Yeltsin gains legislative seat

MOSCOW (AP) — Candidates who support Yeltsin's policies were elected across the nation's eight heartland, and Boris N. Yeltsin easily gained a legislative seat in the new parliament, the national council.

Vladimir Putin, the nominee of the Yeltsin camp, won with 51 percent of the vote. The Yeltsin camp also won in the regions of Ural, Siberia, and the Far East.

Putin, the current prime minister, is expected to become the next president of Russia. The Yeltsin camp also won in the regions of Ural, Siberia, and the Far East.

Gathers' death felt on campus; a shock to all

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first sign of tragedy at Loyola Marymount University came when no one arrived for the campus Monday — the American Tag game was canceled at half past 11 a.m.

The reason for the cancellation was the unexpected death of a Loyola basketball player, a senior in his last year on campus. He was 24 years old.

You could see it on the face of the student at the game, a man who had been watching the game. He was surprised by the news and he stopped watching the game. He was in shock.

Nutrients to grow

Los Angeles (AP) — Forty fast-food chains have agreed to break agreement to provide traditional menu information

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty large fast-food chains have agreed to offer on-site nutritional information about their menu items and to make signs available to customers.

The agreement was negotiated by the advocacy group of the fast-food industry and the government.

The government, in turn, will provide financial assistance to help the industry comply with the new regulations.

The agreement removes the possibility that individual states will pass their own laws requiring nutrition information on fast-food menus.

The Washington-based center, a non-profit health advocacy organization, has been working with the fast-food industry to develop nutrition guidelines and to educate consumers about nutrition.

The agreement, which goes into effect in January 1990, includes the following provisions:

- Each fast-food chain will provide nutritional information on its menu items.
- The information will include calorie counts, fat content, and carbohydrate content.
- The information will be clearly visible to customers.
- The information will be updated monthly.

This is something we will do to help people make informed choices about what they eat.

"Nutrients to grow" is a new series in The Daily Iowan that will focus on nutrition and health.

The series will feature articles on a variety of topics, including the benefits of fruits and vegetables, the importance of regular exercise, and the role of nutrition in disease prevention.

The series will be sponsored by the University of Iowa College of Public Health.

The series will be available online and in print, and it will be updated regularly with the latest research and news on nutrition and health.

The series will be led by Dr. Emily Zhang, a associate professor of nutrition and dietetics in the UI College of Public Health.

The series will feature contributions from other experts in the field of nutrition and health.

The series will be a resource for students, faculty, staff, and the general public who are interested in learning more about nutrition and health.

The series will be available on the UI College of Public Health website and on the University of Iowa website. It will also be available in print in the University of Iowa student newspaper, The Daily Iowan.

The series will be funded by a grant from the UI College of Public Health and the UI Office of the Provost.

The series will be an ongoing project, and it will be updated regularly with new articles and information.

The series will be a valuable resource for anyone interested in nutrition and health. It will provide up-to-date information and expert insights on a wide range of topics, and it will be a valuable resource for anyone looking to improve their diet and lifestyle.

The Daily Iowan - A former city editor of The Daily Iowa was honored in its Student News and Mass Communication's Hall of Fame Friday at the school's Fourth Estate Awards banquet in the Union.

Paddy, a 1947 UJ journalism graduate, is senior news editor for The Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

After graduation, Paddy became a member of the news staff at the Center for Public Affairs and The Des Moines Register and Tribune. In 1963, he moved to Minneapolis and started in broadcasting.

Four years later he was named public relations assistant for the promotion and public relations of St. Paul's University. In 1968, he founded the public relations firm Paddy and Harris Inc., which later became Paddy and Spitzer Inc. He served as its chief executive officer from 1961 to 1985, and then as chairman of the board. He retired from the firm in 1985. Under him, the firm now known as Paddy Spitzer Incorporated became the largest public relations company between Chicago and the West Coast with an annual net income of more than $8 million.

Paddy has been previously honored by the journalism school for pioneering work in continuous news photography. He was responsible for the first news photography coverage of a murder trial in a maximum-security institution.

In public service, Paddy's records span 35 years. In addition to other awards, Paddy is featured with the prestigious Paul M. Lund Award for public service in 1986.

In response to statements made in the Feb. 25 Daily Iowan regarding the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, a comment was made about the rise of fascism in the United States.

I believe that this statement was misleading. The use of the word "fascism" to describe the current political situation in the United States is a major misrepresentation of reality. The current political climate in the United States is characterized by divisions and polarization, rather than the uniformity and totalitarian control associated with fascism.

The comparison between the current situation and the rise of fascism in the United States is not accurate. The current political climate is not controlled by a single entity or ideology, and people from a wide range of backgrounds and beliefs are actively participating in the political process. This diversity is a hallmark of a healthy democratic society.

Excluding events that are the result of a school education system is important. The current political climate in the United States is not characterized by a lack of critical thinking, but rather by a diversity of perspectives and ideas. People from different backgrounds and beliefs are actively engaged in the political process, and this diversity is essential for a healthy democracy.

Troops sent to S. African homeland

Johannesburg, South Africa (AP) — South Africa sent troops into the black townships of the Pretoria area on Tuesday, burning and looting houses and killing at least one, following a militant strike that brought the worst violence in the nation's history.

A spokesman for the South African Information Minister Peter Botha said his government intervened at the request of Chief of Staff Gen. Oscarse Gqozo, who asked police to disperse striking blacks who had burned buildings and looted stores. In several areas of Pretoria, witnesses said, there were widespread reports of gunfire and shooting.

There were no immediate reports of injuries or deaths in the clash, but witnesses said many were injured in unspecified areas of the townships.

"The police acted in self-defense," Gqozo said. "The police did not open fire on the people."

The incident was the worst violence in South Africa since the 1976 student uprising against apartheid education policy that led to the Soweto uprising and the rise of Nelson Mandela to leadership of the African National Congress.

In an attempt to calm the situation, Gqozo announced a meeting of the Nationalites to discuss the situation, but no details were provided.

Botha, who is also prime minister, said the strike was to be ended by Wednesday, and a meeting of the military to discuss the situation was scheduled for later in the day.

Gqozo said the government was considering the possibility of declaring a state of emergency, which would allow it to deploy troops to raid the townships. The government has been accused of failing to address the grievances of the black community, and the strike was a response to the government's failure to do so.

The South African Nationalists, who are a political party that is not recognized by the government, have been calling for the release of political prisoners and an end to repression.

The strike was sparked by the government's decision to ban the African National Congress, which is the country's largest opposition party.

The African National Congress is a political party that is committed to the liberation of South Africa from white rule and the establishment of a democratic, non-racial society.

African National Congress leaders have been arrested and imprisoned, and their offices have been raided.

The strike is the latest in a series of protests and violent incidents that have occurred in South Africa in recent months, including a strike by black workers in the mining industry and a protest by black students in Johannesburg.

The government has been under pressure to address the grievances of the black community, and the strike is a response to the government's failure to do so.

The strike is expected to have a significant impact on the economy and the political situation in South Africa, and it is likely to be a major issue in the upcoming general election.

Reframe for hostages in Lebanon 'doubtful'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House said Monday that there are "no grounds for expecting the imminent release of Americans hostages in Lebanon, though "there is a lot happening." James Baker, who has been overseeing negotiations with the Islamic fundamentalists who seized two American diplomats in Lebanon, said Monday that "there are some people who have come forward with information about hostages," but he added that "there is just no one to confirm that." He said that the administration was "keeping all options open" and that "there is a lot happening." "I don't want to be discouraging," Baker said. "We want to do everything in our power to try to get the hostages back."

U.S. health secretary calls Claude Pepper plan pricey

WASHINGTON (AP) - Health Secretary Louis Sullivan said Monday that a $40 billion plan proposed by Senate Majority Leader Claude Pepper to expand federal health-care benefits nationwide was "far more costly" than the president's Medicare overhaul proposal. Sullivan said the administration's proposal "will not come within the range of what the president has said the plan would cost" and that "it will cost about $100 billion to $200 billion over the next decade." He said that the United States "will make no commitments to return" the hostages." Sullivan said that the administration was "keeping all options open" and that "there is a lot happening." "I don't want to be discouraging," Baker said. "We want to do everything in our power to try to get the hostages back."

Juror selection begins for the Iran-Contra trial

WASHINGTON (AP) - Twenty-three people, including a banker who identified himself as a "sympathizer" to the Iran-Contra conspiracy, were chosen prospective jurors Monday as the criminal selection process begins for the Iran-Contra trial of former National Security Adviser John Poindexter.

Poindexter is charged with five counts of obstruction of justice, including one count of making false statements to congressional committees and one count of making false statements to congressional committees in connection with accusations that he covered up Oliver North's secret contra re-supply network and lied about a 1986 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran. He is the highest-ranking Reagan administration official to go on trial in the Iran-Contra affair.

U.S. District Judge Harold Goldberger disqualified one woman who expressed uncertainty that she should be on the jury because she was a Equal Employment Opportunity Commission investigator. She said that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission investigators had been "exposed to advertisements or speeches or whatever." Goldberger disqualified another woman who said she would vote for "life" if the court ruled that the United States was ready to talk about releasing hostage. Fitzwater underscored that the United States is "ready to talk about releasing hostages." But he said that "Iran has not shown any interest." Iran is believed to want more substantial 1,000 hostages, including the United States, that have been taken by Iran. Iran's government has said it will release some of the Americans in Lebanon. Sullivan said that the United States government was "keeping all options open" and that "there is a lot happening." "I don't want to be discouraging," Baker said. "We want to do everything in our power to try to get the hostages back."

Supreme Court sets aside murderer's death sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today overturned a key lower court's decision that a North Carolina death penalty hearing did not violate a defendant's constitu- tional right to confront witnesses against him. The justices ruled that the North Carolina Supreme Court's decision was not a "clearly erroneous" decision that makes it easier for capital cases. The court remanded the case to the North Carolina Supreme Court for a new hearing.

"Essentially, the system that was encountered in the case was the 'best interest' system," said Sullivan. "The system was not the best interest system but it was the best interest system that was encountered in the case." Sullivan said that the administration was "keeping all options open" and that "there is a lot happening." "I don't want to be discouraging," Baker said. "We want to do everything in our power to try to get the hostages back."

Homeless seize Philadelphia houses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A national network of the homeless said Monday it had seized four vacant, government-owned buildings on as part of a national protest against housing policies.

The National Homeless Coalition says it has seized the buildings on a forty-four-story high-rise in central Philadelphia and a four-story high-rise in the city.

The coalition, which says it is a group of homeless people who have organized to improve their living conditions, said the buildings were seized in response to the city's housing crisis.

The coalition said it plans to use the buildings for homeless people to live in.

Borders, social charter in reunification plan

BRUSSELS, West Germany (AP) - Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Monday defended his plan to host a summit of leaders from both Germanys in September, saying the meeting was important for the future of Europe.

The plan, which was announced last week, is designed to address issues such as reunification and economic cooperation.

Kohl said the summit would bring together leaders from both Germanys to discuss the challenges facing the country.

The meeting is expected to focus on issues such as immigration, economic cooperation, and the future of the EU.

I refuse, however, to let this film of the book, saying that it shows "the way things were." It's fine to use footage from a long list of effective ads made in our era which should have better. People should know better about reason in 1980. Australian director Bruce Beresford "Do the Right Thing" reverts to subject matter that, somewhat to question it. I believe that Hollywood is still racist. I refuse, however, to let this film off with a laugh, noticing that at the end of the film, Miss Daisy is still being served by Hoke, even though they are finally filmed together in the frame.

In "Driving Miss Daisy" really as bad as I've just described? The film is actually too bland to be truly bad, too watered down to be truly great. No guilt here, folks. For those of you who do go to see it, notice that at the end of the film, Miss Daisy and Hoke, although practically side by side in the car, are each filmed alone, seeming to give them equal power, possibly giving them equal power into it. We are led to believe that the way things are right now is the way they're going to stay, knowing that things are different now.

Show examines youths' holocaust turmoil

Jacqueline Cohen
The Daily Iowan

M. Annette Melton's "Roger And Me" is ostensibly an examination of the Minsk Motors plant closings of 1987, but the film is marked by an odd anthropological trend that focuses on, and amplifies, the personal identities of a few of its subjects, and most of all, of its director.

Most of "Roger And Me" consists of intimate conversations with unemployed Flint, detains the variety of social experiences and personal loyalties of its subjects, pathetically, or at least. This is a more interesting and, truly pathetically or stupid, but humorous and all the more so. The film presents itself in front of a mirror at the bottom of the screen, but beyond the mirror, and in the way that, "Roger And Me" contains all sorts of "Roger" comedy which relies on the gagged, insensitive, and thus provocative mannerisms of its subjects.

In front of the film's producers, for example, a man says, "you got 10 years, and in the end he just gets some sort of the "Roger" comedy which relies on the gagged, insensitive, and thus provocative mannerisms of its subjects.

The thread that holds "Roger And Me" together is a minutely organized attempt to speak with General Motors chairman Roger A. Smith and with key Detroit officials," and the other is that they are the architects of the event's success, "and to find out what kind of influence they have on the decisions of the company's board of directors.

"Roger And Me" is a documentary from a few months ago that makes the work behind the scenes visible and entertaining, but also deep and meaningful.

The interview with the now-infamous Nasrallah, one of the most notorious of the Palestinian leaders, was simply the most astonishing moment of the film. Nasrallah's face was well known in the West, but his words were rarely heard. He spoke of his life in the West Bank, of his beliefs, and of his hope for peace. His words were powerful, and his voice was strong. It was a moment that made the whole film worthwhile.

In short, "Roger And Me" is a film that is at once important and entertaining, and it is a film that will be viewed for years to come. It is a film that is not to be missed.
Panthers win in 3 OTs

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Steve phyfe scored a basket to force a third overtime Monday and then his three points in that period lifted Northwestern to a 20-12 victory over Iowa-Chicago in a quarterfinal game of the Association of Mid-Continental Universities post-season tournament.

The win is the first in the tourney for No. 4 Northwestern (15-4) and ends a first-round loss last year to the Flames (11-4-3).

No credit for Olayun

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Northwestern coach Bill Jankovic will not be credited with a new quadruple-double in a game against Golden Bear Olayun in a first-round loss last year to Iowa-Chicago.

Jankovic, who had 20 points, 14 rebounds and 11 blocked shots in the game, was originally uncredited for the statistic.

However, after members of the Beavers' staff reviewed video tapes of the game, they thought Jankovic was credited with a quadruple-double for Olayun with less than six minutes remaining in the second quarter. Jankovic's block attempt total was changed to 12.

"The coaching staff determined he needed credit for achieving a statistical milestone," The Associated Press was told if an official comment was not forthcoming.

"This is not a change if it is desired necessarily."

The new record: Three quadruple-doubles in NCAA history.

Valvano's lawyer puts buyout deal on table

RALIEGH, N.C. (AP) - Coach Don "Universe" Davis Monday after proposing a contract buyout to the university, said the former NCAA official was offering to resign from the program under alleging of sexual harassment.

Art Kennedy, Valvano's attorney and spokesman, said Tuesday that Davis had been personally implicated in allegations that arose during his tenure. Kennedy said Davis has been accused of sexual harassment by two women at the university. Davis, who is facing a policy at the university, said he would consider leaving N.C. State officials if asked. He has previously been accused of sexual harassment at the university.

"I would definitely have to reevaluate my position," Kennedy said. "Anybody, if they got that kind of support, you wonder if it's all worth it."

The Valvano's buyout began after ABC News reported last week that Davis was fired as an assistant coach in violation of NCAA rules. The move came after a 12-hour meeting on Saturday that had been held at the university to address allegations that Davis was involved in an alleged NCAA violation.

Kennedy said he had received a letter from the NCAA about the allegations. He said the letter stated that Davis had denied any role in the case.

"I wanted to try and play, but my mother was the one to tell me I couldn't hold it in," he said.

"The main reason we're going to play is that Hank was a hard worker," Kennedy said. "Hank would want us to go out and play hard and win the game."

Valvano's death moves former top players

ALAlabama, N.Y. (AP) - Brought to the University of Alabama by their current best friends, La Salle's Lissie Stroman and Doug Shackleford, the Explorers would dedicate their game Monday night to the memory of their fallen teammate.

"I've got a devastating couple of hours, not only for myself," Stroman said. "It's a tough thing to say, but I think our biggest concern right now is our fans."

"We're playing for the fans tonight," Shackleford said. "We're playing for all the people who have been with us, and for all the people who have supported us."

"I'm going to try and play, but I'm not going to make any promises," Kennedy said. "But I'm going to do my best to play."
