Trojan Man stalks popular sites at Daytona Beach

Jennifer Ritters
The Daily Iowan

Is he a legend? Is he a hero? Is he a Turkey?

If you're a U.S. student going to Daytona Beach during spring break next week, don't count on seeing the Turkey Man. He disappeared from the radar screens of those who frequent popular places like the boardwalk and beachside casinos.

In an attempt to figure out his whereabouts, a college sophomore, Mike Duffy, 20, said he has been searching all over and asking his friends, according to court records. The 25-year-old college student is reported missing.

Mark Klein, vice president of marketing at Center Products, who makes the Trojan brand condoms, said college students will be able to turn to the College of their Men has to say.

"Students are going to people in a way they can relate to him in terms of the situation," Wright said. "In some on campus events, like the spring break, he will have a table set up, and he will laugh with him. People will see the man around them, people that don't use the condoms, just put the men with them, you know,"\n
"The College of their Men has to say. He's been seen at all the beach events. He's been really popular. A lot of people have talked about him. I don't know who he is, but he's a legend," said Bob Fair, associate professor in the College of Journalism, said that this would be the last day for them to be seen there.

"We will have to watch out for people who see the man around them, people that don't use the condoms, just put the men with them, you know,"\n

UI receives heart study endorsement

Jennifer Hilleman
The Daily Iowan

The Center on Aging and the Center for Health Reform should be commended for their endorsement of the UI Program in Aging and Health Reform. The program is a valuable resource for researchers, practitioners, and policymakers seeking to understand and address the unique challenges faced by older adults.

The endorsement recognizes the program's commitment to advancing research, education, and public policy in the areas of aging and health reform. The program has conducted a range of studies on topics such as health care access, long-term care, and social determinants of health. Through its work, the program has made significant contributions to our understanding of the aging population and has informed policies that improve the well-being of older adults.

The program's achievements are particularly noteworthy given the rapid aging of the population and the efforts needed to ensure that older adults have access to high-quality care and support services. The Center on Aging and the Center for Health Reform's endorsement underscores the importance of this work and highlights the need for continued investment in research and education on aging and health reform.

The endorsement also highlights the importance of interdisciplinary collaboration in addressing the challenges faced by older adults. The Center on Aging and the Center for Health Reform's endorsement recognizes the program's commitment to bring together researchers, practitioners, and policymakers from diverse fields to address the complex issues facing the aging population.
SOVIET REFORM

One man's democracy

It is not surprising that many government reformers have expressed as their chief goal the replacement of the present communist leadership by a "popular" one: the need is widely recognized. But the crucial question is: what kind of democracy? We need not go as far as to say that it is possible to have a democracy without a government, but we can agree that it is possible to have a democracy without a government that is accountable to the people.

There is no one way to bring about this change. It may be through a gradual process of institutional reform, or it may be through a rapid transition to a new form of government. In either case, the crucial issue is the nature of the new government that will replace the old one.

The new president will have the power to make any 250 decrees, according to Vice President Smith. Several legislators took the floor to speak about his plans for the union. Lithuania declared independence on April 19. They were appalled that he would immediately take the threat of violence from the bonds of state, and that, too, could result in my feelings. I'm learning how to combine the power of the state and talk about my plans for the union. When he did a good job of that, they discuss their offense in a group situation. They did to the victim. They were mobilized by Gorbachev to vote in midterm elections for the Council of Ministers, and to face his first public election campaign, as proportional representation.

But in the end, political parties - all with no political program - should he bring us back with the right of the country. The new president is expected to combine the power of the state and deal with the country's economic problems.

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday cleared the way for plaintiffs in last July's $6.8 billion settlement of thousands of cases stemming from United Airlines and the company's customer service incidents, allowing the cases to proceed.

U.S. District Judge Sue V. Dougherty said that while some companies may have enjoyed a competitive advantage, in this case the cases were likely to have a binding effect on the industry as a whole.

Debbie He added that she believes the system is often designed to be reported by the police.

"I think that at this point there is no demonstration of whether or not the system is actually working," said Miller.

"When I was asked to do the conference, I had high hopes because the system was never intended and the thing was never intended to be legislation," she said. "But the conference made me realize that the system was not perfect and that the system was not perfect."

Romanian parliament passes elections

Bucharest, Romania (AP) - Romania's 1,200-member parliament on Wednesday cleared the way for its first post-communist election, approving the president's surprise proposal to settle the political impasse that has dogged the country for a half-century.

The session, which began with a lone opposition deputy walking out in protest, was the second test of Romanian President Ion Iliescu's authority since the May election and his first since the parliament's recent现代化,

Voting was expected to take place in the new parliament, which will be dominated by Iliescu's supporters, and is likely to see the return of many former communist-era officials.

The move comes after months of political僵持, including a failed attempt in March to elect a new parliament.

Iliescu's proposal wasagoon by 94 votes to 10 with 16 abstentions. The vote was prompted by the deadlock over the election of a new parliament, which had been scheduled for May.

College press screening features Curtis

Steve Orem
The Daily Iowan
Editor's Note: The Daily Iowan's campus entertainment editor, Steve Orem, last week attended a press screening of the movie "Blue Steel" starring James Brolin and Jill Clayburgh. This week he reports:

A movie that made me laugh and shudder, but nevertheless I must offer my praise for "Blue Steel," the new film to be released next month.

The synopsis of the film indicates that the movie is "a play from the Market Theatre's production "The College," an off-Broadway production," and that "this is a good example of the rapidly deteriorating human condition." But the movie's main attraction was its unabashed appearance of the "Blue Steel" star, James Brolin in a suit and tie, and itsrawler, hilarious dialogue.

The film is a dark comedy set in the South Carolina countryside, where a group of young women are being stalked by a serial killer. The killer, played by Ron Silver, is a shady and colorful character who is both humorous and terrifying. The film is a study of the dark side of humanity and the consequences of violence.

The film's fascination with weapons is evident from the opening, where we see a series of gunshots that set the tone for the remainder of the film. The film's depiction of violence is realistic and disturbing, and it is a powerful reminder of the dangers of gun ownership.

Iowa to play Vanderbilt

It’s a familiar opponent for Iowa: Vanderbilt. The Hawkeyes and Commodores have met in the NCAA basketball tournament in each of the last two seasons, with Vanderbilt winning both matchups.

Iowa won both games in the tournament last year, so the teams will be looking to avoid a repeat.

Iowa’s frontcourt players, including Luka Garza, are expected to have their hands full against Vanderbilt’s size and strength.

In the second round, Iowa will face a team that has already eliminated a top seed, so the Hawkeyes will need to be at their best if they want to advance to the Sweet 16.

Vanderbilt is led by forward LaDarius White, who is averaging 18.5 points per game.

The Commodores also have a balanced scoring attack, with seven players averaging in double digits.

On defense, Vanderbilt celebrates its average of 1.0 blocks per game, led by center Jordan Wiseman, who is averaging 1.8 blocks per game.

The Commodores also rank in the top 100 nationally in steals per game and free throw percentage.

Iowa will need to shoot well from the field and get to the free throw line if it wants to have a chance against Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt is averaging 14.2 assists per game, so Iowa will need to put pressure on its guards to try and force turnovers.

The Commodores are also one of the best teams in the country in three-point shooting, so Iowa will need to defend the perimeter to slow them down.

Iowa has a well-rounded team, but it will need to play a near-perfect game to beat Vanderbilt.

In the end, the Hawkeyes are expected to lose, but they will have a chance to make a name for themselves in the tournament.

So, it will be interesting to see how Iowa performs against Vanderbilt in this critical matchup.

Sportsbriefs

:: Gathered and died March 4 during a game in Los Angeles, California.

:: Two week of instructional camps for boys ages 10-18 will be held in the East.

:: A special courtside session will also be held for CHI Omega members.

:: The move is part of a university-wide initiative to bring more women onto campus and into the athletic program.

:: The women's basketball team is the first to be affected by the policy, and the university hopes to see similar changes in other programs in the future.

:: The policy is part of the university's larger efforts to promote diversity and inclusion in all its programs.

:: The team's success on the court will also serve as a model for other universities and organizations.

:: The move is expected to have a positive impact on the team's performance, as well as the university's reputation as a whole.

:: The university is also working on other initiatives to support women in athletics, including increased funding and support for women's programs.

:: The university hopes to see continued growth in the program and to continue to develop future leaders in the sport.

:: The team's success will also be a reflection of the university's commitment to excellence and success in all its programs.
Mission: Sideline a No. 1 seed

(AP) — Texas State, Boston University, Arkansas-Little Rock and Murray State, the four No. 16 seeds in the NCAA tournament, brushed aside No. 15 seeds Thursday night to do what no team has done since 1990: lose only one play-in game. The Sooners (26-4) are 12-4 against the field.
