De Klerk promises: ANC legalized, Mandela freed

Release conditions still being negotiated

PAARL, South Africa (AP)—Serious obstacles still block the release of Nelson Mandela, and the white-led government must be pressured into further reform before he can be freed from nearly three decades in prison, his wife said Sunday.

The government, meanwhile, warned Mandela's newly legalized African National Congress that the world would turn against the group if it continued to wage a guerrilla war.

In Pretoria, assailants shot out windows at the British Embassy, a day after right-wing graffiti was spray-painted on the building. No one was injured and no one claimed responsibility for the incidents, which may have been in retaliation for Britain's endorsement of reform announced by President F.W. de Klerk.

Mandela met with his wife, Winnie, on Sunday, two days after the government lifted numerous restrictions on the anti-apartheid movement. After the meeting, she appealed for renewed pressure on the government to force the lifting of remaining emergency restrictions.

"Unfortunately, the obstacles that were in the way, which prevented his release on Friday, still exist," she said after the four-hour visit at the Victor Verster prison farm.

"It ... doesn't depend on him when he will be released," she said. But in answer to repeated questions about the obstacles, she said Mandela still demands the complete lifting of the 3½-year-old state of emergency.

De Klerk partly lifted the emergency in a historic speech Friday in which he legalized the African National Congress, placed a moratorium on executions and lifted restrictions on hundreds of individuals and scores of anti-apartheid organizations.

De Klerk's actions met many, but not all, of the conditions the ANC and Mandela had set for the start of negotiations to end apartheid and give the voteless black majority a voice in the government.

Under the emergency regulations that remain in effect, the government can detain anyone for up to six months without charge, and police have wide powers to ban meetings or speeches and restrict television or photo coverage of their own actions in dealing with political unrest.

De Klerk issued a statement through government-run radio Sunday night responding to comments from ANC officials that the guerrilla campaign would continue. If that happened, de Klerk was quoted as saying, "The world would turn against them."

Anti-government protesters jubilate at a rally this weekend in Alexandra, South Africa, after state President de Klerk announced the unbanning of anti-apartheid organizations.

He said that his speech Friday to Parliament "had removed these organizations' grounds for violence." He also promised that any changes in the constitution would be put to a vote, and said he understood "fears might arise as a result of his speech because renewal always brought uncertainty."

Harry Gwala, an ANC colleague of Mandela's who was released from prison in 1988 for medical reasons, said Sunday that de Klerk's moves Following promises of sweeping political changes in the South African government, one former UI student and current South African resident said social and racial conditions in her country are already changing — for the better.

Michelle Murgatroyd, a UI field hockey player until her graduation in December 1989, said although the dry African heat sometimes makes living uncomfortable, the hope most South Africans (both black and white) have for black equality in a white-dominated state offers some consolation to the extreme in temperature.

Since her return to Pretoria slightly over one month ago, Murgatroyd has divided her time between job-hunting and traveling, she said in a telephone interview Sunday evening.

Despite the harried pace of her lifestyle, she said people everywhere are feeling the effects of South African President F.W. de Klerk's declaration to legalize anti-apartheid groups and release 27-year political prisoner Nelson Mandela.

"I'm definitely not a typical South African," Murgatroyd said. "I'm pro-black more than anything else."

Murgatroyd said a number of her friends at the UI were black, and she contrasts her experience in the United States with that in her homeland.

"It's very different here because a lot of things have been opened to blacks, coloreds and Indians, which were restricted before," she said.

The legalization of the African National Congress after more than 30 years of guerrilla warfare against white rule and the release of prisoners belonging to opposition groups coincides with changes in the collective social attitude that have historically Promised changes in the South African government inspired about 40 people to march through the streets of Iowa City Friday night.

South African president F.W. de Klerk announced early Friday that he plans to legalize anti-apartheid political parties, free Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, and legalize the African National Congress.

Soviets clamor for major party reforms

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of cheering protesters filled the broad streets of the capital Sunday to demand that the Communists surrender their stranglehold on power, perhaps the biggest protest in Moscow since the Bolshevik Revolution.

The huge gathering came on the eve of a party Central Committee meeting during which President Mikhail Gorbachev is expected to propose that other parties be allowed to compete for power, a move likely to spur an intense struggle between hard-liners and reformers.

The crowd waved huge white-red-and-blue flags of pre-revolutionary Russia and held signs warning party officials to "Remember Romania," where a bloody revolt last year toppled the Stalinist regime of Nicolae Ceausescu.

The masses stopped next to Red Square for a gigantic rally that was meant to influence the pivotal Communist Party plenary meeting that opens Monday.

"This plenum is the party's last chance," declared Boris Yeltsin, a populist Communist leader who promised to place the crowd's demands before the 251-member Central Committee.

Others, harkening to the revolution that overthrew the czar in February 1917 before being swept away by Lenin eight months later, said a new revolution was under way.

"Long live the beginning of the peaceful, non-violent revolution of February 1990!" historian Yuri Afanasiev told the cheering crowd.

Some demonstrators at the head of the rally chanted "Politburo resign!" Others whistled in derision when they passed the Moscow City Council headquarters on Gorky Street.

Trucks blocked Moscow's Garden Ring Road for the marchers who linked arms next to Gorky Park and completely filled eight lanes of traffic, stretching back more than half a mile. Cordons of uniformed police blocked cars elsewhere, turning the center of Moscow into a virtual pedestrian mall.

In all, the march and rally lasted for about five hours before participants began to disperse. Police observed the peaceful proceedings in the historic heart of the capital, but there were no reports of any disturbances.

According to published reports, party leader Gorbachev will propose to the Central Committee that the party give up the guarantee of power that was written into the Soviet Constitution in 1977.

The Radio Moscow news service Interfax also said Gorbachev was

Post-it note creator stuck to invention despite doubt

MAPLEWOOD, Minn. (AP) — It was in 1974 that 3M scientist Art Fry, sitting through a boring church sermon, concocted the idea of self-sticking yellow notes, that could be removed without a trace, for use in his choir hymnbooks.

It took him four years to convince his superiors at 3M the idea would sell. Two years later, in April 1980, Post-it notes premiered, and America has been stuck on them since.

"Initial enthusiasm for a piece of note paper with adhesive on the back wasn't overwhelming," Fry said of his battle to persuade his superiors.

Now, a decade after the product hit the market, many Americans wonder how they got along without the yellow squares they stick to reports, folders, desks, computers, telephones and refrigerators.

"I had a lot of confidence that it would be a lot bigger than everyone predicted, but not this big," Fry said.

Fry, 58, was born in Owatonna, Minn., grew up in Iowa and attended the University of Minnesota, where he earned a chemical engineering degree. He started working at 3M 35 years ago as a junior at the university.

Now the equivalent of a division vice president, Fry still works out of the same small corner office he moved into shortly after he devised Post-it notes. His desk is full of messages written on them.

For Fry, the idea of sticky paper was a solution to an annoyance that seemed to occur every Sunday at North Presbyterian Church in North St. Paul.

"I don't know if it was a dull sermon or divine inspiration, but my mind began to wander, and suddenly I thought of an adhesive that had been discovered years earlier by another 3M scientist," he said.

In an attempt to produce a strong glue, that scientist, Spencer Silver, accidentally made an adhesive strong enough to hold paper but easily removable. No one found a use for the glue until Fry had his impulse.

Caucus demands increased HIV/AIDS services

Amy Davoux
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Legislature received a $1.5 million funding request last week from the Iowa Lesbian and Gay political caucus.

The caucus is demanding increased HIV/AIDS services in Iowa.

Caucus co-chairwoman Linda Yanney of Iowa City said the funding is needed to assist HIV-infected individuals to pay for costly services including medication, transportation, medical, laboratory, x-ray, dental and support services.

The proposal also includes a $20,000 request to create an Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome advisory committee in the state.

Yanney said the caucus asked for the funds because the state has an economic responsibility to take care of its citizens — 167 of which have died from conditions relating to AIDS.

The fatal disease is caused by Human Immunodeficiency Virus which weakens the body's immune system and leaves them vulnerable to opportunistic diseases like pneumonia.

"We believe that putting money in now to keep people healthy and in the work force will be beneficial later," she said.

Iowa is one of only eight states which has not yet created state HIV/AIDS funding, Yanney added.

"Funding is crucial for Iowa because the population is getting older, yet AIDS is affecting the younger generation and those people that need to be kept in the work force," she said.

The caucus requested $700,000 for medication appropriations because treatment medications such as zidovudine, and aerosolized pentamidine generally run from $650 to $800 monthly.

This funding would also cover medications used to treat various infections and disease complications.

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, the survival rate of AIDS patients treated with zidovudine is 21.3 months with and 13.9 without.

Appropriations totaling $200,000 for medical, laboratory and x-ray services were requested for diagnosis of treatable infections and monitoring medication responses.

One hundred thousand dollars were requested for dental expenses because HIV/AIDS patients often suffer from dental problems and Ah, politics!

Election-year concerns have many legislators preoccupied

Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — This may be the year they had a legislative session and no one cared — especially the Legislature.

There's a distinct lack of passion around the Statehouse this year and a strong feeling that most of the players would rather be somewhere else. Make that anywhere else.

Lawmakers know full well that the battleground isn't at the Statehouse this year, and the real dragons they need to slay are back home on 150 different campaign trails.

They are clearly distracted, and there's a feeling of impatience and pettiness afoot in the ornate old building. It manifests itself in ways that are occasionally amusing but more often vicious.

The Senate took precisely 20 minutes to legalize interstate banking and end a decade-long fight because everybody knew the fix was in, the deal had been made and it made absolutely no sense to argue.

A House committee voted to let government workers bargain for an expanded list of topics without any debate at all as both sides decided not to waste their breath fighting about it.

A budget committee approved a bill containing restrictions on using tax money to pay for abortions, without anyone mentioning abortion. A House committee debated another bill guaranteeing women access to clinics; the debate was almost over before anyone used the word "abortion."

Analysis

Most days, legislators spend hours sitting at their desks staring at reporters sitting at the press benches staring back.

One Senate committee was so distracted it voted to send a bill to the full Senate for debate only to be told by staffers they had approved the same bill a few days earlier.

The confusion isn't limited to lawmakers. When Democrats last week announced a prison expansion program, Richard Vohs, Gov. Terry Branstad's press secretary, denounced it in terms strong enough to suggest he thought legislators should be in prison, not debating prisons.

A few minutes later, Branstad said he was encouraged by the plan and wanted to take a look at it.

No, more than ever, this year is the session of the deal, of the "let's work it out" approach. Most legislators tell the opposing interest groups to work out their differences and come up with something the Legislature can live with.

The interstate banking bill was written in House Speaker Don Avenson's office by lawyers for financial interest groups, as legislators drifted in and out to check on the progress.

A gun control package is being written by lobbyists for outdoor groups, the National Rifle Association and one pro-gun control legislator. Most legislators were surprised by press reports that first, they were going to have to vote on a gun control package and, second, they could vote for it without making anybody mad.

There is one topic that gets everyone's blood racing, and that's politics. The Secretary of State's office is becoming a popular hangout as legislators wander in to see who is taking out nominating petitions. Traffic will grow geometrically as the March filing deadline nears.

Sandra Steinbach, director of elections, has broken more hearts than a starlet, simply by telling legislators they really do have an opponent.

Word that a legislator has gotten an opponent spreads like wildfire, and others spend hours dissecting the development.

When former Sen. Milo Colton announced he would challenge incumbent Democratic Sen. Al Sturgeon in a primary, and also mentioned Sturgeon's troubles with a legislative sex scandal and a paternity suit, little else was discussed.

Incumbent U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin and Republican challenger Tom Tauke released their financial disclosure forms last week, and envious legislators gathered around to cluck and marvel over the millions they'd raised.

Branstad, meanwhile, pops up at the Statehouse for a weekly news conference and a couple of photo opportunities and then heads back out on the campaign trail, where he spends most of his time.

A lot of Democrats are similarly distracted. Avenson spends time attending Democratic gubernatorial debates, which seem to be happening every night, and having "regular meetings with reporters" just about every day.

By the end of the session's fourth week, about the only topic that hasn't been explored is Avenson's view on the internal conflict in Zimbabwe. Maybe next week.

Lt. Gov. JoAnn Zimmerman spends less time at the Statehouse, but more time dropping news releases on reporters' desks.

All in all, it's beginning to look a lot like an election.

2 drug dealers may have used state loans

COUNCIL BLUFFS (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to a drug trafficking charge and another found guilty of laundering drug money received a total of $400,000 in state business loans, with one loan resulting in the state taking a loss of $229,000.

"Obviously, we're not real thrilled with this project," said Michael Miller, chief of the Iowa Department of Economic Development's bureau of business grants and loans.

Although officials say there is no evidence that state money was diverted to drug deals, the loans made by companies headed by Kenneth Jerry Martin, 55, of Council Bluffs, and Lewis Dyke, 35, of Valley, Ne., have embarrassed state development officials who are already busy fending off legislative efforts to curtail the loan and grant program.

The $229,000 loss is one of the largest to date in a controversial state program that provides loans for economic development.

Last week, a jury found Martin guilty of one count of laundering $15,000 in marijuana money. He was found innocent of two other charges in what federal prosecutors termed a major drug ring that brought more than a ton and a half of marijuana from Arizona to the Omaha - Council Bluffs area during a period of about four years.

Martin still faces a trial on a cocaine conspiracy charge.

Dyke pleaded guilty earlier to one count of conspiring to distribute cocaine. He awaits sentencing and has become a primary government witness against Martin and others charged in the drug case.

The government contends that McMartin Industries, a small manufacturer of radio and sound equipment, of which Martin was president, used stock in the company to launder marijuana money. He was ousted from his position following the verdict.

State officials say they expect to recover all of the $150,000 they lent to McMartin Industries in June 1987. The state is requiring full repayment because the firm has fallen far short of its promise to create 150 new jobs.

Dyke's company, which was loaned $250,000, was called Applied Technology Telemarketing Inc. and got the state money to move to Council Bluffs. Dyke promised that Iowa would gain 100 jobs, but it went out of business abruptly last March.

"We didn't smell a rat," said Miller. "We heard rumors. You can't pull money back from somebody based on a rumor."

Keokuk School District purchases earthquake insurance

The Associated Press

An Iowa school district is already covered in case the Big One hits, and now one of the state's 99 counties is thinking about getting its own earthquake insurance policy.

Far-fetched as that may sound, Keokuk Superintendent John Galacher does not think the $6,000 policy the southeast Iowa district took out in October was wasted money.

"I think there's a reasonable degree of risk," he said.

In the last 15 years, scientists have begun considering the possibility of a major Midwestern earthquake, said Michael Coe, earthquake program manager for the Missouri State Emergency Management Agency in Jefferson City.

The three worst quakes ever to hit North America occurred in 1811 and 1812 along the New Madrid Fault, a rift that starts in New Madrid, Mo.

A Lone Tree, Iowa, man was charged with forgery Friday after he allegedly charged $203.43 worth of gas to a charge account he was not authorized to use, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Vincent L. Owen, 21, RR 2, periodically charged gas from August to November 1989 before the gas station employees discovered he was using the account illegally, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for February 20, according to court records.

Chewing may use insanity defense

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Insanity may be used as defense in the April trial of accused murderer Frank Chewing, according to his attorney, who also announced Wednesday that evidence against Chewing was obtained illegally by Iowa officials.

Chewing, 42, of Monmouth, Ill., was charged with second-degree murder after his 43-year-old wife, Dianne Chewing, was found dead at the University Inn, Hwy. 6 West, Coralville, last October. Chewing was arrested in early November by Ogden, Utah, police.

Attorney Patrick Peters filed a motion to suppress the evidence obtained through police interrogations on the grounds that they violated his constitutional rights, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Chewing was arrested by two Ogden city police officers conducting routine checks on transients in the downtown area after he reportedly fled the state of Iowa.

He was then extradited to Iowa. This arrest was not based on a reasonable belief that Chewing had committed a crime, according to Peters' motion to suppress.

Furthermore, interrogations by Iowa officials after his arrest were unconstitutional.

Chewing did not "knowingly and intelligently" waive his rights under the Fifth, Sixth and 14th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, according to the motion to suppress.

Peters also filed notice that he may rely on the defense of insanity at Chewing's trial.

Johnson County District Court Judge Thomas Koehler granted a motion asking for a state-paid psychiatric evaluation in January.

Peters intends to call Iowa City psychiatrist Vernon Varner to testify as an expert witness about the results of this evaluation at Chewing's trial, according to court records.

Hearing on the motion to suppress is set for March 8.

Peters also filed motions to close Chewing's suppression hearing to the public and to bring Chewing's Ogden, Utah, attorney, Martin Gravis, to Johnson County to testify.

Hearing on these matters is scheduled for today.

Chewing's trial is set for April 2.

Burge will lose 367 beds next year

Jennifer Ritzinger
The Daily Iowan

Burge Residence Hall, the most densely populated dormitory on campus, will reduce the number of students who will live in the building next August.

The change is a result of lower demand for on-campus housing by incoming freshmen, according to George Droll, director of residence services.

"The decreasing of the residence system is due primarily to the reduced demand by new freshmen for on-campus housing," Droll said.

More than three hundred beds will be taken out of Burge, leaving only 914. Most of the triple rooms will be reduced to double rooms, double rooms reduced to singles, and 12 quad rooms will remain.

The 367-bed reduction has been in the planning for more than 10 years, according to Pam Boersig, assistant director for Clinton Street Residence Halls.

"The de-tripling of Burge has been on the planning stage forever," Boersig said. "This isn't something new. This was a planned-for type of event."

With fewer people in the building, Boersig said Burge should be a more manageable community.

"It's easier to develop a community with less people," she said. "Our hope is that (the reduction will) cut down on noise and vandalism with the theory: If you have less people, you're going to have less problems."

Corey Ferris, Burge hall coordinator, agrees with Boersig.

"With less people and less resident assistants in the building, there should be less vandalism and less disciplinary problems," Ferris said.

One resident assistant in Burge, Jodi Bauers, thinks the lower number of residents "will be an advantage because each RA will have a lower number of residents so that it will be easier to create a community on each floor and within the building."

"Next year, (Burge) will have some returning residents, thus cutting down on the number of freshmen," Bauers added. "By increasing the number of upper classmen and decreasing the number of residents, the overall atmosphere of the building will change and the myth that Burge is a continual party will finally be broken."

Another advantage of the reduction is the new amount of room the residents are going to be able to enjoy, Ferris said.

"The plan is exciting because people will have more privacy, more personal space," Ferris said.

As current Burge resident Martin Garret put it: "I think it's bad the student population is going down, but it is good there is going to be more space; the rooms are small enough."

Feminist perspectives may be gaining increased respect and understanding through the broad range of courses offered through the UI Women's Studies program.

The multi-disciplinary program is accommodating students interested in the study of women and gender in culture, society and history.

Women's Studies Director Martha Chamallas said graduate students, business majors and liberal arts majors are finding the program of benefit to their future professional lives.

"Many are interested in cultural diversity," Chamallas said. "Graduate students take these courses because they find that concentration on women and gender is an interesting path to take. It gives them information they need to look at fields from the feminist's perspective," she said.

Feminist thought has infiltrated all areas of society and academic areas including literature, history, anthropology and the law, she said.

Many of the classes offered in the program are cross-listed under other departments and may fulfill credit for another department or GER.

"We have a very exciting curriculum because it is one course of study that introduces numbers of ways to think about women in the United States and the world both cross-culturally and in interdisciplinary ways," Chamallas said.

Chamallas advises students to complete introductory courses like Introduction to Women's Studies and Feminist Theory before pursuing a Women's Studies degree.

"These courses are foundational courses which lay a background for the rest of the courses and also help students decide if they would like to continue or not," Chamallas said.

The UI does not offer a Women's Studies major, and many students opt to put together their own major under a General Studies certificate, Chamallas said.

"One of our goals is for it to be a major. Many schools have this already," Chamallas said.

She added students may complete a minor degree in Women's Studies by completing 15 semester hours in the department, with at least 12 hours of 100-level courses.

The program on women's studies began in 1974 with Margaret McDowell as the first director. McDowell, with other UI faculty, introduced women's studies courses in 1971. These first courses were administered by the Affirmative Action office.

"Women's study got its start by meetings held every Sunday at the Women's Center, which is now the Women's Resource and Action Center. The center had no furniture yet, so we used to sit on the floor for three hours every week," McDowell said.

The Women's Studies program works with other interdisciplinary programs.

oral diseases. Eight hundred thousand dollars was requested to cover travel expenses to and from Iowa medical centers equipped to handle HIV/AIDS cases. Specialized care is now available in Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Des Moines, Dubuque and Iowa City. At present, the UI Hospitals and Clinics have the highest level of care within the Iowa region, Yanney said. The allotment also includes $400,000 for local support services. Support services alleviate unnecessary hospitalizations which could be better handled by programs such as emergency housing assistance, buddy programs, counseling services, nursing and social work services, and information/referral services, Yanney said. The caucus feels an AIDS Advisory Committee is essential to oversee the development of administrative rules and awarding of grants under this proposal, and is requesting $20,000 funding for its expenses. The Caucus proposes the formation of a group of representatives from medical, social work and social services, community-based AIDS service organizations, the gay or lesbian community, and black and/or Hispanic communities to work with HIV-infected persons. Yanney said she believed the caucus' $1.5 million request was "modest." "We've consulted many different sources to determine where funds are needed and how they could be distributed," she said. Because the Iowa Legislature is currently in the appropriations process, Yanney said it will be three to four weeks before the proposal's success can be determined.

"What we're asking is for the Iowa Legislature to respond in the way Iowans always respond — 'we take care of our own,'" Yanney said. "People with HIV are our own, and we need to take care of them." Recent Iowa Department of Public Health statistics recognize 167 cases of AIDS within the state. The caucus added that this figure is only representative of diagnosed cases. They estimate that this figure could jump to over 1,000 if it included undiagnosed HIV-infected individuals and those who have recently moved to the state.

Both blacks and whites, among them a number of UI South African students, marched from the Iowa City Downtown Pedestrian Mall to Old Brick, 26 E. Clinton St., in response to the announcement.

"To those who are fighting, those who are supporting us, the oppressed people of South Africa, I say further on and further on and further on, and count our steps one by one. For the sake of our country, we must go further on and further on. Amandla," said South African Phambile Ntloko.

March organizer William Langeveldt left Vryburg, South Africa in 1986 to pursue a doctorate degree in education at the UI.

"We are expressing our joy and gratitude for the upcoming release of Mandela, for our political organizations being unbanned and the freeing of the exiles," Langeveldt said.

South Africans want a new constitution and free elections, with one vote for each person, he added.

The marchers said Mandela should be released to act as a mediator between the government and the different political groups.

They sang the South African National Anthem and other songs in Zulu while carrying signs that called for the release of Nelson Mandela and freedom in South Africa.

One UI student said, "I don't know what they're singing, but it's beautiful."

Zodwa Dlamini, UI South African Student Association vice-president, said, "It's a freedom song, there are many songs like this."

At Old Brick, there was a short prayer, "Cry freedom, Oh Lord, Cry Freedom."

The prayer was followed by a number of speakers and the audience responded at the end of each speech with the chant "Amandla, Ngwetu" (Power to the People).

Dlamini said she found de Klerk's plans to free Mandela and legalize black political organizations hard to believe.

She discounted de Klerk's goodwill in the changes and said the efforts of the black population motivated the reforms.

"Whatever is going on today is not because de Klerk is so generous, or maybe that he loves us, oh no," Dlamini said. "There has been death. Blood has flowed in many streets in South Africa."

Ntloko came to Iowa on Monday on an exchange program in labor education from Johannesburg, South Africa. He spent five years in prison with Mandela and was 17 when he was arrested during a mid-1970s student uprising, he said.

Ntloko said the years in prison were a "blessing in disguise" because they allowed him to consider his role in the South African freedom movement.

"It was a shock to people like Mandela that young boys like us were to carry the struggle and be in the position to face the bullets and stand without fear," Ntloko said. "When you go out, you know you are living another life. Who is sentenced like Mandela? For life?"

"You know that if you don't continue to fight, he is going to remain there for the rest of his life. And you have shared with him that fate, you have become one thing in that fate," Ntloko said.

Several marchers said they felt de Klerk's plans were inevitable because of the efforts blacks in South Africa made to bring about the changes he proposed.

"We are securing our victory step by step, by whatever means and whatever ways to reach that goal. We are determined to make the dream reality in our lifetime... our people must continue and redouble their efforts until our struggle is over. I am feeling the excitement, but this struggle is not yet over," Ntloko said.

were dramatic for whites but appeared intended to bypass the black opposition's basic demands.

"The context within which the unbanned organizations are meant to operate is still essentially unchanged," Gwala said. "An array of oppressing legislation like the Internal Security Act and the state of emergency are still in place. Detention without trial, irrespective of the length of time, remains a completely unjustified attack on the force for democracy and peace."

Mandela, 71, was jailed in 1962 and is serving a life sentence for helping to plan the start of the ANC's sabotage and bombing campaign against the government.

De Klerk said the government will free Mandela as soon as possible. He mentioned safety and personal considerations as reasons for what he said would be a short delay.

"The onus is on Mr. de Klerk," Winnie Mandela told journalists. "We are back to where we have to put pressure on the government."

She said Mandela was preparing a reaction to de Klerk's speech to Parliament, but she didn't know when it would be made public because "he remains a prisoner."

Mandela was visited by his wife alone. When she emerged from the meeting, a few excited local black residents shouted, "Viva, Mandela," and danced with joy. A small squad of prison guards in brown fatigues with automatic rifles stood guard at the gate.

"Suffice to say, I am, of course, extremely disappointed I am not bringing him along with me to go home to his family," she said before leaving for Johannesburg.

On her return to Johannesburg, she said the document being prepared by her husband on de Klerk's speech would indicate the circumstances under which he would be released. "In that statement, he will also indicate when his release is to be expected," she said.

Sunday newspapers reported that sources close to the African National Congress are saying the guerrilla organization is discussing a prisoner swap with the government.

Murgatroyd

divided South Africa, Murgatroyd said. "Now, most of those laws have been abolished and black people can really go anywhere and do most of the things white people do," Murgatroyd said. "It's great to see this and to know that, at last, these people who are in the majority of the population are having some of the oppression lifted from them."

In the past, blacks were not allowed in restaurants or on beaches, and up until 5 years ago there were still areas in which anyone who was not white could not live, Murgatroyd said. "In almost all areas now, you can see black people and colored people moving in," she said.

While some restrictions still nurture the tradition of apartheid in unwritten, unspoken fashion, Murgatroyd said a widespread move for social equality has been the prevailing attitude in later days.

"More white people are accepting and welcoming the changes, though there are those who are very much opposed," she said. "There are those people who will always be opposed, but the more conditions are equalized the more people are going to accept them — they have to."

Murgatroyd had recently returned from a 17-hour road trip to Capetown — a coastal city some 700 miles southwest of Pretoria — and said news of de Klerk's intention to release Mandela and institute radical governmental changes brought cheers from students demonstrating in the city streets.

Students and citizens protesting in Capetown's Greenmarket Square early last week were suddenly jubilant by de Klerk's proposal Friday to respond to some of their longstanding requests, Murgatroyd said.

"After the President's speech, they were praising some of the changes that had taken place," she said. "Some of the changes were really bold moves by the government that no one had really expected."

These changes in the social condition of South Africa could bring about improvements in the country's faltering economic system, Murgatroyd said.

"I'm definitely not a typical South African."

Blacks, who compose the majority of both the population and the unskilled work force, are always the first to be laid off from their positions, she said.

Murgatroyd said the lack of blue-collar workers has brought an exponential increase in the rate of inflation and has raised the price of goods and services tremendously.

De Klerk's cessation of a general state of emergency, however, may help to bring the economy back to an even keel, she speculated.

"We get a lot of things from America and Europe... And other countries' boycotting (South African politics) is definitely related to rising costs," she said. "We all hope that sometime in the near future things will get better here and sanctions will be lifted."

planning structural reforms that would reduce the size of the Central Committee and possibly eliminate the ruling Politburo. He also was expected to give tacit approval to the concept of private property.

The proposals are in the form of a draft platform to be placed before a congress, theoretically the Communist Party's highest body, that now is scheduled for this fall.

Many Moscow observers expected a concerted effort from conservatives in the Central Committee to stop the reforms they believe have brought the Soviet Union to economic ruin and ethnic strife.

At least some in the crowd had doubts whether Gorbachev is committed to radical reforms. "Mikhail Sergeyevich, whom are you with?" one sign asked.

Yeltsin and other reformers, speaking to the crowd gathered in front of the Moscow Hotel from the back of a blue flat-bed truck, demanded that the party and government talk with them about the Soviet Union's future, as Communist leaders have been forced to do as changes have swept the former Soviet satellites.

Guerrillas attack busload of Israelis to vindicate alleged prisoner torture

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Masked guerrillas armed with guns and grenades attacked a bus carrying 31 Israeli tourists on a desert road to Cairo Sunday, killing at least eight people and wounding 17, officials said.

An unidentified man telephoned the Cairo bureau of a Western news agency and said the attack was to punish President Hosni Mubarak and security officials for the alleged torture in Egyptian prisons.

It was the worst attack on Israelis in Egypt since 1985 and the deadliest single act of terror in the nation since Moslem extremists killed President Anwar Sadat and seven others with him on a parade viewing stand on Oct. 6, 1981.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, speaking in a telephone interview with Israel TV, said the attack "proves that hostility toward Israel still exists and runs amok in the region."

Mubarak telephoned Shamir and issued a statement that said he regretted "the monstrous aggression against Israeli tourists." He said the attack was aimed at thwarting efforts for Middle East peace, said the government-run Middle East News Agency, or MENA.

Egypt, the only Arab country to have peace with Israel, has been mediating efforts to get talks started between Israeli officials and representatives of Palestinians who have waged a 2-year-old uprising against Israeli rule of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The bus was carrying 31 Israelis to Cairo from Rafah, a divided town on the Egypt-Israel border in the Sinai Peninsula, when it was attacked near the Suez Canal town of Ismailia, 40 miles from the capital, said a statement issued by the Egyptian government.

Two men in a white Peugeot station wagon stopped the bus, got out of the car and opened fire with machine guns, then hurled four hand grenades before fleeing. Two grenades exploded, said the statement carried by MENA.

The government account was similar to that of a witness, Miriam Kadmon, who was quoted by Israel army radio.

The gunmen spoke Arabic with non-Egyptian accents, the Egyptian government statement said, suggesting they were either Palestinian or from other Arab countries.

Israel's armed forces radio said a caller speaking to a Western news agency in Cairo claimed responsibility on behalf of the Organization for the Defense of Oppressed in Egyptian Prisons, a previously unknown group.

The government statement said eight people were killed and 17 wounded, but it was unclear on the victims' nationalities. It said the dead, taken to hospitals in Cairo and Ismailia, included three women.

Israel Television reported 15 dead and six wounded, quoting Israeli sources in Cairo.

MENA issued a partial list of the wounded, including 13 Israelis and Egyptian tour guide Wadia Gamil Sorial, 27. Unconfirmed reports said the tour guide and the bus driver, also an Egyptian, were killed.

MENA said Egypt's interior minister, Abdel-Halim Mousa, who is in charge of police, rushed to the scene with other senior security officials.

Israel television said Israeli armed forces prepared a special plane to evacuate the wounded from Cairo.

Mubarak telephoned Shamir to express condolences to families of the victims. Mubarak "stressed that nothing should ever obstruct the peace process but (this incident) should be an incentive for going ahead... to reach a final settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict," MENA said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman George Malleck said, "This horrible act of terrorism is to be condemned by civilized people everywhere" and called it an "attempt by the enemies of peace to halt efforts at reconciliation and dialogue."

He said the U.S. Embassy was in contact with Egyptian authorities and offered medical assistance.

Israel army radio said the bus belonged to an Egyptian tourist company identified as Santa Maria.

The tour was organized by Ofakim, an Israeli tourist company. Albert Levy, an Ofakim manager, said the Israelis had begun an eight-day tour of Egypt. He said 12 members of the group were residents of Mevasseret-Ziyyon, a suburb of Jerusalem.

Slovenia ready to protest

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia — Slovenia's liberal Communist Party broke away from the national Communist Party Sunday, declaring that they no longer recognize the institution that has ruled Yugoslavia since World War II.

The move followed disputes over the pace of democratic reform, a virtual trade war between relatively affluent Slovenia and arch-rival Serbia, the largest and most populous of Yugoslavia's six republics.

The break from the nation by the Slovenian party is the first formal party schism since Communists took power in 1945.

In Sunday's emergency session, the Slovenian party also adopted its name and called for the release of all political prisoners, an end to all political trials and talks between Yugoslav Communists and leaders of newly formed opposition parties.

Slovenia's Communist Party leader, Ciril Ribicic, said the party was not seeking secession from Yugoslavia but the end of a Yugoslav constitution that restricts central authority.

Walesa to leave union might enter government

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said he probably will step down in April as leader of the union, founded as a shipyard election and ultimately led into the government.

Walesa, 46, who has served as leader of the East bloc's independent trade union since its founding in 1980, made the announcement during a speech before supporters after a Mass in his home city of Gdansk.

At one point during the rally, Brygida's Church, Walesa interrupted by heckling a group of about 50 young radicals.

Walesa has often spoken about his desire to retire from the burly union. Some people around him suspect he is preparing to bid for Poland's presidency, replacing Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, if Poland's constitution altered this year requiring presidential elections.

"I am publicly saying that I am not running for leadership in a regional congress (scheduled for next week in Gdansk) and, most importantly, at the national level either," Walesa said.

He had told a news conference Thursday that he was "tired" of his activity and would like to rest for at least two years. He stressed that if radicals threaten to take over Solidarity, he would stay in the job.

Solidarity's national congress, set to meet in April in Gdansk, will be only the second in the union's history. The congress managed to hold one congress in September and October before it was suppressed by martial-law crackdown.

Walesa led the union into a series of talks with the Communist government that led to the union's re-legalization last year, its participation in elections and the end of its control of the government.

Since it was legalized, its membership has reached about 2 million, or only one-fifth of its strength.

Regional congresses have been held in various cities over the past two months to select delegates to the national congress.

After Walesa made his comments about not running for union leadership, some of the young radicals applauded and began chanting "Solidarity Without Walesa."

The radicals represented the Federation for an Independent Poland, the Federation of Polish Youth and a self-styled group of "anarchists."

The protesters, using a bulletin board, accused Walesa of limiting democracy. One of the youths shouted, "If you continue like this you end up like Ceausescu."

Asked by spectators about his opinion on the daylong takeover of Gdansk province Communist headquarters last weekend, Walesa said:

"This is not the right way. The government will use force in the face of anarchy and danger. It must do so. If there is a threat to the state or the city, then I will put myself with my belt and buckle on."

"You cannot play with Poland. You have to build it," he said. "I will continue with such methods until I get nowhere, because general may explode and advantage of the situation."

Slovenia rejects Communism to protest Yugoslav authority

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Slovenia's liberal Communists on Sunday broke away from the national Communist Party and declared that they no longer recognize the institution that has ruled Yugoslavia since World War II.

The move followed disputes over the pace of democratic reform and a virtual trade war between the relatively affluent republic of Slovenia and arch-rival Serbia, the largest and most populous of Yugoslavia's six republics.

The break from the national party by the Slovenian party was the first formal party schism since the Communists took power in 1945.

In Sunday's emergency meeting, the Slovenian party also changed its name and called for the release of all political prisoners, an end to all political trials and immediate talks between Yugoslav Communists and leaders of newly formed opposition parties.

Slovenia's Communist Party president, Ciril Ribicic, said the new party was not seeking secession from Yugoslavia but the establishment of a Yugoslav confederation that restricts central authority.

"This is the end of the League of Communists of Yugoslavia, in which Slovenian Communists had the status of an unequal minority," said Ribicic, using the formal name of the national party.

The national party "doesn't exist any more for us," said Petar Bekes, another Slovenian party leader.

Slovenian Communists have moved quickly in the past three years to create a pluralistic political system in the republic. Their reforms have been criticized harshly in Serbia, where the ruling Communist hardliners demand continued national Communist Party dominance.

Slovenian Communists stormed out of a national party congress last month after Serbian-led hardliners rejected reforms.

The national party said the congress was indefinitely adjourned, but Slovenian leaders said Sunday they are not returning.

"We do not want to be a part of an old-style dogmatic organization such as Yugoslavia's League of Communists," Bekes told reporters. He said, however, that the Slovenian Communists "will remain open for cooperation with all democratic-orientated forces" in other Yugoslav republics.

He said Slovenia from now on will have no representatives in the national Communist leadership, but is open to form a coalition with the federal leadership on the national level.

Slovenian Communists have expressed increasing frustration at resistance to reform by the national party as Slovenia prepares for multiparty elections.

"This is not the right way. Every government will use force in the face of anarchy and danger and must do so. If there is a threat to the state or the city, then I will get up myself with my belt and beat you."

"You cannot play with Poland. You have to build it," he said. "If we continue with such methods we will get nowhere, because some general may explode and take advantage of the situation."

East German party releases assets

WEST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's Communist Party on Sunday changed its name and promised to hand over $600 million in assets to the government in an apparent attempt to improve its image ahead of coming elections.

Also Sunday, West Germany's foreign minister promised to seek immediate financial aid to stabilize East Germany's economy while it adopts democratic reforms that could lead to reunification.

Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who was born near Halle in what is now East Germany, also told a political rally in East Berlin that European neighbors have nothing to fear from a united Germany.

In pursuit of unification, Bonn appears willing to swear off future claims to ethnic German regions that are now part of Poland, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

Leaders of East Germany's disgraced Communist Party met and formally changed its name to the Party of Democratic Socialism. It previously had been known as the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

The party also said it will hand over $600 million from its private reserves to government coffers because the "country's economic situation requires such support," the government news agency ADN reported.

ADN said the money came from party dues and party-owned businesses such as printing operations. It did not say what the party's total reserves are.

The moves were the latest attempt by the Communists to shore up their image ahead of the March 18 elections. The first free balloting in the nation's 40-year history was made possible by a pro-democracy revolution last year that ousted hardline Communist Party chief Erich Honecker on October 18.

The Communists, who dominate the current interim government headed by Premier Hans Modrow, are widely blamed for the nation's economic problems.

Genscher, noting the dire state of the East German economy, said Bonn will have to help its struggling neighbor provide health care and basic goods and services for its increasingly restive citizens.

West Germany also is considering other measures to help East Germany.

SOUTH AFRICA

Buying time

South African President F.W. de Klerk's dramatic announcement last week of sweeping reforms to end that nation's "season of violence" shook South Africa and grabbed international headlines, but de Klerk's risky reforms may be designed to impede, not accelerate, the pace of major change.

The extent of de Klerk's reform package — which included the legalization of the banned African National Congress and a pledge to release jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela — surpassed all previous concessions by the ruling National Party and risked serious backlash from de Klerk's conservative supporters.

But the reforms, especially the imminent release of Mandela, may also provide a facade of appeasement while subtly slowing the pace of the reform process, buying the National Party crucial time to secure white sovereignty in a future power-sharing government system.

But the reforms, especially the imminent release of Mandela, may also provide a facade of appeasement while subtly slowing the pace of the reform process, buying the National Party crucial time to secure white sovereignty in a future power-sharing government system.

In the meantime, by legalizing the ANC, de Klerk has either neutralized its potent guerrilla tactics or exposed it to the "legitimate" authority of South African law. Welcoming leaders of formerly banned organizations through the "open door" to the negotiating table includes an implicit warning that outlaw guerrilla tactics will no longer be tolerated. If the ANC refuses to abandon its violent insurgent activities, as Winnie Mandela suggested after de Klerk's speech, then the South African government will have a "legitimate" stake to "combat violence" and suppress those activities.

By challenging black organizations to take their battle for reform exclusively into the political realm, where he can exert control over both the pace and the agenda, de Klerk has actually strengthened his control and can drag out the negotiations process, possibly for years. But continued control depends upon the maintenance of divisions in the black opposition's power structure and the patience of de Klerk's white constituency.

So far, de Klerk has been able to keep pressure from both sides reasonably at bay. His reform package met with positive, if guarded, reactions from many black leaders. However, despite the surprisingly progressive nature of his most recent proposals, de Klerk has not yet renounced his pledge to "never" allow black majority rule over white South Africans.

The ultimate goal of South Africa's overwhelmingly black majority is, quite reasonably, control of their nation. That goal, however, does not correspond especially well to the evolving goal of white South Africans, who wish to preserve — at the very least — their own self-rule. Reaching a solution satisfactory to both sides will require complex negotiations and ample time. And de Klerk's reform package is certainly designed to accommodate both.

SOUTH AFRICA

Cautious optimism

Worldwide euphoria has resulted from the lifting of the 30-year-old ban on the African National Congress and the imminent release of Nelson Mandela. But cautious optimism, not euphoria, is needed at this stage.

No doubt this is a stunning move from an Afrikaaner leader. But it is merely a first move. The bulwarks of apartheid still in place — the Group Areas Act, the Population Registration Act — must be brought down. Opponents of apartheid have rightly noted that these acts must be repealed to create a climate of trust for negotiations. This has been a long-standing demand of the ANC.

President F.W. de Klerk has promised to repeal the acts during Parliament's current session. He must keep his word, though he will not find it easy to persuade his right-wing supporters, and other nervous whites, that these changes are long overdue. Indeed, de Klerk himself has previously talked only about group rights — allowing blacks control of their affairs but not over those of the whites. That may be fine as an interim arrangement, but the goal must be true majority rule.

The people may be more easily convinced now than they would have a few years earlier. Always isolated morally, the last few years have seen South Africa become increasingly isolated both politically and economically. Everybody in the country stands to gain if the expectations generated by de Klerk's announcement are met. That is what all negotiators should bear in mind as they plan the future.

And when apartheid finally crumbles, we can be truly euphoric.

Country, opera can shock, too

J.L.

Once again there is movement afoot in the Iowa legislature to protect our state's fragile youth from the sordid evils that lurk in the lyrics of rock 'n' roll music.

A bill introduced last week in the legislature would prohibit musicians and concert promoters from allowing anyone under 18 years of age to attend performances where there are lyrics that describe or condone any of the following: sodomy, incest, bestiality, sadomasochism, adultery, any sex-related violence, nudity, satanism, murder, "morbid" violence, use of alcohol, use of illegal drugs.

The bill also would require all records, tapes or compact discs that contain lyrics about drugs, sex or violence to carry prominently displayed warning labels. Parents who discover their children to be in possession of music they (the parents, not the children) deem to be "offensive" could demand a refund from the store that sold the unsavory music. And should the lyrics of any song incite an unwary listener to injure someone else, the victim would be entitled to sue the performers or producers.

Clearly, this bill raises a number of thorny questions. Its conformity to the Constitution comes readily to mind. Then there's the logistics. Would the legislature establish some sort of "music police" to patrol record stores and concert halls around the state, listening to rock lyrics and monitoring for purity of expression? And who can understand most rock lyrics in the first place? To this day, does anyone know for sure what the words to "Louie Louie" are?

But what strikes me as the most puzzling question about this latest attempt to sanitize rock 'n' roll is: Why just rock 'n' roll? If there is indeed a need to protect the youth of Iowa from scandalous lyrics, then why not also restrict the accessibility of, say, country and western music?

I'm personally not a big fan of country and western music, but I've heard my share of it, forced by circumstance while driving through the boredom of western Kansas where there are only two radio stations, one AM, one FM, both of which play nothing but country and western music. Just the titles of the songs alone provide a clue to the major themes of country and western music: "Whiskey River," "Your Cheatin' Heart," "If I Said You Had a Beautiful Body, Would You Hold It Against Me?," "I'm Gonna Hire a Wino to Decorate Our Home," "If Drinkin' Don't Kill Me, Her Memory Will."

And the typical country and western lyrics go something like:
Came home early in my pickup truck,

If there is indeed a need to protect the youth of Iowa from scandalous lyrics, then why not also restrict the accessibility of, say, country and western music?

Found my wife Betty with my best friend Chuck.

Took out my shotgun and shot 'em both dead.

Then drank a half-gallon of Johnnie Walker Red.

Adultery, sex-related violence, murder, and use (usually abuse) of alcohol — common subjects in country and western music, and more than enough reason, under the proposed legislation, for the Music Police to stake out the grandstand at the Iowa State Fair.

And what about opera? I've been dragged kicking and screaming to more than enough operas in my time, and I can attest that the subject matter described in them would definitely be classified under this law as nothing less than shocking.

Take the opera Salome. King Herod lusts voraciously after his niece, Salome. But Salome lusts after Jokanaan, one of the king's prisoners. But Jokanaan says he'll never kiss her as long as he lives.

Herod asks Salome to dance for him, saying if she does, he'll give her anything she wants. So in a scene not unlike what to have gone on in Jimmy Swaggart's motel room, Herod drools in lust as Salome dances before him, seductively removing each of her seven veils until she's buck nekkid.

The king, his carnal desire apparently satisfied, asks what Salome wants in return, and she says she wants Jokanaan's head. Herod offers her some more sensible gifts, but she's set on having Jokanaan's head. So Herod relents, orders Jokanaan beheaded and presents the bloody prize to Salome on a silver plate. Clutching the decapitated dome in her hands, she kisses it square on its dead lips. This grosses out Herod, of course, who commands his soldiers to crush her to death.

Now is this the kind of incestuous, morbid, sex-related violence we here in Iowa want our impressionable teen-agers to be witness to? I should hope not.

If the legislators in Des Moines are really serious about protecting the innocence of Iowa's youth by restricting access to offensive lyrics, then I suggest they broaden their concern to include not only the music of Guns N' Roses, but that of Merle Haggard and Mozart as well.

'Subversion' adds reality to entertainment

Ever since the birth of the novel, people in power have sounded alarms over the "subversive" nature of entertainment. The social realism of Theodore Dreiser was condemned as degrading and obscene to moral values.

The early motion pictures were frequently banned by municipalities for spreading unhealthy thought; the Keystone Kops, for example, were attacked for encouraging contempt for our law enforcement figures.

Television, viewed as it is in the very bosom of the American home, has had an especially rocky road. In the early 1950s, and again in the late 1960s, and again in the mid-1970s, TV violence as a possible inducement to real-life violence was the subject of congressional investigations.

And both the motion pictures and TV were subjected to an informal, highly effective "blacklist" in the 1950s, as suspect writers, directors and actors found themselves unable to find employment due to their subversive beliefs.

"Subversion," of course, is an emotionally loaded term. It conjures up images of bearded, bomb-toting terrorists out to blow up dams and power lines, or at the least undermining the health of the republic.

There is, however, another kind of "subversion," well within the tradition of robust, raucous free speech, and if you want an example, just tune in the Fox Television network on Sunday nights.

There you will find two prime-time shows that skewer the conventions of TV familyhood with no respect at all for the traditions of the medium.

"Subversion," of course, is an emotionally loaded term. It conjures up images of bearded, bomb-toting terrorists out to blow up dams and power lines, or at the least undermining the health of the republic.

"The Simpsons," an animated half-hour from the demented mind and pen of cartoonist Matt Groening, features a nuclear family in the early stages of meltdown. They are unattractive and possess a minimum of brains and good sense.

In one early episode, Dad — Homer Simpson — is fired from his job at a nuclear power plant and decides to end his life. At the last minute, he finds purpose in improving the level of the neighborhood safety by fanatically throwing warning signs on virtually every inanimate object in his community.

His courageous journey ends at the nuclear power plant, where his campaign for safety ends when he is offered his old job back, which he accepts with barely a second thought. On any other prime-time show, Dad would have followed his conscience, earned his family's love, and persuaded the big boss that safety is important after all. Not on "The Simpsons"; here, life is tough.

The following show, "Married, with Children," has already inspired Michigan housewife Terry Rakolta to organize a grass-roots protest against offensive TV. And "offensive" is exactly the right word here.

The Bundy family has no redeeming qualities whatsoever. Al is a shoe salesman whose goal in life is to avoid his family; Peg is a vain, lazy, sex-starved nitwit. Sis is the local slut, with an IQ the size of her waistline, and Brother is the sort of fellow who would be voted most likely to embezzle funds from a charity drive.

In one memorable episode, "Married" took the classic film "It's a Wonderful Life" and stood it on its head. Al Bundy was given a glimpse of what his family's life would have been without him — and it turned out splendidly. His wife became a model homemaker and mother; his children were well-groomed, well-behaved, upright honor students.

But Al decided to take his life back. Why? Because he told his guardian angel after all the grief his wife and kids caused him, he'd be damned if he'd let them have so good a life.

To be sure, there is a sense of affection, even love, in both families. Marge, Bart, Lisa and Maggie know that Homer is trying to do his best. And, if nothing else, the Simpsons at least recognize in each other's underachievement a sense of commonality.

At root, however, these two shows repudiate the mainstream of 40 years of the TV family, where crises are resolved in 22 minutes, where love and understanding conquer all, where rage, anger and fear are all but unknown.

Finally, prime-time TV has given us families we can sympathize with, rather than envy. Bless them!

Aoun launches attack on Christian rival

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rival Christian forces battled with tanks in burning east Beirut and fought with daggers and bayonets for control of a key coastal town Sunday. Police said 210 people have died in the savage six-day showdown.

Gen. Michel Aoun's forces claimed they captured the town of Dbaye, 5 miles north of Beirut, from Christian warlord Samir Geagea, and Aoun's Channel 5 TV station showed paratroopers occupying what it said was Geagea's Lebanese Forces base there. But Geagea's militia said the defenders repulsed 10 tank-supported assaults by the paratroopers and forced them to retreat after hand-to-hand battles with bayonets and daggers.

Aoun sent artillery, tanks and troops to seize the militia's headquarters in east Beirut, but the militiamen held off the fierce bid to solidify Aoun's control of the devastated Christian enclave in the walled city.

Moslem militants renew attacks

SRINAGAR, India — Moslem separatists on Sunday blew up a bus and hurled bombs at an Indian paramilitary patrol, a government building and the home of a state lawmaker in a new series of attacks in Kashmir's largest city.

No one was killed in the attacks, the latest violence since India launched a crackdown January 20 on the groups that want the northern region bordering Moslem Pakistan to secede from predominantly Hindu India. At least 76 people have died since then.

Political leaders in Pakistan demanded that India end the crackdown in Kashmir and declared Monday a national holiday to show support for the Moslem militants.

China launches communications satellite

BEIJING — China on Sunday evening launched its fifth telecommunications satellite from the Xichang space center in the southwestern province of Sichuan, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

The satellite, launched by a Long March 3 rocket, was moving into its designated orbit and all instruments were functioning normally, the report said.

Xinhua said the launch "proves once again that China's telecommunications satellite technology is mature enough to provide launching services for the international market."

Costa Ricans hold 10th peaceful election

National Liberation Party slightly affected by drug trafficking and corruption

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Ricans voted Sunday in their 10th straight peaceful election, choosing a successor to President Oscar Arias, the Nobel Prize-winning architect of the Central American peace process.

"Here nobody thinks about fraud nor buying votes," said Claudino Avila Fuentes, a Social Christian Party poll watcher in San Rafael de Alajuela, 15 miles west of the capital of San Jose.

Rafael Angel Calderon of the Social Christian Party was considered a slight favorite over Carlos Manuel Castillo of the governing National Liberation Party. Five minor presidential candidates were not expected to be a factor.

The winner takes office May 8 for a four-year term.

Both major candidates ran populist campaigns aimed at the poor in this country of 2.9 million. The campaign has been devoid of specifics, however.

Castillo was hurt by revelations

"It's a step towards the perfection of Costa Rican democracy."

Nancy Hernandez human rights advocate about drug trafficking and corruption, but in keeping with the tradition of Costa Rican politics, Calderon did not press those issues as hard as he might have.

National Liberation would become the first party to take three presidential elections in a row if Castillo wins.

Voters also elected 57 national assembly delegates and filled 525 municipal posts. More than 80 percent of the nation's 1.7 million registered voters were expected to turn out.

Party faithful were out in force, waving flags and honking horns in rhythm. Buses took thousands to the polls, where crowds of teenagers decked out in colorful T-shirts guided voters to their precincts.

Some who celebrated all night were lined up at 5 a.m. when the polls opened. Police blocked streets near hospitals to hold down the sound of Costa Rica's civic fiesta.

Prisoners, each escorted by a guard, were permitted to vote for the first time in Costa Rican history.

"It's a step towards the perfection of Costa Rican democracy," said human rights advocate Nancy Hernandez.

About 30,000 children under age 12 also were expected to go to their own polling places in a mock election — an exercise to reinforce their understanding of and commitment to democracy.

Joao Baena Soares, secretary general of the Organization of American States, praised Costa Rica's democratic tradition but refused to compare it to Nicaragua, where a contentious and controversial campaign winds up on February 25.

He noted, however, that the OAS sent only four observers, including himself, to Costa Rica. On election day in Nicaragua there will be 400 OAS observers, he said.

Arias won a Nobel Peace Prize in 1987 for his efforts to bring peace to Central America. He cannot succeed himself.

Calderon was seeking to build a family tradition.

His father served as president in 1940-44 but was exiled after he tried to overturn the results of the 1948 election, an incident that led to the abolition of Costa Rica's army.

Calderon, 41, was born in Nicaragua and did not live here until he was 15.

Gunmen assassinate Colombian mayor, journalist

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Unidentified gunmen assassinated a mayor and a journalist and shot at a congressman in separate incidents over the weekend, authorities said Sunday.

The mayor's body was left draped in a flag of leftist guerrillas, who have promised a wave of violence leading up to mayoral and congressional elections early next month.

Also Sunday, the army said it discovered more than $2.4 million in cash on a ranch once owned by Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, the Medellin cartel leader killed in a December 15 gunfight with police.

The money, found Saturday, had been buried on the banks of the Magdalena River near the town of Guaduas, 43 miles north of Bogota. Soldiers searching the ranch also found more than 100 weapons, an army communiqué said.

Last November, the army found $5.2 million in cash buried at another ranch belonging to Rodriguez Gacha, considered the most violent of the Medellin cartel leaders.

A Sunday communiqué from the Norte de Santander state government office said the mayor of the town of Arboledas, Pedro Jesus Hernandez, was shot and killed by several gunmen who covered his body with a flag bearing the initials ELN. The letters stand for the National Liberation Army, the country's most active leftist guerrilla group.

Led by a defrocked Catholic priest, the ELN has been blamed for the assassinations of three mayors in the past 35 days.

The group has pledged to carry out a campaign of attacks, kidnappings and assassinations in northeastern Colombia to disrupt congressional and mayoral elections scheduled for March 11 and presidential balloting to be held May 27.

Hernandez, a member of the opposition Conservative Party, had been traveling in a car late Saturday on his way to inaugurate a cafeteria for poor children when the attackers opened fire, the government communiqué said.

Arboledas is a town of 15,000 people 217 miles northeast of Bogota.

Bureau needs census-takers for 1990 count

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau is hanging out the "Help Wanted" sign. People are needed across the nation to track down hard-to-count Americans, and the job can pay up to $8 an hour.

The census-takers will scout remote hollows in West Virginia and island fishing villages in Alaska, seek out beach dwellers in California and folks living in mountain cabins in Appalachia.

Only a few weeks before the official 1990 national head count, the Census Bureau says it will need 315,000 temporary workers in addition to its usual staff. Many of the temporary workers have yet to be hired, says Richard Bitzer of the Bureau's field division.

As in 1980, most Americans will receive a census form by mail in late March, fill it out and send it back. But officials know that for one reason or another they won't fear from several million households. Others will send in incomplete forms.

It will be the job of the census enumerators to track them down by phone or in person.

The peak of activity will be in April and May when 200,000 census workers will go into neighborhoods and small towns as well as across rural America to interview people. Another 115,000 workers will remain in offices.

He said a big hiring push will occur in March. New workers will have about three days of training and will work daily with their supervisors to help resolve any problems during the count.

A census-taker's life can be anything but boring. Over the years, the temporary workers have encountered births, family fights and more than a few other unusual cases, according to records kept by the Bureau.

The Year in Photos

The Daily Iowan invites all local photographers to submit their favorite photos from the past year for consideration in our first annual Year In Photos competition.

You may enter photos in black and white or color. Winning photos will be published in a special Daily Iowan supplement on Friday, April 27, 1990. All published photographers will be given a Daily Iowan "If it happens it's news to us" t-shirt. Fifty dollar cash prizes will be awarded to the photographers submitting the best black & white photo and best color photo.

Color: Entries must be submitted in slide form. We will publish the top three color entries and as many others as space permits in full color. The best color photo will be printed as the cover and the photographer will win $50.

Black & White: Entries must be printed no smaller than 3"x5". We will publish the top three black & white photos and as many others as space permits. The photographer with the best black & white photo will win $50.

Rules: All photos must be submitted to Cathy W. The Daily Iowan, Room 1111 Communications Center, by noon, Friday, April 6, 1990. Place each photo or slide in an envelope with your name, address, phone number and a brief description. (All published photos will include the photographers name and a brief description of the subject.) Judging will be done by The Daily Iowan staff. Winners will be contacted prior to the publication date. For additional information contact Cathy Witt, 335-5794

Davis tells team he's staying at Iowa

The Daily Iowan

No Virginia, there isn't a Tom Davis — at least there doesn't appear to be one in the future of the Cavaliers basketball program. Since the announcement last fall that Virginia coach Terry Holland would step down at the end of this season, Iowa coach Tom Davis has been rumored to be a top candidate for the vacancy.

Davis met with his team Friday and told them that he would remain at Iowa.

"He just told us that there's nothing to (the rumor) and that he likes it here," Hawkeye forward Wade Lookingbill said of the meeting. "He told us that he's going to be back."

A Washington Post report during the past week quoted anonymous sources from Virginia and the Big Ten, saying the job was his if he wanted it. That fueled discussion over the week that the Iowa coach might be moving on.

"I've had no indication at any time that Tom would be leaving," Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott said Sunday. "They would have talked to me, and Virginia hasn't contacted me at all."

"I'd like to think I have the kind of rapport with the coaches that they'd come to me first and that hasn't happened, so I have no reason to think Tom is leaving."

Saturday, Davis said the rumors haven't bothered him and that he has gotten used to that kind of talk in this profession. A long list of successors for the Virginia post has accumulated over the past month.

The most recent front-runner is Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun. But for now, it appears that Iowa will still have Davis when the leaves turn brown next fall.

"The team has talked about it some," Lookingbill said of the rumors. "But I hope he stays because we like his coaching style and I don't think anyone wants to see him go."

Franthea Price proved again why she was a pre-season all-American Sunday, scoring 32 points, nabbing 13 rebounds and collecting two steals for the Iowa women's basketball team.

Unfortunately for the Hawkeyes, her efforts were in vain.

A free throw by Wildcat guard Kelly Cole with four seconds remaining gave No. 19 Northwestern a 64-63 victory over Iowa, marking the first time the Wildcats have won in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

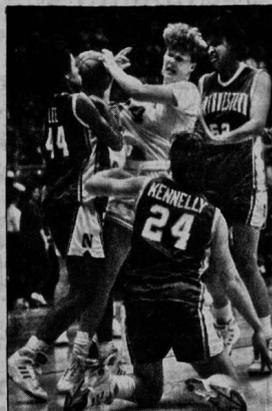

The loss is also the first time the Hawkeyes have lost twice at home in the same season since 1984, coach C. Vivian Stringer's first year at Iowa. The Hawkeyes suffered a 66-63 loss to Purdue two weeks ago.

Stringer was obviously displeased with her team's performance Sunday, saying her players had no excuse for losing on their home floor.

"They played the way I wish we had played," Stringer said of the Wildcats. "Quite frankly, they looked like they owned the place. I thought we played hard, we just didn't play well enough."

The Wildcats took control of the Big Ten cellar at 1-8 in the conference and 8-11 overall. Iowa is eighth at 3-6 and 11-8.

Senior center Les Jepsen led Iowa and all scores with 24 points, while 6-foot-10 guard Matt Bullard kicked in 20 points.

"I may be the tallest offensive guard in the nation," Iowa's Bullard said.

Northwestern was paced by the conference's leading scorer, Rex Walters (18 points), and David Holmes' 15.

Foster was particularly impressed with Jepsen's effort.

"The last time I saw a 7-footer dive for a loose ball like that, it was during the Calvin Coolidge administration."

Iowa continued to be strong at home, winning its third in a row on the way to a 10-2 mark.

"We're finding out what we can do," Iowa sophomore James Moses said. "We're gaining confidence."

This week, the Hawkeyes travel to Ohio State Thursday before meeting Wisconsin Saturday afternoon at Carver.

"It's all coming together," Jepsen said. "We have a new attitude. We're starting to gel as a team."

Mets star seeks help for alcohol problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Darryl Strawberry entered a treatment center for alcohol rehabilitation Saturday, the latest chapter in the story of the New York Mets' struggling star.

Strawberry, jailed last week in a dispute with his wife, voluntarily checked into the Smithers Center in New York shortly before noon. It is the same facility that treated teammate Dwight Gooden for cocaine trouble in 1987.

Last week, Strawberry was arrested at his home in Los Angeles after allegedly hitting his wife and threatening her with a pistol. He spent a short time in jail before posting $12,000 bond, and a hearing will be held next Friday to determine if misdemeanor charges will be filed.

Two days before the incident, blood tests showed Strawberry was the father of a child born to a Missouri woman in 1988. He did not dispute the finding and a court is determining how much support he will pay.

The Mets said it was too early to tell how long their five-time All-Star would be at Smithers. The average length of stay there is approximately 28 days. Gooden spent a month there and Mets reserve catcher Mackey Sasser was admitted for a month last year because of an alcohol problem.

"Our first concern is for Darryl's welfare," Mets executive vice president Frank Cashen said. "Dr. (Allan) Lans has worked closely with Darryl and has spent several days with him in Los Angeles this week, and we are confident this will be the best thing for Darryl."

Lans is director of the Mets' employee assistance program. He is associated with Smithers.

Lans went to Los Angeles on Wednesday and returned to New York with Strawberry on Friday night. Strawberry spent the night at Lans' home in Teaneck, N.J., and was admitted to Smithers in the morning.

"I don't really know if Darryl's had a drinking problem for any length of time or not," Mets vice president Al Harazin said. "I've seen Darryl take a drink, but I've seen lots of other people take a drink, too."

(AP) — Nobody expected Purdue to win this one.

And, they won't.

The eighth-ranked Boilermakers lost their first Big Ten basketball game Saturday with a 64-53 loss to Michigan State to fall to 8-1 but still keep a firm grip on first place.

"I knew it was going to be a long afternoon when I was drinking my coffee in the dressing room and I knocked it over," said Boilermaker coach Gene Keady, whose team was trying to become the first to win its first nine Big Ten games since Indiana in 1976.

In West Lafayette, Ind., Purdue rallied from a 14-point deficit to pull within four points.

But Michigan State's Steve Smith, who had 22 points, made seven free throws in the final two minutes to cool the Purdue comeback.

The Boilermakers made only 29 percent of their field goal tries.

"We were lucky to hit Purdue on a day when they were not hitting the basket. I'd like to give our defense a little credit for that," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said.

The loss cut the Boilermakers' lead to two games over Minnesota, Michigan and Michigan State.

At Madison, Wis., both teams were missing top players. Michigan was without third-leading scorer Sean Higgins and reserve guard Michael Talley. Higgins sustained a stress fracture in his left foot and Talley had a virus and didn't make the trip.

"This team strives on adversity," said Terry Mills, who had 20 points and 14 rebounds. "Losing Sean forced some players to step up and come through and I think we did that today."

The Badgers were without Willie Simms, who was declared academically ineligible by the NCAA. But Danny Jones took up the slack with 25 points.

"Danny Jones played his heart out today," Badger coach Steve Yoder said.

Fryar admits to cocaine use while playing for Nebraska

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Irving Fryar, a wide receiver for the New England Patriots, has admitted using cocaine while playing at the University of Nebraska, according to a published report.

Fryar, the first player selected in the 1984 NFL draft, also said he helped introduce his then-teammate Doug DuBose to the drug, The Hartford Courant reported in a copyrighted story published Sunday.

Fryar's comments came in a story profiling DuBose, a star high school running back in Connecticut who was a Heisman Trophy candidate at Nebraska and went on to win the Super Bowl with the San Francisco 49ers. Although he seemed destined for stardom in the NFL, DuBose is now out of the league because of a cocaine habit that dates back seven years.

In an interview with The Courant, Fryar said of DuBose's situation, "That could so easily have been me."

Fryar said he is free of drugs now, but admitted for the first time that he was one of several Nebraska players who shared cocaine with DuBose.

NFC holds on for Pro Bowl win

HONOLULU (AP) — Minnesota nose tackle Keith Millard scored on an 8-yard fumble return and Los Angeles Rams cornerback Jerry Gray added a touchdown on a 51-yard interception return Sunday night as the NFC beat the AFC 27-21 in a defense-dominated Pro Bowl.

The NFC, which built a 27-7 lead on Millard's touchdown late in the third quarter, barely held off the AFC in a wild fourth quarter.

After the AFC scored twice to pull to within six points, Dave Krieg threw what would have been a winning 2-yard touchdown to Seattle teammate Brian Blades with five seconds remaining.

But the AFC was called for an illegal formation, and Krieg's next pass sailed out of the end zone as time expired.

Expensive seat

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A Michigan State University fund raiser says football coach George Perles demanded that he buy $2,500 in advertisements on Perles' television show to keep his seat on the team's airplane.

J.D. Anderson, a Grand Ledge businessman and chairman of the school's Ralph Young Fund, which raised $2.5 million in scholarship money for football players, formally made the claim against Perles in letters to university officials, The Detroit News reported Sunday.

"I was being required to make a payoff in order to work for the university — that was my interpretation," said Anderson, who normally travels with the team in his position as a 10-year volunteer statistician for Michigan State.

which quickly called a time-out to plan the last-chance strategy.

Price was to take the final shot, and drove the right baseline in the waning seconds, but was unable to make the layup. Abrahamson was then called for fouling Cole, who went to the line at :04 to sink the game-winning free throw.

A three-pointer launched by Price at the buzzer bounced hard off the glass, just to the left of the rim.

"My (total) points don't matter because we lost," the 5-foot-9 forward said. "The same thing happened with Purdue. I had a so-so day, was hitting my shots, but when we needed it most, I just couldn't hit."

The Wildcats were paced by Savage, a sophomore forward, with 20 points and junior center Mya Whitmore with 18 points.

Although the Hawkeyes outscored Northwestern from the field, hitting 28 shots compared to the Wildcats' 21, the final scoring difference came at the free-throw line.

Northwestern sank 21 of 24 free-throw attempts for a sizzling 87 percent accuracy, while Iowa made four of just five shots from the stripe.

"My team has arrived," said Northwestern coach Don Perelli, whose Wildcats move to 16-2 overall and 8-1 in Big Ten play. "I'm not pinching myself. If I'm dreaming, that's okay too."

Iowa dropped to 14-5 overall and 6-3 against league foes. Friday the Hawkeyes pounced on Wisconsin 84-52, led by 20 points from guard Jolette Law.

The Hawkeyes take to the road again next weekend, facing Illinois Friday and No. 7 Purdue Sunday.

foul trouble, but he came back in the second half to score 19 of his 25 points, including two free throws with 13 seconds left to seal the victory.

Gill tied his season-high point total and Marcus Liberty had a career-high 13 rebounds, as the Illini won for the fourth straight time against the Hoosiers.

"Most people expected a good defensive game and I think it was," Illinois coach Lou Henson said. "When you're covering Indiana you'd better play good defense because if you don't you're going to get hurt badly."

Indiana coach Bob Knight said the Illini are "as quick defensively as anybody."

"They didn't give us a chance to make a play," Knight said.

At Columbus, Ohio, Buckeye freshman Jim Jackson said he hoped the nationally televised non-conference game against Louisville might help Ohio State gain a berth in the NCAA tournament.

"I think we showed the television audience and the nation that Ohio State is a pretty good team," said Jackson, who scored 21 points in the Buckeyes' comeback win.

Jackson tipped in an air ball by Alex Davis with 15 seconds left in overtime to clinch the victory for Ohio State.

Louisville coach Denny Crum watched his team fold after taking a 57-40 lead in the second half.

"Maybe we eased up, but no matter what we didn't handle their press real well during that stretch," he said.

Wrestling

Adam Mariano gave the Nittany Lions their only win — a 7-5 decision over Pat Kelly at 177 pounds.

Trammel wrestled in place of eighth-ranked Mark Reiland, who fractured his jaw Friday night and will be out for the rest of the season.

Reiland, a sophomore from Eagle Grove, underwent a 5-hour operation after suffering the injury in practice.

"This is really a tough break, for Reiland and for us," Iowa coach Dan Gable said. "We lost one of our headliners, and it means we'll have to work that much harder if we're to have any chance of beating Oklahoma State and Arizona State."

Reiland was practicing with Trammel when the injury occurred. While attempting to throw Trammel backward and, as they hit the mat, Trammel's head collided with his jaw.

"I've never seen an injury happen that way before," Gable said. "Reiland's jaw was broken in two places."

"This is also the first time I've ever lost one of my main wrestlers like this — somebody who couldn't come back and compete later in the season."

Iowa's 158-pound all-American finished fourth in the NCAA's last year, racking up a freshman-record 18 pins in the process. His record during the 1989-90 campaign stood at 17-6-1, with many of the matches at 167.

Hawks club Buckeyes

Iowa upped its season mark to 17-1, 5-0 in conference action Sunday by handing No. 15 Ohio State a 36-5 loss in front of about 3,000 fans at the Five Flags Center in Dubuque.

Streicher recorded his second fall in just 24 hours by decking Nick Lieb in 5:42 to give the Hawkeyes a 20-0 lead at the intermission. Oostendorp also helped the cause by pinning Ferd Miller in 4:12 in his heavyweight showdown to win his 19th consecutive match. Oostendorp now stands 26-1 on the

The score is 81-57 with 8:06 left to go in Iowa's win over Northwestern Saturday.

Hawkeye center Les Jepsen is fouled by Northwestern's Kevin Nixon.

The 7-foot Jepsen steps to the free-throw line to take a one and one. He steadies himself, shoots... and misses.

Are the fans dismayed? Or, because the Hawkeyes rank ninth in the Big Ten in free throw percentage at .626, do they just look at each other and say, "Well, that's nothing new?"

Actually, only cheering can be heard at Carver-Hawkeye Arena as the game goes into a TV time-out. And that's not too odd, considering Jepsen's miss was the first of his nine free throws that didn't go in.

"It's good to be a perfectionist," Jepsen, who also shot 8-8 from the field, said. "That's what it takes; you can't be inconsistent."

But that's what the Iowa team has been for most of the season at the line — inconsistent, bordering on consistently poor.

Remember the Hawkeyes' loss to Ohio State Jan. 6 at Carver? Iowa's Matt Bullard shoots 1-for-2 from the free-throw line. His stats, somewhat depressing for Hawkeye fans, are mirrored by those of his teammates Michael Ingram, 1-8; Les Jepsen, 3-8; Troy Skinner, 1-2. The team total: 10-28 from the line.

"I think we've got too many guys that are struggling free-throw shooters to have it ever be a great night-in, night-out performance," Hawkeye coach Tom Davis said after the Buckeyes' 79-73 win.

Now move forward to the Hawkeyes' 78-76 win over Michigan Jan. 20.

Bullard is 6-6 from the line, but the rest of the team falls short of that mark. Iowa's free-throw total: 18-30.

But return to Saturday and the Hawkeyes' 98-80 victory over the Wildcats.

Jepsen's 8-9 from the line was only exemplary of the rest of the Hawkeyes' free-throw shooting — James Moses, 4-4; Troy Skinner, 4-4; Acie Earl, 5-6; even one successful shot each from gray team members Tom Jordan and Jim O'Connor. The team total: 26-34 from the line.

"It comes in cycles," Jepsen said. "We've been working extremely hard on free throws... We're starting to key on them. If we keep working hard, they'll keep falling for us."

"It's encouraging to see us shoot so well," Davis said. "They've been practicing (free-throw shooting) a lot this week. The players deserve a lot of credit for that."

According to Bullard, who was 1-2 from the line Saturday, the extra practice did help, and better free-throw shooting was an objective for the Hawkeyes throughout the week.

"Our free-throw shooting hasn't been very good," the 6-foot-10 senior said. "We had two goals this week: to cut down on turnovers... and to shoot better free throws."

But according to Moses, who finished with 14 points in 18 minutes before leaving the game with a twisted left ankle, it was the team's on-court attitude that gave them the edge in free-throw shooting.

Women enjoy successful weekend meets

Pat Axmeier
The Daily Iowan

All dimensions of the Iowa women's track team had successful weekends at Panasonic-Millrose Games Friday and at the Hawkeye Open Saturday.

Shot putter Laura Kriener and the two-mile team of Rachelle Roberts, Tami Hoskins, Kim Schneckloth and Jeanne Kruckeberg represented Iowa in the Millrose Games in New York City.

Kriener threw 44 feet, 5 inches to take fifth place against some of the strongest shot putters in the nation.

The relay squad ran their best-ever time of eight minutes, 45.6 seconds, finishing a close second to Villanova's 8:45.06. Hoskins and Kruckeberg ran their personal bests in the event with the respective splits of 2:11.3 and 2:06.4.

"This was a world class meet; Olympic champions were finishing in second and third," Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said.

Saturday the Hawkeyes defeated six teams in the Hawkeye Open at the UI Recreation Building.

Western Illinois finished second with 113 and Southern Illinois placed third with 90. Also competing were Northeast Missouri State, Northern Iowa, Mankato State, Loyola and Bradley.

Iowa shot putter Lisa Van Steenwyk won the Outstanding Field Athlete Award with her first-place throw of 46-4.

W. Track

The Hawkeyes' highlights came from Nancy Tessmer, who placed first in the high jump with a jump of 5-5 1/2, and first-place finishes by Beverly Powell in the 400; Christine Salsberry in the 800; Kim Schneckloth in the 3,000; and the 4 x 400 team of Shari Van Der Hart, Powell, Karen Layne and Amy McReel.

Dunn's 100th comes from alma mater

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

Victory was definitely sweet for Iowa men's gymnastics coach Tom Dunn, when his team defeated Penn State Friday night in the North Gym of the Field House.

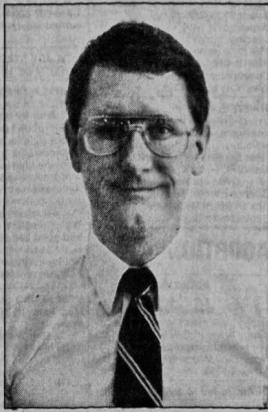

The 272.1 dual-meet win over Dunn's alma mater not only pushed the Hawkeyes' record to 3-0, it also gave the Iowa coach his 100th dual-meet victory.

"I just think it's great," Iowa athletic director Chalmers "Bump" Elliot said. "It's hard to believe that Tom is only in his 11th year and already has his 100th win. It just indicates what a great coach he is. I think he is one of the most unsung, finest coaches in his field."

In the all-around, Iowa's Jeff Dow captured first with 55.40 points, Wayne Cowden of Penn State took second with 55.20 and Chris Kabat of Iowa finished third with 54.90.

"We wanted to do it for Tom," Iowa senior Keith Cousino said. "This was the first meet we had our best lineup in and we showed what our potential is. Judging was tight so it was a legitimate score."

The Hawkeye Gymnastics Club presented Cousino the Outstanding Performance Award after he tied for first on parallel bars with 9.55, and horizontal bars with 9.65; took second in vault with 9.40; placed third in floor exercise with 9.30; and finished fourth on pommel horse with 9.35.

"Keith had a great night with five great events," Dunn said. "It makes me look bad because I took him out of the all-around."

Jeff Dow won individual titles with ties on the parallel bars and horizontal bars, and scored a personal-best 9.70 on still rings.

Other individual titles went to Hawkeyes Keith Rooks on vault with 9.50; and Chris Kabat, floor exercise, 9.40. Erik Heikkila also tied for first on the horizontal bar.

"Our (overall) score is the second-highest in the country that I know of," Dunn said. "I think we can hang with anybody."

Law becomes newest 1,000-point scorer

Rita Heimes
The Daily Iowan

Jolette Law became only the 10th women's basketball player in Iowa history to hit the 1000-point career scoring mark Friday when she scored 20 points in the Hawkeyes' win over Wisconsin.

Law needed 19 points before the start of the contest to reach the 1000-point mark, and for a while, it looked as though she wouldn't get it. The senior guard scored just two points in the first half of the Wisconsin contest, leaving many doubting she wouldn't make history that day.

But Law turned it on in the second period, scoring 18 more points to lead Iowa to a 84-56 win. Her 19th point came with a free throw at the 1:26 mark.

"I know I had a bad first half, but I thought, 'Dang, did I play that bad?'" Law said when recalling how long it took her to finally score point No. 19. "The whole game just stopped, the referee was smiling at me, and I was just like, 'What's going on?'"

Law's teammates knew what was going on, and jumped to their feet to embrace her, awarding her the ceremonial game ball.

Though the Hawkeyes were leading the Badgers by a considerable margin throughout the second per-

"We were just trying to get Jolette's points over with so she can go on with the rest of the season," Stringer said.

Jones sets record in triple jump

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Aided by another school record from Paul Jones, the Iowa men's track team took second at Saturday's triangular meet in Minneapolis, Minn.

The Hawkeyes' score of 53 points was good enough to defeat the host Minnesota Gophers by four points, but not quite enough to beat Northern Iowa, which totaled 57 points.

"It was a good meet except for the fact that we didn't win," coach Ted Wheeler said. "UNI won it in the last race. They put forth a real fine effort."

Meanwhile, Jones shattered his own indoor Iowa record of 49 feet, 2½ inches in the triple jump, when he won it with a mark of 51-3¼.

"I was really surprised because I was feeling under the weather all week," Jones said of his new record. Jones also remained undefeated this year in the long jump, with a leap of 24 feet, 7¼; and grabbed third place in the 55-meter dash.

Jones' teammate Anthon Maybank took fourth in both events, along with a first-place clocking of 21.80 seconds in the 200-meters.

"Jones was outstanding again and so was Maybank," Wheeler said.

In the 4 X 800-meter relay, the team of Robert Cook, Bruce Nie, Steve Morrissey, and Rod Chambers finished on top for Iowa in what Wheeler said was "a bit of a surprise."

Chambers also took second in the 800-meters, and Nie finished third in the mile with a time of 14:87.

Wheeler was encouraged by the efforts of junior D'Juan Strozier as well, referring to him and Jones as "workhorses." Strozier took second in the 400-meters with a time of 48.91, second in the 600-meters, and had a hand in the Hawkeyes' second-place 4 X 400-meter relay.

Another bright spot for Iowa was the performance of the shot putters. Freshman Maurea Crain's put of 51 feet, 9 inches was good for second, while senior Andy Flaherty came in third and junior Doug Joens took fourth.

However, Wheeler cited too many lower-scoring finishes as the reason his team came up short against the Panthers.

"Our scoring was mainly in the third and fourth places, while UNI's were in the first and seconds."

"We weren't as sharp as we had hoped to be. I thought we would score between 60 and 65 points but it didn't happen. Hopefully we will run against them outdoors and maybe we can change things."

Women 'distracted,' take 3rd

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

In a disappointing meet, according to Coach Diane DeMarco, the Iowa women's gymnastics team finished third behind Michigan State and Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., Friday.

"We didn't have the same team effort we had in the previous meet," DeMarco said. "We were distracted; the team was focusing on other things rather than our own performances."

The Hawkeyes scored 176.1 to the Spartans' 181.95 and the Wolverines' 179.1.

Iowa's high-points came from Stacy Burns, who placed third on beam with 9.20, Lori Cole, taking third on vault with 9.15 and Tracy Junker who finished second in the all-around with a score of 35.65.

"I felt like it went really well; it was my best set of the year,"

Gymnastics

Burns said. "When I went over to the beam I knew we were having trouble, and I wanted to help the team."

On floor exercise Jamie Lynne Hedley also "turned in a fine performance," considering she almost didn't perform due to illness.

76ers' star to miss NBA All-Star game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charles Barkley, bothered for three weeks by a groin pull, said Sunday he'll skip next Sunday's NBA All-Star game in Miami.

"There is no way I can go to the All-Star Game because I don't want to hurt it worse and I need the time to rest," said Barkley, who leads the Philadelphia 76ers with averages of 25 points and 12 rebounds per game.

Barkley, voted a starter at forward for the Eastern Conference, was limping Sunday as he helped the Sixers extend their winning streak to 11 games with a 105-102 victory over Milwaukee.

Barkley played only 15 minutes in the first half, scoring two points with no rebounds. But he came back in the game in the second half after teammate Rick Mahorn was ejected. Barkley finished with 14 points, 10 in the fourth quarter.

"I enjoy taking my family, it's more of a disappointment for them," Barkley said of the All-Star Game.

"There is no sense of me going down there and hurting myself. I need that rest," he said.

"I pulled it about three weeks ago and it's been getting worse. Playing this (Sunday's) game really didn't help.

"I've been doing a lot of stretching, about an hour's worth everyday."

Charles in charge

Barkley said he wasn't sure how much he would be able to play Monday night when the 76ers play at home against Utah. They also have games Wednesday against Golden State and Thursday at Orlando.

Ex-Dallas head introduced into football's Hall

HONOLULU (AP) — Tom Landry, ushered unceremoniously out the door by new Cowboys owner Jerry Jones a year ago, learned recently that he will be ushered — ceremoniously — into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"Last year was kind of an interesting year," Landry said with a wry smile, reflecting on the abrupt end of his 29-year NFL coaching career.

"Last February I was on the golf course in Austin when I heard the news that I wasn't coaching the Cowboys any more. Then this year, I was on that same golf course when I heard the good news that I was going to go in the Hall of Fame."

UT president demands betting probe

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas president William Cunningham has ordered an investigation into allegations that as many as 20 football players regularly placed bets with a teammate on college and pro sporting events over the past two years.

The Austin-American Statesman reported Saturday that a Texas player placed bets with a teammate and a former player witnessed the bets being placed. The teammate who took the bets left the school last fall, the newspaper said.

The alleged betting never involved UT games, one player said.

Cunningham said any players found to have bet on college games — a violation of NCAA rules — would be declared ineligible and their names reported to the NCAA.

Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said he spoke with UT coach David McWilliams about the allegations over the weekend.

"I don't think our coaches know anything about that," Dodds said. "I'm comfortable that nobody on the staff knew about any of this."

Dream game

'69 Cubs win Dream Game

PHOENIX (AP) — Ken Rudolph hit a two-run double in the bottom of the seventh and final inning to give the 1969 Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the 1969 Baltimore Orioles in Sunday's fifth annual Dream Game billed as "the World Series that never was."

The Cubs, with an eight-game lead in the National League East standings on Aug. 28, 1969, finished eight games behind the pennant-winning New York Mets that year.

The Miracle Mets then went on to upset the favored Baltimore Orioles in five games, winning the last four straight.

"We waited a long time to beat these guys," said Cubs third baseman Ron Santo, who also served as manager in place of the ailing Leo Durocher. "It's great to finally get a victory. We were 0-12 in oldtimers games before this one."

Loss doesn't mar Shoemaker's day

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — The winningest jockey of all time finished his career with a loss Saturday. It was still Bill Shoemaker's day, though.

Fourth — that's where the 58-year-old Shoemaker finished on Patchy Groundfog at Santa Anita in the Legend's Last Ride, a race especially designed to mark the end of his brilliant 40-year career.

"It's just another race," said the man they call The Shoe, who won 8,833 races in 40,350 starts.

However, it was much more than that, and Shoemaker in his quiet way acknowledged that it was.

"I enjoyed the fans and their hollering at me and waving at me," he said. "All the jockeys wished me luck, which was unusual."

At a ceremony before Shoemaker's final ride on a 7-year-old chestnut horse named Patchy Groundfog, he was joined by his wife, Cindy, their 9-year-old daughter Amanda and the Santa Anita jockey colony.

"I told those jocks I was going to miss them — and it got to me," said Shoemaker, who will now try his hand at training.

Authors offer collaborative reading

Thomas Barbash
The Daily Iowan

The worlds painted in the latest works by Jane Smiley and Thomas Sanchez are as disparate as the forms they are told in; as far apart as a rural Pennsylvania homesteader and a Key West-based voodoo god.

But the two will bring those worlds together in a joint reading Monday night at 8 p.m. in Van Allen II. The reading is sponsored by the UI Writers' Workshop and Prairie Lights Books.

"I'll be his narrative voice and he'll be mine," Smiley said. The dialogue will be split between the two.

The two spoke during a phone interview from Smiley's home in Ames.

"There's a narrative tension offered in reading this way that you don't ordinarily get at readings," Sanchez said. "There's a kind of psychological reciprocity."

The collaborative reading, which is Sanchez' brainchild, will be the first by the two, who agree their work is as different as can be.

Some of Smiley's reviewers say the Iowa State University writing professor may single-handedly bring the novella to the place held now by short fiction — a widely published, ideal form for certain themes. Smiley's writing said Josephine Humphreys, on the cover of The New York Times Book Review, is "like a communal treasure, a marvel of controlled language probing the deepest — and funniest and darkest — layers of domestic happiness."

Her characters lead seemingly quiet, ordinary lives that mask long-hidden secrets or self-delusion. In "Ordinary Love," Rachel, a 52-year-old divorced mother of five, decides during a family reunion to tell her children the real story of her split. She tells them of an affair she had 20 years before and realizes she has given them "the experience of family happiness, and the certain knowledge that it could not last."

In the second novella, "Good Will," Smiley speaks through the words of Bob Miller, who lives with his wife, Liz, and 8-year-old son on a rustic, self-contained farm. As the story unfolds, Bob becomes more intolerant and self-absorbed, but he is unable to see his role in his son's racist and sociopathic behavior. Smiley's writing throughout is quiet and simple, with a slow building power.

Thomas Sanchez has few quiet lines in his second novel "Mile Zero." A Miami Herald reviewer wrote of the book, which Sanchez has labored over for 10 years, "Be forewarned: The book comes on strong. Few (sentences) serve merely to advance the narrative. The language is evocative but pounding and insistent as waves." Sanchez invests his fiction with ghosts and legends, song and allegories.

"Our process is very different," Smiley said.

"What's interesting is that we can start at such different points and end up at the same place artistically," Sanchez said.

Described as "a gothic mystery story," "Mile Zero" tells the story of St. Cloud, an American expatriated in his own country, at the island that marks "the end of the American road." It also tells tales of sorcery, of Vietnam vets and Santerian devotees and a boat of Hatian refugees that heads toward shore with all but one of its passengers dead.

St. Cloud falls into alcoholism and a love affair with a 20-year-old woman who leads her lover "by the fatal attraction of false romantic lights, leading him in desperate pursuit of his own lost youth."

Riverside's 'A... My Name is Alice' funny despite unanswered questions

Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

If you're of the Jesuitical mindset that splices things up by categories, you could say Riverside Theatre's production of "A... My Name is Alice" has two levels: a surface level of wit, energy and entertainment, and a deeper level that raises questions the play doesn't answer.

On the surface level, "A... My Name is Alice" succeeds wonderfully. The play consists of 20 or so little scenes unconnected by anything like an overt plotline. Each scene is complete unto itself, and in that sense the whole night is like a comedian's monologue, going from subject to subject fast enough to keep even the laziest attention fixed. Five women — Gloria Galask, Jennifer Johnson, Karen Moeller, Melissa Threlkeld and Carmen Troyer — work under the direction of Ron Clark to produce a series of clever songs and funny skits.

Some scenes are obviously better than others, although the cast is marvelous throughout. "Trash," about a bored office worker who dreams of what her life would be like as a cheap romance novel, or "Emily, the M.B.A.," which focuses on the rise and quick fall of a sadly stereotypical businesswoman — these are sure-fire fun, although they're all outdone by the best piece of the evening, "Honeyput," in which a prim, efficient analyst tries to get a steamy blues singer to come to grips with her own sexuality.

In short, when judged on the wit, sophistication, energy and hard-won optimism of its script and music, "A... My Name is Alice" is a generous amount of entertainment for the price. It's on the deeper level that unanswered questions arise — and these many questions can be boiled down to one: Why no men?

If the underlying attitude of the play is the commonality of human problems, male or female — as it seems to be, in the play's most delightful moments — then why do some of the skits seem so... petulant?

Part of the problem could arise from the fact that the skits are written by different, largely unconnected writers. But even given this, the play's underlying disposition toward men seems queasily ambiguous.

I was watching TV and eating a hot dog today when the phone rang.
Tony answered it and said, "Jim's busy watching Green Acres, can I take a message?"
But he was just kidding, and handed me the phone.
It was Jean, from the bookstore. She wanted to know if I could work Saturdays.
I told her I could.
