South African police violently end protest

Reports conflict on number of deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Police fired at least 50 rubber bullets and swinging batons at about 1,500 protesters in the township of Soweto late Monday and killed at least 36, witnesses said. Hundreds were wounded during the clash, mainly by the police, who used screaming tear gas and rubber bullets to force the demonstrators back.

"They fire on us whenever we try to march," one township resident said.

Other witnesses said the police shot at least 54 demonstrators.

"Police today using an extemely supple ammunition," said a statement from a hospital in Soweto. "At least 50 rubber bullets were killed and hundreds wounded, according to a report from the Johannesburg Hospital.

Other witnesses saw younger men and some said more than 50 were killed, but it was not possible to verify the number of blacks killed.

Police said they used tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse the crowd.

"The police used tear gas, rubber bullets, and smoke bombs," said a police station commander.

A crowd of protesters fired a South African police battalion firing tear gas canister Monday in Soweto, South Africa. The battalion was sent to disperse residents who blocked the police station after police shot a trades union supporter.

South Africans riot in Hospita1

VILNIUS, Lithuanian (AP) - Soviet tankers darned a psychiatric hospital here early today following overnight attacks by Lithuanians who had sought refuge in the hospital during the last days of the Soviet occupation.

"They beat them with their feet," a nurse told the AP. "They went out and cut the patients' hair and nails before putting them in a body bag and burned them in the hospital's incinerator." The nurse said she was not sure how many people were killed.

The tankers pulled up one hour after the nurse, who had been taken to the hospital's emergency ward, died.

The nurse said she had not been informed of the tankers' arrival.

"If we were told, we would have been prepared," she said.
