Regents approve increase in rates; cost of living rises in residence halls

Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

CEDAR FALLS — The Iowa Board of Regents Wednesday approved an increase in residence hall rates, raising the cost of a double occupancy room with full board at the UI 7.3 percent.

Double occupancy rooms experienced the highest increase, rising from $2,580 to $2,769, because they are the highest in demand, according to UI officials. This increase is the largest jump in the past five years and almost doubles last year's increase of 3.7 percent.

Board members, who approved the proposal without discussion, expressed surprise over the lack of student objection to the increase.

"The students didn't say anything about this?" asked board member Marvin Berenstein. "I think that's wonderful."

Associated Residence Halls, a UI student group, approved the increases before they were submitted to the board.

Despite the increase, the new rate will still be the lowest in the Big Ten, according to Peter Nathan, UI vice president for academic affairs.

The rate increase compensates for inflation and a decline in freshman enrollment, according to George Droll, director of UI Residence Hall Services.

Spring enrollment has declined by 1.01 percent over

Regents unanimously re-elect Pomerantz to 2nd 2-year term

Kelly David
 The Daily Iowan

CEDAR FALLS — The Iowa Board of Regents Wednesday unanimously re-elected board President Marlyn Pomerantz to his second two-year term.

Pomerantz cited the Pete Marwick audit, which led to the identification of program duplication at the state's three regent universities, as one of the board's accomplishments over the past two years.

Pomerantz also commended the strategic plans presented by Iowa State University and the UI Wednesday.

"We've established, as you've heard today and I think in a very outstanding way, our goals of excellence in the focus areas of our institutions," Pomerantz said.

The UI strategic plan targeted five institutional areas to develop and build upon in the future: the arts, basic science and technological

American hostage promised freedom Release 'humanitarian gesture'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iranian group holding three U.S. educators hostage promised on Wednesday to free one of the Americans within 48 hours as a humanitarian gesture and said he would carry a message for President George Bush.

Reliable diplomatic sources in Damascus, Syria, confirmed an American would be freed Friday in the Syrian capital.

The group, Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, did not say which of the three would be freed. Its statement was accompanied by an instant photograph of Jesse Turner of Boise, Idaho — the first photo of him alone since three months after his 1987 abduction.

However, the White House rejected one demand of the hostage-takers: that a senior U.S. diplomat fly to Damascus to coordinate the release.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine holds Turner, Alann Steen and Robert Polhill. All were abducted from the campus of Beirut University College on Jan. 24, 1987. They are among 18 Westerners, including eight Americans, held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

The longest-held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, kidnapped March 16, 1985.

The kidnapers demanded John Kelly, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, fly to Damascus.

"The arrangements for the release should be accomplished by the arrival of John Kelly in Damascus to coordinate some final steps to guarantee success within 48

Early registration OK'd for UI student-athletes

By Diana Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

The UI Registrar's Office has authorized a new procedure to register student-athletes in an effort to ensure that they are "well-advised" and meeting NCAA-regulated academic standards.

About 200 athletes participated in what UI Registrar Jerald Dallam called a "pilot, experimental" procedure that may have allowed them to get seats in courses before seniors who were assigned to register on April 16 — the first day of early registration.

"I think it's the University's concern that athletes are well-advised to make sure they get a complete academic schedule," Dallam said.

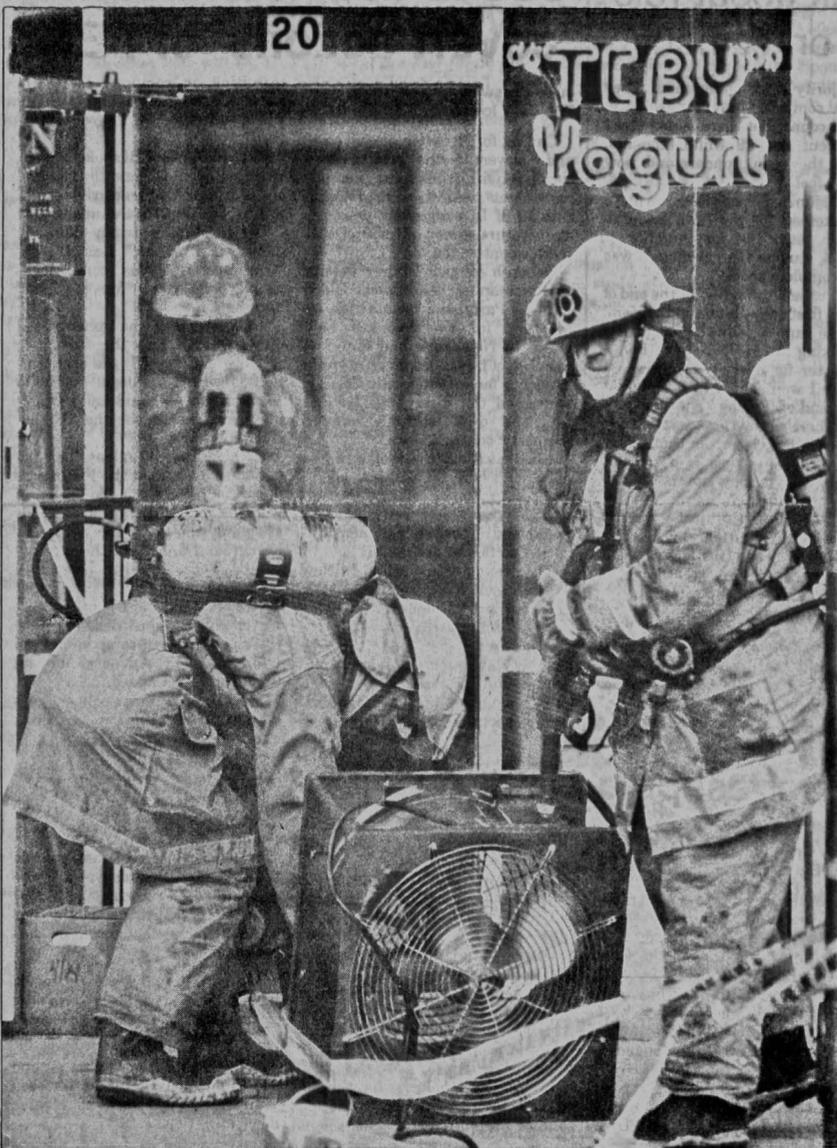

He added that "the visibility athletes have received across the country in terms of graduation rates and enrollment in courses that are applicable to a degree" is a source of pressure for student-athletes and has prompted the UI to experiment with the new registration procedure.

The procedure involved a mass-meeting last Thursday night in which athletes with less than 60 hours of credit met with their academic advisers in the Union to finalize course schedules. According to Dallam, the schedules were then submitted to a member of the Registration Center staff.

Unlike other UI students who are held responsible for registering themselves either through the newly implemented computer registration system or by going to the Registration Center in Calvin Hall, Dallam said the schedules of these

Iowa City firefighters use fans to remove toxic fumes from TCBY, 20 S. Clinton St., Wednesday evening. Fumes from epoxy paint used next door in the basement of The Wok spread to surrounding buildings, forcing evacuation. No injuries were reported.

Paint leads to building evacuations

Angela Egan
 The Daily Iowan

Painters renovating a restaurant with epoxy paint forced firefighters to evacuate restaurants and bars on South Clinton Street yesterday evening.

Firefighters, called to investigate a suspected gas leak in the first block of South Clinton Street, closed the area when they found that dangerous fumes from paint being used on walk-in coolers in the basement of The Wok restaurant had built up in surrounding buildings.

The incident started at about 6 p.m. when staff in The Airliner and One Eyed Jake's thought they smelled gas.

"We thought it might be a broken pipeline so we called the fire department, but when they arrived they discovered it was flammable paint fumes and cleared the restaurants," said Scott McDonough, See Gas, Page 4A

UI Elections Board: Results will stand

The Daily Iowan

The UI Elections Board ruled Wednesday night that the 1990 student government election results will stand despite complaints from student groups.

The Elections Board issued a memo addressing two complaints of unfair procedures in ballot mailing, and excessive and unpublicized deadline changes.

The Committee for Fair Elections and the Coalition for Concerned Students presented their cases to the Elections Board Tuesday.

Pepe Rojas-Cardona, former UI Student Senate president now affiliated with CCS, said the group was not satisfied with the Elections Board's decision and will appeal the ruling to the Student Judicial Court.

First lady supports Tauke, farm safety on trip to Iowa

Brian Dick
 The Daily Iowan

WATERLOO — First lady Barbara Bush visited Iowa Wednesday to boost Representative Tom Tauke's campaign and promote the efforts of a national farm safety group.

Bush spoke to a crowd of about 500 people who attended a $25 per plate luncheon to benefit Tauke's bid to represent Iowa in the U.S. Senate.

"There's no one like Barbara Bush that can bring life to a party," Tauke said.

Bush lauded Tauke as a friend of her husband, President George Bush, saying it was good to be back in Iowa, and later joked about the president's much-publicized distaste for broccoli.

"Robert Frost said Iowa earth looked good enough to eat — without putting it through vegetables," she said. "Now I know George would agree with that."

Congressman Tauke, R-2nd Iowa, is trying to unseat Democrat Senator Tom Harkin, who currently holds a nine-point lead in the latest Des Moines Register Iowa Poll.

"This seat is winnable, and Tom (Tauke) will win it," Bush said.

Fifth graders from Waterloo's Allison Elementary School "rapped" a song to the first lady about farm safety before the luncheon. Bush is honorary chairwoman of the Farm Safety For "Just Kids" organization.

"If you don't stay alert, you could really get hurt," the students sang.

Organization founder Marilyn Adams pleaded with reporters to promote the group's mission of increasing public knowledge of farm safety.

Adams' 11-year-old son was killed in an accident on the family's Iowa farm four years ago.

Bush later traveled to Dunkerton, Iowa, in response to a "Bombard Barbara Bush" letter-writing campaign launched by grade schoolers who wrote 1,500 letters and postcards asking her to visit.

Bush, who actively promotes literacy through the Reading Is Fundamental program (RIF), said she could not ignore the invitation despite initially rejecting the offer.

Environment's trouble starts with desire to end drudgery

Jessica Davidson
 The Daily Iowan

"Things, once possessed, can never be done without."

So said George Orwell many years ago. Now, those things we have developed to add comfort and ease to our lives threaten our very existence, said Wes Jackson, director of the Land Institute in Kansas.

Jackson said the basic human desire to possess technology that will eliminate drudgery and increase efficiency is the source of earth's environmental troubles.

More than 450 people heard the author, geneticist, prairie ecologist and director of the Land Institute in Kansas lecture about the 20th Anniversary of Earth Day in the Union Ballroom Wednesday night.

Avenson stresses unified Democrats

Asks students to join his team

Margo Ely
The Daily Iowan

House Speaker Don Avenson appealed to University Democrats for support in his gubernatorial candidacy Wednesday at the Union.

"We'd like very much to have you join our team, and that means we'd like to have you recruit some others," Avenson told about 20 people.

Avenson said students should encourage their peers to register to vote in the June 5 Iowa Democratic primary and to consider his 18 years in the state legislature when comparing candidates.

Lieutenant Governor Jo Ann Zimmerman, who recently dropped out of the gubernatorial race to run with Avenson, also attended the meeting, which provided students an opportunity to question Avenson after a brief speech.

Education is a key part of Avenson's economic development plan and making education affordable for everyone is one of Avenson's goals.

"Helping ordinary people... who live from check to check" is something Avenson would do as governor, he said.

Stressing that diversity is an important element in education, Avenson said minority faculty recruitment and student exchanges with other countries should be top priorities for Iowa.

"We want you to have an education second to none and that includes diversity," Avenson said.

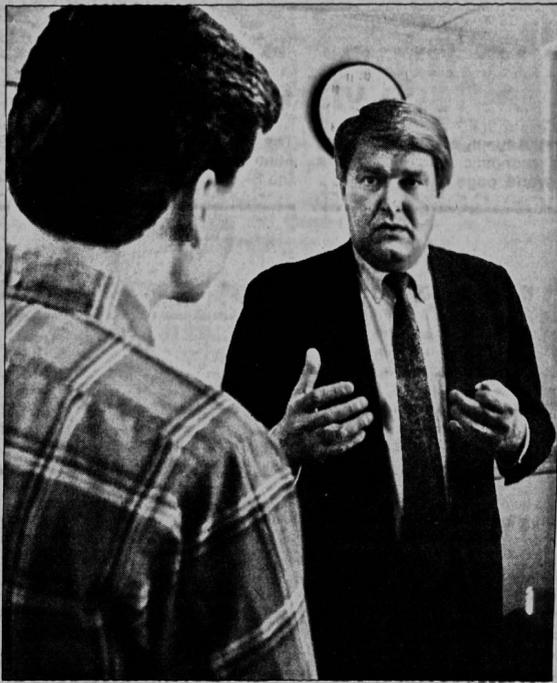

The reason the Japanese are "beating us" is because they have double the number of doctoral graduates each year that are produced in the United States, he said.

The Iowa school system ought to be reorganized by consolidating schools, thus reducing the number of teachers and administrators and increasing salaries, he said.

"In some of the biggest school districts in Iowa, you have the opportunity to take higher math and science courses... to take more than one language," Avenson said.

Yet, these educational opportunities are not available in rural Iowa, so students from places like Des Moines have an advantage, he said.

A two-way interactive telecommunications system between schools may be a solution to the disproportionate course offerings that exist in school systems across the state, he said.

One UI graduate student said he supports Avenson because he is the candidate most likely to defeat Gov. Terry Branstad.

"I support (Avenson) because he can beat Branstad," said Kerry Suttan.

Suttan added that the race is between Avenson and Attny. Gen. Tom Miller, and he predicted Miller will lose because of his "anti-choice" stance.

Black athletes talk about role in academia, life on campus

Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

Black student athletes and their role in academia was the subject of a nationwide teleconference broadcast to college campuses across the country Wednesday afternoon.

The Union Triangle Ballroom was crowded with people watching the show, the fifth in a series addressing the role of blacks in higher education. Vivian Stringer, Iowa women's basketball coach; Rudy Washington, president of the Black Coaches Association; and Arthur Ashe, former professional tennis player; were among the eight televised panelists.

Following the broadcast discussion, about 100 people listened as a panel of six UI black undergraduate, graduate students and student athletes talked about the isolation black athletes feel on predominantly white campuses.

All blacks are familiar with problems of being a minority on campus, said Merton Hanks, a 1990 Iowa football team captain.

"A black student can walk into a class and be the only minority student there," he said. "A white majority can't understand. They can compute, they can walk in and count that there is one black student and 29 white students, but they can't understand how that feels."

UI junior Felicia Hall, who plays basketball for the Iowa women's team, said the low number of black students in her classes was "a complete shock."

"I called my mother at the end of my first day and said, 'Mom, there aren't any black people walking around here.' If I had a quarter for every black person I saw, I wouldn't have a dollar at the end of the day," she said.

"There's a myth as soon as you walk in the classroom that you're there only because of a scholarship, only to play (sports), not to learn," Hall said.

James Lee, Cultural Diversity Committee chairman and former president of the UI Black Student Union, said the treatment of black athletes is unfair.

"Black males are praised on Saturday and Sunday. But if they took off their uniforms and tried to walk in those neighborhoods where the televisions are playing, the police would be called out," he said.

Social activists discuss 'covert actions' of FBI

Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Calling for "freedom at any cost" and "power to the people," two social activists spoke out Wednesday night against U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigations practices at a lecture aimed at ending FBI recruitment at the UI.

Deborah Johnson, former deputy chairwoman of the Illinois Black Panther Party, and Brian Glick, an attorney for the People's Law Office in New York and founding member of the 1960s activist group Students for a Democratic Society, addressed the history of the FBI and the organization's alleged "domestic covert actions."

Glick said the purpose of some FBI operations was to "disrupt, misdirect, discredit or otherwise neutralize" the group being investigated and described FBI neutralization tactics as mafia-like.

The event was sponsored by New Wave, Black Student Union, Palestine Solidarity Committee and the African American World Studies Department.

New Wave member John Stonebarger said the evening was aimed at exposing questionable FBI infiltration tactics.

"Our goal is to get the FBI to quit recruiting on campus," Stonebarger said. "We're looking into the whole purpose of the organization."

But Bill Carter, FBI spokesman in Washington, D.C., said the charges of improper procedure levied against the bureau are unfounded.

"We don't initiate witch-hunts or fishing expeditions," Carter said. "Our investigations come from people who come forward with information."

Though one of the goals of the event was to stop the FBI from recruiting at the UI, the organization is within its legal rights to recruit at the UI, said Larry Holmquist, spokesman for the Omaha, Neb., FBI division.

"Students should at least have the option to hear what the FBI has to offer," he said. "We do a lot of work in recruiting and looking for students who have the necessary background and meet the requirements. Those are the people we hope to attract."

"We feel (the FBI off-campus movement) is unjustified. We have the right to be on campus and get information to students and let them judge," he added.

The UI recruitment policy allows all governmental groups to recruit on campus.

Geng, 222 N. Clinton St., was released Wednesday on his own recognizance, according to court records.

Riverfest program discusses campus racism

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

Candid views on campus racism were discussed Wednesday evening at Riverfest's "Portraits in Black and White" program in the Union Iowa Room.

The film and the discussion session that followed focused on the cultural awareness of five Rutgers University students, and suggested that their life experiences play an essential role in understanding cross-cultural communication.

"This film is unique," said Diane

Hightower, program organizer and a UI Office of Campus Programs coordinator. "There is someone in this 30-minute movie that we can all relate to... there are a lot of different perspectives."

Rutgers students interviewed for the film included:

■ Avonne, a black female who has chosen to stick strictly within her black culture, claiming "racism is as American as apple pie."

■ Ken, a white, self-proclaimed non-racist who believes he was the victim of reverse discrimination due to college minority admissions quotas.

■ Denise, a black female who is the first black member of a previously all-white sorority.

■ Ben, a white male who has chosen to immerse himself in Rutgers' black culture.

■ Sharon, a half white, half black female who says because of her mixed race she is able to see both sides of racial tension.

Following the film, Hightower and the 15-member audience discussed UI racial issues such as reverse discrimination.

Modern-day renaissance man guest speaker of Riverfest '90

Plimpton's an author, musician and sports buff

Mitch Martin
Special to The Daily Iowan

With condolences to Bo Jackson, no one can boast a wider range of experiences than George Plimpton.

The celebrated author, sports enthusiast and sometimes percussionist will be the speaker for the 10th Annual Riverfest at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Union Ballroom.

In his role as literary journalist, Plimpton has participated in a diverse assortment of professions. He not only "knows" professional baseball, football, hockey and basketball, he's a sometimes percussionist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Plimpton's books include The Paper Lion — which recounts his playing days with the Detroit Lions — and The Curious Case of Sidd Finch — a fictional tale of a Buddhist baseball player with a 185-mph fast ball.

In addition to these accomplishments, Plimpton's resume also includes a stint as the New York City Fireworks Commissioner and the title of chief editor and founder of the literary quarterly, The Paris Review.

Daily Iowan free-lance writer Mitch Martin recently talked with Plimpton over the phone about his diverse experiences.

DI: What do you enjoy more: the experience itself or relating your experiences to other people?

Plimpton: "I don't know. I've never been asked that before. Sometimes the experiences are perfectly awful because you tend to get embarrassed. Nothing is worse than that. Nothing is worse than humiliation. On the other hand, I don't like writing very much. Maybe the answer to your question is that neither is much fun until they're over."

DI: Of all your experiences, do you have a particular favorite?

Plimpton: "I don't think so. Each one has its particular pleasures. It's hard to rank them. I suppose the one that caused the biggest stir is with the Detroit Lions, but I don't think the last one, with the Boston Bruins, is any less interesting or informative. You get great friends out of it. And you get, of course, a book."

DI: You've written on athletics a great deal. Is that something to which you are particularly drawn?

Plimpton: "Well, I've always enjoyed them tremendously. The reason they make interesting books is because the general public enjoys sports enormously, but they don't have much of a concept of what it's actually like to be involved in them. People are utterly enthralled by sports. The closer they can be gives them a sense of what it is like to be involved in them, and the more they like it."

DI: Any thoughts on what reaction Sidd Finch might have to the baseball lockout or how he would have done in arbitration?

Plimpton: "Well, he wasn't very much interested in money. As a Buddhist monk, the material world doesn't interest him. People ask me about him all the time. 'Where is he? How's he getting along?' Actually, he lives in London. I don't know what he's doing over there. I have his telephone number. It rings over there, but he's never picked it up. But the other day, I called, and it was busy — so he's around."

DI: Many UI students would probably like to have the kind of elite, high-paying career such as the kind you've attained for yourself. Is there any advice you'd like to pass along as to how you've succeeded?

Plimpton: "The field that I'm primarily involved in is writing. Everything else has sort of spilled out of that. If I had to advise someone on writing, I'd just give some old, practically clichéd advice: To write is to learn how to write. You have to put one word in front of the other. Anyone can be taught how to write a good, honest, clear sentence in English. Then the really hard stuff comes. Then you have to know where to put this exercise. You have to know how to observe, how to entertain, or at least inform a reader. Then on top of that, you have to be good enough to get published. If you just sit and write in a vacuum, that's not what anyone wants."

DI: When you were in college, did you have any idea you'd end up where you are today?

Plimpton: "No! There are wonderful twists and turns during the course of a career. There's no way you can guess what they will be. I suppose if you start out in a company your father owns, you can imagine yourself being president of the company. If you start out as a writer, it's difficult to guess what you're going to be doing in the future. Particularly if you don't think yourself much of a writer, which I never did. I always thought I was going to end up an editor in a publishing house or a large magazine such as The Atlantic Monthly, but it never came to pass."

DI: What are your future plans?

Plimpton: "I haven't really decided yet. I'm finishing a couple of books. Once I've done that, I'm going to go into "the lists." I'm thinking of managing a professional wrestler. I've made up a name, now I need to find a wrestler to fit it. The wrestler will be "The Grecian Urn" — huge, tattooed, and knowledgeable concerning poetry."

Plimpton's presentation tonight is entitled "Amateur among Professionals." Questions will be entertained following the lecture. Sponsored by the UI Lecture Committee, the event is free and open to the public.

Board gives construction fund approval

Kelly David
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR FALLS — The Iowa state Board of Regents approved funds to renovate the fire-damaged UI Registrar's Office and other construction projects.

UI officials had discussed renovating the office within the next two years, even before an electrical malfunction started a fire in January which gutted the ground floor of Jessup Hall.

The new proposal allocates $437,500 to make improvements anticipated in pre-fire planning in addition to repairing the damages caused by the fire.

The project will restore and renovate the 4,200 square feet of Jessup Hall that was destroyed by the fire and update the building's computer system.

In other business, the board allocated more than $1 million to complete a remodeling project of MacLean Hall which started in 1972.

The MacLean renovations include restoring the old auditorium and installing a modern communications wiring system.

The board also approved more than $1 million to reconstruct deteriorating walls of the Burlington Street and Madison Street tunnels.

The board approved $100,000 for a new driveway, sidewalks and porch to the president's house.

Finally, the board approved a proposal to eliminate the bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees in mathematical sciences.

The degree has gradually been phased out.

Special to The Daily Iowan

As you prepare to register for classes, consider enrolling in a cultural diversity course being offered for the first time this summer by the UI College of Education.

"Cultural Diversity: Issues of Theory and Practice" was developed as an upper-level undergraduate and graduate course by Donald Pope-Davis, a member of the Counseling Psychology Program in the College of Education.

Pope-Davis will teach the course with two colleagues: UI staff psychologist Dr. Amy Reynolds and Ozzie Diaz-Duque, an assistant UI professor of Spanish.

Pope-Davis said that the three have been putting the course together since last fall. Encouragement from the UI community prompted development of the diversity course and convinced him that the time was right to introduce it, Pope-Davis said.

"The thing that brought this to fruition is that the university as a whole has been giving a great deal of attention to issues of cultural diversity," he said. "I hear people saying, 'We need this type of course at our university,' and now I'm saying, 'I've developed this course, here it is.'"

"Cultural Diversity: Issues of Theory and Practice" will provide students with awareness of how a person's cultural background affects how they see other cultures, their knowledge of different populations and the skills to work with various cultures, he said.

Trying to translate the knowledge into skills will be what makes this course different from similar courses offered in the past, said Pope-Davis.

"People out there have the awareness and knowledge, and that's it. They might see two kids calling each other ethnically derogatory names and do nothing about it," he said. "So you ought to have the skills to intervene in this process."

One group that has been extremely vocal about the need for a cultural diversity course is the People of Color

Committee. Last February, the committee held a panel discussion on the possibility of integrating the study of diversity in the UI rhetoric program.

Geneva Kachman, a People of Color committee member, said Reynolds' course is a step in the right direction.

"It is a good idea," she said. "We're glad this course is taking place, we applaud that. What we're still striving for is an introductory course that all freshmen will be required to take. If this course became a general education requirement, we'd be very, very pleased."

Pope-Davis said the course will probably be a requirement for graduate education students in the near future, but he thinks that creation of an introductory course in cultural diversity may have to wait until Spring Semester 1991.

Student's reactions to the course this summer will give him a better idea of what will be done with the course in the future, he added.

Leonard Feldt, Division of Psychological and Quantitative Foundations in the College of Education chairman, agreed with Pope-Davis.

"Cultural diversity is one of the strategic goals of our college," said Feldt. "How this course will implement our goals awaits to be seen. You're never quite sure how things will work until you do them one time."

student-athletes were registered by members of the Registration Center staff.

UI Associate Registrar Marion Hansen said the new procedure isn't out of the ordinary because "if the students come through the center to register, (the registration staff) does it for them, anyway."

It is still unclear when the course schedules of these student-athletes were actually registered.

Joel Wilcox, assistant director of the UI Undergraduate Academic Advising Center, said last week the registrar's plan was to input these schedules on Saturday, April 14 — two days before the beginning of early registration.

Wilcox and UAAC Director Juliet Kaufmann stressed that UAAC had no approval of or involvement in the creation of the new procedure. Wilcox said the advisers who have athletes in their caseloads were requested to participate in Thursday night's advising session. Dallam said last week he didn't know exactly when the athletes would be registered.

Dallam did say limitations had been set on the number of athletes that would be allowed into each section, so that they would not be able to close out entire sections before other students had a chance to register.

"Jane Omann (supervisor of registration services) and her staff will be putting these athletes into classes under some very tightly supervised instructions," Dallam said. "They will not be taking up space from people that are seniors."

"Athletes are not closing down classes. We're going to monitor that," Dallam added.

But some athletes have confirmed that they were told their course schedules would be registered by Registration Center staff on Saturday.

UI sophomore Nancy Tessmer, a member of the track team, said she met with an academic adviser at Thursday night's meeting and was told then that her schedule would be registered the following Saturday.

Dallam was out of town this week and unavailable to comment further.

Hansen said Tuesday, however, that some of the students were registered Saturday, and the rest would be registered throughout the week in the order in which their normal registration dates occur.

Hansen said later that no schedules were actually registered over the weekend, but that they had only been "pre-checked" to see "if courses are open and if students are eligible."

In the past, student-athletes have been given priority registration and have been allowed to register during the first four days of early registration along with those students who have earned over 72 hours, Dallam said.

But the origins of the new procedure in which student-athletes register before other students are also unclear.

"I'm not sure of the origins but I know it's a sincere effort on the University's part to address some of the problems that maybe the institution has had with athletic eligibilities," Dallam said.

Dr. Annette Fitz, chairwoman of the UI Board in Control of Athletics, said the board played no part in the creation of the pilot procedure.

Fred Mims, assistant director of men's intercollegiate athletics, said he was the person in the athletic department involved in implementing the registration procedure, but refused to comment on the matter.

General Manager of The Airliner, one of the places that was evacuated.

The firefighters found two painters in the basement of the soon-to-be opened restaurant applying the epoxy paint with all the doors closed.

The men didn't realize the fumes were spreading through the floorboards and crevices into the other restaurants because they were wearing masks and utilizing a fan.

After clearing the buildings, firefighters opened all the windows and doors and started to pump air in to clear out the fumes.

"This was a petroleum product paint, and if the fumes had been left, they could have ignited," said Lieutenant Jerry Blank of the Iowa City Fire Department. "Someone is going to have to stay here tonight and babysit the building with the doors open, because the paint is going to give off fumes until it dries."

Gary Gossman, owner of The Wok, said the gas supply had been turned off because the firefighters were afraid pilot lights on the cooker might ignite the fumes.

When asked how he would have felt if the building had gone up in flames, Gossman said, "I would have felt really bad — we open in 10 days."

Twenty million people participated in the first Earth Day, sometimes called the birth of the modern environmental movement.

"Unfortunately, most of the problems that plagued us on Earth Day have only grown worse and new problems have emerged," he said.

Jackson cited acid rain, global warming, soil erosion, the ozone hole and other environmental problems as the costs of technological innovation.

"The bills for the industrial revolution are coming due," Jackson said.

"We're billions of times more ignorant than knowledgeable, but we've built a world based on the assumption that we know enough to bail ourselves out of our problems," Jackson said.

He used the Chernobyl nuclear accident to explain how people devote themselves to technology they cannot control.

"Each new power created by man is another control over man," Jackson said, quoting author C.S. Lewis.

Uncontrolled technology, created out of ignorance and "human cleverness" will ultimately result in the downfall of the capitalist economic system because it is shortsighted, he said.

"Cleverness is shortsighted, wisdom looks at the long run. For wisdom, look to nature," Jackson said. "I hope that we, as a technological species, will stop and look around and ask 'What was here? What does nature want from us?'"

ISU survey shows soil moisture adequate Pomerantz

AMES (AP) — A soil moisture study based on actual measurements shows farm fields are in far better condition than a report based on estimates from crop reporters.

An Iowa State University inventory map, based on 120 measurements across the state and a computer program that calculates soil types and other factors, shows that the top five feet of soil across all but 21 counties has at least normal moisture amounts.

The ISU conclusions "are exactly the opposite" of the most recent subsoil conditions reported weekly by the U.S.A.'s statistics agency in Des Moines, said Elwyn Taylor, a climatologist for ISU Extension Service.

"I think we're greatly improved. Although some people would probably disagree with that," Taylor said. "The rains have done a great deal to correct the agricultural drought."

Taylor and the computer model predict that the counties with less than the normal amount of moisture, located in the northwest and central Iowa, will reach normal moisture by mid-May if the rainfall patterns of the last several weeks continue.

Normal amounts are between seven and nine inches in the top five feet. Any amount over seven inches is adequate for crop production, Taylor said.

The USDA weekly crop report released Monday said all but 24 percent of the state's subsoil is short of moisture.

At least some degree of difference between the ISU survey and the weekly crop report should be expected, according to agriculture statistician Bernie Janssen of the Des Moines USDA statistics office.

Because of time and money limits, the weekly crop report is compiled from the opinions and work experience volunteered by about 180 to 230 farmers, extension agents, elevator workers and others on whether they consider the soil adequately moist.

"All the report is is a subjective survey," Janssen said. The reporters, for example, are not told how they should define the terms "adequate" or "short." But the report does a good job of reflecting the changes in crop and soil conditions from one week to the next, he said.

The ISU survey is based on actual water measurements of soil samples sent into Ames from across the state. But Taylor said there also is some limit to the accuracy of the maps, since soil conditions may vary between the measurement locations.

innovation, social change, human and environmental health, and finally, literature, discourse and critical analysis.

Pomerantz also discussed the 10.6 percent increase in the universities' funds approved by the state legislature earlier this month but warned board members not to take the current support for granted.

"We should not, in my view, express our recent success in any way that takes on any air of arrogance," he said. "The fact is we're just in the beginning stages and we're going to continue to need support of the governor, the legislature and the people."

Pomerantz is a 1952 graduate of the UI and resides in Des Moines, where he serves as chief executive officer of Mid-America Group and Gaylord Container Corporation.

Students gave the first lady flowers, books, balloons and a bone for her dog, Millie.

Dunkerton Community School Principal Roger Wilcox said the students originally planned to greet Bush with a different gift.

"We had thought about broccoli, but that idea was a little overdone," Wilcox said.

Bush reciprocated the school's gifts by donating books to the school library and autographing books before she departed.

hours," the handwritten statement said.

It did not specify what the kidnapers expected Kelly to do in Damascus. Kelly served as U.S. ambassador to Lebanon from 1983 to 1988, when the eight Americans were seized. Kelly was in Bonn, West Germany, on Wednesday.

In Washington, Secretary of State James Baker appeared to welcome the reports.

"Of course we're always hopeful," Baker said while reiterating a long-standing U.S. demand that all eight Americans held in Lebanon be released unconditionally.

Baker, however, hedged on the demand for Kelly to fly to Damascus. "At the present time, the Middle East is not on his agenda," he said.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters: "We would not anticipate him becoming involved in hostage release in any way."

Fitzwater said of the reports, "We don't know if they're true. We've seen this many times before. We hope they're true. We'll wait and see."

Diplomatic sources in Damascus said Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa last month carried a letter on the issue from Syrian President Hafez Assad to President Hashemi Rafsanjani in Iran.

The letter stressed the necessity to close the hostages' file, according to one of the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

He said the Syrians were following a pledge made by Sharaa in February to hostage families to seek the release of all the captives in Lebanon.

The kidnapers' 26-line message was delivered to the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar and a Western news agency in Beirut. It was delivered at sundown Wednesday, which could mean the deadline would be at sunset Friday.

In the photograph, Turner, 42, was squinting behind his heavy-framed glasses. He had a dark beard and was wearing a white T-shirt. He stood with his arms at his side, against a background of a patterned blue cloth.

The kidnapers said the decision to release a hostage came in response to behests from Iran and Syria. Iranian newspapers associated with Rafsanjani have urged forward by releasing an American hostage within 48 hours on the basis of reciprocal moves to accomplish what is required to accelerate the happy ending.

"We want the humanitarian move.

verbal message that will be conveyed to President George Bush. We are ready to reciprocate or escalate. The other side has to choose."

The sentence appeared to indicate that an exchange was involved and that the freed hostage would carry a message for Bush.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, believed made up of pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists, threatened in its last statement March 15 to kill the three hostages unless the United States met unspecified demands. It also threatened attacks on airlines flying Soviet Jewish immigrants to Israel.

The group previously offered to trade the three professors for 400 Arab inmates held in Israeli jails. Israel rejected the swap.

The statement did not indicate what prompted the group to change its hard-line stance.

Turner taught mathematics and computer science at Beirut University College. His Lebanese wife, Badr, is visiting her family in the United Arab Emirates along with her daughter, Joanna, born five months after her father's abduction.

Turner's mother, Estelle Ronnenburg of Boise, told The Associated Press that she felt hope tempered with caution.

"I do feel full of hope," Ronnenburg said. "But I talked to the State Department and they told me that they are checking things out and not to let myself get too worked up, because we have had rumors like this before that have not worked out."

Polhill, 55, of New York, was a lecturer in accounting.

His Lebanese wife, Ferya, reached by telephone at the university, told The Associated Press: "I shall live on my nerves until it happens. May god help me."

Steen, born in Arcata, Calif., and a former resident of Boston, turns 51 Sunday.

His wife, Virginia Rose, of Jackson, Mich., who also taught at the university, now lives in the United States.

"We don't know if they're true. We've seen this many times before. We hope they're true. We'll wait and see."

the hostages be released on humanitarian grounds. More radical elements in Iran have called hostage-taking a means of confronting the West.

The statement added: "We have decided to move the hostages affair to be balanced between both sides. This is a condition to move forward. Otherwise there is no meaning for a one-sided movement.

"We have responded to the behests, hoping to reach a solution as proposed and on the basis of the the past five years, according to a spring enrollment report submitted to the board Wednesday.

Next fall 350 fewer students are expected to live in UI residence halls, but this decline is predicted to be temporary.

Rather than closing buildings to account for the empty rooms, some triple rooms will be converted to doubles and some doubles turned into singles.

"We're reluctant to defer maintenance or idle facilities because maximum housing capacity may be needed in the future," Droll said.

Single occupancy rooms with full board will increase 2.7 percent, from $2,892 to $2,971.

Triple occupancy rooms with full board will increase 6.7 percent, from $2,399 to $2,561.

Democratic budget plan cuts defense spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats unveiled their own $1.2 trillion budget for next year on Wednesday, a plan that calls for $8 billion less in military spending than President George Bush wants.

The package, which the House Budget Committee plans to vote on Thursday, would also increase spending by $6 billion on programs that include child care, NASA and aid to Central America, Eastern Europe and Africa.

The proposal is the first detailed response by Democratic leaders to the 1991 fiscal year budget Bush requested in January. At the time, Democrats complained Bush's spending blueprint was not a serious effort to reduce the deficit, and was too generous to the military at a time of lessening tensions with the Soviet Union.

"The world has changed greatly," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who outlined highlights of the plan at a news conference with other top Democrats. "The United States is obviously now in a position to look more intensively at the problems that lie within our own country."

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., predicted approval by his Democratic dominated panel. He said the package reflects "a transition from military confrontation to economic leadership, from a Cold War economy to a peacetime economy."

Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the budget panel, called the proposal "a typical Democratic budget without discipline." GOP lawmakers will vote against the Democratic plan, he said, and continue pressing for talks between Congress and the administration as the best way to close the budget gap.

The Democratic proposal claims to trim the 1991 deficit by $36 billion to $63.8 billion. That would be just below the $64 billion target set by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction act, which requires a balanced budget by 1993.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office has said the administration is underestimating next year's deficit by $70 billion. It expects the 1991 budget deficit to be $161 billion before budget reduction starts.

The Democrats would slice $11.5 billion off the amount the military would need next year to stay abreast of inflation. That would leave defense spending at $295 billion — $8 billion less than Bush wants.

U.S.-Mexican border patrols accused of killing immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — A human rights group said Wednesday that U.S. Border Patrol agents have mistreated and even killed Mexicans trying to illegally enter the United States.

But border patrol representatives said the agents are defending themselves along an increasingly violent U.S.-Mexican border, where they face attack from bandits and aliens who try to force their way into the United States.

"Violence along the border was the subject of a hearing sponsored by the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on human rights and international organizations. "It is clear that something is wrong on our borders," said Rep. Gus Yatron, D-Pa., the subcommittee chairman.

"I wish I could say that violent confrontations between Americans and undocumented immigrants are isolated, but, unfortunately, they are not," Rep. Jim Bates, D-Calif., said.

He said the American Friends

Service Committee, a Quaker humanitarian organization, has documented 20 people in the last four years who were shot and killed near San Diego by the border patrol, an arm of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The committee also released a report on 380 cases of alleged human rights violations between May 1988 and May 1989. They occurred near San Diego; Rio Grande, Texas; Tucson, Ariz.; El Paso, Texas, and Florida.

The violations involved physical abuse, denial of constitutional rights, arrest, shooting, seizure of property and verbal abuse, said Maria Jimenez, director of the committee's Immigration Law Enforcement Monitoring Project.

"Particularly alarming is the increasing use of deadly force in border policing which, in at least one instance in each of the four southern border areas, have led to death or serious injury," she said.

U.S.S.R. cuts off oil supply to Lithuania

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union on Wednesday shut off the supply of oil to Lithuania's only refinery, imposing part of Mikhail Gorbachev's threatened economic embargo on the breakaway Baltic republic, Lithuanian spokesmen said.

"The flow of crude oil to Mazhiekiai was cut off at approximately 9:30 p.m.," said Aidas Palubinskas, a spokesman for Lithuania's Supreme Council legislature.

Reading an official government statement, he said Mazhiekiai refinery director Bronius Vainoras confirmed the single pipeline feeding the plant from the Russian city of Polotsk had been shut down.

The statement said a message read earlier by telephone to Vainoras said: "In accordance with the resolution of the Council of Ministers, we are halting pumping of crude oil to your refinery."

There was no immediate word on whether natural gas supplies also had been disrupted.

The move came just hours after Soviet Deputy Oil and Gas Minister Aklim Mukhamedzyanov told the Soviet news agency Tass that reports of an energy cutoff to Lithuania "are completely groundless."

He said the Soviet Council of Ministers issued no instructions to stop the flow.

Lithuania is entirely dependent on the Soviet Union for all oil and gas, and petroleum products are the Soviet Union's most profitable export.

Sales of gasoline to Lithuanian motorists have tripled this week as residents reacted to Gorbachev's threat with panic buying, but stocks were adequate and no rationing was anticipated, Lithuania's energy minister, Leonas Asmantas, said before the shut down Wednesday.

The Supreme Council refused Wednesday to bow to Gorbachev's ultimatum that it rescind independence-oriented laws, but offered to pass no more such measures if the Kremlin starts immediate talks.

After the Supreme Council legislature approved an official response to Gorbachev, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis warned Gorbachev that an embargo of such supplies would hurt other republics as well as Lithuania.

"An economic blockade would influence Latvia, Estonia and the Kaliningrad region of Russia," Landsbergis was quoted as telling a news conference.

"That would resemble an angry man beating himself," Eduardas Potasinskas of Lithuanian TV quoted Landsbergis as saying.

But anticipating a possible Soviet embargo, the Supreme Council urged Lithuanian factories and consumers to "prepare themselves for spiritual endurance and strict economy on all consumption." It did not announce specific conservation measures.

At the end of two days of sometimes heated debate, the Supreme Council drafted a letter to Gorbachev promising that if talks began before May 1, it would not pass any more measures to implement its March 11 declaration of independence.

That offer represented an effort to compromise with Moscow, but was unlikely to be accepted by the Soviet leadership.

In their resolution — titled "On the Expansion of Relations Between the Republic of Lithuania and the U.S.S.R." — members of the Supreme Council reaffirmed their declaration of independence, and also appealed to Gorbachev not to use violence against Lithuanians or impose the economic sanctions he threatened on Friday.

Gorbachev said that unless Lithuania rolled back several laws supporting the declaration of independence, he would impose an embargo on key supplies to the small Baltic republic of 3.8 million people.

Grenade kills 15 on Lebanon school bus

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A rifle-fired grenade slammed into a schoolbus and exploded during Christian factional fighting Wednesday, killing 11 schoolchildren and at least four other people.

"The driver was burning as the bus hit the sidewalk," mumbled one flayed witness.

"Many of the pupils yelled for help as we tried to extinguish the fire. At least one teacher also was among the dead along with the driver," said a soldier at the scene.

A police spokesman said the bus was hit while crossing into Christian east Beirut in the afternoon. It was bringing children back from school in south Beirut. The grenade ignited the fuel tank.

"It couldn't be determined who fired the rifle grenade," said the spokesman, who cannot be named in line with regulations.

Gen. Michel Aoun's radio station accused gunmen of Samir Geagea's Lebanese Forces militia of firing at the bus.

"Geagea is taking pleasure today at the sight of the burned corpses of innocent children," the broadcast said.

Geagea's command could not be reached by telephone. But the pro-Geagea Voice of Lebanon radio station called the hit "mysterious."

Aoun and Geagea have been involved in a bloody power struggle for control of the 310-square-mile

The Associated Press

Incendiary bullets hit a school bus at a crossing gateway between east and west Beirut Wednesday, setting the bus on fire. Eleven children and four adults burned to death.

Christian enclave for more than two months. The showdown has killed 892 people and wounded 2,388 since it started January 30. Most victims have been civilians.

The police spokesman said the bus belonged to the Mrajeh Elementary School, a new private school in south Beirut.

It was not immediately clear why students from predominantly Christian east Beirut were attending school in south Beirut, a Shiite Moslem stronghold.

The gutted wreckage of the yellow bus straddled a curb in an Aoun-controlled area, a few yards east of the gateway. It is the only crossing linking Christian east Beirut and Moslem west Beirut.

The smell of incinerated metal hung in the air as flies buzzed in the darkened interior of the bus.

A torn, striped green and blue sweater lay on the blackened springs of the burned-out bus. The wheels of the bus had melted. Sheets of paper from a grade book lay scattered on the driver's seat. The names of the students were burned off. Only their grades remained, written neatly in red and blue ink.

The army private, one of the soldiers serving under Aoun, said he and his colleagues "doused off the burning bus with water and we evacuated the victims to nearby hospitals."

The bus was hit a few hours after a thunderous blast ripped through Aoun's Defense Ministry in east Beirut's suburb of Yarze, killing at least two men.

Aoun's forces said in a communique the Defense Ministry blast occurred when soldiers were moving confiscated ammunition, but they did not say if it was an accident. Moslem radio reports said the explosion was aimed at Aoun's troops.

The rival Christian factions duelled intermittently throughout the day with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades in east Beirut and the Kesrouan highlands, the police spokesman said.

Aoun opposes the government of President Elias Hrawi, formed last fall under terms of an accord aimed at ending Lebanon's 15-year-old civil war.

Geagea has recognized Hrawi's authority.

Israel begins construction of Jewish settlements

DUGIT SETTLEMENT. Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Bulldozers guarded by Israeli soldiers leveled an orange grove Wednesday to ready a new Jewish settlement for construction only a short distance from a crowded Palestinian refugee camp.

In Jerusalem, a group of Jewish settlers who moved into the old walled city's Christian quarter ignored a court order to leave.

The new settlement activity in Gaza drew a protest from Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfiliev. He told reporters in Moscow it showed "some circles in Israel continue to deliberately raise obstacles to a peaceful settlement in the Middle East."

U.S. officials have also called the construction of Israeli settlements a threat to peace efforts. They have conditioned a $400 million housing loan for immigrants on assurances Soviet Jews will not be settled in occupied areas.

In Dugit, armed Jewish settlers from a nearby settlement watched as the bulldozers smoothed out sand dunes and uprooted orange trees for the trailer-type homes of 40 Israeli families who plan to move in by the summer.

The prefabricated housing is expected to arrive soon, according to Arab workers who operated the earthmoving equipment.

Dugit's future residents plan a tourist beach and yacht club on the beachfront about a mile from their homes. The site replaces another nearby that military officials rejected.

"These people want to bring their yachts, build a marina, attract tourists," said Dalia Hershkowitz, a settlement activist in Gaza.

"The move was delayed when military officials designated the original site, the prettiest beach in Gaza, too close to a Palestinian refugee camp for proper security," she added.

The Shati refugee camp, a beachside shanty-town of 41,000 Palestinians, is only two miles from the Dugit site.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's spokesman Yossi Ahimeir said Sunday, when Israel TV reported the final permits had been granted for Dugit, that it was one of eight settlements agreed to by Shamir's Likud and the center-left Labor Party when they formed a government in 1988.

Three settlements were built after the coalition government came to power, but former Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Labor postponed the ground-breaking of the other five.

Leftist Parliament member Dedi Zucker said this week that in addition to agreed-upon settlement plans, the government recently authorized construction of Jewish housing in the West Bank town of Nablus and expansion of a settlement near Hebron.

GREEK ALCOHOL POLICY

This ain't no party II

As if the alcohol policy implemented by the UI greek system last year wasn't repressive enough, the UI Interfraternity and Panhellenic Council on Monday passed a series of amendments to further limit alcohol consumption at greek social events.

The evolution of a stringent alcohol policy at the UI is certainly not a unique occurrence in a national perspective. Across the country, greeks are being reigned in by increasingly strict regulations. And although some greek system members are rightly taking some credit for emphasizing alcohol awareness, the major impetus for this new prohibition has come from nervous insurance companies and national organizations.

Confronted with skyrocketing insurance premiums, national officers have had little choice but to issue harsh new edicts restricting alcohol use on chapter premises, and individual greek chapters have had little choice but to respond with at least some degree of compliance.

At the UI, some greeks have gone beyond mere compliance with vigorous attempts to both regulate and reform within the system. Their efforts have yielded some positive results. But, in their fervor to promote responsible alcohol consumption, some UI greeks seem willing to abandon the principles of responsible self-management they espouse in favor of outright coercion.

The buzzwords commonly used in defense of the overly rigorous new policy are "mature management of alcohol," but the elaborate restraints it places upon greek events seem to suggest that utter social irresponsibility would reign without the toughened rules.

Under the newest version of the policy, a typical evening at a UI greek function would necessarily include the presentation of a valid driver's license and another form of identification at the sole entrance to the event. Legal drinkers would be issued conspicuous wrist bands, while underage guests would be stamped on the hand.

Once inside, legal drinkers would begin a futile attempt to find an operating keg. At many UI fraternities, kegs have already been banned. At those chapters whose national organizations still allow kegs on the premises, the allowable number of "multi-person alcoholic containers" is derived through a calculation based on factors such as the number of legal drinkers present and the duration of the event.

Party goers who bring their own beer — the preferred means of consumption under the current system — must keep an eye on the clock: At 2:00 a.m., consumption must cease and all alcoholic beverages will be seized, not to be returned until the next morning.

Many greeks dismiss the new amendments, and the alcohol policy itself, as regulations which are "virtually impossible" to enforce. That remains to be seen. But the fact that eradicating alcohol abuse in the UI greek system has become a matter of enforcement, instead of simply a concerted effort to increase awareness and education within the system, negates the claim that the new rules are a triumph of maturity and suggests that many UI greeks are missing their own point.

Russia pays price for system

The Soviet Union is not having a good year. The March economic report acknowledged that total production for the month was 1.5 to 1.7 percent less than the year before. Production of food, coal and electric power had declined. So had output of textiles, footwear and oil-drilling equipment. Meanwhile, the country was confronted with an unprecedented 600,000 refugees who desperately need basic necessities.

The pinch is causing Soviet economists to look for ways to economize. One obvious choice is trade relations with the Socialist bloc.

Western economists have long understood that empires are a political luxury that almost nobody can afford. But Lenin and his disciples always believed that empires enrich the imperial power by impoverishing its colonies. Now at long last, Soviet economists have begun to examine and discuss the high cost to the Soviet Union of assisting Socialist countries on three continents.

An article in the March issue of a leading economic journal, Ekonomika i Thizn, raises doubts about whether the "world Socialist economic system" is worth the price.

The whole question of Soviet aid to its associated states is obscured by secrecy and complexity, the authors warn. Part of the "aid" consists of the Soviet habit of paying inflated prices for goods readily available elsewhere: seven to nine times more for Cuban sugar, greatly swollen prices for Vietnamese cement. A second type of "aid" involves selling goods for far below the market price, as Soviets sell oil to Cuba. A third form of hidden "aid" consists of providing services at virtually no cost, as when the Soviets commit 300 of their ships to transporting Cuban products, thus freeing Cuban ships for profitable engagements. A fourth form of "aid" is the provision of credit on fantastic terms, such as allowing Mongolia 200 years to reimburse funds for a poultry farm.

Jeane Kirkpatrick

An article in Argumenty i Fakty asserts that nonequivalent conditions of trade with Cuba currently cost the Soviet Union some $6 billion to $10 billion annually. The authors see no sign of lessening Cuban dependence, "not one sector of the economy fulfilled the plan quotas in 1989 (except for transport and sugar production) ... the living standard of the population is declining. Unemployment has increased."

Soviet economists also note that their trade is disadvantageous not only with the Socialist countries in the Third World, but also with Poland, Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic, all of which profit from Soviet products delivered at discount prices. Under current practices, the Soviet Union subsidizes the reorientation of the economies of Eastern Europe at a time it can ill afford to do so.

Once the question, "who profits?" is raised, it catches on.

The answer to Soviet economic problems may lie in reordering its political relations as well as adopting a market approach to trade with other countries.

The solution, according to the authors cited above, is "to separate aid from commerce and trade from politics" and get fair prices for Soviet products. The fault is not with the debtors in the Soviet countries but with the bureaucracy that "sacrifices the interests of the country at home and abroad for the sake of high sounding slogans."

Once the question, "who profits?" is raised, it catches on.

Russians have begun to notice that as the Soviet Union is not getting a fair shake in the world Socialist system, Russia is not getting a fair shake in the Soviet Union. Russia contributes a disproportionate share of fuel, minerals, energy, timberland and water resources to the Soviet Union, according to a recent report in Sovetskaya Rossiya. "Russia accounts for nearly two-thirds of the USSR's national product." But the Soviet economy is not geared to the needs of Russia's population. Russia "ranks last among the union republics in terms of the proportion of expenditures on social needs, and eighth in terms of housing provisions."

Economic independence is the preferred answer to the Soviet Union's trade imbalances with its Socialist dependencies and to Russia's problems inside the Soviet Union.

Why not? As the autonomous republics develop national identifications and demands, why should anyone expect that the Russians will not do so?

The Baltics are not the only republics who were independent nations. So was Russia. And a democratic national Russian movement has emerged in time to win elections in Moscow and Leningrad.

This is very good news. In the Soviet Union nationalism and democracy can go hand in hand. Both have been suppressed in the multi-national internal empire. But Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, Vladimir Bukovsky and generations of Russian dissidents have rightly pointed out that Russian culture has been suppressed along with that of the Ukraine and all other nationalities.

Today virtually all of the people of the USSR support democratic self-determination for themselves and for Eastern Europe.

The age of empire has passed for the Soviet Union as for Western Europe. The sacrifice of national interest to remote colonies no longer makes sense.

Letters

Valid insights

To the Editor:

I am appalled by the response to Clare Thomas' column ["Was it too cold to take back the night?" The Daily Iowan, April 10]. Jessica Kardon's letter ["Undermining women," DI, April 13] complained that she is "tired beyond words" of women undermining women. Why, then, does she write such a letter about Thomas, who was only expressing her frustration about the way the event was organized? Thomas saw potential for the event to have more impact, and in her column, attempted to illustrate steps in that direction. The responses to her column seem to come from people who are so full of themselves that they cannot accept any constructive criticism.

It appeared to this reader that Thomas' insights, while expressed with vehemence, had some validity and were put forth in an effort to give this public event more impact. I saw no disservice to local women's advocacy groups, as the letters have suggested. Real courage on the part of her critics would entail more than marching through the streets in a crowd of 300. Real courage entails accepting criticism from dissenting voices within your ranks and not stifling those voices with a bombardment of false accusations.

An American fall guy?

To the Editor:

Patrick Buchanan in his column

["Poindexter: An American hero," The Daily Iowan, April 17] has once again tried to convince us John Poindexter is a patriot and hero, guilty of no crime. He asks, "What did this veteran naval officer ... do to merit disgrace?" The answer is that he perjured himself and lied to Congress.

Buchanan seems to forget that the United States Congress has the right to subpoena testimony. If the Executive branch feels certain information should not be released, it may refuse to testify on the grounds of national security, but it may not lie.

The sole purpose for lying to Congress was to keep the American people from finding out that the Nicaraguan rebels were still being funded. It was an act of cowardice, allowing the Reagan administration to pursue a policy without paying the political price. Worse, it established an atmosphere of government out of control, where Lieutenants could decide government policy and arms dealers could make obscene profits.

If John Poindexter was the man responsible for this debacle, as we have been told, then he has thoroughly dishonored himself and the president he claimed to serve. The only way his actions would be heroic is if Reagan had authorized Poindexter's actions, and the admiral was silently taking the fall for a president still too spineless to tarnish his image by taking responsibility for what happened. Surely this is not what Buchanan is suggesting.

Self-inflicted scheduling: slow suicide

Get used to seeing these words: "Section [insert number] is closed. No other section of the same time is available." According to the ISIS Registration Handbook, this is how the new computer registration lets you know you've been gonged.

So much for the human touch. I think the UI is making a mistake in using the new computer registration system to dole out the academic crumbs. At least, I hope so. I hope that this new, highly technical method of rejecting undergraduates' class wish list will engender a critical review of the emaciated Schedule of Courses.

Used to be, every semester was the same. You stand outside Calvin Hall in the hoarfrost for about six millenia. When you finally make it to the computer room, all that is left are courses like "Selected American Authors: Guido Hemingway — Ernie's Little Brother."

Mitch Martin

Immediately, three things flash through your mind: 1) "For four bones an hour, I'm working a job an Egyptian pyramid slave would turn down;" 2) "In trying to help me get through school, my parental unit has just gotten itself declared a debtor nation by the World Bank;" and 3) "I am enduring this economic hell in order to take classes I don't give a damn about anyway."

Your first reaction is a desire to strangle one of the ladies sitting behind the computer. Unfortunately, every one of them closely resembles your grandmother. So instead of doing anything about it, like marching home and writing a red-hot letter to Marv Pomerantz and his budget-conscious buddies, you just shrug and hope for the best from Guido. After all, it was plain to see the frazzled matrons of Calvin Hall were doing their best.

Since most of us don't have a direct target for the anger caused by Curriculum Deprivation Syndrome, perhaps our attention will be turned to the people you don't see during the academic lottery. It's the regents and the UI administration that decide how your tuition money is allotted. Policy-wise, what seems to be most important right now is the engrandisement of the UI's reputation. This is being done by harvesting large endowments, recruiting big-time professors, establishing a large PR apparatus — research, publishing and publicity. The predominant goal is to make a top 10 list. Not one of David Letterman's, but the list of the nation's top ten public universities.

You may have noticed that nowhere in the above paragraph do the words "teaching" or "learning" appear. Believe it or not, universities actually used to perceive these as their primary mission. I have heard some lip service about this sort of thing. But just ask yourself how many classes you had this semester where people were sitting on the floor, add slips in hand, on the first day. I swear someday a GER lecture will fill Carver-Hawkeye to the brim. That is, if the Athletic Department can be caught in one of its more generous moods. Sometimes it seems like undergraduates are primarily here as nice, collegiate-looking scenery, a justification for TAs' salaries. I suppose this is only fair, though, since for too many students, the UI is here as a justification for their parents' largesse and five years of intense partying.

I'd like to be proven wrong about this. There are undergraduates who really care about being students, and there are faculty and staff members who deeply care about the undergraduate educational experience. This attitude, however, is becoming more and more of an aberration. I can't believe anything else when most students can't get the course they want until their senior year, but the UI feels free to indulge itself in a $27 million laser ditch.

So this semester, when students are forced to type in "New Age Ballet I-IV" and three courses from the College of Astrology for the low, low price of two body parts per credit, perhaps they'll get angry enough to do something about it.

Otherwise, the UI will continue turning itself into a user-friendly, prestige-glutted diploma factory.

Mitch Martin's column appears on alternate Thursdays on the Viewpoints page.

Minor quakes rock California

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Nine earthquakes jolted Northern California on Wednesday, the anniversary of the catastrophic Great Quake of 1906. The tremors were aftershocks of the October quake that killed 67, geologists said.

There were no reports of injuries or major damage from Wednesday morning's quakes, the largest measuring up to 5.5 on the Richter scale. The tremors on the San Andreas Fault were felt from San Francisco to King City, Calif., 150 miles south.

The San Andreas also caused the 1906 and October 17 quakes.

"All the memories came back to the kids this one especially," Darrell Daniels said with his 4-year-old daughter, Eleth, on his lap.

"She won't let me go." The family is living in a mobile home because their home in downtown Watsonville was condemned after the October quake.

Wednesday's aftershocks were centered about four miles east of Watsonville, 60 miles south of San Francisco. October's 7.1-magnitude quake caused major damage to the farming community.

The tremors began at 6:38 a.m., shortly after a group of Great Quake survivors gathered in San Francisco to commemorate the 1906 disaster. The strongest tremor Wednesday struck at 6:54 a.m.

In all, geologists recorded nine quakes that measured at least 3.5.

The University of California-Berkeley Seismographic Station said the strongest quake had a preliminary reading of 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a gauge of energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number, for example from magnitude 5.5 to magnitude 6.5, means that the ground motion is 10 times greater.

"We are considering them aftershocks. They occurred in the same location of other aftershocks of Loma Prieta," said David Oppenheimer, a Geological Survey seismologist. Loma Prieta was the name given to October's quake.

He said aftershocks from a magnitude-7.1 quake can continue for two years.

"We figured it was all over," said Robert Holleson, a former Watsonville resident who was visiting Wednesday. "But the power's off, the phone's dead, helicopters are flying all over. It's like it's starting all over again."

USS Iowa sabotage theory supported

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Families of the 47 sailors killed in the USS Iowa explosion last April 19 began arriving here Wednesday for a memorial service, and some voiced support for the Navy's handling of the disaster a year ago.

At a news conference, family members said they believe the Navy's controversial conclusion that the battleship explosion was likely caused by sabotage by a disgruntled gunner's mate who died in the blast.

"I'm in total agreement with the report. I think the Navy did a thorough job... I don't believe there was any cover-up," said John Hague, whose stepson, Lt. J.G. Philip Buch, died in the explosion.

The news conference was attended by five people representing three families. Other families of the victims have said they disagree with the Navy's findings.

According to the Navy, Gunner's Mate Clayton Hartwig was suicidal and disgruntled at his treatment by the Navy. That assessment was based on a psychological profile done by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Navy theorized Hartwig slipped a chemical detonator between the bags of powder in the center

16-inch gun in gun turret No. 2. Seconds before the turret was scheduled to fire a training salvo off the coast of Puerto Rico, the explosion occurred, sending a fireball racing down the six decks of the turret. The blast instantly killed most of the men inside the giant gun.

Hartwig's sister, Kathy Kubicina, has crusaded to clear her brother's name. She has been joined by other family members of victims and some legislators in questioning the Navy's investigation.

Earlier this year, a subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee issued a report saying the Navy's conclusions were not supported by the facts.

"I found it deplorable that the Navy would stretch the facts to force a conclusion that blamed it on a sailor," said former Secretary of the Navy John Lehman. Lehman brought the World War II battleship out of retirement as part of the buildup to a 600-ship Navy under President Reagan.

Kathy Miller, whose son Todd Miller died in the explosion, said she was upset that Kubicina appeared to be speaking for all the parents when she challenged the Navy's report.

Forum addresses issues of black student-athlete

Dr. Harry Edwards, shown here speaking at the UI last fall, participated in a nationwide teleconference from Washington, D.C., Wednesday that was shown in the Triangle Ballroom at the Union. Edwards is a sports sociologist at the University of California-Berkeley.

Are blacks in universities across the country taking the "student" out of the word student-athlete? That was the topic of discussion in Wednesday's nationwide teleconference from Washington, D.C., entitled "The Black Athlete: Winners or Losers in Academia?"

The presentation, which was open to the public in the Triangle Ballroom of the Iowa Memorial Union, featured a panel of 11 coaches and personnel from the NCAA, including Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer and ex-Iowa assistant men's hoops coach Rudy Washington.

After the broadcast, members of Iowa athletic teams formed their own panel to share their feelings on the subject.

The teleconference, which was hosted by CBS Sports analyst James Brown, examined the motivation for black high school athletes to attend college in the first place, academic entrance standards, and whether or not college athletes should be paid. Members of the panel expressed their beliefs that a majority of black collegiate athletes go to college for the wrong reasons.

"We've created a system where most people go to college as a way of preparing for the pros," said NCAA executive director Dick Schultz. Former professional tennis star Arthur Ashe agreed, saying, "In the past 100 years, the black athlete has been a winner. But more recently, in the last 15 years, it's been a crisis. Black athletes don't see a college education as their first priority. They see it as a stepping-stone to the pros."

"We are here to say that we want to help black athletes realize there's more to life than sports — namely academics," said Dr. Wyatt Kirk, a sports psychologist at the University of North Carolina A&T.

Brown reported that although today's blacks make up 75 percent of the NBA, 50 percent of the NFL, and 35 percent of Major League Baseball, there are 10,000 shattered dreams for every one that makes the pros. And according to Ashe, Stringer, and Washington, the parent is the one to blame.

"Black parents are seven or eight times more likely to encourage their kid to turn pro than are white families," Ashe said. "If you go to a high school game on a Friday night, then go to a PTA meeting and count the number of black families at both, the disparity is glaring."

"The question is, how much truth does the athlete want to hear?" Stringer said. "A lot of parents, athletes and coaches don't want to hear it. How many of those parents are willing to take their athlete off of the practice field in order to better their performance in the classroom?"

We (Iowa's coaching staff) make it a point to go to the athlete's home and tell them that they are coming to the university to get an education."

Women's basketball player Felicia Hall, who was on the UI panel in the Union, said that's exactly how things happened with her.

"I think my coaches are the greatest people in the world," Hall said of Stringer and assistant coach Marianna Freeman. "They were very honest with me. They came into my house and told me what was important: education first, basketball second."

"I take offense as a coach when we are held responsible, when a family has been raising their kid for 17 or 18 years," said Washington, now the head basketball coach at Drake. "Kids must maintain an attitude to be successful and that's not happening."

Wanda Oates, the first woman in a Washington, D.C., high school to be the basketball coach of an all-male team, blamed the status of American education for the problems of the black athlete.

"You need to look at what 'NCAA' stands for," she said to Schultz. "It stands for National Collegiate Athletic Association and it should be National Collegiate Athletic and Educational Association. The educational system in this country is in shambles."

Hatcher's bat lifts Hawks to sweep over Minnesota

Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Chris Hatcher's three-run homer gave the Iowa baseball team a doubleheader sweep of Minnesota Wednesday and a first-place tie with Illinois in the Big Ten standings.

The sweep improved the Hawkeyes to 24-7 overall and 10-2 in conference play, tying them with the Illini for the best record in the league. The two teams will meet April 27-28 at Iowa Field.

"It's a great feeling," Iowa pitcher Brett Backlund said. "We're on a roll now. We're hitting well and the pitching staff is throwing excellent games."

The Hawkeyes had not hit a home run in 10 games until Hatcher came to bat in the fourth inning of the nightcap in Minneapolis. The junior right fielder's blast over the left field wall led Iowa to the 3-2 victory.

"I had a good feeling at least it would be an extra base hit," said Hatcher, who also had the game-winning RBI in the Hawkeyes' 5-3 win in the opener. "I just relaxed and let it happen."

"We've been having a drought. We haven't been hitting that well as a team. I think (my homer) lit a fire under other people."

The second game of the doubleheader remained scoreless until the third inning when an Iowa error allowed Minnesota junior Jeff Monson to score.

The Hawkeyes retaliated with their big inning in the top of the fourth.

Iowa senior Chris Malinoski led off with a double to the left center fence and advanced on a fielder's choice. Junior Tim Costo walked next to set up Hatcher's homer.

Senior Brian Wujcik followed with a two-bagger to left field, and advanced to third on a sacrifice fly by Mike Bradley. But Wujcik was left on base when senior Tim Canney grounded out.

The Gophers rallied in the sixth inning but fell short, scoring only one more run.

"I'm really happy with the way we hung in there," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "It's about time someone hit a home run. It's nice to finally get some extra base hits because that's the style of this team."

Backlund went the distance, allowing only four hits and two unearned runs while fanning six. Going into the contest, Backlund was second in the Big Ten with a 1.20 ERA.

"I had two quality performances before this," said Backlund, who is 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the league. "I just wanted to be consistent in this game."

In Wednesday's first game, the Hawkeyes scored five runs on only four hits, while the Gophers made Boston Red Sox catcher Tony Pena bobbles the ball Wednesday as Chicago White Sox' Dan Pasqua scores on a Carlton Fisk single during second-inning action in Chicago.

Delicate surgery slows Bird

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics was hospitalized Wednesday after undergoing minor surgery for an abscess on his buttocks.

Dr. Arnold Scheller, the Celtics' physician, said an incision was made and the abscess drained at New England Baptist Hospital.

"All we did was pop it," Scheller said.

Bird scored 23 points while playing 45 minutes in Boston's 111-105 loss at Chicago Tuesday night and went to the hospital after the team returned home Wednesday.

Scheller said that the abscess has been bothering Bird since last Sunday and "he started to develop more systemic signs of infection."

"When you get (cold) sweats and you develop a fever, that means it's starting to spread," the doctor said. "That's what we mean by systemic."

Scheller said that Bird "will probably be in the hospital for 24 to 48 hours" for intravenous antibiotic treatment.

Bird, who is averaging 24.3 points and 9.5 rebounds for the Celtics, missed a game with the Orlando Magic Wednesday night.

Scheller said that Bird was questionable for a game with the Chicago Bulls in Boston Garden Friday night.

Golf is a way of life for Iowa's Thomason

Rita Heimes
 The Daily Iowan

Diane Thomason remembers the good ole' days at age eight, joining the rest of the kids as they threw bags on their backs and rode bicycles to the local golf course in Waverly, Iowa, to play all day.

She never dreamed at that time that the little girl playing golf just for fun would make her life coaching the sport.

"Golf is a way of life, not just a game. It gets under your skin," said Thomason, in her 15th year as coach of the Iowa women's golf team.

Since the fall of 1975, when she became a coach and P.E. instructor at Iowa, Thomason has compiled a list of achievements that continues to grow year after year.

She was the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) Coach of the Year in 1985 and is currently president of the organization. For the past two years she has coached the United States' women's golf team at the World University Golf Championships, and was invited to repeat the honor again this year.

Perhaps most important, Thomason has been with the Iowa program from its very beginning, earning distinction as dean of the women's coaches.

"She provides me with a lot of assistance by teaching our philosophy to any new people in the program," said Dr. Christine Grant, director of women's athletics. "And she gives the program stability, which I think is very positive."

"I'm like the historian," Thomason joked. "If someone has a question, they go to the archives; that would be Thomason."

She is an inspiration to her players as well as the coaches, bringing years of experience and an attitude that stresses academics to her sport.

"When we started the women's program, our philosophy was that the win-loss record was not necessarily what our success would be measured by," Thomason said. "Instead, we stress the graduation record and academics."

"Sometimes I think I'm too nice. If (the golfers) have a study need, I let them go early from practice. That's why they're here. Of course, I hold a hard line if I think they're screwing around on that."

Her hard-line attitude and dedication to her players has garnered Thomason's team its share of success over the years, and the coach has said this year's team may be her best yet.

Still, Thomason finds the difficulty of recruit-menting players to be a challenge.

"I think it's a lot of hard work, but it's worth it. I want to see these girls graduate and have a good education. That's the goal."

Perfect! Reds move to 8-0 with win over San Diego

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds equaled the best start in club history Wednesday night, improving to 8-0 as Mariano Duncan, Paul O'Neill and Chris Sabo homered in an 11-7 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Duncan's two-run homer tied the game 5-5 in the third inning and O'Neill put the Reds ahead to stay with a three-run homer in the fourth. O'Neill, who entered the game as a pinch hitter in the third inning, had four of the Reds' 14 hits.

The eight wins matched the 1980 team's start and gave the Reds their longest winning streak since they won eight in a row in September 1988. The 1982 Atlanta Braves hold the National League record of 13 straight wins to start a season.

Cubs 8, Mets 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvell Wynne's three-run pinch triple highlighted Chicago's tie-breaking five-run seventh inning as the Cubs took advantage of poor New York defense for the second straight game and beat the Mets 8-5 Wednesday night.

The Cubs won 8-6 in 13 innings Tuesday night on third baseman Howard Johnson's two-run throwing error. It's the first time since 1976 Chicago has won its first two games in New York.

Red Sox 7, White Sox 5

CHICAGO (AP) — Roger Clemens won for the third time in three starts and Tony Pena singled twice during a six-run third inning Wednesday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox 7-5.

Tudor (2-0), limited to six games for Los Angeles last season because of elbow and shoulder problems, gave up six hits, struck out four and walked one in seven innings to improve to 8-1 lifetime against Pittsburgh. Ken Dayley pitched the final two innings for his first save.

Orioles 8, Blue Jays 5

TORONTO (AP) — Craig Worthington homered and drove in four runs, including the tiebreaker in the sixth inning Wednesday night as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and ended a three-game losing streak.

Astros 10, Braves 5

Phillies 4, Expos 3

MONTREAL (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies took advantage of six walks and two wild pitches by Montreal's Kevin Gross in the second and third innings to push across three runs and beat the Expos 4-3 Wednesday night.

Dodgers 6, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Eddie Murray homered from each side of the plate and knocked in three runs Wednesday as the Los Angeles Dodgers rolled to a 6-2 victory over the struggling San Francisco Giants.

Tigers 8, Yankees 4

Women's swimming signs five

Iowa women's swimming coach Peter Kennedy has signed five student-athletes to national letters of intent, university officials announced Wednesday.

Dubuque Wahlert's Nichole Widmyer is the only Iowa prep to ink with the Hawkeyes. The 1989 Mississippi Valley Conference Athlete of the Year owns a state championship in the 50-freestyle. Widmyer, a East Dubuque, Ill., native, is a member of Wahlert's state record-holding 200-medley team and holds five individual school marks.

Minnesota natives Alison Pennington of Brooklyn Park and Laura Borgelt of Hastings will also become Hawkeyes next fall.

Pennington, a high school all-American, placed 11th in the 200-breaststroke at the Junior Nationals and earned all-state swimming accolades. In addition to her athletic accomplishments, Pennington earned honor roll status all four years at Park Center High School.

Borgelt, an three-time all-American, helped lead Hastings High to the 1989 state swimming championship. The four-time all-stater holds school records in the 50-freestyle and 100-backstroke, as well as the 200-medley relay. An outstanding student, Borgelt is expected to graduate among the top 10 of her class.

Jennifer Treado, Michigan's High School Swimmer of the Year, will also join the Hawkeyes in the fall.

The Grand Rapids, Mich., native was a member of the 1988 all-American 400-free relay team, and claimed six Michigan state high school individual championships. East Grand Rapids High won two state titles during her four-year career.

Carmel, Ind., native Pamela Broad will also wear the black and gold next season. The two-time all-American lead her Carmel High team to four state championships, as well as earning all-Olympic Conference honors.

Cyclones get revenge on Hawks

The Iowa men's tennis team beat Iowa State the first time around, but on Wednesday, the Cyclones paid them back with a 6-3 victory in Ames.

Winning for the Hawkeyes were Dave Novak at No. 3 singles, Tommy Heiting at No. 5 singles, and the team of Novak and Paul Buckingham at No. 2 doubles.

"It was definitely an upset," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "But I can't say it surprised me all that much. The way we played, we deserved to lose."

The loss dropped Iowa to 10-13 overall, 1-4 in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes return to action at home Saturday versus Purdue.

Blues edge Blackhawks

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Rod Brind'Amour scored two goals and Rick Meagher and Brett Hull one each Wednesday night, leading the St. Louis Blues to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks in the opening game of their second-round playoff series.

The victory took away the home-ice advantage for Chicago, which finished first in the Norris Division. Game 2 will be here Friday.

picked up his fourth win of the season, scattering nine hits and striking out four over six innings.

"My fast ball was very wild today and my curve was hanging a lot," Kennedy said. "I struggled a little. But I got around the plate with my slider and kept them off balance."

Senior John DeJarld pitched a scoreless seventh to record his second save of the season and seventh of his career — breaking the former school record of six set by Mark Wold (1974-77). The Joliet, Ill., native currently leads the Big Ten with a 0.00 ERA and will start the opener against Northwestern Saturday at Iowa Field.

ing young golfers to play at a midwestern university has hindered her from reaching her ultimate goals — to win a Big Ten championship, and qualify the team for nationals.

As she works for these goals, Thomason says she has little time to enjoy the game like she did when she was young.

"Sometimes it's hard to have fun playing now, it's been work for so long," she said. "By coaching, I gave up the game. But I didn't want that lifestyle (of the LPGA tour) anyway, living out of a suitcase week to week.

"And I love to teach. Even if I was out of coaching, I would still teach."

Leaving coaching is something the Iowa archive/historian has considered, though she's not ready to quit yet. Thomason said she'll stay with coaching until she sees "something else that will challenge me."

For now, Thomason plans to continue her work with a team of rapidly improving golfers that have earned her respect as much as she has earned their's.

"She's a lot of fun," said senior golfer Sarah Ward. "She's there for us all the time, so it's not like it's win or lose."

"She is a great influence in a way that I know she'll always support me in whatever I do," Ward continued. "We're friends beyond the golf course."

Blacks

North Carolina asked Stringer what she felt about black women athletes not having the same professional opportunities as men, Stringer found some negatives and positives.

"Women suffer a double negative. One, being female and two, being black. (But) not having pro sports to turn to shows that more black women are pursuing their degree."

When the aspect of college academic entrance standards was brought up, conflicts developed amongst the panel.

Ashe said he believed that a required score of 700 on the SAT was too low and should be raised, but according to Ralph Wiley of Sports Illustrated, the test should be abolished altogether.

"The SAT asks you a lot of ambiguous questions," Wiley said. "How can you tell what a person will be like by having them take a test? It's impossible."

The debate as to whether or not college athletes should be paid was also a heated topic of discussion, both among the Washington, D.C., panels and the one at Iowa.

Kirk said they should because they help bring in money to the university, but Stringer, Ashe, and Washington were among those who were opposed to it, saying that universities and coaches have a responsibility to educate.

Meanwhile, Dr. Harry Edwards, a sports sociologist at the University of California-Berkeley, strongly expressed his views.

"The statement that (Ashe) made about athletes getting a $50,000 scholarship — this is a joke. This is

Hawks ready for 9th shot at NCAA title

Pat Axmear
The Daily Iowan

The time has come for the Iowa men's gymnastics team to prove itself.

The team has traded wins with Big Ten teams and other highly-ranked schools throughout the season. This weekend, the Hawkeyes will be competing for the ninth consecutive year in the NCAA championships in Minneapolis today through Saturday.

"We are going to have to have the best meet of the season," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said. "We are pretty healthy and I expect a good performance."

Tonight, sixth-ranked Iowa will be facing Nebraska, UCLA, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Penn State and conference rivals Minnesota and Ohio State in opening competition. The top three teams will advance to the finals on Friday night.

Saturday afternoon, 24 of the best all-around performers in the nation will compete for the individual title. Saturday evening, the top eight competitors in each individual event will battle for top honors.

The team favorite going into the meet is top-ranked Minnesota. The Big Ten Champion Gophers finished first in the regional qualifying meet with a score of 286.05.

"There is a tremendous amount of expectation for our team," Minnesota coach Fred Roethlisberger said. "I look at UCLA and think they should be the favorite, they really have a strong possibility. Not everyone is looking down the line. There are a lot of teams that have a chance at winning."

"We should be within the score (at regionals). We've improved a lot through the season and I think we've developed our consistency."

Men's Gymnastics

Although Iowa was the lowest scoring team in its division, Dunn says he still feels they have a shot to make it into the top three.

"We have to avoid any mistakes at all costs," Dunn said. "You never know what's going to happen. It's such a pressurized meet strange things happen. There will be some mistakes; where they are and who has them will be a big factor in the outcome of the meet."

"We haven't worked out all our problems on pommel horse. We are looking better but we're hoping for some luck in that event."

Dunn said he thinks that Minnesota and Nebraska will be the top two teams with Penn State, Ohio State, UCLA and Iowa vying for the third position.

Iowa may be focusing on the team crown but several individuals also have a chance of making it into the finals.

Last year's second-place finisher in the vault, Keith Rooks, and 12th-ranked all-arounder Jeff Dow both have a good chance of winning titles. Other possible Iowa contenders will be Erik Heikkila and Keith Cousino in the floor exercise, Rich Frye on pommel horse, Dow and Adrian Besancon on still rings, Dow and Cousino on parallel bars and Dow and Heikkila on high bar.

"Some of the guys have an excellent chance to make it in the individual event," Dunn said. "But the team is what they are focusing on. It's the team that is critical."

Foreman guts way to another victory

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — It was the battle of the bellies, sumo wrestling under Marquis of Queensbury rules, a whole of an event. George Foreman's huge white trunks hid part of his girth, but then they also could have been used as drapery for the Caesars Tahoe stage on which the ring was set.

Mike Jameson, his opponent and 21st straight fall-guy after a fourth-round knockout, weighed a mere 233 pounds, 27 less than giant George, but his rolls of flab hung over an even larger expanse of blue broadcloth.

When they jiggled around the ring together Tuesday, they gave new meaning to the sweetest science — belly dancing.

Foreman, the ex-heavyweight champion, didn't show much progress in his improbable quest to become champ again. But he didn't need to against a setup like Jameson, who hadn't fought since losing six straight fights three years ago.

Foreman's big left fist disappeared into Jameson's soft middle early in the second round, eliciting a rush of air from Jameson's mouth that sounded like a punctured tire.

"I can take a good punch," said Jameson, a sparring partner for Mike Tyson in recent years. "But by God, he hit me harder than anyone, even Mike Tyson. He hits you with those hands, it's like a wrecking ball coming at you."

Foreman's big left fist disappeared into Jameson's soft middle early in the second round, eliciting a rush of air from Jameson's mouth that sounded like a punctured tire.

Jameson (17-14) spent the rest of the fight gasping and grunting and trying to keep in his plastic mouthpiece. No such luck. A left hook by Foreman in the third sent the mouthpiece flying across the ring, and a right uppercut moments later knocked it into the first row.

Foreman then dropped Jameson briefly to one knee with a right-left-right combination to the head and body.

Foreman knocked Jameson's mouthpiece out again in the fourth, then took aim with left jabs and overhand rights at a cut on Jameson's left eyebrow. The fight was stopped for a moment early in the round while the doctor checked the eye damage.

Blood flowed down Jameson's face as the round wore on, and referee Mills Lane finally moved in to stop the mismatch.

Before Lane could intervene, though, Foreman shot a left hook to the head that crumpled Jameson in his own corner and ended the fight at 2:16 of the fourth.

"It turned out my jab was my best weapon," said Foreman, 66-2 with 62 KO's. "I opened the cut early and I tried to work on the cut as best I could. Then I got the knockout. The knockout was better than having it stopped on cuts."

Foreman may be fooling fight fans and himself with his string of knockouts against has-beens and never-weres, but give this sly old man a little credit.

There aren't many overweight, middle-age men who could beat 21 fighters, 20 by knockout, no matter how carefully they were chosen, and convince the world that they have a chance at winning the heavyweight title.

Foreman, who dropped out of boxing for a decade until returning in 1987, is perhaps only a fight or two away from another shot at the title.

"I knew there'd be barriers to stop me from being the heavyweight champion, but age wasn't one of them," Foreman said.

San Francisco Giants batter Kevin Mitchell appears to lose his head Tuesday night as he dodges a pitch in the first inning of a game with the L.A. Dodgers.

George, Falcons to set contract before draft

ATLANTA (AP)—Illinois quarterback Jeff George's agent said he expects to have a completed deal with the Atlanta Falcons before Sunday's NFL draft, when the Falcons — barring a trade — are expected to make George the first choice.

Leigh Steinberg said he will begin working on specifics with the Falcons "in the next day or two" and he expects to have a deal worked out by Sunday.

"These things tend to move much quicker than you think," he said. "Sometimes they get done rather fast."

The Falcons' financial officer, Jim Hay, said it would be "very optimistic" to expect a contract by Sunday.

Vice president for player personnel Ken Herock said he didn't expect a problem and it didn't matter when it was completed.

"Whether it's before the draft or after doesn't really matter. We're taking Jeff George and we'll get him signed," Herock said. Meanwhile, trade talks between the Falcons and the Indianapolis Colts, who had hoped to work out a deal that would give them the draft's No. 1 pick and George, may have stalled.

"It looked like we were headed in a pretty decent direction for a while," said an unidentified Colts source, quoted Wednesday in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. "But then things started moving away from a deal. I'm not saying things are dead, but they're certainly on life-support systems."

Colts general manager Jim Irsay indicated that the Falcons were holding firm on their trade demands. The Falcons' request included six-time Pro Bowl offensive tackle Chris Hinton, second-year wide receiver Andre Rison and the Colts' second-round draft choice. The Colts turned it down, countering by offering aging center Ray Donaldson in place of Hinton.

No decision on home of Raiders

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—It's back to square one for the city of Oakland and the NFL's Raiders.

Five weeks ago, the City Council voted approval of a $602 million financial offer designed to get the football team back, and Raiders owner Al Davis said he looked forward to signing a lease agreement quickly and leaving Los Angeles by 1992.

But the financial offer, comprising up-front payments and guaranteed ticket income, was cut to $428 million two weeks ago, and on Tuesday night it was swept off the table when the council voted 6-0 in favor of rescinding it.

The vote carried with it council approval for opening another round of talks to negotiate a possible new deal to lure the Raiders from Los Angeles, the team's home since 1982.

The question now is whether Davis, who did not return telephone calls seeking a comment Tuesday night, wants to re-negotiate.

The Raiders issue wasn't on the agenda for Tuesday night's meeting, so the vote indicated only the council's "intent to rescind the deal," according to a spokeswoman for the Mayor Lionel Wilson. Because of the state's open meetings law, the vote to rescind will have to be made at the next meeting, when the matter is on the agenda.

"This morning I had two conversations with representatives of the Raiders," Wilson told the council, without naming those representatives.

The mayor said he wanted to "attempt to arrive at some kind of resolution" with all parties, including those who opposed the plan.

The arrangement negotiated during the past 14 months was undone mainly by a political end run involving petitions to place the proposed Raiders deal before voters.

On Monday, when Wilson said he would ask the council to rescind the offer, he said, "If it isn't dead, it's dying."

Alameda County Board of Supervisors chairman Don Perata, who has been instrumental in the drive to bring back the Raiders, said, "In my judgment, the deal is over with. We can get on to other matters. The mayor has an election and I have other business."

Timberwolves surprise NBA with play, record attendance

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—In the 6½ months that have elapsed since their first practice, some wacky and wonderful things happened to the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Not only have they exceeded expectations, but they've proven to be one of the most accomplished expansion teams in NBA history. With three games remaining, their 22-57 record is already sixth best of 14 expansion teams since 1966-67. And, they've clinched the best record among the four teams that joined the league in the last two years.

When their 41-game home season ended Tuesday, the Timberwolves had drawn a league-record 1,072,572 fans. They leave the Metrodome for a new arena next year and, because no other team plays in a domed stadium, the record figures to stand for a long time.

"People thought we'd be blown out every game," Tony Campbell said. "But we played tough and believed in ourselves. The rest of the league is lucky we haven't quite figured out how to win the close ones."

"We've made history and I'm proud to be a part of it."

It wasn't easy. The Timberwolves' top three NBA expansion draft choices — Rick Mahorn, Tyrone Corbin and Steve Johnson — were no-shows. No one knew what to expect from top draft choice Pooh Richardson, not considered among the top three point guards. The rest of the preseason roster was filled with guys nobody wanted, including 10 players from the minor-league CBA.

On paper, this team looked bad. Some team officials worried that the team would look even worse on the court. To make things more interesting, the head coach wasn't exactly known as Mr. Patience. In previous coaching assignments, Bill Musselman had done all but sell his soul in desperate attempts to win. He would prowl the sidelines at the Timberwolves' early practices and exhibitions, waiting to pounce at any moment.

"This was a team of unknowns," said Tod Murphy, one of the ex-CBAers. "I'm not surprised people didn't think we could win 10 games."

"Ten? I heard six or eight," Corbin said. "When I was in my holdout, I didn't know the personnel and, like everyone else, I thought this was a pretty bad team."

Not that bad, though.

"Our success didn't surprise me,"

Murphy said. "Even in October, we were a group of hungry guys who knew this might be our last chance to prove ourselves. And we had a very hungry coach who wasn't going to let us have a dropoff in intensity."

Mahorn and Johnson were traded. Corbin reported, played well and was signed to a multimillion-dollar contract extension.

Richardson played little in the season's first half. He watched as one of Musselman's CBA favorites, Sidney Lowe, ran the show.

Musselman inserted Richardson into the starting lineup on Jan. 29, the date of the Wolves' 41st game. Richardson has started the last 39 games, averaging 16.4 points and 8.9 assists. He has committed only 2.2 turnovers even though he plays 39.9 minutes a game.

"A lot of teams probably wish they picked him even earlier than we did (10th overall)," Murphy said. "When Magic retires, Pooh will be the starting All-Star point guard." Said Richardson: "When I first got drafted, nobody wanted me here, that's how I felt. It was the unknown factor. If people don't know you, people criticize the choice. I guess they had a right to, but I like to think I've proven them wrong."

While some of the ex-CBAers were cut and others rarely play, three have prospered.

Campbell, who starred for Musselman in the CBA before becoming a Laker benchwarmer, signed as a free agent and is averaging 23.2 points at shooting guard. Murphy is the starting power forward, a tenacious defender and good rebounder. Sixth man Sam Mitchell averages 12.6 points.

1990 draft has wealth of passers

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Jeff George, Andre Ware and Scott Mitchell have probably cost John Friesz a lot of money.

Before those three junior quarterbacks decided to enter Sunday's NFL draft, Idaho's Friesz was regarded as one of the top quarterbacks available.

But it now appears the availability of the juniors and an average performance by Friesz in two all-star games have pushed him into the second round.

"It's obviously increased the competition, which doesn't help anybody," Friesz said of the entrance into the draft of 35 juniors, including four quarterbacks.

There's a huge financial difference between being a first-round choice and second-round selection. Linebacker Keith DeLong, last year's 28th pick — the last of the first round — got a $580,000 signing bonus from the San Francisco 49ers.

The first pick of the second round, offensive lineman Steve Wisniewski, got $340,000 from the Los Angeles Raiders.

The NFL decided this year to allow juniors to be included in the draft.

"It's just making the first round shorter," Friesz said. "And it's already a short first round because of the supplemental picks."

Three teams have no No. 1 pick after using them last year to take players in the supplemental draft. That leaves 25 teams with first-round picks, and about seven of those are expected to be juniors.

"It's bumping me," Friesz said, "but I figure whatever happens happens. Even the worst thing that can happen is still pretty good."

It is expected that George, from Illinois, will be the No. 1 pick of the Atlanta Falcons and Ware, the Heisman Trophy winner from Houston, will be the second quarterback to go.

Mitchell and even Florida State's Peter Tom Willis could go next, followed by Friesz or Washington's Cary Conklin, somewhere in the second round. That's likely to be worth what Wake Forest quarterback Mike Elkins got last year as a high second-round pick — a $250,000 signing bonus and a $190,000 contract.

"He doesn't have the great foot quickness, but he has good awareness and good release," Joe Wooley, the Philadelphia Eagles' director of player personnel said. "I like him as a second-, thirdrounder." National Football Scouting, the NFL's official scouting bureau, has Friesz rated as the third-best senior quarterback, behind LSU's Tom Hodson and Maine's Mike Buck. The service did not rate juniors.

U.S. hockey bolsters roster with NHL fodder

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Five teams, including the United States, Canada and the Soviet Union, added NHL players to their rosters Wednesday during an off-day at the World Hockey Championships.

But Joe Nieuwendyk, the Calgary Flames sharpshooter, was on his way home after suffering an injury to his left knee.

Nieuwendyk was injured 11:30 into his world championship debut Tuesday against Team USA. He left the Swiss capital for Calgary for treatment of damaged ligaments.

Team USA, winless after two preliminary games, was hoping to add at least two NHL players for Thursday's game with the Soviets at Fribourg.

"But I don't believe it until I see the whites of their eyes," said Art Berglund, Team USA's general manager.

Neil Broten and Mike Modano of the Minnesota North Stars were expected to play. Minnesota was eliminated by the Chicago Blackhawks Monday in the NHL playoffs. Minnesota goalie John Casey remains questionable.

"He doesn't have a passport, but we're working on it," said Berglund. "A lot of our guys don't travel abroad."

The Americans added three other NHL players, Joel Otto and Paul Ranheim from Calgary, and Mark Johnson of the New Jersey Devils, before their 6-3 loss to Canada.

"We're not disappointed," said Berglund. "We played an excellent game against Canada and we can still make the medal round." The U.S. has not beaten the Soviets since the 1980 Winter Olympics. But the Soviets struggled in last year's meeting in Sweden, winning their round-robin opener over Team USA 4-2.

Sergei Makarov scored the go-ahead goal halfway through the final period in that game. After completing a brilliant rookie season with Calgary in Los Angeles last weekend, Makarov was likely to rejoin the national team on Thursday.

"We expect Makarov and (Alexei) Kasatonov to arrive, but we don't know yet if they will play," Soviet assistant coach Igor Dmitriev said.

Head coach Viktor Tikhonov, who has guided the Soviets to seven world titles and two Olympic gold medals in 13 seasons, will use Viacheslav Fetisov, Kasatonov's teammate on the New Jersey Devils. "He looked good when we practiced at Fribourg," said Dmitriev. "And he looks happy."

Canada plays winless Finland next and is favored to improve its record to 3-0.

"But the Finns always give Canada good games," said King. "A number of their players have been over there (in the NHL). So I'm sure it's going to be an interesting game."

Christian Ruutu joined the Finnish team for Tuesday's game against Czechoslovakia after Montreal clinched its playoff series with Buffalo. But Tapio Numminen of Winnipeg, another first-round NHL playoff loser, was unable to make it because of a fractured thumb suffered in the last playoff game with Edmonton, the Swedish news agency TT said.

Swedish coach Tommy Sandlin had hoped to reinforce his team with Thomas Steen, but the Winnipeg center has a back injury.

Steen would play center on a line with Hakan Loob, formerly of Calgary, and Kent Nilsson, who played for the Calgary and Edmonton.

They haven't played together on the national team since the 1984 Canada Cup, when Sweden lost to Canada. The unbeaten Swedes, world champions in 1987, play winless West Germany Thursday.

French colloquium at UI: 'A New Fin de siecle'

Martina Brockway
The Daily Iowan

In order to promote the study of French literature, history and culture, the 7th Annual International Colloquium of 20th Century French Studies, will be held Thursday, April 19, through Sunday April 22, at the UI.

Approximately 200 scholars from the United States, and other countries including Canada, Switzerland, France and Belgium, are expected to attend, according to colloquium director Steven Ungar, UI professor of comparative literature and French. The sessions are an outgrowth of the Modern Language Association, and will be held in the Union unless otherwise noted.

"War & Peace: Towards a New Fin de siecle," is the theme of this year's colloquium. Gender issues, Francophone writings, the occupation of France in World War II, and the identity of Jews in post-war France are some of the topics that will be discussed.

"The programs will generate discussions that go beyond traditional language studies," says Ungar. "Often literary studies lack a social and historical input. This colloquium will feature contributions of social and cultural historians worldwide, and will openly address issues that surpass conventional discussions."

Roger Chartier, Director d'Etudes, of the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales will deliver an Ida Beam lecture, "Don't Books Make Revolutions? Cultural Origins of the French Revolution," tonight at 7:30, in The Communications Studies Building, Room 101. UI President Hunter Rawlings will give the opening welcome.

A respected scholar of the history of early modern France, Chartier has written extensively on the cultural uses of print and on the history of the book. His books in English include "The Culture of Print" (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1988) and "Cultural History" (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1988).

In many of his books Chartier is attentive to certain ideas of literary theory and criticism, and its subsequent involvement in the writings of history. He often examines the cultural differences among literature, seeking to erase the lines that distinguish social cultures.

Chartier says in his book "Texts, Printing, Readings": "... it does not seem possible to identify the absolute difference and the radical specificity of popular culture on the basis of its own texts, beliefs or codes. The materials that convey the practices and thoughts of ordinary people are always mixed, blending forms and themes, invention and tradition, literate culture and folklore."

Chartier will speak again on the topic of "Strategies of Reading and Writing in French: Between Histories of the Text and the History of the Book," at 8:30 p.m. Friday, April 20, in the Illinois Room of the Union. He will also present a Faculty Rhetoric Seminar, "Texts, Printing, Readings," Project on the Rhetoric of Inquiry, at 7:30 p.m. in Seashore Hall, Room W700.

The colloquium will also feature the film by Belgian filmmaker Chantal Ackerman, "Les Rendez-vous d'Anna," at 8 p.m. in the Communications Studies Building, Room 101.

Other highlights of the colloquium include:

- Today — "Gender and Narratology," noon to 1:15; "Writing the Orient," 3 to 4:15 p.m.
- Friday — "Jewish Identity in Postwar France," 5:30—6:45 p.m.
- Sunday — "Representing the Occupation," 11 a.m.—12:15 p.m.

Radio comedy will give laughs on all things from Elvis to sex

Jacqueline Comito
The Daily Iowan

Live in the Union Wheelroom, Thursday April 19 at noon, absolutely free, it's the Best of the Radio Comedy Class.

Headed by visiting assistant professor Dan Coffey, better known as Mr. Science, the 45-minute show features student-performed and -written short scenes that are as funny as what is heard on "Saturday Night Live."

Coffey says many of his students are excellent writers. "Radio gives them a vehicle for expression," he added. "I hope what happens from this class is that people get stimulated, encouraged, and excited from (performing) their work in front of an audience. Hopefully, they'll carry this feeling to, maybe not radio, acting and writing."

The show serves as a final exam for the members of Coffey's class. KRUI will air the sketches which are concerned with many of the absurdities of life — from Elvis to sex in advertising — live.

Michele Sohner, a participant in the show, said, "Our intent is not to make fun of the world. We're commenting on it."
