Schroeder talk aims at saving failing families

Schroeder: Families come first

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder, D-Colorado, urged about 400 counselors, educators and social workers to take efforts to get family legislation passed through Congress at the 19th Annual UI Changing Family Conference Friday in the Union Main Ballroom.

"Family is so important because if those little building blocks start to crumble, your whole society starts to crumble. My premise is that those little building blocks are crumbling right and left, they are crumbling faster in America than anywhere else," Schroeder said.

The Colorado resident is the mother of two children as well as a 16-year veteran of the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I just see how very important those relationships are, how hollow the ownership of a BMW is, if you don't have anyone to share it with," she said. "Or how hollow the owning of a closet of designer clothing is, as Nancy Reagan has found out, when there aren't any children around.

The bill would allow male and female workers to take a 10-week leave of absence without pay before returning to work. Though the bill has yet to become law, different versions have passed the Senate and the House.

Schroeder said President George Bush's alternate childcare proposal, which would give families with Members of the UI Black Law Student Association presented plaques of recognition to several UI faculty members Friday during "Black History in the Making: A Tribute to Black Professors at the UI."

The program, co-sponsored by the UI Lecture Committee, the Collegiate Associations Council and Opportunity at Iowa, featured a keynote address by lawyer and internationally acclaimed orator Patricia Russell-McCloud.

Faculty members receiving recognition included: Mathematics Professor Eugene Madison, who's been with the UI for over 23 years; Deborah Turner, assistant professor in obstetrics and gynecology who received her doctorate from the UI; Associate Law Professor Adrien Wing; Law Professor Gregory Williams; Associate Professor of Periodontics Benny Hawkins; Assistant Professor of Ophthalmology Keith Carter; and Assistant Professor of Special Education Chris Arthur.

UI administrators were also awarded plaques. They included: Leodis Davis, associate vice president for academic affairs; Fred Woodard, associate vice president

Cities in U.S.S.R. protest for reform

State warnings lower turnout

MOSCOW (AP)—From Siberia to the southern republic of Georgia, hundreds of thousands of Soviets rallied for democracy in more than 30 cities Sunday, despite official warnings that the Soviet Union's first nationwide protest could explode in violence.

More than 100,000 people turned out in Moscow, and smaller protests occurred elsewhere. The official warnings, which were repeated frequently last week in the state-run media, kept the turnout low in some cities and prevented some protests altogether.

Riot police dragged away people who tried to hold an unsanctioned demonstration in Leningrad, but there were no reports of major unrest.

In Moscow, the crowd grew through the afternoon as initial tension gave way to a relaxed and good-natured atmosphere. One column of marchers was led by a man with a bullhorn who told police and bystanders, "We represent no danger."

Gavril Popov, a member of the Congress of People's Deputies and one of the organizers of the demonstration day, told masses gathered Georgy Postoyuk of the Interior Ministry, who said he was in charge of security at Gorky Park, estimated 100,000 people gathered at the park. They then marched across a bridge over the Moscow River and met up with a considerably smaller group that had gathered at the Foreign Ministry. Together, they headed to the rally site.

Reports from police, state-run media and local activists interviewed by telephone indicated as many as 276,000 people took part in protest rallies in 32 cities outside Moscow, from Petropavlovsk-Kamchatky in the Soviet Far East to Leningrad on the Baltic Sea coast.

"All was against us," Popov told the crowd in Moscow's Zubovsky Square.

UI debate team attains No. 1 ranking in nation

Squads were ranked on the basis of their best two teams' performances at the last six intercollegiate debate tournaments.

Jodi M. Hamel
The Daily Iowan

Teamwork and determination have paid off for four UI debaters who recently attained the top spot in national debate team rankings.

For the first time in the history of the National Debate Tournament Ranking System, Iowa placed first among 92 college competitors nationwide.

The UI debate squad beat out 91 other colleges and universities, including such powerhouses as Harvard and Dartmouth, in the third of four tournament polls.

John Lyne, UI director of forensics, said the achievement reflects the success the UI has been experiencing in attracting scholar debaters.

"The poll shows UI can be ranked No. 1 in intellectual competition," Lyne said.

But debate squad director David Hingstman added that "it's important to emphasize there's no star system, and we win or lose as a group."

Bush and Kohl agree unified Germanys would join NATO

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP)—President George Bush said Sunday he and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany agreed in weekend talks that a unified Germany would continue as "a full member of NATO," including military participation in the Western alliance. Kohl said "neutrality would be a very false solution."

After two days of discussions regarding delicate issues of a unified Germany, Kohl said he recognizes "the legitimate security interests of all states" in Europe, particularly Poland.

"Nobody needs to be afraid," the West German leader said. Bush chimed in that if he were alarmed about the prospect of a single Germany, he would not be endorsing reunification — as he had several times previously.

'Very fair'

Both sides claim victory in scrutinized Nicaraguan election

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The ruling Sandinistas and the opposition both predicted victory in Sunday's elections after Nicaraguans voted on whether to continue a decade of leftist rule or hand power to a U.S.-backed coalition.

Voting was peaceful and the turnout was heavy.

"It was very fair," former President Jimmy Carter, one of 3,000 international observers, told The Associated Press after the polls closed at 6 p.m. (7 p.m. EST).

Voters flooded the nation's 4,394 polling stations during the morning hours in balloting that was considered a referendum on Nicaragua's battered economy under the Sandinistas and the U.S.-backed insurgency of the Contras.

About 1.75 million of Nicaragua's 3.5 million people were registered to vote.

Votes from the first four stations to report were released by the Supreme Electoral Council two hours after polls closed.

The four rural tables, which were from the presidential race, showed President Daniel Ortega's Sandinistas with 98 votes to 40 for Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's United National Opposition.

The head of the council, Mariano Fiallos, said the results were being released to illustrate the fragmentary nature of the returns so far. No more official returns were to be released until 15 percent of all precincts were in.

Voters also selected 90 National Assembly members and representatives to 146 regional, city and town councils.

In Washington, President George Bush said whoever won the election would "find a better climate" with the United States, as long as the vote was certified as fair and the government maintained a democratic system. Fair elections would be "very, very helpful," Bush said.

The Sandinistas already were organizing a victory celebration. A notice posted at campaign headquarters urged supporters to gather at midnight, when Ortega would proclaim victory.

Supporters and opponents of U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin display their banners and shout cheers Sunday afternoon when Harkin Harkin display their banners and shout speaks at the Iowa City Public Library.

Harkin addresses drug crisis

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

While protesters and supporters attempted to shout each other in front of the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., Sunday, Senator Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, managed to address a group of citizens inside the building at the weekly National Issues Forum.

Harkin said this week's forum topic, "The Drug Crisis," is his top priority, but protesters accused Harkin of inconsistency on tax issues.

"We think he's been flip-flopping too much on this stuff," said Steve Gibbs, a UI senior who was protesting on Duquesne Street.

The issue Gibbs and others referred to is Harkin's proposal to increase funding for educational programs; the controversy is whether it would create a new tax.

"The Republicans are trying to turn this into a tax issue, but it's an educational issue," said Phil Roeder, Harkin's communication director.

Roeder said Harkin's position on the Senate Appropriations Committee requires him to deal with the fiscal responsibility and funding options of legislation.

"He is not for more tax, but is just for more of the money in government going to education," Roeder said.

Harkin said he plans to get the increased funding for education not by increasing taxes, but from the "peace dividend" — surplus money expected from U.S.-defense budget cuts in the wake of Eastern European reforms.

"What's happened since last summer is all the changes in Europe... now we've got a peace dividend and now we can use that money," Harkin said.

In addressing the topic of the forum — drugs — Harkin said the drug problem is the greatest threat to U.S. national security since World War II. He outlined a five-point plan to tackle the drug problem over the next five years.

First, Harkin wants to implement an ongoing educational program in every grade school in the state, he said.

The programs will have a supportive angle and will build children's self-esteem so they will not be tempted by drugs "so that they can learn to say no to drugs through their own internal mechanisms," Harkin said.

Ensuring that "treatment on demand" is available to anyone who seeks it is the second measure. Harkin said many drug addicts who seek help are told to come back in six to eight weeks because there is a lack of facilities.

Along with treatment, Harkin adds rehabilitation to his list.

He said job training and socialization are components of rehabilitation which are needed in order to integrate a drug addict back into the workplace.

The fourth and fifth phases of the plan are coordinating the different levels of law enforcement, and ensuring that drug convictions are a priority of prosecutors.

Zimmerman speaks on campaign focus

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

After announcing her 1990 gubernatorial campaign in Des Moines, Lieutenant Governor Jo Ann Zimmerman joined actress Bonnie Franklin in Iowa City Friday to discuss issues she will emphasize in her fight for the governor's seat.

Franklin, star of the TV series One Day At A Time, met Zimmerman last April at a pro-choice rally in Washington and decided she wanted to become involved in the campaign.

"Over 70 percent of Iowa's annual budget is spent on health care, education and agriculture and Jo Ann is the only candidate, Democrat or Republican, with in-depth experience and a lifelong commitment to each of these areas," Franklin said as she introduced Zimmerman.

Zimmerman was elected lieutenant governor in 1986 and before that was a state representative in the Iowa House, a nurse and a teacher. She is also a cattle owner.

Topping Zimmerman's list of priorities is expanding research and development in Iowa by increasing federal money available for projects.

"I plan to increase research geared to the public good and that type of research then goes on to spring off other types of jobs," she said.

Zimmerman said the lack of public funding for research under the current leadership has led to slanted research which meets the means of the private interest funding the study, instead of the public good.

"If we don't put the public money into it, somebody else will find out instead of us, and then those jobs and that research for the future will be based someplace else when it should be based right here," she said.

Zimmerman wants to see more research into alternative fuel resources.

In her speech, Zimmerman said the press had mistakenly reported she is running a campaign based on women's issues after her announcement in Des Moines Thursday.

"Since when were children's issues and issues of the family just women's issues?" she asked.

As governor, Zimmerman said, she would include elders in the future workplace and also provide incentives for businesses to contribute to child care, like property tax reductions.

"Let Iowa be known as the state which builds businesses that build families," she said. Reforms in health care which will "maintain our wellness" — like pre-natal care, family planning programs and community health programs for the elderly — are some of Zimmerman's goals.

Also, Zimmerman said the education system must be reformed in order to meet the needs of a changing workplace. Her plan is to grant 60 free hours of college coursework for any resident of the state.

Iowa native may challenge Nagle

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Twenty-seven-year-old UI law graduate Jeff Abbas announced tentative plans to challenge two-term incumbent Representative Dave Nagle, D-3rd-Iowa, for the 1990 Congressional seat at a gathering in the UI Athletic Club Sunday.

Abbas, an '84 Harvard graduate and '87 graduate of the UI College of Law, made the first of what could be a long series of campaign stops in Iowa City to let people know who he is, he said.

Although his decision to work in government is sincere, Abbas said, his intention to lock horns with Nagle is indefinite at this point pending consideration of the considerable effort it would take.

The decision to go ahead with an election bid will take some serious soul-searching to see if Abbas, currently a Washington, D.C., tax attorney, and his wife, a future Johns Hopkins University resident physician, will be able to undergo the campaign trail stress and the potential nine-month separation.

"She needs to be (in Baltimore) finishing her training... which makes it an even tougher decision for us to make about whether or not we can live apart for nine months," Abbas said.

Abbas said he needs to take five days off from politics to spend partly on his farm and mostly with his wife after Sunday's gathering.

An Aplington, Iowa, native, Abbas said he will use the respite to see if he can "stand toe-to-toe with Dave Nagle."

Platforms and issues are secondary only to getting himself known right now, Abbas said.

"Since not many people know who I am, my one goal is to let them know who I am," Abbas said. "I'm hardly a candidate."

Abbas' tactic so far has been to familiarize himself with his opponent, Nagle, so the public can form its own impression of the two candidates, he said.

"I think Iowans... are comparison shoppers," Abbas said. "We are entitled to have candidates stand side-by-side in a blind taste test — Dave Nagle is brand X, Jeff Abbas is brand Y."

Despite Abbas' aspiration to run for Congress, he maintains that he is not a politician.

"Politicians do not listen; they brag about all their accomplishments," Abbas said.

Informal rush: A more casual look at the UI's greek system

Laura Allen
The Daily Iowan

Experiencing informal rush is a chance for non-greeks to get a casual look at the UI greek system without the pressure and intimidation of going through formal rush.

"I liked informal rush a great deal better," said Karie Lammers, a UI sophomore who pledged Zeta Tau Alpha. "I got to meet 12 to 15 girls each party and get a real sense of what pledging a house would mean. During formal rush, I felt everything was so stressful. You had to make a decision about a house that you spent 15 minutes in."

Informal rush is unique for each organization. Some will invite people curious about the greek system to the house for dinner, while others may host as many as 15 special parties or activities for them.

Tony DeCosmo, UI Interfraternity Council rush director, said the fraternities and sororities are not rushing as much as they are making friends.

"I basically went (to an informal rush party) for something to do for the night. I wanted to give it a try, meet some new people and see what the greek system would offer me," said UI sophomore Teri Oiserowe, who pledged Zeta Tau Alpha.

More than 20 fraternities held informal rush this spring, as opposed to five sororities who sponsored an informal rush.

Mary Peterson, UI Office of Campus Programs and Activities coordinator, said the UI sororities are allowed to have a maximum number of 120 women. The only instances where the chapters may have informal rush is when members de-pledge or transfer, or if the chapters did not get the maximum number of pledges in formal rush, she said.

"The only difference is that formal is organized where you get a large number of people through and informal is a way to show non-greek friends what it is all about," Peterson said.

Many students said that informal rush gives them a chance to make the decision without much stress and allows them to simply make new friends.

"Formal is very stressful," said Pam Nolin, UI Panhellenic Associations Council rush director. "I wish that we could change it and make it more fun."

"Informal is great but it only deals with small numbers. Formal has to be structured," she said.

Nolin added that informal rush is easier for sophomores because they already have ideas about the houses.

"Being a sophomore, I had a lot of ideas that I heard on campus about the different sororities," Lammers said. "In formal, I remembered what I had heard. But then in informal, I was able to get to know the girls and my prejudices disappeared."

Avenson declares need for freedom of choice

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Abortion rights and education will top the list of major issues facing the next governor of Iowa, according to Don Avenson, Iowa House speaker and democratic gubernatorial candidate.

At a campaign stop Friday evening in the Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., Avenson made a short speech outlining his campaign priorities and spoke individually with several voters.

Abortion rights will be a crucial factor in the gubernatorial race, Avenson said.

"What good is it to have a world-class university in Iowa if no one can go to it. No Iowa kid should have to say 'I can't afford to go to college?'"

Don Avenson
Iowa House speaker

An amendment introduced in the Iowa House Thursday to block abortions at the UI Hospitals and Clinics without a fetal viability test was defeated 65-31 with his support, he said.

"At least this year we're not going to see restrictions on a woman's right to choose," Avenson said.

But he added that unless a governor is elected who is committed to protecting these rights, it will be hard to avoid such restrictions in the future.

"If elected governor, I will veto any restrictions on women's reproductive rights," Avenson said.

The cost of higher education is another important issue facing the state, Avenson said, adding that ever since a Republican has been in the governor's office, tuition has been increasing.

"What good is it to have a world-class university in Iowa if no one can go to it?" he said. "No Iowa kid should have to say 'I can't afford to go to college.'"

Avenson also said that in 18 years in the Iowa House, he has had a 97 percent voting record for passing laws that labor advocates wanted to pass. He added that he has recently received endorsements from several Iowa unions, including United Auto Workers.

"We're pulling together the labor vote of this state," he said.

Johnson County ranks 4th highest among all Iowa counties for the number of Democrat voters, Avenson said, adding he plans many campaign stops here.

"I'll be here so much you'll be sick of me by June," he said.

The county convention March 31 will be followed by the democratic primary June 5, according to Pat Gilroy, Johnson County coordinator for the Avenson campaign.

"I feel Avenson's support in Johnson County is growing."

Nagle kicks off re-election campaign

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

Representative Dave Nagle, D-3rd-Iowa, officially kicked off his 1990 campaign for re-election to the U.S. House of Representatives Friday at the Iowa City Public Library.

"If we wanted a theme for the campaign, it would be more of the same, only better — more federal dollars here to assist us in diversifying our economy ... and a fairer share of the federal funds that are spent coming back into this state," Nagle said.

Economic development projects Nagle has supported during his Congressional term include securing $76 million in road construction funding for the third district and $500,000 for improvements at the Marshalltown airport.

Nagle is currently a leader in the Avenue of the Saints project, a proposed $400 million highway linking St. Louis, Missouri, and St. Paul, Minnesota. Three of the four routes under consideration would cross portions of the 16-county third district, which includes Johnson County.

"That project by itself would (place Iowa) at the heartland of the country. It would be in the crossroads of the United States because of our geographic location," Nagle said.

Nagle's priorities for national issues include cutting the federal deficit, organizing affordable health care for all Americans, strengthening the educational system and stopping the war in El Salvador.

Nagle said he wants to reduce the deficit by cutting the defense budget through eliminating some of the strategic weapon systems like the B-1 bomber, MX missiles and SDI.

"Of the $68 billion dollars that this country spends on research, all but about $4 billion of that is in the defense sector," Nagle said. "You can't continue to feed that monster."

In regard to health care, Nagle's goal is to equalize the reimbursement rate between rural and urban hospitals in five years. He also said he expects there will be a national health-care plan within three years.

Nagle said although the Cold War is coming to an end, the U.S. is losing an economic war because of poor education.

"We are not educating the children to be competitive in a new society," Nagle said. "We graduate half of the Ph.D. candidates in math, science and engineering that the Japanese do, but we have doubled their population."

Nagle wants to see several reforms in the new Farm Bill, such as bringing the loan rate up so prices will increase and encouraging farmers to rotate their crops.

A potential Republican challenger to Nagle in the 1990 election attended Friday's conference and accused Nagle's staff of withholding public information. Jeff Abbas, a 27-year-old native of Applington, wanted to know where Nagle's next campaign stop would be and claimed Nagle's staff would not divulge the information. A Nagle staffer then told Abbas that Nagle would be at the Waterloo recreation center Friday afternoon.

Abbas said he wants to observe Nagle in action in order to calculate his prospects for unseating the incumbent congressman.

"I'm here seeing if I've got what it takes to run for Congress."

Attorney wants Deases trial held 'far away as possible'

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) — Following the bizarre murder trial of Ruben Deases, the public defender representing Ruben's brother says she wants the trial of Edward Deases moved as far away as possible from Story County.

Ruben Deases, 18, was convicted Friday of first-degree murder in the strangulation and decapitation of Jennifer Ann Gardner, 20. Edward Deases, 21, awaits trial on the same charge.

Ruben's unsuccessful defense alleged that it was Edward alone who choked the woman to death with a belt and later cut off her head in an attempt to conceal the identity of the victim and avoid detection.

That highly publicized trial included a courtroom brawl between Ruben Deases and a third brother, Eustaquio, 23, a convicted cocaine trafficker and Gardner's boyfriend. A fourth brother, Johnny, 16, was the star witness for the prosecution.

Public defender Julia Keifer says she wants Edward Deases' trial moved out of Story County to a place "where people are not so influenced by the media."

She said she was not talking about shifting the proceedings to any adjacent central Iowa county, either.

"My preference is as far away as we can get," Keifer said.

Area man changes plea to guilty for vehicular homicide of child

The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man charged with the July 4 vehicular homicide of his son changed his plea to guilty Thursday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Paul Stillmunkes, 32, 127 Hilltop Mobile Home Park, had been charged with homicide after he allegedly caused a car accident on Sand Road which resulted in the death of his son. Stillmunkes initially pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Court records state that Stillmunkes was intoxicated at the time of the accident in which his son, Lucian, was thrown from Stillmunkes' 1988 Chevy Van.

In November, Stillmunkes filed a motion contesting that open cans of beer in the van accounted for any smell of alcohol that may have caused the state trooper to arrest him following the accident.

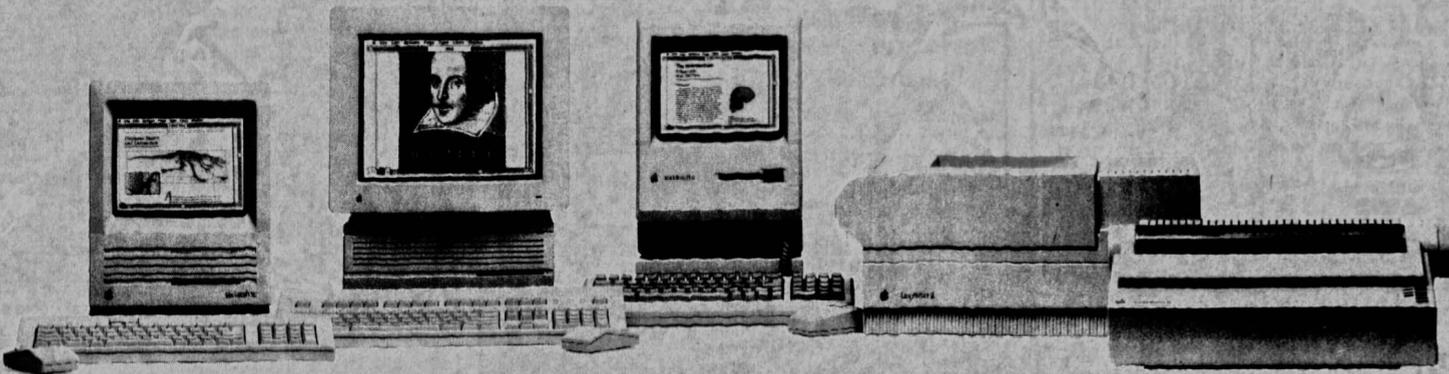

Sentencing has been set for April 6, 1990. The sixth Judicial District Department of Correctional Services has been ordered to make a pre-sentence investigation in the matter, a copy of which will be furnished to counsel at least five days prior to the sentencing, court records state.

Last body recovered from Calif. lake

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — Divers on Sunday recovered the body of the last of seven people killed when members of a youth group and four would-be rescuers fell through thin ice into a lake. The body of Dave "Grandpa" Meyers was retrieved from Convict Lake in the eastern Sierra Nevada range, said a Mono County sheriff's dispatcher. The body was spotted by a sophisticated underwater video camera lowered into the lake Wednesday, but divers were unable to recover the remains until Sunday. The bodies of the six other people killed in the accident February 19 were recovered previously. Meyers, 53, of Bishop, was a counselor at a home for delinquents and youths who have committed minor violations. Killed in the accident were three teen-age boys from the camp, Meyers and another counselor who went to their aid, and two other rescuers. The lake is 250 miles north of Los Angeles.

Fifth Joliet escapee back in custody

TOULON, Ill. — The fifth of six prisoners who escaped a prison in Joliet turned himself in Saturday at his parents' urging, a prison system spokesman said. Ronald Roach, 20, surrendered at the Stark County Sheriff's Department in Toulon after making his way home to Wyoming, Ill., said Nic Howell, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Corrections. Roach was to be returned to Joliet to face arraignment on escape charges, Howell said. Roach was serving a four-year sentence for burglary when he and five other prisoners escaped before dawn February 11 from the maximum-security Joliet Correctional Center, the state's oldest prison. All the other escapees have been captured except for 21-year-old David Rodriguez of Chicago, who was serving a 25-year term for murder.

Trans-Antarctica trek nears finish

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Polar explorer Will Steger is little more than 100 miles from achieving his goal: crossing Antarctica's 3,600 miles by ski and dog sled. "We're on the home stretch," Steger, 45, said Friday on the trail in an interview published in Sunday's St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch. "Unless we fall into a crevasse, we should be OK." Welcome banners have been readied for Saturday, and snow has been plowed flat at the finish line at Mirny, the Soviet science station overlooking the icebergs and penguin colonies of the Indian Ocean. Scientists will converge in the station's kitchen this week to make miniature Russian dumplings as a treat for members of the expedition, which has its headquarters in St. Paul. U.S. scientists feted Steger's group when it reached the South Pole on December 11, the first dog sled trek to the bottom of the world since Roald Amundsen arrived there on Dec. 14, 1911. Steger made history four years ago when he led a similar assault on the North Pole.

Two split $52 million Illinois jackpot

CHICAGO — Two Illinois lottery players accomplished what millions have failed to do in three previous weeks, matching all six Lotto numbers to capture a grand prize of about $52 million, the lottery director said Sunday. Despite cold weather and blowing snow that caused accidents and closed roads, ticket sales peaked Saturday afternoon, hours before the drawing for the second biggest Lotto prize in Illinois history, Illinois State Lottery Director Sharon Sharp said at a morning news conference. "We ended up selling nearly $37 million worth of Lotto tickets in the past week," she said. The total revenue collected for payouts in Saturday's Lotto was more than $72 million, she said.

Sajudis claim victory in Soviet election

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The leader of the Sajudis reform movement said Sunday that independence for Lithuania could be achieved this year after his group claimed a landslide victory in the Soviet Union's first multiparty election.

In balloting for the Baltic republic's 141-seat parliament Saturday, voters appeared to have chosen the country's first legislature not dominated by Communists.

The main contenders were the Sajudis Popular Front, which has led the drive for independence, and the reformed Lithuanian Communist Party.

On the street outside the Sajudis headquarters, passers-by gathered excitedly around posters announcing the victory.

Unofficial returns showed that of the 90 races decided, Sajudis-endorsed candidates took 72 seats and non-Sajudis candidates took 18, said Rita Dapkus, head of the Sajudis information agency.

"If that is not a landslide, then what is?" Algimantas Cekuolis, a Sajudis officer, said at a news

Lithuanian Elections

141 Seat Parliament

- Sajudis Popular Front 72 of 90 races decided
- Lithuanian Communist Party 18 of 90 races decided
- 45 races with no majority winner (decided by runoff on 3/10)
- 6 invalidated by insufficient voter turnout (decided in April) conference Sunday. "It is a very clear indication of what the people of Lithuania think."

Sajudis gathered the election results by calling local election commissions, and the tallies were believed to be reliable. Official results were not expected until today. Dapkus said 45 races had no majority winner and will be decided by runoff votes on March 10, while six were invalidated by insufficient voter turnout or other factors. They will be decided in April.

Turnout among the 2.56 million eligible voters was about 75 percent, officials said.

Vytautas Landsbergis, Sajudis chairman, said the results showed Lithuanians trust his movement.

"We have a common and very clear goal. Our clear goal is statehood and the independence of Lithuania," he said. "This goal is achievable this year."

The new Parliament's chief task will be navigating the Baltic republic's difficult course to secession from the Soviet Union. Sajudis wants talks with Moscow to prepare for an orderly secession, which would break a 50-year-old tie that began with Lithuania's occupation by the Red Army in 1940 and its annexation later that year.

The movement supports a neutral, sovereign Lithuania characterized by a market economy and guarantees for human and cultural rights.

Although Sajudis dominated the voting, Landsbergis did not rule out a strong role for the reformed Communists in a coalition government selected by the new Parliament. He stressed the close ties between Sajudis and reform-minded Communist Party members.

"Probably we will not ignore the party as an administrative power and partner," said Landsbergis.

But, he said, the hardline Communists, who oppose independence, would probably not be welcome in the coalition.

The participation by Sajudis and at least six other parties in parliamentary elections was a first in the Soviet Union. In December, Lithuania became the first of the 15 Soviet republics to legalize non-Communist parties.

The reform Communists won 22 seats, but 13 of those were in districts where they were backed by Sajudis.

Moldavians hold free elections, seek sovereignty

KISHINEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Moldavians voted Sunday in their first free elections under Soviet rule and expressed hopes their new Parliament would be able to win greater sovereignty from Moscow.

Many voters who gathered in parks after casting their ballots seemed excited by the prospect of a new government and the ability to choose candidates.

"We are learning democracy and we want to use the Parliament as a peaceful way to gain our sovereignty," said Anatoly Zhdanov, who said he was Moldavian by nationality despite his Russian name.

Zhdanov, a 26-year-old employee in a brick factory, said he voted for the Moldavian Popular Front, an independent political movement that was the main challenger to the ruling Communist Party in the contest for the 380 seats in the Moldavian Parliament.

"Of course we are going to win and then our demands will be met," Klavdia Zhaloba said, smiling as she sold copies of  Glasul , an independent Moldavian newspaper.

With more than 200 candidates on the ballot, the Popular Front hoped to get at least 50 percent of the seats in Parliament. "We think part of the other deputies will come around to our side," said Yuri Roshka, a Popular Front leader and candidate.

The Moldavian Popular Front likes to compare itself to Sajudis, the Lithuanian reform group which on Sunday claimed victory in parliamentary elections. It campaigned on a platform that favors secession from the Soviet Union.

"We want to be an independent republic—not with the Russians, and not with the Romanians. And above all we want our sovereignty," Anatoly Goncharov said as he listened to news of election returns in Lithuania on his radio in a park.

While Lithuania enjoyed two decades of independence between the World Wars, Moldavia, a republic of 4 million people in the southwest corner of the Soviet Union, has not known independence this century.

Until the czarist empire fell apart in 1917, Moldavia was the Russian province of Bessarabia and after World War I it was ceded to Romania, with which it shares a nearly identical language.

Aids say Jackson won't run

Civil rights leader says statehood is priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson will announce today that he will not run for mayor of the nation's capital, top advisers to the civil rights leader said.

"We have tried to persuade him to run, but he remains convinced that he should not," said one local supporter who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity. "He is convinced he should work for statehood."

The supporter, who said he spoke to Jackson for more than three hours over the weekend, said the two-time Democratic candidate for president is committed to gaining statehood for the District of Columbia.

Jackson declined to comment on his plans after preaching at a Washington church on Sunday.

Jackson spokesman Eric Easter confirmed that Jackson has scheduled a news conference for Monday "to discuss his mayoral plans," but declined to elaborate.

"He will reveal his intentions tomorrow," Easter said.

Jackson's political plans have been the subject of much conjecture since he moved to Washington in April. That speculation intensified with Mayor Marion Barry's arrest last month on a cocaine possession charge.

But in recent weeks, Jackson has stressed repeatedly that championing the city's quest to become the nation's 51st state would remain his priority through the election year.

Barry is at a South Carolina hospital for treatment for what an aide has called an alcohol problem. City Administrator Carol Thompson is in charge of the city in Barry's absence.

Jackson's apparent decision comes amid growing signs that voters — and politicians — are wary of a Jackson mayoral bid.

A Washington Post poll released Thursday showed Jackson would trail Barry if both were candidates in the September Democratic primary.

The poll of 800 registered Democrats in the district found Barry was preferred by 25 percent of those surveyed, while 19 percent said they would vote for Jackson. Four other possible candidates split 33 percent of those polled, while the remaining 9 percent were listed as undecided, wouldn't vote or other.

If Barry weren't in the race, Jackson would receive support from 26 percent of those questioned compared with 19 percent for city councilman John Ray. The poll had a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

Jackson has refused repeatedly to rule out a run for Barry's job, saying he would only seek the office if Barry, a long-time colleague, did not run for a fourth term.

Since his arrest, Barry has been silent on his plans for re-election. Mayoral aides have said Barry acknowledged privately the weekend after his arrest that he would not run again.

Jackson's potential candidacy has encountered other turbulence.

Last fall, the city council passed a bill sponsored by two announced mayoral candidates that limits outside income from honoraria and speeches for the mayor to $10,000 per year.

Jackson has said he earns about $200,000 a year, mostly from speeches and honoraria. The mayor's job pays $89,500 a year.

Mandela asks black factions to unite

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela, seeking to end four years of fighting among black factions in Natal Province, appealed to the warring groups Sunday to put down their weapons and fight together for racial equality.

Mandela, released February 11 after 27 years in prison, still supports the low-level armed struggle waged by his African National Congress guerrilla movement.

But he said the black-on-black fighting in the southeastern province hindered the battle against apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial segregation.

"Even now, as we stand together on the threshold of a new South Africa, Natal is in flames," Mandela told an estimated 100,000 people who filled three adjacent soccer fields.

"My message to those of you involved in this battle of brother against brother is this: Take your guns, your knives and your pangas and throw them into the sea," Mandela said. Pangas are similar to machetes.

Mandela and his wife, Winnie, arrived by helicopter to rousing cheers. He spoke from a four-story-tall platform draped with huge flags of the ANC and its ally, the South African Communist Party.

Many in the mostly black crowd waved the green, black and gold

"Even now, as we stand together on the threshold of a new South Africa, Natal is in flames."

Nelson Mandela

banner of the African National Congress and chanted "ANC! ANC!"

About 3,000 blacks, mostly Zulus, have died since 1986 in the power struggle in Natal. The main combatants are the ANC-aligned United Democratic Front and Inkatha, a relatively conservative Zulu political group headed by Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Buthelezi is a staunch opponent of apartheid, but he differs with the ANC over the best way to fight it.

The ANC favors sanctions, boycotts, strikes and guerrilla attacks to put pressure on the government. Buthelezi does not endorse any of these actions and is a proponent of capitalism in contrast to the socialist-oriented ANC.

While the most intense battles have been in the townships around Durban and Pietermaritzburg, 50 miles inland, the fighting has spread throughout Natal.

Several of Mandela's ANC colleagues, including Walter Sisulu, have been in Natal since Thursday meeting with leaders of the Front, Inkatha and local clergymen.

Mandela made several conciliatory remarks concerning Inkatha and Buthelezi, whom he praised for demanding the ANC be legalized and political prisoners be released. President F.W. de Klerk on February 2 legalized the ANC.

Mandela also praised the Zulu leader for refusing to negotiate with the white-led government while other black groups were outlawed.

"This stand of Inkatha has contributed in no small measure to making it difficult for the (white) regime to implement successive schemes designed to perpetuate minority rule," Mandela said.

Inkatha leaders took the unusual step of urging their supporters to attend the rally to hear Mandela.

Inkatha has long staged its own rallies, separate from those in support of the Front and the ANC. On numerous occasions, violence has broken out when the crowd from one rally headed home through neighborhoods dominated by the other.

Figures show Mexico is producing 10 times more marijuana than previously estimated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Bush administration, already at odds with the Mexican government, is prepared to release figures showing Mexico produces 10 times more marijuana than previously believed, it was reported Sunday.

The Los Angeles Times said the official U.S. estimate — derived from CIA spy satellite photographs — concludes that Mexico produced 47,500 metric tons of marijuana in 1989. In 1988, the U.S. estimated Mexico's production at 4,750 metric tons.

U.S. officials have long suspected Mexico was underestimating its marijuana production figures. The U.S. figures are expected to be released Thursday, the Times said.

Anti-drug officials told the newspaper the figures don't mean production in Mexico has exploded, but rather that previous estimates, based largely on information supplied by the Mexican government, were too low.

Despite the new information, the Bush administration plans to certify that the Mexican government has cooperated in illegal drug suppression and is eligible for foreign aid, the paper said. But the disclosure is expected to inflame Congress.

Mexico's deputy attorney general, Javier Coello Trejo, when told of the figures during a meeting with Drug Enforcement Administration chief John Lawn, "nearly went into apoplexy," the Times said, quoting a source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But not everyone inside the Drug Enforcement Administration is convinced the new figures are correct, including John Sutton, who heads the agency's cannabis investigation section.

He called the estimates "inordinate" and "wild" and said the U.S. analysts mistakenly included in their count "ditch weed," wild-growing marijuana that lacks the kick of cannabis sold for smoking and has no commercial value. He also suggested other vegetation may have been included in the marijuana count.

But others, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the conclusions were solid. "This is the first time we've done it right," one high-ranking source told the newspaper. The satellite pictures permitted estimates from areas where the Mexican government previously denied surveillance flights.

By contrast, estimates for Colombian marijuana production went up to 2,810 metric tons for 1989, a slight increase from the 2,740 metric tons reported for 1988. In the United States, production for 1989 was estimated at 5,500 metric tons, with 4,600 metric tons for 1988.

'Rocky' statue forced to move from museum

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It looks as if Rocky Balboa has lost his bout with Philadelphia's art museum.

The 8-foot-6-inch statue of the fictional South Philadelphia palooka is scheduled to leave its spot atop the Philadelphia Museum of Art steps Monday for its former home at the Spectrum arena, museum spokeswoman Sandra Horrocks said Sunday.

The statue of Rocky in boxing trunks and gloves, his arms raised in triumph, was moved from the Spectrum for the filming of the latest chapter in Sylvester Stallone's "Rocky" saga. Producers of "Rocky V" had agreed to remove the statue, a prop made for "Rocky III," by Monday.

But Stallone and fans of the underdog boxer tried to persuade the museum to keep the bronze cast on the spot made so famous in the original "Rocky" that tourists regularly run up the steps and hop around the plaza in Rocky fashion.

Polls by a local TV station and a newspaper show residents about equally split on the issue. Mayor W. Wilson Goode came out in favor of leaving the statue put, saying it serves as a great tourist attraction.

Stallone hired a lawyer, former state boxing commissioner James Binns, to try to persuade the Fairmount Park Commission, which oversees the museum, to allow the statue to stay. Binns was returning from Venezuela on Sunday and could not immediately be reached for comment.

But art museum officials say the statue is out of place. President Robert Montgomery Scott said it looks puny in front of the big Greco-Roman building and its columns.

Art museum officials said the statue was to be moved by January 31, but that deadline was extended to allow additional filming for the movie.

The statue has been moved between the sports arena and the museum for almost eight years. It was made by the A. Thomas Schomberg Foundry in 1981 for the "Rocky" sequel and left there after the movie opened in 1982.

That time, museum officials said Stallone failed to remove the statue as agreed, and the museum had to pay $12,000 to move it to the Spectrum.

Governors seek support for education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors put their stamp Sunday on national education goals, but got no encouragement from the White House for the prospect of financial help from a "peace dividend."

"Our aim is excellence in education," said Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, as he offered the goals to the National Governors' Association for approval.

The Arkansas Democrat added that "I do not believe we will achieve (the goals) unless we dramatically change our behavior."

The changes referred to by Clinton were included in a series of objectives that would put the governors on record as pressing for specific steps toward implementing the goals first outlined by President George Bush in his State of the Union address last month.

The governors also adopted a resolution urging the president to allocate any defense budget savings toward education as well as reducing the federal budget deficit and other domestic needs.

"We have to get this peace dividend," said Gov. Roy Romer of Colorado, "or else we're going to have to make some other change in this country's policies or else we're not going to close the gap that we've created."

Romer worked with fellow Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York in drafting the resolution. Cuomo did not attend the NGA session.

The resolution called on the president "to dedicate the peace dividend in a balanced manner between the federal budget deficit, education and other productivity investments."

Earlier, Romer failed in an attempt to get the governors to adopt a resolution that urged the president to "direct substantial federal resources from defense to educational needs and other productivity investments."

"Otherwise, I don't believe we are going to get the attention of the federal establishment in helping us meet the goals we have today," Romer said.

At a state dinner at the White House, Bush toasted the governors and what he called "our commitment to work together toward... an American education system that is second to none."

"We came together not as Republicans and Democrats, not as partisan competitors, but as fellow chief executives with our hearts and minds focused on a single goal: the future of our kids, the future of our country," said Bush.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, the governors' chairman, said, "We all expect that there's a lot of work ahead of us." He raised his glass to both the president and Barbara Bush, saying, "I think we recognize that the first lady may have had some influence on the president in this area."

The governors were returning to the White House Monday to meet with Bush.

Among the earliest reaction to the governors' action was sharp criticism from Timothy Dyer, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"America's governors receive an A-plus for rhetoric, but fail economics," said Dyer. "Their goals are lofty, patriotic, noble and certainly what we all would like. However, without resources they are merely wishes."

Campaign statement criticized

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A Democratic candidate for governor who borrowed the Republicans' Willie Horton strategy was forced to apologize after the tactic was denounced as racist and prejudicial to a defendant.

Gubernatorial hopeful Rep. Bill Nelson kicked off his campaign February 14 by promising to make a Florida case involving a black defendant into his rival's "Willie Horton — only worse." On Friday, he issued his apology.

The six-term congressman is considered the front-runner among the three Democrats seeking a chance to challenge first-term Republican Gov. Bob Martinez.

Horton, who had spent 10 years in prison in Massachusetts for murder, escaped during a furlough in 1987 and raped a Maryland woman and assaulted her fiancé. A commercial during President George Bush's 1988 campaign blamed Democrat Michael Dukakis for the tragedy.

The ad pictured Horton, a black man — which critics said was a tactic to stir racial fears. When Nelson likened a Florida police slaying to the Horton case, the same charges arose.

Nelson sought to blame Martinez for the case of Charles Street, who is accused of killing two Dade County police officers in 1988, 10 days after he was released from prison early because of overcrowding.

The officers were killed after they went to subdue a man seen throwing rocks. Police said the officers' killer took a revolver away from one of them and fired at least seven shots, wounding them in the head and shoulders, above their bulletproof vests.

Reagan tape supports Poindexter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan repeatedly endorsed false letters to Congress in his videotaped testimony for John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial.

The letters, written by former national security adviser Robert McFarlane and which form the basis of one of the criminal charges against Poindexter, categorically deny that Oliver North was raising money or giving military advice to the Nicaraguan rebels.

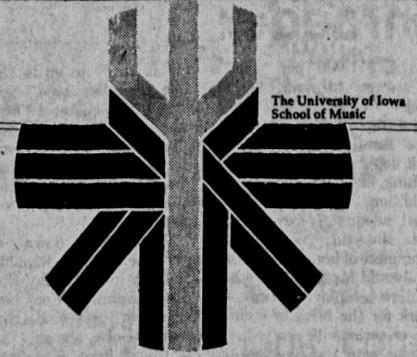

Reagan said he does not know to this day that the letters were false. He also said he did not know that McFarlane, Poindexter's predecessor in the Reagan White House, pleaded guilty to crimes in connection with the letters or that the Tower Board that Reagan appointed three years ago concluded that North had been assisting the Contras militarily.

Poindexter, facing trial March 5 on charges of conspiracy, obstructing Congress and making false statements, sent responses to Congress in 1986 that embraced McFarlane's letters of the previous year.

In his videotaped deposition, which was released last Thursday, Reagan offered virtual testimonials to his former aides. Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb was unable to keep the former president from injecting numerous statements that were favorable to Poindexter.

"If the information that Robert McFarlane provided to Congress... contained lies... would it still be your belief that John Poindexter should readopt those false statements?" Webb asked.

"I have a great deal of confidence in the man who was quoted as sending these letters, McFarlane," Reagan responded.

NICARAGUA ELECTIONS

Free will or fraud?

Nicaraguan citizens crowded polling places Sunday under the watchful eyes of some 3,000 international observers, to decide between the ruling Sandinista government and the 14-party opposition coalition UNO. But as results from the "democratic" elections began to trickle in late Sunday, it was still uncertain whether the fate of Nicaragua rested in the will of its people or in the grip of Sandinista President Daniel Ortega.

Regardless of who wins, or how, the election results may present serious problems for the Bush administration. Extended scrutiny by the large delegation of observers has intensified pressure on the U.S. government to officially recognize the winners. Former President Jimmy Carter has given Bush his "strong recommendation" that the U.S. should move toward quick "reconciliation" with the Nicaraguan government if the elections are pronounced "honest and fair."

Since the U.S. has worked for years to topple the Sandinista government, Carter's urgings obviously assume an Ortega win. And, considering Ortega's strong hold on the mechanisms of power in that country, Carter's implicit prediction is a rather solid bet. His faith in the chances of a truly fair election, on the other hand, is less justifiable.

Although the observers have thus far called the election process "clean," Ortega has already:

- banned a polling firm that gave UNO candidate Violeta Barrios de Chamorro a significant lead in the presidential race,
- ousted selected 'unfavorable' members of the observation delegation,
- presided over a registration process that has yielded more registered voters than eligible adults, and
- placed severely debilitating legal and economic constraints on the UNO campaign.

Opposition leaders worried openly this weekend that even intensive oversight would be insufficient to prevent the Sandinistas from skewing results in rural areas, where Chamorro enjoys the heaviest support. Yet, Carter and other members of the delegation insist that the elections will produce a credible victor.

If, as widely expected, Ortega and the Sandinistas prevail, the Bush administration is in a serious predicament. With a former U.S. president publicly calling for "reconciliation," it will be difficult for the U.S. to avoid recognizing the Sandinistas' "legitimacy" and continue economic sanctions.

However, because Ortega has not agreed to end arms shipments to El Salvador and the fate of the politically homeless Contras remains, in part, the United States' responsibility, "reconciliation" with Ortega at this point entails a serious and unwise deviation from one of the major U.S. foreign policy goals for the last decade.

A surprise Chamorro victory would also be problematic, however, because Sandinista candidates have publicly vowed not to relinquish their government positions. Under those circumstances, and with Ortega retaining full control over the Nicaraguan military, Chamorro may call upon the U.S. to help enforce a transition of power necessitated by the 'will of the people.'

That situation could revive the bitter debate over funding for the Contras, or, considering their current state of disarray, raise the possibility of more direct means of U.S. involvement.

Recognition of Ortega would be a bitter pill for Bush to swallow, and it is being nearly force-fed by Carter and the other members of the observer delegation. But, regardless of this election's outcome, enforcement of the people's will virtually guarantees the eventual removal of Ortega and the Sandinistas, and the fulfillment of a major Bush administration goal.

FALKLANDS

Shelving hostilities

About ten days ago, Argentina and Britain decided to resume diplomatic relations, broken off during the Falklands War eight years ago. But they have more to do to completely resolve the dispute that made them fight in the first place.

Argentina's President Menem's election campaign was marked with fierce anti-Britain rhetoric. Argentina, he had said, would not deal with Britain unless Britain gave up claims on the Malvinas (the Argentine name for the Falklands). So his olive branch to Margaret Thatcher seemed a bewildering about-face.

Menem and Thatcher are simply trying to be good politicians. Menem is looking two years down the road when Europe will be a single market — and one that contains the new economic superpower, the resurgent Germany. Argentina needs international investment to bolster its bedraggled economy, and continued hostilities with Britain will effectively block any dealing with the EEC.

Thatcher, at the moment, has her hands full with another British colony, Hong Kong. She is grappling, and not very successfully at that, with the Chinese dragon, and so is more than willing to put the Falklands on the shelf for now.

But this rapprochement of convenience has not removed the cause of the problem — the question of sovereignty over the islands that started the war. And unless that is settled amicably, reconciliation will not be complete.

Reynolds pitchmen do it again

One job you don't need to bother offering me, thanks but no thanks, is public relations spokesperson for the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Last week, The Washington Post obtained and published Reynolds' marketing plan to test a new brand of cigarettes called Dakota. The plan states that Dakota is specifically designed to "replace Marlboro as the brand of choice among female smokers 18-24." Marlboro, manufactured by Philip Morris Companies Inc., has for years been successfully promoted by a rugged cowboy, riding a horse manfully through the mountains of Montana and contentedly smoking Marlboro cigarettes.

Apparently, Reynolds' marketing research has determined that the segment of our population that is most susceptible to the lures of the weed tobacco is not rugged cowboys riding horses manfully through the mountains of Montana, but rather "virile females" (Reynolds' own amazing term) in their early 20s, white, poor and uneducated, who like to watch Roseanne and evening soap operas on TV. According to Reynolds' marketing plan, this is the profile of the targeted Dakota smoker:

- Education: No more than high school.
- Employment: "Work is a job, not a career." Her primary life goal is to get married as soon as possible.
- Interests: "Partying with friends; dancing, going to clubs and bars; cruising; watching television; shopping at the mall."
- Live Entertainment: "Drag races;

J.L.
 McClure

motocross; motorcycle races; hot rod shows; cycle shows; tractor pulls, monster trucks; wrestling, tough man competitions." Essentially, spending time "with her boyfriend doing whatever he is doing."

The essence of the Dakota campaign — set to begin test marketing in Houston in April — is to attract those women who feel both an economic and personal lack of control over their lives and who, therefore, are vulnerable to implicit promises, e.g. smoking cigarettes is a means to power, success and happiness. It is at once laughable and detestable.

It is also, of course, not new. In fact, just last month Reynolds was followed by a public outcry that followed its announcement to market another new brand of cigarettes, Uptown, specifically targeting blacks, who, like poor, white women, have been identified by cigarette companies as most vulnerable to cigarette advertising. Uptown — originally set to appear this month in Philadelphia — has, at least temporarily, been shelved.

But that's not all of Reynolds' public relations problems. New York City's Consumer Affairs Commissioner, Mark Green, last week made public a stinging letter he fired off to the company, condemning its current campaign for Camel cigarettes that features "Smooth Character," a cartoon camel who is sometimes adorned in a tuxedo, sometimes wearing sunglasses, but always smoking a cigarette and always accompanied by an attractive young woman.

The essence of the Dakota campaign is to attract those women who feel both an economic and personal lack of control over their lives.

"As the father of two young children and the new Commissioner of Consumer Affairs," Green wrote, "I am appalled at your 'Smooth Character' Camel advertising campaign that risks addicting children to cigarettes." He charged Reynolds with "inducing children to smoke," asking rhetorically, "Who watches and talks about cartoon characters, kids or adults? Who is impressionable enough to associate smoking and success and money, kids or adults?"

(Reynolds might respond, "virile females" who enjoy "cruising," "shopping at the mall" and "tough man competitions" — but I doubt it.)

and Human Services, Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, last week went before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee to denounce generally the whole cigarette industry by presenting the results of a Smoking and Health: A National Status Report, conducted by his agency. That report estimates that cigarette smoking costs the nation $52 billion each year in health costs or time lost from work, about $221 per person, smoker and non-smoker alike.

Sullivan attacked the cigarette companies as immoral and irresponsible. "Cigarettes are the only legal product," Sullivan testified, "that when used as intended cause death," adding that the companies — which together spend a staggering $6.9 billion a day in advertising — are "trading death for corporate profits."

Brennan Dawson, a spokesperson for the Tobacco Institute, which represents the tobacco industry, responded by saying the government's findings are flawed in two ways. "There are no data to back up the claims that smokers overutilize the health-care system," she said. "Secondly, people's productivity and lifestyle are personal matters and do not result in a cost to society. Smokers pay their own way."

Dawson's is another job I'd just as soon not be offered, thanks but no thanks. I simply can't imagine having to utter the words "smokers pay their own way" with even the semblance of a straight face.

J.L. McClure's column appears Mondays on the Viewpoints page.

South Africa's dilemma may defy solution

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Five years ago, when I left South Africa on my first visit, I was as pessimistic as can be imagined on this country's future.

The massacre at Langa had triggered a wave of violence that would lead to a national state of emergency; black-on-black violence which has thus far taken 3000 lives just in the province of Natal was on the rise, with the government sitting back and relishing the prospect of violent black disunity.

Within the African National Congress, talk was heard about moving against so-called "soft targets" — shopping centers, movie theaters, even schools — rather than restricting operations to military installations.

Jeff Greenfield

And the National Party government of President P.W. Botha appeared unwilling to do more than abolish "petty" apartheid rules, such as bans on interracial marriage and the use of public amenities such as beaches.

Now, the ground has shifted; now, the National Party has made a decisive break with the foundations of apartheid; now, issues such as voting rights for blacks and a commitment to end white domination are the official policy of the ruling party.

And now Nelson Mandela and the leadership of the African National Congress and other once-forbidden groups are invited to participate as equals in charting the country's future.

This is cause for hope; it is not, however, cause for excessive optimism. What remains to be resolved is, in some ways, even more daunting than what has already been accomplished.

The political dilemma is hard enough. President F.W. de Klerk has made it clear that a simple "one man, one vote" electoral system will not work in South Africa; in his view, some constitutional protection for the white minority is absolutely essential.

He points to the "undemocratic" protection for small states embedded in the U.S. Constitution; the Senate exists to give small states far more power than their numbers would merit. But can race be the basis for disproportionate power in a nation trying to abandon its supremacist past? Will separate voting rolls or separate legislative houses form a basis for a grand compromise?

Hard as that question is, the nature of the beliefs of black leaders could pose even harder problems. Nelson Mandela, Walter Sisulu and the other old lions of the ANC are bound to an ideology that seems remarkably out of place in a world where Communism is abandoning its deepest beliefs even within the Kremlin.

Western editorialists have already expressed uneasiness with Mandela's post-release embrace of the South African Communist party. And his strong support for the nationalization of enterprises such as banks and mines has raised this conundrum: Since economic aid from abroad is likely to be flowing into Eastern Europe, and since Western nations lack either the appetite or the wallet to pour in aid, South Africa's economic future — particularly for blacks — lies in growth.

Spend a half-day in a township such as Alexandra, where there is no real work, and you cannot help but wish for basic investment on a massive scale. The growth of black trade unions, such as the Mine Workers and the Congress of South African Trade Unions, suggests that in a politically free South Africa, the wretched exploitation of black workers could be relegated to history. But even in a system where job discrimination and wage slavery are abolished, there will be no progress without investment; and there will be no investment without a sense that the new government, whatever its complexion, will not be looking to nationalize the first risk-takers who come into the country.

South Africa is a country of breathtaking riches. Were it not for the suppression of black enterprise, intelligence and political rights, it would long ago have taken its place as one of the economic giants of the world.

It has the chance, for the first time in its history, to fulfill that destiny now. For the first time, there is a chance for something other than oppression or bloodshed. If it cannot find its way now, at this time of promise, then God help South Africa.

Forbes, 70, dies in sleep

Malcolm Forbes

NEW YORK (AP) — Malcolm Forbes, the multimillionaire magazine owner, motorcyclist, balloonist and self-proclaimed "capitalist tool" who reveled in life and free enterprise, has died of a heart attack at age 70.

Forbes died in his sleep Saturday afternoon at his 40-acre estate in Far Hills, N.J.

"Death happens to everyone but we never believed it would happen to him," always defied the odds," said Forbes' son, Malcolm Jr., who will succeed his father as editor in chief of Forbes magazine and chief executive officer of Forbes Inc. The son formerly was president and chief operating officer of Forbes Inc. and deputy editor in chief of the magazine.

"What he wanted inscribed on his tombstone says it all: 'While alive, he lived,'" Malcolm Jr. said at a Sunday news conference with his sister and three brothers.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor, a frequent companion of Forbes, said Sunday, "I feel like a great light has been turned off. He was one of the best friends I ever had."

Among the 1,000 guests at Forbes' $2 million 70th birthday bash last fall in Tangier, Morocco, were billionaire developer Donald Trump, Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Various estimates placed the worth of Forbes, chairman and chief shareholder of Forbes Inc., at anywhere from $400 million to $1 billion.

Whatever the amount, Forbes gleefully relished his riches.

He made the first free flight over Beijing in a hot-air balloon and set

Magazine is legacy left by Forbes

NEW YORK (AP) — Forbes magazine is the cornerstone of a Forbes family empire that includes publishing, collections of motorcycles and Fabergé eggs, a palace and an island paradise. By the force of his personality, Malcolm Forbes made it all work.

Publishing executives and analysts said Forbes magazine lost its best salesman with the death of its chairman and editor in chief.

His journeys by motorcycle and hot-air balloon through exotic locales, his lavish parties attended by heads of state, celebrities and corporate bosses undoubtedly helped create excitement about his flagship magazine.

"I'm sure that trickled down to advertising orders," said magazine publishing consultant Martin Walker.

Media analyst John Reidy agreed that Forbes' style "helped in a major way to bring in advertisers — there was probably nobody quite like that before."

But analysts said Forbes also left behind a strong organization in which he gave increasing responsibility to his designated successor, his oldest son Malcolm Forbes, better known as Steve, and that the company should thrive.

Malcolm, who has won four awards for economic forecasting from USX Corp., announced Sunday he would take over as chairman and chief executive of both the magazine and the company and as editor in chief of Forbes.

"While the death of Malcolm Forbes is a loss to journalism and certainly to the company he did so much to build, one can fully anticipate that that his company will continue to do very well," said Marshall Loeb, managing editor of Fortune, a key competitor to Forbes magazine.

Forbes magazine was started two years before Malcolm Forbes was born.

His father, Scottish immigrant Bertie Charles Forbes, was a syndicated financial journalist for a New York newspaper and started the magazine in 1917.

Malcolm Forbes, born Aug. 19, 1919, became associate publisher of the magazine in 1947. When B.C. Forbes died, he was succeeded by his oldest son, Bruce, and Malcolm moved up to the posts of editor and publisher.

Bruce died in 1964, and Malcolm took over as head of the family company and the magazine, which at the time had about 800 ad pages a year and a circulation of 100,000.

Law bans smoking on U.S. flights

Associated Press

A smoking ban on virtually all domestic U.S. flights took effect Sunday amid both relief and grumbling, and the phrase "Smoking or non-smoking?" all but disappeared from the lips of ticket agents.

"If the plane starts to go down, I'm lighting one up," said Dave Noeth of New York City, a traveler at LaGuardia Airport.

The federal ban, in force since 1988 on flights of less than two hours, now applies to 99.8 percent of domestic flights — the only exception being flights to Alaska and Hawaii of more than six hours. Overseas flights are not affected.

"It's wonderful. It's for the health of everyone," said Eastern Airlines flight attendant Nancy Roberson of Charleston, S.C. "I think there are more pleased people than not. All the passengers tell me about it."

Michael Barnett, an Eastern ticket agent in Miami, said the elimination of smoking and non-smoking sections made his life a bit easier. "Now we just issue seats," he said.

Supporters of the ban say separate smoking sections do not adequately shield non-smoking passengers and crew members from cigarette smoke. Critics argue that smokers' rights are being trampled on.

"I don't think it's fair," said Gail Fiore of Huntington, N.Y., as she arrived at LaGuardia. "I pay the same fare as a non-smoker and there should be a section for it. They're giving all the non-smokers all the rights and taking away all of ours."

Added her husband, Hugo: "Even in the service they gave you a 10-minute smoke break."

Other smokers took a more resigned approach, even if nicotine withdrawal pangs are likely to bring new meaning to the term white-knuckle flying.

"If they say you don't smoke, you don't smoke," said Rich Meadows of Ridgecrest, Calif., as he awaited a Chicago-bound flight at Los Angeles International Airport.

"I don't care for it, but that's the way it goes. I'll just take some chewing tobacco, which makes the stewardesses mad. It's pretty disgusting, but it's something to do."

Dan Lauria, a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a lobbying group, said last week that he had fielded many calls from "miserable" smokers.

"We are telling the people the law is the law," he said. "We're telling people not to smoke in the bathroom. It's dangerous to the plane."

Longtime smoker Joanne Sharples of Omaha, Neb., arriving in Miami, said she managed not to light up during the flight. "After about three hours you get those anxiety pangs. But I've gone eight hours," she said.

Sharples, who said she has tried four times to quit smoking and plans to try again, said she understands non-smokers' desire to breathe clean air.

"I wish they would do the same thing for women who wear an abundance of perfume," she said. "I can understand certainly a smoke-free America, a drug-free America and a perfume-free America!"

Cold front may cause another liftoff delay for shuttle Atlantis

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown resumed Sunday for the nighttime launch of shuttle Atlantis after technicians fixed a computer problem that caused a fourth postponement of the secret military mission 31 seconds before liftoff.

But forecasters said a cold front was expected to bring clouds and high winds, reducing to only 40 percent the chances that weather would be good enough to launch the shuttle with its spy satellite early Monday.

Despite the gloomy forecast, shuttle managers in midafternoon gave the go-ahead for the launch team to pump 528,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into Atlantis' cavernous fuel tank for another try.

The four delays were the most in a shuttle launch since the Challenger, which was postponed seven times and launched on the eighth try to explode shortly after lift off Jan. 28, 1986, killing all seven astronauts.

Contributing to the decision to load fuel was the fact that Monday offered the best weather odds of the next three days. The odds drop to just 20 percent on Tuesday and Wednesday, forecasters said.

Clouds could block a spectacular view of the liftoff for residents on the East Coast as far north as New Jersey; in clear weather, they could see the shuttle's fiery exhaust climbing on a course a few hundred miles off the coast.

Bad weather and the illness of Atlantis' commander resulted in postponements Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The weather was perfect early Sunday before liftoff was halted by the computer problem with 31 seconds to go.

The computer is one of two used by the Air Force to provide information on the shuttle's course after liftoff. If the vehicle strayed off track and threatened a populated area, a range safety officer would send a radio signal to blow it up so pieces would fall harmlessly into the Atlantic.

Mission rules require that both computers be operating for a launch, with the one that failed serving as a backup.

Capt. Ken Warren, an Air Force spokesman, reported Sunday that the trouble had been traced to bad software.

"The computer is up and we're ready to support a launch," Warren said.

Hawkeyes peak; stay in title hunt

Rita Es
The Daily Iowan

As the Iowa coaches huddled outside their players' locker room before the Indiana game Sunday, the women's basketball team could be heard inside, chanting:

"We can win the Big Ten. Why? Because we are better!"

The 13th-ranked Hawkeyes certainly proved they have a chance at the conference title with two huge victories this weekend, including a 85-47 rout of the Hoosiers Sunday.

Iowa scored more points in the first half than Indiana could muster in the entire game, heading into intermission with a 51-18 lead.

The Hawkeyes took an early 2-0 lead on an 18-footer from guard Stephanie Schueler, and they never looked back. Indiana was unable to get into double figures until forward Jenny Davis hit two free throws to make the score 36-11 in Iowa's favor with 5:25 remaining in the first period.

"Of course it was over at the half, everyone knows that," Indiana coach Jim Izard said. "I think Iowa is playing basketball as good as anyone in the Big Ten... They're starting to peak at the right time." Leading Iowa in the victory was senior forward Franthea Price, who chipped in 25 points and 11 rebounds in the contest. Guard Jollette Law had 13 points and reserve center Toni Foster added 11 as the Hawkeyes moved to 19-5 overall and 11-3 in the conference.

That record was boosted by another key blowout this weekend. Friday, the Hawkeyes faced long-time rival Ohio State in a matchup to see if the Buckeyes could take over third place in the conference and avenge an earlier loss to Iowa this season.

They couldn't. In fact, Ohio State couldn't do much of anything as Iowa outscored the Buckeyes by 43 points to win easily, 94-51.

The losing margin was the largest ever suffered by Ohio State, and it marked the first time in Big Ten Iowa outplayed their rivals in nearly every statistic, grabbing 44 rebounds to Ohio State's 38, forcing 29 turnovers while committing just 14, and stealing the ball 17 times to the Buckeyes' three steals.

"We obviously did just about everything right," said Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer, who picked up her 100th Big Ten win with the victory. "As fired up as we were, I thought it would only last a few minutes. But it proved to be the real difference in the game."

Law was all over the floor for Iowa, scoring a career-high 25 points in her last game against Ohio State ever. The 5-foot-4 senior shot 14 of 18 from the field and hit three of six free throws, but it was the defense, she said, that keyed the Hawkeyes' win.

Michigan State's conference winning streak is its longest since 1979.

The Spartans (22-5) stayed a half-game behind league-leading Purdue at 11-3.

lead and was ahead 41-28 at halftime. Only Cheaney's 22 first-half points kept Indiana in the game.

The Hoosiers cut the gap to 47-39 with 14 minutes left, but a three-point play by Smith and a basket by Montgomery pushed Michigan State's lead to 52-39 at 12:46.

Indiana never got closer than the final score. Pat Graham's basket cut the Spartans' lead to 70-64 with 22 seconds left, but a breakaway dunk by Smith with 20 seconds clinched the win.

Poor free-throw shooting by Michigan State helped keep Indiana in the game. The Spartans made only 18 of 33 free throws, and missed the front end of three 1-and-1s in the final 2:01.

Michigan State's Kirk Manns, who leads the Big Ten in scoring, was suffering from a stress fracture in his right foot and was held to only seven points in Sunday's game.

In other Big Ten games this weekend, sophomore guard Woody Austin scored 21 points to help Purdue keep their No. 1 standing, defeating Ohio State 75-70; Rumeal Robinson scored 23 points to lead Michigan to their 20th victory with a 94-69 beating of Northwestern, 94-69; and Minnesota's Richard Coffey had 18 points in his team's 102-80 rout of Iowa.

Ohio State will host Illinois tonight in a Big Monday game on ESPN at 8:30 p.m. CST.

Wrestlers finish regular season with strong showing

Just another day at the office.

That's how things turned out to be for the Iowa wrestling team, as they easily disposed of No. 24 Notre Dame in South Bend, 36-5, Sunday night. It was the final meet of the regular season for the third-ranked Hawkeyes.

The Fighting Irish were not fighting for long, thanks to a Hawkeye team that scored the first 14 points of the match and improved their record to 19-2-1.

Starting off the match was 118-pounder Chad Zaputil, who decisioned Andy Radenbaugh by a score of 6-4. The Centerville, Iowa native upped his dual record to 13-2.

"It was nice to get that out of the way after being injured for awhile," Zaputil said.

At 126 pounds, No. 3 Hawkeye Terry Brands recorded the first of two pins for coach Dan Gable's squad, when he took care of Marcus Gowens 5 minutes, 24 seconds into the match.

"Coach Gable said that I haven't been turning people enough," Brands said. "I just tried to build up a lead."

Next, Iowa's lone top-ranked wrestler, 134-pounder Tom Brands, recorded a 21-4 technical fall over James Posey of the Irish, setting the stage for what was expected to be the feature match of the night.

That was at 142 pounds, where seventh-ranked Hawkeye Troy Steiner was edged out by No. 3 all-American Pat Boyd of the Irish,

"Ostie had a real nice throw. (Weaver) hit so hard that his headgear broke."

Dan Gable

2-1. Boyd improved his record to 25-3 while Steiner is now 25-5.

Iowa got back in the win column at 150 pounds, when fifth-ranked Doug Streicher destroyed Todd Layton 10-2, and 158-pounder Keith Trammel defeated Todd Tomazic of Notre Dame, 8-3. Trammel, who upped his record to 11-6-2, was only a little satisfied with his performance.

"I didn't want to have any take-downs against me," Trammel said. "But a win is a win."

Meanwhile, Gable appeared to be a little more pleased. "Trammel had some flurries and represented us in a real nice fashion," he said.

At 167, fourth-ranked Bart Chelovig decisioned No. 13 Mark Girardi by a count of 10-4, giving Iowa a more than comfortable 24-3 cushion at this juncture.

"I didn't start out fast enough," Chelovig said. "I could tell half-way through the match that he (Girardi) was starting to get a little tired."

At 190, No. 3 Brooks Simpson ran his unbeaten string to 16 matches with a resounding 21-9 major decision over Steve King, before the Hawks ended the meet with their second pin of the night.

Fourth-ranked heavyweight John Oostendorp moved to 29-1 on the year by dominating Chuck Weaver in 0:36. This gave the Hawkeyes their winning margin of 36-5.

"Ostie had a real nice throw," Gable said. "(Weaver) hit so hard that his headgear broke."

Iowa will now begin concentrating on the Big Ten Championship at Northwestern in two weeks. The Hawks have never lost a Big Ten meet under the guidance of Gable.

"We've been consistent all year and we think we're ready to compete for the national championship," the coach said.

Gophers pay Iowa back — in full

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Iowa basketball had been bullying Minnesota and coach Clem Haskins when the Gophers traveled to Carver-Hawkeye Arena the past three seasons. But this time, the 18th-ranked team decided to take a few swings of their own — literally — clobbering the Hawkeyes 102-80.

Official Tom Rucker had to gather both teams around the free-throw line midway through the second half to remind them to watch their p's and q's. And with only one minute gone in the contest, the Minnesota bench was whistled for a technical foul, one of three T's on the Gophers during the game.

"We try to get up in your chest and play pressure defense, and sometimes elbows get high," Haskins said. "Sometimes, I think the temperature gets inside some people."

"I think the officials did a nice job of controlling things."

After losing by a combined total of 94 points in the last three games at Carver, and earning a reputation for stumbling on the road, Haskins said his team was looking forward to changing that trend.

"We've taken a licking here for the last three seasons," Haskins said, "and I think we've won

Unknown Devine tries to add spark

Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

About five minutes of Saturday's Iowa-Minnesota game had elapsed when Jeff Devine took his warm-up jacket off, revealing jersey No. 20 without a name on the back.

A minute later, as the small blond took to the court for second-string point guard Dale Reed, comments could be heard around Carver-Hawkeye Arena: "Who's that little blond kid, No. 20?" "Why doesn't he have his name on the back of his jersey?" "What's his name? Jeff Devine? I thought he was a ball boy."

No, the junior walk-on, listed at 5-foot-8 in the program, wasn't a ball boy. But his size could lead many people to that assumption.

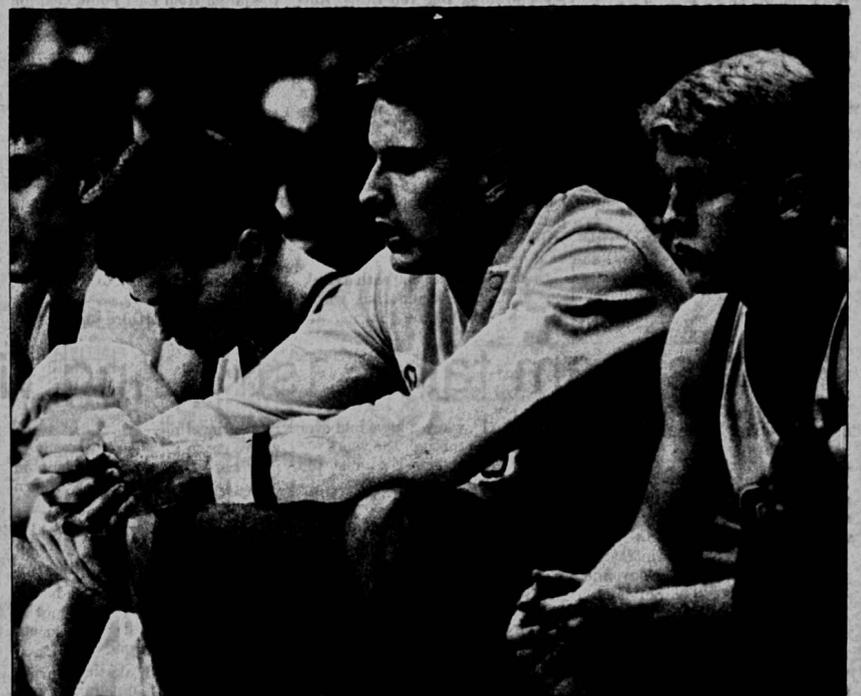

Including some of the Minnesota players. Devine faced 6-foot-7 Willie Burton, who just looked at him, laughed and tossed the ball to a teammate. But it won the small blond the cheers of the crowd.

"I figured they'd be on my side here at home," Devine said. "Of course if I get in on the road they'll tear me apart."

Devine squared off against Minnesota guard Melvin Newbern, to whom the Iowa junior soon turned the ball over.

Baseball talks stall

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Fehr and Chuck O'Connor didn't have much to say to each other Sunday, leaving just one day before baseball talks take a break that threatens the start of the season on April 2.

Fehr, as promised, spent the 11th day of the spring training lockout at his home in suburban Rye Brook, N.Y., waiting by the telephone for owners to change their stance on salary arbitration eligibility. In the evening, he went to his office in Manhattan to prepare for Tuesday's meeting of the union's executive board.

Fehr said he spoke on the telephone with Commissioner Fay Vincent and O'Connor, management's chief negotiator, but said it was "nothing much."

"Somebody called me this morning and asked if I had any bright ideas," Fehr said earlier, without identifying the caller. "I said said, 'No.'"

O'Connor and his staff were at the Player Relations Committee offices four blocks away, preparing for today's 30th negotiating session — possibly the last chance an agreement can be reached that would allow the season to open on time.

up and playing aggressive defense," Law said. "It was just nice to win."

Iowa looks next to a contest with league-leading Northwestern Friday in Evanston, Ill. The 16th-ranked Wildcats defeated No. 15 Purdue 66-62 yesterday to put the Boilermakers out of contention for the conference title, and to boost the Hawkeyes into second place.

Northwestern plays Illinois

tonight, and with a victory would move to 12-2 in league play, putting the Hawkeyes a full game out of first place. But a win Friday would give Iowa a tie for the conference lead.

"That's a trip that I know this team and I are looking forward to," Stringer said. "We're going into Northwestern with the idea of finding out who's who and what's what."

Basketball

three road games this year, so we've got a lot of people to pay back in this conference."

The win moved Minnesota one game shy of 20 wins against six losses, and 10-5 in the Big Ten. Iowa continued sliding, losing its sixth straight on the way to an 11-14 overall and 3-12 league standing.

The mismatch was Iowa's worst whipping in Carver, and equaled the most a Minnesota team has scored against the Hawkeyes in the all-time series. The Gophers led by 34 at one point in the game.

"I don't think you need me to tell you that Minnesota was sharp," Iowa coach Tom Davis said, "and they exposed a lot of our weaknesses."

Jepsen led all scorers with 21 points and hauled in eight rebounds. Minnesota relied on balanced scoring: 18 from Richard Coffey, 16 each for Willie Burton and Melvin Newbern, 14 from Jim Shikenjanski, and 11 apiece from Kevin Lynch and Walter Bond.

Iowa's Rodell Davis (12), Matt Bullard (10) and James Moses (10) also found double figures.

"We didn't forget that beating them put on us last year," Newbern said of the 99-61 final. "We just took control in every phase of the game."

After recording only eight first-half rebounds, Iowa finished with a 29-29 deadlock in the category at the end of the contest. The Hawkeyes had 27 turnovers in the game.

Haskins had a prescription for Iowa's woes.

"The key is guardplay," the Minnesota coach said. "It takes guards to win championships."

Point guard Troy Skinner had five points, six assists and three turnovers for Iowa, while backups Dale Reed and Jeff Devine combined for six points, two assists and five turnovers.

Davis has heard the advice. "Our guards have been getting whipped," he said.

Quoting Davis

Through what has been a difficult stretch for Iowa basketball, the coach is finding time to smile through the tears.

—On fans leaving Saturday's game early. "We're not playing very good basketball. I don't think (players) expect blind loyalty. I'm realistic. If it means beating traffic or getting out, I understand that."

—On Iowa's shooting problems. Is anybody gaining confidence? "Boy, I hope so. I hope somebody is out there."

—And on spilling inside information to Illinois and Michigan, who the Hawkeyes play on the road after beating both at Carver. "Don't tell Michigan and Illinois this, but they don't play as physical on the ball or off the ball. So we'll try to keep that a secret."

Devine

"I don't think that Melvin Newbern's any quicker than me," Devine said. "I think I just had to be a little smarter and keep my head up with the ball, two things I just didn't do. I felt that I was quick enough to compete with anyone out there, I just didn't play smart when I had the ball."

Devine was walked over and pushed around the court for the entirety of his two minutes in the game.

"Once they see a little kid coming in here who they figure hasn't seen much playing time, players aren't stupid, they smell blood," said Devine, who also said that he really is 5-8 "with shoes on and without a haircut." "I knew it would be like that. You've just got to push them back, I was ready for that. You can't show any weakness or else they'll just go for more."

Push back, Devine did. Take on any opponent, he also did. The only thing the feisty guard looked like he wouldn't do was give up. But after two turnovers in two minutes on the court, Iowa coach Tom Davis made that choice for the Libertyville, Ill., native.

"I was really happy that (Davis) gave me a chance to get in but I'm really disappointed in what I did," said Devine, who also had one assist. "I think I could have done a lot better. I tried my best, but I didn't play my best. I just didn't play smart out there."

Even without a sterling performance, something in Devine's play made Davis appreciative.

"Jeff had played real well in practice, and he'd really been awfully quick in practice," Davis said. "But being quick in practice and being quick against Newbern, those are two different things... Dale Reed got the message and came on and played quite a bit better after he saw Jeff Devine moving in out there. It seemed to perk Dale up a little bit. So we may have to use Jeff a little more."

"I think it was a combination of nervousness and stupidity really," Devine said. "I got out there and had two turnovers in two minutes, which comes out to 40 turnovers in 40 minutes... I

2 Hawks win titles; team places 6th

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

A top six finish was what Iowa men's track coach Ted Wheeler was aiming for at this weekend's 80th Big Ten Indoor Championships in Bloomington, Indiana. And that's exactly what he got.

Iowa's sixth place standing was their highest since 1984, when they also took sixth. Before that the Hawks, who scored 35 points, came in third in 1967.

The host Hoosiers won the title with 98.5 points, followed by Ohio State (82.5), Illinois (81), Purdue (77), Wisconsin (42), and the Hawkeyes.

Individually, Iowa had two athletes winning Big Ten titles: Antuan Maybank in the 400-meters and D'Juan Strozier in the 600.

Maybank, who had his foot in a cast the last couple of weeks, didn't allow his less than 100 per cent foot bother him in winning the title, with a time of 47.55. He had already qualified for the NCAA's at Indianapolis in two weeks.

"If I had practiced, I think my time would have been a little better," the freshman, whose foot is in a cast again as a precaution, said modestly.

Strozier took the 600 with a clocking of 1:20.26 - and that wasn't even his best time. During the preliminaries of the two-day meet, the junior from East Point, Georgia set an Indiana Fieldhouse record with a time of 1:19.97.

"I just tried to run a smart race and not start out too slow," Strozier said. "There were a couple of runners that I didn't want to take lightly."

Meanwhile, senior Paul Jones took fourth in the long jump for Iowa, with a leap of 24 feet, 8 1/4 inches. Although Jones did not win the Big Ten title, he continued his streak of having every long jump this season surpass the best one he had during all of last year, when he jumped 24 5/8.

Jones also took third in the triple jump with a leap of 52, 1 1/4, and seventh in the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.47 seconds.

Other Hawks that scored at the meet were the 4 X 880 relay team who took seventh, and the 4 X 400 team that came in fourth.

Shotputter Maurea Crain came in seventh, while teammates Andy Flaherty finished ninth and Doug Joens took twelfth.

As for first place Indiana, they were paced by Bob Kennedy, who won the 3000-meters, the 5000, and the mile run.

Tennis team takes 1st spring victories

Jim Kearney
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team garnered their first wins of the spring season this weekend by easily disposing of their opponents.

The Hawkeyes defeated intrastate rival Iowa State 7-2 on Friday, and Northern Illinois 9-0 on Sunday.

Iowa now owns a 2-3 record for the season.

The Iowa State meet marked the second time this year that the Iowa squad has defeated the Cyclones. The Hawkeyes won by an 8-1 score during the fall season.

The win continued the series dominance the Hawkeyes have had over the Cyclones through the years.

Iowa is now 35-3-1 against the Ames school.

Northern Illinois also possesses a dismal career record against the Hawkeyes. Iowa is now 13-2 against the Illinois school.

Senior co-captain Paul Buckingham thinks the Iowa performance this weekend was stimulated by their poor showing last weekend at the Notre Dame Invitational.

The Hawkeyes left South Bend with three losses.

"We weren't ready to play last weekend," Buckingham said. "We had a meeting earlier last week where coach told us to be ready to play hard from the first point on against Iowa State and Northern Illinois."

Iowa coach Steve Houghton also thought his team rebounded well from the losses.

"It's a good sign to bounce back," Houghton said. "Our confidence is growing a lot, and these meets were good tests for us."

Houghton also thinks the return of Buckingham to the lineup was key.

"Paul shows a lot of intensity when he plays and that carries over to the other players," the

M. Tennis

Iowa coach said.

The win over Iowa State's Jeff Bensen marked the first time Buckingham has seen action during the spring season.

The senior had been bothered by a back problem which forced him to miss the Notre Dame Invitational.

Buckingham thinks the two wins will help the Iowa team in the future.

"This gives us a winning base to build on," Buckingham said.

It was a thought-filled Friday night for Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins after her team had dropped its first two games of the season in a doubleheader against New Mexico in Albuquerque, N.M. ## Loyola victory sets NCAA mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Loyola Marymount tuned up for the post-season by setting another NCAA scoring record in its regular-season finale.

The Lions, with a 117-81 victory over Santa Clara on Saturday, surpassed 100 points for the 24th time this season to break the record of 23 they shared with UNLV.

Bo Kimble, the nation's leading scorer, had 35 points and Hank Gathers 29 for the Lions, 22-5 overall and 13-1 in the West Coast Conference. They clinched the WCC title Friday night and will be top-seeded in the postseason tournament on their home court.

"Our energy going toward the playoffs is high," Loyola Marymount coach Paul Westhead said. "The second season begins next week. We were just trying to create chaos and generate a fast pace. The energy of Hank Gathers was the key."

The previous record of 23 100-point games was set by UNLV in 1975-76 and matched by the Runnin' Rebels the following year. Two years ago, Loyola Marymount first matched UNLV's record before breaking it this season.

"The significance is when we get into the hundreds, we usually win," Westhead said. "Hopefully, we've got a lot more games to go."

In the only three games it didn't reach 100, Loyola Marymount scored 99 points twice. The other was a 102-91 loss at UNLV.

The Lions, who lead the nation in scoring, also are on pace to shatter their NCAA single-season record of 112.5 points a game, set last season. They are averaging 124.9 points.

On Saturday, Santa Clara led 24-17 with 9:47 remaining in the first half. At that point, Westhead altered the Lions' press by using a full-court trap. And that kicked off the record-setting point spree.

"Most teams can only run that for three minutes. We used it for 23 minutes and that turned the game around," Westhead said. "To us, pace is all important."

The Lions scored the next eight points, six by Kimble, to launch a 14-2 run that gave them the lead for good at 31-26. Gathers had the other eight points in that stretch. The Lions, who led 50-36 at halftime, forced 30 turnovers and had 22 steals.

Gathers called it "one of the best games we've played in several weeks. We did something a little different and it speeded things up. The guys had a high energy level."

Sources say Pats' coach may be out

BOSTON (AP) — Raymond Berry, unable to agree with management on the hiring of assistant coaches, may be out as coach of the New England Patriots, according to a published report.

The Patriots, 5-11 last season, have reportedly asked permission to interview Pittsburgh Steelers defensive coordinator Rod Rust as a replacement for Berry, The Boston Globe reported Sunday.

Rust, a friend of Patriots general manager Patrick Sullivan, was New England's defensive coordinator from 1983-1987.

Berry reportedly has been locked in a battle with Sullivan over the makeup of the coaching staff for next season. According to the Globe, which quoted unnamed sources, Sullivan wants to hire new coaches while Berry wants to promote from within.

If Berry continues to defy Sullivan, the coach will be fired, the sources told the Globe. Rust will be brought in to replace him if he and Sullivan can agree to contract terms, the newspaper reported.

Hope enters trade limbo as unhappy Walsh waits

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have found little interest in quarterback Steve Walsh on the trade market and may be forced to keep him for another season, officials with the Cowboys and other NFL teams say.

When the Cowboys selected Walsh in the supplemental draft last July, Dallas owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson said Walsh was a "franchise quarterback."

Jones vowed the team would be able to recoup at least the value of the 1990 first-round draft choice they forfeited to get Walsh after going 1-15 last season.

But the Cowboys have been testing the market for Walsh, and so far only San Francisco and Minnesota have expressed more than a passing interest in him, The Dallas Morning News reported.

A Vikings official said Friday they have not talked to the Cowboys about Walsh since they tried to make him a part of the restructured Herschel Walker deal last month.

Another Cowboys source said team officials have notified Walsh that he could be with the team another season and that Walsh is upset about that possibility, the newspaper said.

"He'll go crazy if that happens," the source said.

So might Troy Aikman, the Cowboys' No. 1 draft pick in 1989 and $11 million starting quarterback. Several sources said despite public images of harmony, Walsh and Aikman rarely speak to each other.

"It will be brutal around here if Walsh stays," one player told The Morning News. "Troy and Steve don't get along at all."

But Johnson, who coached Walsh at the University of Miami, sounded enthusiastic about Walsh being on the roster for another season.

"Oh yeah," Johnson said. "We're approaching it that way, rather than saying he might not be here."

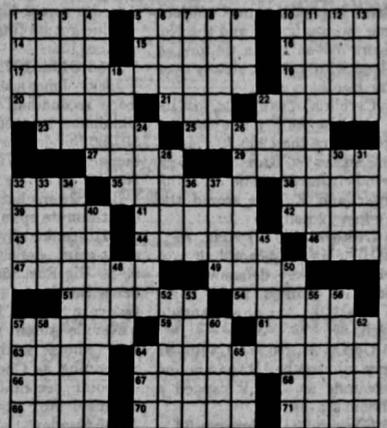

Jones, who said there are "between three and five teams" interested in Walsh, concurred with his coach.

"Not only might we keep him, we would like to keep him," Jones said. "I am even more convinced now that he will be an outstanding NFL player."

Johnson said he did not expect there to be much interest in Walsh until after March 22, the deadline for college juniors to declare for the draft.

Hawk men win; women lose to Illinois

Pat Axmeier
The Daily Iowan

With the Big Ten Championships right around the corner, the 274.65-270.9 win over Illinois Saturday in Champaign, Ill., wasn't the kind of performance the Iowa men's gymnastic team had hoped for.

"We were a little rough," Hawkeye coach Tom Dunn said. "Our performance wasn't quite what we had expected, but it was enough to win. We were close to being good in almost every event, we just missed by a little bit."

The Hawkeyes captured team titles in every event except floor exercise in which Iowa held out it's two top performers, Chris Kabat and Erik Heikkila.

Illinois' Ricardo Cheriell won the all-around while Iowa's Jeff Dow, Keith Cousino, Paul Bautel and Dillon Ashton took the next four spots.

In the individual-scored events, the Hawkeyes also took first in everything except floor exercise: pommel horse, Rich Frye; still rings, Adrian Besancon; vault, Keith Rooks; parallel bars, Cousino; and Kabat on high bar.

"We won't be going into Big Tens over confident," Dunn said. "Big Tens are early on the year so everyone is going to be a little strong effort throughout the meet. Illinois was more consistent, they possess more depth throughout their lineup at this time."

Vaulting has been the Hawkeyes' weakest event so far this season. But with the help of Suzanne Gorny's score of 9.6, which tied for first place and tied the school record, and Becky Sheldon's personal best score, the team started to turn it around. With everyone hitting their routines, they scored the highest team score of the season.

Even if the Iowa women's gymnastics team lost 187.15-180.25 in Saturday's meet against Illinois, the Hawkeyes turned in some of their best performances of the year and a tie for the school record on vault.

"We had some very fine performances," Iowa coach Diane DeMarco said. "We kept up a Sometimes the score doesn't tell the story. That holds true in the case of the Big Ten indoor track championships that took place this weekend in Madison, Wis., for the Iowa women. The team finished with a score of 26.5 and wound up in eighth.

"We ran a lot tougher than the score indicates," distance runner Jennifer Brower said. "The competition was really great. Everybody who made it to finals ran really good races. I ran close to my (personal best) in the 5,000. It's nice to know we can run with some of the best in the nation."

And they were running with the best. Wisconsin's Suzy Favor captured titles in the 3,000 meter run, the mile and the 800 to lead her team to first with a score of 123.5. Michelle Deekers helped Indiana score 86 points to tie with Illinois for second.

Iowa did have some shining moments, especially Rachelle Roberts and Karen Layne, who finished second in the mile and the 600, respectively. Roberts finished 1.27 seconds behind Dekkers and qualified for the NCAA's.

That Grammar Guy

Jake Stigers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, It's Reader Mail Day. A fellow named Matthew has requested that I address the difference between simple and simplistic.

Simple, as an adjective, means uncomplicated or basic. People who believe Elvis is alive tend to have simple minds. Simple, as a noun, is rarely used.

Simplistic is the adjective form of the noun simplism: the act of oversimplifying a problem by ignoring its complexities. Telling everyone not to get pregnant is a simplistic approach to the abortion issue.

An anonymous reader, who obviously steals his ugly stationery from his place of employment, asks that I clarify the distinction between over and more than.

The Associated Press dictates that over is to be used in reference to spatial relationships. The students had to jump over the duck excreta on the sidewalks. The AP also allows over to be used with some numbers. Danforth Quayle is over 21.

However, more than is perhaps better in many cases. More than three people attended the Make It With Wool bake-off. Your parents pay me more than $5 each day to be your friend.

A woman named Julian suggests that I compare famous and infamous in this column.

Famous means widely known. Informally, it means excellent. Nobody really knows why Zsa Zsa is famous. Try my famous kiwi and mustard milkshake.

Infamous means having a bad reputation. Big Ugly Jake, that infamous murderer, forces his victims to watch Ronald Reagan movies before he kills them.

Miss Julian also identified an error in last week's column. I inadvertently changed the name of a character in literature from Mrs. McGrath to Mrs. McGuire. Let my mortifying error be a lesson to you: Don't make mistakes.

My, but Reader Mail Day has been fun. Do you have any questions about our fair language? Send them to me at 201N Communications Center. Perhaps you will be immortalized in this column. Until next time, happy communicating.

'50s singer Ray, 'Prince of Wails,' dies at 63

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fifties balladeer Johnnie Ray, known as the "Prince of Wails" for his vocal histrionics on such songs as "Somebody Stole My Gal" and "Just Walkin' in the Rain," died Saturday of liver failure. He was 63.

Ray, who had entered Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Feb. 16 with liver failure, died at 4 p.m., said hospital spokesman Ron Wise. "His family and friends were with him at the time of his death," Wise said.

In the early 1950s, the slender, boyish singer revolutionized popular music with his unique blend of rhythm and blues, country and gospel punctuated with real-sounding sobs.

Some said his raw and emotional style opened the door to a new type of music that later became rock 'n' roll.

Ray's first hit record was "Cry," followed by "The Little White Cloud That Cried," "Please Mr. Sun," "Brokenhearted," "What's the Use," "Somebody Stole My Gal," "Who's Sorry Now," and "Yes Tonight Josephine."

"Cry," perhaps Ray's greatest hit, has sold more than 25 million copies since its original release, said his publicist, Alan Eichler.

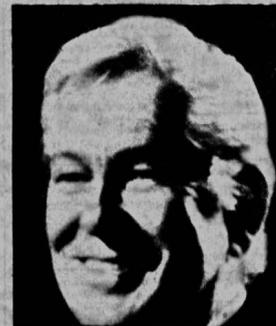

Ray's raw and emotional style was controversial for the early 1950s, and he drew huge crowds in nightclub appearances in New York and elsewhere.

As the press reached for phrases to describe his performance, Ray was crowned at various times as "The Prince of Wails," "The Nabob of Sob," "The Howling Success," "The Song Wringer," "The Cry Guy" and the "Master of Misery."

"Of course the days are gone of the screaming teen-agers — and nobody had them screaming more than I did," Ray recalled in a 1984 interview with the Associated Press.

"But even in those days I had the same kind of audience I have now — the elderly, the middle-aged and the young kids," he said.
