A tornado ripped through the Coralville Wednesday afternoon, causing an unnumbered amount of damage and a temporary power outage. A man died in his apartment when he heard the Corralville tornado rumble through - one hour before it was declared a tornado. Three people were injured around the window of the window and the downtown area.

Project leaves less affordable housing

Terex Falls
The Daily Iowan

By Bec Mendenhall

The Terex Falls apartment building at the corner of Preston and Capital streets was closed to new tenants Thursday. The building previously housed 80 apartments.

Residents were asked to leave by 5 p.m. Thursday to allow for exterior renovation of the building that is required to provide low-income housing, according to Property Management.

The two-bedroom, two-bathroom apartments, which are on the list to be taken over by the Iowa City Housing Authority, were closed under the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The removal of the tenants follows a 34-year-old man was shot and killed on the building's premises Monday. Police were ordered to remove the building's residents during an investigation.

"It has been decided to close the building," according to Property Management, a spokesperson for the Iowa City Housing Authority.

"The building is being shut down due to its current condition," the spokesperson said.

"The building will be put up for lease by the Iowa City Housing Authority," the spokesperson said.

"The building will be lease for $800 per unit, an amount that is the average cost for the building previously occupied by tenants. The amount is based on the low-income housing requirement," the spokesperson said.

Gallup poll reveals concern of Iowans about health care

Snape West

Health care for the uninsured and skyrocketing health care costs are major concerns of Iowans, according to a poll of 600 Iowans released February 22. The Iowa Hospital Association and the Gallup Organization conducted the poll during January and February and the results are based on the quality of health care and the role that the Iowa government has taken in health care.

Iowa is the third state in the country to have Gallup conduct a poll of this type. The Gallup Organization is a widely respected and well-known firm in the field of social science research, and the Iowa Hospital Association is one of the nation’s leading organizations representing hospitals across the state.

The Gallup poll gives positive feedback on the public’s attitudes toward health care in Iowa, but criticized some of the issues andConclusion, Hancock said.

“We should be working with the hospitals to improve the delivery of health care so that everyone in Iowa has access to the care they need when they need it. This information is crucial to our efforts to improve the quality of health care in Iowa.”

The greatest concern was shown for the issues of the uninsured, 54 percent of the respondents said they were in favor of national or universal health insurance, and 73 percent of those who were uninsured said they felt their right to high-quality health care was not being protected.

The majority of the Iowans surveyed were also willing to support programs covering health care expenses, with 47 percent of them saying they would support a payroll tax on all wages to help support these efforts. However, 63 percent of the respondents were concerned about the quality of health care, and 68 percent of the public felt the quality of hospital care received was poor.

The results of the Iowa City Health Care survey were presented in a report to the Iowa City School District, and the state health commissioner, who was present, said the survey results indicated the need for increased funding for health care and for increased oversight of the health care system.

The survey results were also presented to the Governor and the Iowa legislature, and the state health commissioner said the results would be used to help guide future policies.

“Overall, the results of the first five Gallup polls on Iowa health care attitudes tell us that the people of this state are genuinely concerned about health issues and have definite opinions,” said IA Governor Donnie Dixon.

Des Moines residents still left in the dark after record storm

Des Moines (AP) - Residents awoke on Sunday morning to find that their power had not been restored, despite reports that the area had received more than two inches of precipitation in a storm that caused widespread power outages.

"I'm surprised that we haven't had any power yet," said neighbor Jack Johnson. "I thought it would be back on by now." Johnson's lights were still out, and he had to rely on a generator to power his home.

Earl Thompson, who said he was dressed in his Sunday best, said he was forced to cancel his plans for the day due to the storm. "I was looking forward to going out with the family, but it looks like we'll have to cancel those plans now," he said.

The storm has left many residents feeling frustrated and concerned about the safety of their homes. "We need power now," said Patricia Garcia, who said she was worried about the safety of her elderly parents in their home.

Mayor Bob.d Hillaker said the storm was "a scary experience," and he urged residents to be cautious.

"We're going to have to be very careful about our safety," Hillaker said. "We don't want anyone to get hurt."

Fire kills 11 in Frankfurt, Germany

FRANKFURT-West Germans-Arson was quickly ruled out as a cause of a fire that swept through a downtown restaurant and killed 11 people, including 9 children, who were among the 30 guests who died in the blaze early Wednesday.
The fire, which started about 6:30 a.m. in the one-story restaurant on Kaiserstrasse, did not exceed three double-spaced typed pages.

Housing and Urban Development

WASHINGTON-Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp said Wednesday the department's enforcement of political neutrality has been a key player in awarding HUD grants.

The former official, Dubois Gilliam, is serving a federal prison sentence because he accepted a bribe in the sale of a government contract.

Low Birth Weight babies

The rate of low birth weight babies is on the rise, especially among black infants, according to a recent release from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The rate of low birth weight babies has increased by 9 percent from 1985 to 1987, the latest year for which statistics are available. During 1985-86, the rate declined by 0.9 percent.

Black babies, who already have a higher risk of low birth weight and infant death than white babies, are particularly vulnerable.

The rate for black infants is worse than for whites between 1985 and 1987, but 2 percent for blacks.

Very low birth weight babies

Very low birth weight babies, those born weighing less than 2.5 pounds, are more likely to die than babies born weighing more.

Sixty-nine percent of babies born weighing less than 2.5 pounds died, compared with 67.5 of 1,000 in 1985.

The 1987 figures still represent an improvement over the 73.9 per 1,000 reported in 1979.

Small, premature, and black infants are at greater risk of death than those of normal weight, short for their age, or born at term.

The problem is worse for black infants.

"Black babies, who already have a higher rate of premature birth and infant death than white babies, are particularly vulnerable," Kemp said.

"Very low birth weight babies, those born weighing less than 2.5 pounds, are more likely to die in their first year than other babies," Kemp said. "Infant under 5 pound weigh 1.5 times more likely to die in their first year than other babies, and the rate for black babies is 3 times higher than for white babies.

"He will provide information that is otherwise unavailable to the public," Kemp said.

"Mr. Gilliam's testimony will open new areas not dealt with properly in the past, and will make possible a more inclusive approach to the problem of political bias in the administration of federal programs," Kemp said.

Quayle to spend week in Latin America

WASHINGTON-Vice President Dan Quayle, leaving today to help inaugurate new presidents in Chile and Brazil, has also been focusing on economic development in Latin America when "we have not been as successful in trying to lift the economies of Latin America as we might have been," according to one White House aide.

Quayle was due to leave Tuesday morning to attend the inauguration of Chilean President Patricio Aylwin, who took office in March.

Prosecutor: Poindexter lied to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter lied to Congress and to the jurors who will decide on the new trial Thursday with his attorney James Bovon. A key has been revealed for his Iran-Contra trial.

Poindexter was impaneled by the jury Greene ruled that North could testify about what Poindexter had told him when he denied to the House Intelligence Committee on Aug. 6, 1986, when questioned about whether the White House was secretly helping the Contras.

The trial "looked like a sham," outside observers suggested that the White House was not interested in the Iran-Contra affair. Webb told jurors that while North was talking to Poindexter, he denied to the House Intelligence Committee in 1986 what he had known for two years, according to the record.

The defense had tried to argue that testimony, arguing that North did not have an independent conclusion of the episode and that it was based on the National Security Council documents and creating 33,000 home system security from Richard Clark.

A. G. Kiers operates a ranch near the Kruger National Park, which shares a border with Mozambique. The park is a major tourist attraction and a significant source of foreign exchange for South Africa.

Kiers told off criticism about border statements.

Kiers told an Associated Press reporter that the Germans and South Africans made a mistake by not negotiating a border agreement before 1989.

Kiers said that both countries should have worked more closely together to avoid conflicts over the border. He said that both countries should have recognized that the border was a sensitive issue and that it needed to be addressed through negotiation.

Kiers said that the Germans should have been more willing to compromise and that the South Africans should have been more willing to discuss the issue.

Kiers said that both countries should have worked to find a solution that was acceptable to both sides.
Democrats lobby to limit campaign spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats pushed their version of a campaign finance bill through a Senate panel Thursday as a prelude to negotiations with Republicans to avoid a partial government shutdown early next month.

The Rules Committee approved the Demo­crats' bill in a 7-3 party-line vote, but leaders of both parties have pledged to work only to get a partial government shutdown bill passed, rather than to agree on a comprehensive solution.

Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), who chairs the Senate Committee on Standards of Official Conduct — the ethics panel's formal name — said the two sides had "a long way to go" to find common ground.

But Alexander questioned whether Gingrich received outside income "in violation of federal law", pointing out that the issue had been raised by two different committees.

"We have not yet concluded that issue," Alexander said, referring to the Gingrich case.

Gingrich told Thursday's hearing that the issue was "as close to the edge as possible" for him.

The hearing also heard testimony from former Republican Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.), who criticized the House Ethics Committee for its handling of the case.

"I want to thank you for the work that you've done on this," Dole said.

Gingrich is the leader of conserva­tives who want to limit PAC contributions to $5,000 a year, while Democrats are pushing for a $1,000 limit.

The Senate now knows that the issue is not "closed", Dole said.

Gingrich also criticized Gingrich's handling of the case, saying he "needed to do more" to inform the public and the press.

"It's not only the committee's responsibility," Dole said.

Gingrich said Thursday's hearing was "a necessary step" in the process of finding solutions to the problem.

"We have a responsibility to the public," he said.

Gingrich was also criticized by the ethics committee's co-chairman, Rep. Joe Wilson (R-N.C.), who questioned whether Gingrich had "fully disclosed" his financial interests.

"We need to get further information on that," Wilson said.

The Iowa women's basketball team has been involved in the Big Ten Tournament for the first time in 34 years this weekend, and the third in the last four seasons. The Hawkeyes are facing the Michigan Wolverines for the first time in the history of the tournament, and the first time in the last four seasons. The Hawkeyes are heading into the tournament with a 22-5 record, 4-13 in the league.

Iowa traveled to Evanston, Illinois, to play Northwestern (11th), Ohio State (11th), Michigan (11th), and Iowa State (11th), all of which are nationally ranked teams. The Hawkeyes are aiming for an unprece-ised state to take on Southwest Missouri at Columbia, Mo., the Iowa State University from the Big Ten Conference.

Panthers aim to play spoiler as new kids at tournament

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Northern Iowa's Jason Boone thinks the Panthers might "make a little noise" at the Big Dance. They certainly did last season, when they went 13-19 but managed to win the Missouri Valley Conference tournament and made their NCAA tournament debut.

The NCAA tournament is a big deal to the Panthers, who were seeded No. 15 in the 65-team field and will play a 3 seed in the opening round Friday at 1:07 p.m. CT. Boone and his teammates made sure of that with a 65-55 win over Illinois-Chicago on Wednesday night in the championship game of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

"We're not going to be quiet in this tournament," Boone said. "We'll make sure we're not quiet. The only time we're going to be quiet is when we lose. We don't want to lose.

"It's going to be a new experience for everyone on this team, the fans, the players, everyone. We have to go out and play our best and make sure we're not quiet."
Police checking out water bombing case

LOGAN, Utah (AP) - Investigators have questioned one suspect and were trying today to check out another in an effort to solve the case of the water bomb that shattered USU coach Jerry Tarkanian and several of his players during a basketball game.

One man was interviewed Wednesday in Salt Lake City, but another had to be shown up for a scheduled meeting in Logan earlier in the day.

"We're still trying to reach him," Arave said. "We've contacted him, but we can't reach him."

Arave wouldn't reveal the suspect's name or details of the interview, nor he mentioned on the progress of the probe into the incident that disrupted the March 5 basketball game in Logan.

Williams described how the investigators talked to Wednesday

Fleshdig plays funk-metal for band's benefit album, but there's drinking that happens. That's been the case since the band's inception, and that's the way it's always going to be. The stereotypes of black culture are exposed, exaggerated, and laughed at. Wiede's ability to present known and accurate material would be encouraging if other Americans could look at their histories as honestly. His play provably demonstrates that the ethos of slavery and oppression is a group of people that have never been free. She and her father have been in the USA for 20 years or more, and she does not allow the audacity to sit comfortably in their disadvantage of their black roots. 'The Colonial Museum' is not selling 'Eurotrash opposition! It's just what they are and they need to be exposed. Wiede's time in Europe shows how everything she is exposed to in this world, inside her, constantly changes her and everybody who's ever been here. The other African-American artists are rising, saying 'I am the black man!' I am the black man!' I am the black man!' What they need is to place themselves in black history. Fleldrig has recently formed a cult of African-Americans, and yet they take the African-American experience and blow it out of proportion. They are forming a new black band and playing funk and making records (this could be interesting).
