavy rains that were expected to last into the night.

The German government was warning that a severe flooding was on the way, and authorities in the northern part of the country were telling residents to prepare for the possibility of severe flooding.

The British government was warning that a severe flooding was expected in the eastern part of the country, and authorities in the region were telling residents to prepare for the possibility of severe flooding.

Workers strike in Greece for wages, tax reforms

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — More than 1 million workers across the country staged a three-hour strike Thursday to protest the government's plans to raise taxes and cut wages, the largest in years.

The strike affected all sectors of the economy, from public sector workers to private sector employees. It was the most significant protest since the government took power in 1981.

Transport services, including national carrier Olympic Airways, were halted by the strike, which began at midnight and lasted until midnight.

The strike was called by the General Confederation of Greek Workers to protest the government's economic policy, which includes plans to cut social benefits and raise taxes on essential goods.

The government has promised to hand over to Parliament a new package of reforms, including cuts in public spending and tax increases.

A talk is due to have an audience deficit of 1.8 billion this year, the government has said, and further wage cuts and tax increases are on the agenda.

President Andreas Kyriazis, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said the strike was the result of an effort to stop the government from implementing its economic policies.

"We have to be realistic about the situation," Kyriazis said. "We cannot accept the current situation and the government must act to stop the strike."

The Dream Super Bowl

San Francisco vs. Pittsburgh

What if the '79 Steelers played the '89 49ers?

By Randy Groeseman

San Francisco is the No. 1 seed in the NFC, and Pittsburgh in the AFC. The 49ers are the defending Super Bowl champions, and the Steelers hold the record for most Super Bowl championships with six. If the two teams were to play against each other, it would be a matchup of offensive and defensive talent, with the 49ers having the edge in both departments.

The 49ers would likely have the edge in the passing game, with Joe Montana at quarterback. Montana is one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time, and he would have the advantage in experience and talent at the skill positions. The 49ers' offense would be well-coordinated, with a running game that would complement the passing attack. The Steelers' defense, while still formidable, might struggle to contain the 49ers' offensive weapons.

On the other hand, the Steelers defense would have the upper hand in a potential matchup. Their defense is known for its speed, athleticism, and physicality. The 49ers would face a stiff challenge in trying to move the ball against the Steelers' front seven, which is anchored by Hall of Famers like Jack Lambert, Joe Greene, and Mike Webster.

In conclusion, a game between the '79 Steelers and the '89 49ers would be an epic clash of offensive and defensive virtuosity. The outcome would likely depend on which team's offense could outscore the other's defense, with the passing game being the deciding factor. The 49ers, with their legendary quarterback and a well-rounded offensive attack, would have the edge in this hypothetical matchup.
Prudential sets benefits policy for terminally ill

The Associated Press

The nation's top life insurer plans to provide insurance coverage for subscribers to its life insurance policies who have 10 months to live.

"It's going to encourage other companies to do it," said Robert Yeutter, senior vice president of the Metropolis, Ill.-based company's marketing division.

Yeutter said the new policy, effective March 1, is designed to cover people who have been told by a doctor that the insured has 10 months or less to live and will provide benefits equal to the face amount of the policy. People who are critically ill can also elect to receive a doctor's certification that they qualify for the special benefits.

Current policyholders can choose the "benefits policy option" on new life insurance contracts or on a continue-forward basis on existing contracts, Yeutter said.

The National Association of Insurance Commissioners last month approved a broad definition of "terminally ill." It means a person is expected to die within 12 months and must have a doctor's certification of the terminal nature of the condition.

"It's going to encourage other companies to do it," said Yeutter. "It's going to encourage other companies to do it."
ROTHENBERG PAROLE

No leash too short

The words "miscreants of justice" took on new meaning Wednesday when Charles Rothenberg, a man who set his son on fire, was arrested Monday for setting fire to his 10-year-old son in a California state prison.

Rothenberg, whose lawyers described him as "truthful and reasonable," was in the custody of the California Department of Corrections when he said he burned his son in the eyes. The boy, who had been in a hospital since Thursday, died on Monday.

Rothenberg, who was arrested in 1983, has a long history of violent behavior. He was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in 1976 for the death of his wife, and in 1980 for the murder of his son, also a student.

Rothenberg was released from prison in 1983 on parole, but he was rearrested in 1986 for violation of parole terms. He was sent to a state prison and released again in 1989.

The new parole violation is the latest in a series of incidents that have marked Rothenberg's life. He has been imprisoned for murder, manslaughter and assault.

Rothenberg's attorneys say he has had a series of mental breakdowns and is suffering from depression.

"He has been in and out of mental hospitals," said one of his attorneys. "He is on medication, but it is not enough to keep him stable.

"He is in a very fragile state," the attorney said. "He is not a danger to society."
U.S. intervention hampers British efforts at forced repatriation of Vietnamese refugees

GENEVA (AP) — An international meeting has ended with no agreement on thousands of Vietnamese refugees whose camps lie between the United States and Britain over whether they should be repatriated to their homeland.

The Vietnamese government, however, stressed that both sides had made progress in their discussions.

Britain, which has been involved in mediation efforts, said it hoped for a breakthrough in the negotiations.

The meeting, attended by representatives from the United States, Britain, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and the Vietnamese government, lasted for three days.

Spokesmen said the talks focused on legal and administrative issues, as well as on the practical aspects of repatriation.

The Vietnamese government has expressed its readiness to repatriate the Vietnamese refugees, while the United States has emphasized the need for protection of human rights.

The meeting is seen as a crucial step in resolving the issue of the Vietnamese refugees, who have been stranded in camps since the end of the Vietnam War.

The Vietnamese government has been calling for the repatriation of its citizens, while the United States has been advocating for the protection of human rights.

The talks have been ongoing for several months, with both sides holding firm on their positions.

The United States has stated that it will not repatriate the Vietnamese refugees without guarantees of safe passage and protection of human rights.

The Vietnamese government, on the other hand, has expressed its willingness to repatriate its citizens, but has emphasized the need for the United States to ensure the protection of human rights in Vietnam.

The meeting is expected to continue for several more days, with both sides scheduled to present their final offers before the end of the week.

The outcome of the meeting will be closely watched by both the United States and the United Nations, as well as by the international community.

Drug cartel sees 'last' hostage

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A synthesis compound has shown promise in laboratory experiments to prevent reproduction of the AIDS virus in a way that chemotherapy does not.

The compound, called AZT (azidothymidine), is a form of nucleoside analogs that act by inhibiting viral enzymes and thus preventing the virus from reproducing.

AZT is a synthetic compound that was originally developed in the late 1960s as an anti-viral agent for the treatment of HIV infections.

The compound has been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for use in patients with HIV infection who have progressed to AIDS.

In addition to treating HIV infection, AZT has also been found to be effective in preventing the transmission of HIV among people who are infected with the virus.

The compound has also been used to treat certain types of cancer, such as lymphoma and leukemia.

A new study published in the journal Nature has shown that AZT has potential to be used as a prophylactic agent against HIV infection.

AZT works by blocking the action of the enzyme reverse transcriptase, which is necessary for the replication of the HIV virus.

The compound has been shown to reduce the amount of HIV in the body and to slow down the progression of the disease.

AZT has been approved for use in the United States as a prophylactic agent against HIV infection in people who are at high risk of acquiring the virus.

In conclusion, AZT has shown promise in laboratory experiments to prevent reproduction of the AIDS virus in a way that chemotherapy does not.

However, more research is needed to determine the effectiveness of AZT in clinical trials.

Open semifinal to feature rematch between Lendl, Noah

MELBOURNE, Australia — There was a feeling of a second wind for fans from around the world after the Australian Open ended yesterday. The Australian Open has already been held twice in Melbourne, and according to many, it was the biggest event since 1989. The tournament has reached a new level of excitement this year, with several of the top players competing for the title.

It was a dramatic day of play, with many upsets and thrilling matches. The day began with a strong showing from the defending champion, Rafa Nadal, who defeated a tough opponent in the first round. Nadal went on to win his second consecutive Grand Slam title, cementing his place as one of the greatest players of all time.

The day was not without its share of drama, however. Several defections took place, leaving many wondering what the future holds for the sport. The withdrawal of several top players has raised questions about the future of the game, and many are wondering if the sport will continue to grow.

Despite the challenges, the Australian Open remains one of the most prestigious tournaments in the world. With so many top players competing, it is sure to be a memorable event for years to come.

Men's tennis team 'fired up' for upcoming season

Jim Kearney

The Daily Iowan

Although he considers this a rebuilding season, Iowa men's tennis coach Dave Houghton has high expectations for the season ahead.

"The Hawkeyes open the season this weekend at the Spartan Invitational in East Lansing, which will last through Monday," Houghton said.

And after taking his top four singles players from a year ago, Houghton realizes that this year's team will have to rise to the level of expectation.

"The Big Ten is a really good conference this year and many of our players have to have big years in order to become competitive," Houghton said.

The Hawkeye senior class is comprised of both Big Ten and NCAA tournament winners, and they realize that there are things we've worked so hard for and that we can't let down.

Tennis

The Hawkeyes will face a strong challenge in the form of their opening match against the University of Michigan. The Wolverines are expected to pose a tough challenge, with several top players returning from last year's squad.

In a pre-game interview, Houghton stressed the importance of a strong start and the need for the team to come together quickly.

"This weekend's tournament is a chance for us to get off on the right foot," Houghton said.

NFL's drug-testing accuracy questioned

WARRINGTON, Pa. — If Washington Redskins coach Frank Kush and his players take the field against the Dallas Cowboys tonight, they will not know for certain if their teammate has tested positive for steroids.

The reason: Kush and his players are not the only ones in the league who have been subjected to drug tests. In fact, the NFL has conducted over 100,000 tests since the league began testing for steroids in 1988.

The tests are conducted by a team of independent testers who are hired by the league and are not affiliated with any team. The tests are usually performed on players before the start of each game and are performed by independent testers who are not affiliated with any team.

The tests are performed using a variety of methods, including urine and blood tests. The tests are designed to detect the use of steroids and other performance-enhancing substances.

While the league claims to have a high degree of accuracy in its drug-testing program, many players and coaches remain skeptical of the results.

"We don't know what they are really looking for," said Kush, who has been a strong advocate of drug-testing for many years. "The tests are supposed to be anonymous, but it seems like everyone knows who is tested and who isn't."

"The victory made the Michigan State fans watch. This was a good revenge victory over the Spartans (15-3, 4-1) in that regard, he's made a tremendously in this team, because it gives them a threat and what he can do with what he has," Knight said.

"I want to thank Bob Knight," Ellis refused a blood-alcohol test shortly before the Jan. 12 accident were charged with being drunk at the wheel. Ellis, who faces a minimum sentence of one year in jail if he slurred, his eyes watering and he smelled of alcohol.

LONDON (AP) — Ava Gardner, the golden-haired diva who made Hollywood history after her marriage to Frank Sinatra, has died of a heart attack in London at age 67, it was announced Thursday.

Gardner, renowned for her sultry beauty, was the subject of considerable public adoration during her lifetime and posthumously for her looks and her glamorous lifestyle.

She was born in Ohio in 1922 and began her acting career in the early 1940s. Gardner appeared in numerous films throughout her career, including several of the most iconic films of the 1950s and 1960s.

She was a Pulitzer Prize-winning actress, and her work was recognized with several Academy Awards and Golden Globe Awards.

Gardner's death was confirmed by her publicist, who said she had suffered a heart attack.

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A literary forum at the University of Massachusetts will be held this weekend, but the event will not be worth the trip.

The forum, which is being held in conjunction with the 150th anniversary of the university, will feature a discussion of the works of the late author John Barleycorn.

Barleycorn, who was known for his raucous lifestyle and his love of women, is considered one of the greatest writers of the 20th century.

Despite the advances in medical care, the author's legacy lives on through his work, and his fans are eagerly awaiting the forum.

Bradsy breaks on network TV — again

NEW YORK (AP) — The Brady family of television's popularity is returning one again to a weekly series.

Starting February 14, "The Bradys" will be broadcast in a prime slot on CBS, replacing "The Brady Bunch," which was dropped by the network last year.

The new series will focus on the lives of the Bradys as they navigate the ups and downs of family life. The show will feature the original cast members, as well as new characters.

The Bradys first appeared in 1972 on ABC, and the series ran for seven seasons. It was a popular series, and it helped launch the careers of several actors.

The Bradys were a mid-century American family, and their story was a reflection of the times. The series explored the issues of family, love, and relationships, and it was a hit among audiences.

The show was revived in 1981, and it continued to be a hit, running for a total of eight seasons.

The new "The Bradys" series will premiere on CBS on February 14, and it will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p.m. EST, the network announced.

The star's animal will burst the "new "Meat Movie/Cram Comics" series from the time this old CBS series that aired on the last Friday
