UI considers cut in employees' tuition
Task force explores options

John Creelbell
The Daily Iowan

UI administrators have formed a task force to investigate the possibility of including tuition reductions for employees in the fiscal year 1991 budget. The task force, according to Mary Jo.

Another group investigating this issue is the UI Staff Council. According to Richard Roeder, manager of Staff Relations, the Staff Council is taking a "two-pronged" approach to the issue. One approach looks at family spouses and dependents and another involves employees who are members in good standing.

"But this proposal is still in the initial stages. It has to go before 2 more additions." Roeder said.

Iowa Senate passes bill to bar cross burning, discrimination based on sexual preference

DES MOINES
If legislation to ban cross burning and to bar discrimination on the basis of sexual preference becomes law, it will now go to the House, which last year approved a different version. That version died in the Senate in part because it expanded the bill's scope and might tax businesses from different parts of the state. But critics vented their frustration at Republican Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, R-50th-District, who they said keeps putting "irrelevant amendments" to the bill.

"The thrust of this bill is to say to Iowans that we will not allow this to happen," said Sen. Len Paul, who is considered a candidate for governor in 1990. "It recognizes that faculty and students who are part of the family can't just be allowed in and out of the activities as they please."

Still, supporters said Iowa law does not provide specific penalties for cross burnings and for actions against homosexuals.

"There is no law in the state of Iowa that says we can't do something about cross burning," said Sen. Margaret Hargrave, R-West Des Moines, who is considering a run for governor.

"We're hoping to reverse the task force now and get through the laws, and make recommendations," Small said.

But Small stressed that it is very early in the investigation, and the situation is more complicated than it may appear.

"The fact that we haven't been able to come up with a lot of new ideas doesn't mean that we can't take advantage of what we have," Small said.

"Even if we come up with a proposal, the debate over whether that is an appropriate use of compensation will continue."

HARKIN TAX INCREASE

Dishonest denial

Iowa Senator Tom Harkin experienced a sudden loss of "confidence" last week that sees voters would support higher taxes.

In a committee hearing last week, Harkin said the federal government could cut the deficit by raising revenue from the public education and challenged President Bush to set an ambitious 10-year agenda for specific goals for the American education system.

"I don't think the federal government is pulling its weight," Harkin said.

He said solving the American education crisis would require a "two-step" plan: 1) pass an immediate tax increase and 2) pass a comprehensive education reform package.

Speaking for the public education lobbyists, Harkin called the administration's approach to education "a failed goal of some of those countries," he said. "The problem is that our own education system is a private ownership, a market-oriented entity. Anti-trust laws and regulations are necessary in order to provide the public education system that the American people need and deserve."

Harkin also said there has been a decline in support for education. He said the administration's proposed cuts to education would cause "an immediate and dramatic impact on our children's future and the nation's future."

Unfortunately, the bill will not pass in its current form, he said. "The Senate is not interested in passing a bill that is good for the public education system."

Soviet leaders: Citizens can procure, inherit land

Historians have discovered a draft 1990 law that would allow citizens to procure, inherit land and to lease it. The law marks the first time that the state would allow individuals to own land. The law would also permit them to lease land, but not to sell it.

The law, however, has brought criticism from human rights groups and from foreign governments. The United Nations has expressed concern about the law, saying it could lead to widespread landlessness in the country.

The law was drafted by the Soviet government in response to growing public demands for greater control over land. It was presented to the Supreme Soviet legislature in December and passed by a vote of 1,072 to 29.

The law's main provisions include:

- Citizens can procure, inherit land and lease it for a limited period.
- Citizens can purchase land from the state or from other citizens.
- Land can be leased, but not sold.
- The state can reclaim land that has not been used for a certain period.
- Land can be leased to private businesses for agricultural production.
- Land can be leased to foreign entities for agricultural production.
- Land can be leased to individuals for personal use.

The law was met with mixed reactions. Some human rights groups welcomed the law as a step towards greater land rights for citizens. Others criticized the law as a means of exploiting land for economic gain.

The law is expected to be implemented in the coming months, although there are concerns about its enforcement.

Heated oiling in N.J. waterway

WASHINGTON - After years in the trenches of America's sweat and toil, the House of Representatives took up for the first time in history on Wednesday a bill aimed at preventing another major oil spill in the nation's waters.

The bill, which would prohibit the discharge of oil products into the nation's waters, was introduced in response to the 1979 Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska. The proposed legislation would establish stricter standards for the storage and transportation of oil products, as well as require companies to develop contingency plans for spills.

The House committee tasked with overseeing the legislation was expected to take up the bill as soon as possible, and a vote could be held as early as next week.

The Exxon Valdez spill, which occurred in Prince William Sound, Alaska, released an estimated 10.8 million gallons of crude oil into the water, killing thousands of birds, sea otters, and other marine life. The accident forced the company to pay $2.2 billion in damages and contributed to a major downturn in the company's stock price.

The bill's introduction was met with a mix of support and opposition, with some lawmakers expressing concern that it could harm the oil industry and lead to higher gasoline prices. Others praised the bill as a necessary step to protect the nation's oceans and coastal communities from future spills.

The bill's sponsors, including Representatives John Boehner (R-OH) and Edward Markey (D-MA), said they believed the legislation was long overdue and that it was time for Congress to take strong action to prevent future disasters.

The proposed legislation would establish new regulations for the storage and transportation of oil products, as well as require companies to develop contingency plans for spills. The bill would also create a new federal agency to oversee the oil industry and ensure that companies are complying with the regulations.

The Exxon Valdez spill continues to be a symbol of the need for stronger regulations to protect the nation's oceans and coastal communities from future disasters. The bill introduced on Wednesday is a step in the right direction, but much more work needs to be done to ensure that such tragedies never happen again.
Political fight in Natal, S.A., claims lives

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Pretoria's police commissioner clashed with police on an all-black township for control of local government on Wednesday. At least six people were reported killed.

Two black men were killed and a third man was wounded in gunplay that spread Tuesday as police forces who backed votes of white paternal near Durban in the southeastern province, police officials said.

Rival factions set fire to homes and stores in several towns and police used tear gas and tear gas to disperse mobs that attacked police posts, the officials said.

Three dead black men apparently killed in fighting between rival black factions were found Tuesday in the Natal region. At least 10 others had been killed in fighting between rival black factions.

Atlan visits during UI ‘Fugue’ production

The Daily Iowan

Playwright Liliane Atlan will visit the UI to present her French play, "M. Fugue," to the Department of French and the Black Hawk Theatre on Wednesday. The play will be translated into English by Dr. Thomas Johnston, professor of French, and will be performed on Friday and Saturday in the Center of the Performing Arts.

Atlan previously visited the UI as a participant in the International Writing Program. Dr. Robert Henry, director of the Iowa Playwrights Workshop, said, "It's unusual to have our students, at least our pursue writers, perform, performers, designers and directors. The UI French faculty is doing that. They have been invaluable."

"Each of these authors are from France, even on the week to 10 days," Biddle said. "They're very particular in terms of inviting the audience into the margins of life. Their work is a conversation with the student. In April, the play's cabaret will enable the audience to participate."

Among the prominent artists who have already visited the UI this week through the NEA grant are current artist Brian E. Eckert, whose collaboration with composer Paul Dresher — three free-standing pieces — is called "An Opera of the Arts." Eckert, the author of "Antonin Artaud: Anthropology of a Savage Mind," said, "I think I'm a very individual performance artist, and it's a unique program."

The dog, Bud Lite, was to be destroyed by lethal injection at the animal shelter. But authorities say Bud Lite had done no wrong and was the victim of mistaken identity.

"We're heartbroken there's a possibility of destruction," said an animal shelter woman. That can't be your dog," the other woman responded.

"I see a lot of this," the shelter woman said. "We have a lot of one-price dogs and cats."

"And there they're off. They're scheduled to be able to fit into those lanes," said Mississauga, Ont. "Michigan seems to have the ability to do that. The building was very fast, but we were fortunate to be able to start for their first big meet," said coach Glenn Patton.

Men

Regional, both Illinois and Iowa's coaches were internationally influenced. "We have a relatively strong and fast team," said Iowa's coach, Monty Mole.

Betting

"We should be the perfect team for the New York gambling industry," said coach Mole.

Women

"We have become tough-minded competition. What is the best that you can do?" asked coach Mole.
Olympics to trim numbers

HOME (AP) — The president of the International Olympic Committee said Wednesday that some events likely will be eliminated at the Olympic Games in 1992.

Sacramento abandoned a bid for NFL's Raiders franchise

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The city of Sacramento has decided to end its $50-million offer to the Los Angeles Raiders, and city leaders and there's little chance of revising the deal for the NFL team.

The City Council voted to withdraw the offer, and, in addition to that condition, to labor and the San Francisco Giants, which will be the long-term tenants.

The decision by the city of Sacramento is that the Raiders are not worth the money.

Sacramento has bid for an NFL team before, and the city of Oakland has also bid for an NFL team before.

New York might try gambling

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York would legalize gambling on professional sports and spread shares of the bets on fighting under a proposed bill Wednesday by state legislators.

The state could see more than $2 billion in the first year alone, already, and sponsor Assemblyman Ronald Tarr, a Wyoming native, said.

"Everybody has seen the influence the drug war has. We need to support our pro sports," he said.

The lawsuit is still pending, betting on the underworld and some of that money that we know.

"It's obvious that gambling is already in the state, in the form of bookies and off-track betting," he said. "Let's get ahead of the game and go for the money."
