Pentagon lifts secrecy from Stealth project

Aircraft tab was $6.26 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon on Tuesday partially lifted the veil of secrecy surrounding the futuristic F-117A Stealth fighter bomber in an attempt to boost confidence in the handling of top-secret weapons programs.

With the release of an 8 1/2-minute videotape, a series of 10 photographs and two fact sheets, the Pentagon revealed it has spent $6.26 billion to develop and build 59 of the dark, delta-winged aircraft. That translates into a $106.2 million per-plane cost.

Although the plane has been flying since 1981, the Pentagon refused to even acknowledge it existed until November 1988.

The fighter, which is about the size of the F-15 Eagle fighter jet, was designed to penetrate any radar defense and bomb targets before enemy forces can react.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams confirmed that three F-117As have crashed over the years and that two pilots died. He declined to say what caused the problems.

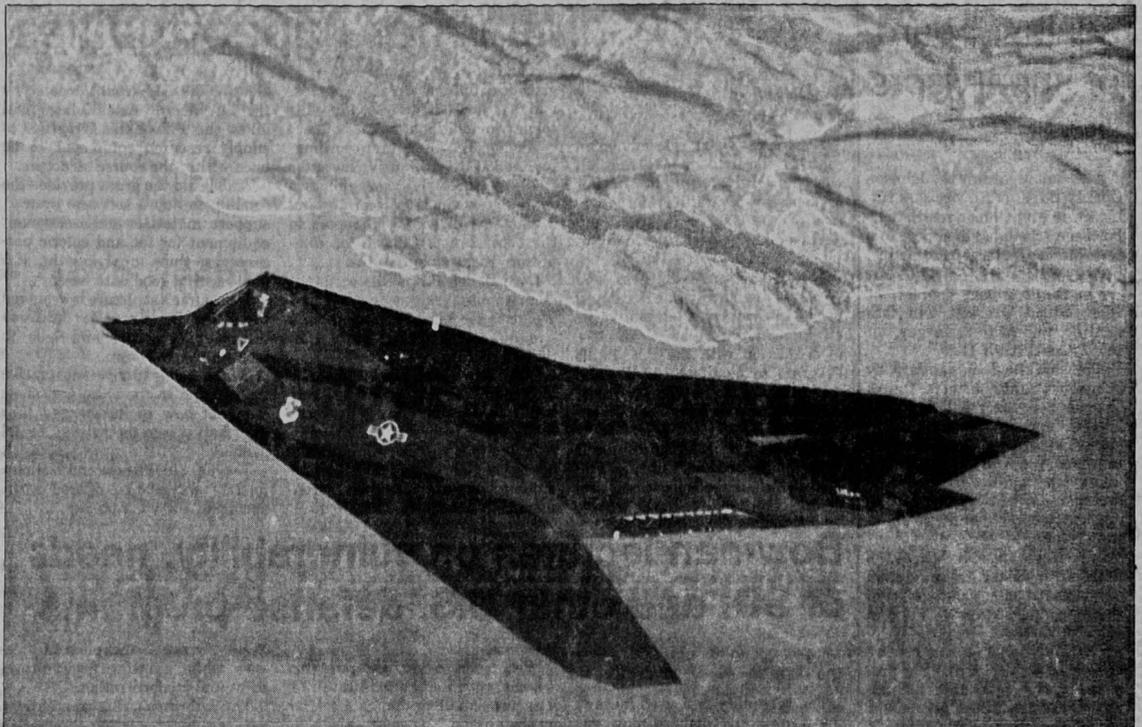

But he hailed the F-117A program as a successful venture that demonstrates the Pentagon can develop and build reliable, high-tech aircraft in a classified environment.

"I think it's persuaded us that a full-scale development program can be used very successfully," he said. When asked if he meant the secret funding programs known as the Pentagon's "black budget," Williams responded, "Yes."

The release of the information comes amid weakening support in Congress for the Air Force's B-2 Stealth bomber program, and as the service is developing yet another super-secret aircraft, the supersonic Advance Tactical Fighter.

Many in Congress expressed "sticker shock" last year when the B-2's long-classified figures revealed its $530 million per-plane price tag, raising questions about the Pentagon's use of such "black budget" programs.

Williams defended the Pentagon's success with the F-117A, amid such controversies.

The F-117A program "tells us Stealth can be developed, can be used on an operational aircraft, is a successful technology, that it works," Williams said.

While pointing out that the Stealth fighter has a tactical mission and the B-2 Stealth bomber is used for longer-range, or strategic targets, Williams argued that the radar-evading Stealth characteristics "help to make us one of the most capable air forces in the world."

The aircraft got its first combat mission in December. Two of the aircraft bombed a field near a Panamanian Defense Forces barracks to stun and confuse the Panamanians while U.S. paratroopers landed nearby.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, derided the use of the plane as "show biz" by military officers eager to show off their sophisti-

Jury intact after media intrusion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in John Poindexter's trial disclosed Tuesday that two jurors had been contacted by the news media and he ordered the jury sequestered to avoid further problems from such "irresponsible behavior."

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene said both jurors will remain on the panel because they "were alert and intelligent and didn't allow" any conversation about the case to take place.

He said of the contacts, "Some now might think this was an obstruction of justice. ... I will think about that."

Poindexter lawyer Richard Beckler said he had no objection to the two jurors staying on the panel.

Poindexter, who was national security adviser to then-President Ronald Reagan from late 1985 to November 1986, is charged with conspiring to obstruct Congress, making false statements to lawmakers and obstructing congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair.

Jury deliberations resumed for a second day after a court session to discuss the contacts. At the end of the day's deliberations, the jurors were taken to a hotel for the night.

At the session, it was disclosed that Washington Post reporter Nora Boustany had telephoned juror Leroy Witherspoon at home after Monday's first day of deliberations in the Poindexter trial. Witherspoon said he hung up on her twice.

Judge William Harris said he was contacted Monday evening by a woman identifying herself as a reporter. He hung up and she didn't call back.

Greene said the "irresponsible behavior of the press leaves me no alternative" but to have the jurors "taken by the marshals" to a hotel each night.

"I certainly don't want to have a mistrial," Greene said at a court hearing.

"I understand the Post has many more reporters ready to call the jurors," said Greene. "None of us has any confidence" that court

Gallup study: U.S. geographically lost

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

One in seven Americans cannot identify the United States on an unmarked world map and one in four cannot find the Pacific Ocean, according to a new Gallup study.

Despite these shocking findings, local educators say Iowa City students are above the norm in terms of geography knowledge.

"I think our students are more aware and are at an advanced level of geography compared to the national (statistics)," Jim Remley, Northwest Junior High School global studies teacher, said.

Iowa City Community Schools require all seventh graders to take a yearlong global studies class with an emphasis on geography.

In addition, Northwest and Southeast Junior High schools offered the 9th annual Global Issues Conference for junior-high students this year.

"Iowa City offers a fantastic junior-high and high-school level geography education," said Joyce Carmen, Southeast Junior High School global studies teacher. "The district really stays tuned-in to geographic education."

The Gallup survey — the largest international study of its kind — tested 12,320 adults in Canada, France, Italy, Japan, Mexico, the Soviet Union, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United States and West Germany in 1988 and 1989.

Overall, the United States ranked behind Sweden, West Germany, Japan, France and Canada in the Gallup survey, but the U.S. group of 18- to 24-year-olds finished last among the ten countries.

"I find that terribly shocking," Remley said. "If schools across the nation are not offering geography to their students, where are they going to learn it?"

"Nationwide, we must require geography education in our schools," he added. "Geography should show up in classrooms so students can see influences from different world regions and gain a global perspective."

According to another study, U.S. high-school seniors are deficient in their geography knowledge.

The results of the first National Assessment of Educational Progress geography test show that only 50 percent of the students tested knew that the Panama Canal cuts sailing time between New York and San Francisco; 59 percent know the impact of cutting down rain forests; and 41 percent recognize the environmental impact of thermonuclear war.

But Carmen said that much is being done to improve knowledge of geography nationwide.

"There is a renewed interest in geography. There is a new poll every week to capture people's attention," Carmen said.

In May, fourth through eighth graders from 32,000 U.S. schools will test their knowledge of the world at the National Geography Bee in Washington, D.C.

In 1988, the National Geographic Society established an education foundation with an initial $20 million grant to support teacher training programs, innovative classroom teaching methods and materials, and grass-roots curriculum reform campaigns.

"In our schools, we are trying very hard to get across more understanding of geography," Carmen said. "We don't want to rely on basic memorization."

Divorced marry at higher rates; may be 'marriage prone'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divorced people are apparently undeterred by their experience, heading for the altar at higher rates than single folks, a new government report says.

There were 807 marriages for every 10,000 divorced women in 1987, the National Center for Health Statistics reported. That compared to 589 marriages per 10,000 single women.

Among men, the marriage rate was 1,157 per 10,000 divorced men, compared to 488 for single ones, the center said.

"People who do things tend to do them again, movers move, marriers marry," Barbara Foley Wilson, a population analyst at the center, said Tuesday.

People who are divorced "are people who obviously were marriage-prone to begin with. They are used to living in a coupled fashion," she said.

In addition, many divorced women have children and "may be interested in having help raising them," she said.

Another factor, she added, is the possibility that divorced people are marrying someone with whom a relationship developed before the end of their first marriage.

Some people don't remarry following a divorce, but for many the first marriage was not a totally bad experience and so they look for a new spouse, she said.

Lithuanian delegation meets with Soviet adviser for secession talks

MOSCOW (AP) — A delegation from the rebellious Baltic republic of Lithuania met Tuesday with a major adviser to President Mikhail Gorbachev, and a Lithuanian legislator later called it a sign of hope in the confrontation.

"We are very, very encouraged," legislator Egidius Bickauskas, Lithuania's representative in Moscow, told The Associated Press. "If there are people who at least want to listen to us, it's very good."

He earlier told reporters a three-member delegation, including Deputy Premier Romualdas Ozolos of Lithuania, was meeting with Alexander Yakovlev, a Politburo member recently appointed to Gorbachev's new Presidential Council.

Also Tuesday:

The Supreme Soviet parliament approved a bill setting procedures for secession from the Soviet Union. The law, which goes into effect when it is published in the Soviet press, requires approval by a two-thirds vote in a referendum and a waiting period of up to five years. Lithuania, forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940, declared its independence on March 11. The Moscow government refused to recognize this and a crisis ensued.

The Kremlin restricted traffic at Lithuania's border with Poland, the republic's only border that does not adjoin Soviet territory. Soviet officials told Polish border officials the crossing from Ogdzniki, Poland, to Lazdijai, Lithuania, was "temporarily" closed, the Polish news agency PAP said.

Amendments would prevent decreases in I.C. grant funds

Tonya Felt
The Daily Iowan

To prepare against the threat of decreased grant funds, the Iowa City Council approved amendments to the Community Development Block Grant budget at Tuesday's meeting.

While the amount of federal grant funds that will be allocated to Iowa City for 1990 is still unknown, city officials have been notified it could decrease by 5.5 percent compared to the 1989 budget.

"Since we have to get projects moving, I have decided to do a budget amendment at this time, assuming a total decrease of 6.5 percent from the 1989 allocation of $607,000," CDBG Program Coordinator Marianne Milkman wrote in a memo to the Iowa City Council. "I believe that this is the least amount the city is likely to receive, but I have been wrong

I.C. Council votes to reject commercialization

Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

Consistent with past requests for rezoning, the Iowa City Council rejected a request to allow commercial development on land at 1841 Lower Muscatine Road Tuesday night by a 3-3 vote.

Because 20 percent of the surrounding property owners filed written objections to the rezoning with the city clerk, an extraordinary majority vote of 6-1 was required to rezone the property.

Councilors Karen Kubby, Randy Larson and Susan Horowitz rejected the rezoning because they said the lot should remain available for housing.

"This is an encroachment on the neighborhood," Horowitz said. "We must keep the character of the neighborhood. Commercial encroachment begins to erode the viability of the neighborhood. This neighborhood is surrounded by commercial development but that doesn't matter. This is a viable neighborhood."

Larson said the planned commercial development would probably not be damaging to the neighborhood but said the lot should remain a residential property because of the strong need for space for low and moderate income housing.

But councilors John McDonald,

Darrel Courtney and Bill Ambrisco said the property had not been developed for approximately 20 years zoned for a single-family residence.

In addition, they said the developer, Rex Brandstatter, had been very cooperative in providing a plan that would blend into the neighborhood and provide a good buffer between the single-family residences and commercial development that surround it.

"This piece of land has sat there for 20 years," Courtney said. "There's a reason it wasn't built on when the neighborhood was developed — it sits on a very busy corner. I can't see a residence sitting there. The property is just going to sit there off of the tax rolls."

Under the type of commercial zoning requested, the businesses that could locate there cannot sell goods. An insurance agency was considering locating in the development if it had been approved.

Brandstatter said he was not surprised at the rejection because of the strong neighborhood opposition.

"The word commercial is the scariest thing to a neighborhood," Brandstatter said. "It's the toughest thing in the world to get a city council to vote against old-time neighbors."

Lawsuit filed against board of supervisors

Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

A lawsuit regarding the Johnson County Board of Supervisors ruling on migrant labor restrictions has been scheduled to appear in a Des Moines federal court April 24.

Meanwhile, a Lone Tree farmer who co-filed the suit will face zoning violation charges in county court April 11.

The suit, filed in January by Johnson County farmers Darrel Thomas Bell, Mary Bell and their Texas business partners Constancio and Lydia Casarez, seeks temporary and permanent injunctions against the board so the farmers can legally set up migrant worker camps in Johnson County.

In addition, the suit charges the board with illegal discrimination and violation of the farmers' civil rights of due process of law and equal protection.

The suit followed the board's December 7 vote denying a proposed zoning ordinance amendment designed to set permanent guidelines for future migrant labor camps in the county.

Board Chairman Dick Myers said the supervisors will probably not attend the 9 a.m. hearing.

Johnson County also filed 3 misdemeanor charges against Darrell Thomas Bell in March for violating the existing zoning ordinance. Bell has 11 mobile homes set up on his property, and according to court records, an A-1 rural zone may not have more than 2 single-family dwellings on property of less than 40 acres.

Bell's attorney, Lawrence Lynch, said Tuesday his client will enter pleas April 11 in Johnson County District Court.

A Legal Aid office in Weslaco, Texas, is currently investigating complaints by at least ten migrant workers about their 1989 working and living conditions in Johnson County.

Attorney Rudy Sanchez said Tuesday his office is investigating "seed corn companies, growers and recruiters," in Johnson County, and that Bell was among the people mentioned in the complaints.

Sanchez cautioned that no charges were ready to be filed against anyone named in the investigation.

Fall pilot of alternative P.E. course offers freshmen more opportunities

Jodi M. Hamel
The Daily Iowan

An alternative physical education course to be implemented this fall will offer UI freshmen and transfer students an opportunity to satisfy two of the four semester hours required by general education requirements.

The pilot course "Fitness and Wellness for Life" was developed by the Liberal Arts College and the UI Educational Policy Committee in conjunction with the P.E. Skills Program to facilitate the demand for other P.E. skills courses, according to Associate Dean James Lindberg.

Lindberg said the pilot course is initially limited to entering students this fall because those students traditionally have trouble getting a full schedule of courses, and the new course would offer them two additional credit hours.

Michael Teague, course coordinator, said "Fitness and Wellness for Life" is on a trial basis for two years, after which the coordinating committee will submit a report to the Liberal Arts College for compulsory requirement status.

Barb Endel, P.E. skills assistant chairwoman, said "Fitness and Wellness for Life" is going to be a "trendy" course offered by the P.E. Skills Program.

"The course is trendy because the lecture-lab format is targeted to health issues that don't get covered in other P.E. courses," Endel said.

Topics that will be covered in the course include AIDS, body composition testing and how the environment impacts exercise and health.

A $5,000 seed grant allocated by the UI Liberal Arts College will allow the P.E. Skills Program to supply research equipment to be used within the course structure.

Endel said the grant provides the funding to buy a software system, support materials and assessment equipment for fat and caloric percentages, thus supplying the students with a good data base.

The course's structure is designed to allow lectures to address theoretical concepts and labs to facilitate each lecture.

"We're going to give substantive information to the class and show students how to incorporate that information into their lives," Endel said.

Teague said "Fitness and Wellness for Life" will also be offered in the spring to all UI students.

Bowman lectures on vulnerability, needs of SDI and other U.S. defense programs

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

The reliability and usefulness of the "Star Wars" defense plan was the topic of a lecture Tuesday by Robert Bowman, a retired Air Force Lt. Colonel currently on the Board of Directors of the Institute for Space and Security Studies.

Sponsored by the Iowa chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility and the UI Lecture Committee, Bowman's lecture dealt with finding new strategies for international security.

Bowman summarized current concern about the Strategic Defense Initiative as worry about its strike effectiveness.

"But, even if everything worked perfectly, we could only expect 15 to 20 percent of the Soviet missiles to be stopped," Bowman said.

SDI would need an American soldier with a machine gun posted at every Soviet missile site to be 100 percent effective, according to Bowman.

"Yet, even when we put this 'soldier' out in space as a satellite, it is just as vulnerable as a soldier on the ground," Bowman said.

The Soviet Union is seen as our main threat as far as defense strategies are concerned, yet these strategies are not effective against them.

"Justification for research and testing becomes the threat of lesser powers such as Libya or Iraq, but they won't develop enough technology to make SDI worthwhile," Bowman said.

In the past, the U.S. defense strategy has been one of "hyper-deterrence," which sacrifices national security for the protection of the interests of multinational corporations, Bowman said.

"The real purpose of SDI is to make nuclear missiles usable for political coercion again," Bowman said.

Recent U.S.-Soviet treaties, such as the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, reduce stockpiles of missiles while allowing for improvement and modernization.

This improves strike capabilities of existing missiles while eliminating the less accurate yet more populous missiles of old, according to Bowman.

"Actions such as this actually make an effective first strike easier," Bowman said.

"The U.S. needs to become a moral leader in the nuclear age. If we were to consent to a test-ban treaty, practically every other nation would follow suit," Bowman said.

Until such time, lesser powers will continue to acquire and test nuclear arms, he added.

A common security could then involve the defense against pollution, instead of the threat of nuclear war.

"Existing space technology could be used in more constructive ways in a non-nuclear future," Bowman said.

Man pleads guilty to lesser burglary charges

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man charged with second-degree burglary pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of third-degree theft and was sentenced to two years in jail Friday.

The defendant, Michael L. Bevins, 23, 1916 Waterfront Dr., was charged with second-degree burglary January 11 after he and a partner reportedly broke into Russ' Amoco Service, 305 N. Gilbert St.

The burglary was part of a rash of apartment and business burglaries that took place during December and January.

Bevins' partner, Christopher Carter, 23, 720 E. Market St., was also charged with second-degree theft in connection with the gas station burglary.

Carter has been charged with multiple counts of theft and burglary in connection with the series of burglaries in January.

In Brief

Briefs

• April 1-7 is the Week of the Young Child, and as part of the celebration the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., will present a School's Out Special Dr. Seuss Film Festival on April 5 at 3 p.m. The hour's worth of Dr. Seuss includes Lorax and Green Eggs and Ham.

• On Saturday, April 7 at 10:30 a.m., the library will co-sponsor a special program for families in Meeting Room A. Mainly Mother Goose features performances of Judy Nyren's Mother Goose Magic, plus the Young Footlighters directed by Pattie Mott.

• Old Capitol Center will celebrate the Week of the Young Child on Saturday, April 7.

• Activities begin at 10 a.m. with a paper hat parade in Center Court. Old Capitol will supply crayons, stickers, paper bags, materials and supervision.

• At 11 a.m., Old Capitol Center and Campus Theaters will host a special showing of All Dogs Go To Heaven.

• One of the world's most famous laser scientists will be in Iowa City this week to speak at the UI Center for Laser Science and Engineering.

• Soviet scientist Vladimir Letokhov, who developed the most sensitive laser technique known for detecting lasers and atoms, will give a lecture on "Laser Science History and Trends" Wednesday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Chemistry-Botany building, Room 321.

• Letokhov will also speak on "Laser Resonant Ionization Optico-Mass Spectroscopy" Thursday, April 5, at 2:30 p.m. in Room 221 of the Chemistry Botany building, and again Saturday April 7 at 1:30 p.m., in Room 225, on "Physics of Laser Pulsed Ablation of Biotissue."

• The Iowa City Riverfront Commission and Wetlands for Iowa will present Riverrine Wetlands, a forum on wetlands conservation and education today at 7 p.m.

The forum will be held in Montgomery Hall of the Johnson County Fairgrounds and will be moderated by Ken Jensen of the UI Botany Department.

• Garden plots will be available this growing season through the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department.

Wetherby Park, located at the south end of Taylor Drive and Napoleon Park, located on Sand Road south of the Highway 6 bypass, will have plots available to lease beginning Monday, April 2, 1990, at 7:30 a.m. at the Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St.

Each garden plot is approximately 10' by 50' and will be tilled when weather permits by the Iowa City Parks Division. The rental fee is $8 each.

Registration is on a first-come, first-serve basis and must be done at the Recreation Center.

• The UI, in cooperation with Iowa's community colleges, will offer two weekend credit workshops via satellite. "Assertiveness in the Workplace," a one semester-hour workshop in counselor education, will be offered Friday, May 4, from 6 to 9:30 p.m. and Saturday, May 5, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

• "Cooperative Learning Strategies, Grades Three Through Nine" will be offered Friday, May 18, from 5 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, May 19, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Participants in the workshop will receive one semester hour of credit from the UI. Grading will be on a satisfactory/unsatisfactory basis only. Tuition cost is $77 for undergraduates and $121 for graduates.

To register or for more information, please call the Center for Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education at 1-800-272-6430.

Today

• The Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., will host a brown bag lunch featuring a book talk by author Robert Sayre from noon to 1 p.m. in Meeting Room A, and will hold storytime for children age 3 and older at 10:30 a.m.

• Environmental Advocates will hold its monthly meeting at 7 p.m. in the First Christian Church, 217 Iowa Ave. Students welcome.

• The Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office will hold a resume writing seminar at 4:30 p.m. in the Union, Northwestern Room.

• Career Information Services will hold a presentation on women and careers in math, science and engineering, at 7 p.m. in the Union, Indiana Room.

• The Iowa City ZEN Center will hold meditation at 5:30 a.m., 6:20 a.m., 4:30 p.m. and 5:20 p.m. at 10 S. Gilbert St., and an orientation at 7:30 p.m.

• Lutheran Campus Ministry will hold Discussion of the Faith group at 8 p.m. and evening prayer at 9:30 p.m., both at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St.

Flights of fancy with Top Gun take off for UI med student

Angela Egan
The Daily Iowan

As a student in the UI College of Medicine, 31-year-old Jeff Bondesson used to dream about flying with "Top Gun," the U.S. Navy's prestigious air school.

Now, six years later, Bondesson is doing just that.

Currently a flight surgeon at Naval Station Miramar in San Diego, Bondesson provides specialized care for the pilots, flight officers and aircrew of Fighter Squadron 126. He also looks after the health of the Top Gun naval aviators and, sometimes, even gets to take a back seat when the pilots take to the skies.

"This is a dream job," Bondesson said. "It's one of the best spots for a flight surgeon on the West Coast. All the way back at the University of Iowa, I wanted to fly with Top Gun and with carrier pilots."

After graduating from medical school, the Des Moines native went to Jacksonville Naval Hospital in Florida to complete his internship. In 1985, he applied for flight surgeon training at the Naval Medical Institute in Pensacola, Fla., and was schooled in flight medicine and flight psychology.

"Then came the best part — flight school," said Bondesson.

As flight surgeon, Bondesson said he has some difficult decisions to make. The pilots know that they will be grounded if the surgeon judges them unfit, but the surgeon must also gain and keep the confidence of the pilots so they will not hide any problems.

"Safety is the deciding factor in my verdict," said Bondesson.

Permanent grounding is rare; usually, it is precipitated by the onset of chronic diseases such as asthma or diabetes. Temporary grounding is more frequent because medications for minor ailments may affect a pilot's judgment, Bondesson said.

This diagnosis is especially important because pilots are often responsible for landing 30-ton aircraft on a moving ship.

Life hasn't always been plain sailing for Bondesson; once he had to undergo a catapult takeoff from an aircraft carrier in the Straits of Mollucca because he had three emergency cases requiring treatment ashore.

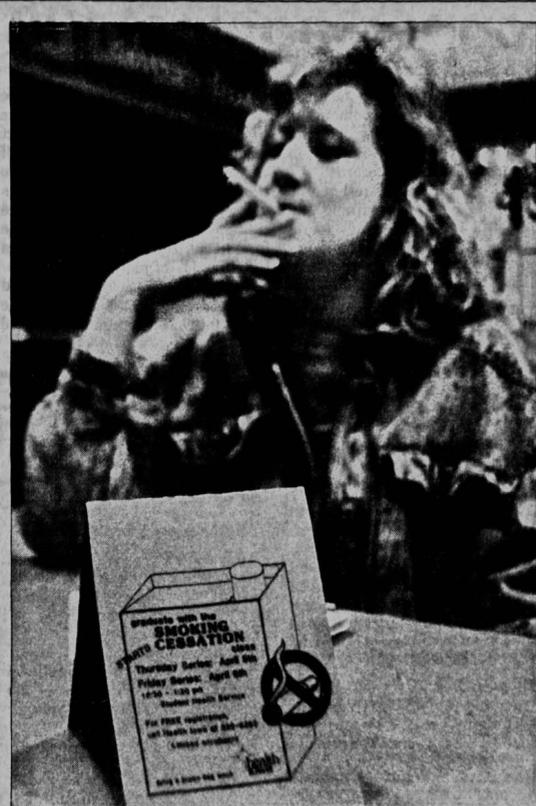

"It was a really wild sensation — like getting shot out of a cannon," Bondesson said enthusiastically.

This summer, he will move to Denver to begin a residency program at Denver General Hospital sponsored by the Navy. Once finished, Bondesson will go back to treating crewmen and pilots.

His one disappointment is that he could not qualify as a navy pilot. "My eyesight is not good enough; I have to wear glasses," he said.

Bondesson's stint with the Top Gun pilots is the result of his affiliation with the Navy's Health Professions Scholarship Program at the UI.

According to the UI College of Medicine, about 25 UI students receive military Health Professions Scholarships each year.

Labor issue discussed by board

Supervisors consider hiring consultant firm

Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

Pros and cons of having a labor relations association represent county government employers were debated by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Jack Lipovac, a labor consultant for Industries Council, a Des Moines non-profit association that represents employers, presented the board with details about his organization's services at their Tuesday meeting.

Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said she favored the idea of a professional organization handling labor relations.

"I've always wanted this out of the political arena and into a place of expertise," Ockenfels said.

Lipovac said Industries Council consultants would handle negotiations with unions, grievance processes, job descriptions and policies, and the setting up of pay classes and pay plans.

The county's policies on equal employment opportunity and affirmative action have recently come under criticism.

The firm charges $75 an hour for services, plus legally required annual membership dues of $225, which cover the cost of long-distance informational calls to the association, Lipovac said.

In other discussion, the board heard from County Engineer Doug Frederick concerning bids for paving four stretches of county road. The board informally approved a $1,010,188 bid by L.L. Pelling Co. of Iowa City to pave sections of First Ave., Rustic Ridge, Hills East and Cabbage Kessler roads.

Frederick said the bid was 7.65 percent lower than the county's estimate.

Confronted with news that a bill naming marijuana as a noxious weed had not yet become law, Supervisor Dick Myers said the board will probably have to strike out the inclusion of the plant in a recently passed noxious weed resolution, but said he didn't think there would be significant consequences.

"It's still illegal to grow (marijuana), so it's not going to make a difference."

Mother files suit against city for son's death

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

A Tiffin, Iowa, mother filed suit against the city of Tiffin Monday on grounds that the city failed to secure a sewer plant in which her son fell and subsequently died.

Lisa Duffy, a resident of Clear Creek Mobile Home Court, alleges in the suit that the city of Tiffin was negligent by not adequately securing the plant from public access.

On Aug. 21, 1989, Duffy's son, Brandon, entered the enclosed sewer plant by either scaling a low fence surrounding the plant or by climbing through a hole in the fence, according to the suit filed in the Johnson County District Court House.

Brandon then fell in one of the plant's holding tanks from which he was unable to escape.

Brandon Duffy died at the UI Hospitals and Clinics after being pulled from the tank.

Duffy has demanded a trial by jury and asked for compensation of medical expenses, the cost of the lawsuit and loss of companionship.

4 parties interested in sale of Iowa City Magazine

Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Subscribers to Iowa City Magazine will miss one issue while ownership of the soon-to-be-sold magazine changes hands, according to the magazine's creator and publisher, Christopher Green.

Green said Tuesday that four interested parties have approached him about buying the nine-month-old bimonthly magazine.

The magazine features human interest stories and literary contributions from UI graduates and Iowa City residents.

Green and a 30-member volunteer staff began publication of the magazine last July, but after only two issues Green opted to sell the magazine because the volunteer staff was overworked.

"It was always in the plan that the magazine would not continue with an all-volunteer staff," Green said.

The impending sale of the magazine is not a defeat for the locally produced journal, he added.

"The selling of the magazine is the best thing that could have happened. It has only happened sooner," he said.

The sale will place Iowa City Magazine well ahead of Green's expected growth schedule because new magazines are typically in production for about two years before they are sold, he said.

"In actuality, I think this is a great thing for the magazine," he said.

Green said he expected to have about 9,000 subscribers by the publication's second year. Though it has not reached 9,000 subscribers yet, the magazine will likely meet the goal, he said.

Four possible buyers have approached Green — two Illinois publishing companies, one Illinois private investor and a local group, he said.

Green would not identify the prospective buyers but said the new owners would organize their own staff, which could include people who have worked for the magazine.

Advertising agreements will be honored by the new owners as part of the purchasing agreement. Paying subscribers, hotels and real estate groups that receive complimentary copies should miss only one issue, he said.

The sale should be completed by the summer, when the June Summer Arts Fest issue is scheduled for release, he said.

He said contributors to the magazine were not paid, but included some notable Iowa City personalities.

The July issue included an interview with Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist and former Iowa City resident Berke Breathed. One of Breathed's characters, Opus of "Bloom County," was featured on the cover.

In addition, fiction by W.P. Kinsella, author of "Shoeless Joe" — the book upon which the movie "Field of Dreams" was based — was featured in the magazine.

Green spent almost eight years preparing to launch the magazine and said he will not be associated with the magazine after it is sold.

Charges dropped against 138 anti-abortion demonstrators

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

Criminal trespass charges, filed last year against 138 anti-abortion demonstrators after they blocked the doors of a UI gynecology clinic, were dismissed Friday in Johnson County District Court.

The demonstrators were among 154 anti-abortion activists arrested last year during a protest outside of Westlawn, which houses the UI Special Gynecology Clinic.

Sixteen of the arrested demonstrators were found not guilty in a trial last May, according to Johnson County District Court records.

A new trial would present the opportunity for the remaining 138 defendants to be "unfairly" found guilty of the same offense arising from the same incident, Sixth Judicial Magistrate Stephen Gerard II wrote in his ruling dismissing the charges.

"It is conceivable that if the state were to try this case 138 more times, a judge or jury could convict a defendant who conducted himself or herself in a manner identical to that of a defendant who was acquitted," Gerard said in the ruling. "Such a result would be fundamentally unfair and not in the interests of justice."

Furthermore, the evidence and issues already ruled upon in the first trial would be almost identical to those presented in an additional trial, and Gerard found the verdict based on these issues to be sound.

Having presided over the trial of the first 16 defendants, Gerard found that although the state presented its best evidence, they failed to establish the guilt of the defendants beyond a reasonable doubt, Gerard said in the ruling.

A total of 300 anti-abortion activists participated in the protest that was organized by the head of Operation Rescue of Iowa, the Rev. Larry Johnson of Cedar Rapids.

Operation Rescue is a national movement of anti-abortion activists who have been picketing and blocking entrances to anti-abortion clinics throughout the U.S. since 1987.

The group was met by about 200 local pro-choice activists who staged a counterprotest.

Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic in Iowa City — which co-sponsored the counterprotest — was disappointed with Gerard's decision to dismiss the charges.

"When will these bullies be held accountable for their harassment of women?" Sand asked. "They will continue their attempts of harassment but they will not prevent us from maintaining and protecting freedom of choice."

House lowers blood-alcohol level defining drunken driving

DES MOINES (AP) — The House Tuesday night voted to lower by 20 percent the blood-alcohol level bringing a drunken driving conviction, and to take away cars of repeat offenders.

And by the narrowest of margins, the House rejected a provision that would revoke the driver's licenses of youngsters caught possessing alcohol.

By a wider margin, legislators rejected efforts to drastically lower the alcohol levels for youngsters under 18.

The House voted to lower the blood-alcohol level for assumed drunkenness to 0.08 of a percent, down from the current 0.10 of a percent.

The move came as the House debated a bill pushed by Democratic leaders as the showcase effort to crack down on drug dealers and gang members. Debate centered on toughening the state's drunken driving laws, and the House voted 55-41 for an amendment lowering the blood-alcohol level.

Nineteen Democrats joined with 36 Republicans in approving the amendment, which has been pushed by Gov. Terry Branstad.

Iowa News

Witness protection

DES MOINES (AP) — Without debate Tuesday night, the House restored a provision allowing police to keep secret the addresses and telephone numbers of crime victims and witnesses.

The secrecy restriction applies to the victims and witnesses of violent crimes, or those where dangerous weapons are used.

Lawmakers had argued bitterly over the restrictions earlier in the session, but inserted them without comment in an omnibus crime package that was approved on a 91-2 vote.

There was no specific vote on the secrecy provision.

Backers of the secrecy argue it's needed to protect crime victims and witnesses from harassment when their addresses and telephone numbers are published by the press.

Critics — including the state's newspaper and broadcast industries — warn that it's an open invitation to police to close large sections of the police blotter to public view.

The House had earlier approved the secrecy requirement as a separate measure, but it was killed in the Senate.

The omnibus crime package now returns to the Senate, where the secrecy provision faces a questionable future.

Potty Parity

DES MOINES (AP) — The House today approved a scaled-back "potty parity" bill that would require more restrooms for women than men in new public buildings.

"It's too bad that a bill like this has to be caught up in frivolity, because it masks the seriousness of it," said Rep. Don Hermann, R-Bettendorf.

"How many times have you seen a long line at an event?" said Rep. David Osterberg, D-Mount Vernon. "Where is that long line? It's outside the women's bathroom."

The House approved the measure on a 58-32 vote, returning it to the Senate and a questionable future.

The measure was sparked by studies showing that women take longer to go to the restroom than do men.

Poindexter

"regulations will be observed" concerning contacting jurors.

In court, Witherspoon said Boustany wanted to know when the jury was supposed to have a verdict.

Washington Post editors instructed Boustany to find out how to get in touch with Witherspoon after the verdict, said Robert Kaiser, the Post's assistant managing editor for national news.

"She did this by calling him up to ask him," said Kaiser.

Boustany "made a mistake," said Kaiser. "She told us what had happened. We immediately called Judge Greene's chambers to tell them what had happened and to apologize."

The judge said the Post's explanation was that the reporter

"just came from Lebanon" and "didn't know the rules."

Greene called the explanation "a lame excuse."

Kaiser said the second juror was not contacted by a Post reporter.

The judge said court rules had been treated "cavalierly" and with "disdain" in an important trial.

Federal court rules in the District of Columbia don't specifically address press and public contact with jurors. The rules do say that no party or lawyer in a case or anyone acting on their behalf shall communicate with jurors during a trial.

Later in the day, Greene denied a request by the jury for copies of 5,000 messages that Poindexter deleted from his computer system days before he resigned.

The messages were preserved on a backup computer tape and some were admitted as evidence. Many, however, remain highly classified and were not introduced at the trial.

The deletion of the computer messages is specified in the indictment as part of Poindexter's alleged effort to obstruct Congress on the Iran initiative.

CDBG funds, which come from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, are intended to help lower income people, Milkman said.

Funds for 1990 will be used for local projects such as a Broadway Street Neighborhood Center, 2105 Broadway St.; aid to public service agencies; the second phase of the Hoover School playground accessibility project, 2200 E. Court St.; aid to small businesses and housing rehabilitation.

The largest amount in the amended budget, $360,480, is allocated for housing rehabilitation.

These funds will be used to meet needs such as house repairs, weatherization, and emergency repairs for fixed income residents.

Many of the funds for home improvements are distributed in the form of loans. When those funds are repaid to the CDBG fund they are used for additional projects, according to Milkman.

The income from the CDBG loans allowed all the projects scheduled for this year to survive despite the possible reduction in grant funds, Milkman said.

The only substantial funding decrease in the amended budget is in aid to public service agencies. That budget will decrease by $4,475 because only 15 percent of the entitlement funds may be used for public services.

City Manager Steve Atkins said reductions of this size often occur during the budgeting process and that the agencies will still receive the full funding approved for them by the Iowa City Council last month.

cated weaponry.

Lockheed Corp., won the contract to build 59 of the single-pilot, two-engine jets in 1978 and the first planes were delivered in 1982. The last two jets still under construction will be delivered in the fall of 1990, an Air Force statement said.

Although the Pentagon had touted its efforts to declassify much of the information about the plane, Williams said he was unable to disclose the jet's speed, exact range, weapons payload, or just how much of the aircraft can be seen on radar.

Nor would he say if the plane is capable of carrying nuclear weapons.

The spokesman did, however, describe the jet as being capable of flying in the "high subsonic range," or about 600 mph.

He refused to say whether the jet could carry air-to-air weaponry but did say it carries "the full range of tactical fighter ordnance" and is capable of "defending itself."

The single-pilot, dual-engine plane weighs 52,500 pounds. Its wingspan is just a little over 43 feet. It is just over 65 feet long, but only 12 feet, five inches high, the Pentagon said.

The so-called "stealth" technology in popular understanding refers to design and materials that reduce the ability of enemy radar to detect the craft.

This can be achieved by using designs that avoid the direct impact of radar, and by using composite materials that can absorb the radar's energy.

The packet distributed to reporters included a series of photographs of the plane, showing its angled exterior and slim profile in flight and on the desert runway.

Because the aircraft are going to be used more openly, the Air Force has proposed that the planes be moved from the Tonopah Test Range to the Air Force base at Holloman, N.M.

New law stiffens the punishments for those who commit 'hate crimes'

DES MOINES (AP) — People who commit such "hate crimes" as cross burnings and harassment of homosexuals face tougher punishment under a bill signed into law Tuesday by Gov. Terry Branstad.

"We believe this bill is a matter of simple justice," said Michael Current, co-chairman of the Iowa Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus, which supported the bill.

"I think certainly it will make us feel safer."

Current spoke outside Branstad's office after the governor signed the bill. No public ceremony was held by the governor to mark the event, but Branstad spoke of the bill at his weekly news conference earlier in the day.

"I think it's important that Iowa take a strong stand against hate-motivated crimes against people," Branstad said.

The bill instructs judges to consider tougher sentences for individuals convicted of committing crimes perpetrated because of a victim's sexual orientation, gender, race, religion, ancestry, age, political affiliation or disability.

Actions such as cross burnings and intimidation of minority group members are defined as aggravated misdemeanors punishable by up to two years in jail and a $5,000 fine, while actual physical attacks will continue to be prosecuted as felonies punishable by up to five years in prison and a $7,500 fine.

The bill instructs judges to consider harsher sentences for crimes aimed at members of groups mentioned in the legislation. It also allows such victims to file civil suits for damages, and requires the state to compile statistics on the number of hate crimes committed in Iowa.

Current said Iowa becomes the fifth state to enact special penalties for assaults on homosexuals, joining California, Minnesota, Oregon and Wisconsin.

Branstad originally proposed similar legislation more than a year ago, in response to several cross burnings in the state. The move stalled in the Legislature last year when the proposed bill was expanded to include protection of homosexuals in the state civil rights code, which Branstad resisted.

The bill was rewritten this year to delete any reference to homosexuals as a protected class under the civil rights code. The bill signed Tuesday addresses only the criminal code, but still drew opposition from some legislators who objected to the protection for homosexuals.

Branstad said most Iowans favor protection for homosexuals.

"We're a state that believes in tolerance and believes in equal opportunities for all of our citizens, and I think it's important that we stand for that," he said.

Current, who said he was once "brutally beaten because of the fact that I am a gay man," said the Iowa Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus will continue to push for inclusion in the state civil rights code in order to gain protection from discrimination in housing, employment and other areas.

Bush

State Lawrence Eagleburger.

The foreign minister's agenda here reaches beyond Lithuania to the war in Angola between U.S. and Soviet-backed forces, to ways of limiting cruise missiles in a U.S.-Soviet arms control treaty nearing completion in Geneva and to trying to set a date for Gorbachev's summit meeting here with Bush in June.

Bush and Gorbachev hope to sign an accord at that meeting to limit their long-range nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines. However, claims that the overall cut-back would amount to 50 percent were being challenged.

A senior Bush administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that the United States would wind up with only slightly fewer deployed warheads than in the current arsenal.

When warheads kept in storage are taken into account, he said, the U.S. total actually would exceed today's level.

The official said the principal virtue of the treaty from the U.S. standpoint would be to force a reduction in long-range Soviet SS-18 missiles.

Meanwhile, Margaret Tutwiler, the State Department spokeswoman, said the treaty would cut the SS-18 force in half and reduce the total deployed Soviet missiles by roughly 50 percent.

"The treaty is based on equality," she said, reading from a statement. "Since Soviet force levels exceed our own in the most dangerous and destabilizing systems, their reductions will be somewhat larger."

Still, Tutwiler said Soviet actions in Lithuania were at the top of the agenda for Baker's sessions with Shevardnadze.

When they met last month in Namibia at independence ceremonies for the new African nation, Shevardnadze offered assurances the conflict in Lithuania would be dealt with peaceably.

Baker subsequently sent a message to Shevardnadze, and Bush wrote Gorbachev. Neither has received a reply, but U.S. officials said that was not a cause for concern.

"They may have felt it was not necessary in view of Shevardnadze's visit coming up so soon," an official said.

Bush told reporters during a Republican fund-raising trip to the Midwest on Tuesday that his Friday meeting with Shevardnadze "will be the chance ... to see how that message went down in Moscow."

The president reiterated his hope "to see this matter handled in a cool fashion — freedom, democracy and self-determination all goes forward, but where it's handled in a way (that) the result is peaceful and no use of force."

The Soviets have acknowledged the Lithuanians have a right to self-determination. However, the Kremlin has insisted they annul a March 11 declaration of independence as a prerequisite for negotiations.

The secessionists are unwilling to take that step. Lithuanian leaders, softening their approach, insisted Monday they had never expected immediate independence.

Lithuania's chief diplomat in Washington said he believes the Soviet army may have assumed the lead role in dealing with the independence crisis.

Stasys Lozaraitis Jr. said at a news conference that the Soviet military show of force in Lithuania has made him more pessimistic about Lithuania's fate.

"Maybe the army is very unhappy with the situation in the Baltic and is doing something (Gorbachev) cannot control and cannot stop," Lozaraitis said.

Lozaraitis, who heads a two-man diplomatic delegation here, offered to meet with Shevardnadze during the foreign minister's four-day visit.

Lithuania

Lithuania's chief diplomat in Washington, Stasys Lozaraitis Jr., told reporters there he believes the Soviet army may have taken the lead role from Gorbachev in dealing with the crisis. He said the Soviet military show of force in Lithuania made him more pessimistic than before about his homeland's fate.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived in Washington for talks with President George Bush and Secretary of State James Baker, pledging to hold "honest dialogue" with secessionist Lithuanians. Administration officials hope he brought a message from Gorbachev that will spell out Moscow's promise to deal peacefully with Lithuania's independence movement.

Yakovlev is seen as a key aide to Gorbachev and is considered the architect of his policy of glasnost, or greater openness.

Yakovlev led a parliamentary commission that last year reviewed the secret Soviet-Nazi pact under which the three Baltic republics — Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia — were absorbed into the Soviet Union. The commission's work led the Soviet Congress of People's Deputies in December to condemn the 1939 pact.

Tuesday marked the first high-level personal contact between Lithuania and Moscow since just after Lithuania declared itself independent last month.

The talks, which Bickauskas described as "consultations ... a conversation," lasted for more than three hours. He could provide no details.

"It is likely there would be no concrete decisions but the very fact that they heard us is very good," he said.

Gorbachev says he will not negotiate with Lithuania, but will hold discussions on any topic as long as the republic renounces the declaration of independence.

"Independent states are not created in such a way in an overnight takeover," presidential spokesman Arkady Maslennikov told reporters Tuesday.

The meeting came amid increasing conciliatory signals from the two sides.

The clash of wills included Gorbachev's orders to Lithuanians to hand over their weapons; the arrest by Soviet troops of some Lithuanian deserters; takeover of several buildings in Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital, by Soviet soldiers; movements of army reinforcements and a war of words.

Bickauskas said Lithuania had no means of implementing its proclaimed independence if Soviet soldiers continue to interfere in the republic.

"We have declared independence but we very well know that tanks are moving on our soil every day and night, and they take over one building after another," he said.

"We realize the Soviet Union has economic, political and military interests in Lithuania that cannot be cut all at once. These problems involve not only the Soviet Union and Lithuania but Europe and the whole world. So we need to talk. We want somebody to hold a dialogue with us."

Anatoly Lukyanov, chairman of the Supreme Soviet parliament, spoke of "friendly ties" with Lithuania and said Moscow does not question its right to secede, as long as the republic follows proper constitutional procedures.

But Gorbachev also met Tuesday with a leader of Lithuania's 35,000-member Communist Youth movement, who urged him to impose presidential rule in the republic. The appeal was broadcast on Soviet TV's national news.

Soviet news media continued supporting attempts by Lithuania's minority pro-Moscow Communist Party to halt the printing of at least four pro-independence newspapers at Vilnius' central printing plant.

Lithuanian journalists said the newspapers appeared as usual Tuesday, despite the building's being controlled by Soviet Interior Ministry troops.

Man has cocaine implanted in thighs

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — U.S. Customs inspectors at San Juan's international airport arrested a man from Colombia after finding a pound of cocaine surgically implanted in his thighs, officials said Tuesday.

"In more than 20 years with the U.S. Customs Service, this is the most bizarre form of drug smuggling I have ever encountered or heard about," said Mamie E. Pollack, the agency's district director.

Roberto Julian O'Neil, 23, a Colombian citizen, was arrested Saturday on drug-smuggling charges after arriving at San Juan's Luis Munoz Marin International Airport on a flight from Bogota, the Customs Service in Miami said in a statement.

It said O'Neil was waiting to board a flight to Madrid when he attracted the attention of a Customs inspector by the stiff-legged way he walked.

Inspectors took O'Neil to a private room, where during a pat-down they discovered what at first they thought to be something taped to his thighs, the statement said.

Further examination revealed bulging, badly infected incisions covered only by strips of adhesive tape, the Customs Service said.

O'Neil was taken to a hospital, where doctors removed his stitches and took a half-pound of cocaine from each thigh, the statement said. It said the cocaine was in four packets, each containing a quarter pound of cocaine. Each packet was about one square inch and nearly six inches long.

Prison riot enters third day

MANCHESTER, England — Guards drove rebellious inmates into the upper reaches of a decaying Victorian prison Tuesday and some prisoners prevented others from surrendering after a three-day uprising, authorities said.

The government said one prisoner died in a hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered in rioting at Strangeways Prison. The Home Office identified him as Derek White, 46, convicted of sex offenses.

Thirteen guards were injured by flying bricks, poles and other objects as they recaptured one prison wing and the lower floors of the other four wings taken over by inmates, said Ivor Serle, chairman of the local branch of the Prison Officers' Association.

In London, the Home Office, which is responsible for prisons, said prisoners still controlled two wings.

Serle said six guards were hospitalized. "There were many broken bones and one officer has a punctured lung," he said.

Advancing guards carried only shields and truncheons, he added. "That's all. This is England, not America," he snapped at an American reporter.

Newspapers have speculated up to 30 people were killed in rioting that began at a chapel service Sunday morning, but Serle said no bodies had been found.

Senator: Increase Alzheimer's funding

WASHINGTON — Sen. Mark Hatfield, in an emotional plea for increased money for Alzheimer's research, told Congress Tuesday how the disease had affected his powerful father.

Television actresses Angie Dickinson and Shelley Fabares also testified about how Alzheimer's has hurt their families and urged increased spending on research of the disease.

The actresses were upstaged by the Oregon Republican, who drew loud applause during a hearing before the House Select Committee on Aging and the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

The panels are considering legislation that would double and eventually triple the $148 million a year the government now spends on research into Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's is a mental disorder which strikes older people. Medical science has found no cure for it.

Hatfield said his father remained active and jogged daily at the age of 80.

"Then one day my mother got a telephone call from a woman who said, 'Your husband is here and he has lost his way back home.' That was the first indication that something was awry," Hatfield said.

Hatfield said the state of Oregon is moving toward centralized research and services for victims of Alzheimer's and their families.

House approves aid for Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House on Tuesday approved a $2.4 billion spending bill that includes money President George Bush is urgently seeking for new democracies in Panama and Nicaragua.

The bill, with $720 million for the two Central American nations, would mark the first use of a "peace dividend" from reduced Pentagon spending. It still needed Senate action, which appeared unlikely by the Thursday deadline Bush had set for completion of the measure.

Lawmakers approved the bill on a vote of 362-59 after defeating a series of amendments that would have cut foreign aid amounts in the bill. Those amendments brought caustic reactions from the bill's supporters.

"I am amazed at the number of flat-headed members in this House who are all too happy to spend whatever it takes" to support wars "but wouldn't spend a penny to prevent the necessity to fight those wars in the first place," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis.

Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, sought to cut 5 percent from the foreign aid portions of the bill, charging the measure was "busting the bank. . . before we ship money overseas, let's take care of our own country first."

Countered Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.: "This amendment shows why people are fed up with Congress — because we're looking at the little bitty 'Did I get mine' . . . instead of taking care of the security of our people."

The Senate's Democratic leaders had not yet scheduled considera-

American pvt. seizes jet in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—A 20-year-old soldier carrying grenades seized a New York-bound jumbo jet at Haiti's airport and threatened to blow it up Tuesday if he was not flown to the United States.

A radio report, however, said the soldier had let the handful of passengers and crew aboard American Airlines Flight 658 get off. Officials confirmed he was alone on board the craft.

Pvt. Pierre Gerald, an airport security guard, boarded the Airbus A300 on Monday afternoon as it was preparing to leave for New York, said Radio Haiti Inter and an American Airlines spokesman.

The radio said the young soldier was armed with grenades when he commandeered the plane in an attempt to desert the army after he was reprimanded by an officer for alleged insubordination. It said Gerald had been in the army two years.

U.S. Ambassador Alvin Adams, Minister of Interior Joseph Maxi and Police Commissioner Jean-Claude Duperval went to the airport Tuesday afternoon.

After a popular uprising drove Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril from power last month, Adams reportedly helped convince the fallen military ruler to leave the country. Haiti now has a civilian government.

The radio said negotiations with military and airport officials Monday night were fruitless and Gerald spent the night alone in the aircraft. No flights were arriving or taking off from the airport Tuesday.

The Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste said in a telephone call from the Haitian capital Tuesday that he found out about the incident when he went to board a plane Tuesday and discovered the airport closed. According to Jean-Juste, the soldier had grenades and possibly an Uzi submachine gun.

Gerald gave officials until noon Tuesday to fly him to Miami. A few minutes before the deadline, he appeared in the plane's doorway and shot once into the tarmac, Haiti Inter said.

There were no reported injuries. Jean-Juste said Gerald was still inside the plane late Tuesday afternoon.

American Airlines spokesman Al Becker said Gerald got on board the jet by means of a catering truck that was servicing the plane.

Another American Airlines spokesman, John Hotard, confirmed there were no passengers or crewmembers on board.

Gerald told an unidentified media-tor Tuesday he was willing to travel with passengers to Miami, radio stations reported.

In June, four unarmed Haitians tried to hijack to New York an Antillean Airlines flight en route from Haiti to the Dutch Caribbean island of Curacao.

During the flight, one of the hijackers claimed to have planted a bomb that could blow up the plane.

White House officials have pleaded with Congress in recent weeks to expedite aid to Panama, where a U.S. invasion in December ousted dictator Manuel Noriega and installed a new government, and to Nicaragua, where voters turned out leftist President Daniel Ortega in February elections.

Stasi secret police. The controversy surrounding Bohme had hampered negotiations. Social Democratic officials met with Alliance for Germany negotiators just hours after the Social Democrats announced they were ready to begin formal talks.

The Alliance for Germany is a three-party coalition that favors quick reunification with West Germany. It received the most votes in parliamentary elections March 18 but not enough to form a majority in the 400-seat Parliament.

A two-thirds majority is needed to make major decisions for rapid unification.

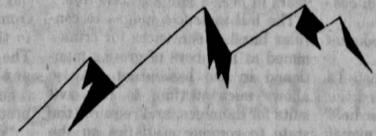

Rainer Eppelmann, leader of Democratic Awakening, one of the parties in the Alliance for Germany, said he was hoping for a quick agreement "so people in East Germany know where they stand."

E. Germans will try to form gov't this month

EAST BERLIN (AP)—East Germany's main political groups agreed Tuesday to try to form the nation's first non-Communist government before April 15 and resolve lingering differences over unification with West Germany.

The conservative Alliance for Germany, winner of the most Parliament seats in the March 18 elections and closely allied with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, met for formal talks with the Social Democrats, who finished second.

Party leaders said following the afternoon session they had agreed on a framework for talks that they expected would result in a governing coalition of this nation of 16 million residents by Easter Sunday, April 15.

They agreed too to form smaller groups to discuss the issues that divide them, particularly the pace of reunification. The talks are aimed at forging a "grand coalition" that includes both conservatives and liberals.

East Germany's disparate political factions had suddenly united this week to demand that West Germany give 1-to-1 value to East German marks when the nations reunify and the powerful deutsche mark becomes the common currency.

Unification talks with West Germany had been temporarily on hold while the newly elected Parliament chose a leadership to replace the caretaker Communist government. The caretaker government has been running the country since the fall revolution toppled the hard-line Communist regime of Erich Honecker.

The talks also follow the resignation of the Social Democrats' leader, Ibrahim Bohme, amid allegations he had links to the hated

89-11 vote in Senate passes federal air pollution controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate overwhelmingly approved sweeping air pollution controls on automobiles, factories and power plants Tuesday after a decade of struggle over whether to strengthen federal clean air laws.

The new controls, which are estimated to cost the economy $21 billion a year when they go fully into effect, were approved by a vote of 89-11.

President George Bush, speaking in Indianapolis in advance of Senate action, called it "a historic vote" that would "affect generations to come as we work to build a cleaner, safer America."

After the vote, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We're pleased and we'll work for passage in the House."

Senate approval shifted the clean air debate to the House where a similar bill is being written by the Energy and Commerce Committee. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the panel's chairman, said he plans to have the committee vote by week's end and expects floor action next month.

Differences in the Senate and House measures will then still have to be worked out.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, acknowledged the new requirements would be expensive to industry, but argued "the costs of inaction will be higher than the cost of this bill." Health experts have estimated air pollution may account for 50,000 premature deaths every year, he said.

"We can no longer delay," said Mitchell, who has sought federal controls on acid rain for nearly a decade and made the clean-air bill his top priority as Democratic leader.

"The American people want action. They demand action," he continued.

But to many senators, particularly from the Midwest, the vote represented an agonizing choice between cleaner air and concern about the impact of the new controls on employment and electric bills back home.

"This bill will absolutely decimate my state of Illinois," declared Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., whose state has utility plants that rely on high-sulfur coal as well as coal miners whose jobs will be jeopardized by new measures to combat acid rain.

Dixon was among the 11 senators who voted against the legislation.

Clean-air legislation affects both industry, consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the key provisions of clean air legislation passed by the Senate:

Urban Smog

Requires states and local authorities to develop pollution control plans to reduce urban smog and bring air quality in more than 100 cities within federal health standards. Timetable for meeting the standards ranged from five to 15 years, with Los Angeles getting 20 years because of the severity of its problem.

Smog-causing pollutants, or ozone, are reduced through controls on automobiles and industry, with annual pollution improvements of 4 percent a year required over first six years.

Automobiles:

Tougher tailpipe emission requirements by 1995 cutting hydrocarbon releases by 22 percent and nitrogen oxide emissions by 66 percent.

Cleaner fuels for all automobiles in nine cities with the worst pollution. The nine cities are Los Angeles, Houston, New York City, Milwaukee, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Hartford, Conn., San Diego and Chicago.

Special canisters on auto fuel systems to reduce emissions during refueling.

Industrial Sources:

Sources emitting 100 tons of smog-causing pollutants must install new smog control technology, although a waiver may be given in some cases if pollution control costs exceed $5,000 per ton.

Toxic Chemicals

Requires industrial plants to install best available technology to control the release of about 200 hazardous chemicals linked to cancer, nervous disorders and birth defects. That affects a wide range of industries including oil refineries, chemical plants, smelters, dry cleaners and paint shops. The EPA now regulates only seven chemicals.

Acid Rain

Requires annual sulfur dioxide releases to be reduced by 10 million tons by 2000, roughly cutting such emissions in half.

It allows utilities to buy and sell "pollution credits" among themselves as long as total reductions in emissions are not affected. Extra allowances are given to Midwest utilities and some "clean" plants to ease the cost burden and allow for future growth.

Nitrogen oxide releases, which also contribute to acid rain, must be cut by 2.7 million tons.

It will affect 107 coal-fired electric power plants with Midwest utilities using high-sulfur coal.

"I cannot vote for legislation that will destroy the livelihood of thousands of hard-working men and women... that will bring economic ruin to communities throughout Appalachian and Midwestern states," said Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who unsuccessfully had sought financial help for coal miners affected by the bill.

The final vote came after a brief flurry of excitement over an attempt by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., at the last minute to change the permit requirements of the bill and make it easier for businesses to comply. Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., called the 34-page amendment "an ambush" that would hamper enforcement of the new requirements and hinder civil suits against polluters.

The amendment was narrowly defeated by a vote of 51-49.

The clean-air bills before Congress represent the first attempt to strengthen federal air pollution laws in 13 years, despite widespread agreement among environmentalists and federal regulators that the 1970 Clean Air Act has failed to rid cities of dirty air.

Bomb ignites Hindu rampage

AMRITSAR, India (AP)—A bomb believed set by Sikh radicals exploded in the midst of a Hindu celebration Tuesday and killed at least 33 people, police said. Enraged Hindus went on a rampage afterward, and five police officers were reported injured.

Most of the casualties from the bomb blast were Hindus, but some Sikhs who had been watching the procession were among the victims. Police said 68 people were injured in the explosion.

The bomb went off as about 100,000 Hindus celebrating the birth of a god-king marched through a crowded vegetable market in Batala. The town is 25 miles north of Amritsar, the holiest Sikh city and the stronghold of Sikh militants fighting for a separate nation in Punjab state.

Senior police superintendent S.K. Goel said the bomb was hidden in a scooter parked outside a cigarette kiosk.

Goel said 30 of the injured were in serious condition. He said Sikh militants were probably responsible.

The radicals have killed more than 500 people this year in their quest for a Sikh homeland. They are a minority in Hindu-dominated India but form the majority in Punjab, a farming state in northern India.

Soon after the blast, angry Hindus went on a rampage, hurling stones at a police station near the market, said a police inspector. He said five policemen were injured.

Officers fired into the air to quell the riot, and an indefinite curfew was imposed in Batala, a Hindu-dominated city of about 120,000 people.

The annual procession marked Ram Navami, a Hindu holiday celebrating the birth of Rama. Rama is extolled in Hindu lore as an incarnation of Vishnu, a member of the supreme Hindu trinity of gods.

Food vendor Prem Nath described the explosion from his hospital bed in Amritsar. "There was loud sound. Then the entire area was covered with dark smoke and fire which rose as high as electric poles," he said.

Earlier Tuesday, a bomb exploded on a bus in another town near Amritsar, killing the driver and one passenger, senior police superintendent Anil Sharma said.

Police also blamed Sikh extremists for that blast. Both the victims were Sikhs.

When the Sikhs began their fight in 1982, they targeted Hindus. In recent years they have turned their guns on fellow Sikhs who do not support the separatist cause.

55 killed in South African violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Soldiers and police in armored vehicles patrolled on Tuesday in Natal province, where a week of black factional fighting has killed scores of people.

Black leader Nelson Mandela said his supporters doubted the neutrality and effectiveness of the security forces.

Armored patrols moved through Edendale Valley in the southeastern province, where a four-year-old battle for supremacy between two rival black groups has grown to virtual civil war.

Police said at least 55 people had been killed in the past week. University of Natal researchers put the death toll at 80 and accused Inkatha, a relatively conservative Zulu group, of "a systematic, coordinated and concerted onslaught."

Another police report Tuesday said 13 more people had been killed, most of them in black factional fighting elsewhere in the country, but gave few details.

The struggle in Natal is between Inkatha, headed by Zulu homeland leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, and supporters of Mandela's African National Congress guerrilla movement.

After a two-day visit to troubled black townships in Natal, Mandela said Tuesday it was "encouraging to see" President F.W. de Klerk "concerned about the situation."

He added, however: "Unilateral action by the government without consulting acknowledged (black) leaders is bound to be ineffective, regardless of merit."

De Klerk and Mandela are scheduled to meet Thursday about ways to stop the worst outbreak of violence in South Africa since the mid-1980s. Hundreds of people have been killed in the past two months.

"There is a deeply entrenched perception that the police are directly involved in the violence that is raging in this province," he said. About 4,000 people have been killed in Natal since 1986, but there have been few prosecutions. Most neutral observers have blamed both Inkatha and ANC supporters for the violence.

The University of Natal researchers claimed Inkatha was responsible for the latest fighting. They said more than 2,000 "Inkatha warriors" took part in one attack last week.

Mandela defended the ANC decision to cancel April 11 peace talks with the government. The cancellation was to protest the killing of at least 11 blacks when police fired on demonstrators March 26 at Sebokeng, a township south of Johannesburg.

More than 12,000 refugees, most of them women and children, have fled the Edendale area and are being sheltered in camps, police reported. They said rival mobs had burned hundreds of houses in the area.

Iran radicals deny Western alliance charges

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—A radical Iranian newspaper Tuesday denied a Kuwaiti news report that said the United States and Iran will normalize relations and that kidnapers in Lebanon could free their American hostages.

"The filthiest accusation against an independent and revolutionary government is to charge it with being dependent," said the editorial in the Farsi-language Jomhuri Islami.

"The Islamic republic system in Iran has been the constant target of propagandistic assaults by the East and the West because it never gave in to blackmail of anybody or any power or government."

The newspaper was quoted by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency in a dispatch monitored in Cyprus. Jomhuri Islami is aligned with the radical faction that opposes President Hashemi Rafsanjani's efforts to improve relations with the West.

The Kuwaiti daily Al-Seyassah, quoting reliably informed Arab sources, predicted last Wednesday that a deal between Iran and the United States would be completed by the end of the year.

Like all Kuwaiti newspapers, Al-Seyassah is independent but basically pro-government. IRNA did not name the "Kuwaiti newspaper" that published "last week's report," but it was clearly referring to the Al-Seyassah article.

"The revolutionary and Moslem nation of Iran continues to consider the United States as the Great Satan and rejects any ties with Washington," the Iranian newspaper said.

Kuwait's Al-Seyassah wrote in its front-page story that the United States already had resumed supplying military aid and technicians to Iran.

Al-Seyassah wrote that "the hostage issue has now become an integral part of a deal, the completion of which could take the remaining months of the year."

"Hezbollah's extremely difficult conditions could be nothing more than a political, cosmetic operation that precedes the normalization of Iranian-U.S. relations and the release of the hostages," the newspaper said.

The Year In Photos

The Daily Iowan's First Annual Photo Contest

The Daily Iowan invites all local photographers to submit their favorite photos from the past year for consideration in our first annual Year In Photos competition.

You may enter photos in black and white or color. Winning photos will be published in a special Daily Iowan supplement on Friday, April 27, 1990. All published photographers will be given a Daily Iowan If It Happens, It's News To Us T-Shirt.

Fifty dollar cash prizes will be awarded to the photographers submitting the best black and white and the best color photo.

Color: Entries must be submitted in slide form. We will publish the top three color entries and as many others in full color as space permits. The best color photo will be printed as the cover and the photographer will win $50.

Black & White: Entries must be printed no smaller than 3 x 5 inches. We will publish the top three black and white photos and as many others as space permits. The photographer with the best black & white photo will win $50.

Rules: All photos must be submitted to Cathy Witt, The Daily Iowan, Room 2015 Communications Center by noon, Friday, April 6, 1990. Place each photo or slide in an envelope with your name address, phone number and a brief description. All published photos will include the photographer's name and a brief description of the subject. Judging will be done by The Daily Iowan staff. Winners will be contacted prior to publication date. # Ryan White remains critical INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — AIDS patient Ryan White fought for his life Tuesday as thousands of messages of love and prayers poured in from small towns and big names, including President George Bush and Michael Jackson.

Singer Elton John flew in from Los Angeles.

White, 18, remained in critical condition on a life-support system, said Dr. Martin Kleiman. He was unconscious and heavily sedated so that life-support systems would function more efficiently.

White, who during his five-year battle with AIDS grew from an object of scorn in his hometown of Kokomo to an international spokesman for AIDS patients, has been hospitalized at Riley Hospital for Children since Thursday.

His mother, Jeanne, and sister, Andrea, have remained at his bedside. His father, Wayne White, who is divorced from Jeanne White, visited his son Monday.

"She's got an awful lot of faith and she believes in that boy," said Carrie Van Dyke, a spokeswoman for the family and for the Indiana State Board of Health.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Maxwell said the flood of calls "has been bedlam. We're getting calls from every small town in the United States. It hasn't let up."

Among those who left messages were actor Tony Danza and the son of comedian Milton Berle.

Callers conveyed "good wishes, concern, prayers and love," Linne said.

Van Dyke said John visited the hospital overnight.

She said John spent five hours with the family and "just raised their spirits tremendously, that someone of his stature would care so much to drop everything."

When Jackson called, a speaker phone was brought to White's bedside in hopes the unconscious youth would hear Jackson's words.

President George Bush and Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut plant a tree for AIDS victim Ryan White Tuesday in downtown Indianapolis. White has been hospitalized for his ailment.

"He told Ryan he loved him and that God is with him," Van Dyke said. "And he said, 'Hang in there, buddy, and get better.'"

Jackson befriended White a couple of years ago and gave him a car. White also was a guest at Jackson's California ranch during the New Year holiday.

Bush, who was in Indianapolis for a political fund-raiser, planted a tree for White at a ceremony 1 1/2 miles from the hospital.

"He's been fighting a courageous battle against a deadly disease and also against ignorance and fear. Ryan has helped us understand the truth about AIDS and he's shown all of us the strength and bravery of the human heart," Bush said.

Bush considers bomber cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is considering scaling back production of the B-2 bomber, Air Force Secretary Donald Rice said Tuesday in his first public comments on the Pentagon's review of major weapons systems.

"We think there are some alternate profiles... with some very modest effect on the total cost of the program," Rice told members of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on defense.

The Air Force secretary declined to provide many specifics but said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is re-examining current Pentagon plans to buy 132 of the stealth bombers at a cost of more than $70 billion.

The overriding concern at the department is forcing up the cost of a single, radar-evading bomber — about $530 million apiece — by purchasing less than the full fleet.

Rice said legislation pending in Congress that would stop production of the bat-winged plane at the 15 bombers currently being built would cost $33 billion to $34 billion.

Based on those numbers, a single plane would cost more than $2 billion, he said.

President George Bush's $307 billion defense budget for fiscal 1991 calls for $5.5 billion for the stealth bomber program, which includes the purchase of five planes and other expenses.

But in the mid-1990s, the administration is projecting buys of 10 planes and later 24 in a single year with annual costs of nearly $10 billion.

Rice said the most efficient production rate for the plane's manufacturer, Northrop Corp., is 29 planes a year. But the Air Force secretary conceded that it will be difficult to convince Congress to spend almost $10 billion a year on a single weapons program.

Pressed for the options the Pentagon is weighing, Rice said: "I can't give numbers except to say several billion dollars a year less than peak funding level" of close to $10 billion.

"It would inevitably get up to a lower production rate on the order of two-thirds, perhaps three-fourths what had been peak rate," Rice said in reference to the 29 bombers a year.

Democrats and Republicans on the panel made it clear that the B-2 program, for which the government has invested more than $23 billion, faces an uphill fight in Congress.

Sen. Robert Kastner, R-Wis., a proponent of the stealth bomber, questioned Rice on the alternatives to the full fleet of 132 bombers — a total that many lawmakers say is unlikely.

"I'm trying to help you guys with this weapons system," Kastner said. "Today it's hard to help."

Stevens said several of his colleagues were thinking about sticking with the weapons and planes currently in use and looking ahead several generations to other programs.

EDUCATION

The only solution

The news this week of the decline of Iowa teachers' salaries in national rank and of America's continued bad marks on the so-called "Nation's Report Card" confirms the general decay of primary and secondary education in the United States. Radical changes must be made in the substance and quality of the public education system to improve the quality of life in this country and to keep the workforce competitive with other industrial nations.

The negative effects of the current system manifest themselves in countless ways. Many Americans, whose nation has failed to educate them properly, are ill-equipped to be citizens in a democracy. Mass media, driven by narrow interest groups, are able to manipulate voters, blurring their understanding of the proper role of their legislatures, their executives and their courts. Most importantly, however, is the failure of our government to make its citizens literate, numerate, and aware of the health risks associated with sexual activity and drug use — three areas of knowledge that no one living in an industrial society should lack.

This week's news suggests some basic solutions to the languishing educational system. First, the teaching profession needs to be made more attractive through higher salaries and merit pay. Second, with an increase in the length of the school day and the school year, the education of American students could at least conceivably approach that of other industrialized nations.

Such reforms have one obvious and major obstacle — cost. With politicians at all levels hesitant to raise taxes, funding for educational improvement requires sacrifices from defense and other domestic programs. This tradeoff is both realistic and desirable. The defense budget is more ready to be cut than anytime since the Cold War began, and much domestic spending is ineffective and short-sighted. It is only education that can genuinely improve the livelihood of the American people — it has short-term costs, but it is worthwhile in the long run.

CHEATING

Rotting on the GRE

American universities may be flattered that overseas students think the value of an American education warrants cheating. But to Indian students who were caught cheating in the Graduate Record Examination, the issue is, and should be, a matter of shame.

GRE scores are only one of the many criteria universities use for admitting candidates. That the cheaters may not have achieved much does not lessen the gravity of the misdemeanor.

They have cast a stain on the whole of Indian students. On account of this bunch of bad apples, people could well think that the whole tree is rotten. On one hand, there are people who will dismiss these incidents as unhappy episodes. At the other extreme, there are people who will question whether such malpractices occur in every Indian university, who will question the legitimacy of every Indian diploma. In either case, the aftertaste is foul.

Students — and this applies to any students, in any country — need to realize that cheating affects not just the cheater, but has repercussions that stain their fellow students and their institutions.

EUROPEAN UNITY

EC needs Uncle Sam

Many Americans are rubbing their hands with glee at the fall of the oppressive Communist regimes in Eastern Europe but, perhaps, they might take a while to consider the real consequences of the past year's happenings. Americans need to realize the instability — not only of the East Bloc's fledgling democracies — but of the whole of Europe.

Previously, Western Europe seemed to be grinding slowly via the European Community toward some sort of social and economic unity. The many and drastic changes have recently imposed a dangerous state of flux.

Members of the EC are becoming increasingly unsure of West Germany's commitment to the community. They know that the effort to make East Germany a "desirable residence" is going to sorely stretch the Federal Republic's coffers.

Combine this with the fact that a unified Germany, with the strength of an 80 million population, will also have to renegotiate its terms of entry into the EC and it becomes obvious that events will further delay the schedule for European unity. Unity that is now the only route to lasting stability.

The West German populace is only just beginning to awaken to the enormity of the task ahead of it, and many people are scared of what is to come. Some are genuinely frightened of deutsche Volks Siele or nationalistic spirit — not because they fear a "Fourth Reich," but because they believe this Volks Siele will get in the way of European unity.

The future of Europe looks alarmingly nebulous. Ultimately the United States will have a part to play in Europe's unfolding drama. This time, it may not be the protagonist, but its strength and stability will be needed in a supporting role.

Namibia still faces injustice

When South African police near Johannesburg opened fire last Monday on tens of thousands of blacks, killing eight people and wounding hundreds, the government's violence took most of the American public by surprise. We had been lulled into thinking that, after the release of Nelson Mandela, all was well in Southern Africa. We were led to believe that the apartheid regime was coming to its senses, a change proved by its fair and orderly transfer of power to the people of Namibia.

But nothing could be further from the truth. When I was in Namibia for its independence ceremonies last week, I learned that South Africa's transfer of power to Namibian President Sam Nujoma was neither orderly nor fair. On their way out, the representatives of the South African regime tightened the screws on the Namibian economy, kept members of their death squads on Namibian payroll, shredded and stole government documents and did everything in their power to assure their continued control over Namibia. The apartheid state is still up to its old tricks.

Because the media provided no context, everyone thinks that South Africa gave up its 75-year colonial domination of Namibia out of the goodness of its heart. In truth, South Africa was forced out by the Cuban presence in Angola, the military and political opposition of the South West African People's Organization, and international economic sanctions.

Jesse Jackson

But when it finally left, South Africa made sure that it was leaving behind a complete mess. The Nujoma government inherits a $200 million budget deficit in its first year of independence. In a typical last-minute move, the departing South Africans took $550 million out of the Namibian Civil Services pension fund and bought South African government bonds, thus using Namibia's dollars to break the sanctions against South Africa.

Similarly, South African police simply took the Namibian police communications system with them, leaving the new police force unequipped and ill prepared. Worse, South Africa integrated men of its infamous death squads from local security forces into parts of the new Namibian police department, leaving them on the payroll with no specific job description. Thus a violent Contra-like element could be entrenched in Namibia.

South Africa also worked to perpetuate its economic domination of Namibia, which still must use South African currency and is dependent on the South African banking and financial system. All sea, air and railway services are still under South African control.

The South Africans also unleashed a wave of "privatization" of national assets — such as government buildings — before leaving, further impoverishing the public sector and enriching Namibia's white community. There currently is an income disparity of 20-to-one between whites and blacks.

Because the media provided no context, everyone thinks that South Africa gave up its 75-year colonial domination of Namibia out of the goodness of its heart.

The new nation faces serious security problems at the borders. South Africa, immediately to the south, plans to keep military facilities at Walvis Bay. Meanwhile, in neighboring Angola, the bandits of Jonas Savimbi's UNITA forces — bought and paid for by the United States and the apartheid government — roam wild on Namibia's northern border.

In short, while Namibia has won its political independence, economic and military colonialism persist. South Africa continues to hold the Namibian people hostage in many ways.

The most urgent need in Namibia is for the redistribution of land to promote greater agricultural self-sufficiency. The United Nations can help to create and administer a Land Reparation Fund that would encourage self-sufficiency and provide start-up funds for community projects.

The United States, which has been the primary investor in war in the region, should now invest in peace and development. We must change our perverse foreign policy priorities.

The United States is scheduled to send $1 billion to Poland, $500 million to repair some of the damage in Panama, $50 million to Jonas Savimbi for his doomed campaign to overthrow the government of Angola, but only a pitiful $500,000 to the hungry, war-torn people of Namibia.

We can, and we must, do better than that. We have an obligation to help liberate Namibia from hunger and to secure its borders against the South African-controlled rebels of UNITA. We also have an obligation to be honest about what is going on in southern Africa. The American media, with all of their extraordinary staff and technology, must dig deeper. The media were in Namibia during the transfer of power, but they missed the real story.

The burden of South Africa's military occupation of Namibia has been lifted, but the political, economic and social costs of that occupation are still being paid by the Namibian people. We must now help them recover from the brutal consequences of South African colonialism.

The time for questions to be answered

What kinds of things do people look for in a job? Hours, salary, personal fulfillment and location are all considered — whether it's a part-time job or a career.

But there are other aspects to be considered: perks and the potential for personal advancement. These are the two which have allegedly been abused by Student Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona and his band of merry senators.

The accused senators are holding a press conference/public forum at 12:30 today in the Union to answer any and all questions regarding the legitimacy of their behavior. Rojas-Cardona has said he'll "have answers to all of them," and they should be interesting.

Jamie Butters

Certainly many of the questions have honest, even trivial, explanations. When all is said and done, will it really matter whose credit card was used for what expenses, or whether Melinda Hess was labeled a "student senator" or "former student senate president?" Not really.

But other questions will be more sticky. It will be interesting to learn about the Mandatory Student Fees money that was allegedly spent for extravagant perks such as the $6000-plus trip for nine senate-type students to California simply to withdraw the UI from the United States Student Association. It will also be interesting to find out how this happened, apparently, without senate approval.

What appears to be a significant issue is whether or not an elite group of senators gave themselves extravagant, unnecessary and illegitimate perks.

Every year every student must give the senate $64 in mandatory student fees. UI students might not care what is done with that $64. The low voter turnout for student senate elections could support this claim. But it is more likely that the students had just enough blind faith to assume that there is a system which prevents the senate from misusing funds. If these systems were in place they were either inadequate or circumnavigated.

It may be just a simple case of giving the senators too much freedom — freedom which may need to be curtailed. As Phillip Jones, dean of Student Services, told the Des Moines Register, "There have been extravagances in the past that won't be allowed in the future. There will be more scrutiny in the future." That would be nice.

Perhaps the senate would have approved the expenditures in question, but it seems they never had the chance. One could reasonably assume, though, that if most students were under the impression that their $64 were being spent on airfare and dinners, they would just as soon take the trip and the meal themselves.

The other, more serious set of charges regards Rojas-Cardona's management of the Big Ten Student Leaders conference and the Big Ten Student Association.

The original conference has left the UI with a deficit of $62,000 and the senate with one of $20,000, which Rojas-Cardona maintains will all balance out in the end.

Also a committee alleges that Rojas-Cardona intends to be executive director of the association, pay himself $32,000 a year, and hire his friends and family members at salaries ranging from $28,000 to $32,000 a year.

He has denied that he will assume the position and that he will even be able to hire whomever he desires, but since he founded and currently chairs the association, it's hardly inconceivable.

The UI may find it a good investment to plunk $62,000 into the BTSA. Rojas-Cardona said the money was approved by Jones because the UI would get a lot of publicity from the event. Also, a staff of $30,000-a-year professionals to run the association may be the best means of "taking money from corporations and putting it into the schools," as Rojas-Cardona describes the BTSA's mission.

Until today's questions are answered it will be simply to soon to determine what to make of the charges and those charged. But one thing just might come from the recent series of events. For the first time in a long time students may start paying attention to the words and deeds of their student politicians and take a real interest in how these people manage their $500,000 annual budget. And those interests might just carry on beyond the university setting.

That would be ideal.

Lowé gives lowdown on life/film parallels

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rob Lowé doesn't think anyone had a worse summer than he did, except maybe the Dodgers.

Lowé was trying to add lightness to a grim subject: his involvement in a sex scandal and his efforts to resume his film career.

"You have to have a sense of humor about it," he said. "You have to look at things in the long run. I knew that when this movie came out, people would be reminded of who I am and what I do. That is, that I'm an actor and I do have a private life, and everybody's private life gets out of control at one time or another."

"We're all human. We all make mistakes. I made my mistakes, and it got away from me for a bit, no different from anyone else. As I've said before, I made a mistake, and I tried to live up to it. I don't try to pretend that it never happened. It did happen, and we all go on."

Every watcher of the scandal sheets and their television counterparts knows what happened. While attending the Democratic National Convention in the summer of 1988, Lowé made a videotape of sex involving himself and two young women in his Atlanta hotel room. Claims and counterclaims rebounded, and Lowé agreed to do 30 hours of community service to avoid prosecution for allegedly seducing one of the women, then age 16. Her mother's suit against Lowé is pending.

The scandal is returning to the spotlight with the release of Lowé's new movie, bearing the wry title of "Bad Influence." He portrays a charming drifter who invites a humdrum businessman, James Spader, into Los Angeles' fast-lane life of drugs and lawlessness. Lowé videotapes Spader in a sex episode, and Lowé is seen in bed with two women.

"This is due to the totally coincidental nature of life imitating art and art imitating life," declares Steve Tisch, the movie's producer. "It's almost life and art having a head-on collision."

Lowé tried to minimize the coincidence of the two sequences: "They work so well to further the story. They are plot devices. The videotaping in the movie is to capture what happened in order to get somebody. If (the story) had taken place 70 years ago, I would have found a diary. Fifty years ago, it would have been the audio recording. In today's society, it's videotape."

"It's used so widely as a device in movies today. Sure, I had a videotape controversy, but when you consider all the movies where videotape is used, it's not really that big a deal. If it had been an elaborate sequence, we might have thought twice about removing it. But then what would I use to trap him, if not that?"

Curtis Hanson, director of "Bad Influence," commented that the sex scene with Lowé and the two women was necessary, "because through most of the picture, Rob is the force who causes things to happen; we needed to see him as a participant."

Lowé was originally cast in the Spader role, but he opted to play the evil Alex, fashioning him after classic villains from Iago to Michael Douglas' Gordon Gekko in "Wall Street." The actor usually creates his own "back story" of his film characters, but not this time. "Curtis told me you can't apply the usual principles to someone like Alex; he is totally unredeemable."

"Bad Influence" was in pre-production when the Atlanta scandal broke. Lowé was attending the Cannes Film Festival and returned immediately to confer with Tisch about continuing with the film. Lowé never considered withdrawing.

"We had to do the movie," he said. "Everybody was committed. It was still as viable a piece of material as it was before. Nothing had changed as far as the movie was concerned."

"So I never looked back in that sense. It only made us more concerned that we couldn't let what was going on in my personal life affect my professional life. The set was the place to work. We didn't want any distractions, or for me to be distracted. . . . I know that the performance would not be what it is without the emotional ammunition I got in going through such a tough summer."

Whether "Bad Influence" succeeds or not, it's likely that Rob Lowé's persona, both on and off screen, will never be the same. During his brief film career, his striking good looks often cast him as a somewhat wimpish yuppie. In his personal life, he was known as a supporter of environmental and liberal causes and companion of such beauties as actress Melissa Gilbert and Princess Stephanie of Monaco.

Lowé was born in Charlottesville, Va., and grew up in Dayton, Ohio, where he surprised his lawyer father by announcing at nine that he intended to become an actor. He appeared in 30 stage plays by the age of 12, then his family moved to Los Angeles. At 15 he appeared in a TV series, "A New Kind of Family"; at 18, he was picked by Francis Coppola for "The Outsiders."

"St. Elmo's Fire" provided his first adult role, as a burned-out sax player; then came "About Last Night" and "Square Dance," which won him a Golden Globe nomination as a mentally disabled young man.

"My only consolation in losing was that Sean Connery won (for 'The Untouchables')," he remarked.

Unlike his co-star, Spader, who shuns the media, Lowé faced a series of interviews for the film's opening and responded to all questions. He was asked if his looks had been a drawback in winning some roles.

"I'm sure it's possible," he replied. "There are a lot of movies being made today with guys who look like they could be delivering your paper, just average guys."

"For better or worse, I have a distinctive look. I was born with it; there's nothing I can do about it. I personally don't give it a thought — other than when people ask me about it in interviews. If I had a different face, they might be asking, 'If you were only five inches taller . . .'"

Gallup poll says New Yorkers approve of Ivana, dislike Marla

NEW YORK (AP) — The results of the latest poll are in on the saga of the divorcing billionaire: thumbs up for Ivana Trump and a mixed bag for Donald. The alleged other woman, Marla Maples, gets massacred.

Twelve percent of those questioned said they think very favorably of The Donald, the nickname Ivana Trump favors, and 30 percent said they regard Donald Trump in a mostly favorable light. The Gallup Organization conducted the poll of New York City residents for New York Newsday.

But 19 percent of the 1,010 respondents had very unfavorable impressions of Trump, while 17 percent were mostly unfavorable, Newsday reported Tuesday.

Nineteen percent had no opinion. And, in an indication that a self-promoter's work is never done, 3 percent said they'd never heard of Trump, who has his name on apartment houses, casinos, an airline and hotel.

"It seems to show his name is bigger than ever," a Trump spokesman said.

The jilted Ivana Trump scored very favorable responses from 14 percent and mostly favorable from 34 percent. Twelve percent fell into the "mostly unfavorable" category and 9 percent had very unfavorable feelings. Four percent claimed never to have heard of her. The rest had no opinion.

Maples, alleged Trump mistress, apparently has no reason to emerge from hiding. Her unfavorable rating was a combined 41 percent, versus 14 percent in the favorable category. Thirty-one percent couldn't rate Maples; 14 percent never heard of her.

Maples' agent, Chuck Jones, blamed press coverage. Ivana Trump aides weren't talking.

Mosaic floor painting stolen

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A 1,300-year-old mosaic floor painting was stolen from an ancient castle, apparently by professionals who cut the 270-square-foot block into small pieces and fled without a trace, officials said Tuesday.

The minister of tourism, Abdul Karim Kabariti, said the mosaic depicting a tree of life was "priceless." He said the theft occurred Sunday at the Hallabat Castle, a popular tourist attraction in the northeastern desert.

"It appears to be a highly professional job," the minister said. "They have left no traces whatsoever, not even tire tracks on the desert road."

The colorful mosaic depicts a large tree surrounded by animals. It was lifted off a floor of the castle.

A police expert, who cannot be identified under police regulations, said it would have "taken at least four people to do the job."

"It involved applying a strong liquid glue on the surface of the mosaic, covering it with jute cloth and lifting the entire thing at one time off the floor," the expert said.

Adnan Hadidi, former director of the Department of Antiquities, said it appeared the painting was "cut into small blocks after it was lifted off the floor."

Kabariti said all exit points of the kingdom, including airports and sea ports, were alerted.

Authorities said there would be a reward for information leading to the recovery of the mosaic, but the amount was not disclosed.

Kabariti said the work dates back to the 8th century A.D. rule of the Ummayyads, an Arab dynasty based in Damascus, Syria.

Zsa Zsa brouhaha continues

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The judge who ordered Zsa Zsa Gabor to work at a women's shelter as part of her sentence for hitting a policeman wants a detailed accounting of her hours of community service.

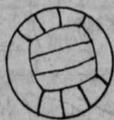

"Kindly send me copies of all records kept to document her community service activities as to dates, times and activities performed," Municipal Judge Charles Rubin wrote to the director of the homeless shelter.

In the letter released Monday, Rubin gave Vera Davis, executive director of the Venice-area LIEU-CAP shelter, until April 13 to document Gabor's work there.

Davis filed a three-paragraph letter with the court Friday stating that Gabor completed her 120 hours of community service but provided no detail.

Gabor was convicted September 29 for slapping Officer Paul Kramer during a traffic stop.

Tales of the Bizarre

RICHWOOD, W.Va. (AP) — The 52nd Ramp Festival will not be hard to find this weekend. Just get within hailing distance of the city and follow your nose.

Ramp, a wild leek, is grown on the mountains surrounding Richwood. Ramp season opens in late winter, but this year started in January because of warm weather. Some brave souls pickle the garlicky treat for eating year-round.

The Richwood Chamber of Commerce plans to give out free memberships in the "NRA" for each ticket sold to the annual ramp feed Saturday, which includes ham, buttermilk, other vegetables, sassafras tea and, of course, ramps.

"This NRA is the National Ramp Association," said Maxine Corbett, executive secretary of the chamber. "Which is worse? I'm not sure. A lot of people in the National Rifle Association might like to shoot people in the other NRA."

Dugan to give poetry reading

Joshua Clover
The Daily Iowan

Alan Dugan traveled from New York to Michigan to Mexico City, as well as serving in the army, just while pursuing an undergraduate degree; the questions of place, of getting somewhere, appear in his poetry from the incandescent opening of his career through his most recent book, the simply titled and complexly pleased "POEMS six."

Dugan, who will read his poetry tonight at 8 in Van Allen Hall Lecture Room II, might easily lay sole claim to the phrase "deceptively simple." His first book, "Poems," won the Yale Younger Poets Prize, The National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize, and earned him the Prix de Rome from the National Institute of Arts and Letters (he's not a slow starter).

"Poems" begins with the poem "This Morning Here," a work which promises safe and easy clarity: "This is this morning: all the evils and glories of last night are gone. . . . Quickly follows an arc which carries the reader on "rockets numbered like the Popes . . . broken on the moon."

Reading

It's the inability to remain in a safe and easy landscape (or language) which distinguishes a poet as both inquisitive and courageous — two qualities which Dugan possesses in abundance. In what is perhaps his most famous poem, "Love Song: I and Thou," the act of house-building goes through a transformation of significance not once but repeatedly: the metaphor of building one's own life arrives. "This is hell/ but I planned it." It is not enough to satisfy the poet's need for dangerous knowledge; the act becomes a study in auto-crucifixion: "I/ will live in it until it kills me./ I can nail my left palm/ to the left-hand crosspiece." But this still is not enough.

Finally, in one of the most stunning moves in modern verse, the poem resolves into its three-line finale: a marriage proposal. "I can't do everything myself," says Dugan, by now half-hung and defenseless, "I need a hand to nail the right/ a help, a love, a you, a wife."

Dugan hasn't stopped going to the place where destruction of the self looms as imminent, even inevitable. In the final poem of his most recent work, "Night Scene Before Combat," the travel toward an apocalyptic battle "when the lights are flashing on and off/ and what might sound like thunder is/ not thunder" seems at first to involve others — the speaker is not in the trucks but rather trying "to get some sleep with you." It becomes clear that there is not such a simple distinction between love and war, staying and going: the battle is "about love, not just the weapons and battles/ but the problems of supply, logistics, of getting the material to the front."

Love becomes the only fight as well as the only place worth getting to and, in classic Dugan style, the poem's speaker prepares for his own inescapable departure from modern-pastoral ease to the center of danger and despair. Regrettably he turns "to you/ for one last time in sleep, love/ before I put my uniform back on" and with only a "So long" goes off to fight the best fight.

The issue of winning is never broached: the melancholia of leaving safe havens is such a recurrent tone in Dugan's work that one feels the loss before the battle is begun. But in the poet's need to venture is the clear knowledge that arriving at the wild, difficult center of things is itself a life's work, that the desire to know the hardest truths erases profit and loss. It's this desire that gets both poet and reader to the place, to the ecstatic moment where sudden understanding is possible, "to the front,/ to the precise point of fire . . . at that point of place, at this point in time."

UI Museum of Art to exhibit 19th century Navajo weaving

The Daily Iowan

The UI Iowa Museum of Art will present "Elements of Design: The Influence of Oriental Rugs on Navajo Weaving," an exhibition of 28 Navajo rugs and two related oriental rugs which runs until May 27.

This exhibition focuses on the way that traders on the Navajo reservation in New Mexico and Arizona influenced Navajo weaving styles in the late 19th century. In their attempts to make Navajo rugs more marketable to tourists, traders spurred Navajo weavers to a dynamic new tradition. The Navajo people had originally borrowed both the technology of weaving and designs from neighboring Pueblo Indian cultures. Over time they also absorbed influences from Mexico. Then at the end of the 19th century, the entire Navajo culture was dramatically transformed. The arrival of the railroad in the Southwest between 1880 and 1892 brought an influx of tourism to the area.

To make Navajo rugs more salable to Eastern tourists, traders introduced Navajo weavers to the graphic designs and patterns of oriental rugs found in Victorian homes. The weavers reinterpreted these motifs in their own work. The Teec Nos Pos, Two-Chin Hills and early Crystal-style rugs show how the Navajo weavers incorporated foreign design elements while also maintaining the integrity of their art form.

"Elements of Design" was organized by the Nevada Museum of Art in Reno. The exhibition opened in Sacramento, Calif., and is currently on a six-state tour that will include stops at eight museums. It includes rugs borrowed from several museums and research centers, as well as private collections.

Bitter pill at start, but Dillon's 'Drugstore Cowboy' sweetens

Anne E. Voss
The Daily Iowan

Let me tell you right now: When you go to see "Drugstore Cowboy" (and you should go to see it, you must), don't worry as you circle around the Pentacrest searching for a parking place, don't worry about the lines at the box office. Relax.

While "Drugstore Cowboy" is the best film produced in the United States last year, it also needs the opening credits lopped off. It needs to be captured in the middle of the first scene, during the first robbery. It needs to begin in the middle of that chaos.

The first few minutes, over those credits, establish setting, characters and resolution, but the film, drifting its way through the life of a junkie (excellently portrayed by, yes, Matt Dillon), doesn't need that flashback narrative structure. Without those first minutes, we enter into "Drugstore Cowboy" and live the film as the characters live their lives. We never know if they will survive or OD. We don't even know where they will sleep each night. Seized in the middle of the first robbery, the film drifts from high to high, apathetic to the narrative structure of most Hollywood movies.

Classical narrative works by probability, clueing the audience about its eventual destination. Hollywood in particular likes to keep the narrative flowing from the initial loss of equilibrium to the final resolution. In doing so, it reassures us about our own lives. As Clarence the Angel tells George Bailey, "You see, George, your life really has been important. You've led a wonderful life." George Bailey affected each life he touched, an unbroken chain of faith from start to finish. This is the classical narrative, affirming that our lives have structure and meaning.

Here, then, are the lives in "Drugstore Cowboy," whose characters refuse to live under this article of faith. Each event in their lives sparks another event, but each event is discreet, like atoms bouncing off each other, creating random heat and motion.

Yet for two hours, we watch each event fascinated, never bored, despite the loss of that crucial linear vision of life. Any film which can do this feat is remarkable, particularly in America where the narrative chain of Hollywood is so strong and binding.

Perhaps this is because the script is an astounding homage to William Burroughs. Perhaps also this is because along the film's meandering way, the director treats his audience to some fine displays of film technique. This is a movie about artists, the poets of junk, like Burroughs. Dillon's character considers himself a kind of prophet, a prince in exile, shooting up because his mind ranges too wild, and is too aware, for its limited territory. The director shows us his visions, the images of his highs — cows and hats falling from the sky, the clouds rushing across the screen. We see his memories, super-8 home movies of his past. We see a microscopic close-up of the barrel of the syringe as the blood mixes briefly with the heroin solution, before he pumps it into his vein.

This isn't a conservatives' movie. It doesn't ask us to "just say no." The film doesn't condemn these lives as immoral. Its characters all insist on their codes of honor.

Nor is this a liberals' movie. The images of shooting up are too gruesome for pity or for sympathy. The film doesn't rally us to save them; we aren't the Salvation Army.

Like a Burroughs novel (by the way, Burroughs appears in the film as a priest of drugs, in a perfect gritty-voiced performance), this is just a story about a kind of life, a different life from the one most people think they will live. The film asks us simply to live these lives for a few hours, rather than condemn or try to change them.

We like to think that our lives are sewn with some fated thread, and that the fabric will reveal the meaning by the end. These lives lack that thread, and are gathered just in remnants and scraps. When Dillon's character dies, we aren't asked to feel sorry for him. He dies by chance, as he lived. And then, the final credits can roll.

Actor Fabrizi dead at age 84

ROME (AP) — Aldo Fabrizi, a character actor who gained international fame for his role as a priest defying fascists in "Open City," died Monday of natural causes. He was 84.

Fabrizi was a music hall comedian and moved on to character roles in films in the 1940s.

He appeared in several dozen movies, many of them comic roles.

He was best known for his portrayal of the courageous Roman Catholic priest Don Pietro in Roberto Rossellini's 1945 neo-realist classic "Open City."

It's all but settled; Valvano to leave

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Jim Valvano is all but out as basketball coach of North Carolina State and all that remains is for the two sides to work out a financial settlement, his attorney said today.

"That's the way I read it. It appears that the option of him staying on as coach is no longer available," attorney Woody Webb said.

"We now know what we need to focus on in the sense that it appears there's going to have to be some monetary resolution of the situation or there'll be a judicial resolution," he said.

N.C. State attorneys have been given permission to sue Valvano for breach of contract.

However, Webb said he disputed claims by the school's attorneys that they have the authority to make all decisions regarding Valvano's future.

"There is some question now as to the authority that was bestowed on the attorneys by the board of trustees," he said.

Asked whether Valvano might be willing to go to court to keep his job, Webb said they hadn't discussed that possibility. But he added, "He'd rather be on the basketball court than in court."

Webb said he asked the school's attorney to be allowed to meet with the board of trustees. "They politely noted the request but there was no indication such a meeting would be forthcoming."

Valvano, who has coached the Wolfpack the last 10 years, led North Carolina State to a stunning victory over heavily favored Houston in the 1983 NCAA championship.

Since January, however, he and the basketball program have been the targets of controversy. State was placed on two years' NCAA probation last fall for violations involving the sale of sneakers and tickets.

Sources told The News and Observer of Raleigh that legal proceedings to remove Valvano probably would be initiated by the end of the week unless Valvano voluntarily agreed to step down.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors voted unanimously on Monday to allow school officials to file suit against Valvano to force his resignation. The vote came during a two-hour closed session of the board which oversees the state's 16-campus public university system. The board must authorize member universities to pursue legal actions.

Board chairman Robert "Roddy" Jones said after the vote that he hoped the question of Valvano's future did not end up in court.

"The system is not proud of anything that goes on this long within our 16-campus system. And, of course, N.C. State University, the Board of Trustees and all the friends of N.C. State wish for this to come to a speedy conclusion," Jones said.

"The next step will be up to N.C. State University's private counsel, along with his coordination with the attorney general's office," Jones said.

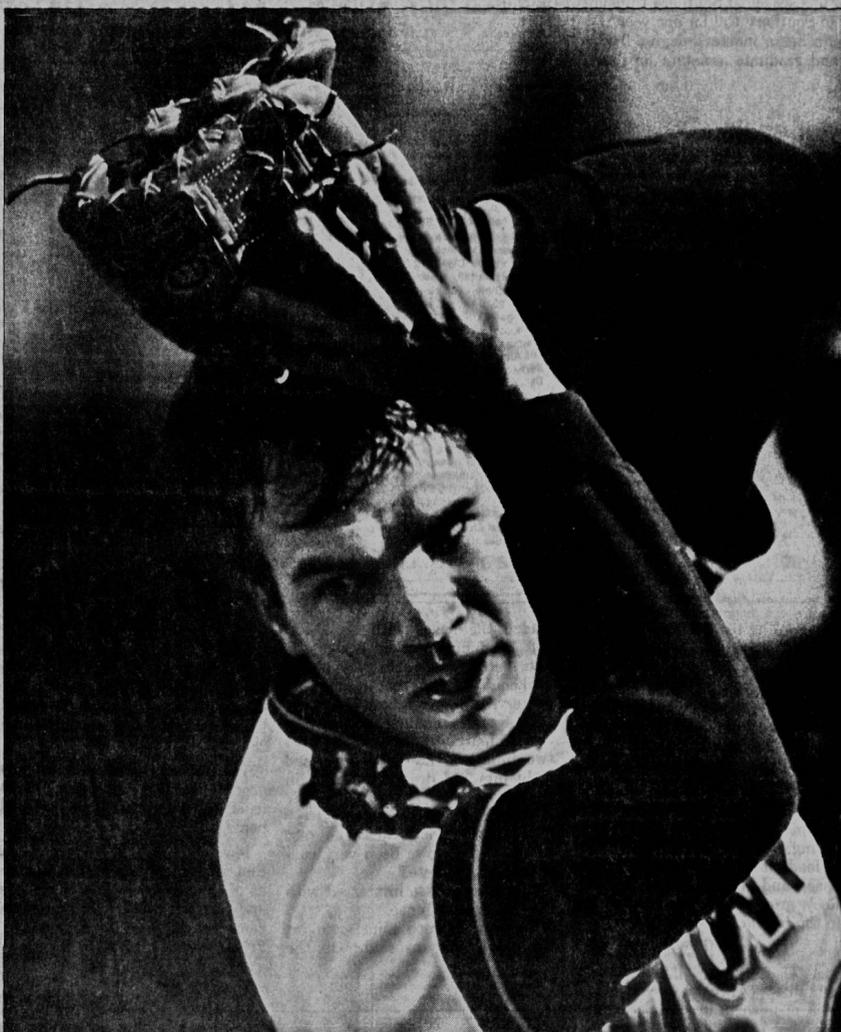

Neither N.C. State interim chancellor Larry Monteith nor Howard Manning, an attorney for the school, would comment on the school's plans.

Valvano and his program have been under fire for allegations of academic rules abuses and, most recently, point-shaving by players on past teams.

N.C. State trustees voted 9-3 earlier this month to instruct their attorneys to seek the termination of Valvano's contract. Manning told the board that he believed the school could argue that Valvano had failed to fulfill his contract by ensuring the academic progress of his students.

But Webb said Monday that he doubted the strategy would work.

"I think it's a vague and broad standard. Moreover, I think it will become clear that Mr. Valvano has done at least as much, if not more, than most coaches do to assist their players academically," he said.

Iowa third baseman Keith Noreen hauls in a catch Tuesday during the Hawkeyes' 16-2 win over Augustana at Iowa Field. The Iowa team will continue action today at Northern Iowa.

Costo RBIs lead Iowa in blowout

Erica Welland
 The Daily Iowan

Tim Costo's seven RBIs fell just short of the school record — 10 by Brian Wujcik last year — but his grand slam homer in the bottom of the fifth led the Iowa baseball team to a 16-2 rout of Augustana Tuesday at Iowa Field.

"It felt pretty good," said the 6-foot-5 shortstop, who has hit seven homers and collected 27 RBIs this season. "I came off a good batting practice and felt really good... Hopefully we can just carry this over until this weekend (against Michigan)."

"He's playing like an all-American," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "Since he's gotten home out of Florida, he's played super. That ball he hit was not a bad pitch. He's just got so much confidence, it doesn't matter who's out there."

The win, sparked in part, Banks said, by the Hawkeyes' 5-4 loss to Western Illinois Sunday at Iowa Field, pushed the team's record to 13-5 overall. Iowa will open its Big Ten season this weekend with four games against Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Augustana is not that bad," Banks said. "It was just that our kids were ready to play. That was the difference between this game and the Western Illinois one. Our kids won't be embarrassed two days in a row."

Senior hurler Allen Rath notched his fourth win of the season, and 22nd career victory Tuesday, giving up three hits and one run while walking one over five innings. He is three victories short of becoming

Students can put football tickets on U-bill

Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Declining student ticket sales over the past five years have forced administrators to seek a more convenient way to market Iowa football tickets — and spokesmen Mike Naughton and Rick Klatt think they may have the answer.

The U-bill. Everyone gets it and looks at it. "We used student research groups and they told us the U-bill would be easier for them to get the tickets and not have to pay it all up front," Klatt, the Iowa promotions director, said.

In the past, a student would be forced to pay the amount of the ticket in full before leaving on summer break. Klatt said students wanted to spread out the payments, something the U-bill would allow them to do.

"Students want to save money for gas before they go home," Klatt said. "They don't want to leave their money in Iowa City."

Ticket sales begin Monday for the priority period, which ends with the close of the semester May 4. But students would have to pay their U-bill in full by Sept. 1 or the order would be cancelled.

One guest ticket can also be obtained when students order tickets. There is also the option of getting the tickets through the mail when submitting an order form that was mailed to students last week.

"Students are used to charging things on the bill," Naughton, the Iowa ticket manager, said. "This would be easier for them, and that's what we want."

Kinnick Stadium has a student section that contains approximately 13,000 seats. Since 1985 — the last year the Hawkeyes went to the Rose Bowl — sales have been on a steady decline. Last year, only 7,000 students purchased the tickets.

Questions about new policies are being answered by the Iowa Athletic Ticket Office at 335-9327.

Off-season moves help S.D.

(AP) — Jack McKeon came to the winter meetings shopping for a pennant and came away with some luxury items for San Diego.

McKeon, the Padres manager and GM, acquired Joe Carter in a blockbuster trade with Cleveland and signed free-agent reliever Craig Lefferts.

Will it be enough to win the National League West?

San Francisco, the defending NL champs, have added Kevin Bass. Los Angeles signed Hubie Brooks. All Cincinnati has to do is stay healthy, the talent is already there.

The Padres made a rush at the Giants in the final weeks of the 1989 season by winning 29 of 39, but fell short by three games. McKeon expects the addition of Carter will make up the difference.

In acquiring Carter, McKeon came away with an impact player who can carry a team when they need it most.

Carter has averaged 31 homers and 108 RBIs over the last four seasons. In 1989, he hit .243 with 35 homers and 105 RBIs.

Carter does other things, too. In 1987, he became one of a handful of players in major-league history to hit 30 homers and steal 30 bases in the same season.

"Any edge you can get, that's the edge I'm looking for," Carter said. "I don't want to be a one-dimensional athlete."

Not everything went right for McKeon during the offseason, though. Cy Young Award winner Mark Davis, who saved 44 games in 1989, signed as a free agent with Kansas City.

Cincinnati Reds
 The Reds couldn't overcome a season dominated by Pete Rose controversies and lots of injuries, finishing fifth at 75-87.

There's talent on this team — lots of it — and Lou Piniella has the job of putting it together after the sorry Rose era.

Every starter in the Reds lineup was hurt last season except first baseman Todd Benzinger (17 HRs, 76 RBIs). Ironically, Benzinger broke his left hand while taking batting practice during the lockout on March 2.

Shortstop Barry Larkin (.342)

missed the second half of the season when he sustained an arm injury during the "skills competition" at the All-Star Game. It was that type of year for the Reds.

Third baseman Chris Sabo, the Rookie of the Year in 1988, also spent time on the disabled list and slumped to .260 with six homers and 29 RBIs.

Center fielder Eric Davis hit .281 with 34 homers and 101 RBIs despite missing several games with sore feet.

Injuries also decimated the pitching staff. Danny Jackson went from 23-8 in 1988 to 6-11.

Jackson is coming off shoulder and toe surgery last season. He didn't get to throw off a mound over the winter because of the amount of time he had to spend on negotiations as the team's union representative.

San Francisco
 The Giants' pitching started to fall apart during the playoffs and World Series and they haven't done much to improve on the mound.

Hawks can't shake it, Creighton wins No. 16

Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

The Creighton softball team continued its mastery over Iowa Tuesday, sweeping a doubleheader from the Hawkeyes at the Iowa Softball Complex.

The Lady Jays used late heroics to win the first game, 2-1, then thumped the Hawkeyes in the nightcap, 7-1. Iowa has lost 16 straight games to Creighton dating back to 1979.

"I feel really excited about getting out of Iowa City with two wins," Creighton coach Mary Higgins said after the sweep. "Iowa has a fine team."

"Give Creighton a lot of credit," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "The made a lot of things happen on offense."

The Lady Jays managed only four hits against Iowa starter Terri McFarland in Tuesday's first game, but strung three of them together in the fourth inning. Brenda Kunfrst, Karyn Rice, and Teir Wilbur each hit singles to produce a 1-0 Creighton lead.

The Hawkeyes responded in their half of the fourth, scoring a run on a pair of doubles. Shortstop Jennifer Roe led off the inning with a shot to the left centerfield gap, then scored one out later on senior Karen Wick's line-drive double.

The Lady Jays would not reach McFarland again until the top of the sixth. Creighton's Brenda Kunfrst drew a one-out walk, setting the stage for senior shortstop Karyn Rice. The Santa Ana, Calif., native drilled a double to left, scoring Kunfrst and giving the Lady Jays a 2-1 advantage.

The Hawkeyes mounted one final threat in the bottom of the seventh when junior Andrea Meyers

Washington: I won't take players

IOWA CITY (AP) — Rudy Washington says he won't take any Iowa players with him to Drake, which has named the former Hawkeye assistant as its head coach.

Washington said that specifically includes Ray Thompson and Brian Garner, who were declared academically ineligible in January.

"They will not play for me at Drake," Washington said. "I'll help them. I'll help them all they want me to, but there's no way I would have them come up and play for me."

Washington said he doesn't want to cause any problems because of his loyalty to the Iowa program. He worked at Iowa for five years, first under George Raveling, then under Tom Davis.

"I would not consider either one," he said. "It's not even close."

Thompson and Garner are still enrolled at Iowa, although it's uncertain if they will be allowed to play next season. Garner had indicated in January that he would transfer but later said he wanted to stay at Iowa.

Washington also said he would urge two high school seniors to honor their commitments to Iowa. Marcel Capers, a 6-foot-1 guard from Los Angeles, and 5-11 guard Kevin Smith of Fort Worth, Texas, said they would sign with Iowa this spring, although neither has qualified academically.

"Under no circumstances do I want them to consider anything but coming to the University of Iowa," said Washington, who helped recruit both.

Washburn arrested for drugs despite problems in league

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Chris Washburn, who was bounced from the NBA because of drug problems, was in a suburban Atlanta jail Tuesday after his arrest for cocaine and marijuana possession.

Washburn was arrested with his girlfriend at her apartment Monday when Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents went there to interview the former NBA player on behalf of authorities in North Carolina.

"We were called in to assist in some interviews that (the North Carolina Bureau of Investigation) officials wanted to carry out with Washburn," GBI spokesman John Bankhead said.

After learning that Washburn's girlfriend, Kimberly Greene, was wanted in Gwinnett County on a probation violation, the agents decided to arrest her, according to Bankhead.

Washburn, a center-forward, played two seasons in the NBA with Golden State and Atlanta but was banned from the league for repeatedly testing positive for drug use. He played with North Carolina State, but entered the NBA draft after his sophomore year.

Former Iowa assistant moves on

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Former Iowa graduate assistant Scott Howard will leave the Southern Cal basketball program. Howard on Tuesday became the first member of new Miami coach Leonard Hamilton's staff.

Hamilton, the head coach at Oklahoma State the past four years, signed a five-year contract Monday with the Hurricanes.

Howard, 29, was an assistant for one season at Southern Illinois (1987-88) and Drake before going to Southern Cal for one year.

Howard played at Iowa State and has a master's degree from Iowa, where he was a volunteer and graduate assistant for four years.

Chavez must fight Taylor again

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — IBF junior welterweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez must defend his title against Meldrick Taylor, from whom he took it in a disputed ending, within six months, the boxing organization ruled Tuesday.

Its did so by ranking Taylor No. 1. Taylor lost to Chavez when referee Richard Steele stopped the 12-round fight with two seconds remaining on March 17 in Las Vegas.

Taylor was ahead on two of three judges' cards when the referee halted the fight after Taylor had been knocked down by Chavez.

IBF president Bob Lee said his organization intended to rank Taylor No. 1, necessitating a fight with Chavez within six months, without a protest. But he said the IBF agreed with the Taylor camp's protest that referee Richard Steele erred in the final seconds of the fight.

Lee said Steele did not direct Chavez to return to the farthest neutral corner while the count was in progress.

"We are not saying he (Steele) shouldn't have stopped the fight. We think he did the right thing to protect the fighter," Lee said. "But if he stopped the count, who knows what might have happened?"

doubled with two out. But Creighton ace Kelly Brookhart came on in relief, retiring Iowa pinch hitter Christa Davis to end the rally.

McFarland struck out nine and allowed only four hits but took the loss in the opener. The sophomore's record fell to 12-9 on the season.

For Creighton, junior Jeni Ruzich pitched six and two-thirds innings to earn the victory. Ruzich held Iowa to five hits before yielding to Brookhart, who recorded the save.

The Iowa home woes continued in the nightcap. Creighton jumped on the Hawkeyes for three runs in the third inning and never looked back in recording the 7-1 win.

The Lady Jays used two hits, two walks, and a sacrifice fly to score three runs in the top of the third against Hawkeye hurler Amy Hartsock. That was more than enough for Brookhart, who came back to throw a four-hitter in the nightcap.

The Hawkeyes threatened to make a game of it in the bottom of the inning. Catcher Diane Pohl singled to lead off the inning, stole second base, and scored when Jennifer Roe's ground ball was mishandled in the infield.

Baseball

Iowa's all-time winningest pitcher and is on top of the school's all-time strikeout list with 227.

The Riverside, Iowa, native didn't strike anyone out Tuesday and was relieved by sophomore Tom Anderson in the sixth.

"I thought Al threw well today," Banks said. "When we got ahead he was trying out some different pitches. But he knows what it takes to win."

Costo, Chris Hatcher and Tim Canney hit home runs, while Iowa recorded five doubles during the game — one each by Costo, Keith Noreen, Kevin Minchik and two by Wujcik.

A main objective for the game with the Vikings, Banks said, was to give as many people experience as possible. As the Hawkeyes scored more and more runs, that was what happened.

"This is the type of game we needed," Banks said. "The timing couldn't be more perfect. We had the opportunity to use quite a few pitchers and position players."

Anderson, who also plays first base, pitched the sixth inning and was relieved by junior Harold Osborn for the seventh. Freshman Mark Stuhr took the hill for the eighth and was relieved by senior Ron Griffith in the ninth.

Freshman Danan Hughes also saw some playing time, replacing Erroll Shirer at center field at the top of the fifth.

Hughes, who is also the second-leading receiver on the Hawkeye football team, walked in the fifth and scored on Costo's homer.

In the sixth, Hughes tripled on a line drive to the right field wall but was left on base. On his next at bat, the 6-foot-2, 190-pound outfielder drove a ball to the wall before it was caught.

"Danan's a great athlete," Banks said. "We're really happy to have him out here."

The Hawkeyes will continue non-conference action today as they travel to Northern Iowa, where the goals, according to Banks, will be the same as in Tuesday's game.

"We'll probably do the same thing, use three to four pitchers and as many guys as we can," Banks said. "We need to play somebody (today). I think the guys will play well."

West

joins Kevin Mitchell (major-league highs of 47 HRs and 125 RBIs) and Brett Butler in the outfield.

Will Clark, who signed a four-year deal for $15 million, has emerged as one of the game's best hitters and should get some help in the infield by the presence of third baseman Matt Williams for a full season. Williams strikes out too much (72 times in 292 at-bats), but is capable of hitting 30-35 homers.

Los Angeles Dodgers

The Dodgers finished with the best team ERA in the majors last season at 2.95, but had the lowest batting average, .240.

To add some punch, Los Angeles signed free agent outfielder Hubie Brooks (14 HRs, 70 RBIs for Montreal) and traded Mike Marshall and Alejandro Pena to the Mets for Juan Samuel.

The Dodgers toyed with the idea of moving Brooks to third base, but he will remain in the outfield because of the abbreviated spring training. Samuel will be in center, even though the former second baseman has trouble with shallow fly balls.

One of the biggest reasons the Dodgers' offense fell apart last season was the loss of 1988 MVP Kirk Gibson to a hamstring injury. Gibson (.213, 9 HRs, 28 RBIs) had offseason surgery, but may not be ready for opening day.

The Dodgers' measly run-production was a nightmare for the pitchers. Orel Hershiser had a 2.31 ERA but finished 15-15. Tim Lincecum (2.82) led the league in shutouts but ended 15-12.

Atlanta Braves

Despite giving signs last season they were ready to make a move, the Braves finished last for the third straight year with a 63-97 record.

Reason for optimism comes from a group of young pitchers that includes Tom Glavine (14-8), John Smoltz (12-11), Derek Lilliquist (8-10) and Mike Stanton (seven saves, 1.50 ERA).

To help provide the pitchers some runs, the Braves signed free agent first baseman Nick Esasky. Esasky, who loved hitting in Atlanta while a member of Cincinnati, had 30 homers and 108 RBIs for Boston in 1989. In six seasons with the Reds, Esasky hit .375 with 14 homers and 36 RBIs at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

Joining Esasky in the infield are second baseman Jeff Treadway, shortstop Andres Thomas (13 HRs, 57 RBIs) and newcomer Jim Presley at third (12 HRs, 41 RBIs for Seattle). Presley's power production slumped the last two years, but in Atlanta he may come alive. From 1985-87, Presley averaged 26 homers and 93 RBIs.

Houston Astros

The Astros needed to make a trade to come up with a big bat over the winter, but came up empty. In fact, Houston's only .300 hitter, Kevin Bass, left to sign as a free agent with the Giants.

After first baseman Glenn Davis (34 HRs, 89 RBIs) there's a big drop in power. Next in home run production was catcher Craig Biggio with 13.

Usually reliable second baseman Bill Doran had an awful second half, going 23-for-176 (.131) after the All-Star break.

For the Astros to be serious contenders, they need a big year from rookie left fielder Eric Anthony (28 HRs, 79 RBIs at Class AA Columbus in the Southern League).

Mike Scott (20-10) and Jim Deshaies (15-10, 2.91) had solid seasons, but Jim Clancy and Rick Rhoden were big disappointments. The Astros simply never recovered from the loss of Nolan Ryan. Houston's 3.91 ERA was the second highest in the league.

Predicted order: 1) San Diego. 2) Cincinnati. 3) San Francisco. 4) Los Angeles. 5) Atlanta. 6) Houston.

Volleyball coaches attend Iowa clinic

Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

About 80 high school and college volleyball coaches sat in Carver-Hawkeye Arena last weekend with their eyes on the Iowa volleyball team and the woman leading drills on the court.

"Did you ever have a dog that you could play catch with forever," the women asked the crowd. "You know, you would throw the stick and it would go after it. Then one time you pretend you throw it, and the dog goes after it and you say, 'I've still got it.' Then you fake it out again, and the dog still goes after it."

"That's what defense is. You don't want to be a type of player who always goes to the same place, you want to be ready to go anywhere."

The woman was Mary Jo Peppler, the first winner of the women's Superstar Contest and player-coach for the New York Liberties, a professional women's volleyball team.

And the event, the USA Gold Medal Volleyball Coaches Clinic, was sponsored by Sports Group in Chicago.

"This is mainly to train coaches and expose coaches to the latest ideas," said Doug Beal, who coached the U.S. team to a gold medal in the 1984 Olympics and was one of the experts at the clinic. "We started this in 1985, and I think the feedback is positive. We have good people doing the instruction and the coaches who come usually come back."

"It's just lately that there has been the opportunity for coaches to be trained," Peppler said. "... The coaches are really motivated, they're interested in learning."

The Iowa City clinic, which was just one of about 15 that five national-level coaches do every year, is usually one of the biggest. It is attended by coaches from around the country.

"This is a really fine clinic," Texas Lutheran coach Susan Duke said. "It's a nice group of people, top clinicians, and it's fantastic to have it here at the Carver center."

Duke, who attended the University of Iowa, said she came to this clinic to visit relatives living in the state and to have the opportunity to watch some experts present their programs.

"I give clinics myself, so this is refreshing," Duke said. "I feel comfortable watching. I feel I could go down and do some things myself, but I imagine a lot of other people feel the same."

"It's refreshing to know that you're doing the right things," said Terri Luehring, volleyball coach at Gladbrook-Reinbeck high school in Iowa. "This gives new coaches some information and gives veteran coaches a boost."

According to Iowa coach Ruth Nelson, having the event at Iowa creates interest not only for her team, but for volleyball around the state.

"Bringing people in shows the commitment we have toward developing volleyball in Iowa," Nelson said. "Iowa is fifth in the country in the number of high school participants in volleyball."

"A university this size should be able to promote throughout the whole state."

Final Four Wrapup: Looking Back

UNLV draws city's attention from bright lights

LAS VEGAS (AP) — College basketball's new national champions returned home Tuesday as the premier attraction in this city of the stars.

Names of UNLV Runnin' Rebel players flickered across Strip marquees and residents of this city of 750,000 remained in a party mode following Monday night's 103-73 victory over Duke for the national title.

The Rebels arrived on a charter flight shortly after 3 p.m. EDT at a restricted area of McCarran International Airport. The arrival was closed to the public because several thousand people mobbed the UNLV players on their arrival home following the West Regional last month.

Rebel coach Jerry Tarkanian said Monday night's victory was "just beginning to sink in."

"I feel real good now," Tarkanian said. "I felt too emotionally drained last night to realize what had happened. It really hit me this morning."

Tarkanian said the Rebels had played their best game in defeating the Blue Devils.

"Our kids played their best game in their biggest game," he said. "I told our kids before the game it would come down to the last shot, and I was hoping we'd have that last shot."

A parade was planned Tuesday night through downtown's Glitter Gulch and along the Las Vegas Strip. A welcome home ceremony was set for the 18,500-seat Thomas & Mack Center, where the Rebels play.

Strip marquees which feature top names in the entertainment world carried messages of congratulations, along with the names of the Rebel players.

Las Vegas Metro Police braced for a second night of rowdiness as Rebel faithful celebrated their first national championship in three trips to the Final Four.

Police closed Maryland Parkway, the main street through the UNLV campus, Monday night because of the celebrants. The street was reopened after crowds thinned out.

One officer suffered a minor injury and one person was arrested after some 800 people gathered at Tarkanian's Celebrity Sports Club, across from campus. Police said 800 people packed the lounge at one point. Another person was injured when cut with a broken beer bottle at Cheers Bar and Grill, behaved immaturely and in some instances destructively."

Some car windshields were broken at the Thomas & Mack Center, where thousands of fans gathered to watch the game.

At least two thrown beer bottles hit police cars in front of the Slots A Fun Casino on the Strip.

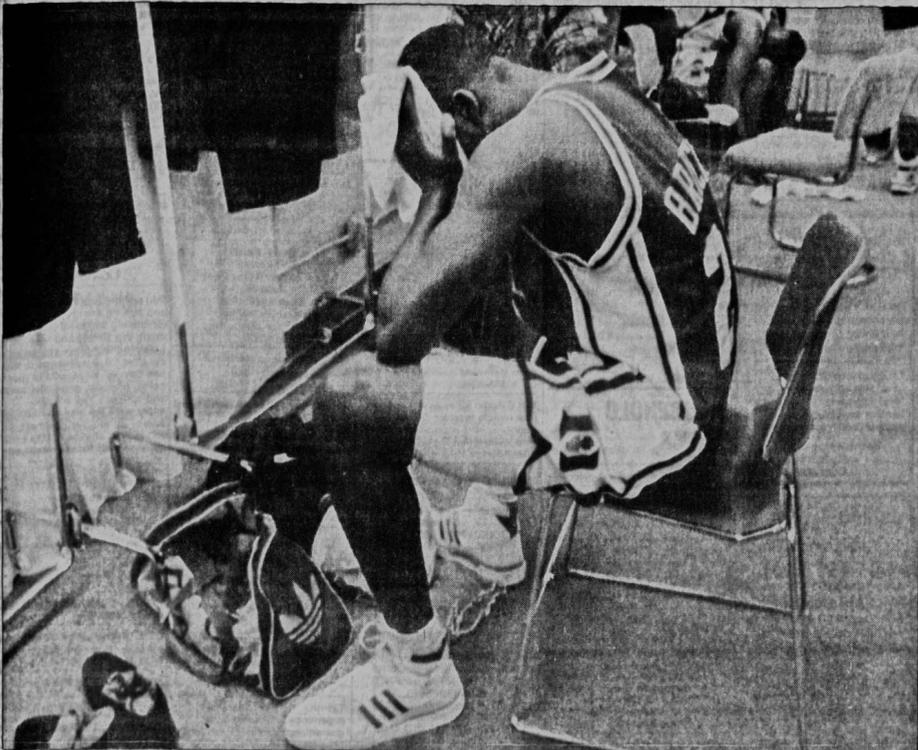

More than 2,000 Las Vegas who went to Denver for the basketball classic headed home late Monday and early Tuesday. More than 500 returned on four charter flights in the pre-dawn hours.

Among those on hand at the team's headquarters hotel in Denver were Nevada Sens. Harry Reid and Richard Bryan, Gov. Bob Miller, Mayor Ron Lurie and Sig Rogich, a Las Vegas advertising executive and media adviser to President Bush.

"I feel real good now. I felt too emotionally drained last night to realize what had happened. It really hit me this morning. Our kids played their best game in their biggest game."

Jerry Tarkanian
UNLV head coach

Duke forward Robert Brickey sits alone in the Blue Devils' locker room Monday night in Denver after his team was crushed by UNLV 103-73 for the NCAA title. It was the 8th time Duke has been to the Final Four and came up empty.

Duke loss will stay in record book

DENVER (AP) — Maybe Duke's Alaa Abdalnaby and his teammates should have stayed in bed.

"When I woke up this morning, I thought we would win," Abdalnaby said. "We all did."

Instead, Duke was a 103-73 loser to UNLV in Monday night's NCAA championship game, and the Blue Devils set new levels of futility in the process.

The Runnin' Rebels' victory was the most lopsided ever in an NCAA championship game, and it was the first time a team scored 100 points in the title contest.

Duke, which has given up the three highest point totals in the 52 years of championship games, also added to its string of failures at the title game.

The Brooklyn Dodgers needed eight attempts to win their first World Series, and it took the Los Angeles Lakers eight appearances in the NBA finals to win a championship.

This was Duke's eighth appearance in the Final Four, and the Blue Devils are still looking for their first title.

The only school even close to that level of Final Four failure is Houston, which went to five under Guy Lewis and came up empty every time.

Such numbers leave Duke's players trying to focus on the positives.

Seniors Phil Henderson, Robert Brickey and Abdalnaby went to the Final Four in each of their last three seasons.

"It's been a great career in terms of wins and losses," said Brickey, Duke's captain. "How many teams get to win a hundred games and go to the Final Four three times? But now's not one of the better moments."

"He doesn't just try to have a great team once every 10 years," Henderson said of Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "He does it every year. There's so much you can say about what he does."

No matter what Krzyzewski did Monday, UNLV made sure it didn't matter.

The Runnin' Rebels shot 66.7 percent in the second half, including an 18-0 run that buried the Blue Devils.

UNLV forced 23 Duke turnovers, turning them into 32 points.

"I think that's the best a team has ever played against me. We were in awe," said Krzyzewski, whose East Regional champions finished 29-9.

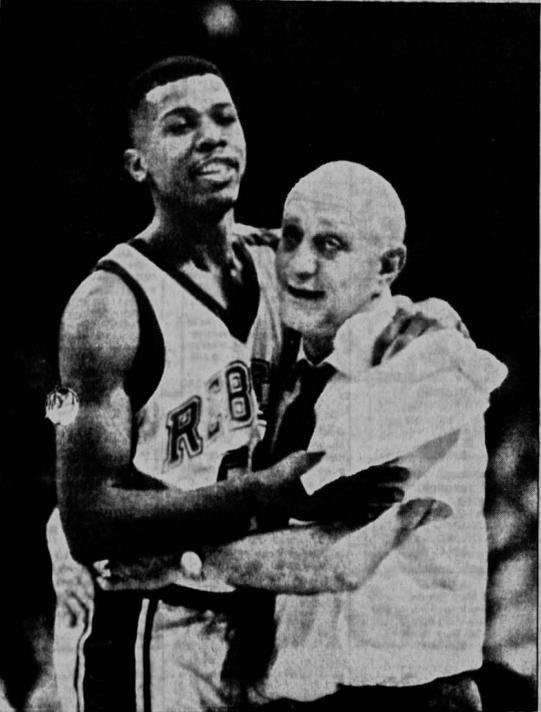

Duke was 1-of-11 on 3-point attempts and that allowed UNLV to tighten its defense down low. The Runnin' Rebels often limited Duke to one shot per possession.

Henderson, Duke's top outside threat, had 21 points but didn't hit a 3-pointer until 4:18 remained.

Duke's Christian Laettner, who had 5 points and nine rebounds, said the Runnin' Rebels "pressured us the whole game and never really let us get into our offense. And they ran their offense so well that we couldn't get anything off our defense."

"Usually, we're able to get some fastbreaks and some easy baskets off our defense, but there were no easy layups off our defense tonight — not one."

"I don't know if you realize what they did tonight," Krzyzewski said of UNLV. "There was nothing we could do. They would not let us do anything."

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian hugs Greg Anthony Monday night in Denver after the Runnin' Rebels beat Duke for the national title. UNLV won 103-73.

Bets off during title game, but Vegas smiles

LAS VEGAS (AP) — For once, Las Vegas forgot the bottom line.

Bookmakers turned partisan, hooting for the home team. Bartenders poured blind, keeping eyes glued to the television screen.

College kids cruised the glitzy strip like it was a small midwestern Main Street. They honked their horns and yelled at pedestrian tourists: "Go back home and tell 'em we're No. 1."

Gaming has long been king in Las Vegas, but when the University of Nevada-Las Vegas crushed Duke in the NCAA basketball final Monday, it gave this town of 750,000 a champion it could call its own.

"It's the only thing besides the gambling we've ever had here," said Leila Doren.

Sports Books are unable to place lines on Nevada teams, so windows were closed for the title game. You would have expected some long faces in a town where money, literally, turns the wheels.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal reported that bookmakers missed out on "a good chunk of money." There was no way to determine how much, but nobody seemed to mind anyway.

Even before the game, the casinos' enormous billboards were flashing congratulations.

"There are times when you set money aside," said Jimmy Vaccaro, director of the race and sports book at the Mirage.

Three-point shot still safe, but some rules will change

DENVER (AP) — College basketball's long-range gunners can rest easy, at least for another season.

The NCAA said Tuesday it will not push back the 3-point line from the current distance of 19 feet, 9 inches, although it will allow conferences to experiment next year with using the international 3-point line distance of 20-6.

"Why fool around with something that's been extremely successful?" asked Edward Steitz, secretary of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee. "We never say never, but we have a great game. To me, the game has never been better."

The committee did, however, make rule changes it said were designed to cut down on intentional fouls, speed up the game and hand out stiffer penalties for fighting in the 1990-91 basketball season.

It also decided to give three free throws to a player fouled while attempting a shot from beyond the 3-point line.

Under the new rules, players will be given technicals for taunting or swearing at opponents and will be suspended for the season if they are involved in two on-court fights. Any player fighting will be automatically suspended for his team's next game.

"The stuff that has been going on has been totally undesirable," Steitz said. "We just don't think this should be part of the college game."

Coaches or players given two technical fouls will now be ejected from games, while the head coach will be ejected after three bench technicals have been called on his team.

In an effort to speed up the game, players will be given two free throws instead of a one-and-one after the opposing team's 10th foul of each half and timeouts will be cut from four to three for each team in televised contests.

"We want to minimize the time it takes to play the last few minutes of the ballgame," Steitz said. "We felt this was a gradual approach toward doing that."

The National Association of Basketball Coaches last week said it would recommend to the committee that the line be moved back to correspond with the international line.

Steitz predicted that no conferences would adopt the experimental 20-6 line used in the Olympics and other international competition.

"We had it as an experimental rule two years ago and we had no takers," he said. "I don't see many conferences opting to use it this time."

The committee also decided to offer to conferences on an experimental basis a "no foul out" rule that will allow players to remain in games no matter how many fouls they pick up.

Under the rule, a player fouled by another player who has six or more fouls will get three foul shots to make two.

The rule replaces an experimental six-foul rule used by three conferences this year, that Steitz said was dropped after a poll of coaches showed only 21 percent supported it.

"I do think we'll have some conferences that will opt for the no foul out rule," he said.

Other changes approved by the committee for the 1990-91 season include:

— A player will be assessed a technical if he grasps or hangs on the rim unless he is fouled or is trying to avoid an obvious injury to himself or another player.

— The 45-second clock will not be reset when a blocked shot goes out of bounds.

— Only four players from each team may line up on the lane during free throws.

— Teams will be allowed to use an NBA-style ball that has deeper channels to allow better ball handling and shooting.

Mattingly, Yankees far from settling contract

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Don Mattingly, in the final season of a three-year contract, said Tuesday he'll likely file for free agency if the New York Yankees do not sign him by opening day.

"When the season is over, it's not going to be pretty. I'll probably end up filing," Mattingly said. "If it gets to the end of the season, I'm not going to look at just one team and that's it. I'm going to look at everyone."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner met with Mattingly before the team's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday.

"This is the first time I've sensed some urgency from him," Steinbrenner said. "And if he's urgent, I'm urgent. I'm looking for Mattingly to lead this club. We'll get this thing done, and we'll do it the right way."

The Yankees open the regular season on April 10. Mattingly has said that he will not hold contract talks during the season.

"If it's not done by the start of the season, I'm done talking," he said. "I won't let my contract get in the way of the club's success."

"I don't know if George is thinking I'm going to sign it in May, June or July. I don't care if it costs me $20 million. There won't be a contract signed by me after opening day."

Mattingly signed a $6.7 million contract three years ago. Last season, he batted .303 with 23 homers and 113 RBIs.

"They're taking a chance," Mattingly said. "They had all winter to sign me, and they made no movement at all. They probably said, 'Oh, he's not going anywhere.'"

"Well, I'll you one thing, my eyes are open a lot wider than a week ago. I've come to realize that there are other things out there, other people interested in me. There are other good places to play. The way I feel right now, if I don't sign by the end of spring training, I'll file for free agency after the season."

Mattingly said he should have given the team an ultimatum a long time ago.

"It's my fault for letting this thing drag on," he said. "I expected the Yankees to take care of it and they haven't."

Nicklaus hits spectator with errant practice shot

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, fresh off his first victory as a senior, hit a spectator with a golf ball Tuesday during his first practice round at The Masters.

Nicklaus, a six-time Masters champion, hooked his second shot on the 555-yard par 5 second hole and the ball hit the spectator just below the right eye.

Another spectator used a handkerchief to stem the flow of blood.

Nicklaus came over and apologized, patting the man on the back. Nicklaus resumed his round with Greg Norman and Arnold Palmer after a few minutes of conversation with the injured spectator.

The man, who was not identified, was accompanied from the course to receive medical treatment.

The 50-year-old Nicklaus flew in from Arizona early Tuesday after winning The Tradition on Sunday.
