Tamba takes target Iowa voter by surprise

Iowa’s Senate District 32, one of two Tamba-related races, is going down to the wire. The race changed hands, claiming the lead of the race from a Tamba supporter in his bid to replace incumbent Sen. Todd Grammer, R-Cedar Rapids. Although Harrington reported a lead of 14 votes over Tamba, according to a pool of early voters who have cast their ballots, 3rd District Rep. Kim Martin, Johnson County chairman of the Johnson County Democratic Committee, said Friday night he’s siding with Tamba’s bid for election to the Senate by the state’s voters. The committee will also be involved in the race, Martin added.

“Both candidates are holding back and waiting for the other guy to make a mistake,” Martin said.

Tamba said he’s interested in the position and another group of people who are willing to donate them the help they need.

The union’s efforts are centered on a specific goal, as Tamba is running as a member of the Johnson County Democratic Committee. RAPE IN IOWA CITY

Ounce of prevention

As reports of rape in Iowa City continue to increase, it seems evident that there is a need for greater public awareness of the problem. The Rape Victim Advocacy Program recently announced that there have been 14 cases of rape reported in the city this year.

Employers' labor costs increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — American employers considerably increased their labor costs in the third quarter, pushing productivity lower, Commerce Department figures showed Thursday. But economists said the increase was not surprising and predicted it would not cause a recession.

The 1.6% increase in labor costs came on top of a 1.4% rise in the second quarter. Since the third quarter of 1982, labor costs have increased 7.5%.

"We are not alarmed by this," said Michael J. Keane, an economist at Chemical Bank. "This is just a continuation of the steady increase in labor costs that we have been seeing for some time."

The increase in labor costs reflected a 2.4% rise in wages and salaries and a 0.8% increase in other labor costs. The increase in wages and salaries was slightly above the increase in productivity, which rose 2% in the third quarter.

Economists at Chemical Bank said the increase in labor costs reflected the nation's improving economic conditions, and they did not expect it to cause a recession.

"This is just a reflection of the improved economic conditions," said Keane. "We do not expect it to cause a recession."

The increase in labor costs was not unexpected, said economists at other banks.

"This is just a reflection of the improved economic conditions," said William J. Conley, an economist at Manufacturers Hanover.

"We are not alarmed by this," said Conley. "This is just a continuation of the steady increase in labor costs that we have been seeing for some time."

He proposed the Central Com- mittee again on about what work to consider new party rules.

It was a momentous turn for the reformers. The party was ready to act with the new party rules, and it wanted to have some decision about how to reform the party and the social system it endorsed.

The two-day Central Committee meeting resolved a long-standing struggle between reformers and conservatives. The reformers wanted to open the party to new members and reform the social system. Conservatives wanted to keep the party closed and the social system as it was.

Reagan, who had led the movement, denounced his own position. But the Central Committee approved the new party rules, and the social system was open to reform.

Reagan

The president said he was surprised to find that his party's struggle was now between reformers and conservatives. He proposed the videotape testimony of the former president to help the two sides work together.

He also added that the videotape testimony was needed to resolve the controversy over the former president's role in the Iran-Contra affair.

The Cancún '90 trip was a political victory for the president. He had demanded a new set of rules for the party and the social system, and he had gotten what he wanted.

The trip was a political success, and the president was determined to make it even more successful. He had declared that he would use the trip to show the world that the United States was a leading force in the world.

New York Senate approves death penalty. ALBANY, N.Y. - The Senate on Monday approved a bill to restore the death penalty in New York State, a measure Democrat Gov. Mario Cuomo has vowed to vote for the eighth straight year.

The 40-20 vote followed a 2-hour debate in which the chief sponsors, Senate Majority Leader Philip Steel, a Democrat from Cutchogue, Long Island, and Sen. Myrie St. John, a Republican from St. James, each made strong arguments in favor of the bill. The bill, which would restore the death penalty to New York State, passed by a margin of 20-40.

``The death penalty is a deterrent to violent crimes, and it is a justice for those who have been wronged by violent crimes.``

``The policeman who shot Jolel was known to the man for about 10 years,`` the report said. ``It appears that Jolel had obtained a weapon during a recent visit to the house of a friend, and that he was carrying it on Sunday when he was arrested by the police.``

``We are not ruling out the possibility that Jolel was carrying a weapon when he was arrested, but we are investigating all possibilities,`` the report said.

Involuntary celibacy: The study found that most males who were involuntarily celibate had tried to get married on at least one occasion, and that many of these men had sought help from a variety of sources. The study also found that involuntary celibacy was more common among men who had experienced a breakup or divorce, and that involuntary celibacy was more likely to persist among men who had experienced multiple breakups or divorces.

Some AIDS patients consider suicide

Study predicts 1,000 AIDS victims by 1991, finds counseling effective in prevention

LOS ANGELES (AP) - They swallow deadly drugs, plunge out of windows or set up shop as an urban version of the alternative lifestyle of AIDS: suicide.

"Uncounted numbers of these folks are out there now," said Monti Beahan, a former official of the Los Angeles County AIDS Commission.

"It's not just a problem," she said Monday, "it's a crisis." And they do it at an alarming rate. And they do it many ways, she said.

"The suicide rate is definitely higher than the general population," said Beahan, "but they are using it as a way to end their suffering.

"This is a very ugly situation for many people who have just learned they have AIDS," said Beahan.

"We're seeing more and more people who are feeling that they have no way to keep their disease at bay," she said.

Philadelphia, PA - In a surprising move, the city has announced that it will host the NFL All-Star Game in 2024. The decision was made after a intense bidding process between Philadelphia and Dallas, with Dallas facing increased costs and uncertainty over the city's ability to host the event.

The game is expected to bring a boost to the local economy and showcase the city's cultural and sports attractions.

Deal

Ripper, a New York-based investment firm, has acquired a minority stake in the NFL's New York Giants, marking the first such investment in a national team by a private equity firm.

The deal includes a minority ownership in the team's controlling partner, the Wellington Management Group, and with this acquisition, Ripper will have a seat on the Giants' board of directors.

Polls

Raced three weeks behind "One Nation Under God" in the popular music poll conducted by the National Opinion Research Center, "I Love You" is now neck-and-neck with "One Nation Under God" in the popularity race.

The poll, conducted among a representative sample of the U.S. population, showed "I Love You" with a slight lead over "One Nation Under God."

Lemieux tries to put problems ‘behind’ him

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Oh, his ailing back.

Lower back pain has bothered Pittsburgh Penguin Mario Lemieux in a brace and out of practice time but won’t come to sit out any games — at least not yet. "I’ve had a back problem before," Lemieux said. "I’ve had one this year."

The lower-back problem is chronic — and worse — and has kept Lemieux from playing in his first appearance for the U.S. national team in the World Cup in June.

"Kasey Keller is an intense talent," Gansler said. "I know Kasey can play in the league."

Lemieux said he and Keller are friends and will try to see if they can get together in the National Hockey League.

"I was intrigue," Lemieux said. "I think we've made some progress."
Notre Dame-NBC TV marriage leaves CFA in cold

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame has reached an agreement with NBC that would allow the Fighting Irish to broadcast home games for up to $110 million a year. The deal would also give NBC the rights to the CFA for the next seven years.

"We did not enter into an existing relationship," said Notre Dame President Edward J. Klawitter. "Our agreement was created to reflect the future potential of Notre Dame."

ABC and ESPN had sought rights in Notre Dame games when they agreed to exclusions with the CFA. The speculation that Notre Dame would be the deal by the Fighting Irish, a number of the CFA, meant the possibility that other colleges might defect from the CFA's package.

ABC announced on Jan. 17 that it had purchased rights to the CFA for $210 million over five years. The deal was announced on Oct. 13, 1989, but with no time frame for the rights.

"In Notre Dame’s case, we have the opportunity to make an instant impact on college football," said NBC's President, John Edgar. "We’re very excited about it and we’re going to make sure we stay competitive in the future."
