Objections postpone sentencing for Ambrose, Regennitter

The Daily Iowan
Sentencing of one of three area businessmen convicted in December on federal drug charges was delayed Monday in U.S. District Court in Cedar Rapids.

ter were convicted December 7 in U.S. District Court of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and 10 other drug-related charges.

conspiring to distribute cocaine, distributing cocaine to a minor, possessing cocaine with the intent to distribute, managing and making available a building for the use and distribution of cocaine, possessing cocaine and obstructing justice.

Regennitter was found guilty of conspiring to distribute cocaine. Vogt faces a maximum sentence of up to 120 years in prison, Ambrose up to 131 years and Regennitter up to 40 years.

The original charges allege that Polly struck a female UI junior in the face with his fists and a baseball bat.

Lack of financial aid hinders minorities

Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

A lack of financial assistance is one of the most important issues — and the major stumbling block — in black recruitment, according to one of five panelists who met in the Union Illinois Room Tuesday to discuss minority recruitment and retention at the UI.

"The greatest barrier to higher education for minorities is financial aid," panelist and UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said.

In addition, the UI's cultural centers, UI Special Support Services and the UI Admissions Office's recruiting goals could also be improved by increased funding, according to the panelists.

Insufficient funding for cultural centers is a big problem, according to panelist and president of the UI Black Student Union Greg Kelley, because the center cannot present the number of programs they would like under the current budget.

James Lem, moderator for the discussion and former BSU president, added that the African-American cultural center needs more funding for room maintenance and upkeep.

"You can't even stay (in the African-American Center) after 8 or 9 at night," he said. "You'll freeze."

Jones agreed that lack of money for the cultural centers is a problem. He assured Kelley some maintenance improvements would be made at the center but said not to expect increases in the budget.

Increased funds for the cultural centers for "parties," Jones said, "is really a lower priority than financial aid and tutoring."

Special Support Services, which assists UI minorities with tutoring and social issues, was also the subject of financial consideration by the panel.

Lem said he had had negative experiences with Special Support Services, which triggered vocal responses from the audience.

Several people defended the service, stressing that the service has only 2 advisers to help about 1,500 students.

"Is it that they're unfriendly and don't want to help, or is it that they don't have anyone to do it?" asked one UI student.

Panelist Kathryn Bassett, UI associate director of admissions, said a lack of money stops her office from recruiting as much as it would like.

Her office is in charge of recruiting all potential students, she said, adding that she would like to increase their efforts toward grade-school and junior-high students.

"There are just never enough resources," Bassett said.

The panel also discussed the social and political situation of blacks on the UI campus.

Panelist and UI Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona said minority students "need to be in a position to tell everybody what we need. There aren't too many of us, so we need to support our own."

Socialization is an important issue on such a big campus, Bassett added.

After recruiting at about 950 high schools in 13 states last year, Bassett said some minority students did not want to attend the UI because the school is too big and impersonal.

"Our real goal is to get more face-to-face, more ear-to-phone contact throughout the entire admissions process," Bassett said.

State should aim for diverse campuses

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

As the Iowa Legislature enters the final month of the legislative session, minority recruitment and retention at Iowa's three state universities should become one of their top priorities.

Currently, a State Senate committee on appropriations is forming a proposal to allocate $1.8 million to the state Board of Regents for minority recruitment efforts. The measure already has passed the House of Representatives.

But over the past three years, the Regents' requests for these efforts has met with little support from Gov. Terry Branstad.

Twice, Branstad has avoided using state funds for minority programs. In spite of his objections, the Legislature approved $1 million for 1989-1990. Now, the Regents are asking for a $1.7 million increase — bringing the total funding request to $2.7 million — and Branstad has recommended continuing the present allocation of $1 million.

At the UI, the fruits of minority recruitment and retention efforts are just now being realized, but more funds are necessary before the UI can become a truly diversified campus.

The number of minority tenure track faculty members at the UI has increased by roughly 20 percent since 1985, yet the figure still represents less than 10 percent of the entire tenure track faculty.

In the fall semester 1985, 124 of 1,647 tenure track faculty were minorities. While in the fall semester 1989, 151 of 1,647 faculty were minorities.

As Philip Hubbard, Opportunity at Iowa director, frequently tells minority high school students, census figures predict that by the year 2020 minorities will be 35 percent of the U.S. population. Therefore, they must be educated to assume a productive place in society.

Any additional funding the state legislature provides could be used to attract more in-state minorities.

There were only seven black men from Iowa in the 1988 freshman class of 3,617.

Analysis

"I think our principle deficiency is in the high-school preparation," Hubbard said. "Students need advice and preparation before reaching their senior year."

Of the nearly $1 million the Legislature did distribute for minority education last year, the UI received $400,000.

As a result, over 30 programs and support services on the UI campus are specifically targeted at improving the cultural environment of this campus.

Since October 1987, Hubbard's Opportunity at Iowa program has been largely responsible for increasing the number of minority students and minority faculty members at the UI.

Minority enrollment reached a high of 1,959 students — about 6.7 percent of the total UI enrollment — in fall 1989, according to the UI Registrar's Office.

But the problem of keeping minority students at the UI until they graduate will require more than a verbal commitment to enhancing the UI environment. The situation demands economic incentives from legislators.

The state legislature should be assured that by granting the additional funding they will not be foolishly throwing their money at a problem. The groundwork for minority retention and recruitment has been carefully laid and now requires replenishment to thrive.

Senate votes to strip power from governor

DES MOINES (AP) — In a move one lawmaker said would return "power to the people," the Iowa Senate voted Tuesday to strip Gov. Terry Branstad of his authority to appoint the director of the state Department of Education.

On a 27-20 vote, the Senate approved a bill to require that the director be appointed by the department's board of directors. That was the policy until 1986, when the Legislature and Branstad approved a plan to reorganize state government.

The plan allowed Branstad to consolidate his authority over the Department of Education and other executive branch agencies. While previously the chief executive of each agency was selected by an independent board or commission, after reorganization Branstad was able to appoint the directors.

His choice for the Department of Education was William Lepley, who had been superintendent of schools in Council Bluffs. Senators said they have no complaints about Lepley but believe the governor should not have such direct control over the head of the state education system.

"It's a mistake we made in state government reorganization," said Senate Education Chairman Larry Murphy, D-Oelwein.

"I don't think that one individual in the state, of either party, should have control over the director, who then sets rules and regulations for all 433 school districts that provide the public service we call education to the kids of Iowa," Murphy said.

Under the bill, the Department of Education's board of directors would have authority to reappoint Lepley or choose a new director July 1. The nine-member board of directors is made up of Branstad appointees, but under state law must be bipartisan and include a balance of men and women.

"It gives the power back to the people," said the bill's floor manager, Sen. Jack Rife, R-Moscow.

Rife bucked Republican sentiment on the bill. Of the 27 votes cast for the bill, all but two came from Democrats. Two Democrats joined 18 Republicans in opposition.

"Accountability lies, and ought to lie, with an elected official," said one of the opponents, Sen. Linn Fuhrman, R-Aurelia.

Democrats who embraced the bill said the Senate will retain the authority to confirm the appointment of the Department of Education director every four years.

The bill goes to the House, where members have not indicated their position. If approved by the House, the bill faces a possible veto by Branstad.

"We'd just as soon do our own appointing," said Branstad aide Don Paulin.

A Newton, Iowa, man was charged with possession of a controlled substance Tuesday after Johnson County deputies allegedly found marijuana in his possession while booking him on another charge, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Rodney D. McAlister, 30, 624 E. Eighth St., was also charged with his second offense of drunken driving and two counts of driving under a suspended license, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for March 15, according to court records.

Public access channel restructured

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

Management of the public access channel was taken from Heritage Cablevision Inc. and placed in the hands of a non-profit organization at Tuesday's city council meeting.

Before making this long-awaited move, surrounded by controversy because of a recent public access broadcast which depicted a nude man dancing with his nude son, the council discussed the extent of the city's control in deciding guidelines for public access programming.

Councilors Karen Kubby and Randy Larson favored severely limiting the council's input on making guidelines. Instead, ultimate authority over the matter should be granted to the non-profit organization, Public Access Television, Inc., (PATV), they said.

Kubby and Larson agreed that the public can become involved in PATV and vote to elect the organization's board of directors, thereby having direct influence in the development of guidelines and rules for the channel.

Other councilors wanted to be involved in composing guidelines, rather than simply rubber-stamping the rules.

"When people view objectionable material, they come talk to us, so I want input," councilor Bill Ambrisco said.

The council unanimously voted, although Kubby "reluctantly" agreed, to pass the resolution stating that PATV would develop written rules and guidelines "in cooperation with the city" rather than rules "developed by PATV and filed with the city clerk."

The PATV-proposed guidelines for potentially objectionable material in programming are: repeated vulgar language; nudity; extreme physical violence or degradation; graphic depiction of medical procedures. This sort of material would be permitted to be broadcast between 10:00 p.m. and 5:00 a.m. with a warning that the material may be offensive.

In Brief

Briefs

• Diabetes is an increasingly common health problem for Hispanics, the most rapidly growing minority in the U.S. But very little is known about the self-care practices of elderly Hispanics with diabetes or their reasons for not following diabetic treatment and diet.

A second-year doctoral student at the UI College of Nursing, Hayden Rios-Iturrino, of Puerto Rico, is trying to change that. He has just been awarded a three-year, $12,500 fellowship from the Center for Nursing Research at the National Institutes of Health to study elderly Hispanics who have diabetes.

"The study will look at patients' ideas about the cause, process, severity and treatment of their illness as compared to what is known about diabetes by health care practitioners," Rios-Iturrino said.

The study will also examine the relationship between patients' notions of diabetes and their self-care practices.

UI Professor of nursing Toni Tripp-Reimer is assisting Rios-Iturrino with the study.

UI Film graduate student Dirk Eitzen screens a videotape of one of his films, about people working on the railroad, Tuesday afternoon in the Communications Studies Building.

UI student documents lives of interesting Iowa people

Sue Juhl
Special to the Daily Iowan

UI film graduate student Dirk Eitzen loves to make films about people.

But Eitzen isn't interested in briefcase-toting businessmen or doctors in white lab coats. He's not interested in the experts, the people with the facts or power that are usually the subject of documentaries.

Eitzen, already an accomplished filmmaker, prefers to make films about what he calls "interesting" people.

His choice of subject matter is obvious when glancing at the titles of the films he has made. So far, Eitzen's filmography includes projects on the homeless, the mentally and physically disabled, railroad workers and small-town farmers. And as of September of last year, the list includes a number of people Eitzen refers to as "plain old Iowans."

"All of my shows have been about people. That's what I'm interested in," Eitzen said. "I find it fascinating to hear someone talk about themselves, about their memories, about their fears and wishes. I find that exciting and interesting, particularly when it's someone who's not exactly like me."

One of Eitzen's earliest films, Homeless in Philadelphia, was favorably received by critics, played at a number of film festivals, and in addition to being shown in part on a national cable channel, is now distributed by the Museum of Modern Art.

To make the film, Eitzen collaborated with a group of homeless men, supplying them with the necessary equipment and film stock needed to document the conditions in homeless shelters in Philadelphia.

"Part of the finished film is them talking about what it means to make a film as homeless people and their relationship behind the camera with other homeless people," he explained. "It's about empowerment and, in a way, about anthropology."

Despite the success of Homeless in Philadelphia, Eitzen says he is most pleased with the film Special Feelings, which he made after Homeless.

In Special Feelings, Eitzen examines the frustration felt by many mentally and physically disabled people for not being able to carry on "normal" romantic relationships.

ships. Eitzen said he is proud of the emotional impact of the film, and recalled one of the characters — a "wonderful poet" and university student — whose poems deal with his desire for a relationship with a "normal" woman.

Eitzen's latest film reflects his fascination with the people who have lived their lives in the small towns of Iowa and gained intimate knowledge of the unique railway culture in the state.

"You can't do that with film. You can't very well relax and let people talk or sit through a pause . . . one of the ways you get people to talk is just by not saying anything."

Dirk Eitzen
UI film graduate student

My real fascination wasn't with trains," he says of the film, Tales of the Rails. "It was with old-timers and hearing them talk about the old days. I was interested in finding out about rural culture, about how life in small towns has changed."

Pre-production of Tales began in the fall of 1987. Eitzen and Assistant Director LeAnn Erickson — a UI graduate student in video art — "wrote to every county historical society and museum in the state" asking to be put in touch with "talkers, not experts in the railroad, but people who had been around awhile and were able to talk about history and the impact the railroad had on communities in a way that was interesting — storytellers."

The film is divided up into segments in which the Iowa storytellers recount memories associated with the railroad; they talk of its progress, danger, romance and the entertainment it provided them. One woman tells about a friend who used to go into town on the weekends for an ice cream cone and a wave at the engineer. "That was her entertainment for the week," Eitzen says.

The film has tales of danger: One man talks of how he pulled two young children off a track seconds before the train came barreling through; and tales of history: Iowans recalling the "good ol' days" when Herbert Hoover was president, when you could take the train from Hudson to Waterloo and back again for just a quarter.

The film's format, says Eitzen, lets the viewer get a taste of Iowa, of small towns in the Midwest and of rural people.

"Just as individuals in the piece have personalities, the piece has a personality, or I'd like it to have, that's quirky and fascinating," he said.

To better catch each person's idiosyncrasies on camera, Eitzen shot Tales of the Rails on videotape.

"If I stick a camera in your face, you can forget it. It's hard enough to get someone to talk across a camera," he explained. "With video, you can put a 20-minute tape in, turn on the camera and let it run. You don't have to keep turning it on and off."

"You can't do that with film. You can't very well relax and let people talk or sit through a pause . . . one of the ways you get people to talk is just by not saying anything."

Video also let Eitzen project the realism of his subjects more effectively. "You get quirks, you get unusual expressions, things that aren't reproducible," he said. "A story is different each time, and it's often best the first time. Each time you do it after that it gets more stilted and more confused, more dry or unexciting."

Eitzen recently learned that Iowa Public Television will air Tales of the Rails sometime in April. Although IPTV is generally known as an educational station, he says he thinks the film is more about human nature and the lively history of older generations of Iowans than strictly "educational."

School board renews membership with education accreditation group

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Following a recommendation presented to the Iowa City School Board Tuesday night, the board chose to renew membership in the North Central Association.

The NCA is an accreditation group that evaluates school-district programs and provides administrators with educational recommendations.

The board has asked the committee to study the role of the NCA in the district and to recommend whether the district should continue with the association," said Fran Malloy, Iowa City School Board president.

The committee consisted of teachers and administrators from all of the Iowa City elementary, junior high and senior high schools, and strongly recommended staying with the association.

"The recommendation is for the district to continue with elementary, junior high and senior high NCA evaluations," Longfellow Elementary Principal Tim Grieves said.

The committee stressed that funding should be made available to the program.

"They need to provide funds and resources so that the process is done well. This is the most important thing that the committee wanted to say," Grieves said.

The committee also suggested that there be two separate ongoing evaluations of the district. "There will be a building evaluation which would look at the administration, community relations, facilities and general curriculum on a K-12 basis," Grieves said. "The second would look at a specific subject such as math or foreign language."

With this system the K-12 curriculum would be evaluated on an annual basis and the schools would be evaluated every five to seven years, Grieves said. "We wanted to work out a schedule where buildings and curriculum areas would be covered every year," committee member Mike Kelley said.

In addition, the committee asked that a certain amount of funding be reserved in the budget specifically for NCA recommendations within the district.

"It seems very logical to me to keep a lump sum of money either at a building level or a district level. That's an excellent idea," board member Connie Champion said.

The cost for NCA membership fees and a visiting evaluation team will be $10,000, Grieves said. The board has yet to include the costs of the project into the budget, Grieves said.

"I think that where we go from here is basically to go through some administrative channels at this point," said Al Azinger, interim superintendent. "I don't think we're ready to say this is exactly how it's going to be implemented."

Shuttle on sixth launch attempt

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Despite strong winds, NASA began fueling Atlantis on Tuesday for a sixth attempt to launch the shuttle on a secret mission to put a spy satellite in orbit.

A sixth delay would tie the record for launch postponements experienced by two earlier shuttle missions.

As the launch managers met, Air Force weather forecasters reduced the odds for favorable weather at the planned 12:45 a.m. launch this morning from 60 percent to 40 percent.

The big problem was winds that in mid-afternoon were gusting to 18 mph. The winds were expected to persist early Wednesday but should subside to below 10 mph by the end of the launch opportunity, which ends about 2:25 a.m.

Based on the possibility of diminishing winds, the decision was made to proceed, and workers at the launch pad began pumping 528,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into the shuttle's fuel tank.

A crosswind of 18 mph would be dangerous if Atlantis developed a problem early in flight and the crew had to attempt an emergency landing at a runway near the launch pad. Mission rules dictate crosswinds must not exceed 14 mph.

Weather forecasters also said there were some clouds in the launch area but they should not cause trouble.

Soviet republics seek right to secede

MOSCOW (AP) — A draft law setting out a daunting procedure for a republic to secede from the Soviet Union has been submitted to the national legislature, a news service of Radio Moscow reported on Tuesday.

Calls for secession from the Soviet Union are strongest in the Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, which were absorbed by the Soviet Union during World War II.

The Soviet Communist Party recently pledged to support legislation establishing a procedure by which republics could legally secede from the union.

But the law appeared certain to displease independent political leaders in the Baltics who argue that Soviet political control of their nations is not legitimate.

According to the report published by Interfax, a recently introduced news service of Radio Moscow, the question of secession can be decided only after a referendum in the republic that wishes to secede.

The parliament of the republic or at least one-third of the adult population of the republic can call for a referendum in which three-fourths of the adult must vote for the results to be valid, the report said.

Honduran president: Contras must leave

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — President Rafael Leonardo Callejas said Tuesday the thousands of U.S.-supported Contra rebels based near the Nicaraguan border must leave Honduras as soon as possible.

"I don't want to force circumstances in Nicaragua, which is now going through a period of political transition following a victory by the opposition at the polls, but these rebels should not continue to stay in our territory," he told a news conference.

Callejas indicated there was no point in the Contras continuing as a fighting force against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinistas, who were defeated at the polls Sunday by a 14-party United National Opposition led by Violeta Barrios de Chamorro.

"Now, with the electoral defeat of the Sandinistas, there are better democratic guarantees in Nicaragua for the quick repatriation of those who have taken up arms," Callejas said.

Honduran officials estimated there are about 10,000 Contra rebels and some 42,000 dependents living in makeshift base camps in southern Honduras, near the Nicaraguan border.

Most of them had pulled back from Nicaragua after the United States cut off military aid in 1988.

Medication needs no consent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prison officials can force inmates to take powerful anti-psychotic drugs without a judge's consent, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

Voting 6-3 in a case from Washington state, the justices said prisoners' rights are safeguarded as long as staff psychiatrists say the drugs will help, and not merely pacify, them.

"An inmate's interests are adequately protected and perhaps better served by allowing the decision to medicate to be made by medical professionals rather than a judge," Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote for the court.

Kennedy said the state may "treat a prison inmate who has serious mental illness with anti-psychotic drugs against his will if the inmate is dangerous to himself or others and the treatment is in the inmate's medical interest."

But the dissenters said the ruling means prison officials seeking to maintain order may force inmates to take dangerous, even life-threatening, drugs with little regard for the prisoners' well-being.

One dissenter, Justice John Paul Stevens, said that an administrative hearing is not enough to protect inmates.

The court mistakenly "has concluded that a mock trial before an institutionally biased tribunal constitutes due process of law," he said. "A competent individual's right to refuse psychotropic medication is an aspect of liberty requiring the highest order of (constitutional) protection."

Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall also dissented.

Kennedy was joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Byron White, Harry Blackmun, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia.

The decision overturned a 1988 Washington state Supreme Court ruling that convicted robber Walter Harper, diagnosed as schizophrenic, must be given a court hearing before he is given anti-psychotic drugs.

The state court also said prison officials must prove the drugs will be effective.

State Correction Secretary Chase Riveland said Tuesday's ruling will not lead to a medication binge for disruptive prisoners.

"I'm not suggesting that we should be willy-nilly running around medicating people," he said. "I think that . . . if medically appropriate it's very helpful."

Riveland said the ruling may affect 10 to 15 Washington prisoners.

female UI sophomore in the head with a baseball bat during the fight.

Garner allegedly assaulted or helped assault a man causing him to suffer cuts on his scalp and forehead, two black eyes, a bruise on his left buttock and an abrasion to the knee, according to court records.

Frye allegedly assaulted or helped assault another man causing bruises to his head and left arm, according to court records.

Arraignment in the matter is set for March 8, according to court records.

Polly's attorney, Leon Spies, filed a brief Friday to appeal an assault conviction in another case involving an attack on a UI student.

Polly was found guilty January 18 of punching UI student Gina Weerts in the face with a closed fist outside of the former College St. Club, 121 E. College St.

Polly was sentenced January 31 to two days in jail and a year of probation, but has not served this sentence, pending his appeal.

Nicaragua

House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater promised that U.S. assistance would be substantial.

"The United States' commitment is strong and enduring," Fitzwater said. "We will develop an aid package for Nicaragua that will be significant and meaningful. The democratic aspirations of the Nicaraguan people deserve our support and they will have it."

Fitzwater said the United States was examining "the full range of economic options aimed at reintegrating Nicaragua into the international economy."

He said Bush would discuss Nicaragua's needs this weekend at a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, whose country has become the world's largest donor of foreign aid.

Nunn also said U.S. aid for emerging democracies should be sizeable.

"After all, we spent trillions and trillions of dollars, hundreds of billions of dollars, defending the free world waiting for this day, and now that we've arrived at this day, I think we should not be short-sighted in our approach," Nunn said.

However, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said he was "frightened again that we're watching expectations exceed reality" on the question of U.S. aid.

"I see no political will to enlarge" the foreign aid budget, Dodd said. Rather than emphasizing direct cash aid, the United States should emphasize trade benefits it can provide by buying more coffee and sugar from Nicaragua, and the reduction of foreign debts, he said. And Congress may well pay for part of the new U.S. obligation to Nicaragua by diverting part of the $500 million in cash the Bush administration will be seeking to help rebuild Panama's economy, he said.

In a message that seemed primarily aimed at the Contra rebels long supported by the Reagan and Bush administrations, Fitzwater urged restraint in the post-election period. He reiterated a U.S. call that there be an immediate cease-fire "under U.N. supervision and that it be strictly respected."

Soviet

Soviet. But other legislators said mounting economic, social and ethnic woes prove the need for a strong leader.

"We are tired of social tension. When are you going to put the country in order?" lawmaker Rano Ubaidullaeva of Uzbekistan said her constituents were demanding. "We need a person who can have real power ... the quicker the better."

But Anatoly Sobchak rejected the demand for "a strong hand" voiced by some. "We are deciding the question of appointing a nationwide gendarme," the Leningrad jurist said. He told the 542-member legislature: "All our decisions can be crossed out by the president."

Sobchak, and Sergei Stankevich of Moscow, another member of the progressive Inter-Regional Group of parliamentarians, said the new presidency would tilt the balance of power toward the head of state to the detriment of the new working legislature, which has functioned for less than a year.

ABORTION

Lost information

Last Friday, the Iowa House of Representatives overwhelmingly rejected a proposal that would have allowed the Department of Public Health to collect data on abortions and miscarriages in the state. Opponents to the proposal feared that such information could have been used to identify patients, especially in rural communities.

This was a short-sighted response. The House could have easily amended the proposal to prevent identification of specific patients, while preserving the important goal of keeping accurate health records.

The statistics, which would contain a demographic profile of patients, would have appeared in the annual report of the Department of Public Health. The only way patients could have been identified would be if the statistics had been broken down on a county-by-county basis. But in order to protect patients, Public Health could have easily released the data to the public on a strictly regional or statewide basis.

Furthermore, the information would have been valuable to the state and its citizens. Researchers, for instance, could have used the statistics to evaluate statewide health and sociological trends. More importantly, state and county agencies could have used the data to make better use of health-care funds where they are needed.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, objected to the proposal to collect data as an attempt "to stamp the woman with a scarlet letter." But if Iowans are going to recognize abortion as a legitimate medical procedure, as surely Doderer wants them to, then it should be treated like one.

SUPREME COURT

Clockwork Orange?

A U.S. Supreme Court decision giving prison officials complete authority to administer behavior-altering drugs to prison inmates is hard to fathom, and creates the occasion for monstrous abuse.

The majority opinion in the 6-3 decision, written by Justice Anthony Kennedy, found that the fate of irrational or mentally incompetent prisoners could be determined by prison officials and prison psychiatrists — without due process.

But if the prisoners are psychologically incompetent they should be put in mental institutions — not prisons.

Anti-psychotic drugs, which can foster tremendous improvement in schizophrenics and other mentally-ill people, also pose serious health risks — including the risk of brain damage — to more stable individuals.

Considering the dangerous side effects involved with these drugs, temporary restraint or isolation of a prisoner until an impartial judge can hear the testimony of psychiatrists, prison officials, and the prisoner himself seems a reasonable compromise.

It certainly would protect the rights, bodies and minds of prisoners better than Justice Kennedy's decision.

Mandela: Still a giant confined

As Nelson Mandela walked out of his prison cell, tall as a mountain, and tears of joy flowed on every continent, the hopes of the people of South Africa for a new society were unleashed.

Even as a visitor, I could feel the change in the air of Cape Town and Johannesburg. There is a new equation in the country. The center of gravity has shifted from the all-white corridors of power in Pretoria to a humble, three-room cottage in Soweto occupied by a man who has been in prison for the past 27 years, from King Herod's palace to a lowly stable.

I met twice with Nelson Mandela and could sense the imminence of liberation in his very presence. Like Martin Luther King Jr., he radiates the promise of freedom.

What is so amazing is that, after all of the indignities and injustices he has endured, Nelson Mandela harbors no hatred towards his oppressors. During most of the years of his confinement, he was either denied contact with his wife Winnie, or restricted to 40-minute visits once or twice a month. When they were able to see each other during these closely supervised prison visits, they were separated by thick glass, unable even to touch hands. Not until 1984 were this husband and wife allowed to embrace in prison, the first time in 20 years.

Winnie Mandela, threatened and harassed, often under house arrest, was left alone to raise her family.

But Nelson and Winnie Mandela, world-class heroes, have their eyes on the prize. They have no time for anger or vindictiveness. They have far more important business: dialogue, negotiation and the release of the people of South Africa from the terrors of apartheid, oppression and racism.

The world must not forget that, while Nelson Mandela is out of jail, still he is not free. Now he is standing in front of the bars instead of behind them, but the pillars of apartheid remain in the form of codified restrictions that continue to limit the personal and political freedoms of black South Africans.

Nelson Mandela represents more people than President F.W. de Klerk, and yet he cannot even cast a vote for President. He has more credibility in the eyes of the world than the entire government of South Africa, and yet he cannot hold even the lowliest elected office in the government.

Nelson Mandela is a giant confined. But history is moving in his direction, and South Africa can become as honorable and noble as he is.

His demands for freedom are just and reasonable, nothing more nor less than the people of Eastern Europe are now struggling for. He wants free and fair elections in a one-person one-vote multi-racial democracy. He wants a society where people are defined not by race or class or religion but by their personhood. He wants a society that celebrates difference and does not use it as an excuse for oppression and exploitation. A humanist and a realist, Mandela is sensitive to the fears of whites in South Africa, fears of majority rule and fears of retribution from the white government's brutal police. He is sensitive also to the pain of blacks, so many of whom live in poverty and squalor and with the fear of beatings and death at the hands of the South African police force.

But Mandela, a gentle and strong man, is determined to allay the fears of whites and transcend the pain of the blacks, reconciling all peoples of his nation and forging a new South Africa. He is determined to give peace and dialogue a chance.

Together with President de Klerk, whose integrity Mandela has praised, these two men can move South Africa beyond apartheid. They can turn chaos into community, polarization into coalition, and despair into hope. They can leave the scourge of racism behind in the final days of this difficult century.

Although the noonday of freedom is quite a way off, I saw the dawn of a new South Africa. And what a brilliant, glorious thing it was.

Hey, Iowa City, lighten up, willya please? Letters

When I was a boy, I could memorize just about anything, and several of the things I memorized were songs by a Harvard mathematics professor who had one day slipped the surly bonds of the academy and started cutting albums full of catchy tunes about nuclear war, toxic waste, bigotry, sado-masochism and what-have-you. They were very cynical, sometimes offensive songs. They were also very funny songs, according to my father, though I didn't understand that at the time. I just memorized them because I could.

The professor turned songwriter was named Tom Lehrer, and I don't know what became of him. His fifteen minutes of fame came and went in 1968, when one of the networks gave him a television show called "That Was the Week That Was," he performed a song called "The Vatican Rag" (First you get down on your knees, fiddle with your rosaries, bow your head in great respect and . . . genuflect, genuflect, genuflect), about three zillion Roman Catholics went ballistic, and that was the show that was. At some point I heard that Tom Lehrer had himself gone ballistic — not unusual for Harvard professors — though that story is apocryphal. For all I know he went back to teaching math. But to this day, about a dozen of his songs play in a more-or-less continuous loop of irreverence and depravity through my head. At Christmas time I hear carols wafting from the speakers on the walking mall, and I mentally substitute his lyrics (God rest ye merry merchants may ye make the yuletide pay . . .); I read about the re-unification of Germany, and hear Lehrer's "MLF Lullaby" (We taught them a lesson in 1918, and they've hardly bothered us since theeseen . . .); I listen to the endless debate about pornography, my eyes glaze over and in my heart I sing "Smut" (Give me smut and nothing but . . . a dirty novel I can't shut . . .); I sit through the yelling contest that followed Spike Lee's lecture at IMU, and I think of "National Brotherhood Week," whose lyrics I won't commit to paper.

And, I am grateful for this intrusion. Very grateful, I should say, because this is Iowa City, where everybody takes everything very, very seriously.

To live in this town, one would think he had stumbled upon the capital city of the lost Nation of Outrage. The fever pitch of political life here is simply astounding, and bravo for that, I guess. The defense of important principles should generate a little enthusiasm, I always say. They should also generate a sense of proportion, which is why I stop and shudder sometimes at the humorlessness with which political debate is conducted here.

By this I mean the absence of genuine, self-deprecatory humor, the stuff that checks excesses of opinion, stifles the urge to shout, and informs a realistic sense of the stakes, of what can and should be accomplished. It makes us stop and say, "Wait, why am I shouting?" and open our ears; it makes us laugh at the opposition, instead of trying to drown it out.

But not here. Most of what passes for humor in Iowa City is simply ridicule, from both Left and Right, designed to offend or silence. And all of it is done as if here, right here, all the problems of the world could be solved in the next ten minutes.

To live in this town, one would think he had stumbled upon the capital city of the lost Nation of Outrage. The fever pitch of political life here is simply astounding, and bravo for that, I guess.

Maybe if every city in America were like Iowa City we could solve the problems of racism, sexism, clumsiness, dirty silverware, and inadequate parking. The fact is, every city isn't like Iowa City. Iowa City isn't even like Iowa City, not as it imagines itself. All the talk about diversity and "Athens of the Midwest" not withstanding, Iowa City can't hold a candle to, say, any major American metropolis for diversity and culture. It is more diverse than Coralville, sure, more like Athens than Solon is like Athens, but . . . well, we are a small city in a world of big ones, and let's not forget that.

But it is forgotten — forgotten amidst the endless, pointless shouting match between New Wave and the campus right, forgotten in the demonstrations and counter-demonstrations that choke the Pentacrest over I-don't-know-what, forgotten in the pie-throwing, name-calling, fist-clenching heat of the Iowa City political moment.

1968, when Tom Lehrer was famous for the wink of an eye, was a serious time in which to live, more serious even than this one. In Southeast Asia, an unfunny place, the most unfunny episode of the last 30 years of American foreign policy was in full swing. Nixon was running for President. America's campuses were in a state of siege. The civil rights movement, the women's movement — both were in their heyday. I was just a boy listening to his old man's records, but I know one thing about 1968; the stakes have never seemed as high as then.

But in the midst of this, a math professor with a good ear, a so-so voice and the ability to turn fear and frustration into comedy made a lot of people laugh — at pollution, racism, nuclear apocalypse. He gave them a rest from the endless trial of being themselves and didn't slow progress for a moment.

I don't know, as I said, what became of him. And I don't want to know. It's better to think he's out there, the lone pianist of the apocalypse, waiting for the right moment to play Iowa City and lighten things up.

Sin of omission

To the Editor:

The revolutionary effort toward democratic change taking place throughout the world makes an ironic contrast to one of our own rather repressive practices currently in evidence at the Museum of Art. I am referring to the annual University of Iowa Faculty Exhibition that consistently denies Professor Naomi Kark Schedl (M.F.A., painting, Yale), head of the Fiber Arts Program at the University of Iowa, the "privilege" of representation alongside her art colleagues.

This sin of omission is a long-practiced form of discrimination against artists who use fiber materials and/or technology (who are, by the way, predominantly women).

This discriminatory practice has been a rather prickly issue for the university for at least the last two years. Indeed, the Museum of Art (with whom this policy does not originate) attempted to make amends last year by featuring Mrs. Schedl's work with two other visiting fiber artists in a separate exhibition. However, I do not think that this lets the UI off the conspiratorial hook.

As a graduate of Mrs. Schedl's program and the UI's sculpture program, and as a member of the College Art Association and the Women's Caucus For Art, I find the ungracious and divisive exclusion of Naomi Kark Schedl's work a loss that this community can ill afford. Standing on the threshold of the 21st century, it's high time that we leave the draconian days of patriarchal arts/crafts dualisms in the dust where they belong.

Paris, Iowa

To the Editor:

In the last few years, the DI has evidenced some pretty bad slip-page in arts reporting. Normally, this shows up in reviews that are long on verbiage but wind up telling the reader very little about the event. From time to time, however, there are little things that reflect such incompetence that they really should be brought to [the DI's] attention.

In the article about the recording studios in Hancher Auditorium ("Studios offer hi-tech recording to UI musicians for a pittance," the DI, February 21) Martina Brockway mentions the Mirecourt Trio as a "string trio based in France." Since when? The members of this group — Kenneth Goldsmith, violinist, Terry King, and John Jensen, pianist. They are based at Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa. The only thing French about the ensemble is the name, taken from the small French town Mirecourt, which is famous for its violin makers.

Since the Mirecourt Trio is extremely well-known locally and nationally through records, compact discs, and television and radio performances, I can't understand why such an error wasn't caught.

Indians question USDA food quality

Committee finds canned meats could complicate health of Native Americans

FORT YATES, N.D. (AP)—Many government food products are unfit for needy Indians who rely on them to survive, a congressional committee was told Monday as it examined smelly, unappetizing cans of meat.

"I'm not sure that I'd give this to a dog," Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, said after examining the cans of beef and lamb stamped "USDA approved" from food packages the government distributes through Indian tribes.

Charles "Red" Gates, the food distribution program director for the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, told the U.S. House Select Committee on Hunger the meats not only contain lard and animal veins, but also are loaded with fat and sodium.

That compounds the unusually high rates of diabetes, heart disease, hypertension and infant mortality rates on North Dakota Indian reservations, Gates, tribal officials and reservation residents said.

It was the first time the USDA had heard such complaints about its meat commodities, said USDA spokesperson Darlene Barnes. Beef and pork commodity products must meet certain specifications and are limited to 1 percent sodium and 1 percent fat, she said.

Among the 100 people attending the congressional hearing at the tribal council headquarters on south-central North Dakota reservation was Diane Ponga, 38, a speech aide for the school district.

She told the committee that she and her husband, who suffers from high blood pressure, depend on commodity foods to feed their six children and two nieces. She said the children range in age from six to 19.

"But I don't let the kids see it, or they won't eat it," Ponga said, referring to the canned meat.

Tribal officials asked the committee to push for higher nutritional and quality standards for commodity foods to ease the persistent health problems on the reservation.

"It's imperative the food provided doesn't contribute to health problems," said Twila Martin-Kekahbah, chairwoman of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians.

Terrence Sloan, director for the Aberdeen Area Indian Health Service that serves North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa, said health and nutrition problems are disproportionately higher on the Standing Rock reservation than anywhere else in the nation.

The tribe includes 2.3 million acres in Sioux County of North Dakota and Corson County in South Dakota. Its enrolled population was 10,300 in January 1989.

Deaths from heart disease on the reservation from 1984 through 1986 totaled 243 per 100,000 people, compared with 181 for all races in the United States, Sloan said. An infant mortality rate of 19 per 1,000 live births was nearly double the nationwide average, he said.

Indians also have one of the highest diabetes rates worldwide, Sloan said.

"These problems will accelerate unless changes are made in nutrition and fitness programs on the reservation," he said.

He suggested making fresh fruit and vegetables available through the commodity distribution program, providing delivery of food to the elderly and handicapped, implementing information programs on nutrition and food preparation, and reducing fat, salt and sodium in food items. Sloan also urged that income guidelines for the food stamp program be revised.

A recent General Accounting Office study of four reservations, including Fort Berthold in North Dakota and Pine Ridge in South Dakota, showed some Indians cannot qualify for food stamps because their cars are worth more than $4,500. The $4,500 limit was set in 1978.

Grocers also raise their prices on the days they know food stamps are being issued, the GAO found.

Hall and Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., said they would support legislation to improve government nutrition programs.

"It's disgusting," Dorgan said. "We've got to do better than this."

Social Security tax cut questioned

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan advised Congress Tuesday to keep hands off Social Security despite the momentary appeal of a tax cut.

"The current structure of Social Security may not be appropriate in all circumstances," Greenspan told the Senate Finance Committee. "But, at present, it is still the best option."

Greenspan said proposals to cut Social Security taxes and to take the pension system out of the federal deficit calculation could reduce pressure for real cuts in the deficit and increase "the difficulty of providing for the needs of an aging population in a way that is equitable across generations."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., has proposed reducing Social Security taxes to keep the government from using excess taxes to make the overall federal deficit appear smaller than it is. His plan would cut taxes for workers and employers by about $55 billion next year, which would increase the deficit by the same amount unless other taxes were raised or spending were reduced.

"Cutting Social Security taxes at this stage without anything else happening in the process is going in the wrong direction," Greenspan said.

He defended building a Social Security surplus — even though it exists only on paper — to ease the burden when the big post-World War II generation begins retiring early next century. "Support for the system may well erode when the next generation is asked to take on a tax bill that their parents were unwilling — or too short-sighted — to assume during their own working years," he said.

Moynihan's tax-cut plan has attracted wide interest but limited support among lawmakers since he outlined it in December. President George Bush opposes it, and Democratic leaders have begun a study of alternative types of tax cuts that would be targeted on low- and middle-income workers.

Organizations representing older Americans could not agree on how to react to Moynihan's proposal.

The American Association of Retired Persons, by far the largest such group, told the Finance Committee that any tax cut should be delayed until Social Security reserves are adequate to pay benefits for 18 to 24 months. An 18-month reserve is expected by 1993.

AARP, however, said legislation should be enacted this year to begin separating Social Security's revenues from the calculation of the overall budget deficit.

Dog helps keep boy alive until help arrives

BOSTON (AP)—A 12-year-old boy who got lost in the snowy woods was rescued nine hours later along with his Labrador retriever, who helped keep him alive by huddling against him and licking his face.

The dog, Shadow, was lying across the lap of Greg Holzworth when rescuers reached them early Monday.

Searchers found them by following the sound of the dog's barking.

"It was sort of like scary," the sixth-grader said in a telephone interview from school Tuesday.

Greg's adventure began a little before 4 p.m. Sunday when he and Shadow set off for a walk in the thick, swampy woods that line his family's home in Raynham, 30 miles south of Boston.

Greg said he intended to take a short walk with Shadow, who joined the family nine years ago when he was a puppy. Greg was wearing a denim jacket missing buttons over a T-shirt and cotton pants, and gloves.

But the two ventured farther in the woods than planned. Greg started building a fort of brush and tree limbs, heard Shadow barking and followed the dog even farther into the woods.

Greg realized he was in trouble when falling snow began covering his tracks. It had snowed most of the day, the end of a storm that dumped about 8 inches on the region. The temperature dropped to 10 degrees.

"Shadow lay down next to me and he kept his head on my legs and he'd lick me in the face," Greg said. "He kept me warm."

D.C. delegation will 'shadow' Congress in attempt to make capital 51st state

WASHINGTON (AP)—The District of Columbia Council on Tuesday decided to allow elections of a "shadow" congressional delegation to lobby Capitol Hill for district statehood but declined to provide money for the positions.

The action came about one week after a committee voted to postpone the elections indefinitely, which are scheduled for the fall.

The full council has voted three times previously to postpone the election of "shadow" senators and a "shadow" representative after the city's voters approved the lobbying effort in a 1980 referendum.

The unofficial "shadow" delegation would have no voting rights. The concept was first used by officials from the Tennessee territory prior to its admission to the union in 1796. The group's only official duty would be to encourage Congress to adopt legislation making the nation's capital the 51st state.

Big Ten-SEC hoop tourney highlights BICOA

Jay Nanda
 The Daily Iowan

A women's basketball tournament, drug testing policy, and increased football ticket prices were the main topics of discussion at Monday's UI Board in Control of Athletics meeting at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeye women's hoops team, along with Purdue, has been selected to represent the Big Ten in an annual tournament versus the Southeastern conference, beginning next season.

The top two teams from each league will take part in the Big Ten/SEC Challenge, which is slated to debut in Iowa City. Tournament sites for the subsequent seasons will alternate between the two conferences.

According to women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine Grant, CBS is interested in televising the tournament, but doesn't know exactly when they would become involved.

"The games will definitely be played," Grant said. "We just don't know when they will be played and if we will be on TV."

Grant also went on to say that CBS was thinking of scheduling the tournament to be played on a Saturday in January, but was also considering Christmas Day, which Grant said Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer "wasn't too happy with."

As for this season, Grant announced that the university has made a bid to host first and second round games of this year's NCAA tournament, in addition to the Midwest Regionals that are already scheduled for Carver on March 22 and 24.

Meanwhile, the board approved a protocol to the unannounced drug testing that was agreed on in December.

"This has an impact on the privacy rights of the student-athlete," board member Ann Rhodes said. "But athletes would want a 24-hour notice before testing and we felt that was unwise because it would disrupt the validity of the test. We felt that the best idea was unannounced testing."

In the drug policy handout that was administered by the board, the protocol recognizes "that the medical fitness of a student-athlete to play, and the safety of other members of the team will be of paramount concern."

Some of the points of the protocol include:

- Failure to comply with a treatment program, refusal to undergo diagnostic evaluation or treatment, or a second positive drug screening test will result in suspension.

- A student-athlete who has been suspended under this protocol may be invited to rejoin the team after successful completion of a counseling/rehabilitation program.

Finally, the ticket committee voted to increase the price in football tickets, starting next season.

Prices will go up to $18 dollars for the public, which is an increase of $2, and up from $12 to $13.50 for faculty and staff.

Seniors end at Carver

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

At the north goal, senior center Les Jepsen dribbled half the length of the court to pop in a layup over Illinois guard Kendall Gill as Iowa shocked the Illini 69-67 Jan. 29.

It was the basket on the other end of the court where senior forward Matt Bullard drained his first of six 3-pointers on the way to a game-high 23 points in a 79-73 loss to Ohio State in the Big Ten opener.

And it's hard to find a spot on the parquet floor where senior forward Michael Ingram hasn't dove for a loose ball, or otherwise sprawled his 6-foot-8 frame on the deck.

But after tonight's 7 p.m. tipoff against league-leading Purdue, the three will hoop at Carver-Hawkeye Arena no more.

"This is the last home game and the last appearance of our seniors," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "It's a chance for the players, coaching staff and fans to show those guys that we appreciate the contributions they've made."

Jepsen has been here since unloading the car from Bowbells, N.D., five years ago. Last season, and particularly in his final campaign, the 7-footer has adopted quite a fan following, including some admirers in the league.

"Jepsen is just a great example of a guy putting a lot of work in and having it pay off for him," Purdue coach Gene Keady said. "He's an example for some of our young, big guys when they see what he's done."

It's a different road that Bullard and Ingram followed to get to Iowa City. Both transferred two seasons ago — Bullard from Colorado and Ingram from Missouri — and have been hobbled by nagging knee injuries.

The game with the Boilermakers presents a final opportunity for the trio to give something to the Iowa fans.

"We want to win this one so we have a good way of remembering going out," Ingram said. "But you can't think too much about it being the last one, because you have to worry about playing."

And the No. 1 concern for the Hawkeyes is Purdue's Stephen Scheffler. The 6-foot-9 center leads the nation in field goal percentage with 78.5 average. Jepsen is second in the conference with at 65.4 accuracy clip.

Scheffler had been nursing an ankle injury, but the Purdue coach said he should be ready to go.

"Jepsen has shot-blocking ability, and Scheffler is strong and has the inside moves," Keady said. "Scheffler's ankle is OK, so it should be a good matchup."

Michigan baseball hit by sanctions

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The Big Ten Conference slapped the University of Michigan's baseball program with two years probation on Tuesday, citing more than 40 violations of league and NCAA rules from 1983-88.

The probation is effective immediately, and includes a ban on post-season competition and on live television appearances, said Big Ten spokesman Mark Rudner. The sanctions are the first against any varsity sport at Michigan.

"The findings include serious violations which warrant substantial penalties," said Dean Robert A. Stein, chairman of the Big Ten Compliance Committee, which contends former baseball coach Bud Middaugh gave players at least $51,762 in excessive compensation and extra benefits.

"Because of the outstanding cooperation by the University of Michigan in investigating these violations and instituting a number of self-imposed penalties, the compliance committee has reduced the penalties which would otherwise be imposed," Stein said, adding that a year was trimmed from a three-year probation.

Earlier Tuesday in Ann Arbor, Middaugh pleaded innocent to a felony charge of embezzling money from the school.

Fifteenth District Court Judge Samuel J. Elden set a preliminary hearing for March 14 after setting bond at $1,000. Middaugh, 51, remained free on bond after the arraignment.

Neither Middaugh, who coached for 10 seasons at Michigan, nor his attorney Michael Moran would comment on the charge.

NFL veteran named new Pats boss

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Rod Rust, who spent 14 seasons as an NFL assistant, has become the second oldest coach in the league, taking over the New England Patriots a day after the team fired Raymond Berry.

The 61-year-old Rust, Pittsburgh's defensive coordinator last season, had been the Patriots defensive coordinator from 1983-1987, the last 3½ years under Berry. Patriots general manager Pat Sullivan fired Berry on Monday after disagreements over the direction each of them wanted the team to go. Rust signed a four-year contract.

Minnesota Vikings' coach Jerry Burns, at 63, is the NFL's oldest head coach.

"Energy level and enthusiasm and commitment to what you want to do are the critical factors," rather than his age, Rust said, adding he has never harbored a burning ambition to be a head coach. "It's not like this is some profoundly deep event in my life. I'm very happy about it."

Rust returned Tuesday to a team that finished 5-11 and missed the playoffs for a third straight season. The coaching change came a month after Sullivan had given Berry a vote of confidence.

But events escalated swiftly last week when Sullivan pushed Berry to make changes. After encountering great "philosophical differences," Sullivan got permission last Friday from owner Victor Kiam to fire Berry.

With the draft less than two months away and a possible March 1 deadline for hiring another team's assistant, the Patriots made a move. An NFL guideline states that no team can seek permission after March 1 to hire another team's assistant to become its own assistant. A league spokesman said that probably could apply if the new job is head coach.

So Sullivan turned to a familiar face. Rust, an assistant with New England when it went to its only Super Bowl in 1985, was named

Report links 'Pack with point-shaving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's basketball program, already on NCAA probation, has become the target of a point-shaving investigation by a state agency, The Greensboro News & Record reported Tuesday.

The newspaper, which cited unnamed sources, said the point-shaving probe was part of an ongoing investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation. The account gave no further details.

The paper also reported that former East Carolina basketball coach Larry Gillman was one of two men who gave former Wolfpack player Charles Shackleford money while he was a student. Earlier this week, The News and Observer of Raleigh identified Robert Kramer, a former North Carolinian now living in New Jersey, as the other person who loaned money to Shackleford.

A series of no-comments followed Tuesday's latest reports surrounding the basketball program run by Coach Jim Valvano.

Bill Dowdy, chief investigator for the SBI, declined to address the point-shaving report, saying only that a former player was the focus of the probe.

"I wish I could help you, but I just can't comment on what we're looking at," Dowdy said.

North Carolina State Chancellor Larry Monteith did not respond to an interview request. Harold Hopfenberg, the school's interim athletic director, also was unavailable for comment. Valvano was forced to give up his job as athletic director when a previous investigation turned up several NCAA violations and led to two years' probation. He said he hasn't talked to the SBI since he reported to school officials on charges involving Shackleford, who has admitted receiving money while at the school.

Valvano wouldn't comment on the current investigation.

"The media probably knows more about this than I do," he said.

Kramer said he loaned Shackleford between $5,000 and $6,000 while he was playing for the Wolfpack during the 1987-88 season, the player's last year at the school.

Once Shackleford dropped out of school at the end of the season, Kramer said he loaned him

Documents back King's rights over champ

LAS VEGAS (AP) — New heavyweight champ Buster Douglas gave promoter Don King the right to promote all his title fights if he beat Mike Tyson as well as granting King promotional rights for another two years once he loses the title, court documents revealed.

Douglas agreed to the terms in a Dec. 27, 1988 contract that gave him a $25,000 signing fee and a promised fight with Tyson, according to documents on file in U.S. District Court here.

The contract binds the new heavyweight champion exclusively to King for three years "with an automatic extension to cover all fights should you win the title," plus an additional two years after that.

The contract — and a second pact that covers the Tyson fight itself — were filed as part of a suit by Douglas and The Mirage hotel-casino, who are seeking to have them declared invalid so Douglas can sign a $60 million, two-fight pact with the resort.

Also filed was a letter from King's New York attorney, Robert

Hirsh, to Mirage operator Steve Wynn, warning that interference with any of the contracts "will not be tolerated."

Attorneys for Douglas claim the contracts are illegal because Nevada law does not allow promoters to tie up boxers with options on future fights. They also contend that King breached the contracts by not acting in good faith when he protested the results of the Douglas-Tyson fight earlier this month.

"It would be very bad for the state of Nevada as well as Mr.

Douglas to have these kind of contracts that Mr. King has them sign enforced," said Stan Hunter-ton, Douglas' Las Vegas attorney.

King could not be reached Tuesday for comment on the contracts, and his attorney, Robert Hirth, did not return phone calls.

According to the first contract Douglas signed with King, the fighter was to be given four fights between Feb. 25, 1989, and Feb. 25, 1990, with a Tyson bout occurring prior to Feb. 25, 1990.

Baseball deciding on spring training

On the 13th day of the spring training lockout on Tuesday, American League president Bobby Brown and National League president Bill White sent a directive to clubs, saying no exhibition games would be played until after players were in camp for 10 days.

The exhibition season was scheduled to start Thursday with four games. Several teams announced their plans Tuesday for the first part of spring training, including the cancellation of games and refunds. Here is the list for area teams:

Kansas City
The Royals said Tuesday they have canceled their first six home spring training games at Baseball City, Fla. The club said ticket exchanges and refunds for the canceled games will be handled by Boardwalk and Baseball through the mail, or at the Baseball City Stadium box office.

Minnesota
The Twins said Tuesday within a day or two they will probably cancel all games through March 12.

Chicago Cubs
The Cubs are still selling tickets for exhibition games. They will not have a refund policy until they officially cancel games. However, General Manager Jim Frey, in Sun-Times story Tuesday morning, said if the lockout ended Tuesday, it would take about 10 days before an exhibition game could be played. "And I'm not going to speed up (early workouts). Under normal circumstances, you have one or two pitchers with soreness during spring training. The idea is to get ready for the regular season as healthy as you can be."

St. Louis
The Cardinals on Tuesday cancelled the first five games of their spring training schedule. Four of the games were to have been played at Al Lang Stadium in St. Petersburg, Fla., the Cardinals' spring home. The Cardinals' spring home opener had been scheduled for March 3 against the Pittsburgh Pirates. The cancellations run through the March 7 game against the Chicago White Sox in St. Petersburg.

Chicago White Sox
The White Sox have announced that spring training games through March 9 have been canceled. ... General Manager Larry Himes said "The players say (they) can't get ready in 10 days, so there's a week right there."

Elliot sets record

SEVILLE, Spain (AP) — Peter Elliot of Britain set a world indoor record for 1,500 meters on Tuesday with a time of 3 minutes, 34.21 seconds during the Placido Viagas Memorial track meet.

Elliot, who also won the 1,500 meters at the Commonwealth Games last month, bettered the world mark of 3:35.6 set by Marcus O'Sullivan of Ireland at the Meadowlands on Feb. 11, 1989.

Middaugh is accused of taking money from the sale of football programs during the 1987 season and using it to pay some of his former players.

Assistant Prosecutor Lynwood Noah has said Middaugh didn't pocket any of the money for himself. The warrant charging Middaugh doesn't say how much money was allegedly diverted between Sept. 1 and Nov. 30, 1987.

If convicted, Middaugh faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and fines of $5,000. He resigned in July because of the investigation of his program.

Former Detroit Tigers catcher Bill Freehan was named to replace him.

"It's not a happy occasion. Particularly a coach telling student athletes to not tell the truth," said Jack Wiedenbach, interim athletic director at Michigan, referring to an allegation that Middaugh told students to lie.

"I think everyone in the University is disappointed. We took great pride in the way that our programs had operated," he said. "It is sort of an aberration. We will recover from it."

Shackleford's agent, Salvatore DiFazio, said Sunday that while his client was a student, Shackleford accepted almost $65,000 from Kramer and another man, whom he would not identify. The News & Record said the other man was Gillman, who lives in Richfield, Conn., and is listed as a sports agent with the NBA.

Valvano said while the school has taken steps to ensure that players keep up with their academics, there's little he or the school can do to prevent illegal or unauthorized contact by agents.

"You're really talking about an area that I'm head coach on Berry's 57th birthday.

"The transition period will be muted greatly by the fact we're bringing in a man who is very familiar with our organization," Sullivan said.

"I feel I'm a teacher," Rust said. "I see coaching as a teaching function. The staff who will come here, to a man, will see coaching as a teaching function."

He said defensive line coach Ed Khayat, linebacker coach Don Shinnick, receivers coach Harold Jackson and offensive line coach Guy Morris would leave the team. Assistants Richard Wood, Keith Rowen, Don Blackmon, John Polonchek and Jerry Simmons will stay, although possibly in different roles. No final decision was

Besides the Big Ten sanctions, Michigan imposed penalties against itself. They include eliminating an assistant coaching position from the baseball staff, obtaining repayment of all excessive financial assistance received by student athletes in the form of charitable donations and not awarding initially athletic scholarships for the 1990-91 academic years.

Also, the school will have no campus recruiting by any member of the baseball coaching staff through Aug. 31, 1990, no paid recruiting visits for prospective student athletes during 1989-90 academic year, and will limit the number of athletic-related scholarships to 10 in 1991-92 and 11 in 1992-93. The maximum each year would have been 13.

Also, the university will conduct a recertification program to ensure compliance with all Big Ten and NCAA regulations.

"When I took this job, I was advised to accept the worst, and this is the worst. I was looking to get in heaven or hell, and I am in hell," Freehan said. "At least I'm not in limbo."

not sure any coach is not vulnerable to," he said. "A youngster who decides to do something without anyone's knowledge whatsoever, I'm not sure how you are able to counteract that."

Valvano said he has gone before the state legislature to lobby for a measure that would regulate agents and their actions with the state's college teams.

"I've gone to the state house, I've talked to our own players constantly. We've had a member of the SBI (talk to the team)," Valvano said. "If you can tell me what more a coach could do if a youngster has a bent to do something which he knows is wrong and has been told is reached on running back coach Bobby Grier, secondary coach Jimmy Carr or assistant defensive line coach Ray Hamilton.

Rust said he plans "to have coordinators on both sides of the ball and that lets me walk around and talk to anybody I want to. That's funny but it's also meant to be serious."

Rust said "it would be presumptuous of me to get into (discussing the Patriots' offense) in any detail. "I think we should have a good football team."

Rust became defensive coordinator in 1988 under Kansas City coach Frank Ganz but lost the job when Ganz was fired, and moved to Pittsburgh in 1989.

Rust steered clear of discussing the differences with Sullivan that forced Berry out.

Wolfpack basketball program

wrong, I'm not sure what else we can do." The Wolfpack basketball program has been under investigation since January 1989, when allegations of improprieties in the program were published on the dust jacket of the book "Personal Fouls." The book was released in July, in the midst of an NCAA investigation. That probe led to a two-year probation which will keep the Wolfpack out of this year's NCAA tournament. Shackleford's admission could mean the school would have to repay more than $400,000 from its participation in the 1987 and 1988 NCAA tournaments.

Committee won't expand membership

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — For the second time in three years, the veterans committee of the Hall of Fame decided Tuesday not to add any oldtimers to the baseball shrine.

The committee met for more than five hours and took three ballots before adjourning without a consensus.

That leaves infielder Joe Morgan and pitcher Jim Palmer, elected last month by the Baseball Writers Association of America, as the lone new members of Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. They will be inducted this summer.

With 14 of the 18-member veterans committee present for Tuesday's annual meeting, 11 votes were required for election. Birdie Tebbetts, Stan Musial, Red Barber and Roy Campanella were unable to attend.

The committee began with 25 candidates and reduced the list to 11 on the first ballot. Those remaining under consideration at that point were outfielder Richie Ashburn, manager Leo Durocher, second basemen Nellie Fox, Joe Gordon and Tony Lazzeri, umpire Bill McGowan, shortstops Phil Rizzuto and Cecil Travis, and pitchers Carl Mays, Vic Willis and Hal Newhouser.

The third ballot cut the list to five but none could get the required 11 votes.

"All of them got heavy support," said Ted Williams, a member of the committee. "That's what happens when everybody gets a lot of support. Nobody gets enough to push them over the top. It just shows how conscientious the members are about their voting and the concern they have for putting someone in the Hall of Fame."

The BBWAA, concerned about the veterans committee voting in players previously rejected by the writers, had asked the committee to concentrate on front office people, managers and umpires, categories the writers do not consider.

U.S. team takes act down road

ROME (AP) — The United States soccer team will train for the World Cup in a suburb of Pisa rather than a Florence suburb, the 1990 World Cup Organizing Committee said Tuesday.

Tiziana Maestrelli, a spokeswoman for the organizing committee, said the U.S. team preferred the Italian Olympic team training camp in Tirrenia, on the Tyrrhenian coast 10 miles from Pisa, site of the famed Leaning Tower.

The U.S. team originally was to train in Coverciano, a Florentine suburb 60 miles from Tirrenia. U.S. coach Bob Gansler, reached Tuesday at his home in Milwaukee, said the choice was not made by the Americans, but that the Italians forced the team to move.

"My understanding is that the Italian team decided to use the training camp at Coverciano," Gansler said.

The Italian team, which usually trains at Coverciano, had said it would be based in Rome since all three of its first-round games are in Rome's Olympic Stadium.

The Americans, playing in their first World Cup in 40 years will arrive in Tirrenia on June 1. The United States opens its World Cup schedule June 10 against Czechoslovakia at Florence.

NFL will get rid of sluff week

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL decided Tuesday to extend its 16-game schedule over 17 weeks in 1990 and 1991, eliminating the off-week that traditionally fell between the conference championship games and the Super Bowl.

The change provides every team with one week off during the regular season. In 1992 and 1993, the regular 16 games will be played over 18 weeks, giving each team two weeks off.

"This new schedule format allows us to expand our share of the annual sports calendar," Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "Television revenue was an obvious factor, but we are also sensitive to possible over-exposure of our sport. Both were weighed in the decision."

"The new format allows us to expand our schedule as we did in 1978, without affecting the balance between the 16 regular and four preseason games. The open weekends also allow for greater scheduling flexibility, ease the player injury factor, and reduce team travel burdens."

It also provides television with another weekend of games and enabled the league to include that in the current bargaining for new contracts with the commercial and cable networks.

The 1990 regular season will open as originally scheduled on the weekend of Sunday, Sept. 9 and the Super Bowl will be played as scheduled, Sunday, Jan. 27, 1991 in Tampa. However, there will be no open week before that game.

The league has gone into the Super Bowl without a dark week twice before, prior to Super Bowl IV and again before Super Bowl XVII, when a player strike disrupted the season.

The commissioner said the league did not want to change the preseason schedule and that the feeling was that because Tampa had previously hosted a Super Bowl, the city would not need the lead time the dark week provides for logistics and preparation. Minneapolis will host the 1992 Super Bowl but no other future games have been awarded.

Off-days will be arranged in groups of four teams per division per weekend.

Crew chief suspended for illegal part

LIBERTY, N.C. (AP) — Crew chief Robin Pemberton has been suspended 30 days by Roush Racing for using an illegal engine part on Mark Martin's winning car in the Pontiac 400.

Martin's victory on Sunday at Richmond, Va., was allowed to stand but the team was fined $40,000 and lost its championship points. The record fine by NASCAR was assessed because the team's Ford Thunderbird was found to have an illegal 2½-inch spacer on the carburetor. Spacers up to 2 inches are legal.

Team manager Steve Hmiel disagreed with NASCAR's ruling.

"We don't accept the notion that it was an illegal part," Hmiel said. "That is a gray area as far as we are concerned."

Team owner Jack Roush has 30 days to appeal. If he does, a three-member panel from the Stock Car Racing Commission would rule on it.

Hmiel said Pemberton's suspension without pay was made because he was not informed that the 2½-inch spacer was being used at Richmond and that Roush knew about it but was assured by Pemberton there would be no problem.

"I never knew it was there," Hmiel said. "Jack Roush questioned it twice, but Robin said it wasn't going to be any problem. That (spacer) is an old deal with stock engines. Now, they let you weld onto the sides (of the manifold)."

"It's a stupid rule. We thought we needed to move the carburetor 2½ inches up. But all you'd have to do is weld it to the manifold and it could be eight inches up, or whatever you want, and nobody would say anything."

Entertaining Dan Cossacks share rich culture

Martina Brockway
The Daily Iowan

Anchor patrons who were fortunate enough to attend Monday night's performance of the Don Cossacks State Academic Ensemble of Rostov, Soviet Union, enjoyed an impressive repertoire.

Considered as one of the Soviet Union's most outstanding performing arts troupes, the Don Cossacks Song and Dance Company was founded in 1936 in order to preserve the great tradition of Cossack folk song and dance that has been a part of a 400-year-old history.

In 1970 the Ministry of Culture recognized the popularity of the group, and gave them the title of "State Academic Ensemble." Since then, under the leadership of artistic director Anatoly Kvasov, the company has expanded its choreography and dance performance and is now accompanied by a full orchestra, consisting of balalaikas (an instrument resembling a guitar), bass violins, flutes, trumpets and percussion. The group has toured the United States, Western and Eastern Europe, Japan and Korea. Monday night's presentation offered a variety of traditional Cossack song and dance.

The entire company opened the program with a folklore epic entitled "Bylina", which reflected both the historic and present day life of the Cossacks. The choir and dance ensemble continued with the festival performance of "White Fish," which emphasized the theme that "A fish cannot live without water... neither can a Cossack girl without her lover."

Throughout the program themes of battle, love and courting were prominent, each song presenting a picture of village life. "At Maidon" showed the men's dance ensemble in perfect traditional form. The song, which told the story of the place where Cossacks would gather to confer about war, and peace revealed the inspiring acrobatic and gymnastic dance associated with the Cossack people.

The powerful movements showed a complete robust way of life and among people. "Winter Frolic," a humorous presentation of flirtatious content, displayed a dance piece involving intricate footwork.

The entire program was engaging. The traditional costumes were incredibly beautiful and ornate. The range of the chorus produced light lyric poetic voices and haunting melodic sound. The final presentation, "Don Festive Suite," ended the program with a grand finale of celebration among a culture. Amid the revelry of swords clashing, and fantastic acrobatic stunts, emerged a colorful interpretation of historic tradition.

'Revenge' s Quinn is the only bright spot in a very bad movie

Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Generally speaking, there are three kinds of movies: Good movies, bad movies and really bad movies.

"Revenge" is a really bad movie.

Let's count the clichés:

■ Is the hero's Air Force buddy easily nauseated during non-regulation power-dives? Check.

■ Is the hero himself a Vietnam vet with no perceptible personality and a penchant for running his hand through his hair when he's confused/happy/horny? Check.

■ Does the villain have an improbably beautiful, pouty wife who happens to be about the same age as the hero? Check.

■ Does the hero fail to exercise even a smidgeon of self-restraint, letting his loins lead him into a situation which cannot turn out well? Check.

Those elements set in place, "Revenge," starring Kevin Costner and Anthony Quinn takes off through a virtual forest of the most hackneyed, tired old plot props imaginable. This is a two-hour movie, and it makes you feel every single second.

Movies

The story is simple: Jay Cochran (Costner) retires from the Air Force — with, of course, a heavily clichéd departure scene — and goes to Mexico for a vacation with his old friend Tiburon Mendes (Quinn), who happens to be an extremely wealthy power broker with a beautiful young wife, Miryrea (played forgettably by Madeleine Stowe). The predictable sexual sparks fly between Cochran and Miryrea, and their affair is discovered by Mendes, who has Cochran beaten to a pudding and Miryrea shipped off to a warehouse, where she's also to be made a drug addict.

Cochran survives, enlists the aid of the obligatory odd characters to exact his vengeance on Mendes' henchmen and finally reaches a face-to-face confrontation with Mendes himself. In the course of all the violence and grittily determined looks, we get to hear "La Bamba" about 50 times.

In the entire movie, there are only two things to be commended. James Gammon makes a delightful cameo appearance as a hard-drinking, pill-popping American, a kind of warped, surrealistic version of John Wayne gone seedy, and this is good for a few laughs.

The only other good thing about the movie, oddly enough, is Anthony Quinn. He brings to his by-the-numbers role a grace and believability that's completely out of place in this wretched little movie. His Tiburon Mendes is infinitely more likeable than Cochran, the boorish clod who steals his wife and insults his hospitality. Killer though he is, Mendes has a conscience, a set of principles and a sense of humor, and his foremost fault seems to be a poor taste in friends.

As Cochran, Kevin Costner displays not the smallest shred of talent, and this should be a comfort to the legion of his fans who expect from him the same kind of fashionable mediocrity he's brought to every screen role he's ever had. He recites his lines, he guffaws in his best everyman way and, even so, his dog gets blown away.

This would be bad enough even if the film looked good, but it generally doesn't. In addition to some fifteen thousand close-ups of Costner's face — and one of his rear end that's guaranteed to get a chuckle out of even the least cynical viewer — there's an enormous inconsistency in the film's editing. Middy comes at sunset and vice versa, days are overcast at the beginning of turgid, overacted exchanges and cloudless only seconds later.

But paying any attention to such details as editing in a piece of garbage as rank as "Revenge" is largely a wasted effort. Ditto for delving any deeper into the messages of the film, since they seem as accidental as they are disturbing — that horniness is easily more powerful than friendship, for instance, or that it's OK to think of a woman as a sexual object provided you're a cool hunk rather than a wheezing old man.

Or that you shouldn't bring your dog to Mexico, for that matter.

'Yakety Yak' singer killed

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Cornell Gunter, lead singer of The Coasters, the comic do-wop group that had hits in the late '50s with "Yakety Yak" and "Charlie Brown," was shot to death while driving, police said today. He was 53.

Gunter was shot twice in the chest at an intersection at midday Monday and was found slumped over the steering wheel of the car. "It appears he was shot through the windshield and he was dead on the scene. We don't have a motive at this time," said Lt. Gary Rainey.

"Yakety Yak" contained the refrain, "Yakety yak, don't talk back," while "Charlie Brown" was known for line, "Why's everybody always pickin' on me?"

ADOPTION

CREATIVE, productive couple wishes to adopt newborn infant to love and cherish. Legal, confidential. Expenses paid. Call Kaye and Wayne collect, 319-355-1221.

DEAR UNWED MOTHER TO BE:
Don't think of your unwanted pregnancy as an unforgeable and embarrassing burden. Hold your head high and take comfort in knowing that by giving your baby up for adoption a childless couple will love and cherish your gift of a life forever and ever. Never think of the baby as a mistake. Think of the child instead as a miracle who has transformed the lives of an unhappy couple to one of unprecedented joy.

Please give your baby, yourself and us a happier future. You are not alone anymore. Legal, confidential. Expenses paid. Call collect 24 hours a day, 319-243-7016.

'Rainmaker' produced with dry spell in mind

Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

Performances of "The Rainmaker" continue this weekend at Iowa City Community Theatre. Director Cary Beatty says that the 1954 comedy was chosen for production with Iowans in mind.

"We selected the play last summer," Beatty said, "because the topic of drought and economic ruin based on the lack of rain was of great interest to Iowans."

"The Rainmaker" tells the story of Lizzie, a woman apparently on the road to spinsterhood, and her relationship with a newcomer to her drought-stricken Southwestern town. Starbuck slinks into town and promises relief from the drought. Lizzie's father wants to marry her off to Starbuck, but Lizzie would rather be alone than conform to the men in her life.

"What was originally overlooked in the play was that Lizzie really is one of our first feminists. She doesn't want to have to play games to establish a relationship," Beatty said. "We've tried to focus on her development as an individual."

The character of Starbuck is also getting a more modern slant. "We told the actor playing Starbuck to watch Sunday morning evangelists to prepare for the role," Beatty said.

Three UI students are performing in "The Rainmaker." Leslie Reams will play Lizzie, and Michael Hawtrey and Jonathan Dixon are appearing in supporting roles. "We are always eagerly looking for new volunteers from every age group," Beatty said.

In addition to providing "amusing entertainment with a subtle message that is unmissable," Beatty hopes that "The Rainmaker" will give people a chance to forget about the cold outside.

"It's set in August when the temperature reaches 101 degrees. We'll be trying to convey that heat throughout the show," he said. But more than that, Beatty thinks the play will serve as "a reaffirmation that perhaps our drought will end, too."

Performances of "The Rainmaker" are at 8 p.m. March 2, 3, 8, 9 and 10, and at 2:30 p.m. on March 4, at the Community Theatre Building on the Johnson County Fairgrounds, Old Highway 218. Tickets are $7 for adults and $6 for senior citizens and students ($1 less for matinee). Tickets may be purchased through the ICCT box office, Robert A. Lee Recreation Center and Mott's Drug Store.

Comedian Joyner to host CR performance

The Daily Iowan

Nationally known comedian Mario Joyner will be appearing at Penguins Comedy & Dance Club in Cedar Rapids for four shows April 6 and 7. Showtimes are 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. both nights. The opening act will be Headliner Bud Dingman.

Joyner is the host of MTV's "Half Hour Comedy Hour" and has recently appeared on "Late Night With David Letterman."

Tickets are on sale now for $8 and will be $9 the day of the show. Tickets may be bought at Penguins, 209 First Ave., Cedar Rapids, or ordered by phone with a MasterCard or Visa at 362-8133.

UI club prepares for annual style show

The Daily Iowan

The University Club will have its annual Style Show and Luncheon Tuesday, March 13, in the Main Lounge of the Union. A cash wine bar begins at 11:30 a.m., with the luncheon at noon. The theme for the Style Show, which features clothing by local merchants, is "Please Your Palette."

Cost is $7.50 for members and $8.50 for non-members. The Style Show has assigned reserved seating. People wishing to sit together as a group must send their reservations in the same envelope. Please send reservations and checks, made payable to University Club, to: Priscilla Jacobsen, 226 Mahaska Drive. Reservation deadline is March 1.

'Fugue' examines Holocaust

The Daily Iowan

UI Theatres will present "Mr. Fugue, or Earth Sick," Liliane Atlan's innovative look at a small group of victims of the Holocaust, at 8 p.m. February 28 through March 3 and March 6-10, and at 3 p.m. March 4 and 11, in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building.

"The play focuses on four children, the final survivors of a destroyed Jewish ghetto during the days of the Holocaust, and on their interaction with the Nazis who entrap them," says director Harriet Power, a graduate student in the UI Department of Theatre Arts.

Power said that, despite the playwright's wishes, "Mr. Fugue" has never before been done with younger actors playing the roles of the children. Three of the actors in the UI production are teenagers from City High School in Iowa City — senior Anna Weinstein and freshmen Rob Schultz and Seth Camillo. Also playing one of the children is UI undergraduate Eric Pot. The role of the German soldier the children dub Mr. Fugue is played by UI graduate student Cal Liedtke. David Thayer, professor in theatre arts, is responsible for the scene and lighting design. Costume design is by graduate student Kaiome Malloy. Sound design is by Catherine Schieve, visiting assistant professor in theatre arts.

Tickets for "Mr. Fugue" are $9.50 for adults and $6.50 for UI students and may be purchased in advance from the Hancher Box Office. Any remaining tickets for each performance will be available one hour before curtain time at the Theatre Building box office.
