"Statistics show that a lot of rapes don't get reported, but of those reported even fewer are charged, and even fewer go to trial."

Few local rape cases are brought to trial

Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

Last year, 82 adults reported rapes to the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. In the same year, only three individuals charged with sexually abusing adults went to trial in Johnson County District Court, according to Victim Witness Coordinator Christie Munson. Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said few rape cases are ever brought to trial. "Statistics show that a lot of rapes don't get reported, but of those reported even fewer are charged, and even fewer go to trial," Miller said. Prosecuting rape is a multifaceted problem which is met by obstacles at every step of the process, Miller said. But according to rape victim advocates, police and judicial officials, the most challenging barrier to successful prosecution is the public's perception of rape. "By and large the problem exists in the mind of the general public, rather than statutorily," said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. As public awareness of rape increases, people crucial to the conviction of rapists — such as witnesses, judges and jury members — will begin to view rape cases with a greater understanding of the issues, thus leading to more convictions, Miller said. "The system is improving because awareness is growing. More rapes are being reported and, as a result, there is a much greater chance that (rapists) will be caught and put away," she said. The process which leads to rape convictions starts when an individual who has been raped reports the incident to a public agency. RVAP statistics show that 82 individuals reported rapes last year. Victims are encouraged by RVAP crisis counselors to immediately undergo a gynecological exam at a local hospital to collect evidence of the rape. About 36 of these victims chose to have an immediate medical exam. Victims are then urged to file a report with the police organization which has jurisdiction over the area in which they were raped. There, they must tell an officer See Rape, Page 5A

Societal factors may influence sex offenders

John Kenyon
 The Daily Iowan

Psychological and sociological factors, such as low self-esteem and sexual abuse as children, may help trigger the violent behavior of sex offenders. Sexual encounters early in life can be a contributing factor to violent sexual behavior. Studies of male sex offenders have shown that a significant percentage were victims of sexual abuse before the onset of puberty. Therapists Robert Longo and Brad McFadin, in a study published in Law and Order magazine, found that the average age of first sexual contact for a group of sex offenders was 9.1 years. "Such unresolved trauma may prompt a compulsive re-enactment of the experience in an attempt to gain mastery and control," Longo said. Another factor that may contribute to sexual violence may be the typical male role in sexual situations. According to an article by psychiatrist Richard Jenkins, "since the male role is more active and dominant, male sexual behavior is usually concerned with an effort to achieve sexual dominance. ## Sunny summer days in March?

UI students enjoy winter heat wave

Deborah Gluba
 The Daily Iowan

Shorts, convertibles, T-shirts? In mid-March? In Iowa City? True, stranger things have happened, but few complained as temperatures soared into the 80s and winter's layers gave way to bodies that hadn't seen sunlight since last summer. The Pentacrest was crowded with people lounging in the sun before, or instead of, going to class. And of course, there were a few instructors who ventured out-of-doors for class. UI students Lola Fattore and Paul Valerio soaked up the sun on the Old Capitol steps while eating multiple scoops of gourmet ice cream flavors and a cookie from The Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 E. Washington St. "We're digging it. It's a way cool thing to be doing," Valerio said. An employee at The Great Midwestern said ice cream sales had increased the past weekend, causing the store to run out of sugar cones. Bike riders, joggers, sunbathers and even a few tourists all took in the mid-afternoon sunshine on the Pentacrest. Two jugglers took advantage of the warm weather, amidst passing gawkers and hecklers returning from classes, to practice their skills on the Pentacrest. "It's mental masturbation," said John Smick, UI graduate student and juggler. Smick and fellow UI graduate student Brooks Peck said they often juggle in the No Shame Theater. At the west side of the Pentacrest, two Japanese men who arrived in Iowa City Sunday spent part of the afternoon people-watching from a bench near the Old Capitol. They said the weather was "very fine" and warmer than it now is in Japan. UI freshman Cari Corwin was one of several students to take a nap on a sunny bench near the Old Capitol. She said the weather gave people who weren't planning to travel south for spring break a chance to enjoy some sunshine. "It's not going to last, though. It's going to get cold again pretty soon," Corwin said. The early blast of summer provided some people an opportunity to show off bronze tans achieved with the aid of ultraviolet tanning booths. Others seeking to get a headstart on a spring break tan or a new summer hairstyle tried to schedule salon appointments. Primedesign, 32 S. Clinton St., was busy with people who wanted tanning appointments and haircuts, said Joelle Swenson, Primedesign receptionist and UI sophomore. "It seems like on the phone people are more cooperative, but lately everyone is also in a rush to get things done," Swenson said.

UI seeks enrichment proposals

Undergraduates need more faculty contact

Diana Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

In an effort to "enrich the intellectual experience" of incoming freshmen, the College of Liberal Arts — the UI's biggest college — is currently seeking proposals from its faculty to create new courses and programs and strengthen general education courses. James Lindberg, associate dean of academic programs in the College of Liberal Arts, said the initiative is intended to help incoming freshmen avail themselves to the array of academic experiences available at the UI, and to enhance the intellectual life of undergraduate students by providing them with more contact with UI faculty members. "We recognize we're a large university, and quite often the freshman academic year involves large lecture classes and discussion sections taught by teaching assistants," Lindberg said. "There's too little direct contact with faculty, who are the core of the intellectual aspect at this university." "(Entering students) form communities by the accident of dormitory assignments more than by common academic experiences," wrote Gerhard Loewenberg, dean of liberal arts, in a letter to faculty members. "We hope this initiative might bring about the kinds of things smaller institutions can offer their students," Lindberg continued, "and that, through various cre- See GER, Page 6A

Parliament assails Gorbachev vision of powerful presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev's plan for a powerful presidency to hold the Soviet Union together ran into a wall of opposition Monday, one day after Lithuania fractured the union by declaring its independence. Parliamentarians from other independence-minded republics took the floor of the Congress of People's Deputies to assail the proposed presidency as far too strong for the loose federation of sovereign countries they envision as the future Soviet Union. "The fact that the U.S.S.R. is a union of sovereign states is hardly taken into account," said Givi Gumbaridze, Communist Party chief of the southern republic of Georgia, where the parliament voted Friday to reject the presidency proposal and to demand immediate negotiations with Moscow on independence. "This draft does not give enough consideration to the sad traditions of our state," he said, referring to decades of dictatorship and its terrible toll of mass murder. Lithuanians were so dismayed by Gorbachev's proposed strengthening of the presidency that they rushed to declare independence before it passed. "Tomorrow, Mr. Gorbachev will get dictatorial powers with the right See Soviet, Page 5A

Autos crash and burn after fog cuts visibility

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Dozens of cars and trucks piled up and burned in a chain-reaction collision on a downtown freeway bridge in fog so thick it cut visibility to zero. Three people were killed, authorities said. "It was just horrible, terrible. To hear the brakes squeal, the gas tanks explode, to hear the people screaming," said Harry Suppanz, 35, of Sturgeon Bay, a passenger in a truck that crashed and burned. At least 30 people were injured and taken to hospitals. Police Lt. Roy Johnson described the situation as "total chaos" after the crash on the northbound lanes of the Interstate 43 bridge over the Fox River. He said visibility was "just about down to zero" when the accident

Suppanz said his truck was jolted at least six or seven times during the chain-reaction crash, but his only injury was a bump on the head. Lauder said five or six vehicles crashed in front of his truck, and a fuel tanker truck was behind it. See Crash, Page 5A

UI professor refutes Accutane's half-life

Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

A February 8 Daily Iowan article incorrectly implied that Accutane — an orally administered drug used to treat acne — stays in the body for over a year, according to a UI professor of dermatology.

Dr. John Strauss, head of the UI Dermatology Department, said Monday that the drug has a very short half-life and may stay in the body less than 24 hours.

In the February article, UI biology professor Michael Solursh said "after applying Accutane to the skin it doesn't just disappear, it stays around for a year or more and can affect the fetus if the person who has used the medicine becomes pregnant."

Strauss refuted this claim, saying "topical Accutane isn't even a marketed drug at this time. Furthermore, no topically applied drug 'stays around for a year or more' in the skin."

Strauss said that even after oral administration of the drug, the length of time it stays in the body may be less than 24 hours.

However, Strauss said, a similar drug used to treat psoriasis — Etretnate — may stay in the body for up to two years.

Strauss said he was one of the first people in the country to conduct clinical tests on Accutane after it was created by manufacturer Hoffmann-LaRoche.

"I have worked in trial tests with the topical drug and worked with the oral drug since 1978," Strauss said.

Solursh was discussing the drug in relation to his research on possible environmental factors that may contribute to congenital birth defects.

Strauss said there have been about 70 reported cases of orally administered Accutane causing birth defects in pregnant women, but there is no evidence that topically applied Accutane causes birth defects in patients who quit using the drug at least one month before getting pregnant.

"It is true that there have been birth defects that have followed the use of Accutane during pregnancy itself, but as long as a woman waits for at least one month after the use of Accutane is discontinued, there is no evidence that birth defects have occurred in relation to the use of Accutane," Strauss said.

Courts

Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

A Cedar Rapids woman was arrested Monday for writing a $164.32 check on a closed account, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Michelle Ann Gehring, 1528 Washington Ave. S.E., Apt. 2, was charged with theft in the third degree after she allegedly wrote a check from her Banc Iowa account under another name to Stephens Clothing, Old Capitol Center, according to court records.

Gehring had originally set up the account under the pseudonym Trixie E. Craun, knowing the check would not be paid when presented. The check was returned as "account closed," according to court records.

Gehring allegedly wrote checks on the account in excess of $11,000, according to court records.

Gehring was released on her own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing is set for March 29.

An Iowa City woman and a UI student were charged with domestic assault Sunday after an incident in which the two allegedly caused bodily injury to one another, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Trent Wensel, 18, 221 N. Riverside Drive, allegedly intended to cause pain or injury to another when he struck Ann M. Persinger, 23, in the face during a domestic problem, according to court records.

Wensel, a UI sophomore, was charged with serious assault and released on his own recognizance, according to court records.

Persinger allegedly struck Wensel several times in the head with a large and broken bottle, causing large cuts to Wensel's back, head and forehead, according to court records.

Persinger was charged with aggravated assault and released on her own recognizance, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing for Persinger has been set for March 30 and a preliminary hearing for Wensel has yet to be set.

A 24-year-old Iowa City man was charged with serious assault causing injury and possession of a controlled substance following an incident Saturday in a parking lot behind 603 S. Dubuque St., according to Johnson County District Court records.

Police arrested Andrew Dean Skola, 109 Forestview Trailer Court, after he allegedly struck and kicked a victim as he was lying in the parking lot, according to court records.

Skola told police that the victim damaged his trailer, and that he struck and kicked the victim in self-defense, according to court records.

Skola was also charged with possession of a controlled substance after a witness observed him remove a small metal container from his pocket while he was being detained by police, according to court records.

The container held green plant-like material, suspected to be marijuana, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing has been set for March 30, and Skola was placed in custody of the Department of Corrections.

An Iowa City man was arrested Saturday and charged with assault causing injury after he repeatedly struck a man in the face five or six times Saturday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Larry Ross Smith, 29, 1205 Laura Drive, allegedly struck the victim in the face, causing injury to the victim's eye, nose and lip in an argument at Smith's home, according to court records.

Smith was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $500 bond, and a preliminary hearing has been set for March 21, according to court records.

A 21-year-old Iowa City woman was arrested on charges of fourth degree theft Friday after a November 14 incident in which she allegedly appropriated a long-distance telephone access number belonging to someone else.

Ann-Marie Maher, 727D Mayflower Residence Hall, allegedly used the 9-digit access number without the owner's permission to place $79.30 worth of long distance calls, according to court records.

Maher was taken to the Johnson County Jail on $500 bond. Preliminary hearing in the matter is scheduled for March 30.

A UI student was arrested Friday after he allegedly stole a videocassette recorder and three videocassettes February 8 from Dr. Video in Coralville, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Daniel Burgholdt, Jr., 4528 Burge Hall, was charged with third-degree theft after he allegedly misappropriated a Sharp VCR and three videotapes through a rental agreement in which he used a false out-of-state driver's license.

According to Johnson County District Court records, all the rental information was fictitious, and Burgholdt, 18, failed to return the property by the agreed date.

After obtaining written consent to search the defendant's room, police observed the VCR with matching serial number and 3 videotapes, according to court records.

Burgholdt was scheduled for a preliminary hearing March 29 and released on his own recognizance.

An Iowa City man was charged with second-degree theft Friday after he allegedly obtained auto parts from the UI Motor Pool by deception, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Roger W. Cozine, 44, RR 4, Box 83A, allegedly obtained auto parts valued between $500 and $5,000 after he charged them to the UI motor pool August 7, 1989, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing has been set for March 29, and Cozine was released on his own recognizance.

An 18-year-old Iowa City woman was charged with fourth-degree theft March 2 after she allegedly stole a $100 bill from a cash register at Econofoods, 1987 Broadway St., according to Johnson County District Court records.

Heather L. Rhoades, 14 Lakeview Drive, allegedly took the bill from a cash register where she was working on February 14, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for March 30 and Rhoades was released on her own recognizance.

Computer registration opens for all students this summer

Jodi M. Hamel
The Daily Iowan

Braving the elements outside Calvin Hall during registration week will soon become an obsolete experience for UI students.

This summer will bring full implementation of Iowa Student Information Services (ISIS), an interactive computer program that enables UI students to communicate with the Office of the Registrar and other administrative offices on campus.

The new registration process follows a pilot project involving 3,648 UI students who registered for the spring semester 1990. The Registrar's "Report On Distributed Registration Pilot Group" found that of these students:

- Approximately 97 percent preferred the ISIS to the old way of registering.
- Approximately 3 percent did not prefer the ISIS to the old way of registering.
- Approximately 49 percent would use ISIS to make changes in registration.
- Approximately 51 percent would not use ISIS to make changes.

Marion Hansen, UI associate registrar, said the new registration system will allow students to have more responsibility for their academic progress and help alleviate congestion during registration.

"With the new system we don't know what will happen to the quality of advising, but we're dedicated to keep the level up," said Juliet Kaufmann, UI Undergraduate Advising Center director.

"The new system is an improvement in that it empowers the student and puts them in control of the registration process," Kaufmann added.

The decentralized registration system will allow students and advisers more time to prepare course selections.

"Ideally the new system should allow me to spend more time doing the things I am qualified to do — advise," said Elizabeth Zeidel, a UI Undergraduate Academic adviser.

ISIS should allow more time to be spent talking about more substantive issues during registration appointments, Zeidel said.

"We're not taking time to look up courses for students on the computer and that allows me to spend more time in planning and less time on the actual schedule," she said.

A fear some advisers have about ISIS is that it may increase the number of drop-add requests. With ISIS students have immediate access to information pertaining to open and closed sections and will be able to make scheduling decisions accordingly.

ISIS also makes students responsible for knowing all policies and prerequisites listed in the UI Schedule of Courses.

"How much clean-up the adviser will do is a deterrence with the new system, because comparison of courses is left up to the student and the system doesn't check for prerequisites," Zeidel said.

"Students are used to relying on their adviser for catching possible regression and duplication of courses. Now we have to be more careful to teach students to use their schedule of courses than relying on us for such information," Zeidel added.

These capabilities presented the advising center an opportunity to redesign their registration forms. The forms now contain expanded space for information about alternative courses, comments and special notes.

"Our thought is that students will need more information on alternative courses and hopefully students will go in armed with the additional information," Kaufmann said.

She said the pilot project involved many people who had little experience dealing with computers and were initially unsure of how to use the registration programs.

Typing and proof reading the computer registration entries is very important, Zeidel said.

"We're telling all students to read the whole title. If you miss one digit it might keep you in the same department, but you could go from Spanish I to Spanish IV," Zeidel said.

Undergraduate advising recipients will continue to have a mandatory advising appointment, but it will be to the students advantage to speak early with their adviser and not to plan a last-minute appointment, Zeidel said.

Kaufmann said Calvin Hall will still be open for registration, but with a smaller staff, for those students who are uncomfortable with the new system.

Early Registration for Summer and Fall 1990 is from April 16 to April 27.

ISU prof shot in face, chest; listed 'critical'

The Daily Iowan

An Iowa State University, Ames, professor was listed in serious condition Monday after allegedly being shot by his two housemates in his home.

Robert Hasiak, 46, was found last Tuesday night at about 10 p.m. in his home with gunshot wounds to his face and chest.

Two women who resided with Hasiak, Lisa L. Fox, 33, and a juvenile girl whose name is being withheld, were arrested and charged with attempted murder, according to Ames police.

Hasiak was taken to Mary Greeley Medical Center, Ames, and was transferred to Iowa Methodist Medical Center, Des Moines, about 11:00 p.m. last Tuesday night.

His condition was listed as critical on Monday, a decline from last Wednesday when he was listed in serious condition.

Fox is being held at the Story County Jail, Nevada, Iowa.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for March 16, and Fox is being held on $200,000 bond, said Ames Police Sgt. Craig Reid.

Reid added that the girl was taken to Meyer Hall Juvenile Detention Center in Des Moines.

Hasiak is an associate professor of animal and poultry science.

Life sentence

Jury convicts Ruben Deases, 18, of 1st-degree murder of Ames woman

NEVADA (AP) — Ruben Deases on Monday received a mandatory life sentence in the strangulation and decapitation of his brother's girlfriend after again declaring his innocence and blaming his "abused past" for his involvement in the woman's death.

"Jesus knows what I have done and what I have not done. I am at peace with myself and I will live the rest of my life as best as I can," Deases told Judge M.D. Seiser before he was sentenced at Story County District Court.

Deases, who turned 18 on February 18, appeared in court with all but the top of his head shaved, in contrast to the neatly trimmed haircut he had during his trial last month.

He was convicted of first-degree murder in the May 28, 1989, death of Jennifer Ann Gardner, 20, in the Ames apartment she shared with Ruben's brother, Eustaquio, 23. The woman's head was found the

Here's what Deases had to say

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) — Here is the statement read Monday by Ruben Deases before he received a mandatory life sentence without parole for the May 28, 1989 strangulation and decapitation of Jennifer Ann Gardner.

He referred to his brothers, Edward, who awaits trial on the same charge, and Johnny, who was the state's star witness. The statement was made to District Judge M.D. Seiser in Story County District Court.

"I never felt anything but friendship for Jennifer but she threatened my life and my brothers' lives. My abused past caused me to react.

"I never wanted to kill Jennifer. I am very sad for Jennifer and her family.

"I hold nothing against Johnny, he is my brother. I still pray that Edward will tell the truth. I love my family and pray that they can understand.

"Jesus knows what I have done and what I have not done. I am at peace with myself and I will live the rest of my life as best as I can."

next day in a roadside ditch south of Ames and her body was found June 1 in a lake north of Ames.

Another brother, Edward Deases, 21, awaits trial on the same charge and a fourth brother, Johnny, 16, was the state's star witness against Ruben.

Johnny Deases testified that Ruben and Edward wanted to kill Gardner because she had threatened to tell police about Eustaquio's cocaine business. Eustaquio Deases, who was not in Ames when the woman died, has since been convicted on federal cocaine trafficking charges.

Johnny said that on the night she died, Jennifer had threatened him, Ruben and Edward with a gun and that the brothers then plotted to kill her. Johnny Deases said Ruben choked the woman unconscious, then helped Edward strangle her with a belt as she revived. He said Ruben also engaged in sex with the corpse and that Edward bragged about cutting off the woman's head.

The conviction carried a mandatory sentence of life in prison without possibility of parole. The only way the term can be shortened is if a governor commutes the sentence to a fixed number of years.

At a brief hearing prior to the sentencing, Seiser rejected defense motions for a new trial.

"There was ample evidence for the verdict," he said.

But he granted a motion to incorporate into the trial record a videotape from the news media pool of a courtroom fight between Eustaquio and Ruben Deases on February 16, when Eustaquio was called as a prosecution witness. In that brawl, Eustaquio Deases lunged across the defense table, striking Ruben and defense lawyer Stephen Terrill and snarling curses.

Terrill had sought a new trial on several grounds, including that Ruben Deases was denied a fair and impartial hearing in Story County.

Rape

what happened for an initial report.

Thirty-one of the individuals who reported to RVAP chose to file a report with the police.

A number of factors may influence the victim's decision not to report the rape, Miller said, but the most common reason is fear that no one will believe them.

"Many victims are intimidated into silence by their assailants," she said.

Rapists may tell their victims that they will deny that the rape occurred, retaliate against them or convince friends to corroborate the rapist's side of the story, Miller said.

"The thing of most concern right now is I'm just realizing how insidious and horrifying it is — is that the defendants are aware of the legal system and how difficult it is for a victim to report a rape," Miller said.

"By design they have decided what their stories are going to be. When the victim goes to someone to report, the defendant usually discredits the victim's story — and far too often, society buys it," Miller said.

The problem is compounded if the victim has been drinking, using drugs or knows her assailant. These factors may lead to self-blame or a deeper conviction that no one will believe them, Miller said.

Victims also fear sharing the experience with strangers such as police officers, said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

"Another part of the problem is that there is certain amount of embarrassment to talk to someone you don't know while he is in a uniform and writing down everything you say," Winkelhake said.

Following the initial report, the individual must then explain the rape in explicit detail to a detective in an interview which can last as long as two hours, according to Iowa City Police Detective Michael Brotherton.

"We try to be non-threatening and make her feel as comfortable as possible," Brotherton said. "We don't get into the nitty-gritty at first, but we need to know a lot of the sexual stuff."

At this point, the victim decides if she wants the police to investigate the rape.

If she does not, the report will be filed in case the victim later chooses to prosecute.

Iowa City police detectives investigated about 23 rape cases last year, Brotherton said.

Based on the amount and quality of evidence collected during the investigation and the wishes of the victim, the detective investigating and the Johnson County Attorney decide whether to proceed by charging the alleged rapists with sexual assault.

But even after filing the original charges, the case may not go to trial for various reasons, White said.

The victim may plead guilty to lesser charges or the case may be dismissed, he said.

Three individuals charged with sexually abusing an adult victim in 1989 went to trial in Johnson County, according to court records.

In order to find the defendant guilty of rape, the prosecutor must convince 12 members of a jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed a rape.

As members of society, jurors are likely to have the same misconceptions about rape as the general public, Miller said.

"We often see judges and juries who believe the myths about rape and defendants who are able to buffalo them," Miller said.

White also said that society's perception of rape can play a role in the outcome of a trial.

"Part of the essence of the offense itself comes from society's attitude toward a woman's right to say no," he said. "There is a great deal of disbelief that no matter what degree of undress you are in (or) what degree of consent there is — it just doesn't matter if the woman says no."

Most cases turn on the issue of consent — whether or not the victim agreed to have sexual intercourse with the defendant.

Consent is difficult to prove because the testimony of the victim and the defendant are often the only evidence, White said.

"It's one word against another, and the evidence is thin at best," White said.

If the victim knows their assailant, as in 77 percent of the cases reported to RVAP last year, juries are even less likely to believe that the rape was forced, White said.

"I really doubt that any man — whether the prosecutor or a person sitting on the jury — can fully understand the sexual abuse on the victim," he said.

Miller said she has seen several cases where the defendant was acquitted because victims willingly allowed the rapist to enter their home.

"There is some belief that if you open the door to someone and he rapes you, it's your fault," she said.

Another major reason for acquittals is lack of evidence to convince the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed a rape, White said.

"One of the most frustrating things we hear after a trial is, 'We thought he did it but the judge told us we had to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt,'" he said.

Although the statistical frequency of sexual abuse cases that go to trial is low, Johnson County prosecutes more cases than most counties, White said.

Miller added that as long as the public's awareness continues to increase, more and more cases will be brought to trial.

"Awareness surrounding sexual assault has — particularly acquaintance rape — increased remarkably in the last five years," Miller said. "Due to this fact, not only are more cases reported, but more charges are prosecuted and more and more are being convicted."

to overrun any republican parliament," said Algimantas Chekuolis, a Lithuanian who with his republic's declaration of independence now describes himself as a former member of the Soviet Congress, attending as an observer.

As Gorbachev opened the session, he called the Lithuanian action "alarming" without ever mentioning the word independence. He suggested that the government study what is happening and prepare a reaction.

Another member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo, Yegor Ligachev, said Moscow would not use force in Lithuania.

Progressive Moscow deputy Alexei Yablokov said legislators from Georgia, Moldavia, Azerbaijan, Estonia and Latvia are expected to boycott Tuesday's vote on the constitutional amendment, which could fail for lack of the required two-thirds majority. All five of those republics are possible candidates for following the Lithuanians into secession.

But throughout the day, deputies huddled with Gorbachev and each other seeking compromises.

Also on the agenda of the special session of Congress were constitutional amendments to end the Communist Party's monopoly on power and substitute a multiparty political system, and to allow individuals to own factories and lease land.

Two other vehicles started on fire, and the tanker driver was worried the blaze could spread to his gasoline cargo, Lauder said.

Lauder estimated he was traveling about 30 mph when his truck first collided with another vehicle.

North testifies on Poindexter's role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver North conceded Monday that he witnessed John Poindexter "tear in two" a politically embarrassing presidential document that approved U.S. involvement in a shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

Poindexter, President Reagan's national security adviser in 1986, is accused of concealing the U.S. role in the Hawks shipment on the same day he destroyed the document. It depicts the transaction with Iran as a straight arms-for-hostages deal.

"You were present when John Poindexter in his office . . . ripped the finding 'into shreds?' asked Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb. "Not the way you describe," North said.

"You . . . saw" Poindexter "tear up the original finding?" asked Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb.

"Tear it in two," replied North. "He threw it in a waste basket behind his desk or put it in a burn bag?" asked Webb.

"I think he just put it on his desk," North said.

The government says Poindexter destroyed the document hours after telling Congress he had known nothing of the November 1985 Hawks shipment until more than a month after it occurred. He also is accused of obstructing Congress and making false statements in connection with his comments to lawmakers.

"Yes, it was continuing with the North tried to avoid testifying about the destruction of the document by suggesting that he learned of it from Poindexter's congressional testimony.

But U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene directed North to answer questions about it, noting that the former White House aide had done so last year at his own trial.

"Your testimony at trial is the only credible testimony you have given on this subject," Greene told North.

North testified that Poindexter discussed a "cover story" that concealed details of a U.S.-Iran arms shipment the day before he was questioned about it by lawmakers.

He reluctantly conceded that his former boss saw the false chronology prepared by the White House to answer queries about the Iran-Contra affair.

The chronology prepared in November 1986 falsely said that the U.S. government was not involved in the sale a year earlier of the Hawk missiles.

A CIA document reflecting this "cover story" was discussed at a meeting in Poindexter's White House office on Nov. 20, 1986, that was attended by the late CIA Director William Casey and other top officials, North said.

"Admiral Poindexter was aware that was a false story?" prosecutor Dan Webb asked.

"Yes, it was continuing with the cover story" originally devised to conceal U.S. involvement in the shipment, North replied.

"But it was a false cover story?" Webb asked.

"All cover stories are false," North said.

Revealing the shipment would also have led to the disclosure of the presidential document authorizing the CIA to sell the Hawks to Iran.

North also testified that he received general instructions from Poindexter to withhold details of the covert operation to assist the Nicaraguan Contras after U.S. military aid was banned.

North said that while drafting the chronology in his office, he went along with a false description of the Hawk shipment. He said the description was devised by Robert McFarlane, who preceded Poindexter as national security adviser but continued to work in 1986 as a White House consultant.

"Who sent Mr. McFarlane to you?" Webb asked.

"If I recall correctly, he told me Admiral Poindexter had," replied North.

North was asked if the false chronology "went across the street to John Poindexter's office." The prosecution confronted him with his own testimony at his trial last year in which he said that it did.

"Apparently, that's what I said at my trial," North said.

Budget suggests higher taxes, 1-year Social Security freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said Monday that there's "room to talk" about a far-reaching budget plan by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., that calls for higher taxes and a one-year Social Security freeze.

However, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president's decision to consider the radical proposal by the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee doesn't mean he's abandoning his oft-stated opposition to new taxes or Social Security changes.

"We don't want to pour too much cold water on a plan we may want to swim around in for a while," Fitzwater said.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., called Rostenkowski's proposal a "good step" and said its across-the-board spending freeze "makes a great deal of sense."

"His proposal could be the wake-up call we've been waiting for," Dole said in a statement. "We'll see who answers it."

On Capitol Hill, Rostenkowski spokesman Jim Jaffe welcomed the plan's unexpectedly warm — and apparently orchestrated — reception from the administration and Dole.

"Let's do it," he said. Still, Rostenkowski's proposal, unveiled over the weekend, has generated little support from his own party.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., called Rostenkowski's plan "a very interesting suggestion," but questioned its chances of approval unless the White House supports it. "I don't see a way we can effectively pass tax legislation raising taxes without the approval of the president," Foley told a reporter. "That remains a problem."

Rostenkowski proposed chopping the federal deficit through a combination of spending cuts; an increase in the maximum income-tax rate from 28 percent to 33 percent; higher taxes on gasoline, liquor and cigarettes; and a one-year freeze in most federal spending programs including Social Security.

The goal is to reduce the annual budget deficit by 1994. If it does away with the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law and its graduated steps for balancing the budget.

"We think there's some room to talk," Fitzwater said. "It weaves a new pattern that needs to be considered at least."

In the past, the administration has been quick to denounce Democratic plans that advocated either tax increases or a change in the Social Security formula. Rostenkowski's plan would do both.

There has been speculation about a grand compromise between the White House and the Democratic-led Congress for reducing the budget deficit, one that would embrace tax increases as well as constraints in the growth of Social Security and other so-called entitlement programs.

Fitzwater would not characterize Rostenkowski's plan in such terms.

ative ways, we can help freshmen become more involved with intellectual concerns."

Lindberg said programs that come out of this initiative could include ones that build general education requirement courses around a more focused theme, develop new courses about specific contemporary issues or cultural studies of specific geographic regions, build on a department's interest in a new area of study within that field, or simply provide for students to meet together for "enrichment activities" in the residence halls.

"I think of the events in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. All students are probably interested in these events and have lots of discussions about it," he said. "But we have several specialists of Eastern European and Soviet studies in our faculty, and it would seem to be nice if students whose interests were there could talk with our specialists about such subjects."

According to Loewenberg's letter, the college is also looking for proposals which fulfill some of the following characteristics:

- enrich existing courses through such additional activities as extra discussion sections, speakers and films.

- provide a single group of students with a common set of courses in a single semester or throughout an academic year.

- provide class or seminar meetings in the residence halls.

- provide that students electing the same set of courses or course themes be housed together in a residence hall.

Furthermore, proposals may be designed for 25 to 300 students, but must be open to freshmen and be based on courses that are currently GER-fulfilling or are capable of being approved for general education credit. Proposals that can be ready for implementation during the 1990-91 academic year will receive preference.

This newest initiative is part of a continuing effort by the liberal arts college to enhance the intellectual experience of undergraduate UI students, Lindberg said. He cited the Undergraduate Scholar Assistants Program, which gives promising students an opportunity to work directly with faculty members, and the Unified Program, where a small group of students fulfill their GERs together through a specialized, humanities- or science-oriented curriculum that includes mainly small classes taught by senior faculty.

But these programs involve only a small number of students, and the college hopes the proposals that come out of this initiative can encompass greater numbers of student participants, he said.

Lindberg said, "We realize we cannot create a small-college environment, but by achieving some of these goals, we might be able to enhance the all-around environment for our incoming students."

According to Loewenberg's letter, the college expects to approve eight to 10 proposals and will provide funding for "planning and offering the proposed program one time."

Friday is the deadline for submission of proposals which will be evaluated by Loewenberg, the College of Liberal Arts associate deans and the Educational Policy Committee. Lindberg said the college hopes to determine by the first week in April which proposals will be approved for funding.

First Soviet troops leave Hungary

HAJMASKER, Hungary — Soviet troops boarded trains and headed for home Monday, the first to leave Hungary as part of an agreement to remove all Red Army soldiers from the country by June 30, 1991.

A military band played the Soviet and the Hungarian national anthems as the first contingent of 300 troops and 37 combat infantry vehicles pulled out. Moscow has 49,700 troops in Hungary.

The withdrawal began just two weeks after the Kremlin began bringing home troops from neighboring Czechoslovakia where a similar agreement was reached last month on the removal of all 73,500 Soviet soldiers there.

Moscow has committed itself to remove the last of its troops and equipment from both countries by June 30, 1991.

Teen shot dead while playing with gun

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A high school sophomore who would have celebrated his 16th birthday Monday died after being shot in the face by a 14-year-old friend as they were playing with guns, police said.

Chad MacDonald died at Baystate Medical Center on Sunday, a day after the shooting at his home in this Springfield suburb.

His parents said the boy had taken the loaded weapons — a 9mm semiautomatic pistol and a .357-caliber Magnum revolver — to his room without their permission because he had been frightened by an older boy.

West Springfield High School Principal George Bauman described Chad as "your everyday high-school student."

"He was an average student, who didn't stand out above the rest, but at the same time had not been in any difficulty," Bauman said Monday.

As an 8-year-old, Chad received a National Heroism Award from the Boy Scouts of America for summoning help for his mother when she suffered collapsed lungs.

The principal said counselors and nurses were being made available to distraught students. "We are trying to help the students and the family get through this crisis with as little scarring as possible," he said.

Police Capt. Thomas Burke declined to release the name of the 14-year-old charged, because of his age.

Collapse at landmark hotel kills one

NEW YORK — A concrete ceiling collapsed onto a food shop Monday at the landmark Ansonia Hotel, killing a woman and injuring at least 12 others, authorities said.

The Fire Department brought in dogs to help search for people who may have been trapped.

The collapse in the Croissant & Co. shop in the ground floor of the Upper West Side hotel on Broadway between 73rd and 74th streets occurred about 3:50 p.m.

A water leak above the shop apparently weakened the concrete ceiling and sent it crashing onto the patrons in the shop, according to Thomas Doyle, executive director of the Emergency Medical Services.

"We were drinking coffee. All of a sudden water started rushing above and the ceiling collapsed," according to one young woman who was interviewed outside.

"We felt the vibration. We thought the building was falling. First it was like a vibration, then glass breaking — and then a big boom," said Elvin Rodriguez, a clerk at a nearby bookstore.

When he went outside, Rodriguez said, a street vendor had already run and started pulling people out.

Five people were taken to hospitals, including four to St. Luke's-Roosevelt Medical Center, and 12 were treated at the scene, authorities said. Three of those taken to hospitals suffered head injuries.

Ex-prime minister in Grenada Election

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — Sir Eric Gairy, the eccentric former prime minister deposed in a leftist coup 11 years ago, is attempting a comeback in Grenada's second general election since the U.S.-led invasion of 1983.

Gairy, who dominated the tiny Caribbean island's politics for three decades before his ouster, faces competition from three moderates and one leftist in what could be a close vote Tuesday.

The election falls on the 11th anniversary of the leftist coup that ousted Gairy's authoritarian regime and brought the People's Revolutionary Government of the late Prime Minister Maurice Bishop to power.

An ideological rift within Bishop's government led to his assassination, along with 10 other people, on Oct. 19, 1983. Six days later, U.S. troops, accompanied by a small regional force, invaded the island and ousted a Marxist junta that had seized power.

Herbert Blaize, a staunch U.S. ally, won the first election after the invasion in 1984. He died in December at the age of 71.

Gairy, 68, is nearly blind with glaucoma and had said that he would not contest the election unless a "miracle" improved his sight.

But at a recent news conference, he declared that "a source which is greater than I" ordained that he lead Grenada once again despite his failing sight.

Airlines told to improve DC-10 flight safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced orders Monday that airlines modify all DC-10 jetliners so they can be controlled when hydraulic systems are damaged.

The tentative orders came eight months after a United DC-10-10, a variation of the DC-10 airplane, crashed in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 112 of the 295 people aboard. Investigation into the crash continues, but pilots said they lost hydraulic steering control after the plane's tail engine exploded.

The Federal Aviation Administration's proposed "airworthiness directive" follows changes recommended in the airliner by its manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas Corp.

"The change would preserve enough hydraulic fluid following damage to the system to enable the flight crew to safely fly and land the airplane," the FAA said.

After the order goes into effect, after several weeks for comment, airlines would have six months to make the modifications in DC-10-10s and a year for all other DC-10 models.

Investigators into the July 19 Iowa crash have said they believe flying debris from the explosive tail engine failure severed all three of the jetliner's independent hydraulic systems that control flight.

The FAA-imposed modification would involve installing devices in the hydraulic system that would keep fluid from leaking out in the event the lines in the tail section are cut.

With the change, the pilot would still lose control over the rudder, which turns the airliner, and the elevators, which control climb and descent. But other control surfaces, including the ailerons, which make it possible to keep the wings level, would remain operable, the FAA said.

If the separate system that controls the horizontal stabilizer trim was left intact, the crew also could control the angle of descent, the FAA said.

Pilots of the United plane said their only means of steering the aircraft and controlling descent was to selectively accelerate the remaining wing engines.

Why

typically not in a difference of sex impulse, but in a difference of inhibition and consideration for the personality of others," Jenkins said.

Dudley Allison, treatment manager of the Sex Offender Treatment Program in Mount Pleasant, Iowa, said that there were three common factors in the backgrounds of the inmates.

"They all seem to have had poor relationships with their same-sex parent, a lack of sexual knowledge, and low self-esteem."

Feelings of low self-worth in the sex offender are compensated through powerful and dominant behavior in sexual relations.

Societal factors may also influence the potential rapist.

Many experts believe that pornography is a socializing factor that tells men that women want and deserve to be sex objects.

"Men have been socialized to believe that women play hard to get," said John Stratton of the UI Sociology Department. "Sexual assaults deal with the way men view and interpret women's erotic interaction."

Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said magazines, books and films which portray violent sexual acts can increase the probability of an offense when they are viewed by a potential sex offender.

Alcohol use is another commonly cited factor. However, many experts addressing this issue have stated that the use of alcohol serves in reducing inhibitions, simply making it more likely that an offense will be committed by one who is already a potential offender.

Background and societal factors help to differentiate between potential sex offenders and law-abiding citizens, while motivations for offense help to classify offenders.

In addressing common traits among sex offenders, experts have classified rape into three main types.

■ Anger rape deals with the punishment of a victim as an act of revenge. This is dealt with in studies by Dr. A. Nicholas Groth, a sex offender specialist.

"The common theme appears to be one in which the offender felt that he had been wronged, hurt, put down or treated unjustly in some fashion by some individual, situation or event," Groth said in his book, Men Who Rape. "The intent is to hurt and degrade the victim. The weapon is sex, and the motive is revenge."

■ Power rape deals with the assertion of the offender's masculinity and heterosexuality.

"The intent of the power rapist is to assert his competency and validate his masculinity," Groth said. "Sexuality is the test, and the motive is to conquer."

The offender uses sex to compensate for insecurities and feelings of inadequacy, Groth said.

Usually there is no conscious intent on the part of the offender to hurt or degrade his victim. The aim is to have complete control over her so that she has no say in the matter, Groth said.

■ Sadistic rape deals with aspects of the other two types taken to an extreme.

The offense may be power or anger motivated, but a sadistic rape is more ritualistic and torturous, and the victim encounters more physical abuse.

Most sex offenses at the UI tend to incorporate elements of all three motivations, according to Miller.

Haiti appoints new president

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Deposed ruler Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril flew to exile in Florida on Monday and the army indicated he would be replaced by the first woman president in Haiti's troubled 186-year history.

In a ceremony at army headquarters carried on Haitian state television, opposition leaders gave the Army High Command a letter nominating Supreme Court Justice Ertha Pascal-Trouillot, 46, as provisional president of the Western Hemisphere's poorest country.

Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, the army chief of staff to whom Avril handed control after resigning Saturday, said he hoped to turn over power by Tuesday "so that the people can have a government of their choice."

"I am very happy that the Haitian people with their army were able to achieve this," said Abraham, who appeared on a second-floor balcony of army headquarters with opposition leaders. He did not mention Pascal-Trouillot by name, but clearly indicated the army accepted her nomination.

Wild cheers broke out from the crowd below, and it chanted "Liberty! Liberty!"

Unity Assembly, the opposition coalition that put forward Pascal-Trouillot's name, announced on radio that she would be inaugurated at the Palace of Justice at 10 a.m. today.

The coalition also said a general strike it called for Monday before Avril left this impoverished Caribbean country of 5.1 million residents would end at midnight.

The provisional government is to prepare Haiti, which shares the island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic, for national elections.

Avril's departure to Homestead Air Force Base south of Miami aboard a U.S. Air Force transport plane followed a week of political turmoil that left at least 24 people dead and scores injured. His military government ruled Haiti — often harshly — for 18 months.

Thousands of people milled about this capital city of one million, which had been deserted before Avril's departure because of the violence.

Youths danced to meringue music featuring revolutionary themes such as "The General's Gone" and "Uproot the Killers." The mood of the city, however, appeared to be one of disbelief rather than jubilation.

Radio stations reported instances of youths building flaming barricades and pillaging a government food warehouse, but the incidents were far from the bloody clashes of the previous seven days.

On Monday, the Unity Assembly, an opposition coalition instrumental in Avril's downfall, submitted its choice of Pascal-Trouillot — the only woman on the 12-member Supreme Court — to the Army High Command. Unity members had said Abraham agreed to accept whomever they chose as president.

The interim president is to govern along with a 19-member advisory council until elections are held, possibly in three to six months.

The army's first choice had been Supreme Court Chief Justice Gilbert Austin, an Avril appointee, but the Unity Assembly rejected him, saying he was too closely tied to the deposed regime.

Soviet Union, Lithuania deadlocked

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet leaders pledged Monday not to use force to crush Lithuania's newly reclaimed independence, and the Baltic republic's leaders raised the ante for talks by demanding Kremlin compensation for economic ruin and political repression.

Neither side gave any ground a day after Lithuania's legislature formally declared a restoration of the independence lost in 1940 to Stalin's army.

But they set the tone for a long dispute over Lithuania's drive to turn a political declaration into reality that must encompass questions of territory, compensation, the status of thousands of Soviet soldiers, ownership of factories and land, and control of the police and KGB.

Little had changed in Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital, the day after Sunday's vote, and jubilation was tempered with recognition that hard work was ahead.

"Hope and joy must dissolve into determination to work for Lithuania," the republic's new president, Vytautas Landsbergis, told the Supreme Council legislature Monday. "We must work very hard."

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said Lithuanian legislators declared that their sons no longer need serve in the Red Army. They appealed to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to ensure the welfare of Lithuanian soldiers until negotiations start mustering them out. In the draft of a separate appeal, they asked Moscow not to conduct any military maneuvers with the thousands of soldiers still on Lithuanian soil.

Lithuanians said they expected a partial economic blockade of the Soviet side, which supplies all of the fuel to the Baltic republic of 3.7 million people.

Gorbachev told the Congress of People's Deputies, the country's parliament meeting in Moscow, that he found Lithuania's position worrisome.

Ortega promises unconditionally to relinquish power to Chamorro

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega promised Vice President Dan Quayle Monday he will peacefully relinquish power April 25, without conditions, said U.S. officials traveling with Quayle.

Ortega also assured the vice president that all cabinet ministers, including the defense minister, "will be appointed by and report to Violeta Chamorro," the U.S.-backed candidate who beat Ortega in the February 25 election, one official quoted Quayle as saying.

The two met over a 1½-hour lunch hosted by newly inaugurated Chilean President Patricio Aylwin in the presidential palace after arranging in two brief earlier chats to talk further.

Ortega also asked that the Bush administration immediately lift the economic sanctions imposed by the United States during his Sandinista regime, said the officials, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

Quayle assured him the administration already was actively considering the same request made by Chamorro, the officials said.

You've been looking forward to Spring Break since the first day of the term! You're ready to head for the fun and sun in Florida! Now that it's here, it's time to make the choice. Are you going to play safe, drive safe and be safe?

Think about it:

- You don't have to be "drunk" to be impaired. Even one or two drinks can affect your driving skills.
- Drinking, drugs and driving don't mix.
- Take your turn be a designated driver and get everyone home safely.
- Don't let your friends drive if they are impaired. It's one of the fastest ways to end a friendship.
- Wear your seat belt. It's your best protection against an impaired driver and it just makes sense.

Add a little Cruise Control to your Spring Break plans and save lives - yours and your friends'.

'New Covenant' home to the Bakker crusade

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker is back in action, preaching Sunday sermons and keeping the faith for her jailed husband at a new home for their New Covenant Church, in an industrial park.

The wife of former television evangelist Jim Bakker said still-faithful former supporters of their now-defunct PTL ministry are financing the newest church in a former office building. Bakker is serving a 45-year federal prison sentence for defrauding followers.

Three months ago, a dispute over back rent forced the church out of a shopping plaza and into a series of temporary quarters. Church officials announced last week that they are buying the present building.

Reporters were not welcomed at Sunday's service, but Tammy Bakker told them part of her sermon concerned the poor.

"Love has no nose," Tammy Bakker said, because poor people "sometimes don't smell too good, so love can have no nose."

UI presents colorful songs of Romania

Jennifer Weglarz
The Daily Iowan

When Paula Boire describes the music of Romanian composer Felicia Donceanu, she talks in terms of colors. "Her music has all the characteristics of other Romanian music," explains Boire, a professor of music at the UI, "but her harmonic language is richer. There are colors in it — each piece is very different from the last one. There's a soul to her music; it moves you deeply when you hear it."

Tomorrow night at 8, soprano Boire will sing works by Donceanu in Clapp Recital Hall. The recital is free and open to the public. Also performing in the recital are Carole Thomas, piano and harpsichord; Maurita Murphy Mead, clarinet; Mark Weiger, oboe; Britta Shafer, harp; Richard Stratton, guitar; Betty Bang Mather, flute; and Charles Wendt, cello.

Donceanu is considered by her colleagues in Romania to be the greatest living composer of Romanian art song. "There's a soul to her music. It moves you deeply when you hear it," says Boire. "For myself, I have to find music I can relate to emotionally. If it doesn't mean something to me, I can't sell it to an audience. It's just an intellectual thing, devoid of soul."

As compared to German or French art song, Romanian art song draws even more from national heritage, expressing emotions more deeply and visually. Boire says, "It comes deeply out of the the people, out of the peasant culture, more so than in the German or French."

The songs, says Boire, have a "rhythmic vitality" that comes from folk music. "Often the piano will suggest folk instruments that aren't even directly mentioned in the poem." Meters are also varied and irregular, changing every other measure. In some songs, the folk influence is more overt through the use of various instruments or intimated in the line of the music. "If you were to hear Romanian art song," says Boire, "you'd know immediately you were not hearing a German Lied."

In Romanian art song there are few love songs; but the variety of themes running through Romanian art song include some nature poems and references to folk traditions, clothing, houses and porches, which signify intimacy to a Romanian. "The poetry is of a high calibre generally, which is a little unusual," says Boire. "A lot of German art songs are great, (but) those poets are remembered often just because Schubert set them to music."

Boire chose Romanian art song as her area of publication, and then proceeded to teach herself Romanian in January of 1987. She received a research grant to study in Romania in the spring of 1988. "I didn't realize I was going to love it as much as I do."

While in Romania she was exposed to Donceanu's music, which, unlike much music, is widely published in that country. "Widely," however, is a relative term; at the time Boire visited Romania, after anything was printed the plates were destroyed. There was no opportunity for a second imprint. Boire relates that on her first trip to Romania, she bought every piece of music she could get her hands on. When she returned a year later, not a single new piece of vocal music had been published — and the music she had previously purchased was sold out.

By an arrangement with the government, Boire was able to meet Donceanu (such meetings are illegal without permission) and other Romanian composers. "They were very generous with their time, answering my questions, giving me that flavor of the music." Donceanu herself was excited that Boire planned a recital of her music.

The Daily Iowan/Claire Thomas
Paula Boire

"In looking at their music I met them, I felt that I knew them before I played their music," explained Boire. "Their personalities are so much in their music that you really know the composer as a person through their music" much more than composers of other nationalities.

"Urare" was written for Boire's birthday by Donceanu. Boire explains that with "very simple musical means" the song wishes its recipient good luck and happiness every day, not just on days of celebration. In this piece, Boire leaves the stage playing the torc, a Romanian spindle with bells on the end.

According to Boire, "Ponti Euxini Clepydra," based on fragments of Latin poems by the Roman poet

Ovid, has never been performed to the composer's instructions, which include gestures and percussion playing by the various performers. Boire herself kneels on the floor while playing a drum and gesturing; later in the piece, she sings into the piano to pick up the partials.

The inspiration for "Watercolor Sketches" is the Romanian painting style called lavinu — a picture painted in tones of grey and black with a single splash of one other color. Donceanu specified that Boire wear a gown painted in this style for the performance.

Boire is especially excited to perform the piece "Cintind cu Ienachita Vacarescu," based on the poetry of Romanian literary figure Vacarescu. "The colors are so different. It's supposed to suggest a much earlier era." The first movement is slightly melancholy, with more text repetition than is normal in Romanian art song. "I play chains in that one," adds Boire.

The second movement is even sadder, while the third is "pretty cheerful" — but it is the final movement, "Testament," that caps the piece. Combined with a simple text are "a lot of vowel sounds" and "cries" found in folk music, which Boire imitates. In his poem, Vacarescu bequeathed to the Romanian people the language and the honor of the country.

"It's so emotional — it captures the suffering of the Roman people throughout the centuries. It captures their dignity, too. It's a very powerful piece."

Boire plans to present another cycle of Donceanu's works in a recital this fall. Her senior voice students have shown interest in also performing Romanian pieces in upcoming recitals.

"I hope this will stimulate interest in the Romanian culture and the Romanian people," she adds.

Kodo, Japan's community of athletic percussionists, returns to Hancher Auditorium at 8 tonight. Susumu Yoshida.

'Partridge Family' star, Bonaduce, arrested for crack

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Danny Bonaduce, who played the red-headed, wise-cracking Danny on television's "Partridge Family," has been arrested on a charge of buying crack in a housing project, police said Saturday.

Bonaduce, 30, a disc jockey at WEGX-FM in Philadelphia since late 1988, was arrested early Friday by Daytona Beach police and spent nearly 12 hours in jail before posting $5,000 bond, dispatcher Claire Smith said.

Smith said Bonaduce was observed by a member of the city's street crime unit allegedly purchasing several crystals of crack, a smokeable form of cocaine. She didn't know when Bonaduce was scheduled to appear in court.

Bonaduce played teen-ager Danny Partridge on the ABC series that ran from 1970 to 1974. The show featured Shirley Jones as the head of a family of six children who become a rock 'n' roll band. Telephone calls late Saturday to WEGX went unanswered.

Lost indeed

Corey Feldman, actor in such films as "The Goonies," "The Lost Boys," "Dream a Little Dream," co-starring his friend Corey Haim, and "The Bad News" TV series, was arrested Friday for alleged heroin possession after several balloons containing the drug were found in his car.

Martial Singher, French opera baritone, dies

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Martial Singher, a French baritone whose operatic career was cut short by a heart disorder, died at age 85 on Friday.

Born in the southwest of France, Singher joined the Paris Opera in 1930, where he performed for 10 years. Singher headed to the United States after Paris fell to the Nazis.

From his Metropolitan Opera debut in "The Tales of Hoffman," in 1943, Singher was hailed for his elegant and precise style. A heart disorder ended his career at the Met in 1959 after performances in 200 operas there.

Singher settled in Santa Barbara in 1962 to head the vocal department at the Music Academy of the West. He retired in 1981.

Mack dropped from ASU program

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Sam Mack, whose scrapes with the law in Iowa followed him here, has been dropped from the Arizona State basketball program.

"I've said before that this institution will not tolerate anti-social behavior, and I will adhere to that policy," Athletic Director Charles Harris said Monday.

He and Coach Bill Frieder declined to comment on the reasons for Mack's dismissal. Frieder said it related to Mack's "performance outside the program."

Mack, a 6-foot-6 forward, started 14 of 29 games for Iowa State during his 1988-89 sophomore year, averaging 11.8 points and 6.1 rebounds per contest.

He was charged with robbery and kidnapping in the March 30, 1989, holdup of a fast-food restaurant in Ames, Iowa, but was acquitted. Levin White, an Iowa State football player, pleaded guilty to robbery in the same incident and is serving a 25-year prison sentence.

Mack was shot twice by police during the robbery, but a jury believed his defense that he had been coerced into participating.

Mack enrolled at Arizona State last fall and had been sitting out his transfer year. During his first semester, a coed accused Mack of sexual harassment, but police declined to file charges after an investigation.

Arizona State finished 15-15 in Frieder's first year at the helm and on Sunday accepted a bid to play in the National Invitation Tournament.

Spartans' Smith honored

CHICAGO (AP) — Steve Smith of Michigan State's champions has been named Big Ten Player of the Week for the second successive week by the Associated Press.

Smith, a 6-6 junior from Detroit, scored 23 points in an 84-68 victory at Northwestern and closed the regular season with 22 points in a 72-70 triumph over Purdue that clinched the conference title.

Thundering Herd quieted

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — The NCAA on Monday placed Marshall University's men's basketball team on two years' probation and barred it from postseason play next year, but said the school avoided stiffer penalties by turning itself in.

The university reported 10 violations of the NCAA a year ago after an in-house investigation revealed that gifts were given to recruits and players, and free housing and other benefits provided.

"We did what we thought best for the university by self-reporting," Marshall Athletic Director Lee Moon said.

In addition to self-reporting, Marshall forced Coach Rick Huckabay to resign and imposed its own penalties on the basketball program. As a result, the NCAA Infractions Committee waived several penalties, including prohibiting any expense-paid visits for recruits and prohibiting any additional scholarships for the next two years.

Marshall can host only 15 expense-paid visits for recruits, instead of the usual 18, during each of the next two years, and the school also will give up one scholarship for next season and two scholarships for the 1991-92 season. Those two penalties were self-imposed by the school.

Law

earned trips to post-season play, as well as claimed the Big Ten championship.

A leisure studies major, Law is interested in commercial and industrial corporate fitness, and is already taking steps toward a career in that profession. She currently has an internship with Mercy Hospital as part of their traveling blood pressure and cholesterol screening team.

"I wanted more experience. I wanted something that would look better on a resume, and to help people," Law said. "I've learned so much and have been doing so many things. I'm supposed to keep a weekly journal, but it's going to be a novel."

Law spends her days doing blood-pressure checks on elderly people, explaining to them what the results mean and giving them literature to read on health care. She also boosts their egos with seemingly innocent questions about their age. ("Are you over 40?" she asked of one white-haired woman. "Really? Well, you know, I had to ask. I couldn't be sure.")

Tomorrow, corporate fitness. Today, the NCAA tournament, and her last chance to be a part of a championship team.

And this year could be the year for Law and her teammates, especially with the unique chemistry of Iowa's perimeter team, considered to be one of the nation's best. Joining Law in the quick guard court is 5-3 junior Stephanie Schueler; "salt and pepper," they are called.

But one mustn't forget "sugar," Law chuckles, referring to Price, the Hawkeyes' leading scorer and the third member of the perimeter trio. The 5-9 senior is one of Law's best friends, and their timing and communication when they play together reflects their years of teamwork.

"We're very much alike," Law says. "We're hard working individuals who have great work ethics, and we love to run. We love to apply pressure defense."

"Most importantly, we just don't take no for an answer. We're just determined more than anything. When two or three people have the same similarities, they tend to thrive off each other."

Raiders

"What it means is that (we) will work to find another team and another sport to bring to Sacramento," Rudin said, noting that plans for a stadium are proceeding. "Maybe there's a baseball team that we can steal away from another city."

Oakland's offer includes a loan package totaling $121 million to be made to the team, consisting of $53.5 million to renovate the Oakland Coliseum and the rest a "loan" Davis does not have to repay.

Davis also would be guaranteed ticket revenues of at least $29 million a year for the life of the 15-year lease. He would receive the basic $30 ticket price from at least 57,000 seats, with the city and county taking the premium payments above that for certain categories of seats.

He also would keep all television money, currently $32 million a year.

The cross-bay San Francisco 49ers, two-time defending Super Bowl champions, have set a $2.5 million to $3 million price tag for their blessing on the Raiders' return to the Bay area. The team estimates that sum as its legal costs stemming from Davis' suit against the NFL involving the earlier move.

"It would be nice if he came back to Oakland in our division so we could take BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) to our respective home games," 49ers owner Edward J. DeBartolo Jr. said in Orlando.

Tom Flores, former coach of the Raiders in both Oakland and Los Angeles and now general manager of the Seattle Seahawks, said the Oakland Coliseum — to be renovated under the new package — always was a tough place for opposing teams to play.

A cacophonous crowd clad in silver and black greeted the Raiders on their return for an exhibition game last August, showing that fans were eager to rekindle their love affair with the team.

"It's a tough decision for Al," Flores said. "In fact they're going home after they've been away for awhile."

are any indicator, then it looks like we may very well have a sellout on our hands," said Iowa athletic director Dr. Christine Grant. "I would encourage anyone wishing to attend the second round game to purchase tickets now, because I don't know if we'll have any left by Saturday."

Iowa will play in its fifth consecutive NCAA tournament this weekend. The Hawkeyes were awarded a first round bye, and will meet the Vanderbilt/Rutgers winner in a second round game Saturday, March 17, at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The winner of that contest advances to the NCAA Midwest Regional, March 22-24 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The University of Iowa recorded the first-ever pre-game sellout of a women's basketball game in 1988, when the Iowa-Ohio State game sold out more than 24 hours before tip-off.

The Hawkeyes also own the attendance record for an NCAA tournament second round game. That mark, 11,336, was set against Stephen F. Austin on March 20, 1988.

"I think it's terrific that the NCAA second round attendance mark belongs to Iowa," said Grant. "But I think we can do one better. I think we can sell out Carver-Hawkeye Arena. That is my goal."

Tickets are available at the Iowa athletic ticket office from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday-Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday. Prices are $2 for students and children and $5 for nonstudents.

Tickets can also be ordered through the UI box office by calling 1-800-346-4401. An additional handling fee will be assessed to each phone order.

Mourners pay tribute to Gathers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — More than 1,200 people paid last respects Monday to Hank Gathers, the Loyola Marymount basketball star who collapsed and died nine days ago after making a slam dunk.

"Hank fell doing what he loved to do, what he did best," said Rep. William Gray, a clergyman who represents the north Philadelphia neighborhood where the Gathers family lives.

"If you have to go, there is no better way to go than doing what you do best. Now he's in God's hall of fame."

It was one of many eulogies during the 2½-hour service at Emmanuel Institutional Baptist Church. Gathers' college coach, teammates, friends and brother all spoke of his passion for basketball and life.

"He loved life, he loved himself, he loved children, but more than anything else he loved his son and family," Derrick Gathers said of his late brother, who had a 6-year-old son. "In every endeavor he always gave 200 percent. And we know right now, he is giving 200 percent."

Reading his remarks slowly and tearfully, Derrick added, "Not only did he master the game of basketball, he mastered the game of love."

Gathers, who led the nation in scoring and rebounding last season, died March 4 after collapsing

Members of the Loyola-Marymount basketball team carry the casket of former teammate Hank Gathers Monday from a service in Philadelphia.

Gathers died 10 days ago after collapsing during a conference tournament game weeks after experiencing similar problems in a league contest.

during a game in Los Angeles. He had been diagnosed as having an irregular heartbeat and was under orders to take medication.

Loyola Marymount coach Paul Westhead, his voice choking with emotion as he brushed aside tears, called Gathers "the best player I ever had, or ever will have."

The bronze casket remained open before the altar in the second-floor sanctuary of the Gothic-style church, where Hank's mother, Lucille, is a member. Before the "Funeral Service of Triumph" began, about 1,000 mourners viewed the body.

March Madness Little guys happy for NCAA exposure

(AP) — Arkansas-Little Rock, Boston University, Murray State and Towson State have a lot in common entering the NCAA tournament. All four get to play a No. 1 seed Thursday night.

"I think we'll get a lot of publicity out of it," said Towson State coach Terry Truax, whose Tigers play No. 1 Oklahoma at Austin, Texas. "The game will be on television for sure."

In other games involving No. 1 seeds, UALR plays UNLV at Salt Lake City, Murray State takes on Michigan State at Knoxville, Tenn., and Boston University faces Connecticut at Hartford, Conn.

"We'll have to pack our slingshot for this one," said Murray State coach Steve Newton.

And that probably won't help. Since the field was expanded to 64 teams in 1985, no 16th seed has beaten the No. 1 seed.

Teams have come close, though. Last year, two bottom seeds — Princeton and East Tennessee State — almost pulled the upsets of the tournament. But Georgetown held off Princeton by a point and Oklahoma edged East Tennessee by a point.

Towson State may need some publicity judging from the reaction of Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs and his players. They had no idea who they were playing when the pairings were announced Sunday.

"Tulsa, yeah, we played them; they're a physical team," Oklahoma forward Jackie Jones said before learning the Sooners' opponent was Towson State. "Oh, no, I've never heard of them."

Tubbs asked: "What conference are they in?" Boston University and Connecticut, however, know each other very well.

Three years ago, the Huskies arrived two hours late for a game with BU when their team bus collided with a car on the Massachusetts Turnpike and the team had to wait for a new bus. The game was not postponed, the Huskies were given seven minutes to warm up and the Terriers won 80-71.

Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun, who argued that night with BU coach Mike Jarvis over whether the game should go on, vowed afterward never to go back to BU.

Before they arrived at their present schools, Jarvis was an assistant under Calhoun for a year at Northeastern. BU assistant coach Karl Hobbs is a one-time UConn star.

"Jim Calhoun is one of the finest coaches in America," Jarvis said. "I coached with him for a year. I taught him all he knew."

Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said he knew nothing about Murray State, but said that could be a bonus for the Spartans.

"They'll have a better idea of what we do, but we do a lot of things that clubs have a tough time defending," Heathcote said. "We'll have some special plays that hopefully will get us some easy baskets."

The Racers earned their second trip in three years to the tournament by winning the Ohio Valley Conference tournament. The Racers (21-8) were picked in the preseason to finish fifth in the OVC, but won their third straight regular-season championship.

"We've been a team that has overachieved. We've had outstanding chemistry in our rebuilding year," Newton said. "It's been a magic carpet ride. I feel like this team's had a lot of heart."

Aggies: Don't get caught in media hype

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State has had a great season, but the Aggies may be cast as the bad guys in their opening-round NCAA tournament game against Loyola Marymount.

Loyola is still grieving over the death of star Hank Gathers, who died March 4 after collapsing during a game in Los Angeles.

"We can't think about that," New Mexico State guard Keith Hill said Monday. "We just have to come out and play our game."

The Aggies (26-4) took Monday off to rest, while Loyola Marymount was in Philadelphia for Gathers' funeral.

Loyola (23-5) considered skipping the NCAA tournament because of Gathers' death, but the Lions finally decided to play and dedicate the season to their late star.

"Hank's death was a tremendous loss. We felt as bad as anyone about it," New Mexico State coach Neil McCarthy said. "But we don't want to get involved in that kind of media hype. We just have to go out and play good basketball."

The Aggies voted Sunday to wear black patches on their uniforms in memory of Gathers. But Hill said he doesn't believe Loyola will have an emotional edge because of Gathers' death.

"We're going to be really pumped up, too," he said. "This is my first NCAA game and I'm really excited."

McCarthy said he's not concerned that Loyola will be playing close to home in Long Beach Arena, where the Aggies have lost two of three games this season.

"I think it will be an advantage because we already played two times there in the past week," he said.

The Aggies, picked to finish fifth or lower this season in the Big West, were one of the nation's surprise teams.

New Mexico State finished third in the 1970 NCAA tournament, losing to UCLA in the semifinals. The Aggies have made only two NCAA appearances since then — 1975 and 1979 — and lost in the first round both times.

Law makes most of career at Iowa

Rita Heimes
 The Daily Iowan

Jollette Law remembers the day during her senior year in high school when assistant women's basketball coach Marianna Freeman called her on the phone from Iowa.

"Iowa?" Law recalls asking herself. "I didn't know anything about Iowa, except that it was on the map. I figured I'd better do some research."

Her research included a long talk with Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer, who invited the Florence, S.C., native to visit the campus and meet with her and the team.

Although Law's first trip to Iowa City was on "the coldest day in Iowa history," she said everything else impressed her.

"Twenty thousand fans?" Law exclaimed in reaction to the Hawkeyes' record-breaking attendance figure. "Look at their academics. And their athletic program, they're one of the top 10 in the nation."

"Iowa? I didn't know anything about Iowa, except that it was on the map. I figured I'd better do some research."

Jollette Law
 Iowa basketball player

Since she made the choice four years ago to come to Iowa, Law has been making some impressions of her own.

A 5-foot-4 guard, Law has become a key player for the Hawkeyes as a scorer, rebounder, and especially as a team leader. Her average of 14.8 points and 4.1 rebounds per game are the second best on the team.

Law's 19-point performance in Iowa's 85-51 victory over Illinois earlier this season lifted her to the ranks of the 1000-point club shared by just ten other players in Iowa history, and Monday she was selected to the all-Big Ten first team, along with Iowa forward Franthea Price.

It is her style of play that attracts the fans, and her character which keeps them coming back.

Law possesses speed to overcome her height disadvantage which, when coupled with her precision passing and characteristic hustle, make her one of Iowa's leaders on the court.

Her infectious grin, though, and her friendly attitude have earned her more points with fans and teammates than any slick pass or scooping layup ever could.

"They say I'm the comedian of the bunch," Law says. "I love to make them laugh."

But Law has ambitions beyond the basketball season, which will end for her sometime during the NCAA tournament beginning this weekend. In each of her four years at Iowa, the Hawkeyes have

Secret love for the holy donut

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

DETROIT — Interstate 94 winds through the heart of southern Michigan, past Jackson, through Ann Arbor and nestles into the stomach of this automotive capitol that shares the Detroit River with Canada.

There's no mistake that this part of the country is sports crazy; a slice of the population that's fevered over any way a team can shoot, pass or hit a ball.

But it doesn't end on the grass floor of Tiger Stadium or in the hollow insides of the Pontiac Silverdome. Temperatures also rise over a piece of hardened rubber that size of a donut.

Just west, the campuses of Michigan and Michigan State knock the morsel around the ice, and this night, they'd do it in the Motor City.

Sports View

College hockey, which isn't a Big Ten sport, has a cult following one state north of where Hoosiers clank deflated basketballs off warped backboards on dirt courts.

Saturday night in Joe Louis Arena, the No. 1 Spartans matched up against the No. 12 Wolverines. One of the most revered rivalries in college sports.

The rivalry is on the level of Auburn and Clemson on the gridiron or North Carolina in the gym with North Carolina State. But hockey is a local rivalry, enjoyed solely by those who live within earshot of Michigan's crackling spring ice.

Saturday it was time to skate for bragging rights. Chants of "Go green, go white" echo through the arena from the Spartan faithful as Michigan partisan sang "The Victors" enough to make John Phillip Sousa nauseous.

Iowa is a state bankrupt of professional sports and far too short good ways to bang heads and name calling going. In Michigan hockey helps fill a void.

This state doesn't know what out of season means.

And gliding on ice doesn't necessarily carry the grace and mystique of figure skating. It can deliver a punishing check to the plexiglass, sending players flying, and fans to the beer stand.

The long-time fans stick out like a sore thumb. Jersey, check. Sitting on edge of seat, check. Cursing at children who obstruct vision in aisle, check. Tossing a kitchen sieve out onto the ice at a bad goalie, check. Food and beer, check.

A veteran's patronage to the sport can be measured in a number of ways, but none better than this: Flimsy two-hand-demanding beer containers stacked on top of each other. It's like the rings on a tree.

By the third period, a seasoned spectator will have three or four cups stacked with the top one full of suds, frothing onto the person in the seat in front of them when the fan leaps to his feet every couple of seconds.

With Iowa's unquenchable thirst for college sports, it's rather amazing that the donut hasn't been blasted over on this side of the Mississippi River.

It leaves a first-timer asking a question. Is this heaven? No, it's hockey.

Price is right for women's NCAA tickets

Rita Heimes
 The Daily Iowan

Women's basketball fans now have two more good reasons to rush for tickets to Iowa's NCAA second-round game. First, Iowa officials say the tickets are selling fast, and second, to see senior Franthea Price, the Big Ten Player of the Year.

A 5-foot-9 forward from River Rouge, Mich., Price was selected for the honor Monday by the league's coaches, and is the second Iowa player to be tabbed conference player of the year. All-American Michelle Edwards received the honor in 1988.

Price leads the Big Ten in scoring with a 19.8 points per game average. She is second in free-throw percentage (.849) and steals (2.8 per game), and ranks third in rebounding (7.7) and three point shots (.383).

"I think I deserve it, sure," Price said of the award. "I'm also grateful that they bestowed the honor upon me. I haven't really thought about it because right now I'm still thinking about team goals and playing well in the (NCAA) tournament."

Price was also the only unanimous choice.

Davis sees $$$; Raiders heading to Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Silver and Black are back — almost.

Al Davis did his part Monday, breaking a long silence on his plans for the Los Angeles Raiders by accepting Oakland's proposed 15-year, $602 million offer for the NFL team minutes before the expiration of the noon deadline.

"The greatness of the Raiders started in Oakland," said the team's managing general partner, who moved the team south in a stadium dispute following the 1981 season. "That's where we made history."

That left the move up to the City Council and Alameda County supervisors, and supervisors chairman Don Perata called their required approval "a done deal."

Separate votes of the two public bodies were tentatively scheduled for Monday night following a hearing, but a postponement was possible because of lengthy testimony.

Davis, dressed in white rather than his usual Raiders' black, appeared almost relieved as he announced his decision at the NFL owners' meeting in Orlando, Fla. He said he intends to honor the Raiders' lease extending through the 1991 season at the Los Angeles Coliseum, but left open the possibility he might seek a settlement to come north earlier.

"I just want to get the Raiders settled," he said. "I regret that all this (move controversy) has affected the team. I regret that all this has affected my life and the lives of a lot of people."

Davis' announcement, which followed more than a year of speculation and rumors, was cause for celebration among local Raider rooters. Fans whooped it up in a city suffering from a high crime rate, troubled schools and the earthquake that caused billions in damage and killed 44 people here last October.

"This is an eventful day in history for this city," said Mayor Lionel Wilson, who donned a new silver-and-black Oakland Raiders jacket at a press conference.

"It's been a long drought," Wilson said. "Now Oakland will become the sports capital of the world."

Perata and supervisor Charlie Santana smiled and held up T-shirts reading "The Silver and Black are Back." Those colors also were the order of the day at a popular sports bar in nearby San Leandro, where live televised coverage of the announcement drew wildly enthusiastic cheers and high fives.

"It's beautiful," said customer Nick Huertas of Hayward as "The Boys Are Back In Town" blared on the jukebox. "I've always been a Raider fan right from the start. This is where they belong."

The Raiders' return would mark the first time a major sports franchise has come back to a city it left.

Among the losers Monday were Los Angeles, Sacramento and Irwindale, all unsuccessful suitors for the team's future home. LA Coliseum officials spoke with Davis 15 minutes before the announcement but said they didn't have the money to beat out Oakland.

"I wish the Raiders the best of luck," said Richard Riordan, former president of the Coliseum Commission. "We're proceeding immediately to try to obtain another NFL team, and to have the Coliseum renovated by the private operators."

Sacramento Mayor Anne Rudin said Oakland made "a heck of a deal."

Baseball talks have hit wall; delay of opening day likely

NEW YORK (AP) — Opening day wasn't postponed on Monday, but baseball negotiators didn't even meet on what they said was the last day spring training could start without delaying the regular season.

Instead, the union filed a request with arbitrator George Nicolau that owners pay $51.6 million in what the union says are the minimum damages from the first two collusion cases.

The sides decided last month that players needed at least three weeks of training before opening day, scheduled for April 2. Although no agreement has been reached, Commissioner Fay Vincent and the American and National Leagues did not make any announcements. "We're working on that," Vincent said. "I'm trying to figure out what the process is. We're going to be meeting on 4/20."

Vincent said it was "highly unlikely" that opening games would be played April 2, and owners negotiator Chuck O'Connor said of a postponement: "It's not a foregone conclusion, but it's darn close to it."

Vincent said he will discuss the matter Tuesday with AL president Bobby Brown and NL president Bill White. O'Connor said he thought games would not be canceled day by day.

"I think it'll be either by week or by series or some component of time," O'Connor said.
