After 5 delays, Atlantis finally starts mission

Cargo may be a spy satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis, aloft at last on a secret military mission after five launch delays, orbited the globe Wednesday in a public silence that NASA officials said meant all was well.

Atlantis blasted off with five military astronauts and a cargo believed to be a $500 million spy satellite at 2:51 a.m., its 700-foot column of fire visible for hundreds of miles. It was NASA's sixth attempt at launching the 100-ton spaceship for the mission, one short of a record for the most shuttle postponements.

"Thank goodness we can finally stop meeting like this," NASA administrator Richard Truly told the launch team after Atlantis rocketed into orbit. "It was a tough one to get off, but a great job."

Nothing was heard from Atlantis' all-military crew, and launch director Bob Sieck said, "the crew was pretty quiet and very patient." "The fact that we haven't heard anything indicates that all is going according to plan," added Bruce Buckingham, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Because of the classified nature of the Defense Department mission, NASA quickly blacked out public release of communications from the shuttle for the entire trip.

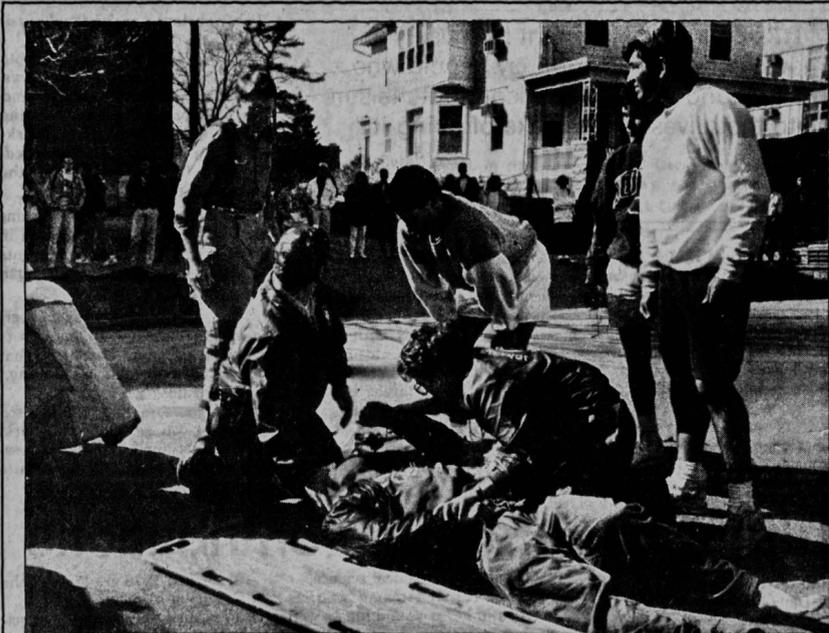

Liftoff, originally set for February 15, almost was delayed a sixth time because of bad weather at Kennedy Space Center and at emergency abort sites.

The first scheduled liftoff was halted when the crew's commander was stricken with a cold. His illness, combined with uncertain weather, prompted NASA to scrub the second launch.

The others were blocked twice by bad weather and once by a malfunctioning computer.

With rain and clouds threatening to postpone once more, NASA halted Wednesday's countdown for about two hours. The clock was restarted at nine minutes, stopped briefly for a final weather check, then it ticked to liftoff.

"The weather finally cooperated.

Man down

UI junior Al Rosenberg lies semi-conscious after being struck on his scooter Wednesday afternoon by a car. Witnesses said the car, driver not identified, pulled out of an alley drive and didn't appear to see Rosenberg, who was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics.

We had a good, smooth count," said Forrest McCartney, director of Kennedy Space Center. "The team exercised good patience."

As the rocket ignited, light burst from the launch pad and leaped from cloud to cloud across the nighttime horizon.

People as far north as Washington, D.C., reported seeing the blue, white and red light of Atlantis' rockets as the spaceship streaked up the East Coast on the highest inclination orbit ever traveled by a shuttle. For many, it resembled a brilliant falling star.

"It only lasted about seven to 10 seconds. But it beat the hell out of a fireworks show," said Mike Albertson, an editor at the Savannah (Ga.) Evening Press who watched from Tybee Island, Ga. Atlantis' 62-degree inclination

Cancer/Pill connection possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private health group asked the Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday to strengthen the wording of warning labels on oral contraceptives.

The Public Citizen Health Research Group said its review of 13 studies published since 1977 shows that women under 45 who use birth-control pills for many years may be at increased risk of developing breast cancer.

An FDA advisory committee, in January 1989, recommended no changes in use of the pill, saying research on a possible link to breast cancer was inconclusive and more study was needed.

More than 13 million women in the United States between the ages of 15 and 44 use oral contraceptives.

Fourteen studies published in the past decade found no link between the pill and breast cancer, but few of these examined women who began using the pill at a young age and continued for many years, the group said.

Of the 13 studies reviewed, three show that the risk of early breast cancer appears to increase for these women, said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group.

Wolfe said the current labeling system for oral contraceptives is "inadequate, years out of date and misleading."

Disease may reach epidemic

Health services: Cases of genital warts increase

Diana Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

Though it's one of the relatively lesser-known sexually transmitted diseases, human papilloma virus or genital warts may be the most common STD on the UI campus and nationwide.

Susan Long, a nurse practitioner at the UI Family Planning Clinic for women, said "several increases of genital warts cases over the past three years" have led her to believe that the virus has now infected epidemic amounts of men and women.

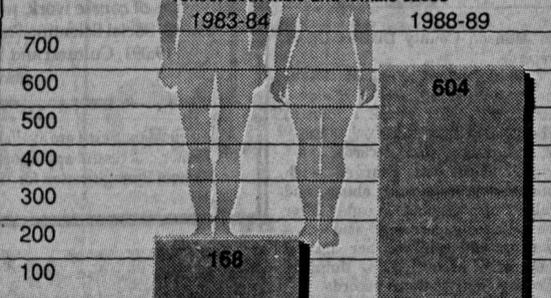

According to the book "Contraceptive Technology" by Robert Hatcher, HPV causes the highest number of annual visits to a physician of any viral STD, accounting for more than one million visits each year.

Long added that at least one researcher believes as many as 70 percent of all sexually active people may be carriers of the HPV virus without even knowing they have it. Besides chlamydia, it's probably the most common STD on the UI campus among women and men, Long said.

"The tricky thing is that the virus is going to reside in your body forever," Long said. "The warts are just a marker of the infection, but you can pass it on to your partner whether or not you have the warts."

Between the surge in the number of genital warts cases and the prevalence of chlamydia — now believed to have already infected 11 percent of all sexually active people — Long said "if you are having sexual intercourse and not protecting yourself with condoms then it's highly likely you are infected with an asymptomatic STD."

Long said it was only recently discovered that genital warts are caused by a virus that can remain in the body for years without

Play explores alcohol, drugs and condoms

The days of Captain Kangaroo are over. Now we have Captain Condom.

"Sex, Drugs, and Remote Control" — a three-act comedy play exploring the relationship between alcohol, other drug use and sexual decision making — will be performed three times on the UI campus next week as part of National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week.

Captain Condom, his "Condomettes" and four other student actors will satirize current societal attitudes toward drug use during the 30-minute play directed by Michael Barto and Mark Hallen.

"The play is mainly about the poor decisions people make under the influence of drugs and alcohol. The format is comedy, so I don't feel like we're telling people what to do," actor Jim Snodgrass said.

The idea for the play was originally conceived by Michael Barto, Artistic Director of the AIDS Educational Theater in Chicago, Illinois.

"We want the play to heighten people's awareness in a self-conscious way rather than speaking to the audience as though they have never heard of these issues," Barto said.

The play's script evolved from talking with students about common misunderstandings of the relationships between alcohol, drugs and sex, he said. The initial motivation for the piece, however, came from his own college experiences.

"I have tested HIV positive and was most likely infected while in college," Barto said. "Safe sex wasn't on my priority list because I wasn't even aware of the idea. Unsafe sex, drinking and using drugs didn't allow me to make decisions responsibly. That has affected the rest of my life."

Barto feels current drug and alcohol campaigns tend to oversimplify the issues. The "Just Say No" and "War On Drugs" campaigns use scare tactics and

Barry pleads innocent to charges, is confident he will be vindicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry, back in the capital for the first time in more than a month, pleaded innocent Wednesday to cocaine possession and perjury charges filed after an investigation into his ties to a convicted drug dealer.

"We will not plea bargain, and the mayor is not considering resigning," Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, said after the nine-minute court proceeding. "The mayor is confident he will be vindicated at trial."

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson scheduled a June 4 trial on three counts of perjury and five counts of misdemeanor possession of cocaine.

Charleston, S.C. A senior Barry aide speaking on condition of anonymity said Barry, who returned to Washington Tuesday, would go back to the center later Wednesday.

Mundy said the mayor's treatment for alcoholism was "going well" and Barry was in "good spirits."

Barry, 53, did not speak to reporters upon entering or exiting the courthouse, but held up two fingers in a "victory" sign.

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens would not comment on the possibility of a plea bargain, but said that the probe was continuing "with respect to a variety of allegations" involving Barry and various city services.

All but one of the charges stem from an investigation into Barry's ties to convicted drug dealer Charles Lewis, who has testified that he supplied the mayor with crack cocaine in December 1988. One possession charge involved the mayor's January 18 arrest in an FBI sting operation at a downtown Washington hotel.

An Iowa City child custody case which separated two children from their parents for 65 hours has outraged the family, according to its attorney.

The Department of Human Services may be taking children taken from their families without exhausting alternatives, Iowa City Attorney Constance Peschang-Stannard told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

"Perhaps there is a policy of removing too quickly and being overzealous in trying to protect the interests of children," Peschang-Stannard said.

Date set for student government elections

Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Elections for the restructured UI student government will be held on March 28 and 29.

"We hope to have the new body seated the week of April 1," said Belinda Marner, coordinator of the Student Services Administration.

The election procedures will follow the guidelines outlined in the new constitution, which was approved by students in a referendum last month, Marner said.

The positions of student body president and vice president will be open to any registered UI student, according to Julia Countryman, student elections board representative.

The two executive candidates will run together, but will not be affiliated with a political party.

"This is the biggest change," Countryman said. "We changed the rules quite a bit with the new constitution."

Other changes involve campaign spending, she said.

Ceilings on campaign spending will be implemented, and all expenses will be reported to the UI Business Office, she added.

Spending restrictions include a $250 maximum campaign expenditure for senators and $1000 spending limit for the offices of president and vice president.

In addition to the office of president and vice president, other new positions under the new system include 25 positions on the Undergraduate Activities Senate (non-academic branch), 15 seats on the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate (academic branch), and 75 seats on the Graduate and Professional Student Senate.

Party affiliations are allowed for all senators.

Petitions for all student government positions are now available at the UI Office of Campus and Student Activities, IMU, Room 145, and the UI Student Activities Center, on the IMU ground floor.

Candidates for senator must obtain 75 signatures of currently registered students, and presidential and vice-presidential candidates each must acquire 500 signatures.

In addition, candidates for senator must submit a $25 bond, while students running for the executive offices are required to file a $100 bond.

All bonds and petitions are due at the mandatory candidates meeting March 9, at 7 p.m., in the IMU Triangle Ballroom.

Leisure studies can benefit busy people

Jodi M. Hamel
The Daily Iowan

People in the work force tend to think that activities they don't get paid for are not worthwhile, but a UI course works to change this attitude.

Humanistic Perspectives on Leisure and Play, taught by UI Professor Benjamin Hunnicutt, attempts to change the attitude that basic liberal arts skills cannot be applied outside the work place.

The fact that more than 50 students are enrolled in the course supports the notion that incorporating skills learned through a liberal arts program with leisure and play is a valuable aspect of education.

"This course is important because you have real examples of busy people who have found the time to incorporate leisure into their lives for the sake of doing it," said UI

As the course's teaching assistant, David Gould provides UI students, in two discussion groups, exposure to local students, professionals and entertainers who have incorporated leisure and play into their busy schedules.

"Now is a perfect time to turn students on to things that make life richer before their life is upturned and divided by work.

"A professional career is important, but in the same respect, too much emphasis on work neglects leisure and a person's life is not quite as rich," Gould said.

Group discussions with visiting guest speakers aim to motivate students to become more educated in various leisure areas including art, music and civic activities.

Speakers who have appeared in Gould's discussion sections so far this semester include Karen Kubby, Iowa City Councilor, and Rich Webster, a professional musician.

Marv Cook, New England Patriots football player; Barry Davis, Iowa wrestling assistant coach; and Robin Beeman, teaching-writing fellow in the UI Writers' Workshop, are among speakers scheduled for the remainder of the spring semester.

Webster, who is currently working on a solo album to be released in August, hopes to inspire students to explore music through his participation in the class.

"By answering questions and performing in class the students get to see what goes into music and that it's more than just performing," Webster said.

UI sophomore Randy Soldwisch said, "As you get older the world gets more complicated and stressful. It's important to do leisure activities."

Area man found guilty of molestation

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A 26-year-old North Liberty, Iowa, man was found guilty Tuesday of molesting a 10-year-old girl.

The defendant, Melvin Lovetinsky, 185 Whitman Ave., was charged with two counts of lascivious acts with a child June 8, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Lovetinsky reportedly molested the girl on several occasions, according to court records.

The jury returned the guilty verdict after deliberating for more than 7 hours.

Sentencing in the matter was tentatively set for April 18.

Bond shall continue at $15,000, according to court records.

Turner honored for contributions

A reception for the first black woman certified by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology drew Black History Month to a close at the UI Wednesday in the Union.

Dr. Deborah Turner, certified in the subspecialty of Gynecologic Oncology, was born, educated and practices medicine in Iowa, and Wednesday she received the honor of her peers for her contribution to medical science.

Turner is currently an assistant professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, specializing in Gynecologic Oncology — the study of cancer in women.

Fourth-year UI medical student and president of the Student National Medical Association Nathaniel Carter presented Turner with the award in honor of her contributions to medical science.

Calling Turner a woman "who has excelled in her personal life as well as her professional life," Carter gave Turner the award to honor the first black woman certified in

An Iowa City man was charged with second-degree theft Tuesday after police allegedly found a stolen computer in his apartment closet, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Eugene T. Wyatt Jr., 24, 332 Ellis Ave., Apt. 23, was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $5,000 bond, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for March 9, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man was charged with possession of a controlled substance Wednesday after police reportedly found a pipe containing marijuana in his leather coat pocket, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Scot A. Trojanowski, 20, 961 Miller Ave., was being searched by police when the marijuana was found, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for March 20, according to court records.

• An Iowa City man was charged with assault without intent to inflict serious injury but causing bodily injury Monday after he allegedly struck a man in the head, according to Johnson County District Court records.

When the defendant, Vwem K. Iniana, 19, 1926 Broadway Ave., Apt. B, struck the victim, he fell to a cement floor, according to court records.

The victim suffered a cerebral concussion, according to court records.

Iniana was arrested Wednesday on $500 bond, according to court records.

• A 17-year-old Kalona resident charged with assault causing injury will be tried in as an adult instead of as a juvenile, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, Paul M. Phandbecker, RR 2, Box 4A, Kalona, Iowa, reportedly struck a man in the head with his fist on January 2, according to court records.

• A man was charged with second-degree sexual abuse and false imprisonment Tuesday after he allegedly sexually abused a woman and confined her against her will, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Bond for the defendant, Robert Sirovy, address unknown, was set at $25,000, according to court records.

UI considers cut in employees' tuition

Task force explores possibility

Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

UI administrators have formed a task force to investigate the possibility of including tuition reduction as an employee benefit.

Last summer, UI President Hunter Rawlings expressed interest in employee tuition reduction which spurred the formation of the task force, according to Mary Jo Small, vice president of Finance and University Services.

Another group investigating this issue is the UI Staff Council, according to Richard Saunders, manager of Staff Benefits.

Staff Council is taking a "two-prong" approach to the issue, according to Saunders. One approach looks at faculty spouses and dependents and another involves employees who are enrolled in classes.

"But this proposal is still in the infancy stage. It has a long way to go before it reaches adulthood," Saunders said.

Currently, staff benefits allow part-time and full-time employees who are enrolled in classes to apply for grants of $100 dollars a semester, according to Susan Butters, a member of the Staff Council.

A total of 700 grants are available each year — 280 in each of the fall and spring semesters and 140 in the summer, Butters said.

"But that still isn't enough. We'd like to see increases in both dollar amounts and number of grants available," Butters said.

Butters believes that something will come out of the group's investigations.

"This was proposed three years ago, but everyone feels the atmosphere is ripe for something to happen," Butters said.

Small said the formation of the task force was another effort by the administration to create policies aimed toward acknowledging the importance of the family unit.

"It recognizes that faculty and staff have family obligations and such a policy might give us some advantages in recruitment," Small said. "We want to make this the most hospitable environment for families."

"Even if we come up with a proposal, I expect a fair amount of debate."

Mary Jo Small
UI vice president of finance

"We're hoping to convene the task force soon and go through the material we have collected and make recommendations," Small said.

But Small stressed that it is very early in the investigation, and the situation is more complicated than it may appear.

"The fact that we haven't been able to do this before now shows that it is not easy to solve . . . It's a benefit that only so many can take advantage of," Small said.

"Even if we come up with a proposal, I expect a fair amount of debate over whether this is an appropriate use of compensation dollars," she added.

California fundraiser aids Tauke

Reagan hosts benefit, draws 45 supporters

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

For the first time in a 1990 election campaign, former President Ronald Reagan held a fundraiser for a Republican challenger Monday in California.

Reagan sponsored the event to drum up support for the Senate campaign of Congressman Tom Tauke, R-2nd-Iowa, in his race against Senator Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

About 45 people attended the event, according to Allen Finch, Tauke's press secretary. Finch said he did not know the total profit from the fundraiser, although each ticket was $500, or $1000 for a picture with Reagan and Tauke.

"It would take 100 such events to catch up to the level of money Senator Harkin has raised in California," Finch said.

Tauke's campaign claims that Harkin has raised two-thirds of his campaign fund from citizens in states other than Iowa, especially celebrities in California, calling him "Hollywood Harkin."

Finch said two-thirds of Tauke's campaign contributors are Iowans, which will calculate into more votes for him.

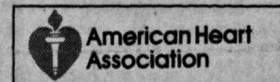

Harkin's campaign said the timing of Tauke's fundraiser is in poor judgment because of Reagan's recent testimony in the trial of former National Security Adviser John Poindexter.

"We're getting the support of people in California who are winning Oscars and Grammys, not someone forced to give testimony in the Iran-Contra trial," said Phil Roeder, Harkin campaign manager.

Roeder said the Reagan fundraiser is the first indication that Tauke's claim to be supported completely by Iowa money will not hold up.

Tauke's campaign agreed that money from other states will be necessary in this campaign.

"To remain competitive . . . we are going to have to hold an occasional fundraiser outside the state," Finch said.

Iowa Senate passes bill to bar cross burning, discrimination based on sexual preference

DES MOINES (AP) — Cross burnings and harassment of homosexuals would result in a prison sentence of up to five years upon conviction under a bill approved Wednesday by the Iowa Senate.

"The thrust of this bill is to say to Iowans that we don't want you going around beating up on people just because you don't like what they stand for," said Sen. Linn Fuhrman, R-Aurelia. "It's uncivilized."

The bill won 34-14 approval.

"This is a hard one to argue against, but it seems to me that anyone who does these actions now can be prosecuted," said Sen. Mark Hagerla, R-West Burlington.

Supporters said Iowa law does not provide specific penalties for cross burnings and for actions against homosexuals.

The bill now goes to the House, which last year approved a different version. That version died in the Senate in part because it expanded the state civil rights law to protect homosexuals from discrimination. The Senate bill does not address the civil rights status of homosexuals but stipulates that homosexuals are protected from physical assault, intimidation and harassment.

Iowa law provides such protection for people from violence or intimidation based on race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, political affiliation or sex.

Iowa granted $7.8 million in federal aid for drug treatment

DES MOINES (AP) — The state will receive $7.8 million in federal money to pay for drug abuse treatment programs, legislative leaders said Wednesday.

They said the money would go to cut the waiting list to get into treatment, pay for up to 40 counselors for schools and launch new programs for babies born addicted to cocaine.

The new funding is one of the last budget pieces lawmakers have been awaiting to assemble the spending plan for the state's assault on illegal narcotics.

Legislative leaders said exact details of the new spending are still being crafted, but should be assembled quickly.

"There's a myriad of possibilities," said Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon. "Those decisions can now be made."

Rep. Wayne McKinney, D-Waukee, one of the authors of the drug legislation, said the biggest share will go to cut the waiting period for those seeking entry into a substance abuse treatment program.

There are roughly 1,500 people currently waiting to enter treatment programs, McKinney said, with an average waiting time of up to eight weeks. Cutting that waiting list would cost roughly $4.6 million.

In addition, McKinney said, backers want to spend roughly $1 million to hire 40 counselors who would travel to schools to provide education programs to prevent substance abuse.

Another major item is an effort to aid cocaine babies born to addicted mothers. No firm price tag has been set for that effort, said McKinney.

Announcement of the new funding came at a Statehouse news conference where Democrats vented their frustration at Republican Gov. Terry Branstad, who they said keeps them in the dark on how much federal money the state is going to get.

That's particularly crucial this year, they said, because lawmakers are trying to shorten the legislative session by two weeks.

To expedite that process they are rushing spending measures through the Legislature but had to put the anti-drug effort on the shelf because they weren't sure how much federal money would be a part of the package.

They said Branstad has known about the federal money for two weeks, but hasn't told the Legislature. That's made it tougher to assemble the budget and added to the time squeeze facing lawmakers, they said.

STUDENT ART GRANTS

The Fine Arts Council is offering up to $400.00 in student grants to support the production and presentation of literary, visual, or performing arts and/or artistic compositions.

All students must be registered students for both the grant proposal period and the production period.

No applications will be accepted after March 26, 1990.

Applications are available at the Fine Arts Council office. Submit applications and all relevant materials to the office, Room 144 Iowa Memorial Union, Iowa City, Ia. 52242, 319 335-3393.

Decisions will be made by April 9, 1990.

HOW DO YOU PLAN TO REMEMBER THE EVENTS OF THIS YEAR?

In a year when the Berlin Wall crumbled, San Francisco rumbled, and the laser center stumbled, students at the UI kept up with the pace.

From protests to parties UI students experienced the good times of college life and kept in tune with the world by watching Weekend Update on Saturday Night Live.

Now the HAWKEYE Yearbook is giving you the chance to remember this year and everything it had to offer. The 1990 Yearbook features articles on sports, greys, organizations and everything else going on around campus. Don't miss out, get your book today.

HARKIN TAX INCREASE

Dishonest denial

Iowa Senator Tom Harkin experienced a sudden loss of "confidence" last week that Iowa voters would support higher taxes to finance his educational reform proposal.

In senate committee hearings last week, Harkin said the federal government was "not meeting its responsibility" to public education and challenged President Bush to set an ambitious 10-year agenda of specific goals for the American educational system.

"I don't think the federal government is pulling its weight," Harkin said.

He said solving the American education crisis would require a "moon-shot" plan similar to John F. Kennedy's space program initiative, and proposed a system where the cost of public education would be shared equally by the federal government, states and localities.

That type of plan definitely "is going to cost money," but the senator said he believes Americans would support a tax increase if the money was to be used for improving education.

Unlike most Iowans, presumably voting Iowans, when Harkin talks about "surcharges" or "surtaxes" as additional means to generate revenues, he doesn't really mean new taxes.

Nothing spectacular there.

The lofty educational goals President Bush set in his State of the Union address were admittedly short on specifics, so a little grandstanding by one of the most liberal Democratic Senators isn't all that surprising.

Of course, money may not be the solution; the United States already spends more money per capita on education than any nation except Sweden, but still lags embarrassingly behind in educational quality. And of course, financing that type of plan would probably require a lot more tax revenue than Harkin's proposed 1 percent hike would provide.

But it's only natural that Harkin, instead of authoring specific legislation, would vow to use "every platform" he can find to promote the plan and the accompanying tax proposal.

At least until Harkin reconsidered the ramifications of a tax hike proposal in an election year.

Just one day after news of Harkin's proposal hit major Iowa newspapers, the incumbent senator was hurriedly backing away from the issue. Despite being quoted in favor of a tax hike in The Cedar Rapids Gazette, The Chronicle of Higher Education and Education Daily, Harkin denied that he supported any increase.

When pressed by reporters about his sudden change of heart, Harkin said the discrepancies were merely the result of differences in definitions. Unlike most Iowans, presumably voting Iowans, when Harkin talks about "surcharges" or "surtaxes" as additional means to generate revenues, he doesn't really mean new taxes. But Harkin was absolutely "not backing off anything" he said. It's that simple.

Sorry, senator, but Iowans won't buy it.

Over the years, the state of Iowa has been a showcase of educational excellence, and Iowans realize that America's education crisis cannot be solved simply by dumping money on the problem. "When it comes to education," Iowa voters may be willing, as Harkin suggests, to "pay a little more." Maybe not.

But what Iowa voters will not tolerate is Harkin's propensity to do a 180-degree turn on major issues whenever he feels the political winds shifting.

Abortion. Cargo preference. Taxes.

The list is getting long, and the act is getting old.

Castro, all by his lonesome

The revolution exhausted, what will Cuba do now?

Nothing is what it used to be for Fidel Castro. As he complained to the Congress of Cuba's Working People: "Whereas previously it was customary to hear the word 'comrade' at meetings of Socialist countries... now they say 'ladies and gentlemen.'"

And that, as Castro understands it, is only a symbol of more basic changes shaking what was called the "Socialist Bloc."

"The building of capitalism has become the openly declared goal of some of those countries," he continued. "There is already talk of the market, private ownership, a market economy. Anti-Communist sentiments are gaining strength in almost all these countries." He was speaking, of course, of Eastern Europe, and was sharing his concern with "the masses."

Where will all these reforms leave Cuba? he asked. "We hope that certain trade agreements will be fulfilled in 1990... Nevertheless, we are not sure of this... What price will they pay for our sugar? Perhaps they will try to pay for it at the price of the international garbage pit, which is the world sugar market."

For 30 years, Fidel Castro had no doubt that the economic and social problems of Cuba and the world were due to imperialism and imperialist exploitation, the principal offender being, of course, the United States.

But lately Castro's problems have been coming not just from the United States, but from the Soviet Union as well, whose delayed grain shipments have caused severe shortages, long lines, hungry cows and a good deal of trepidation.

"For 20 years now, grain and certain foodstuffs and raw materials for the year have arrived from the Soviet Union ahead of schedule in November and December." However, he said, the shipments needed for January had still not arrived at the end of the month.

Rationing was imposed for bread and other wheat products. The use of feed grain for cattle was completely stopped. It was cut back for poultry farming, threatening to make necessary the slaughter of millions of chickens, with a consequent drop in egg production. The government was forced to spend hard currency to buy wheat from Canada because Cuban reserves had already been used up.

Fidel Castro and his colleagues believe their problems are a consequence of perestroika. Soviet deliveries are no longer as reliable as they have always been, he says, because of "disturbances, strikes, distortions and stoppages of production." Cuban fruit has been left to rot, or has been consumed at home, because merchant ships from East Germany, Poland and the Soviet Union that should have taken the fruit to market have been unavailable. Castro believes all these disruptions are the consequence of the "reforms" that he has so passionately rejected.

Not surprisingly, Soviet spokesmen have a different view of who's to blame.

First, the Soviets insist there was no shortfall in Soviet grain deliveries to Cuba in 1989. Planned

Jeane Kirkpatrick

Shipments for 1989 were 100 percent fulfilled, they say.

Second, there have been no cuts in Soviet grain shipments to Cuba in 1990, but a "slight one-month delay" in the arrival of "advanced shipments" of Soviet foodstuffs and raw materials.

Castro, they suggest, is overreacting, doubtless because of his fear of change in the Socialist camp.

Ever so gently, Soviet spokesmen suggest there are Cuban causes for Cuba's economic problems: "Adverse weather" (to which Socialist agriculture is so uniquely prone) has reduced the sugar cane harvest; the slow pace of construction in Cuba has hampered work on needed dock facilities; archaic equipment at Cuban ports and chronic scarcity of transportation and warehouse facilities have forced Soviet ships to dock for long periods; Cuban deliveries of citrus to the Soviet Union in 1989 were 100,000 tons short of those promised.

Soviet spokesmen flatly deny that the economic pressure felt in Cuba is a tactic designed to force Castro to reconsider his opposition to Gorbachev's leadership. Such charges, they say, are the fantasy of the Western media.

"There is no such pressure on Cuba," said Vladimir Shalalov, president of the Soviet-Cuban Friendship Society. "But there is currently a need for reorganization, just as we are doing in the Soviet Union."

While some Soviet economists charge that the Soviet Union cannot afford to continue its wholesale subsidization of the Cuban economy forever, official spokesmen deny that "Soviet aid to Cuba is like throwing money down the drain," and in denying it, they give further credibility to the charge.

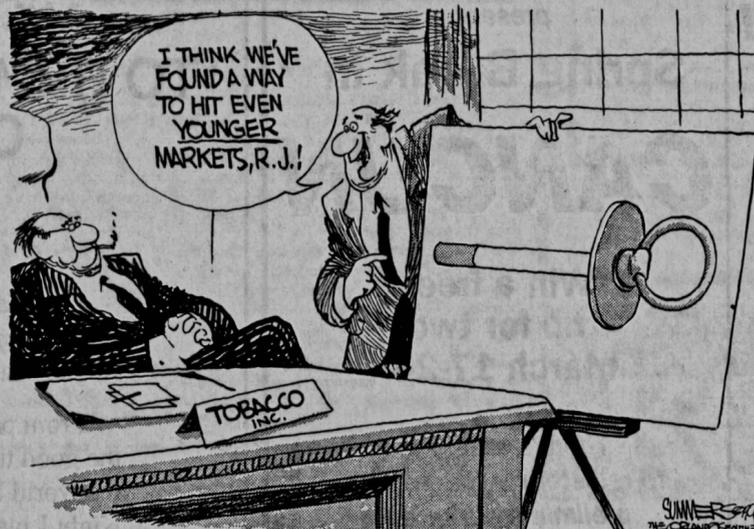

Fidel Castro calls this "the most decisive period in Cuba's history." And indeed recent events must lead him to wonder which way history is moving after all.

With Manuel Noreiga's fall, he lost a valuable ally in Panama. With perestroika, he risks losing the system of reliable subsidies that delivered Cuba from the disciplines of the market. With the transformation of Eastern Europe, he risks losing something even more valuable — the sense of membership in a great global system of power that ensures him a role in the vanguard of history.

On January 29, Castro ended a speech with: "Do we want the newest reforms? No. Do we want bourgeois reforms? No. Do we want neo-liberal reforms? No. We don't even want that in our dreams." Now Fidel is having nightmares.

Several days ago, he announced a plan for "perfecting" Cuba's Communist party. The sentimental break with the Soviet Union has already come. The political break is on the horizon.

Nicaraguans have retaken own country

The Nicaraguan people have expressed themselves. Their voices, silenced for more than 50 years, have finally found freedom to express their wills.

Contemporary Nicaragua has had two of the most publicized and controversial dictatorships in the world. One, from the right, Somoza's family, ruled the country for 44 years. The other, from the left, the Sandinista government, ran Nicaragua the last 10 years.

Guest Opinion

Maria Acosta

Somoza's regime was overturned by a popular insurrection in 1979. The Sandinista government took power after this. The Nicaraguans were overwhelmed by their victory over Somoza's regime, but the victory did not last very long.

The Sandinistas took power under promises of instituting a democratic government and conducting a mixed economy. The literacy campaign promoted by the Sandinistas during the first year in power impressed the whole world.

The Sandinistas began to pass economic legislation to redistribute the wealth in Nicaragua. But, inconsistently with their own policies of redistribution, they never redistributed the 40 percent of the nation's wealth that had been expropriated from the Somoza family.

The Sandinistas created their own military force, police force, and social structure. CDS (Sandinista Defense Committees) agents on every square block knew the name of each head of household, how many people lived in each house, how old they were (useful data to draft youngsters into the military) and how they earned their livings.

After two years in power, the Sandinista government had galvanized its forces and proclaimed its members to be Marxist/Leninist. They established close relationships with Fidel Castro in Cuba and supported the FMLN, a guerrilla group, in El Salvador. These factors caused the deterioration of relations between the United States and Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan insurrection which overthrew Somoza was the combined effort of all political parties in Nicaragua and the Nicaraguan people. But the Sandinistas took all the credit for themselves and took power from the Nicaraguan people's hands.

Some displaced members of Nicaraguan political and economic groups resented the economic measures of the Sandinista government and the exclusion of their civil forces and political parties. They came to Washington asking for help for the betrayed nationalist insurrection.

The Contras, a force of ex-national guards and ex-politicians excluded by the Sandinista government, appeared on the scene. The Contras were never a political force inside Nicaragua; they were not responsive to the people's need. Moreover, most of the Contra leaders were unknown to the Nicaraguan people. The Contras, to the Nicaraguan people, were a military force sponsored by foreign funds.

For almost eight years the Nicaraguan people suffered an imposed war with foreign money and foreign weapons, but Nicaraguan blood. The people were caught in the middle, with no choice and no vote. There is a whole generation of Nicaraguans who have had no childhood, because if they were strong enough to carry a rifle, they were drafted by the Sandinista government or taken by the Contras into combat. No human rights were observed by either side.

This presidential election has raised the voice of all the people for the first time in more than half a century. It is time for the world to realize that the Nicaraguans have the right to direct their own future. All that the people of Nicaragua want is to live in peace and be free of foreign intervention. In Nicaragua only we, the Nicaraguans, have the right to decide our future.

Night of the tiny fists

To the Editor:
The suspension of the Young Americans for Freedom from the UI and the events leading to their punishment have received less than fair and responsible coverage from The Daily Iowan.

The DI's front page article on November 30 ["Ten protesters disrupt, delay Nicaraguan speech for two hours," the DI] declared... that protesters had prevented the YAF-sponsored lecture of Antonio YBarra-Rojas. In fact, the UI, the Student Activities Board and the Student Senate found to the contrary; it was YAF's behavior that was in violation of university policies.

While the DI was alerted to this discrepancy, the paper never followed up on the story. Despite official complaints on file with campus police, the cancellation of payments to Mr. YBarra-Rojas, and the February 20 suspension for one year of [YAF] from UI recognition and access to funds and facilities, the DI never published a single statement from those whose rights were violated by YAF and who brought charges against YAF.

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to the article dated February 27, "One-Eyed Jake's replaces Dooley's." I am offended by the article's unfair characterization of the Dooley's upstairs patrons as an unwanted, "arty, black-dressed crowd."

The Dooley's dance floor provided a much-needed alternative to those who don't like dancing or even listening to music ranked the same way college sports teams are.

As a former (but not artsy or black-dressed) patron, I urge the new owners not to stomp out the much appreciated personality of Dooley's by making One-Eyed Jake's the same as every other top-40 bar in town.

Helmeter reader

To the Editor:
Michael Lorenger, in his call for a mandatory motorcycle helmet law in the cause of public safety, has entirely missed the point ["Life and limb," the DI, February 16]. Informed motorcyclists who oppose helmet laws are indeed concerned with the restriction of civil liberties, but that is not our main objection to helmet laws.

The real point of opposition to helmet laws is that they are not the answer to increasing motorcycle safety. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's 1987 figures show that in states with mandatory helmet laws (24), modified helmet laws (21), and no helmet laws, the death rates per 100 cyclists are respectively 2.96, 2.85, and 2.54. In the Contra-Costa Times, J. Leonard reported that in 1985, helmet law states had 15 percent more accidents and 5.5

percent more fatalities. Motorcycle Safety Foundation statistics also show that since 1976, states with mandatory helmet laws had a higher number of deaths per 100 accidents when compared with states without mandatory helmet laws for every year up to 1986.

These figures... make a great deal of sense. States passing helmet laws as a quick fix for motorcycle injuries then assume the problem is solved, ignoring the two things that have been shown to have a positive effect on motorcycle safety — education and stricter licensing laws.

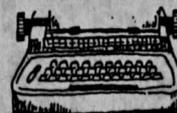

A helmet only helps mitigate injuries after an accident has occurred. It makes much more sense to educate the rider so he can avoid an accident in the first place. The Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles reports that during the last two years of the state's rider education program, motorcyclist fatalities have dropped 37.5 percent.

An important part of improved education for riders is toughening the licensing laws. The NHSTA, working with figures supplied through the Fatal Accident Reporting System for 1986, recently discovered that 42.7 percent of all motorcyclist fatalities involved riders who were not properly licensed to operate a motorcycle.

Unlicensed riders are far more likely to be involved in accidents. Those disobeying licensing laws are unlikely to be restrained by helmet laws either.

causing any physical symptoms. She said the medical community once believed wart removal was that was necessary to rid the disease from the human body.

Dr. Maureen McCue, a physician at the UI Student Health Services, said that if someone has the virus but not the symptoms, evidence of the disease might manifest itself in abnormal pap smears for women and urinary difficulties for men.

Long said the virus can be detected by "very specialized, extensive" tests called DNA probes, but added that these tests are currently too expensive to be used on a mass scale.

Though the Family Planning Clinic doesn't keep records of the number of genital wart cases they treat, Long said in her 10 years as a practicing nurse her rate of encounter with the disease in patients has risen from one or two per year to two or three every day.

McCue said she diagnoses about three new cases every week, and administers eight to ten follow-up and treatment examinations weekly.

Like other STDs, the spread of genital warts can be controlled by the combined use of condoms and spermicide. Long also stressed the importance of regular physical examinations, since many STDs linger in the body unnoticed for years.

Long said that while all UI students probably are aware that they should be using condoms still haven't intercourse, many regularly use condoms using them.

McCue says the trend is slowly although the women concern themselves only with protecting themselves from pregnancy, but not with preventing the spread of STDs.

"Until the era of birth control pills, people were using condoms to protect themselves," McCue said.

Long said that though HPV is more prevalent than other STDs, its long-term side effects are also less damaging than other STDs.

"Genital warts are cosmetically displeasing and cause some local discomfort, but the potential health problems are generally less serious," Long said.

However, aside from the fact that warts can recur without re-exposure to the virus, Long added that some versions of the virus have been found to be carcinogenic — a factor which can lead to a higher potential of genital cancer later in life.

"Not everybody who has genital warts is going to have cancer. People shouldn't get panicked that they're automatically going to have cancer," Long said.

Genital warts are treated like any other warts, Long said, and may be dissolved with topical, acidic solutions or burnt off with a laser. But, she added, treatment can be expensive and take several visits to a physician.

Los Angeles earthquake reaches 5.5 on Richter scale

UPLAND, Calif. (AP) — A strong earthquake rocked a 200-mile swath of Southern California on Wednesday, triggering rock slides onto highways, breaking windows, toppling at least one wall and causing widespread minor damage.

There were no immediate reports of serious injuries from the quake, which was felt from San Diego to Santa Barbara and swayed high-rise buildings in Las Vegas, 230 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

It measured 5.5 on the Richter scale, and was centered three miles northwest of Upland, a city about 40 miles east of Los Angeles, said

Hall Daily of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

The U.S. Geological Survey gave the same magnitude, but a preliminary reading by University of California Seismographic Stations at Berkeley put the magnitude at 6.0. Such measuring differences are common. A quake of magnitude 5.5 is capable of causing considerable damage.

Scattered damage was reported in the region east of Los Angeles.

The side of a one-story auto parts building collapsed in La Verne, 10 miles from the epicenter, said Mayor Jon Blickenstaff.

evening of February 16, Peschang-Stannard said.

DHS decided to relocate the girls after police arrested and jailed Terry for a traffic misdemeanor and failed to locate Lanora within 3 hours of its initial telephone call, the attorney said.

Unable to obtain the necessary order from a juvenile court judge during the weekend, the parents remained separated from their children until late Monday morning — more than 65 hours later, Peschang-Stannard said.

"I think if there were some access to the court on a 24-hour basis it would have made a tremendous difference," Peschang-Stannard said.

Although DHS affidavits of the incident did not challenge the Walkers' quality of parenting, the department refused to allow Lanora to visit her children or to speak with them on the telephone, Peschang-Stannard said.

Because the arrest itself created the need for foster care, Peschang-Stannard also questioned whether Terry's on-the-spot arrest was the best way for the police to have proceeded.

Supervisor Robert Burns told the board that he had talked with City Manager Stephen Atkins and Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake earlier Tuesday and said he was satisfied that the police and DHS had followed procedures.

"Maybe we as Americans don't like that kind of correctness," Burns said.

The children were in the car when Terry was arrested for driving with an expired license, and Lanora was doing church work with friends when DHS tried to reach her, Peschang-Stannard said.

After arriving handcuffed at the Johnson County Jail, Terry was asked by jail personnel to provide names and phone numbers of local relatives who could take custody of the children, who had been taken to the Iowa City Police Department in a separate patrol car.

Walker said he gave jail personnel the name and address of Kimball Clark, 351 Hawkeye Dr., whose wife Dianne was with Lanora. But Clark told the board Tuesday that he received no call from the jail, although he was home all evening.

Peschang-Stannard said DHS Investigator Tony Montoya told her he was first notified of the situation at 5:45 p.m., and that he placed the children in the foster home at 8:30 p.m.

Lanora arrived at the police department at 8:10 p.m., about 10 minutes after being contacted at her home, but the children were no longer there.

David Schutt, DHS supervisor of child abuse and neglect investigations, told the board that Iowa code permits only police — not the DHS — to take custody of children considered to be "in danger."

"By the time the police take custody of the child, we don't have any choice but to place the child in foster care," Schutt said.

Another of Peschang-Stannard's clients, Lavonna Overstreet of Iowa City, also told the board how her young children were removed from her home and placed in foster care without her knowledge while she was at work in May 1989.

Overstreet said she was not contacted by the police or DHS, and that the children were not given to the custody of her sister, who had been available at Overstreet's home.

Peschang-Stannard said that although the incident occurred on the day the Overstreets were moving to another home, the DHS investigators cited poor conditions of the home they were leaving as justification for the placement.

It took two days for Overstreet to obtain a court order restoring her children to her care, Overstreet said.

Supervisor Dick Myers recommended that the board submit transcripts of the meeting to state legislators, who are in control of DHS funding, to make them aware of what is happening.

Play

don't address the fact that having safe sex may not be an issue. In some instances people aren't coherent enough to make that decision, he said.

"People hear 'go for it' and 'just say no' and think these are the only choices they have," co-director Mark Hallen said. "There are a lot of intermediary choices, ones that aren't so automatic."

The play was first performed last October during the Hawkeye Health Fair. A grant Health Iowa received from The American College Health Association enabled Barto, Hallen and the actors to further develop the play. Grant funds will also allow a script and videotape of the play to be shared with other campuses.

The first act starts in a residence hall room where two roommates convince their friend to go downtown with them. After numerous tequila shots, the three women stagger off to have a good time. Before the evening ends, however, one of them has second thoughts about her behavior, Hallen said.

Citing statistics from a recent UI Student Health Services survey, Hallen said that of the sexually active respondents, 43 percent of the males and 31 percent of the females have engaged in unintended sex or regretted sex after drinking alcohol.

"There is a growing percentage of students who have sex and later regret it or never really intended to have sex," Hallen said. "The factor that caused them to do it was alcohol."

"We're not saying no to sex, although abstinence is certainly an option. We're saying that drugs and alcohol block you from acting consciously. With sexually transmitted diseases, it's risky; with AIDS, it's deadly," he added.

In the second act, a man and a woman leave a party drunk and drive home. As they drive, they discover that although they would both like to have sex, neither has protection.

"The issue for the couple becomes not just having a pleasurable experience but realizing that having sex with someone means having sex with previous partners that person has had. They end the scene choosing not to have sex, not because it's a stereotypical ending, but because they are more aware of what the consequences are," Hallen said.

"This issue is important to me because I've had friends die from AIDS. They were sexually liberated but sexually unconscious," he added.

The reason for the play's title becomes evident in the third act as a man sits stoned in front of a television, changing channels with his remote control. The "programs" are spoofs of current television advertisements and campaigns against drug and alcohol use. Editing television programs by switching channels acts as a metaphor for the play's message, Hallen said.

"We click through people and experiences like we click through TV channels. The difference is that TV shows rarely affect us while AIDS sexually transmitted diseases do — sometimes fatally," Hallen said.

The eight actors have a variety of reasons for participating in the play. The project sounded fun and as they became more involved, they realized how important the play's message is, according to actress Leslie Reams.

"If the play makes students think and talk about the choices they make, that's what's important. These messages are all over, but how we respond to them is ultimately a personal choice," Snodgrass said.

The play will be performed Monday, March 5, in Burge Main Lounge; Tuesday, March 6, in Hillcrest Riverview Room and Wednesday, March 7, in Phillips Hall, Room 100. All performances are at 7 p.m.

Soviet leaders: Citizens can procure, inherit land

MOSCOW (AP) — Legislators overwhelmingly approved a bill Wednesday that allows Soviets to acquire land and bequeath it to their children, a major modification of decades of state control of land.

The law, however, stops short of legalizing full private ownership of property by strictly forbidding the sale of land. Under the new law, plots only can be leased, and the lease prices will be set by the state.

The measure was part of a comprehensive package designed to give the force of law to the economic and social reforms championed by President Mikhail Gorbachev. The official news agency Tass called it "a major legal document of Soviet economic reform."

The law is to serve as the basis for further legislation by each republic to regulate land distribution.

State ownership of land, inscribed in the Soviet Constitution, has been a cornerstone of communism since the 1917 revolution. But reformers and economists repeatedly have called for allowing private ownership as a way of spurring growth in the troubled economy.

In a commentary in Wednesday's edition of the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, economist Pavel Voshchanov welcomed the reform as a first step to reversing a situation in which the Soviet Union, with some of the richest farmland on Earth, has become a net importer of food.

The Soviet Constitution says "the land, its minerals, waters and forests are the exclusive property of the state." The Congress of People's Deputies, the Supreme Soviet's parent body, will be asked to change the Constitution when it meets March 12.

By altering the Constitution and allowing the roughly 23 million people employed on the 26,000 collective and 23,000 state farms to acquire plots, the Kremlin leadership hopes to raise farm productivity, which is notoriously low on those farms.

Rural families already produce one-fourth of the country's gross agricultural production, including nearly 30 percent of the meat, milk and eggs on individual plots they are allowed to exploit.

In a poll published Wednesday in the newspaper Izvestia, 40 percent of those queried said they were eager to become individual farmers.

The Supreme Soviet legislature first voted separately on each chapter of the 52-article measure, then approved the entire law 349-7 with 12 abstentions. The full Congress of People's Deputies must now approve it.

Wednesday's four-hour session was the third time the Supreme Soviet considered the proposed so-called Law on Land. During earlier debate, about 150 proposals and criticisms of the bill were made.

Alexander Nikonov, the president of the Soviet Agricultural Academy who submitted the bill, said about 40 percent of the original draft had been revised to accommodate the proposed changes.

The law states that land is the property of the people living on a given territory and that every Soviet citizen has the right to a piece of land.

According to the law, land can be distributed by the kolkhoz — a state collective farm — or by the local city council in the case of city dwellers or others who desire to hold land. Religious groups also have the right to acquire land.

U.S. arms rebels in Angola war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has rushed arms to the UNITA rebels under siege by Soviet-backed government forces in Angola, Angolan representatives said Wednesday after meeting with U.S. defense officials.

It was believed to be the first meeting at the Pentagon with officials from Angola, which does not have diplomatic relations with the United States. Gen. Roberto Leal Monteiro, an adviser to President Jose Eduardo dos Santos, and Justice Minister Fernando Franca Van Dunem, met with Defense Department officials, the Angolans said.

A Pentagon official confirmed that a meeting had taken place with Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Jim Woods. The official, who asked not to be named, described the session as establishing a basis for future talks.

"It was a get acquainted meeting, very friendly and non-threatening," she said.

The Angolans said the talks centered on the escalating fighting in Angola.

The Angolans said they urged the United States to stop arming UNITA so that peace talks, stalled since the summer, could resume.

Angolan forces attacked UNITA to punish the rebels for acts of sabotage and to prove that the Angolan military could subdue UNITA without Cuba's help, said Van Dunem. Under a U.S.-mediated agreement, more than 30,000 Cuban troops have left Angola and an additional 20,000 are to leave by mid-1991.

The Angolan government submitted a peace proposal, including an immediate cease-fire, on February 6, but has yet to receive an answer from Mobutu Sese Seko, the president of Zaire and a mediator in talks between the Angolan government and UNITA, Van Dunem said.

U.S. officials say they have not been able to find out whether Mobutu received the proposal.

W. African leaders fight democracy

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — West African leaders whose nations have been hit by recent demonstrations for democracy have responded in different ways, from tear gas to tears.

The region's beleaguered leaders have confronted waves of protests, strikes and public dissatisfaction in the Ivory Coast, Benin, Gabon, Gambia and Niger.

In Benin, Mathieu Kerekou, the authoritarian Marxist brigadier-general who seized control of the country in 1972, sobbed openly before a national conference Tuesday when delegates demanded he resign.

He accused them of "attempting a civilian coup," and said he preferred to be ousted. Resignation would betray the people's trust, he said.

Kerekou was forced to call the conference after violent protests in which several people were killed at the end of last year.

In the nearby Ivory Coast, a pillar of stability and civilian government in a region plagued by power-hungry military men, conservative President Felix Houphouët-Boigny had to order soldiers and riot police to suppress protests last week by rebellious students calling for multiparty democracy.

Tear gas, stun grenades and truncheons were let loose in Abidjan on demonstrators usually armed only with signs.

But Houphouët-Boigny, who has governed since the country's 1960 independence from France, responded positively to more moderate demands for cuts in Cabinet ministers' salaries and the cost of board and lodging at the state university.

Bush, Gorbachev discuss Nicaragua

NEW YORK — President George Bush telephoned Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Wednesday for a "very constructive" and frank discussion on the political shakeup in Nicaragua, where the Kremlin is credited with helping promote an honest election.

In what was believed to be only their third telephone conversation, the two leaders also discussed issues of European security, including German reunification and preparations for a superpower summit this summer, according to U.S. accounts and the Soviet news agency Tass.

Bush called Gorbachev before setting out on a cross-country campaign trip, with stops at New York's Staten Island and San Francisco, and a weekend meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

Heating oil spilled in N.J. waterway

BAYONNE, N.J. — About 27,000 gallons of heating oil poured into a busy waterway near an Exxon Corp. terminal Wednesday morning as it was being loaded onto a barge with a hole in it, the Coast Guard said.

The No. 6 heating oil leaked into the Kill Van Kull, a major route for barge and tanker traffic that separates Bayonne from New York's Staten Island, the Coast Guard said. The spill was discovered about 4:20 a.m. and had begun about an hour earlier, authorities said.

Exxon, indicted just this week on charges stemming from last year's Alaska tanker spill, issued a statement saying the company was helping out with the cleanup but was not responsible for today's spill.

Lt. Jeff Crawley, a Coast Guard spokesman, said the oil poured through a 12-inch-by-6-inch hole, and forced the closing of the busy waterway. Crawley said he didn't know what caused the hole in the barge.

The barge owner, Ekolof Marine of Staten Island, N.Y., initially estimated the leak at 420 gallons, said Rick Fulton, a spokesman for the Department of Environmental Protection. The Coast Guard revised the figure, initially to 24,000 gallons and later to 27,000 gallons, after studying the site, he said.

DEA chief takes job with N.Y. Yankees

WASHINGTON — After years in the trenches of America's drug war, Drug Enforcement Administration chief John Lawn is heading to a new turf: overseeing operations for the New York Yankees baseball organization.

"He will be involved with all operational areas other than player personnel," Yankees spokesman Arthur Richman said Wednesday.

Lawn, who announced Tuesday that he will retire as DEA chief on March 23 after 27 years in government service, will become vice president and chief of operations for the Yankees, he said.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner met Lawn in 1987 when the two were on a speaking panel before the World Business Council, said DEA spokesman Frank Shults. In addition, Lawn is a close personal friend of Phil McNiss, a retired FBI agent who is vice president of Steinbrenner's American Shipbuilding Co., the spokesman said.

Poindexter: Diary proves Reagan knew everything

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan's diaries accurately document important events in the Iran-Contra affair that Reagan now says he has forgotten, John Poindexter said in court papers Wednesday.

Lawyers for the former national security adviser said U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene should order Reagan to turn over 36 diary excerpts for the former adviser's Iran-Contra trial, which is scheduled to start Monday.

Greene directed Reagan on January 30 to supply Poindexter with the excerpts, but the former president invoked executive privilege to avoid turning them over. The Bush administration later joined Reagan in invoking executive privilege, and Greene now plans to rule on the matter.

In testimony videotaped February 16-17 for Poindexter's trial, Reagan "repeatedly professed an inability to recall certain key events," Poindexter's lawyers said, but Poindexter believes these events are "accurately documented in his diaries."

Poindexter's court filing characterized as "patently frivolous" the Justice Department's assertion that "almost all information in the diary entries is already in the public domain."

The Justice Department's position

"overlooks that Mr. Reagan is the one who caused this information to enter the public domain and it is he who determined that the public interest demanded such disclosures," said Poindexter.

Reagan is now trying to claim that "the public interest, all of a sudden, favors non-disclosure when a criminal defendant's right to liberty is at stake," said Poindexter's lawyers.

The defense filing said the excerpts touch on Reagan's knowledge of Poindexter's activities on behalf of the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and on Reagan's knowledge of Israeli arms shipments to Iran in late 1985. It said the excerpts also address Reagan's knowledge that proceeds were generated from U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Greene, who has seen the diary excerpts, said one entry reports on Poindexter's "successful" trip to Central America in December 1985 and contains a somewhat ambiguous comment arguably indicating Reagan knew of Poindexter's activities on behalf of the Contras.

In his videotaped deposition, Reagan testified he was unable to recall what Poindexter reported to him about the Central American trip.

Minn. activists fight over bill to ban birth-control abortions

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Hundreds of abortion-rights activists on Wednesday exchanged taunts with a small group of anti-abortionists outside the Capitol amid intense lobbying over a bill that would ban most abortions in the state.

The bill, which would prohibit abortions for "birth-control reasons," was drafted as model legislation by the National Right-To-Life Committee in the wake of last summer's U.S. Supreme Court decision that gave states more leeway to restrict abortions.

Although Minnesota was long associated in national politics with the liberalism espoused by former Vice President Walter Mondale, an abortion rights supporter, it has been a stronghold of anti-abortion sentiment.

Proponents say the legislation would be the toughest enforceable anti-abortion measure in the nation, prohibiting an estimated 93 percent of the abortions performed in the state.

Nearly 2,000 pro-choice demonstrators rallied Wednesday morning. Their chants of "Choice" were met by shouts of "Life" by a small group of abortion foes. No arrests were made.

"Those who want this bill to become law impugn the moral dignity of Minnesota's women," Kate Mickelmann, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, told the rally Wednesday morning. "They are implying that you cannot be trusted to make these decisions."

Mickelmann spoke a few hours before the bill was taken up by the Senate Health and Human Services Committee, a 16-member panel that reflects how split the Legislature is on abortion.

Cease demand in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian forces demanding a cease-fire in Beirut Wednesday after a three-hour gun battle.

No casualties were reported in the exchange of fire, held by the Christian forces under Samir Geagea, the city's southeastern leader, and Muslim forces led by Gen. Michel Aoun. Aoun's forces, which have been in control of the city since the 1982 Christian enclave was established, broke out January 17.

After a three-hour gun battle, Aoun's forces demanded a cease-fire, and the Christian forces, reportedly, ended the violence.

The leaders, who include Maronite Catholic patriarch Sfeir in Beirut, also asked Geagea to begin a process of implementing arrangements.

Geagea said he would comply with the peace plan and said he would follow suit.

"We hope that a will be taken by the city that the spiritual directly supervise the plan," Geagea said.

There was no immediate word from Aoun.

But the plan differs from Aoun's earlier political agreement with Geagea before he drew his 19,000 soldiers from the districts and other sectors.

Geagea has demanded the cessation of the situation.

Cease-fire demanded in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Christian forces duelled with mortars and machine guns in east Beirut Wednesday, and their religious leaders demanded an immediate cease-fire in the one-month showdown.

No casualties were reported in the intermittent exchanges in Ashrafiyeh, held by the Lebanese Forces under Samir Geagea, and on the city's southeastern edge, controlled by Gen. Michel Aoun's troops.

By police count, the showdown for control of the 310-square-mile Christian enclave has killed 694 people and wounded 1,934 since it broke out January 30. A shaky cease-fire has been in effect since February 17.

After a three-hour meeting, spiritual leaders of Christian sects demanded Aoun and Geagea respect the cease-fire, withdraw their forces, reopen all roads and end the vitriolic propaganda campaigns.

The leaders, who met at the seat of Maronite Catholic patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir in Bkirki, north of Beirut, also asked that Aoun and Geagea begin a political dialogue after implementing the security arrangements.

Geagea said in a statement he would comply with the clerics' peace plan and said he hoped Aoun would follow suit.

"We hope that a similar decision will be taken by the other side and that the spiritual leaders will directly supervise the conduct of the plan," Geagea said.

There was no immediate reaction from Aoun.

But the plan differed sharply from Aoun's earlier demand that a political agreement be reached with Geagea before Aoun withdraws his 19,000 soldiers from the embattled districts of east Beirut and other sectors.

Geagea has demanded a "normalization of the situation" between his 6,000-strong militia and Aoun's troops prior to any political talks.

Sfeir, addressing the churchmen, said peace was "God's gift to man. Nevertheless, peace is made by man. We call on the leaders to make peace."

Both Aoun and Geagea are Maronites, the Catholic community that has dominated Lebanon since its independence from France in 1943.

A three-man mediation committee said it would resume deadlocked efforts to work out a settlement to the worst fighting among Christians in the nearly 15-year-old civil war.

"We are going through a very delicate and difficult era," said Shaker Abu Suleiman, a member of the mediation committee who attended part of the meeting at Bkirki.

Aoun wants the Lebanese Forces to disband and become a political organization. Geagea refuses to break up his military force.

In September 1988 Aoun was appointed head of an interim military Cabinet by outgoing President Amin Gemayel after parliament failed to elect a successor.

But on November 24 the Lebanese Parliament elected Elias Hrawi president, backed by Syria, which has 40,000 troops in Lebanon under a 1976 peacekeeping mandate. Aoun considers the Syrians an occupation army.

Hrawi fired Aoun as army chief and caretaker premier, but the general refused to step down, alleging Hrawi's election was unconstitutional. Aoun considers himself the sole legitimate authority in Lebanon.

Political fight in Natal, S.A., claims 6 lives

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Protesters hurling rocks clashed with police as rival black factions fought for control of black townships in Natal Province, police said Wednesday. At least six people were reported killed.

Two black men were killed and a third man was wounded when police opened fire Tuesday on protesters who hurled rocks at police patrols near Durban in the southeastern province, police officials said.

Rival factions set fire to houses and huts in several townships and police used guns, rubber bullets and tear gas to disperse mobs that attacked police patrols, the officials said.

Four bodies of black men apparently killed in fighting between rival black factions were found around Durban, police said. All of the bodies had been set on fire, police said.

The United Democratic Front is locked in a bloody struggle in Natal with the conservative Inkatha Zulu political movement. Hundreds of blacks have died in factional clashes in recent months.

Black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, released February 11 after 27 years in jail, appealed at a rally in Durban on Sunday for an end to the fighting. But more than 20 people have died in clashes since the weekend with no sign of any halt to the fighting.

Minister of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok, who heads the South African police, said he was concerned about growing attacks on police in Natal. He said police officers would be protected and not prevented from enforcing the law.

Seven police officers had been killed so far this year in Natal and there had been 108 attacks on police officers in the province, Vlok said Tuesday in Cape Town.

Disney seeks source of bogus news release concerning Michael Jackson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Walt Disney Co. scoured Hollywood on Wednesday for the source of a bogus news release that claimed moonwalking megastar Michael Jackson had signed a five-year movie deal with Disney.

Disney said it began an investigation to find the author of the release, used as the basis for a story in a trade publication. The release also said Jackson would leave CBS Records for Disney's new Hollywood Records label and design theme park rides for Disney.

"We fully intend to take action against the person or persons responsible," Walt Disney Studios Chairman Jeffrey Katzenberg said in a news release. "This company has a reputation for protecting its name and taking legal action when necessary."

The Hollywood Reporter, which published a lengthy, front-page story on the purported Disney deal Tuesday, ran a front-page article Wednesday saying it had been the victim of a hoax.

Atlan visits during UI 'Mr. Fugue' production

The Daily Iowan

Playwright Liliane Atlan will visit the UI during the University Theatres production of her "Mr. Fugue," which will be presented February 28 through March 11 in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building.

Atlan will meet with UI playwrights and other students in the Department of Theatre Arts and participate in a free public symposium at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 10, in Mable Theatre on the UI campus. Atlan will be a visiting master teacher at the UI as part of a National Endowment for the Arts grant to the Iowa Playwrights Workshop. The grant supports a program that offers students, faculty and the public the opportunity to exchange ideas and experiences with some of today's most noted theater artists.

Atlan's work has been performed in cities all around the world, but the UI Theatres' production of "Mr. Fugue" is the first time this play has been fully mounted in the United States. Atlan's other works include "The Messiahs," "Les Emigrants" and "An Opera for Terezin" (soon to be produced in New York). She is the recipient of numerous French and Israeli literary prizes, including the Legion D'Honneur, reserved for French "national treasures."

She previously visited the UI as a participant in the International Writing Program. Robert Hedley, director of the Iowa Playwrights Workshop, said, "To maintain a top-flight program, we must provide our students with opportunities to work with professional writers, performers, designers and directors. The NEA grants help us to do that. They have been invaluable."

"Each of these artists are here for one week to 10 days," Hedley said. "They participate in intensive workshops in the evenings and then are around during the days to talk with the students. It is a fantastic program."

In April, the grant will enable playwright and director Emily Mann to visit the UI. She is best known for her plays "Still Life," "The Execution of Justice" and "Annula Allen: Autobiography of a Survivor."

Among the prominent artists who have already visited the UI this season through the NEA grant are writer/actor/singer Rinde Eckert, whose collaborations with composer Paul Dresher — "Slow Fire" and "Power Failure" — have been at the UI Hancher Auditorium, and Theodora Skipitares, an innovative puppeteer whose works include "Micropolis," "The Age of Invention" and "The Venus Cafe."

Bud Lite - the dog - nearly dies in mistaken identity case

BURTON, Mich. (AP) — The wrong dog was on death row, but his master's voice saved him from destruction.

The dog, Bud Lite, was to be destroyed by lethal injection at the Genesee County animal shelter for biting a 12-year-old boy.

But authorities say Bud Lite had done no wrong and was the victim of an insidious dog switch.

A 20-year-old woman, who wasn't identified, had agreed to have her dog put to sleep for biting the boy in exchange for dismissal of a misdemeanor charge against her, city attorney Richard Hamilton said Tuesday.

Officials in this community about five miles east of Flint said they are investigating this possible scenario: The woman snatched Bud Lite from his yard, switched his collar and tags with her doomed dog's tags, and turned him in to the shelter.

Bud Lite, owned by 14-year-old Jason Griffin, resembles the condemned dog and lives about a mile away. Court records described the offending dog as a brown pit bull; Bud Lite is a pit bull-retriever mix.

"In the 16 years since I've been doing this, this is a first," assistant city attorney Rick Austin said. The woman, if guilty of switching the dogs, could face a charge of larceny, he said.

Bud Lite was missing for several days before Jason's mother, Kathy Johnston, checked the Genesee County animal shelter.

"She peeked into death row and said, 'There it is. That's my dog,'" Jeff Johnston said. "The (animal shelter) woman said, 'That can't be your dog. That's a court-ordered destruction. Some other woman brought that dog in.'"

Police confirmed that Bud Lite was the wrong dog. The woman is scheduled to appear Thursday before District Judge Gerald Snodgrass.

Her dog remains at large.

Olympics to trim numbers

ROME (AP)—The president of the International Olympic Committee said Wednesday that some events likely will be eliminated at future Games and quotas will be set to limit participation to 10,000 athletes.

"Profound revisions are required for the Olympics," president Juan Antonio Samaranch said at a two-day meeting of IOC members and officials from international sports organizations.

"We are aware that today some sports on the program no longer deserve full participation in the Games, while other sports have grown and qualify for greater presence," he said.

Samaranch said that while it will be "difficult to revise and eliminate certain events," it was necessary to trim participation to no more than 10,000 competitors.

He did not say which events might be eliminated.

"We can expect more than 15,000 athletes, officials and coaches in Barcelona for the 1992 Games," said Samaranch, a resident of the Spanish city. "The Olympic village has room for no more than 15,500 people so we will have to introduce quotas."

The IOC was joined at the meeting by representatives from the Association of Summer Olympic International Federations and the Association of National Olympic Committees.

A nine-member commission, including the heads of the three international organizations — Samaranch for the IOC, Primo Nebiolo for the ASOIF and Mario Vasquez Rana for the ANOC — will meet in Barcelona on March 31 to set the participation criteria.

Samaranch said officials attending the Rome meeting already agreed to two criteria for revising the Olympics — that there be a minimum of six competitors and two officials per country, and that all elite athlete be included.

He said a decision on the quotas was important for Barcelona.

"It is impossible for anyone to do a good job in organizing a sports event with more than 10,000 athletes and 5,000 officials," he said.

A leg up on the rest
Former New York Yankees pitcher Neil Allen has been invited to the Cincinnati Reds training camp, whenever the lockout is over.

Sacramento abandons bid for NFL's Raiders franchise

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—The city of Sacramento has decided to end its $50 million offer to the Los Angeles Raiders, and city leaders said there's little chance of reviving the deal for the NFL team.

The City Council voted 5-3, with one abstention, on Tuesday to pull the publicly financed $50 million franchise fee off the bargaining table by midnight Wednesday.

Raiders managing general partner Al Davis has told the city that he wouldn't reach a decision about where his team will play by the city's deadline.

Davis is also negotiating with Oakland, where officials claim they have all but locked up a deal to bring the Raiders back to their city, and with Los Angeles officials trying to keep the team there.

Angelo Tsakopoulos, a developer and partner in the Sacramento Sports Association, which is negotiating to bring the Raiders to California's capital, said he believes the decision could be reversed since the city won't have any alternate plans for the money for weeks or even months.

"Anything is wide open — that's the way I read it," Tsakopoulos said. "If the Raiders decide to come to Sacramento, they (council members) would reconsider."

City Attorney James Jackson said a deal for the Raiders could be resuscitated legally if Davis promised to bring his NFL team.

New York might try gambling

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York would legalize gambling on professional sports and spend its share of the bets on fighting drugs, under a proposal made Wednesday by state legislators.

The state could raise $1 billion to $2 billion a year by cashing in on the illegal gambling going on already, said sponsor Assemblyman Ronald Tocci, a Westchester County Democrat.

"Everybody has used the cliché we should declare war on drugs," Tocci said at a state Capitol news conference. "I have yet to see any kind of a challenge or mount against the nefarious people that perpetuate drugs in our country."

State-run sports betting would loosen the underworld's grip on betting and fund programs to fight drugs and help gambling addicts, he said.

Tocci acknowledged that there would be some criticism of a state-run gambling program.

"In New York state we already have gambling. People go to the racetrack, Lotto, lottery, bingo," said Tocci. "So it's not a question of whether or not we should have gambling anymore, it's a question of whether or not we should take some of that money that we know goes to the underworld and use it for the general good purposes that the state desperately needs to do."

Sports betting is no different morally than those forms of gambling already legal in New York, said Assemblyman Anthony Genovese, a Brooklyn Democrat.

"Most of the religious institutions in this state are funded by Las Vegas nights and bingo, and the state of New York has no scruples about Lotto and OTB," he said.

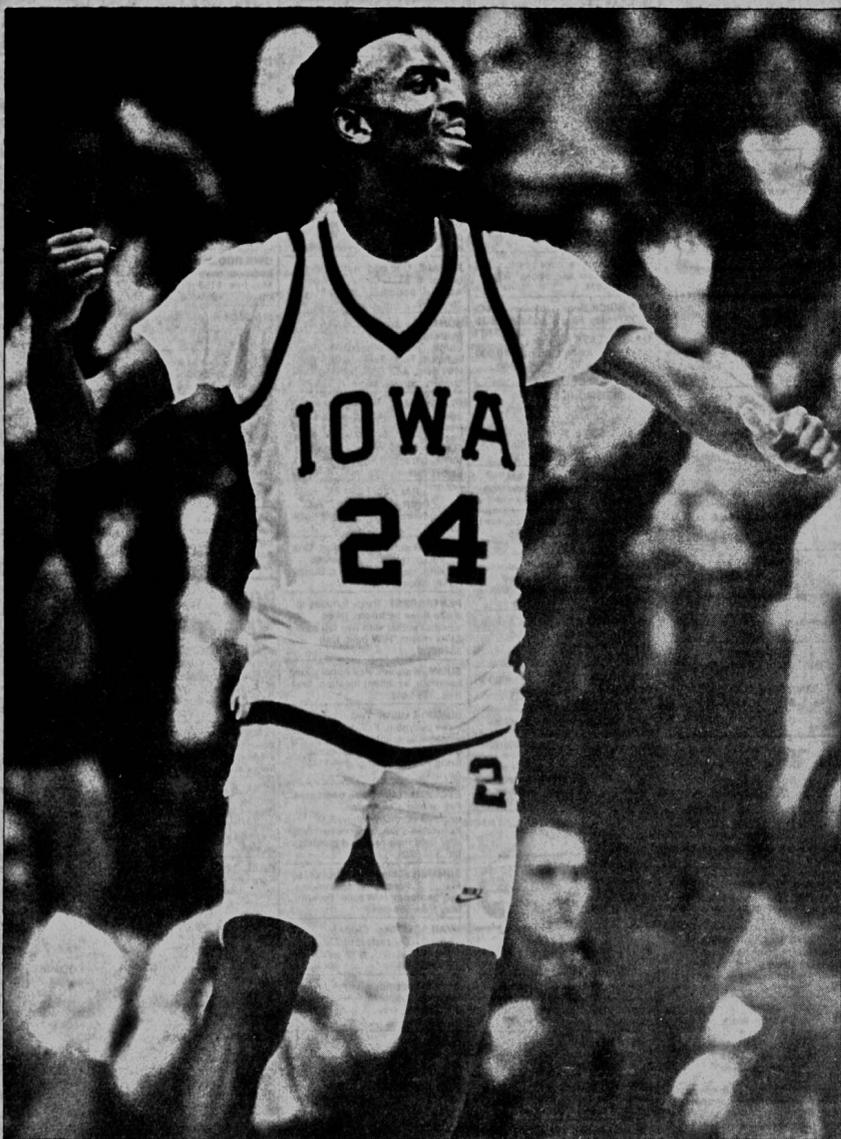

Professional sports leagues, including the NFL and NBA, have opposed legalized sports betting in other states. The leagues have said that gambling can ruin fan loyalty for the home team and taint their sports.

The NBA is "adamantly against betting on sports," said spokesman Brian McIntyre. Legalized gambling focuses more attention on pointspreads than on who wins the game, he said.

The NBA has sued the state of Oregon over a legalized sports betting program there, said McIntyre. The lawsuit is still pending, he said.

NFL spokesman Jim Heffernan said the league is opposed to legalized betting because "we don't want to be associated with gambling."

Tocci said legalized betting on pro See Betting, Page 11

Iowa guard James Moses celebrates after scoring and being fouled during first-half action against Purdue Wednesday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Iowa shocked the No. 9 Boilermakers, 64-63.

UPSET!

Bullard buries winner

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

What Matt Bullard gaveth, Jimmy Oliver nearly tooketh away.

After the senior forward nailed a short turnaround jump shot to give Iowa a 64-63 edge over No. 9 Purdue with eight seconds left Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, a long miss by the Boilermakers Tony Jones bounded off the cylinder and into the waiting hands of Oliver.

The Purdue junior went back up with a shot that ripped net, but officials ruled that the effort came after the buzzer, giving the Hawkeyes their third Big Ten home upset of the season — this time over the league leader.

"Back at Valley High School (in Des Moines), I used to shoot that shot all the time," Bullard said of the game-winner. "It's interesting that my last game here in Carver-Hawkeye Arena was a similar shot."

Bullard and Iowa guard James Moses led all scorers with 15 apiece, while Hawkeye senior center Les Jepsen chipped in 14. Bullard added six boards, four assists and a blocked shot.

The Boilermakers got 13 from Woody Austin, 10 out of senior Tony Jones, and Big Ten shooting leader Stephen Scheffler was held to only six points. He didn't take a shot in the second half.

"We got beat by a team that's 3-12 (now 4-12 in the league)," Purdue coach Gene Keady said. "Coming into the NCAA, we need to have the momentum thing going, and you don't get beat by 3-12 teams if you're ready to play."

Keady and the Boilermaker bench exploded after Oliver nailed the questionable shot, thinking they had stolen the game at the buzzer.

But when the official ruled the shot incomplete, the Purdue coach gave his best impersonation of the Tasmanian devil — whirling

In the tunnel, Purdue assistants fumed, and Keady looked for an answer to the question — "Was it good?"

A few minutes later, he had tamed.

"I saw the referee saying it wasn't any good," Keady said. "What can you say? Referees run the game, I don't. So what can you say?"

The win moved Iowa to 12-14 overall, and slipped the Boilermakers percentage points behind Michigan State at 12-4. The Spartans are 11-3 in the league, while Purdue is 20-6 overall.

"We play like this, we don't deserve to win," Scheffler said. And the senior wasn't sure if his team could pull out the league crown. "Right now it's a dogfight. If anything, we're definitely the underdogs now. We've taken ourselves out of the driver's seat."

But would Keady protest the game? "No," he said assuredly. "But I'm going to protest our bad playing."

The Hawkeyes travel to Illinois Sunday before finishing the Big Ten slate at Michigan in two weeks.

"We have nothing to lose at this point," Davis said. "Let's just go out and have fun."

NCAA charges against Clemson football changed

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The NCAA dropped one of 14 charges of alleged recruiting violations against Clemson's football program and amended two others, university officials said Wednesday.

In a Feb. 19-dated letter to school President Max Lennon, the NCAA's director of enforcement, Richard B. Hilliard, said the changes were made following interviews conducted after the NCAA officially notified Clemson of its probe into the football program on Jan. 4.

Hilliard did not say who was interviewed or what was said to warrant changes in the allegations against Clemson.

According to Hilliard, the NCAA withdrew one allegation that an unidentified coach gave a player $20 cash in January 1987 in addition to the permissible entertainment expense money to serve as a student host for recruits.

The NCAA also amended another allegation to reduce from two to one the number of occasions a recruit was entertained by an unidentified coach and received free car transportation during a 1987 summer football camp. The amended charge also alleges one recruit was involved, not two as in the original document.

A third charge was amended to reduce to one, from two, the number of recruits a coach gave free car transportation to during the 1987 summer camp.

It was not clear whether those two amended charges involved the same coach or same recruit. The names of those involved were deleted by the university in documents released to the news media.

Athletic Director Bobby Robinson did not immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

Overall, the National Collegiate Athletic Association has accused six of the team's 10 full-time coaches of illegal recruiting contacts and of giving up to $150 in cash to players on the team from 1984-88.

If Clemson is found guilty of the violations levied by the NCAA, the school could be placed on probation for the second time in less than 10 years.

The NCAA slapped Clemson with two years probation in 1982 for 70 violations that occurred under coach Charlie Pell and his successor, Danny Ford.

Ford resigned in January after the latest NCAA probe was made public. He has been replaced by former Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield.

The amended list of charges will be presented to the NCAA's infractions committee.

Conference thrives on men's sport

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

The Big Ten is not only a powerhouse in football and basketball but also in men's gymnastics.

"It seems that in the Midwest gymnastics has been able to join in with football and basketball as a sport," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said. "It's kind of become a tradition in some Midwest families."

The Big Ten conference is the only conference that the NCAA recognizes as a gymnastics conference because it is the only one in which two-thirds of the schools have teams. Purdue, Indiana and Northwestern are the only schools that do not have gymnastics teams.

But that isn't the only reason the Big Ten is a powerhouse. Going into this weekend's conference battle, three of the teams have been ranked in the top five for the five last weeks and all seven teams are currently ranked in the top 25.

"These schools all are big universities with very competitive programs," Ohio State coach Peter Koorman said. "I think one of the main reasons we are so powerful is due to the coaches. Minnesota's John Roethlisberger was in the See Men, Page 11

Gymnasts bounce back from year's setbacks

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

All athletes expect some kind of setback to occur during their careers, but the Iowa women's gymnastic team has had more than it's share this season. Coming off one of their best seasons ever, with last year's fifth-place finish in the tough Big Ten conference, the team was ready to roll. Unfortunately, things didn't happen the way the team had hoped. But after facing the loss of non-returning top performer Robyn Zussman, several injuries and illnesses, the Hawkeyes keep coming back.

Wolverines favored in Big Ten swim meet

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan has the new Donald B. Canham Natatorium, one of the best college-owned facilities in the nation where the Big Ten Men's Swimming and Diving Championships will be held today, Friday and Saturday.

And Michigan has won the conference title every year since the 1986 championship meet.

And with the help from two world-class swimmers and 13 other lettermen returning from the team that took third in the country last season, the Michigan Wolverines are set to go after their 24th Big Ten title.

"I think this is a rather fascinating meet this year," Michigan coach Jon Urbanchek said. "Obviously Michigan is the favorite on paper, but many of the kids with NCAA cuts are not focusing on this meet."

"Our top six athletes will not perform 100 percent; they won't shave and taper. That will hurt our relays and second and third events. But it will open the door for Michigan State, Minnesota and Iowa to move in closer. But for all practical purposes, we should win the meet."

"Michigan should win by 200 (points)," Iowa assistant coach Rich Draper said. "They've got some horses this year."

Big Ten Men's

swimming championships

The Wolverines' talent corp is led by returning all-Americans Brent Lang and Mike Barrowman.

Lang, a senior, is the top Michigan freestyler and won a gold medal in the 1988 Olympics as part of the United States' 400-meter relay squad.

Barrowman, a junior finished fourth in the 200-meter freestyle at the Seoul Olympics and set the world record in that event at the Pan-Pacific Championships last summer in Tokyo.

The two biggest losses for the Michigan team came with the graduation of butterfly Marty Moran and Backstroke Alex Alvizuri.

But according to Urbanchek, those places are taken care of. "We brought in Brian Gunn to fill Marty's shoes, and those are big shoes," the Michigan coach said.
