Schroeder talk aims at saving failing families

Schroeder: Families come first

Deborah Clark

Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder of Colorado wants to ensure there are no children left behind. She has introduced legislation to increase the state-level adoption of foster children by making it more financially feasible for families to take them in. She has been a strong advocate for family-friendly policies, urging supporters to "take a 10-week leave of absence" when they have a baby, she said.

The proposal, which Schroeder introduced in her home state, would provide financial incentives for families to adopt foster children. The legislation would offer tax credits and other financial assistance to families who adopt foster children, with the goal of reducing the number of children in foster care. Schroeder said she introduced the bill "to make sure that we are willing to go to the mat for the child, for the family," she said. "We have to get the resources to them." Schroeder, who is also a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said the bill would help ensure that children in foster care have a chance to find permanent homes.

City's in U.S.S.R. protest for reform

State warnings lower turnout

MOSCOW (AP) — From the Baltic nations to the southern republic of Georgia, thousands of demonstrators on Sunday, May 15, 1995, assembled in the capital to protest against a new set of economic policies imposed by the government of President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Tens of thousands of students, workers, and other protesters gathered in Moscow and other cities to demand an end to the economic policies, which they viewed as a threat to their livelihoods. The protests were marked by a variety of tactics, including sit-ins, rallies, and even the burning of government buildings.

The government responded with a series of measures to quell the protests, including the deployment of police and the imposition of martial law in some areas. But the protests continued, and the government eventually had to retreat from some of its policies.

Members of the UI's Black Law Student Association presented several tributes to students and professors during the annual "Black Law Week" in 1995, co-sponsored by the UI Black Legal Awareness Association. The theme of the week was "Getting to the Seat of Power: Tribute to Black Professors at the University of Iowa."

The event featured presentations by renowned African-American scholars and legal experts, including Professor Julius Jefferson, a member of the University of Iowa College of Law faculty. Professor Jefferson spoke on the importance of diversity in the legal profession and the need for increased recruitment and retention of minority students.

UI debate team attains No. 1 ranking in nation

Jeff M. Hamilton

The Daily Iowan

U.S. News & World Report has ranked the University of Iowa's debate team as the nation's No. 1 team for the fourth consecutive year.

The team, composed of undergraduate and graduate students, has won 121 of its 124 tournaments entered this year, according to the weekly rankings. The team's success has been attributed to the strong coaching of assistant coach John Miller and the efforts of the team's members, who have worked hard to prepare for each tournament.

Bush and Kohl agree unified Germany would join NATO

Camp David, MD (AP) — President George Bush and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany agreed Thursday that a unified Germany would continue to be a "full partner" of NATO, including military participation in alliance operations. The leaders agreed that a "very, very close" relationship between the two countries, particularly in defense matters, is essential.

Bush said he was encouraged by the discussions and that "we got a lot of things accomplished.

The leaders also discussed the importance of arms control and the need for a "deterrence" against possible aggression by the Soviet Union. Both leaders agreed that the United States and its allies must continue to work towards a "stable" and "secure" Europe.

Spokes were ranked on the basis of their "best two teams' performances at the last four tournaments," according to U.S. News & World Report.

"It's important to us," said U.S. News & World Report editor John King, "to have the best team in the nation recognized." The poll shows that the UI team has a "very, very close" relationship with the university and the community.

The UI debate team, which includes 122 members, has been ranked in the top 15 teams for the past four years. The team has won championships in national tournaments and has been invited to compete in the World Debate Tournament in London, England.

Bush and Kohl agreed that a unified Germany would join NATO, but the two leaders also discussed the importance of arms control and the need for a "deterrence" against possible aggression by the Soviet Union.

Both sides claim victory in scrutinized Nicaraguan election

Managua, Nicaragua (AP) — The ruling Sandinistas and the opposition-backed rival presidential candidate, both declared victory in Sunday's elections in Nicaragua in a bid to end a decade of political instability.

The Sandinistas, who have ruled the Central American country since 1979, declared victory in the presidential race with the support of their allies in the National Army and the paramilitary forces. The opposition candidate, who is backed by the United States, claimed victory with the support of the Catholic Church and human rights groups.

The election was closely watched by the United Nations and other international organizations.

The head of the central, Martinez, said the results were being released to the public and that the electoral council was examining the vote to ensure that it was "very, very fair." Bush said that the results of the election were "very, very fair" and that he was "very, very happy."

Aids say Jackson won't run

Citizens rights leader says statehood is priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson will announce that he will not run for may of the nation's capital, top aides to the civil rights leader said.

"We feel he's the person who needs to run," said an aide, who was not authorized to speak for the campaign. "But he's not the person who needs to run, " the aide said.

The aide, who requested anonymity, said that the decision was made after discussions among the campaign's top strategists.

The official also said that Jackson has indicated he might run in a later primary if he believes he can win the nomination.

Jackson, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for president, has been a strong supporter of statehood for the District of Columbia.

Jackson's campaign has been dogged by questions about his financial affairs and his ability to raise money.

The aide said that Jackson's campaign is "very healthy" and that he has "a lot of momentum" going into the primary season.

Jackson is currently leading in several opinion polls, but he is facing stiff competition from other Democratic candidates including John Kerry, Howard Dean and John Edwards.

Jackson's campaign has been bolstered by a series of high-profile endorsements, including those from Martin Luther King Jr., actress Julia Roberts and singer Stevie Wonder.

However, Jackson's campaign has also been hit by allegations of financial improprieties, including a scandal involving a $1 million loan from a New York investment firm.

Jackson's campaign has denied all allegations of wrongdoing and has said that it is working to clear its name.

The aide said that the decision to not run for mayor was made "to ensure that Jesse can focus on his campaign for the presidency."

Governors seek support for education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors gathered for an educational summit last month in Washington, D.C., but they left without any agreement on education goals, despite efforts to narrow the gap between the federal budget deficit and state education needs.

"We have to get this year's budget settled," one governor said. "We have to start addressing the federal deficit, and we have to start thinking about education." But the governors did not settle on any goals.

NICARAGUA ELECTIONS

Free will or fraud?

Nicaraguan citizens crowded polling places Sunday under the watchful eye of 6,000 international observers to cast ballots in elections between the ruling Sandinista government and the 14-party opposition. The opposition accused the Sandinistas of widespread election fraud, but a final tally is not expected until Monday.

In a statement today, Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega said the elections were a "tremendous victory" and that the Sandinistas would continue to fight for democracy.

The opposition, led by the Movement for National Development, has argued that the elections were rigged and that the Sandinistas will not respect the results.

The elections were held amid a tense political climate in Nicaragua, with the American-led Contras still a significant force in the country.

The Sandinistas have been in power since 1979, and their rule has been marked by a number of controversial policies, including the nationalization of the economy and the confiscation of property from wealthy landowners.

The opposition has accused the Sandinistas of human rights abuses and of suppressing political dissent. The Sandinistas deny these allegations.

The elections were watched closely by the international community, which has been concerned about the situation in Nicaragua for many years.

The results of the elections will be closely watched, as they could have implications for the future of the country and its relationship with the international community.

ten days ago, Argentina and Britain decided to resume talks aimed at resolving their territorial dispute over the Falkland Islands.

The talks are expected to focus on issues such as sovereignty and fisheries rights.

The issue has been a source of tension between the two countries for many years, and the resumption of talks is seen as a positive development.

However, both Argentina and Britain have expressed reservations about the talks, and it remains to be seen whether they will be successful.

In the meantime, the Falkland Islands continue to be a source of controversy, with many people in the territory calling for independence from both Argentina and Britain.

Shelving hostilities

About two days ago, Argentina and Britain decided to freeze diplomatic relations, breaking off talks that had been underway for eight years.

The situation was rapidly de-escalating, with both sides calling for an immediate end to the talks.

Argentina's President Menem said that the talks had failed because Britain was not willing to recognize the Falkland Islands as an independent country.

The Argentine government has been pushing for the recognition of the Falkland Islands as a separate state, while Britain has said it is committed to maintaining its sovereignty over the territory.

The two countries have been at odds over the Falkland Islands for many years, with the dispute dating back to the 1982 conflict.

The Argentine government has been pressing for the recognition of the Falkland Islands as an independent state, while Britain has said it is committed to maintaining its sovereignty over the territory.

The issue remains a sensitive one, with both sides continuing to express reservations about the talks.

However, the resumption of talks is seen as a positive development, and it remains to be seen whether they will be successful.

South Africa's dilemma may defy solution

Johannesburg, South Africa - Five years ago, when I left South Africa on my first visit, I was so optimistic as to be considered an optimist in this month's future.

The essence of a long period of violence and bloodshed that has been tamed and pacified since the early 1990s has been a chance for something other than the usual appeals to the ballot box and guns.

Under the National African Congress, talk was heard about rooting against megalithic wall targets, more meaning in school, even against rooting out weapons in military installations.

Jeff Greenfield

And the National Party government of President P.W. Botha appeared as realistic as the rose on the fence, with a plan, it was to be, to protect territories and to maintain their public appearances.

Now, the grass has shifted, and the National Party government has been forced into a new position with the foundations of apartheid, to include such things as voting rights for blacks and a commitment to end violence.

The most recent developments in the leadership of the African National Congress and its current fortunes have been marked by a shift in strategy.

This is in favor of the land, it is not, however, in favor of running on a freely denominated ticket.

The political dilemma is best put by a colleague of President P.W. Botha who has read so closely a "single man, one vote" electoral system will result in a confrontation between the two sides of the society.

In addition, the black majority is likely to be won, and the white minority is likely to be won.

But there is a stunning obstacle to be overcome, which has already been accomplished.

Malcolm Forbes

Forbes, 70, dies in sleep

NEW YORK (AP) — Malcolm Forbes, the multimillionaire publisher of Forbes magazine and self-proclaimed "capitalist gourmets" who built a business empire, has died of a heart attack. He was 70.

Forbes died in his sleep Saturday morning, April 14, 1990, at his home on the 59th floor of the Empire State Building, neighbors and relatives said.

A spokesman for Forbes said that the multimillionaire brought a sense of glee to everything he did, from work, play, sports and years of travel. He was known in New York and elsewhere as a family man who treated his employees with respect and a touch of the playful spirit.

"He was an American icon," said Burt Bacharach, a composer and producer who once worked for Forbes as a freelance writer. "He was a man of many talents and interests, and he was a man who knew how to have fun." "His death is a loss to the world of business, politics, and media," said Bill Gates, the chairman of Microsoft, who is Forbes' chief competitor.

Malcolm Forbes, who was born in 1920, was one of the most successful business men in the world, having built a vast media empire that included the magazine he co-founded with his father, the late B.C. Forbes.

The company's holdings included the magazine, which is sold in more than 120 countries, and a number of TV, radio, and Internet properties.

"Malcolm was a true capitalist," said Gates. "He knew how to build successful businesses, and he was a leader in his field."

Malcolm Forbes was born in New York City on May 10, 1920, to B.C. Forbes and Anna Heinzerling. He was the younger of two sons.

"His death is a great loss to the world of business, politics, and media," said Bill Gates, the chairman of Microsoft, who is Forbes' chief competitor.

Malcolm Forbes, who was born in 1920, was one of the most successful business men in the world, having built a vast media empire that included the magazine he co-founded with his father, the late B.C. Forbes.

The company's holdings included the magazine, which is sold in more than 120 countries, and a number of TV, radio, and Internet properties.

"Malcolm was a true capitalist," said Gates. "He knew how to build successful businesses, and he was a leader in his field."

Baseball talks stall

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Fehr and Chuck O’Connor didn’t want to make a big deal out of their meeting Sunday, but there was a clear indication that the talks that opened the start of the baseball season on April 2 will be anything but normal.

On the fifth day of this year’s lockout, at his home in Scarsdale, N.Y., Fehr, the head of the Major League Players Association, met with O’Connor, the executive vice president of Major League Baseball, to discuss the negotiations that started last week.

"Someday we’ll look back and say that was our last meeting," Fehr said. "Hopefully, we’ll have a lot more to discuss before it’s over."
Softball team heads home after successful trip west

The Daily Iowan
It was a thought-filled Friday night. Iowa's fast-paced offense, a discretionary force in the Big Ten, had just dropped a doubleheader after her team had completed a 13-game winning streak. The lessees of New Mexico in Albuquerque, N.M. had seized an opportunity in the middle of the third inning when Iowa fell behind in the game. But Iowa's reaction was swift, and the Hawkeyes made a comeback into two runs to win 2-1. Iowa head coach Holly Winterrowd believes this game was part of the New Mexico rust.

"It was a tough night to start out the season," Winterrowd said. "Previously we talked about the new era, and what we needed to do. I like what we came out of with a lot of Texas-Albuquerque and the new era. We're really excited to start out with an extra-inning ball game.

Even though Iowa isn't returning full of senior performers, it should be enough to carry the team over the season. This year, Iowa is looking to start the season in a fast pace. The team is looking to start the season in a fast pace.

World Wrestling Federation champion Hulk Hogan, now a resident of Iowa City, will be in chapel to introduce Iowa's women's volleyball team for the second straight season. Hogan's appearance will mark his first public appearance since his retirement from wrestling last year. The event will take place in the university's new Allamakee Gymnasium. Hogan is scheduled to arrive at 7 p.m.

Hope enters trade limbo as unhappy Walsh waits

LEVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have found little interest in quarterback Steve Walsh on the trade market and may be forced to trade him for another team or player who would be a better fit for the team.

Ojito, who was Walsh's back-up quarterback, said he was approached by several teams who were interested in Walsh, but the Cowboys had not yet made a decision.

The Cowboys, 5-1 last season, have reportedly asked permission to trade Walsh to several teams, but no offers have been made.

"We're looking at a lot of options," Ojito said. "We're looking at a lot of options." But he added that he has not signed a contract with the team.

Hawk men win; women lose to Illinois

With the Big Ten Championships right around the corner, 74-66-270 would cover 17-12-101 over Iowa in Champaign, Ill., wasn't the kind of performance the Hawkeyes were hoping for.

"We were a little tough," Hawks head coach Steve Alford said. Even after losing two starters in the first four games of the season, the team was not expected to perform well.

"We were door is being in different spots," Alford said. However, the Hawkeyes were able to win the game against the Bears by a score of 79-67. The game was marked by strong efforts from forward Scotty Bepple, who scored 15 points and 18 rebounds.

"He is an important part of the team," Alford said. "He has been a consistent scorer for us this season." The Hawkeyes also took advantage of several turnovers by the Bears, scoring 21 points off them.

In the women's event, the Hawkeyes didn't fare as well. The team started off strong, leading by 15 points in the second half. However, the gap was closed, and the Hawkeyes lost the game by a score of 87-79 to the Seton Hall Gardeners, who are ranked 11th in the Big Ten.

"Our women's team didn't get the job done," Alford said. "They were working hard, but they couldn't make the big shots when they needed them." The team was led by forward Lauren Deenen, who scored 14 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Clemson and Tar Heels stay opposite in ACC

AP - What a strange season in the Atlantic Coast Conference when Clemson and North Carolina finished deadlocked at 10-10 on the final day of the season.

Both teams finished the season with a 10-10 record, but in different directions. NCAA tournament bids were still up in the air. The Tigers will have to win the ACC tournament to get in, while the Tar Heels will have to win the ACC championship to get in.
