Reagan ordered to provide diary entries for Poindexter trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday ordered former President Ronald Reagan to provide excerpts of his personal diaries to John Poindexter for the former national security adviser's upcoming Iran-Contra trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene said a 1985 entry includes a "somewhat ambiguous comment" indicating that Reagan knew of Poindexter's work for the Nicaraguan Contras.

Greene said Reagan must surrender the material by Monday, a move that could trigger a claim of executive privilege by the former president and might delay the February 20 starting date of the Poindexter trial.

Reagan submitted more than 100 diary entries to the judge last Thursday. Greene said entries covering more than 29 different dates in 1985 and 1986 contain "information of significance."

Theodore Olson, one of Reagan's lawyers, declined to comment.

If Reagan balks at turning over the material, Greene said he would provide the former president and the Justice Department with a secret document Poindexter submitted to the court outlining why he needs the diaries.

After court filings by all sides, including Iran-Contra prosecutors, the court will "make a final decision with respect to enforcement of the subpoena" for the diaries, Greene said.

Reagan was ordered to give Poindexter a diary entry relating to a "successful" trip Poindexter took in December 1985 to Central America.

"The entry includes a somewhat ambiguous comment arguably indicating that the former president knew" of Poindexter's "activities on behalf of the Contras," Greene said.

The judge said Poindexter is entitled to diary entries in which Reagan describes an effort to persuade the government of Honduras to release a seized arms shipment that had been destined for the Contras.

Greene also said Poindexter must receive diary entries focusing on U.S. military-type assistance to an unidentified Central American country that may have been used in support of the Contras.

'No evidence whatsoever'

Sandberg autopsy fails to uphold murder suspicions

By Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

An autopsy completed Monday raised Iowa City Police Department suspicions that Christine Sandberg's death was the result of foul play.

Sandberg's body was found Sunday night outside her Iowa City home, No. 40 Showers Addition, by a male friend after he tried several times to telephone her and received no answer.

"The autopsy gave no evidence whatsoever that would indicate foul play," Iowa City Police Chief J. Winkelhake said Tuesday.

Winkelhake said finding the body buried in the snow could be an indication of foul play.

But in this case, he said, police officers interviewed 50 people in connection with the death. After compiling that information with autopsy reports, Winkelhake said he and Johnson County Medical Examiner T.T. Bozek feel comfortable saying Sandberg was not murdered.

Although police have pieced together a rough idea of what happened to Sandberg, they were not prepared to comment on the circumstances of her death Tuesday, Winkelhake said.

Bozek has been unable to determine the exact cause of death based on the autopsy test results, Winkelhake said.

The remaining toxicology test results, which will be completed within a week, are expected to reveal the cause of death.

If the toxicology results confirm that Sandberg was not murdered, the investigation will cease to be conducted as a homicide, Winkelhake said.

Sandberg, 34, lived alone and was employed as a nurse's aide at the Veteran's Administration Hospital.

Gorbachev may relinquish Party leadership: CNN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials said they could not confirm a broadcast report Tuesday that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was considering relinquishing his post as head of the Soviet Communist Party.

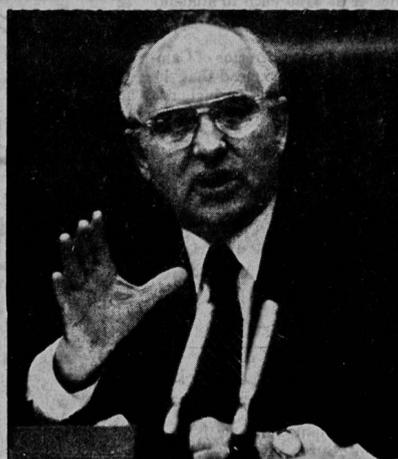

"All I can tell you ... is that it's a rumor, and therefore it's not something that I think that we should respond to or react to," Secretary of State James Baker told reporters after the report was aired by Cable News Network.

Baker spoke as an aide announced a rescheduling of talks in Moscow with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and said the one-day delay was to avoid interfering with a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee. Baker will be in Moscow February 8-9, said spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

"We're following the story, as I know you are, and we'll have a comment if we ever determine it's something more than just a rumor," Baker said of the CNN account.

CNN, quoting a "well-informed and usually reliable" party source, said from Moscow that the re-emergence of Gorbachev on television on Tuesday did not rule out a dramatic resignation when the policy-setting Central Committee meets next Monday and Tuesday.

Before the TV appearance on Tuesday, Gorbachev was last seen in public January 20 explaining why Soviet troops had been sent to the Azerbaijan republic.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev might give up his post as head of the Soviet Communist Party and retain only his post as president.

According to the unnamed source, Gorbachev had resisted sending troops into Baku, the capital of the republic, and was suffering severe depression over the action, CNN said.

White House chief of Staff John Sununu told reporters the administration has been "trying for the last few hours to try and get some additional assessments, but I don't have anything at all."

"We would like to understand the details of what's involved and what's implied if such a change has taken place," he said. "And frankly at the time we're

The Daily Iowan

The Sunday morning fire in Jessup Hall was caused by an overheated extension cord which ignited a moveable room divider, Iowa City Fire Marshal Larry Kinney said Tuesday.

The fire was ignited slowly, then spread through the Registrar's Office at approximately 4 a.m. Sunday morning, damaging office furniture, destroying three computer terminals and impairing several others. Despite damage to the computers, UI Registrar Jerald Dallam stressed that "all permanent records are undamaged."

He said transcripts and other records have been stored on microfilm, computer disks and microfiche since the mid-1960s, and that these records are housed in a separate part of Jessup Hall and were undamaged by the fire. The hard-copy, pre-1965 records were also unscathed, he said.

Also, the Registrar's services will continue as usual from makeshift offices in Calvin Hall and the Union until the ground-floor office in Jessup Hall can be repaired.

The transcript request and verification services will be housed in Calvin Hall, Room 17. The office's other services, including graduation analysis, administrative offices, publications and academic records will be moved to the Union, Room 354.

Film documents life, death of Romero

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

War-torn El Salvador is the setting of a film portraying the life of assassinated Archbishop Caesar Romero, which will make its local debut Friday.

Politics, history and human rights are constant themes of the fact-based dramatization which stars Raul Julia ("Kiss of the Spider Woman") as Romero.

"Romero is important because he speaks out as a high-ranking member of the hierarchy in the church in a way few others have done before," said the Rev. L. Michael Colonnese, who worked with Romero in El Salvador.

The film will be shown at various Iowa City locations February 2-5 and is sponsored by Quad City Interfaith in cooperation with the Diocese of Davenport Social Action Department.

Archbishop Caesar Romero was bishop of El Salvador from 1977 to March 24, 1980, when he was assassinated while giving communion.

The conservative Romero became an advocate of the poor after being elevated to the position of Archbishop and learning of the merciless murder of his outspoken friend, the Rev. Rutilio Grande.

Romero's transformation brought his life into danger but did not prevent him from preaching

Med students plagued by abuse, but not at UI

By Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

While one recently published study indicates medical students commonly endure abuse as part of their educational curriculum, abusive teaching tactics are the exception, not the rule, at the UI, one medical student said Tuesday.

A separate study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association shows that because of verbal, emotional, physical and sexual abuse, many students said they would have chosen another profession if they had known about the abusive form of academic-related stress earlier.

Brad Bowmann, of the University of Colorado

Health Sciences Center, said that the former study — conducted by Henry Silver of the University of Colorado School of Medicine — revealed 46 percent of all medical students questioned at an unidentified medical school said they had been abused at one time.

Eighty percent of the fourth-year students at the school indicated they too had been abused at one time or another, Bowmann said.

"Physicians have suspected for some time that there was an ongoing incidence of abuse in the (medical school) programs," Bowmann told The Daily Iowan Tuesday. "For someone to actually go out and gather factual evidence that corroborated their suspicions makes this concern all the more real."

The report's investigators defined abuse based on responses from questionnaires circulated to students asking them how they perceived abusive mistreatment.

The most common complaints voiced by participants in the study indicated medical students were the recipients of verbal insults, harassment and denigration by teachers — and sometimes overtly physical attacks.

Of the 519 students who took part in Silver's study, 431 members of the medical school's four classes responded about the incidence, severity and significance of medical-student abuse.

More than two thirds (69.1 percent) of those

Bran new day

Quaker Oats funding studies to find health benefits of oat bran

The Associated Press

The Quaker Oats Co. said Tuesday it is partially funding two new studies it hopes will refute recently published research casting doubt on the supposed health benefits of oat bran.

Spokesman Ron Bottrell declined to describe the studies, which he said have been under way for more than a year.

A Harvard University study published in the January 19 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine disputed previous findings that oat bran can help lower cholesterol levels in the bloodstream when eaten daily as part of a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet.

A food industry source said a Syracuse University study scheduled for publication in a scientific journal next month does not support the Harvard research. But the source did not know if the study was funded by Quaker or where the study would be published.

A Syracuse University nutritionist identified by the source as the study's author did not immediately return calls from The Associated Press.

Chicago-based Quaker, which has about 70 percent of the oat-bran cereal market, has responded to the Harvard study with newspaper ads citing 10 other studies conducted over the past 27 years that indicated oat bran has special cholesterol-lowering properties.

Bottrell said five of those studies were partially funded by Quaker, with additional funding from health or government agencies.

He said Quaker has a long history of funding oat research.

"We are in the oats business and we consider it our business anything pertaining to oats," Bottrell said in a telephone interview.

"I think it's safe to say that if Quaker had not been providing research funding to universities for the past 25 years, the amount of information known about oats in general would be far less than it is."

Bottrell said that in a company survey of 50 people who eat oat bran as part of a low-fat diet, the "collective response" was that "they weren't going to be swayed" by the Harvard study.

Meanwhile an informal national survey of about a dozen grocery chains by Grocery Marketing magazine showed no drop in sales of oat-bran cereals since the Harvard study was published, said Ryan Mathews, the Detroit-based editor of the magazine, which is published in Chicago.

"Our feeling is that the oat-bran products most at risk are the peripheral products that have come on the market in the last couple of years," Mathews said in a telephone interview.

Peripheral products, he said, include oat-bran snack chips, pretzels and beer, which are among the hundreds of oat-bran products introduced in the past two years.

Mathews' story on the survey will be published in the February issue of Grocery Marketing.

Meeting set to discuss waste laws

Tonya Felt
The Daily Iowan

As deadlines for implementing new state solid waste management policies loom closer, information and communication is needed to find solutions to the problem, said Joe Bolckom, of the Johnson County Health Department.

Information about pending changes in the operation of the Iowa City landfill, solid waste collection and a variety of changes occurring to meet state mandates will be given at a February 7 meeting.

"We want to encourage cooperation and communication about working to solve solid waste problems," Bolckom said. "Hopefully we can come together to meet the mandates so that, for example, instead of four cities buying glass crushers, we can buy one and share the cost."

HF 753, the bill outlining the solid waste mandate, requires the reduction of the amount of waste deposited in landfills.

Specific requirements have individual implementation dates and some requirements must be met soon, Bolckom said.

"There will be some discussion (at the meeting) about how quickly we need to act, because some mandates must be met soon and it may take a while to bring six counties up to speed," Bolckom said.

The Iowa mandate outlined an hierarchy of waste management based on Environmental Protection Agency standards. It spells out statewide solid waste management standards, including landfill standards.

Invited participants include representatives from all municipalities in Johnson County, UI Hospitals and Clinics, the Veterans' Administration Hospital, the Iowa City Community School District, Johnson County Council of Governments, environmental groups, private waste haulers and UI officials.

Sovereign said the matter will be made public February 20, but declined comment on the issue until then.

Officers of YAF, a conservative student organization, could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

A Coralville man was charged with second-degree theft Monday after police allegedly found him locked inside a stolen truck, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Brian R. Lape, 26, 620 12th Ave. Apt. 3, told police he had borrowed the car from a friend in a bar, but that he didn't know the friend's name, according to court records.

Police forced open the truck because Lape needed medical attention, according to court records.

Lape did not have the keys to the truck when he was found inside of it, according to court records.

Lape was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $5,000 bond, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for February 9.

A Cedar Rapids man was charged with possession of a controlled substance Sunday after police found a marijuana pipe after it fell out of his underwear during a strip-down search, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Matthew J. Koch, 19, 1330 Burch Ave. N.W., was being booked on a felony charge when police found the pipe, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for February 14, according to court records.

The Iowa City Police Department cautions the public about a recent telephone scam.

During the scam, a caller advised a local resident that he was a sergeant with the Iowa State Patrol and that a friend of the resident's had been injured in an accident in the Davenport area. The friend supposedly needed $295 to be sent immediately to a Western Union office.

The local resident became suspicious and started asking many questions which made the caller angry, causing him to hang up.

Iowa City residents are requested to call the police department if they have received a call of this nature recently.

Local residents who have placed artificial decorations on graves at the Oakland Cemetery, 1000 Brown St., must remove them before Thursday, March 1, if they wish to preserve them for reuse.

Oakland Cemetery Director Jim Wonick said the annual cleanup at the

No artificial decorations are permitted at the cemetery during the growing season except during Memorial Day observation.

Cut flowers in plastic containers and plantings of annuals and perennials are permitted if cared for by the family.

Six UI students who have been studying Russian, Chinese and Japanese on Ford Foundation grants will move into classrooms next fall to teach those languages, officials announced Tuesday.

Language graduates to help high schools move into the 1990s

Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan
and the Associated Press

Six UI students who have been studying Russian, Chinese and Japanese on Ford Foundation grants will move into classrooms next fall to teach those languages, officials announced Tuesday.

These first graduates of the three-year Iowa Critical Languages Program, which UI President Hunter Rawlings called a model program for the country, will begin teaching this fall at Iowa high schools in West Des Moines, Des Moines, Urbandale, Cedar Rapids, Iowa City and Marshalltown.

Officials from these school districts and the Ford Foundation attended a press conference Thursday morning, where Rawlings announced the receipt of an additional grant from the Ford Foundation, worth $537,340, to help Iowa school districts pay the program's graduates' full salaries, fringe benefits and curriculum materials for the next three years.

With this latest allocation, the Ford Foundation has now awarded the UI over $1 million for its Critical Languages Program. A seed grant of $475,802 in 1987 launched the rigorous three-year program, which includes on-campus study, a year of study abroad and two summers of intensive language study.

Rawlings said the program offers the state an unprecedented opportunity to prepare for the international arena of the 21st century.

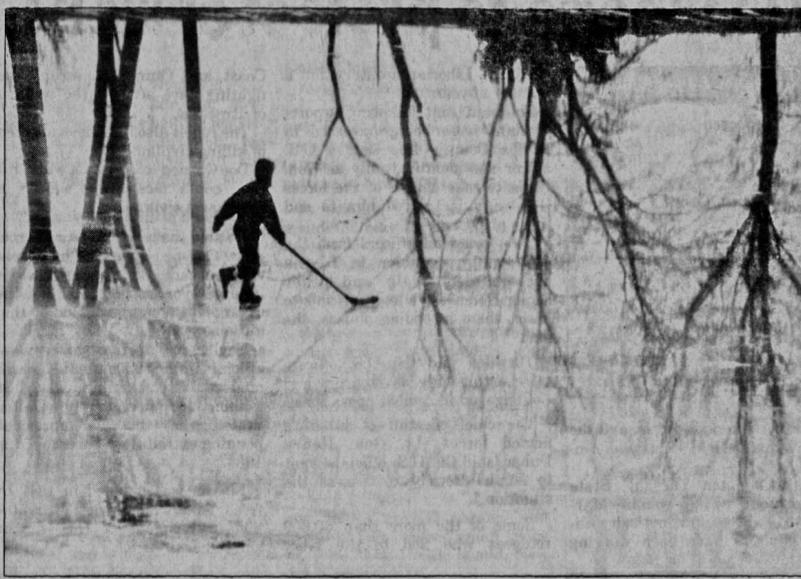

"In Iowa, fortunately, we were ahead of other states in getting ready for the 1990s," Rawlings said. "We knew that the students grew up in small and middle-size towns... it could be very easy for them to get the idea that English is the only language they will ever need. This is part of a national mind-set. Americans expect the rest of the world to speak our language."

Rawlings added, "In this country we don't have a strong tradition, frankly, of studying foreign languages. People think they can be well educated without venturing outside the security of English."

The students now completing the program are: Karl Hack of Coralville, and Lisa Brinkmeyer of Eldora, Ia., in Japanese; John Watzke and Kristin Reynolds, both of Iowa City, in Russian; and Randall Damon and Jean McDonald, both of Iowa City, in Chinese.

For Damon and McDonald, the program included two months of intensive Chinese study at Middlebury College in Vermont and 10 months at Beijing University.

Iowa House commitment sets debate

House earmarks $30 mil. for environmental program

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa House will give $30 million from lottery profits to Iowa's basic environmental program, a 50 percent increase from a Senate-passed bill, House Speaker Don Avenson said Tuesday.

Avenson said the Senate proposal is "posturing" and said the political popularity of environmental programs get the higher spending approved.

"It is very popular across the state," said Avenson, a Democratic candidate for governor.

Avenson's position sets up what's likely to be weeks of debate over how to spend about $40 million in profits from the Iowa Lottery.

On Monday, the Iowa Senate voted to spend $20 million on Resource Enhancement and Protection programs, which pays for expanding the park system and soil and water conservation efforts. The rest was divided among other environmental programs, such as waste reduction.

Spending $20 million on that program, known as REAP, is not enough, said Avenson during his regular meeting with reporters.

"The House will insist on keeping our commitment to REAP," said Avenson. "That commitment is $30 million. Those are the conditions we are working under."

House members also are likely to toughen environmental standards in the bill, which for the first time shifts lottery money away from economic development.

The Senate version gives farmers tax breaks for not plowing land along rivers and streams; the House is likely to force them to leave those buffer strips in place without the breaks.

Avenson said the higher spending will be approved.

"In the end it will work out so Resource Enhancement has $30 million," said Avenson. "The Senate will concur with that. There are just some other things they are interested in posturing over."

opportunity for the state to explore these other languages, especially Chinese, which has never been offered in this state," said Damon.

"It takes a real commitment for a high school to establish a program on their own, but (the program) gives them a great boost in getting something like this going," he added. "Plus they'll have the continuing support of the Ford Foundation and the UI in knowing that there's going to be more students to keep the system going."

In addition to the original six students, Ray Parrott, chairman of the Russian department, said six more students, two in each language, have enrolled each year since 1987, when the program began. The next groups of critical program graduates will be assigned to Iowa high schools in Bettendorf, North Scott, Pleasant Valley and Davenport.

"The word is out, and other districts are eager to participate," Rawlings said. Citing the emphasis the Critical Languages Program has already had on the state, Rawlings noted that the Commission on Foreign Language Studies, appointed by the Gov. Terry Branstad last year, has decided to emphasize the study of Japanese statewide as its first project.

Proposed tuition reduction for Iowa colleges cut in half

DES MOINES (AP) — Legislators have agreed to cut in half a proposed 10 percent reduction in tuition at Iowa's 15 community colleges.

The proposed spending plan could be approved by a House-Senate oversight committee as early as this week, said Rep. Jack Hatch, D-Des Moines.

Legislators had targeted two-year community colleges for special attention this year, saying they wanted to cut tuition for students and raise pay for teachers.

The 10 percent cut was intended as the first step in reducing the cost of attending the schools. But that plan ran into budget realities, said House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein.

"When we looked at all the needs, across the whole spectrum, we had to scale back all around and that was one of the areas where we scaled back," Avenson said. "That is the agreement. In the end, the leadership targets incorporated that 5 percent reduction."

Because legislators do not want to take money away from the community colleges, they must come up with money to replace any lost by cuts in tuition. A 10 percent cut would cost about $5 million.

They will spend $2.5 million, Hatch and Avenson said.

To partially offset the smaller tuition reduction, the same bill would increase student aid programs by about $4 million, Hatch said.

"Community colleges will get a big chunk of that," Hatch said. "We're putting about $4 million into these student assistance programs."

The programs include minority recruitment, vocational training and special aid programs to pay for nursing students and other health training courses.

"On the other hand, we increased the amount of money available for student assistance in other areas," Avenson said. "The net change for students, I think, is a positive one."

The final bill is less ambitious than legislators proposed before the session. Senate Republican Leader Cal Hultman, R-Red Oak, had proposed eliminating tuition and using lottery profits to replace the money lost.

Avenson had proposed eliminating tuition at the UI, Iowa State University, the University of Northern Iowa and the community colleges over a period of years.

The agreement also ends a struggle going on since the Legislature convened,

Nation/World

Bush to discuss budget, set U.S. academic goals

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush will present a State of the Union address Wednesday night offering an upbeat assessment of the nation's health and setting a goal of making American students first in the world in science and math by the year 2000, officials said Tuesday.

Much of the suspense of his remarks at 9 p.m. EST before a joint session of Congress has been dampened by the unveiling of his $1.2 trillion budget plan, which outlined new initiatives where Bush wants to spend more money and areas where he wants to cut.

Combined with the budget, the address will set the stage for election-year battles with a Democratic-run Congress that is fuming over his spending plan, which proposes more money for education, space, the environment and drugs while cutting funds for Medicare, college student loans, mass transit and farm subsidies.

White House officials said that there were no major initiatives or surprises remaining for Bush's speech, but that the president would prod lawmakers to complete work on the unfinished agenda of proposals he submitted last year, including a cut in capital gains taxes.

"Obviously, we don't want to overstate expectations, don't want anyone to overexpand an agenda," said Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu.

Instead, he added, Bush will focus on budget issues and the now-familiar themes of clean-air legislation, child care, education, his crime-fighting package and the second phase of his anti-drug strategy.

"There will be a little bit of a list of things, but he's going to try to avoid the general laundry-list aspect of the State of the Union address," Sununu said.

Officials said Bush would use the speech to call for a major effort to make American students first in the world by the year 2000 in math and science — two areas where U.S. pupils traditionally rank below those of competing industrialized nations.

An assessment of the mathematical abilities of 13-year-olds last year found that just 40 percent of American students could solve a two-step problem, compared to 78 percent of South Korean students.

In science, the congressionally mandated assessment said that 42 percent of 13-year-old U.S. students could successfully analyze experiments, compared to 72 percent of the South Korean students.

Without mentioning the math and science goal, Bush's budget proposes $230 million — a 70 percent increase — in funds for states to improve the abilities of teachers in those two disciplines.

New England police chase after middle-aged 'Bonnie and Clyde'

BOSTON (AP)—An unusually elusive pair of bandits dubbed "Bonnie and Clyde" have led police on a frustrating chase around New England, allegedly robbing 27 stores and tying up clerks at knife-point in the past five weeks.

But the duo's age makes them more like Bonnie and Clyde's parents.

Police are seeking Edward M. Aranjó, 46, and Ellen M. Marks, 50, in the spree, which grew to 27 with two robberies Monday. No one has been injured.

In the mode of operation typical of all the crimes, a middle-aged couple threatened a 68-year-old woman with a knife and tied her to a pipe Monday before robbing her Franklin bookstore cash register of $130.

That night, a Burlington video store was robbed and Bonnie and Clyde were the prime suspects again. Phone lines were cut, and a male clerk was held at knife-point and tied up. The pair reportedly escaped with $160 in cash and $1,500 worth of instant lottery tickets.

"Their pictures are out there on TV so maybe they just want to go for it before they throw in the towel," said police Capt. Alan Leach of Coventry, R.I., one of dozens of police detectives tracking the case. "All we know is, they're moving awfully fast."

Police believe they're moving in a stolen car with Massachusetts plates.

Leach said he saw the pair referred to as Bonnie and Clyde in a police Teletype message.

Since December 26, when a West Warwick,

R.I., store was robbed of $65, Aranjó and Marks are alleged to have robbed small shops in Connecticut, New York, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

The pair believed responsible for all of the crimes have rarely taken off more than two days between heists, police said. They are believed to sometimes dye their hair and wear hats and sunglasses, but otherwise they are not heavily disguised, police said.

Their biggest take so far has been $400, in the town of Attleboro.

Typically, the robberies have occurred at small stores with just a single clerk, said police Detective Kevin Slattery of Framingham, where a store was hit January 8.

Romania's Salvation Front separates

BUCHAREST, Romania — The National Salvation Front government bowed to the clamor from the opposition Tuesday and announced it had split into two groups — one to govern Romania and the other to take part in coming elections.

In a further concession, senior Front member Silviu Brucan said the Front would propose that a coalition government be formed until the planned May 20 elections — in effect agreeing to share the power it assumed during the December revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

Both decisions were clearly meant to appease increasingly strident attacks directed against the Front. Opposition groups accuse it of reneging on its word to run Romania only until the elections, of refusing to share its access to news media and other misuse of power.

Foes of the Front argue that a self-declared interim government should not contest elections it will stage itself. Weekend demonstrations demanded that the government resign.

Haitian exiles urge U.S. to remove leader

WASHINGTON — A coalition of banished Haitian leaders Tuesday urged the United States to join an international effort to remove Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril from power through military and economic sanctions.

The group, saying it represents all Haitians silenced by Avril's "regime of terror," rejected Avril's announcement Monday that he was restoring civil and press liberties to the impoverished island after a week-long crackdown against opposition activists.

"We believe that there is no possibility, under any circumstances, to resume the democratic process with Prosper Avril. Avril must go," the four leaders said in a statement issued after a meeting with the Congressional Task Force on Haiti.

Activists push for new McMartin trial

LOS ANGELES — County supervisors asked the state to investigate the controversial McMartin preschool molestation trial Tuesday as advocates for child-abuse victims continued to push to have charges refiled.

Parents of children involved in the case, the longest criminal proceeding in U.S. history, applauded as the Board of Supervisors approved a motion asking the state Attorney General's office to review the case.

State officials were asked to review transcripts of the lengthy trial as well as comments some jurors reportedly made afterward that while they felt molestations might have occurred, the prosecution did not prove its case.

Earlier in the day, representatives of several child-abuse victims rights groups held a news conference to demand that District Attorney Ira Reiner refile 13 molestation counts against Raymond Buckley.

Buckley and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, were found innocent January 18 of 52 counts of child molestation at the now-defunct McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach. A mistrial was declared on 13 other counts against Buckley when jurors could not reach a verdict.

Bank taught traffickers to launder money

TAMPA, Fla. — Ambitious bankers were so willing to hide illegal drug money that they taught undercover agents how to do it, a prosecutor charged Tuesday as trial opened in a $32 million international money-laundering case.

But a defense attorney said the government was trying to smear the bankers by bringing up ties to deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega.

The bankers, officers with the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, were all told up front about the source of the money, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Rubenstein.

"The bankers received essentially the same message. . . This money comes from the illegal sale of narcotics in the United States, specifically cocaine," he said.

The bankers, he said, didn't care. "It's not any business of mine who the customers are," he quoted banker Amjad Awan as saying when told it was drug money.

Awan, who once claimed to handle Noriega's secret accounts, is on trial with four other former BCCI officers and a Colombian. They are accused of conspiracy to traffic in drugs, conspiracy to launder drug profits and various other counts of money laundering. If convicted, each faces from 35 years to life sentences and fines of at least $750,000.

French honor Bob Dylan

PARIS — Rock legend Bob Dylan was named a commander in France's Order of Arts and Letters on Tuesday, in a ceremony in a gilded neoclassical reception room at the Palais Royal.

Sporting a black Western outfit and a growth of grey stubble, the 48-year-old singer and composer bowed his head to accept the gold and emerald medal from Culture Minister Jack Lang.

"Thank you very much for presenting me with this honor," Dylan said, reading in French from a crumpled envelope. "It moves me enormously."

Lang told Dylan that "for many of us in France and in Europe you bring together an ideal of music, an ideal of poetry."

Dylan is giving a series of concerts in Paris as part of a European tour.

U.S. air base closes after 9-year vigil

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — Pam Jones huddled under a tattered umbrella on a muddy patch outside this U.S. air base, where women have kept up an anti-nuclear vigil for nearly nine years.

The base is to be closed in 1991, a symbol of the changing face of Europe, but Jones isn't leaving yet. "We'll see it through to the end. No one will ever forget Greenham Common," she said Tuesday.

Surrounded by a dismal clutter of broken chairs, plastic sheeting and the dying embers of a fire, she said, "It's a time of celebration."

Greenham Common has been a U.S. base for nearly 50 years. It's where Gen. Dwight Eisenhower saw off his D-Day invasion troops, and it has been a rallying point for the anti-nuclear movement since it became a base for cruise missiles.

It is one of 14 foreign military installations that U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is proposing to close in a cost-cutting measure.

Cheney's announcement Monday was a blow to many of the local people in the wealthy, conservative Berkshire countryside around Greenham Common, 50 miles west of London. The base employs nearly 200 Britons and spends $40 million a year locally.

"We'll miss the Americans economically and we'll miss them as people," said Ted Ashton, chatting in the Ploughman, a local pub.

"When you play poker you deal from strength — and that's what the Americans did here and it worked," said Ashton, 68. "It's all been worthwhile."

Mostly, the locals disdain the dozens of women who since 1981 have protested outside the base, but they more or less learned to put up with them.

They also became used to the cruise missiles trundling on cumbersome launchers through the country lanes on exercises that became known as "walkies."

The big peace demonstrations of the 1980s, when Greenham Common was the focus of anti-nuclear protest in Western Europe, are just a memory.

The protesters? "They're an absolute nuisance and they've achieved nothing," said Ashton.

But Jones, 35, a former secretary with a punk haircut who first camped at Greenham Common three years ago, thinks the protests have been worthwhile.

Police fig 1,000 S. Africans try to decry teams def

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police used batons, rubber bullets and tear gas Tuesday to prevent 1,000 blacks from marching in a stadium in protest of boycott-busting English cricket team's match against a South African university team.

The cricket team's tour has caused confrontations every place the visiting cricketers have appeared, including their hotels, where black employees refuse to serve them. The team is defying an international ban on sports contact with South Africa.

There also were demonstrations in black squatters in rising political unrest only three days before President F.W. de Klerk is to open Parliament. He is expected to discuss reforms in South Africa and ease the emergency regulations in force since 1986 to quell anti-apartheid activity.

A pro-government newspaper, The Citizen, predicted that de Klerk would end news media restrictions but probably not ease other regulations. It also said the release from prison of black nationalist Nelson Mandela could be delayed because of the unrest.

The stadium clash between police and blacks was at Bloemfontein, in the Orange Free State.

One policeman punched a black teen-ager in the chest with a baton and another pressed his truncheon around a black youth's neck to bring him down, as some demonstrators threw stones at police vehicles and erected burning tire barricades in the streets of Mankgodi township.

Obed Nkosi, an organizer for the anti-apartheid National Sports Council, said 30 people were hurt.

Police said 45 people were arrested and one white businessman was

1,000 S. Africans try to march in stadium to decry teams defying international ban

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police used batons, rubber bullets and tear gas Tuesday to prevent 1,000 blacks from marching on a stadium in protest of a boycott-busting English cricket team's match against a South African university team.

The cricket team's tour has caused confrontations every place the visiting cricketers have appeared, including their hotels, where black employees refuse to serve them. The team is defying an international ban on sports contact with South Africa.

There also were demonstrations by black squatters in rising political unrest only three days before President F.W. de Klerk is to open Parliament. He is expected to discuss reforms in South Africa and ease the emergency regulations in force since 1986 to quell anti-apartheid activity.

A pro-government newspaper, The Citizen, predicted that de Klerk would end news media restrictions but probably not ease other regulations. It also said the release from prison of black nationalist Nelson Mandela could be delayed because of the unrest.

The stadium clash between police and blacks was at Bloemfontein, in the Orange Free State.

One policeman punched a black teenager in the chest with a baton, and another pressed his truncheon around a black youth's neck to bring him down, as some demonstrators threw stones at police vehicles and erected burning tire barricades in the streets of Mangoch township.

Obed Nkosi, an organizer for the anti-apartheid National Sports Council, said 30 people were hurt.

Police said 45 people were arrested and one white businessman was slightly injured when his vehicle was stoned by protesters.

An approved protest by about 500 people outside the stadium was allowed to take place.

Police also fired tear gas at 150 black squatters protesting their eviction from Kraaifontein, a neighborhood designated for whites outside Cape Town. The Rev. Allan Boesak, a prominent anti-apartheid activist, was among those affected by the tear gas.

Police in Cape Town urged the public to stay out of the city center Wednesday and Friday "because people are bound to get hurt" when action is taken to stop planned protest marches to police headquarters and Parliament.

The march organizers refuse to seek official permission, and police Capt. Gys Boonzaier said, "The police are obliged to act if the gathering is illegal. We are going to take action and disperse them... we would like to urge the public to stay away... as people are bound to get hurt."

Since de Klerk became president, the government has allowed several massive marches to take place without the organizers seeking permission. De Klerk was quoted as telling police commanders two weeks ago that they are no longer "required to prevent people from gathering to gain support for their views."

But police officials say as long as there are regulations against "illegal gatherings" — those without magisterial permission — police must act to stop them.

The stage is set for a major confrontation Friday, when black activists hope to have 10,000 people marching toward Parliament as de Klerk makes his speech outlining his plans for reforms leading to negotiations with the black majority on a new constitution.

"There are firm indications that... de Klerk will announce some easing of the state of emergency in his opening address to Parliament on Friday," said The Citizen, which has good government sources. "The first of the emergency regulations expected to be lifted are those which were imposed on the media."

The paper said Mandela's release is not expected until mid-February at the earliest. Reporters earlier in the week said Mandela might not be freed until March.

IOWA LEGISLATION

Hunters' rights

Conflicts between hunters and animal rights activists are provoking the Iowa House to waste taxpayers' time and money.

An Iowa House of Representatives subcommittee approved a bill Monday which would prohibit animal rights activists from harrasing hunters and chasing away animals. The bill will now be sent to the full House; it would call for up to 30 days in jail for people who harass people who are hunting or fishing.

The activists aim to protect animals' lives; they don't want innocent animals being killed for sport.

But the fact is, the sport is legal, and hunters who hunt within the limits of the law should be protected from undue harrassment. Legislators, too, should be spared needless hassles.

If the majority of Iowans found hunting inhumane and wanted it stopped, then legislation would be proposed to abolish it.

But for many Iowans hunting is a valued tradition.

Hunting is already regulated to protect against depletion of wildlife populations and is only allowed during specific times of the year.

The proposed legislation will further complicate hunting regulations and prove simply unworkable. For instance, will anyone without a gun be prohibited from entering a field during hunting season? Will wandering nature lovers need to carry a note promising not to interfere with hunting rites?

This legislation may be necessary to protect hunters' limited season, and some proponents of the bill are hopeful that potentially violent conflicts between hunters and activists can be avoided.

It's just too bad the subject had to come up in the first place.

CIGARETTE ADVERTISING

Uptown uproar

Last week, in the face of loud opposition, the R.J. Reynolds Co. canceled plans to test market Uptown, a brand of cigarettes designed to appeal to black, inner-city smokers. Although the development of an entirely new brand of cigarettes blatantly targeting blacks is somewhat disturbing, the Uptown protest highlights a less publicized, but more fundamental concern — the preservation of individual liberties includes the autonomy of every citizen in the marketplace.

The opposition to Uptown, led by Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, argued that the proposed marketing strategy would further accelerate the already high levels of smoking-related health problems among inner-city blacks.

But unlike many other recent issues of race, the Uptown town protest does not appear to have the unanimous support of black leaders. Benjamin Hooks, National Director of the NAACP, believes that the uproar around Uptown assumes that "blacks are not capable of making their own free choices" in product selection.

Blacks may have legitimate objections to the marketing strategies planned for Uptown cigarettes, and they are certainly entitled not to purchase them. Organized defiance toward R.J. Reynolds' tactics may help define the limits of racially targeted advertising; but that paternalistic impulse, carried to extremes, may devalue the autonomy of black consumers and ultimately impugn the true freedom of black Americans.

OSHA

Fifteen years later

Fifteen years ago, rulemakers from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration requested safety regulations for workers in confined spaces. Now, 4,500 deaths later, those regulations may finally be implemented, but not before extensive hearings and testimony on the subject. And how many workers will be affected by the rules and the date they are implemented are still unknown.

About 300 workers are suffocated, poisoned or drowned each year while working in chemical and refinery tanks, tunnels, sewers and grain elevators. OSHA officials have known of the danger for years, but have not or could not regulate industries with employees in confined spaces.

A number of reasons have been given for this failure, including an apathetic Reagan administration, a small OSHA staff, a large OSHA agenda and a general feeling that whatever regulations OSHA passes will be either ignored or legally petitioned against by the industries themselves.

Whatever reason for the delay, the fact remains — OSHA rulemakers are well aware of the risk these employees work under, but their jobs still remain unregulated.

In the 1990's, and mainly due to the Reagan administration, OSHA no longer holds much power. Its safety regulations are either widely ignored or elude so many companies and businesses that they are useless. If OSHA rules are finally applied to regulate workers in confined spaces, they will not apply to companies with under 11 employees, nor to agricultural or grain handling companies — industries most in need of regulation.

OSHA has been gutted long enough.

Barry showed courage, grace

When Mayor Marion Barry appeared before a supportive church crowd in Washington on Sunday, America saw in him the personification of raw contrition. Appealing to the citizens of Washington to "join together as a united community," he showed the most elusive of all leadership qualities: grace under pressure.

With his wife Effi at his side, Mayor Barry took responsibility for his predicament, blaming no other person, and looked at his future without flinching. "I have had to look my human weaknesses straight in the eye," he said. "I'm going to find a way to begin to heal my body, mind, and soul . . . I realize I am going to have to walk this journey by myself."

The mayor showed the good judgment to hand over his administrative duties to City Administrator Carol Thompson, to speak to the people about his plans, and to leave Washington to seek treatment and recovery. Now all of America can learn from the mayor's problems and his long journey back to health, whatever the legal outcome of his case.

Although he makes this journey alone, he has the prayers and good wishes of tens of thousands of his constituents, and millions of people across America. People of good will know how hard it must have been, in the words of Effi Barry, "to admit to the whole world that as a mortal human being he has reached the hour of reckoning, where he realizes that it is truly in God's hands."

Over the course of three decades, the mayor has had a distinguished career in political activism and public service. A brave civil rights organizer in the 1960s, Marion Barry moved to Washington, D.C., where he became a community activist and was elected to the school board in 1971. Three years later, he became a city councilman, and was elected mayor in 1978, pledging that "here in Washington, D.C., we will be our brother's keeper."

We should not allow the terrible events of last week to overshadow the fact that Mayor Barry largely lived up to that promise, creating in Washington an ethic that the government must care for all the people. This he accomplished in a political system that can only be described as neocolonial, with Congress controlling the city's purse-strings and possessing the power to overturn local legislation at will. The mayor fought for the well-being of his city without much help from Capitol Hill, where the district has neither voting senators nor voting representatives.

The mayor thus commands much affection for his service. The American people are also forgiving and prayerful because millions of them know first-hand the destructive power of physical addiction. Whether the culprit is cigarettes or alcohol or narcotics, as a society we all have loved ones — friends or co-workers or family members — who have lived through the pain, the trauma and the indignity of losing self-control to substance abuse. The dependency takes over, which is why we must emphasize saying no in the first place, before the lonely cycle of pain and despair begins.

Circumstances like these remind us that the war on drugs is not merely political, and should not be politicized. It is primarily a moral crusade about values and about health and sickness. When we tell young people to stay away from drugs, we are not lecturing or haranguing them; we are trying to save their lives and their precious minds and bodies from decay and destruction. The reason we call this struggle a "war" is not because addicts are our enemies, but because drugs, both legal and illegal, are killing people every day. Cigarettes account for 350,000 deaths a year and alcohol-related deaths number 60,000.

Even the best and the brightest cannot experiment with excess and hope to escape the cruel dynamics of addiction. No one, not Superman, not you, not I, can master or tame the wild demands that intoxicants make of us. The millions of brave and recovering addicts who fill the weekly meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous can attest to that fact: We may think that we are stronger than alcohol and narcotics, but that thought is an illusion. You don't control drugs; drugs control you.

Now, as so many pray for the well-being of the mayor, it is important that we focus attention on the welfare of the city itself. The District of Columbia leads the nation in a host of horrible indicators: low birth-weight babies, infant mortality, high-school drop-outs and juvenile incarceration. Homeless people roam our streets and sleep on heating grates; people with AIDS are crying out for help; blood flows every day from an out-of-control murder rate.

Behind these gruesome statistics lies the powerlessness of the people who live in the shadow of a national government from which they are structurally excluded. Now more than ever, it is time to escalate the effort to gain statehood and self-government for the district.

In the meantime, however, the mayor, who has been so loved by the children of the capital city, can turn this dark night into day by helping young people to understand the terrible danger that alcohol and drugs present. In the process, he must heal and make himself whole again. He would do well to think about the profound words of a 10-year-old boy, who told a news reporter that "Mayor Barry loved us more than he loved him(self)."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson's syndicated column appears Wednesdays on the Viewpoints page.

Barry was undone by his own foolishness

A bucket of water poised over a door might fall and kill somebody, or it might drench the fool that put it there.

Meaning: Is it just me, or is there anyone else out there who finds Marion Barry's arrest on cocaine charges a supreme example of folly in high places?

True, addiction to cocaine is a serious matter. So is the abuse of a public trust, and so is busting a mayor, especially a black mayor. So is just about anything involving race and drugs, if one gets swept up in the mania of seriousness which the media and the public automatically attach to such things.

But let us, for the moment, ransom ourselves from the hoosegow of received thinking. Let us go over the wall to marvel at the last act of a drama of incredible hubris.

Because really now, what on earth was Marion Barry doing in a hotel room with a crack cocaine pipe poised to his lips? What made him think he could get away with such a thing? What on earth could have possessed the man?

"God made Marion Barry the same as He made other people," the contrite mayor told the press after posing for the FBI's cameras. Barry certainly seems to be the last man to figure that out. Did anyone ever say that God had made him otherwise?

Well, perhaps Marion Barry did. It is said that absolute power corrupts absolutely, and smoking crack cocaine while the municipal meter was running is absolutely something corrupt. But more than that, it was corrupt for Marion Barry to think that, as mayor, as a prominent black mayor, as a prominent black mayor badgered by the press for months with accusations of drug abuse and consorting with known drug felons, no one would notice that he recreated with a crack pipe.

Was it just the cocaine doing the talking, the crazy thinking? Perhaps. Addiction is not a choosy illness, and for his addiction, Marion Barry deserves our sympathy and support. But there was a time when Marion Barry, not yet an addict, chose to take his first puff, or line, or whatever. And in all likelihood, he was the mayor of Washington, D.C. at that time, a city where more blacks kill blacks over drugs than anywhere else.

It's nice of Barry to admit at this late date he's human, but as a human being elected to high office by other human beings, his teary confession should not obscure the stupidity of his original sin. One is reminded, not a little, of Jimmy Swaggart's similarly vague, equally irrigated pronouncement that he had "sinned," meaning, he had a problem with hookers — he liked 'em.

The press and public, outside of Swaggart's own congregation, didn't give the fallen pulpit-pounder an iota of the tragic empathy reserved for great men fallen. We thought him a hypocrite and a fool — an addicted, over-sexed fool perhaps, a very human fool, but a fool nonetheless.

We thought Gary Hart a fool, too, whose monkey business also bears resemblance to the Marion Barry affair. It was Hart who, defying rumors of extra-marital dalliance, invited the press to follow him night and day. Invited them? Heck, he dared them, and never has a presidential candidate so early in the race been subjected to such a blanket of press coverage. Perhaps the Miami Herald reporters who staked out the Georgetown townhouse of Hart's undoing took more pleasure in wrecking a candidate than pursuing news that really mattered; but the state of siege was Hart's own creation. The news broken, Hart supporters were persuaded to flee less by the former senator's fleshiness than by his phenomenal stupidity.

Like Hart, Barry was subject to unusual, perhaps overzealous scrutiny; strictly speaking, setting up an elaborate sting operation to catch one crack user isn't the most economic use of law enforcement resources. He didn't invite it, but he had to know it was there, and like Hart, he forgot.

Was this a case of racist harassment by law enforcement? Hell, he did it. The NAACP shouldn't waste an ounce of breath in defense of Marion Barry. They should express the usual sympathies for a man in trouble, and let it go at that.

Barry has done his city a double disservice through his own weakness and pride (if he was an addict, he should have said so long ago, and done something about it); he has done no favor for black politicians, either, who are just now beginning to make headway.

Perhaps the only good thing Marion Barry has done lately is finally get caught. Every public figure who admits to a drug problem gets us closer to the truth about drugs; they don't discriminate, and all the talk about waging a war against them is just that — talk.

None injured in fire that caused $5,000 damage at UI Hospitals

Five thousand dollars in damages were sustained following a fire early Tuesday afternoon in the Carver Pavilion of the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The fire broke out in Room 2040, which is a dietary and food preparation area, and was attributed to someone leaving a stove burner on a stove but, said Acting Lt. Elmer Beckler of the Iowa City Fire Department.

According to Beckler, three engines, one ladder truck and the battalion chief were dispatched to the site. The report of the fire was made at 2:15 p.m. by UI Hospitals security.

Upon arrival the fire had already been extinguished by hospital security, leaving ventilation of the area to the fire department, he said.

Smoke from the fire led to six patients being relocated to other parts of the hospital, Beckler said.

No water damage or injuries were sustained because of the fire.

against the violence in war-torn El Salvador.

Colonnese, a former director of the U.S. Catholic Conference Latin American Bureau in Washington, D.C., said he witnessed a transformation take place in Romero when he became archbishop.

Romero changed overnight from a conservative member of the El Salvador Church oligarchy to a people's advocate who condemned injustice and oppression without regard to his personal safety, Colonnese said.

"He knew they would kill him, and they did," he said.

He said Romero's life expresses the need to give a "preferential option for the poor," and that philosophy is now a primary teaching in the Roman Catholic Church.

"There are few people who have had the impact on this century that the life of Archbishop Romero had," he added.

The current archbishop of El Salvador, Arturo Rivera y Damas, continues to advocate human rights, Colonnese said.

The three-reel film was directed by the Rev. Elwood Kaiser. It was shown in the Quad Cities at St. Ambrose University, Marycrest College and Augustana College last week.

Iowa City will host the movie Thursday through Monday where it will be shown at St. Mary's Catholic Church, 220 E. Jefferson St., on February 2 at 7 p.m.; the UI Communication Studies Building on February 3 and 4 at 7 p.m.; and the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St., on February 5 at 8 p.m.

Dawn Ashbacher of the Newman Center Peace and Justice group said the film is powerful, with universal appeal.

"The biggest thing it captured was the sense of terror, of being killed, for not only the people but for the bishop," she said.

There are some graphic shots in the film that show people being killed at the hands of the government. The film is rated PG-13 and a $1 donation is requested as admission.

UI junior Roni Staver said the film is an appropriate way to commemorate the anniversary of Romero's death and make people aware of the situation in El Salvador.

"The film provides an awareness of what has taken place and what his mission is for," Staver said.

There will be a discussion at the Newman Center following the presentation to give the audience an opportunity to discuss the film.

For this female student, the events finally culminated in an incident during which the chief resident "stated that I could now come and 'service' him and the third-year resident in the call room."

As one fourth-year UI medical student explained it, abuse, in an instructive, educational way, forms part of the learning experience.

"It's quite common to get worked over by staff when you're (doing the rounds), and they can get on you pretty good," he said, "whether or not it's carried on to the extent that it has a real effect on performance."

The UI student, who wished to remain anonymous, said the Midwest lifestyle and atmosphere combine to form a laid-back teaching situation.

"Here at Iowa, I think you'd find a pretty low number of students having any significant problem," he said.

Despite researchers' concerns that abusive behavior should be prevented, the UI student said a little pressure sometimes helps students learn.

"I wouldn't say I've really been abused at all. I've been challenged, but that's one way of being taught," he said. "Nobody's ever taken it overboard or to a personal extent."

talking here, I don't know if it's correct."

Bush administration officials and intelligence sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there has been speculation for weeks that Gorbachev would yield his party post — while retaining the presidency — but that they had no information he would take the step.

One senior administration official said that if true, the decision "might mean that there's a move toward pluralism in mind, it might mean there's a problem, it might be a plus. And very frankly you can create scenarios on both sides. ... you can make an argument that it's a reflection of strength and you can make an argument that it's a reflection of weakness."

David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said he had no confirmation of the report, but if true it "may in fact enhance Gorbachev's chances for survival" by making it more difficult for party bosses opposed to his policies to criticize him.

Ever since his assumption of the top party post in 1985, Gorbachev has sought to separate the party and the government. The party has ruled the country since the 1917 revolution, with the government a distinctly secondary entity.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a senior member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he had no independent knowledge of Gorbachev's plans but that a resignation as party leader would represent an important loss of power for the Soviet leader and throw uncertainty into U.S.-Soviet relations.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the report should mean caution about cutting military spending: "Let's call off this mad rush to spend a dividend we don't even have yet."

Baker said American diplomats in Moscow "know just about the same thing that all the rest of us know right now — that there's a rumor out there to this effect, and that's all we know."

He said his talks in Moscow were "still very much on."

Asked about the CNN report, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "I have no idea. We've never heard of it before. I have no information."

He said of the Baker trip to Moscow: "It was just delayed one day."

Baker and Shevardnadze will meet February 8-9 in the Soviet capital, a day delay at the suggestion of the U.S. government, said Tutwiler, the State Department spokesman.

Issues to be discussed include arms control and the war in Afghanistan between the Soviet-backed government and U.S.-armed rebels.

One U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there have been reports that Gorbachev was frustrated over efforts to reform the Communist Party. He said the speculation was that Gorbachev would remain in charge of the government as president.

However, he stressed there was no information to the effect that Gorbachev would take the step.

Road losses overshadow Iowa upsets

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

In the long shadow of a 10-8 record, Iowa's upsets over national powers Michigan and Illinois haven't carried the kind of weight that they probably deserved to hold.

The Hawkeyes have lost only two games this season at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, despite playing Indiana and North Carolina, along with the Illini and Wolverines.

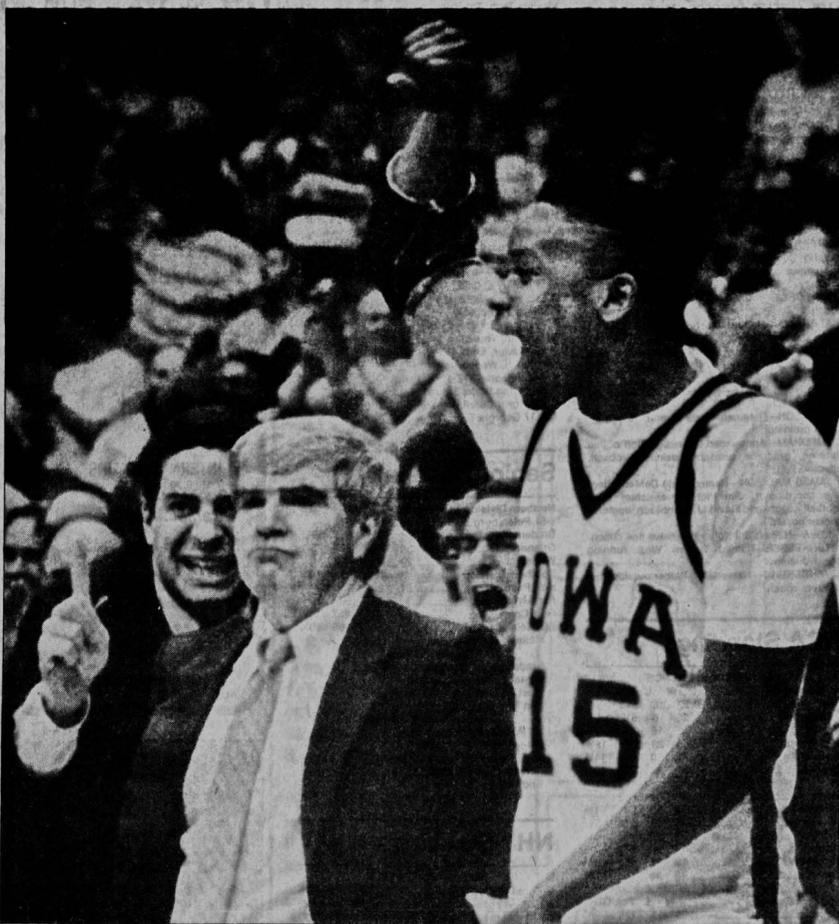

The "hitch in their gut" along, as colorful Iowa football coach Hayden Fry might say, has come on the road. Coach Tom Davis' team has lost six of seven trips off the Carver floor, with the lone win coming at Iowa State.

And the Hawkeyes fought to come away with a win in the final seconds of that one, 89-87, behind 32 points by now-academically-sidelined sophomore Ray Thompson.

"This is one of the most difficult leagues to win in on the road," Davis said earlier in the year. "The level of talent is so equal that to win at someone else's home floor is such a tough thing to do."

The losses that Iowa has clawed through are tremendous. Along with Thompson, sometime-starting point guard Brian Garner hit the road after becoming an academic casualty, and freshman Ray Slater also transferred.

Story connects Irish player to Illini problems

Pearl denies opening case

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The NCAA investigation of the University of Illinois basketball program, which centers on the recruitment of freshman Deon Thomas, apparently blew open with testimony from a current Notre Dame player, according to a published report.

Meanwhile, an assistant coach at the University of Iowa has denied that his school was the one who initially turned Illinois in for the Thomas recruitment.

Citing unidentified NCAA and University of Illinois sources, the Chicago Tribune reported in today's editions that LaPhonso Ellis, a widely recruited high school standout from East St. Louis, Ill., told investigators he was offered money to play at Illinois.

Ellis, a 6-foot-9 center, chose to attend Notre Dame after his 1988 graduation from East St. Louis Lincoln High School.

Neither Ellis nor Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps would comment on the allegations, the Tribune reported.

According to the newspaper, Ellis was questioned about the allegations by both NCAA investigators and attorney Mike Slive, who has been conducting the U of I's own investigation.

Assistant coach Jimmy Collins, the chief recruiter for the Illini, has become the focus of the investigation, and the school has barred him from recruiting on the road until the matter is settled.

The probe has so far centered on a taped telephone conversation between Thomas and Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl in which Thomas reportedly said he would receive $80,000 and an automobile if he attended Illinois.

Pearl said Monday he taped the conversation because Iowa had been accused of illegal recruiting practices, and he wanted to protect himself.

"There was only one person who could clear me of those charges, and that was Deon Thomas," Pearl said. "So I decided to call Deon and ask him about his recruitment by Iowa and whether we had done anything illegal. I also asked him some questions about his recruitment by Illinois."

Pearl said the NCAA was already investigating Illinois when he turned the tape in.

Thomas, a 1989 graduate of Chicago's Simeon High School, has been held out of play for the Illini this season because of the alleged irregularities in his recruiting.

"I'd be lying if I said it has been a vacation," Collins said of the investigation. "We've been instructed by the NCAA not to say anything. Consequently, our side of the story has not come out."

Jerseys stolen from NBA Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Plans for tightening security were being considered by Basketball Hall of Fame officials Tuesday after thieves made off with jerseys belonging to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Walt Frazier.

"We're certainly looking into the idea of at least putting an alarm system or a silent alarm system on to the exhibit cases," said Joseph O'Brien, executive director of the Hall of Fame.

Also stolen Sunday were Abdul-Jabbar's goggles. The items had been on display in adjacent sections devoted to the Los Angeles Lakers and New York Knicks on the second floor of the Hall of Fame. O'Brien said the cases containing the mementos were apparently jimmied open during visiting hours.

"It's probably some youngster who's very sorry now," he said. "I don't think that anyone comes into the Hall of Fame with theft in mind. I think it's a tease once they're there."

In Los Angeles, Abdul-Jabbar's spokeswoman was dismayed by the news.

"I'm extremely disturbed to hear that. I certainly hope these things are recovered because that's really a shame," said Lauren Pullman. "We went to a lot of trouble to make sure that those items made it right there. We turned down numerous charities that wanted

Hawkeyes ranked 18th on NCAA coaches poll

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team has been ranked 18th on the College Swimming Coaches Association of America poll released Tuesday.

The Hawkeyes made their debut at No. 18 last week, marking their first appearance among the top twenty since the 1986-87 season.

Stanford, which finished first at last year's NCAA Championships, holds the top spot in the rankings, followed by Texas. The Longhorns placed second at NAAs last season.

Iowa stands fourth among cold-weather schools, with Michigan leading the way in sixth place.

Northwestern stands second out of Northern schools and 14th overall, followed by Kansas in the No. 15 position.

The Hawkeyes do not compete again until February 15-17, when they travel to Indianapolis for the Big Ten Conference Championships.

Iowa represented well

Hawkeye senior Erin Walsh, along with five Iowa alumni, has been named to the United States national field hockey team.

Walsh, a native of Virginia Beach, Va., is joined on the squad by former Hawkeyes Deb Brickey, Donna Lee, Diane Loosbrock, Marcia Pankratz and Mary (Koboldt) Treacy.

Former Iowa players make up one-third of the 18 player roster, more than any other collegiate field hockey school.

Old Dominion, which finished second in the country this year, placed three players on the team.

Current Iowa assistant field hockey coach Patty Shea, the 1988 Olympic team goalkeeper and 1989 national team member, underwent knee surgery earlier this month and is taking a sabbatical from national-level competition.

The national team will play host to Australia, Holland and Canada in the Trophy Tournament, February 7-11 in East Los Angeles, Calif.

Former Big Ten assistant joins Iowa coaching staff

IOWA CITY (AP) — Bill Kollar, a nine-year National Football League veteran who has been an assistant coach at Purdue and Illinois, joined the Iowa staff Tuesday as defensive line coach.

Kollar was the second assistant hired within the past week by Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, who had to fill three vacancies on his staff.

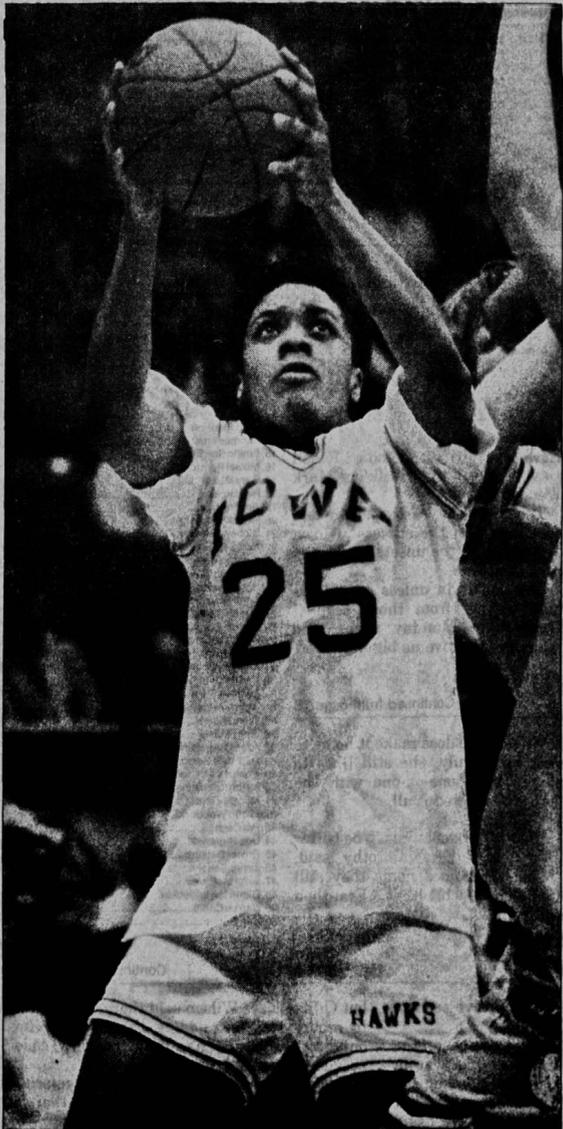

Offensive line coach Kirk Ferentz left to become the head coach at Maine, while defensive line coach Dan McCartney and defensive ends coach Bernie Wyatt joined the staff of new Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez.

Kollar, 37, spent the last two years as defensive ends and special teams coach at Purdue. He coached the defensive line at Illinois from 1986-88 and was a volunteer assistant with the Illini in 1985.

A first-round draft choice after playing at Montana State, Kollar spent three seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals and six with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. He was an assistant coach at Tampa Bay in 1984.

"In Bill Kollar, we are getting an experienced football coach with a high energy level," Fry said. "He is very enthusiastic and has a strong Big Ten background. I believe he will be a great addition to our coaching staff."

Fry earlier hired John O'Hara, who had been the head coach at Southwest Texas State. O'Hara will coach the offensive line.

Iowa forward Franthea Price takes charge of the ball during the Hawkeye women's basketball game against Purdue earlier this month at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The 5-foot-9 senior has been averaging 22.5 points per game for the Hawkeyes.

Dad's help sparked Price's hoop career

Challenges shaped top Iowa scorer

Rita Helmes
The Daily Iowan

When Franthea Price was a little girl, her father took her on the basketball court to show her the game.

"He would pass the ball at me extremely hard," Price recalled. "I said to him, 'Hey, I'm not your son, I'm your daughter.'"

In tears, young Franthea ran home to her grandmother, complaining of her father's treatment.

Then she thought about it. "I decided I wasn't going to let him beat me," Price said.

Out she went again to challenge her father and work on her basketball skills. That determination and spunk shaped Price's personality and drive, and helped her to become what she is today — the leading scorer on the Iowa women's basketball team and one of the nation's premier forwards.

According to her grandmother Dorothy, Franthea first took up basketball at the tender age of two. Frank Price Jr., who had been a star at River Rouge High School in River Rouge, Mich., long before Franthea made her name there, always took his daughter with him when he went to play ball.

As Dorothy tells it: "I said, 'Where you going?' She said, 'To play basketball.' I said, 'With who?' She said, 'Daddy.' I said, 'Who's going to win?' She said, 'Me.'"

Price began to play organized basketball in the third grade, spending as much of her spare time as possible on the sport.

"She didn't care about dolls. She liked to play basketball," said Dorothy, who raised Franthea. "When she got to be 10 or 11, the boys would ask her to play with them. And she'd beat them, too."

Today, as a Hawkeye, Price still challenges her opponents, and continues to win.

Behind her 22.5 points-per-game scoring average, Iowa has vaulted to No. 13 nationally, sporting a record of 13-4 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten.

Price has been the leading scorer in 11 of the 17 games this season, has hit double figures in 24 consecutive contests, and is currently second in scoring and third in rebounding among her conference peers.

It is for these statistics, and Price's leadership ability, that head coach C. Vivian Stringer has "given her the green light" to shoot at will in all the Iowa contests.

While to many this means unwelcome pressure to perform, Price thrives on being the team leader because it means she is in control.

"In the past three years, I really haven't had to be in the forefront," the 5-foot-9 senior said. "But in my high school career, it was the position I was always in. I enjoy it. This way, I have more control over what I'm doing."

Players leave Drake

DES MOINES (AP) — Former Drake basketball player Brian Brown says several team members are upset about the way they've been treated by Coach Tom Abatemarco.

Brown is one of three players who have quit the team this month. The latest was reserve guard Terrell Jackson, who left on Monday, a few hours before the Bulldogs played Tulsa.

Jackson's departure came three days after several players reportedly met with a university administrator to discuss their problems. Abatemarco did not attend that session.

Drake Athletic Director Curt Blake did not return a phone call Tuesday seeking comment about the situation.

"There is a lot of unhappiness among some of the team members because of how they have been treated," said Brown, a senior who played little during his four years at Drake.

Brown said he left because of a "personality conflict" with Abatemarco and it had nothing to do with his lack of playing time.

"I never minded going to practice before, but it got to the point where it was no fun," Brown said. "It simply was drudgery to practice and play. I didn't want to put up with it any more. I was not treated with respect or honesty."

Freshman Eric Bunce also left the team. Bunce had played in only three games this season.

Burton named Player of the Week

CHICAGO (AP) — Willie Burton of Minnesota's 19th-ranked Gophers has been selected Big Ten Player of the Week by the Associated Press.

Burton, a 6-7 senior from Detroit, scored 21 points with 10 rebounds in an 84-72 victory over Iowa, and had 22 points and 8 rebounds in Sunday's 108-87 victory over Indiana.

Pro Bowl casualties rise

HONOLULU (AP) — Scratch Joe Montana. John Elway is out, too.

So are Boomer Esiason, Don Majkowski, John Taylor and Karl Mecklenburg.

Some of the luster is gone from Sunday's Pro Bowl.

The anticipated rematch of Super Bowl quarterbacks Montana and Elway won't happen in the NFL's all-star game, since both have withdrawn with elbow problems.

Cincinnati quarterback Esiason and Green Bay's Don Majkowski already had pulled out, and Elway was supposed to replace Esiason.

Of the four quarterbacks voted into the Pro Bowl by their fellow players around the league, only Warren Moon of Houston will play Sunday at Aloha Stadium.

Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham has replaced Majkowski.

NCAA to clear UNLV ruling

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The NCAA will be asked to clarify an issue Thursday that is nagging the UNLV basketball team and could affect college coaches and athletic directors across the country.

The question: To what degree are universities responsible for seeing that bills of student athletes are paid?

Nine UNLV players have been suspended for one game for failing to pay incidental charges at hotels where the team stayed on the road last season. Charges range from $7.51 for one athlete to less than $50 per student, university officials say.

The Runnin' Rebels, under the NCAA microscope since a celebrated battle with Coach Jerry Tarkanian 13 years ago, thought it was on solid ground. Not so, according to the NCAA.

If the latest NCAA edict holds, many coaches could be facing the same question.

"To our knowledge, this is the first time the NCAA has held institutions accountable for such charges by student athletes," said UNLV athletic director Brad Rothermel.

Coaches say tourney is bigger

CHICAGO (AP) — Making the NCAA basketball tournament has become more important than winning the conference championship, according to most Big Ten coaches.

"It used to be that you had to win the championship or finish second to go to the NCAA," said Michigan State's Jud Heathcote on Tuesday in the league's weekly telephone interview.

Heathcote was referring to formats that predated expanding the tournament to 64 teams.

"Now we get five or six teams to go and that has diluted the championship," said Heathcote. "Unless you have a great club, you set your goals to get to the NCAA tournament. A lot of teams look at it that way. I know we do."

"It takes the pressure off of winning the championship, but it also puts a lot of pressure on to make the tournament."

Some of the coaches admit they have changed their thinking as to setting their sights on the conference title.

"I've talked about that," said Gene Keady, whose Purdue Boilermakers are ranked No. 8 nationally and lead the Big Ten race with a 7-0 record. "As coaches, we've seen you can finish third or fourth in the league and still win the national title."

"Basically, and realistically, the coaches are changing their philosophy," said Keady. "We're still trying to win the Big Ten but it's not as important as it used to be."

still battles with an injured knee that refuses to give him much mobility. And the result is a roster full of young, untested talent that is contributing to wins like Illinois and Michigan.

All this from a team that was expected to finish low in the Big Ten — before any of these events took place. Now that youth has to learn how to win on the road.

"A lot of young guys just haven't played a lot on the road," sophomore point guard Troy Skinner said. "The crowd pumps us up at home and we have to learn to get that same kind of intensity on the road."

Freshmen Dale Reed and Jay Webb, and sophomore Brig Tubbs have seen their minutes increase along with redshirt freshman Ace

Those six have stepped in and contributed in the success of Iowa at home, and the upsets, especially over the Illini.

"We don't win unless we get the help we got from those people," Davis said Monday night. "So many people gave us big minutes."

grandparents, she was always close to her mother, who died when Franthea was 17, and is good friends with her father and younger sister Kokita. Coming to Iowa wasn't easy, as she left her family at a difficult time.

But the changes were made easier, Price said, by the presence and patience of Stringer.

"The transition was very hard," she said. "I had to be strong for my little sister. Coach Stringer really helped me make the transition by promoting a family atmosphere."

"I'm very close to my family. There's always someone telling me what's right for me because they care. While I'm here, Coach Stringer gives me that guidance."

When Price does make it home to visit her family, she still likes to play a little one-on-one with the man who started it all.

"One of her goals was to be better than her father," Dorothy said. "When she comes home they still challenge each other. Franthea still wins."

to auction it off."

She said the jersey was one that Abdul-Jabbar wore in his last week of play for the Lakers before retiring last year after 20 years in the NBA.

Abdul-Jabbar, sure to be a future Hall of Famer, set more than 23 NBA records during his career, including most points, 38,387.

Frazier was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1987 after a 12-year career, including 10 years with the New York Knicks. He scored 15,581 points in his career and was named to the NBA

All-Defensive Team seven consecutive seasons, 1969-1975.

Frazier now does color play-by-play for the Madison Square Garden Network. He was in the Caribbean Tuesday, assessing damage to his house there caused by a recent storm, but his broadcasting agent, Sandy Montag, said the player would be upset by the news.

"I think he'd be upset that there would be someone who would want to do something like that," Montag said.

Springfield police were investigating the theft, but Officer Nate Wilson said there was nothing to report Tuesday, adding that the city has only two officers handling larceny cases because of recent budget cuts.

"We have no idea how long it's been missing. With all the groups that go through there it could be difficult," he said.

O'Brien said he hopes the thief or thieves are suffering pangs of remorse and are led to mail the items back to the museum.

"If we get them back we're not going to pursue where it came from," he said.

Hard Rock Cafe's popularity dwindles

LONDON (AP)—The battle of the burgers is heating up in London as restaurateurs lure diners with American fare and the salad days of rock 'n' roll.

The Hard Rock Cafe still appears to top the charts, but four newcomers are hoping to unseat the progenitor of rock restaurants.

For the first time in its 18-year history the Hard Rock, with its well-known T-shirts and legendary lines of customers snaking along Piccadilly, is not listed in the popular "Good Food Guide."

Editor Tom Jaine refused to say why the Hard Rock was omitted from the 1990 edition but said that generally restaurants are dropped after a change in ownership or chef, or if patterns of taste change.

Hard Rock's chef of 13 years, Dermot Lehane, was lured away by Sticky Fingers, the restaurant opened by Rolling Stones guitarist Bill Wyman last May.

"I think a lot of American tourists are bored with queuing up at the Hard Rock, and they are crazy about Sticky Fingers," said manager Lorraine Angliss, in a recent interview at the restaurant in Kensington, west London.

"Without a doubt our food is superior," Angliss said as she picked at a bunless hamburger, explaining that she was dieting.

Sticky Fingers, named after the Rolling Stones album, displays 250 pieces of Wyman's rock 'n' roll memorabilia, including his certificate of honorary citizenship of Mobile, Ala.; his late bandmate Brian Jones' green Gretsch guitar; and photos of very young Rolling Stones surrounded by psychedelic flowers and old covers of Beat Magazine.

The Rock Garden at Covent Garden, which began as a live music club and helped discover stars such as the Police, U2 and Joe Jackson, has also gone into the restaurant-and-memorabilia business. But marketing man Henry Weinreich bristles at comparisons with the Hard Rock.

"We're not borrowing a history. It's our history that's happening every day. We guard it jealously," he said. "If you want to see a museum, go there. If you want to be around young Londoners and out of a tourist trap, then come here."

Down the street from the Rock Garden is Lennon's, opened 13 months ago by the first wife of the late Beatle John Lennon. Although Cynthia Lennon is no longer involved with the restaurant, its walls feature black and white photographs of the Beatles and other rock 'n' rollers.

None o' this "wubba, wubba, wubba" nonsense; just say Julie!

'Other' Julie has something to say

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Julie Brown wants you to know that her character on MTV's "Just Say Julie" is, to put it simply, sort of crazy.

If you've seen her ditsy cartoon of an empty-headed Valley girl, you might agree. It's a persona she's honed with albums like "Goddess in Progress" and such songs and videos as "Homecoming Queen's Got a Gun," "I Like 'Em Big and Stupid" and "Trapped in the Body of a White Girl."

She co-wrote the movie "Earth Girls Are Easy," in which she also had a starring role, from one of her songs.

Brown's weekly half-hour show is a tongue-in-cheek way of introducing rock videos. It's set in her tacky condo, where friends and relatives occasionally drop by.

"I make fun of the videos," Brown said. "Some of them are pretty lame. After all, if it's rock 'n' roll, it should be a little rebellious. Poking fun at them is in the spirit of rock 'n' roll. MTV never told me to do that. They just said, 'Here's the show.'"

"You know, when television first started, Ernie Kovacs did a lot of experimental comedy," she said. "That was before the networks started research to see if their shows would appeal to people. I think research is killing a lot of good shows before they ever get on the air. It destroys innovation and originality."

Brown speaks from experience. Her pilot "Julie Brown: The Show" was broadcast by CBS last summer.

"I got amazing reviews," she said. "But the research wasn't good enough to get it on the air. Then they came up with something called 'Peaceable Kingdom.' No wonder the networks are losing their audience to cable, because cable's still willing to experiment."

"Peaceable Kingdom" was an undistinguished drama on CBS' fall schedule that died a quick and merciful death.

Brown is in her second season on MTV. Of the cable music network's three female video jockeys, two are named Julie Brown. The other is better known as "Downtown" Julie Brown.

Don't think for a moment that Brown is like her character. She did grow up in the San Fernando Valley, the Valley Girl's natural habitat, but she studied acting at the prestigious American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco. She's been a standup comic and she writes her own offbeat songs.

She and her regular writing partner, Charlie Coffey — they wrote the "Earth Girls are Easy" screenplay with Terence McNally — have several more movies in development: "Medusa: Portrait of a Pop Legend," in which Brown would play a pop music superstar, and "Totally Witchin'," a musical about a woman possessed by a witch's spirit.

Brown began doing a standup comedy act with Coffey while attending ACT in San Francisco.

"Most female comics were taking sexuality out of their acts," she said. "I thought that was a shame. Marilyn Monroe could be sexy and funny at the same time. When I started 11 years ago, a lot of women were doing self-deprecating humor — 'I can't get a date. I wasn't going to do that. I thought I was attractive.'"

"Charlie and I were very successful in San Francisco, but people in Los Angeles didn't understand our humor," she said. "Charlie left the act and I was doing a single. It's tough because you have to be aggressive with the audience. Then I began singing, and once I did that it became a whole new thing."

Brown appeared in such movies as "Any Which Way You Can" and "Police Academy 2," and was a guest on such shows as "The Jeffersons," "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Newhart," where she appeared several times as airhead weather girl Buffy Denver.

Before starting her half-hour show on MTV, she had made several guest appearances as a video jockey. In her early appearances she came on and said she was "Downtown" Julie Brown, who is black. At the time, she was promoting her album "Trapped in a White Girl's Body."

We're coming to Iowa City!

Let us introduce ourselves (maybe you've heard of us before.) We're Lands' End, and we're proud to become part of Iowa City. Our business is primarily catalog sales, but every once in a while we buy to much merchandise, or we must sell items we have discontinued in our catalog. That's where our outlets come in. We have seven in the Chicago area, two in Madison, one in Milwaukee, and now, one in Iowa City.

We sell traditional clothing, accessories, luggage, domestics, and children's clothing. We've been in business since 1963, and our monthly catalogs are sent to customers all over the United States.

We're accepting applications for full- and part-time employment RIGHT NOW at our Iowa City Lands' End outlet.

You may pick up job applications at our 10 South Clinton Street location beginning January 29 from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. For more information, give us a call at 338-2660.

LANDS' END OUTLET

An Equal Opportunity Employer

"I got amazing reviews," she said. "But the research wasn't good enough to get it on the air. Then they came up with something called 'Peaceable Kingdom.' No wonder the networks are losing their audience to cable, because cable's still willing to experiment."

"Peaceable Kingdom" was an undistinguished drama on CBS' fall schedule that died a quick and merciful death.

Brown is in her second season on MTV. Of the cable music network's three female video jockeys, two are named Julie Brown. The other is better known as "Downtown" Julie Brown.

Don't think for a moment that Brown is like her character. She did grow up in the San Fernando Valley, the Valley Girl's natural habitat, but she studied acting at the prestigious American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco. She's been a standup comic and she writes her own offbeat songs.

She and her regular writing partner, Charlie Coffey — they wrote the "Earth Girls are Easy" screenplay with Terence McNally — have several more movies in development: "Medusa: Portrait of a Pop Legend," in which Brown would play a pop music superstar, and "Totally Witchin'," a musical about a woman possessed by a witch's spirit.

Brown began doing a standup comedy act with Coffey while attending ACT in San Francisco.

"Most female comics were taking sexuality out of their acts," she said. "I thought that was a shame. Marilyn Monroe could be sexy and funny at the same time. When I started 11 years ago, a lot of women were doing self-deprecating humor — 'I can't get a date. I wasn't going to do that. I thought I was attractive.'"

"Charlie and I were very successful in San Francisco, but people in Los Angeles didn't understand our humor," she said. "Charlie left the act and I was doing a single. It's tough because you have to be aggressive with the audience. Then I began singing, and once I did that it became a whole new thing."

Brown appeared in such movies as "Any Which Way You Can" and "Police Academy 2," and was a guest on such shows as "The Jeffersons," "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Newhart," where she appeared several times as airhead weather girl Buffy Denver.

Before starting her half-hour show on MTV, she had made several guest appearances as a video jockey. In her early appearances she came on and said she was "Downtown" Julie Brown, who is black. At the time, she was promoting her album "Trapped in a White Girl's Body."

Symphony and Stradivari Quartet to collaborate in free concert at UI

Martina Brockway
The Daily Iowan

The UI Symphony Orchestra and the Stradivari String Quartet will present a free concert, marking the two groups' first collaboration together, on Wednesday, January 31, at 8 p.m. in Hancher.

The two groups will perform Benjamin Lees' Concerto for String Quartet and Orchestra. The orchestra will also play selections from Richard Wagner's mature comic opera, "Die Meistersinger"; and Robert Schumann's best known orchestral work, Symphony No. 4 in d minor. The selections from "Die Meistersinger" will include Prelude to Act III, "Dance of the Apprentices," and "The Procession of the Meistersingers."

Because of the limited repertoire of combined orchestral and string quartet music, the two groups have not played together until this program. Lees' Concerto for String Quartet and Orchestra offered an engaging piece for both groups. Lees wrote his concerto in 1964, and it was first performed by the Kansas City Philharmonic and the Paganini Quartet on Jan. 19, 1965. That same year Stradivari Quartet cellist Charles Wendt performed the concerto with the Pittsburgh

Symphony. The Stradivari Quartet has also played the concerto with the Cedar Rapids Symphony in 1973 and the Fargo-Moorhead Symphony in 1975.

The concerto is influenced by concertante works by Mozart, Haydn and Louis Spohr. Concertante works of the 18th and 19th centuries presented the string quartet as merely a series of soloists who take turns within the framework of a traditional concerto. Lees' concerto treats the quartet as a single musical unit that stands in opposition, and often clashes with the orchestra. "The audience can identify with the piece rhythmically. It appears to be a dialogue throughout the three movements, between the orchestra and the quartet," says Wendt, quartet cellist.

The second movement features a cadenza for violinist Allen Ohmes, and the third movement features each player in a solo.

The Stradivari Quartet is composed of UI School of Music faculty members, and its four current members, violinists Ohmes and Don Haines, violist William Precuil and cellist Wendt, have played together since 1974. The quartet has toured in the United States, Canada, Europe, the Soviet Union and North Africa. Their repertoire includes all the quartets of Beethoven, Mozart, Bartok and a large selection of American works.

Ohmes has served as concertmaster and soloist with the U.S. Air Force Orchestra and was a founder of the Washington, D.C., Chamber Society. He also lectured at Brooklyn College in New York. Haines has served six seasons as concertmaster of the Des Moines Symphony Orchestra and more recently was concertmaster of the Cedar Rapids Symphony.

Precuil served for three years as principal violist and soloist with the U.S. Marine Band, and at age 24 he was appointed principal violist of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the youngest person to hold this position in a major symphonic organization. Wendt has served as principal cellist of the Santa Fe Opera and assistant principal of the Pittsburgh Orchestra.

James Dixon has conducted the UI Symphony Orchestra since 1954 and has been music director and conductor of the Quad-City Symphony in Davenport since 1965. Dixon has also appeared as a guest conductor with major orchestras throughout the world, including the North German and West German radio orchestras, the national symphonies of Greece and Peru, the Minnesota Orchestra and the Chicago Symphony.

'Donahue' taping about layoff draws 2,000 in Flint, Michigan

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Phil Donahue came to town to tape a segment about the movie "Roger & Me" and came away with enough praise and criticism to fill two shows.

The satirical movie by Michael Moore depicts Flint's decline after General Motors Corp. laid off 30,000 workers.

An overwhelmingly pro-Moore crowd of about 2,000 showed up at the "Donahue" taping Monday at a city auditorium, and so many people wanted to speak that the talk show host decided to spread the tape over two shows.

Some cities got the first show live

Monday. The second segment was made available in some cities today.

"There's a minority of people in this town that's very upset the film was made. And they're not the people standing in the cheese line," said Moore, a Flint native.

A few in the audience said Moore's movie made Flint look worse than it is. "You showed the slummiest areas," one woman said.

GM, still Flint's biggest employer, was not represented at the taping. The automaker sent Donahue a statement saying the movie was unfair and inaccurate.

Bush also announced that he would withdraw all of the troops sent to Panama to oust Gen. Antonio Noriega "within the end of February."

Democrats and alike, assembled in Congress to hear the president in ovation when "One year ago, the Panama lived in fear, the thumb of a dictatorship democracy is restored free."

The troop offer was popular — and popular — of a speech in which proposed lofty goals schools and prodded to approve his plans gains tax cut and with clean air, child drugs, education issues.

In reaction, House Speaker Dan Rostenkowski said, "We are in a period of transition, great hope, uncertainty..."

"The events of the past few days have been a change so striking to the beginning of a new world's affairs."

"Think back," Bush said, "to the world as 1989 began." Since then, Communist gave way in Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia. In addition, Bush said, "America is alive."

Hours before he addressed, Bush telephoned President Mikhail Gorbachev to advise him of his proposal for U.S. and Soviet force
