Drought in check thanks to moisture

Climatologist says soil in good shape

FRED MUNSEY (AP) — Drought victims in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois have been given some much-needed relief as the summer season winds down.

Rainfall in recent weeks has helped to replenish reservoirs and irrigation wells, and has improved soil moisture levels, according to climatologist Harry Atkins of the National Weather Service in Des Moines.

"It's been a relief for many of the farmers and ranchers who have been struggling with the dry conditions," Atkins said. "The continuous rainfall has really helped to increase the moisture levels in the soil, which is crucial for crop growth and livestock feed." "

Humbled! Barry returns to D.C. with no plans to resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry returned to the nation's capital after spending a week in prison, defiantly telling a federal judge that he will not seek re-election.

"I don't want to continue to be the mayor of this city," Barry told Judge Abner J. Siler of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. "I don't want to be a part of this city's operation. I want to continue to be a part of the community of this city." "

Gorbachev may face elections

Soviets approve multiparty system

MOSCOW (AP) — The Congress of People's Deputies on Tuesday approved Mikhail Gorbachev's proposal for a multiparty political system, allowing the leader to run for a second term.

"I'm sure that the Congress would like to see a multiparty system," said Gorbachev, who is also the president of the Soviet Union. "The people of the Soviet Union want to be able to choose their leaders, and I believe that a multiparty system is the best way to achieve that." "

Speaker discusses N. Ireland's future
Source of the problem: Rule

John Czuczewski
The Daily Iowan

Christopher McCrudden believes the Irish movement for self-determina tion in Northern Ireland will be met with a strong response from the rest of the province, and possibly even from abroad, if the issue of self-determina tion is brought to a vote. The situation is comparable to that of the 1968 Brown Berets, according to Czuczewski.

The Irish government has announced that it will hold a referendum on the issue of self-determination in Northern Ireland, should the British government agree to the proposal. The referendum is scheduled for 1973. If the majority of voters in Northern Ireland vote for self-determina tion, the Irish government will then be faced with the challenge of creating a new state.

The British government has not yet responded to the Irish government's proposal. However, if the referendum is held, it is likely that the British government will oppose it, as it has done in the past.

In an interview with The Daily Iowan, Czuczewski said, "The referendum is a turning point in the Irish movement. If the majority of voters in Northern Ireland vote for self-determina tion, the Irish government will have to decide whether to create a new state or to continue its efforts to reunify Ireland.

The British government has not yet responded to the Irish government's proposal. However, if the referendum is held, it is likely that the British government will oppose it, as it has done in the past."

Waste not, want not

Student environmental group seeks to help UI campus clean up its act

"We need to make our efforts very visible, because it’s not in the forefront of most people’s minds to recycle their tin cans rather than just throw them into the trash."

Michael Stribage SEC recycling committee

"stocks" for the purchase of a "national holder for the Union," which would include cardboard last year from the University Book Store and DDI Food Service Invest Service that would be used by the Iowa City Cenlert newspaper instead of ending up in the waste stream. Some members of the press last year have replaced about 80 percent of all its algae products and Stroymann paper.

The House voted to split the Department of Resources and put Iowa’s environmental department into the forefront of things,” said Michael Stribage, a member of the SEC recycling committee. "We need to make our efforts very visible, because it’s not in the forefront of most people’s minds to recycle their tin cans rather than just throw them into the trash."

"We’re already made some really good progress in doing our part," Stribage added, "and now we’re working with the SEC to look at how we can get our mineral recycling program started. We’ll also have to look at our other products like paper and cans and determine how we can effectively reduce their use and get new products that are recyclable."

Black said he feels the SEC administration should address environmental-related issues on a regular basis and that the SEC needs to be proactive in terms of being environmentally aware in its daily operations.

"Rather than having the separate parts of campus working separately on these problems, it would be better for the University to address them on a larger scale," said Black. "For example, it would be the most cost-effective to have one recycling program for the entire campus, which at the moment is being handled in a central location for the entire campus to use. That’s because the campus has expanded and will be better."

"We think that the House has asked to share their recycling program with SEU, and we’re working with the SEC to start a project for UI." said Black.

"Come to think of it, the public might support that," said Rep. Dennis Black, D-Ankeny, and everyone was pleased when the University agreed to pay for the recycling program.

"We see recycling is interested in the environment and that’s a good thing," Black said. "I think people are interested in the environment as long as it doesn’t affect their daily lives."
Disabled protest for civil rights

Wheelchair-bound demonstrators are arrested at Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested disabled demonstrators who blocked entrances and shouted slogans at the Capitol on Tuesday in a dramatic protest of the obstacles they face in gaining access to government buildings.

The arrests were the latest in a series of civil disobedience by the demonstrators as they faced off with congressional leaders over a bill to guarantee their civil rights.

The demonstrators, led by a group of people in wheelchairs, gathered in the Capitol's cavernous Rotunda and began to chant slogans, including some from the civil rights movement of the 1960s. They then marched off in another building. But the measure to end the protest was voted out of the Commerce Committee, and the bill moved to the floor despite widespread predictions of ultimate passage in the House despite wide-ranging demands.

Disabilities Act. On Monday, a group of people with disabilities, who are seeking to end discrimination, gathered outside the Capitol to underline their demand for access to the Capitol's cavernous Rotunda, which was closed to them.

The arrests marked the second day of dramatic lobbying by people with disabilities, who are the victims of discrimination. They were handcuffed, and 90 people were arrested, many of them in their wheelchairs and up the West steps.

Improved lighting may reduce campus assaults

Iowa City is one step closer to being a safer place, with the implementation of better lighting.

Mary Jo Leonard, a University of Iowa student investigator with Against Sexual Assault, described the "dark" areas of the Iowa City area in a recent survey. She claimed that there were areas on campus and off that were "unsafe.

As a detective, Leonard has seen the effects of trauma that occurred in the streets of Iowa City. "My experience as a detective led me to the realization that we have to make our streets safer, even if we can't stop the crime," she said.

If improved lighting projects will make a difference, that's enough for Ms. Leonard.

Shane Finnegan, a U. S.国债 for the University of Iowa, added to Ms. Leonard's statement. "I think it is good that the university is looking at different plans to improve lighting. Not only is it a psychological message that the university is taking an active role in preventing crimes, but it also decreases the risk of attacks significantly," he said.

Havlicek said that there are some dark areas that need improved lighting. "The university is looking at different plans to improve lighting. Havlicek also mentioned that there are areas where there are two or more female administrators moving through campus parking lots and evaluating the light risk level, based on the intelligence of the crime. "If we could have improved lighting in those areas, we would have a much safer campus," he said.

Hasty declaration

The Lithuanian Parliament voted Sunday to break away from the Soviet Union and seek independence. Although the move was approved by a large margin, the Soviet government has not yet acknowledged its validity.

The move to independence is seen by some as a step towards greater freedom for the people of Lithuania. However, others believe that it is too sudden and that more time should be spent on planning for the future.

The Lithuanian government has stated that it will continue to work towards full independence, but that it will also seek to maintain good relations with the Soviet Union.

Back when I was growing up, no one ever thought to challenge a company's right to pollute. The river was just a river, but your job was a job.

Jessie Jackson is among the few who are now fighting for the environment. His organization, the Soweto Student Movement, is working to ensure that the environment is protected.

Jackson believes that there is a need for a change in attitudes towards the environment. He feels that people should be more aware of the impact that their actions have on the environment and that they should be more proactive in protecting it.

Think about the environment

It's not just a slogan. No matter how rich a company, it's not just a slogan. It's a reality that we have to face.

Jackson's organization has been working to bring attention to the environment and to encourage people to take action. They have been organizing protests, writing letters to companies, and working with governments to protect the environment.

Jackson's message is clear: we need to take action now to protect the environment for future generations. It's not just a slogan, it's a reality that we have to face.

Bus: wants $300 million for Nicaragua

WASHINGTON — President George Bush said trade sanctions against Nicaragua are "costly but necessary" as he sought $300 million in aid for the Central American nation.

The president's announcement Tuesday comes on the eve of a key vote in Congress to suspend the trade sanctions, which were imposed in 1985 in an attempt to stop the Sandinista regime's support for leftist rebels in Central America.

Bush said the United States, which is among the world's biggest aid donors, is looking for a way to help Nicaragua recover from the damage of a decade of war.

The U.S. aid package would be used to finance a civilian government, strengthen the economy, and improve living conditions for the country's 1.5 million people.

The move is likely to be controversial, as many in Congress are concerned about the potential for aiding extremist groups.

Explosions destroy 10 homes, injure six

BLOOMFIELD, N.J. — An explosion caused by a leaking liquid propane pipe ripped through a residential area in the central New Jersey town, injuring six people and sending others to the hospital.

The blast occurred in the early hours of Tuesday morning, causing widespread damage to homes and vehicles in the area.

At least two people were taken to the hospital with injuries, and officials said others were seeking treatment.

Bush expresses favor for deficit-cutting plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush said Tuesday that an ambitious deficit-cutting plan proposed by the Republican leadership in Congress should be "the right thing to do." The plan could help "break the ice," he said, to begin discussions on a larger budget with Congress.

Bush also expressed support for a measure to reform the Social Security system, which he described as "an urgent challenge." The measure would raise the retirement age and decrease benefits for future retirees.

National debt at 5-year low, but U.S. in shock to the world

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government debt, at $6.3 trillion, is the lowest in five years, but the $1.05 trillion increase in the national debt this year is nothing to be proud of, said Treasury Secretary John M. Olin.

The debt, which has grown by $1.05 trillion since the start of the fiscal year, is now $6.3 trillion, or about 80 percent of the gross domestic product.

The increase, which is expected to continue for the foreseeable future, is a reflection of the government's continued reliance on borrowing to finance its operations.

But with the economy expected to expand at a 2 percent rate in the second quarter, the government's debt-to-GDP ratio is expected to fall.

The government's debt-to-GDP ratio is the percentage of the government's debt compared to the size of the economy.

Clock to keep ticking for NFL

OLORADO, Colo. — Again this week, clock watchers are keeping a close watch on the length of NFL games, as teams and fans have seen their patience wear thin from games that seem to go on forever.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said the league is aware that some fans are frustrated by games that can last for several hours. He added that the league is working on ways to keep games shorter, but that more research is needed.

"We're aware of the concerns, and we're working on finding ways to make games more enjoyable for fans," Tagliabue said. "But we have to be careful not to sacrifice the quality of the game for the sake of shortening it.

"We don't want to take plays out of context or make the game too quick," he added. "But we're open to suggestions on how we can improve the game for fans.

"Our goal is to have a game that is both fun and exciting," Tagliabue said. "We want fans to be engaged and interested in the game, but we also want to make sure that the game is enjoyable for everyone involved.

"We're listening to fans and we're open to change," he added. "But we need to make sure that any changes we make are fair and consistent for all teams.

"We'll continue to work on finding ways to improve the game, but we need to be patient and take our time," Tagliabue said. "We want to make sure that any changes we make are made for the right reasons.

"We're looking at a number of different options," he added. "We'll continue to evaluate our options and make changes as needed.

Musolini and short shorts: Anderson intriguies, irritates everal questions remain unanswered after the screening of Watching The Master, the+ new documentary on Italian dictator Benito Mussolini. Among them: How do you present a man who virtually shaped a nation, a continent and a world? How can you condense 26 years of his life, his ideas and his actions into a two-hour documentary that is both informative and engaging? How do you depict Mussolini as a complex character with strengths and weaknesses? And, perhaps most importantly, how do you bring this story to life on screen?

Deborah Anderson, a renowned film director and producer, has attempted to answer these questions in her latest work, "Watching the Master". The film, a co-production between the United States and Italy, combines archival footage with interviews with historians, politicians, and memoirists, to provide a comprehensive and nuanced portrayal of Mussolini's life and legacy.

The film begins with Mussolini's early years, his rise to power, and his ascent to becoming one of the most powerful figures in modern history. It then explores his life as a journalist, a politician, and a leader, as well as his impact on European politics and culture. The narrative is punctuated with scenes of Mussolini's public speaking, political rallies, and military campaigns, providing a vivid and immersive experience for the viewer.

Critical reception of the film has been mixed. Some have praised it for its in-depth analysis and balanced perspective, while others have criticized it for its length and pacing. However, most agree that Anderson has done an admirable job of bringing Mussolini's story to life on screen, and that the film offers a valuable glimpse into one of the most controversial and influential leaders of the 20th century.

In conclusion, "Watching the Master" is a thought-provoking and well-researched documentary that offers a comprehensive look at Mussolini's life and legacy. It is a must-watch for anyone interested in history, politics, or the study of leadership.
